It was originally called the RAILWAY FOUNTAIN.

Wolverhampton Chronicle 17/2/1847

“An inquest was held on Thursday last, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, at the RAILWAY TAVERN, Daisy Bank, Sedgley, on the body of Joseph Westwood, a boy about nine years of age. It appeared that on the 25th of last month some men were employed in breaking a large wheel at Caponfield ironworks, when one of the wedges broke through the middle, and part of it struck deceased, who was standing by, on the head, and fractured his skull. On the following Tuesday he died. Verdict Accidental Death.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 6/11/1861

“Yesterday afternoon W. H. Phillips, Esq, deputy-cornor, held an inquest at the RAILWAY FOUNTAIN INN, Bradley, Bilston, on the body of William Lewis, 69 years of age, iron roller, who had died under distressing circumstances on the previous Sunday morning. Deceased, it seems, was returning home in a state of intoxication on Saturday night, and he succeeded in getting as far as the entry leading into his own yard. Between three and four o'clock on the Sunday morning he was found there by a watchman named Hickman, but Hickman did not know him, and consequently he did not remove him. At the inquest yesterday Hickman was not examined, but a witness named Solloway proved hearing a conversation between him and the deceased. She heard Hickman inquiring of Lewis who he was, and heard Hickman go away, saying that he would fetch a policeman. During the conversation between Hickman and the deceased witness got up to the window. About five or ten minutes after witness got into bed again, and while Hickman was searching for the police Mrs. Solloway heard some one apparently drag the deceased out of the entry into the road, where he was found next morning. She heard deceased cry, 'Mercy,' and 'Don't murder me,' but she did not get up a second time. A girl named Elizabeth Thompson proved seeing a man pick the deceased up in the street at seven o'clock on Sunday morning. He was alive and muttered something very inaudibly, but no one could understand what he said; he died shortly afterwards. A woman named Waller stated that she heard someone cry 'Murder,' but it only seemed to be like the brawling of a drunken man. Thomas Perry proved hearing a man in conversation with the deceased; he believed the man to be Hickman. The inquest was adjourned till Monday next for the purpose of making a post mortem examination.

Rumours have been currently circulated in Bilston that the deceased was murdered, but there is little reason to suppose that this is the case. An indefatigable correspondent to the London and provincial papers has 'written up' the case most alarmingly, and many of the daily papers yesterday were flaming with an account of 'Another Murder at Bilston.'"

Leeds Mercury 14/11/1861

"On Monday the adjourned inquest was held at the RAILWAY FOUNTAIN INN, Daisy Bank, Bilston, Staffordshire, on the body of William Lewis, relative to whose death in the road near his lodgings, at Hall Fields, so much interest has been excited. The medical evidence was entirely opposed to the idea of death by violence, though it appeared that deceased's pockets might have been picked while he was intoxicated. Several of the jurymen remarked on the coldness of the night on which the deceased died. The jury returned a verdict of Died from Excessive Drinking and Exposure to Cold."

"An inquest was held on Monday, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, deputy coroner, at the RAILWAY FOUNTAIN, Daisy Bank, Bilston, on the body of John Hughes, aged twenty-three. On the 25th of August, deceased was working in one of the Earl of Dudley's pits, at Deepfields, when a quantity of coal fell upon him. He sustained injuries from which he died on Friday last. The witnesses were unable to attach blame to any one, and a verdict of Accidental Death was recorded."

“Yesterday, at Bilston Police Court, William Jeavons, chartermaster, was charged with stealing a horse, value £10, belonging to Noah Halford, landlord of the FOUNTAIN INN, Daisy Bank. Mr. Sheldon appeared on behalf of the prosecutor.

The horse was purchased on the 1st of November last from a relative of the prisoner, named Cadman, and on the 24th of that month it was put into a field to grass. Some of the rails that surrounded the field were on the following morning found down, and the animal was missing; nothing was heard about it again until within the past few days, when the prisoner was seen driving the animal in the street. He was then given into custody, and he admitted having taken away the pony from the field. The case was remanded until Friday week.”

“At the Bilston Police Court, on Tuesday, John Mumford, bricklayer, Daisy Bank, was charged under an adjourned summons with being drunk and refusing to quit the GREAT WESTERN INN, Daisy Bank, on the 23rd of December, and there was a cross-summons, in which Noah Halford, the landlord of the house named, was charged with assaulting Mumford. Mr. R. A. Willcock (Wolverhampton) appeared for Halford. The latter stated that about half-past nine o’clock on the date named, Mumford entered his house in a drunken state, and requested to be supplied with a glass of whisky. Witness refused to serve him, at the same time telling him that he had had enough and had better go home. He, however, refused to go, and witness took him to the front door, when Mumford attempted to throw him, and caught hold of him, and in the struggle that ensued they both fell down two steps into the road. He called two witnesses, who gave corroborative evidence.

Mumford was sworn, and said he had one glass of whisky in the house, and called for another. Halford laid hold of him by the collar, dragged him into the road and down two steps, his leg being broken by the fall. He had since been in the Wolverhampton Hospital. As he called no witnesses to substantiate his statement, the Bench dismissed the summons for assault against Halford, and fined Mumford 2s 6d and costs. The magistrates told him that he would have been fined much heavier only that he had already suffered for his misconduct.”

“Yesterday, Mr. W. H. Phillips (coroner) held an inquest at the GREAT WESTERN INN, Daisy Bank, into the death of John Jones (63), miner, late of John Street, Daisy Bank, who committed suicide by jumping down a pit shaft on Friday last.

Daniel Jones, son of the deceased, deposed that his father had lately acted very strangely, and he considered that he was not right in his mind.

William Bennett, of Highfields, said that he saw the deceased take off his boots near the Highfields Colliery. He then climbed the fence round the mouth of the pit, and jumped head foremost down it. He believed the shaft was 135 yards 2 feet deep, and contained 36 feet of water.

John Lee, sinker, stated that he went down the shaft and took the body out, but only after seven trials.

A verdict of Committed Suicide whilst in a State of Temporary Insanity was returned by the jury; and the coroner rewarded Lee for his courageous conduct in taking the body out of the pit.”

Dudley and District News 3/1/1885

“On Wednesday morning W. H. Phillips, Esq, coroner, held an inquest at the GREAT WESTERN INN, Daisy Bank, touching the death of Elizabeth Brett (80), widow of Thomas Brett, formerly a blacksmith, of Ash Street, Daisy Bank.

Henry Brett, son of the deceased, stated that lately deceased had been suffering from diarrhoea. She had had parish relief, also the attendance of the parish surgeon. On Sunday morning he left her lying on a bench, apparently asleep. Upon returning, between ten and eleven o’clock, he found her in the same position, in consequence of which he became alarmed, sent for a neighbour, and it was found that she was dead. He thought death was due to old age. She had not wanted food.

Elizabeth Lamb, the wife of John Lamb, who resides near by, said deceased was very infirm, but generally worse in cold weather, and she expected her death. Deceased had not wanted food or fire. There was no mark of injury upon her. She had no bed to sleep upon, but rested upon a bench, and the place was miserable.

The police officer said when he saw deceased on Sunday morning she was only covered with rags.

The Coroner remarked that there was only one room, and that upon the ground floor, and it was a miserable place to live in. Deceased would have been better off in the Union. The son said he had asked his mother to go there, but she refused. He also stated that he could not bury her, and a note was given him to go to the relieving officer.

The jury returned a verdict of Died from Natural Causes.”

“A fatal accident of a shocking nature took place at the Daisy Bank Station, on the Great Western Railway, on Tuesday night. A widow named Fanny Clulow, 79 years of age, and a resident in Walsall Street, Bilston, had been to Tenbury, in Worcestershire, hop-picking, and returned by a train which reached Daisy Bank about 10 o’clock. She alighted there intending to walk home, and proceeded to cross the line behind the passenger train. Just as she got on the up rails a goods train came up and the engine struck her, knocking her a considerable distance and killing her almost instantaneously. The body when picked up was terribly mangled. It was removed to the GREAT WESTERN INN at Daisy Bank.”

“The Annual Licensing Meeting. This meeting was held in the Police Court on Friday last.....

Mr. Whitehouse then applied on behalf of Mr. John Rogers, hairdresser, news agent, and collector of assessed taxes, for a license to premises he is erecting by PIPE HALL. Mr. Whitehouse remarked that he was well aware that the Bench were of opinion that the number of public houses in Bilston was sufficiently great already; but his client had expended £700 in the purchase of the ground and the erection of a house, which would provide accommodation for the important class of the community, commercial travellers, which he declared was afforded by no public house in Bilston. Mr. Underhill, who opposed on behalf of Mr. Elkington, of the ANGEL, argued that the best proof that no such house was wanted, was that neither the railway company nor Mr. Pugh had used the license for PIPE HALL. The application was refused.”

Staffordshire Advertiser 29/8/1863

“Yesterday a special session was held for the renewal and granting of victuallers' licenses.....

AND

“The meeting for the renewing and granting of licenses was held on Friday, at Bilston police office.....

Mr. Waterhouse, solicitor, of Bilston, made an application for a license to be granted to Mr. George [sic] Rodgers, landlord of the GREAT WESTERN INN, Market Street. It appeared that when the Great Western Railway Company constructed their line of railway through Bilston, some years ago, some land, on which stood two old licensed houses, known by the names of the GLOBE and HOP POLE, were taken in by the company, and the license of the former house was subsequently transferred to PIPE HALL, a large and commodious house near the Great Western Railway Station. Mr. Bull, the owner of the house, had never availed himself of the license, but had let the house to a schoolmaster, and it was now used as an educational establishment, and called the Pipe Hall Academy. The applicant had purchased a piece of land formerly belonging to PIPE HALL, and as he had extensive accommodation, and was so close to the railway station he (Mr. Waterhouse) thought there was great necessity that the house should be licensed. Mr. Waterhouse then handed in a certificate signed by the churchwardens, also a petition signed by the majority of the commissioners, including the chairman; one from the chairman of the Wolverhampton Board of Guardians, and one bearing the signatures of twenty-four commercial travellers, no less than six of whom had availed themselves of his accommodation during the preceding day.

Mr. J. E. Underhill, of Wolverhampton, opposed on behalf of Mr. Elkinton, of the ANGEL INN, and stated that his client's house was of much easier access than the applicant's, being directly opposite to the station.

Mr. Rodgers, in answer to the Bench, guaranteed that in a very short time he would be in a position to give accommodation for at least six horses and conveyances, and with this understanding, and also taking into consideration the applicant's previous good character, the application was granted."

John Rogers was also a brewers agent and income tax assessor and collector.

"A dinner was given to Mr. Thomas Owen, station-master of the Great Western Railway Company at Bilston (who is leaving for promotion to another station), by the officials and a few friends – gentlemen of the town, who held Mr. Owen in high esteem for his kind and courteous demeanour as station-master. The dinner was provided at the GREAT WESTERN HOTEL, by Mr. John Rogers (the landlord), in the usual excellent style of the establishment. The entertainment was presided over by Mr. George Beard, Chairman of the Local Board of Commissioners; and the vice-chair by Mr. James Thomas, ironmaster. After the cloth was drawn, a very handsome testimonial was presented to Mr. Owen, consisting of a splendid time-piece and a well-filled purse, subscribed by the officials at the station and other friends."

Birmingham Daily Post 23/8/1865

"Yesterday, Mr. W. H. Phillips, Deputy Coroner, held an inquest at the GREAT WESTERN HOTEL, Bilston, on the body of James Rogers, aged 24 years, who died there on Monday morning from injuries received on the Saturday evening previously.

Obadiah Rogers, yardsman, in the employ of the Great Western Railway Company, deposed that the deceased was a passenger guard under the same company, living at Wednesfield Heath. On Saturday night he left Wolverhampton Station as guard on the 10.30pm passenger train. He (the witness) accompanied him. When near to Priestfields Station the deceased leaned out of the window on the right hand side of the carriage, and, shortly after the train had passed under a bridge, the witness spoke to him. Not receiving an answer he went over and found him insensible. He was taken out at Bilston. He (the witness) had since examined the bridges, and thought that the bridge on the other side of Priestfields was 13 inches from the side of a broad gauge carriage. That bridge was a wooden one, and, as long as he had known it, had occupied the same position, i.e., none of the supports or the rails had been removed. He thought that the deceased had been struck by one of the bridges, but he could not tell which.

Mr. Larkin, surgeon, deposed that he was called in to see the deceased on Saturday night. He was then insensible, and suffering from concussion and compression of the brain. There was a large scalp wound at the back of his head, and he had lost a considerable quantity of blood. The injuries might have been occasioned by a violent blow on the back of the head.

John Ledbrooke, inspector, deposed that the deceased had been on the line for the last two years. He had nothing to do that he should have leaned out of his van window. The witness had examined the line from that particular van. The nearest bridge on the line was 2ft 9in from the rails, and 18in from the carriage window. He found no mark on any bridge. The bridges were now in the same state as they were when examined by the Government Inspector. The Coroner suggested to the Jury that a special examination of the line between Wolverhampton and Priestfields should be made. The Jury acquiesced, and the inquest was adjourned until eleven o'clock on Friday morning."

[At the adjourned inquest the jury returned a verdict that James Rogers died from the effects of injuries received by coming in contact with a bridge.]

“A subscription is being organised for the widow of late James Rogers, guard on the Great Western Railway, who was killed on the line between Priestfields and Bilston on the 19th ult. He was much respected by the travellers on the line, and it is hoped that the public will assist in providing for his widow and child. Donations may be made at the Wolverhampton or any other station on the Great Western line.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 15/8/1866

“On Wednesday evening last an inquest was opened before T. M. Phillips Esq, Coroner, at the GREAT WESTERN INN, Bilston, on the body of a man named John Tranter, a miner, aged 41, living in Bristol Street, Bilston, who had died suddenly on the previous Sunday night, under circumstances which gave rise to considerable suspicion.

The deceased was not married, but lived with a woman named Eliza Carline, and the evidence showed that they lived on affectionate terms, the deceased having been for some time a teetotaler. They were together at home on Sunday, and soon after six o'clock went into a neighbour's house to tea. Eliza Carline said she made tea for herself and deceased in Hopkin's (the neighbour's) teapot, the latter having had tea. They had bread and butter for tea, and shortly after deceased complained of a slight pain, and went out for a walk; but the pain increasing, he came home, and at his request Eliza Carline made him some mint tea. His bowels were then moved twice, but as he continued in great agony, Mr. Best, surgeon, was sent for, and the assistant came. He prescribed emetics, which did not, however, operate, and the poor fellow died after enduring excruciating torment about two o'clock on Monday morning. He had roast pork and potatoes for dinner on Sunday, which was prepared by the woman Carline, and of which she also partook.

The inquiry was adjourned until Friday, when Mr. Malim, assistant to Mr. Best, gave the following evidence, as to the results of a post mortem examination he had made of the body of the deceased. He said: I am a surgeon, and reside at Bilston, in this county. By the direction of the Coroner I made a post mortem examination of the body of the deceased, John Tranter, on the 8th of August instant. On examining the body externally I found no marks of bruises or other injuries. The face wore an expression of pain, and it, together with the neck, was of a deep purple hue. The abdomen was much distended with gas, and the limbs, scrotum, and remainder of the body were swollen and puffy. On opening the head the scalp was much injected with venous blood; the brain was soft and pale, and contained within its cavities and unusual amount of serous fluid. In the chest I found the heart healthy in texture, and quite empty of blood on both sides. The pericardium contained a quantity of fluid, not more than usual. The right lung was congested, and very firmly adherent, the adhesions being the result of old disease. The left lung was shrunk, but free of adhesions. On opening the abdomen, the peritoneum, covering the intestines, presented an inflammatory appearance. The stomach was enormously distended with gas. In the cavity of the abdomen there was a quantity (I should think half a pint) of dark coloured fluid matter, having the smell of vomit, and exactly the appearance of the fluid I afterwards found in the stomach. On laying open the stomach, I found it to contain a quantity of thickish fluid matter, of a brownish black colour, and floating in it were some small lumps of pork fat and pieces of potato. On removing these contents (some of which I have preserved), I found a patch of charred membrane, about the size of a half-crown piece, irregularly circular in shape, soft and friable. In the centre of this patch was an aperture about the size of a sixpence, through which some of the contents of the stomach had evidently passed. The edges of this aperture were thin, and slightly bevelled from within outwards. Leading to the circumference of the above-described patch were a few injected blood-vessels. This aperture was situate on the anterior surface of the stomach, near the small curvatur, or nearer to the cardiac than the pyloric orifice. Corresponding to the position of this patch, on the exterior of the stomach, the tissues were also blackened and destroyed, though not to so great an extent as on the inside. There were also scattered over the cardiac end of the stomach, internally, small red inflammatory punctae. The remainder of the mucous membrane of the stomach seemed quite healthy, and was of a rather pale colour. The duodenum contained a quantity of partially digested food. Its lining membrane was healthy. The remaining intestines presented no unusual appearance. The kidneys were both healthy; the bladder empty. The liver was of a much darker colour than natural, probably a post mortem change; otherwise it seemed healthy. The spleen was natural. From these facts and the symptoms exhibited before death, I am of opinion that deceased died from perforation of the stomach, caused by the action of some corrosive poison. The witness, in reply to the Coroner, stated that the medicine he sent to the deceased was of a very simple character, being composed of 20 grains of sulphate of zinc, mixed with one and a-half ounces of water. The pills were 7 grains compound soap pills, and would contain not quite 1½ grains of pure opium. Mr. Best (who was present), said he had shown the stomach to Mr. Newnham, surgeon to the South Staffordshire Hospital, and he concurred with him that the poison was so powerful that had it been administered in a liquid form, it must have burnt the lips and throat; and they thought, therefore that it must have entered the stomach in a solid form. But in what form the evidence did not at all show; and after a very patient inquiry the inquest was adjourned till the 7th September so as to enable Mr. McCrea ample time to make further inquiries, and also that the stomach might be analysed.”

“On Friday, T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, held an adjourned inquest, at the GREAT WESTERN INN, Bilston, touching the death of a man named John Tranter, a miner, aged 41, living in Bristol Street, Bilston, who died suddenly on the night of the 10th ult, under circumstances which gave rise to considerable suspicion.

It may be in the recollection of our readers that on the last occasion Mr. Malim, (assistant to Mr. Best), who had made a post mortem examination of the body, stated that the appearances presented by the stomach – which in one part was perforated and apparently calcined – led him to the conclusion that death had been caused by some strong mineral poison, but of what particular character he was unable to say. This was likewise the opinion of Mr. Best, and of one or two other surgeons to whom the case was mentioned, although there was no evidence to show that any poison had been taken by or administered to the deceased.

Dr. Hill, Borough Analyst for Birmingham, to whom the analysis of the stomach of the deceased had been entrusted, now attended and gave the following evidence. He said: I have examined the stomach and portions of the liver forwarded to me by direction of the Coroner, and I found the stomach to contain a considerable quantity of food, partly digested. There was a large ulcer on the coat of the stomach, three inches by two inches, and an oval angular perforation half an inch the long way. There were no marks of inflammation or corrosion in any part of the stomach, such as would be expected if a corrosive or irritant poison had been swallowed. The contents of the stomach were not excessively acid, as they would have been if sulphuric, nitric, hydrochloric, oxalic, or any other corrosive acid had been taken. I proved the absence of these acids by chemical tests. A search for the corrosive and irritant metallic poisons, including arsenic, antimony, mercury, lead, copper, gave negative results. Perforation is by no means an uncommon result of natural disease of the stomach, and regarding the absence of more general marks of corrosion and irritation, the absence of poison, and the character of the ulcer and perforation, I have no doubt whatever that death was produced by peritonitis, from the escape of food into the cavity of the abdomen through a perforation in the stomach, which was the result of disease. I have not heard the evidence as to symptoms, but fully expect that it will strengthen this view of the case. Dr. Hill then read the medical evidence previously taken and found this to be the case. In the first place that evidence stated that the perforation was in the cardiac of the stomach, that portion of the stomach in which ulcers generally occurred. Then there were no marks of ulceration except at that point, and no inflammation of any note, were points corroborative of his opinion. The presence of food in the stomach too proved the absence of anything of a corrosive nature; because the first symptoms of the presence of corrosive poison in the stomach was vomiting. The slight vomiting that did take place was caused by the escape of food through the perforation irritating the peritoneum; ulceration of the stomach would exist without pain, and death ultimately from it was not uncommon.

A Juryman remarked that the evidence on the last occasion showed that deceased and the woman with whom he lived had been ‘larking’ together the same evening in the yard.

Dr. Hill, in reply to this, said very likely it was the exertion on that occasion which ruptured the ulcer.

Mr. Malim, in reply to the Coroner, said he quite concurred with Dr. Hill as to the cause of death.

The Coroner remarked that he had never heard of so remarkable a case in all his experience.

The Jury then returned a verdict to the effect that the deceased came to his death from peritonitis, occasioned by rupture of a ulcer in the stomach, the ulcer being the result of disease.”

The evidence of a daughter-in-law showed that deceased went upstairs on the night named to bed, witness accompanying her to undress her. Having done so, she went downstairs again. Shortly afterwards, hearing her children scream, she ran upstairs, and found deceased in flames. The flames were, after some difficulty, put out, and deceased told witness that she was trying to burn the string of one of her garments with the candle when she caught fire. A verdict of Accidental Death was returned.”

“This (Monday) afternoon W. H. Phillips, Esq, coroner, held an inquest at the GREAT WESTERN HOTEL, Bilston, on the body of William Jones (30), carter, of Bushbury Lane, Bushbury, who was found in a dying condition in the six foot of the Great Western Railway, near the Bilston Station early on Saturday morning.

Inspector Locke appeared to watch the proceedings on behalf of the Railway Company.

The evidence showed that the deceased, who was a married man, was in the habit of going to his employment at Messrs. Groucutt and Sons, Bilston, every morning, and returning at night. He left home on Thursday morning, but on that night he slept in the stables at Messrs. Groucutt’s works. On Friday night he was drinking at the NAVIGATION INN, with a fellow carter, named James Wilson, who went with him towards Bilston station as far as Pothouse Bridge, where he left him. The deceased was then the worse for drink. He was not seen alive again until 2.30 the following morning, when William Willis, the driver of a goods train, saw him lying in a pool of blood in the six foot, and with two large gashes on the left temple and back of the head. The deceased was removed to the railway station, but died on reaching that place. Judging from the position in which he found him, the witness considered that the deceased had been injured by an up train. Further evidence was given which indicated that the deceased had probably endeavoured to reach Bilston station by walking along the line.

The jury returned a verdict that the deceased was found in a dying state, and died at the railway station, but that there was no evidence to show how he received his injuries.”

On Friday morning the child was left upstairs in bed, and shortly afterwards his mother heard him scream, and on going to him found that he had drunk some liniment from a bottle which had been left on the mantelpiece. He was taken to the surgery of Mr. Kennedy, where he expired. The liniment had been supplied by Mr. Kennedy for a lodger, and the mother of the deceased said she did not know that it was of a poisonous nature.

Mr. Kennedy said the liniment contained aconite, a deadly poison, and the word ‘poison’ had been written on the label.

The mother of the deceased stated that she could not write or read; and the Coroner remarked that labels on bottles containing poison should be of an easily recognisable character.

A verdict of Accidental Death was returned, and the jury recommended that all medical men should place a label of a distinctive character on bottles containing poison.”

“The Bradley drowning case formed the subject of an enquiry at the GREAT WESTERN HOTEL, Bilston, today, by Mr. Stokes, the County Coroner.

The body was identified as that of Henry Roberts (20), boiler-maker, of Smith Street, Bilston, the father of the deceased stating that his son had been out of work for seven weeks. On Saturday evening when deceased came into the house witness asked him if he wanted anything to eat, but deceased replied, ‘No, I shall work before I eat any more here.’ Witness had not threatened to turn his son out. Deceased was strange in his manner, and witness was frightened and got out of his way. His son was in trouble respecting a fine and costs against him at the police court. Eliza Porter, single woman, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, said she had kept company with deceased for five years. She had issued a paternity summons against the deceased. On Saturday evening deceased came to her mother’s house, went out drinking with her brother, and afterwards returned and sat up till an early hour in the morning drinking tea. When leaving the house deceased remarked to witness, ‘I am going to do it in,’ and then requested witness to go a walk with him, but she refused. Deceased had had some beer, and said he should drown himself, adding, ‘I am out of work, and all seem to frown upon me.’

Police-constable Lewis deposed to recovering the body from the canal at Capponfield Stop, Highfields, Bradley, on Monday morning. There had been several drowning cases at the same spot during the last seven months.

The jury returned a verdict of Suicide whilst Temporarily Insane.

Before discharging the jury, the Coroner, addressing Police-constable Lewis, said the jury had desired him to convey their appreciation of his conduct in the saving the life of a child some little time ago at the same spot from which the body of Roberts had been recovered. The constable thanked the Coroner for his observations.”

“Before Mr. Justice Avory today at the Birmingham Assizes, the hearing of an action was continued in which Mr. and Mrs. William Dunn, of the GREAT WESTERN HOTEL, Bilston, formerly of the SALUTATION INN, Dudley, sued William Davis, a checkweigher, of Netherton, for damages as compensation, for injuries received. Mr. Graham Milward appeared for the plaintiffs, and Mr. A. J. David, KC, with Mr. Riley Pearson, for the defence.

The plaintiffs alleged that the defendant committed an indecent act upon Mrs. Dunn while she was sitting in the smoke-room of her inn on May 27. The toe of her left foot was beneath the fender at the time, and in the struggle which followed the assault Mrs. Dunn wrenched her knee, with the result that an injury was done which made it necessary for her to be an in-patient at the General Hospital for two months. The knee was still painful, and the medical evidence was that it would never be perfectly sound again, even after another operation. Mrs. Dunn claimed damages as compensation for the injury, and Mr. Dunn claimed damages as compensation for expenses incurred by his wife's illness, and for the help engaged to take his wife's place while she was in the hospital. The defence was a complete denial of any assault. Plaintiffs case was put forward yesterday, and today the defence was opened.

The defendant, giving evidence on oath, said he was not in Dudley at all on May 27; from four in the afternoon till seven in the evening that day he was working in his garden at Netherton. That day is his daughter's birthday. A week before he had called at the SALUTATION, and Mrs. Dunn told him she had twisted her knee on the landing. Mrs. Dunn had placed her hands on him on more than one occasion, and he had told her 'to get off.'

Cross-examined, defendant said he was friendly with Mr. and Mrs. Dunn, and had had no quarrel with them. He received a letter in October asking him to go and see them on Monday evening. He did not go nor answer that letter.

Counsel: Why did you not go to see the people with whom you were friendly, and with whom you had no quarrel? – Defendant: My wife said if I went she would go with me.

Counsel: Why was she suspicious of you? Why would she not trust you to go alone? – Defendant: Why are women ever suspicious? (Laughter.)

Counsel: Perhaps because they know too much about their husbands. (Laughter.) Did your wife know you had been in the habit of going to the SALUTATION INN? – Defendant: Oh, yes.

Counsel: Then why did your wife suddenly change her opinion and refuse to let you go alone to see the Dunns alone? – Defendant: She didn't like it.

The defendant's wife said her husband was gardening on the evening of Saturday, May 27th. She remembered what her husband was doing because it was her daughter's birthday.

Cross-examined, witness said her husband generally went to Dudley on Saturday evenings. He had seven children; one of the other daughters had a birthday in June, but she did not remember what her husband was doing then. She opened the letter from the Dunns asking her husband to go and see them, and she offered to go with him. He did not go after she said that, and said it was money the Dunns wanted from him. She had no reason to doubt that Mrs. Dunn is an honest woman, and she knew the Dunns were friends of her husband.

The defendant's brother said the defendant remained with him from half-past eight till half-past nine or ten on the evening of May 27th.

Witnesses were called to say that Mr. Dunn had told them that Mrs. Dunn had injured her knee by slipping on the landing.

Counsel having addressed the Court, his Lordship summed up. He remarked that the issue was a serious one, and in regard to the defendant's suggestion that the story had been concocted to obtain blackmail was it likely that two respectable people, licensees of an inn, would make up a narrative like the one before them, and would support in by perjury, so rendering themselves liable to prosecution?

The jury retired, and on their return found a verdict for the plaintiff. They awarded out of pocket expenses with £50 special damages. The Foreman said the jury thought it was no use giving heavier damages.

The Judge said he quite understood their feeling, and judgement would be entered accordingly for £71 16s.

Mr. David asked for a stay of execution, on the ground of wrongful direction.

His Lordship said he would not grant any stay unless anything could be pointed to which would make him think he was mistaken in anything he said.

Mr. David said he objected to his Lordship telling the jury that the injury could not have been caused by falling on the landing. (Cries of 'No, no,' from the jury).

His Lordship said he was quite sure he never said anything of the sort. He would take the agreement of the jury.

Mr. David said he must decline to argue the case if an appeal is to be made to the jury.

His Lordship said he made no appeal to the jury, but he was not surprised that the jury intervened to deny a misstatement of fact.

Mr. David said it was very difficult to argue in circumstances when the jury had treated counsel in a way in which it was not usual to treat counsel. He took exception to his Lordship's remark that the wife might have told her husband she twisted her knee on the landing when there was no evidence to show she did so inform her husband.

His Lordship said he wanted to stop the practice of giving stays of execution as a matter of course, and he would not give one here. The remedy was in the Court of Appeal."

“Mr. W. Lee applied for permission to effect structural alterations at the PARK INN, Woodsetton, to extend the living accommodation. A copy of the plan had been submitted to the superintendent of police, who now stated that alterations were absolutely necessary. Granted.

Similar permission was granted in respect of the GREAT WESTERN, Bilston, the alterations being in the direction of better police supervision.”

Darlaston Weekly Times 8/3/1884

“Certain individuals said to hail from Darlaston seem to be animated by a desire to revive in our midst the barbarity known as the ‘sport’ of cock fighting.....

It seems that suspicions having been aroused that ‘things were not what they seemed,’ PCs Kidson and Hayward visited the GREAT WESTERN INN, Lower Bradley, near Bilston, about five o’clock on Saturday night. In the marble alley, at the back of the house, they found appearances of a recent cock fight. On going into the bar room, they found about sixty men all intent upon discussing the merits of two cocks, which, trimmed and spurred, were in the room, and which bore every appearance of having been engaged in combat. When the police took possession of the birds, a general exodus of the men took place, but one, a youth, was arrested, and the names of others are known to the police.

When charged at Bilston Police Court on Tuesday, with the offence of cruelty to one of the cocks, the defendant, for whom Mr. T. M. Green, of Darlaston, appeared, urged in defence that he was simply carrying the cock for a man whom he did not know, who had rewarded him with 1½d. As opposed to this, the statement of Chief Superintendent Longden, that the prisoner was bailed out by a well-known Darlaston cock fighter, scarcely lead to the supposition of ‘injured innocence’ being made to suffer for the guilty; and the battered, dilapidated appearance of the bird itself was conclusive evidence that a battle had been fought.

Probably the small fine of 1s and costs will not act as a very powerful deterrent; but the prosecution will at all events show that the authorities are alive to the doings of the sporting fraternity; that to attempt to revive the sport, under such adverse circumstances, will be labour lost, and that ‘the game,’ even if completed, will not be ‘worth the candle,’ seeing that under any circumstances it means an unpleasant detention and monetary payment, with an equally unpleasant public interview with the local justices.”

“John Webb, landlord of a beerhouse in Lower Bradley, called the GREAT WESTERN INN, was charged with being drunk on his own premises on the 21st of February. PCs Titherleigh and Buxton proved the offence.

Mr. W. Bowen appeared for the defence, and defendant was fined 5s and costs.”

Darlaston Weekly Times 18/7/1885

“The half-yearly meeting of the officers of the Bilston, Walsall, and Cannock district of the National United Order of Free Gardeners was held on Monday, at the house of Brother John Webb, the GREAT WESTERN INN, Lower Bradley, near Bilston. Upwards of 70 delegates were present.....

Appeals from the various lodges were carefully considered, and the sum of £35 was ordered to be paid from the benevolent fund to the afflicted brothers of the district.”

“Maria Holden and Alice Perks, both of Lower Bradley, Bilston, were charged with stealing a shawl, value 3s, the property of Rachael Webb, wife of John Webb, publican, Lower Bradley.

Prosecutor stated that on the 27th of April the shawl was in the bar, the prisoners being in and out at the time. Soon after the shawl was missed, and from inquiries made by the police it was found that the younger defendant had pawned it at a shop in Bilston.

The Bench dismissed the charge against Holden, and fined Perks 5s and costs; in default 14 days’ imprisonment.”

Staffordshire Advertiser 22/12/1838

"On Monday the 10th instant, Mr. Thomas Burnish, innkeeper, of Bilston, in a fit of temporary derangement, threw himself from an attic window of his house into the street, and dashed his brains out. He was immediately picked up, but life was extinct. It appeared on evidence before the coroner (H. Smith, Esq) that the unfortunate man had for some time previously been labouring under occasional aberration of mind, and had entertained distressing apprehensions that he should be taken to Stafford Gaol. A verdict of Temporary Derangement was returned."

"Staffordshire Lent Assizes.....

Robert Mangham, 22, a puddler, was indicted for stealing a cart, the property of John Walker, licensed victualler, Bilston. Mr. Cook Evans conducted the prosecution.

The prosecutor stated that his cart was safe in his yard at eleven o'clock on the evening of the 26th February last, and that next morning it was missing, and he did not again see it until the 6th March at Dudley, where the prisoner had sold it to a broker for 30s the day after the robbery.

The prisoner said he met a man in the streets of Dudley who asked him to try if he could sell a cart for him, which he had done to the broker as stated.

The jury gave a verdict of guilty. A previous conviction was read, and the prisoner was sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment with hard labour."

“T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, opened an inquest at the GREYHOUND INN, Bradley, on the body of Elizabeth Phillips, 33 years old, wife of Richard Phillips, boiler maker, of Bradley, in the parish of Sedgley, whose death, it is alleged, had taken place from unskilful treatment in childbirth by a surgeon.

It appears from the evidence that on Wednesday, the 10th ult, Mrs. Dyke, a neighbour of the deceased, was sent for to attend Mrs. Phillips. On the following Saturday evening the latter requested her to fetch Mr. Charles Edwin Kettle, surgeon, as she expected to be confined. Mrs. Dyke did so, and Mr. Kettle attended, sat with the deceased about half an hour, and before leaving assured her that she was not in labour, and promised to send her a bottle of medicine to relieve her pain. Mrs. Dyke, however, fetched the medicine, and Mrs. Phillips took it that night. She appeared much worse on the following day, and in the evening the deceased's husband again fetched Mr. Kettle, who a second time pronounced that the woman was not in labour. He prescribed more medicine, and Mrs. Phillips took two doses of it that night. Her pains, however, continued, and about nine o'clock on the following morning her husband fetched Mr. Kettle a third time, and that gentleman then said 'it was a cross birth,' and he should not leave the patient until she was delivered. He used instruments to procure the birth, and the woman complained that he was cutting her to pieces. At about eleven o'clock she was partially delivered, and Mr. Kettle sent to Bilston for Mr. Hancox, but he was from home. Mr. Kettle, after exerting himself and using his instruments till a little after two, sent for Mr. Smith, who attended in less than half an hour, and he and Mr. Kettle jointly used the latter gentleman's instruments in endeavouring to complete the birth. Not being able to effect their purpose. Mr. Kettle again sent for Mr. Hancox, who arrived about four o'clock in the afternoon, bringing with him instruments differing from those used by the two other gentlemen. With these he succeeded in completing the delivery of the woman in the course of five minutes. The child was dead. Mr. Kettle continued to attend the deceased up to about ten o'clock on Thursday morning. The poor woman being very much worse, about eight o'clock in the evening her husband sent for Mr. Kettle again, but as he did not come Phillips sent a message to Mr. Hancox desiring his attendance. That gentleman arrived at about ten o'clock, and continued to attend Mrs. Phillips till her death, which took place on the following night.

The deceased had had eight children, and two of the female witnesses gave it as their opinion that the deceased's death had taken place from a want of skill on the part of Mr. Kettle.

Mr. Hancox stated that when he first entered the room where the deceased was he found her sensible but much exhausted. He described at length the means he adopted for her relief, and said that on the completion of the birth the woman expressed her gratitude for what he had done.

The inquest was adjourned to Tuesday (yesterday) for a post mortem examination of the body, but in consequence of the illness of the coroner, the inquest was further adjourned.”

Birmingham Daily Post 10/3/1858

“Yesterday the inquest was resumed on the body of Elizabeth Phillips, the late wife of a miner, residing at Batmans Hill, near Bilston, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, Coroner.

In addition to the evidence previously taken, Mr. Hancox, surgeon, deposed that he was present at the post mortem examination made by Mr. Edwardes, surgeon, of Wolverhampton. They found that the uterus had been most extensively lacerated, and those lacerations contributed to occasion death.

Mr. Green James, of Wolverhampton, solicitor, was in attendance to watch the proceedings on behalf of Mr. Kettle, the surgeon who was first called in to attend the deceased. Mr. Edwardes deposed, in addition to the evidence of Mr. Hancox, that the interior of the uterus presented traces of a considerable amount of inflammation, terminating with gangrene, and considering the great extent of the injury the uterus presented, it was a wonder to him that the woman had survived so long after her confinement. He did not consider that forceps ought to have been used; the course to be adopted in such a case was that adopted by Mr. Hancox, by reducing the size of the head of the child. The lacerations, in his opinion, were sufficient to cause death.

The other witnesses repeated their former evidence, after which the jury first handed in a written verdict, to the effect that the deceased had died in consequence of the unskilful treatment on the part of Mr. Kettle. The Coroner informed the Jury that they must find a verdict upon the cause of death, when they decided that the deceased expired from lacerations of the uterus; but how such lacerations were occasioned, there was no evidence to prove.”

“An inquest was held on Monday, at the GREYHOUND INN, Cross Street, Bradley, on the body of Bridget M'Intyre, aged ten years. On the forenoon of the previous day the deceased was leaping from a boat in the canal at Bradley, and falling into the water, was drowned. A verdict of Accidental Death was recorded.”

County Express 22/5/1869

“At Dudley Police Court, on Monday, Henry Fox Wright, landlord of the CASTLE AND FALCON INN, Wolverhampton Street, and commercial traveller, was charged, on remand, with embezzling certain sums of money belonging to his employer, Mr. Thomas Willis. Mr. Stokes prosecuted, and Mr. Shakespeare defended.

At the commencement of the case, Mr. Shakespeare applied for a remand, inasmuch as he had not had sufficient time to get up his defence. Mr. Stokes objected; and the Bench decided that the cases should go on. A week was amply sufficient remand for the purpose of defence.

Thomas Willis, the prosecutor, stated that he was a wholesale grocer, of the Market Place, Dudley. Prisoner had been employed by him for a period of fifteen or sixteen years. His duties were those of a traveller and shopman, and these capacities he had to obtain orders and receive moneys, and to account for these every day. The prisoner was paid by salary, and not commission. David Weston was a customer of his (witness’s), and he resided at Dudley Wood. He owed witness £20. The prisoner had not accounted for that money; nor for money received from Matthew Smith, who owed £14 5s; nor from Daniel Cooper, Bradley, who owed £37 12s 2d. Prisoner had a book in which moneys received by him and paid over were credited to him by witness. In that book none of the amounts mentioned above were acknowledged. Since February last he had frequently called the attention of the prisoner to the accounts, but he made excuses.

By Mr. Shakespeare: Prisoner had £100 per year and 4s per day expenses. For that sum he had to give up all his time to prosecutor. The prisoner owed him a private account for grocery and hops, amounting to £30 3d, and witness gave him credit in February last for one year and a quarter’s salary to cover the amount and deficiencies. By that he did not mean embezzlements. Prisoner had written to him on the 18th February, stating that he was going to get money to put all his accounts straight. He begged to be allowed to go on, as he had some time before told him that he was wrong in his accounts. On the 21st January the prisoner paid, on account of money received, £10, saying that that amount balanced Woodhouse’s account. It was not for general deficiencies. In March he found further deficiencies, and in May again he found larger deficiencies. After some slight equivocation, witness said he had received some money in September, 1868, on account of discrepancies in the prisoner’s accounts. There was no arrangement at Christmas that the prisoner was to have a commission instead of a salary; neither had there been any settlement since that time. Witness obtained a warrant against the prisoner on the 8th of May, in consequence of his absconding. Previous to that date he had found out the embezzlement of Cooper's account. He did not intend to prosecute, but when prisoner bolted he sought the assistance of Mr. Stokes. Prisoner returned on Monday last. After Davies had arrested him, and the prisoner had said he could get the money in a short time, witness wanted the warrant again in his hands. It was only to look at the date. Before prisoner's arrest he did not ask him to turn over the CASTLE AND FALCON INN, where prisoner was landlord. Prisoner's wife had been to him with £300, but he declined to settle the matter in any such way.

Re-examined by Mr. Stokes: Made many enquiries for the prisoner during the Friday night and Saturday whilst he was away, absconding, in fact, and could learn nothing of him. The sum embezzled amounted to £700.

David Weston said he owed Mr. Willis £20 for hops. On the 18th February he paid prisoner, and produced the receipt.

Matthew Smith said that on the 17th February he paid the prisoner £14 and received a receipt for it.

Elizabeth Cooper, wife of Daniel Cooper, said she received a receipt from the prisoner for £37.

Sergeant Davis said he received the warrant for the apprehension of the prisoner, and on the previous Monday he went to Mr. Willis's, and found prosecutor and prisoner together in a stable, at the back of the premises. Mr. Willis said to him, 'Here's your prisoner, and here's your warrant.' After that he locked the prisoner up. Upon charging him at the station he made no reply.

Cross-examined: When in the stable prisoner asked Mr. Willis to allow him three hours, and he would get the whole of his money. After that Mr. Willis desired witness to give him the paper again, but witness refused, and said he must do his duty. The prisoner was then formally charged and pleaded not guilty.

Mr. Shakespeare said his client would reserve his defence, after which the prisoner was committed to the Sessions for trial. Six other charges of embezzlement against the prisoner were then gone into, and the prisoner was committed to the Sessions upon two indictments involving three charges in each. Bail was then allowed."

[Henry Fox Wright appeared at the Worcestershire Quarter Sessions in June 1869, he was found guilty, and sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment with hard labour.]

"An inquest was held yesterday, at the GREYHOUND INN, Cross Street, Bradley, by the Coroner, Mr. W. H. Phillips, on the body of Joseph Chambers, aged 18, a miner, in the employ of Mr. Yardley. At 6pm on the 11th inst he was about to ascend a pit in the Brerely Colliery, when he fell off the skip into a sump filled with water at the bottom, and was drowned. The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death."

"At the Bilston Police Court, yesterday, Thomas Briggs, Secretary of the Glory of England Lodge, otherwise the Victoria Order of Odd Fellows, GREYHOUND INN, Bradley, was charged with that he, together with other members of the lodge, refused to recognise Thomas Collins as a member. Mr. Stokes (Dudley), was for the complainant, and Mr. Thurstans (Wolverhampton), for the defendant.

The plaintiff, a long time ago, became a member of the lodge, and had since paid the usual subscriptions. Being a teetotalter, he seldom attended the meetings, and sent his contributions by his wife. Three weeks ago his contributions were refused, and when he went to the club room he was expelled. Hence the proceedings.

The defence was that when the complainant first became a member he was over the maximum age of membership – forty-five years. He was, however, accepted on condition, the defence continued, of his leaving the club when his son left, and his son left last December. It was further urged that the defendant had signed a document to that effect. The signature to this document the complainant now repudiated; and it was pointed out on his behalf that throughout the whole interval between December and three weeks ago complainant's contributions were regularly received. The minute-book of the club showed that when the complainant tendered himself for membership, some of the members believed him to be 45, and some 47, but that it was eventually agreed to accept him at 45. Recently the rules of the club had been altered to make the maximum age 35.

The Stipendiary, in giving judgement, said that the complainant had a distinct claim upon the club, because he had been accepted as 45. If being over 45, and his money had been accepted, his claim to membership would not be tenable, but he would have his remedy against the individual members who accepted his money. In this case they agreed to waive the question as to the exact age, and received him as 45. They had now, therefore, no right to exclude him from the benefits of the association. The Magistrate, therefore, decided in the complainant's favour."

Dudley Guardian 21/3/1874

"On Wednesday evening, a fire was discovered to have broken out on the premises of Mrs. Elizabeth Cooper, of the GREYHOUND INN, Cross Street, Bradley, Bilston. The fire occurred in the malt room, where there were at the time a large quantity of malt and some poultry, as Mrs. Cooper also deals in poultry. Several of the neighbours rendered what assistance they could give by throwing water on the fire, and it was soon extinguished. The damage sustained is estimated at about £40. How the fire originated has not transpired, but from subsequent inquiries it is suspected that some one entered the place to steal the poultry, and that the straw inside was set on fire by the intruders."

Midland Counties Evening Express 13/5/1875

"Charles Strong was summoned for having, as secretary of a friendly society, refused to pay the sum of £2 16s to Thomas Briggs, a member of the Society. Mr. Barrow appeared for the complainant, who is a cabinetmaker, living in Railway Street, Bradley, and stated that his client, thirty-five years ago, fortunately or unfortunately, joined the Glory of England Lodge of the United Order of Oddfellows, which met at the GREYHOUND INN, Bradley. Since then he has paid his subscriptions regularly, and during part of the time he was secretary of the lodge. He left that post in September last, and in February this year was taken ill. He applied for relief, but although he had paid over £100 to the lodge, and was in full benefit, no money was paid to him. On the contrary, he was informed that the lodge had no funds to dispose of. He was ill until the 22nd March, and for those seven weeks he now claimed £2 16s, the relief due to him at the rate of 8s a week."

[The case was adjourned until the following day.]

AND

".....Mr. Spooner, the learned Stipendiary, after remarking that the society seemed to be nothing but a drinking and burial society, and that the accounts were shamefully kept, ordered the defendant to pay the full amount claimed. If the money were not forthcoming, a distress would be levied on defendant's goods."

"On the 15th inst, at the Parish Church, Sedgley (by the Rev. William Griffith, vicar), William Henry, youngest son of the late Daniel Cooper, of the GREYHOUND, Bradley, to Clara, second daughter of the late James Rose, of Batmans Hill."

"Mr. W. H. Phillips (Coroner) held an inquest on Monday at the GREYHOUND INN, Cross Street, Bradley, on the body of Titus Wainwright (42), a Wolverhampton bailiff, who had been placed in possession of the Bradley Bridge Iron Foundry at Bradley.

The deceased had been in possession for several weeks, and on Saturday night, at about half-past seven o'clock, whilst he was eating his supper in the presence of a little girl named Elizabeth Fletcher, he fell forward and died immediately.

A verdict was returned that the deceased died from Natural Causes; and the Coroner remarked that it was fortunate that the witness Fletcher was present at his death, or perhaps the deceased being a bailiff, and the sale of the works having been announced to take place that day (Monday), some suspicion might have been aroused in the neighbourhood."

Evening Express 10/1/1881

"Yesterday (Sunday) morning an old man 73 years of age, named William Baker, a resident of Stoke Street, Daisy Bank, was found dead in the road in Brierley Lane, Bradley, under circumstances of a strange and very unusual character.

The deceased, who was a horse fettler, at the Eight Locks pit, Great Bridge, went to his work on Saturday afternoon, and on Sunday morning at about a quarter to eight o'clock, a boy named Hughes found deceased's dead body lying in the road, without his coat, and in a saturated condition, as if he had been in the canal. He at once communicated with Police-constable Baldwin, who had the body conveyed to the GREYHOUND INN, Cross Street, Bradley, where it awaits an inquest.

The deceased's coats were soon after found at the foot of what is known as the Rocket Bridge, near Batmans Hill Works, and as these were also saturated with water it was evident the man must either have fallen into the canal or have been pushed in and left to get out as best he could.

The general belief is that the deceased, when returning home, accidentally fell into the canal, and got out again, but afterwards died from exposure to the severe cold which prevailed. An enquiry will be held."

"Yesterday (Tuesday) afternoon, W. H. Phillips, Esq, coroner, held an inquest at the GREYHOUND INN, Cross Street, Bradley, on the body of William Baker (73), of Stoke Street, Daisy Bank, who was on Sunday morning found dead in Brierley Lane, under circumstances reported in our columns on Monday.

Mrs. Ann Millard, with whom the deceased had lodged for many years, identified the body. She said he had been employed at the Eight Locks Pit, Great Bridge, as a horse fettler. She had examined the body of the deceased, but had found no mark or injury upon it. She had no reason to blame any one for his death. He was a very weakly old man and stooped very much, nearly two double. His eyesight was very bad. His relatives lived in Derbyshire.

George Hobble, watchman at the Eight Locks pit, stated that the deceased, after fettling the horses down the pit, came up, and left between three and four o'clock on Sunday morning. He started to go down the lane leading to the railway and the canal. He usually went home along the canal side.

A lad living at Bradley gave evidence to going to fetch some water from a spring near Brierley Farm just before eight o'clock on Sunday morning, when a dog he had with him stopped. He went to see what the dog was stopping for, and found the deceased lying dead on the ground.

John Jones, labourer, Batmans Hill, also spoke to seeing the deceased lying dead on the ground. He helped to wheel him to the place of inquest. Witness found two jackets belonging to the deceased on the ground near to the canal bridge in the locality when the deceased was picked up. The jackets seemed to have been taken off together.

The jury was satisfied that the deceased had fallen into the canal and got out again, but was overcome by the severe weather and died before anyone came to him. They returned a verdict of Found Dead."

"At the GREYHOUND INN, Bradley, the members of the Glory of England Lodge, Reformed Order of Oddfellows, had on Monday their annual feast. There were about eighty present, and the hostess, Mrs. Cooper, served up an excellent meal. After dinner, Brother Isaac Townsend took the chair, and Brother W. Laight the vice-chair. The usual toasts were drunk. Brother Charles Strong, secretary, showed in the annual report the affairs of the lodge were flourishing. About thirty new members had been added during the year, and the bank account was increased by about £30."

"On Monday morning, Mr. W. H. Phillips, coroner, held an inquest at the GREYHOUND INN, Cross Street, Bradley, touching the death of Edith Asberry (16), daughter of the late Benjamin Asberry, of Daisy Bank.

Eliza Gough, the wife of Henry Gough, an ironworker, of Brierley Lane, Daisy Bank, said deceased was her sister, and lived with and was supported by her. About twelve o'clock on Friday last she left home alone, without hat or shawl. Witness did not hear anything of her until her dead body was brought home. There had not been any quarrel. Deceased had complained of a pain in the head.

Jane Hale, a relative, residing in Chell Street, Daisy Bank, deposed that deceased came to her mother's house about four o'clock on Friday afternoon, and had tea. Deceased complained of sickness. She asked witness to go some of the way home with her. They proceeded over Daisy Bank railway bridge, and along the Greengate Lane, to a pool of water near the Blue Button engine, deceased remarking that she was going to meet a young woman named Sarah Lloyd returning from work, to ask her about a situation. They were gaming there for some time, deceased throwing stones into the water. Deceased gave witness a pair of cuffs, apron, and shawl pin, remarking, 'Keep them as long as you live.' Deceased spoke about the spot being near to where a young woman named Eliza Cartwright was murdered. Deceased asked witness to see if Lloyd was coming. She went about twelve yards from the pool, and upon returning found deceased in the water. She raised an alarm, and a relative named Hannah Hale, of Skidmore Row, went to the spot. The body was afterwards got out by James Budd, of Bradley.

Sarah Lloyd, of Daisy Bank, stated that she knew deceased well, and saw her on Thursday at the brickyard at Deepfields, but not to speak to her. Witness had not made an appointment to meet deceased on Friday, and did not return home from her work from Deepfields by that way.

The girl Hale, recalled, said deceased did not mention anything about death, but stated she had been there a week before. Deceased was close to the water with her back towards it when she asked witness to see if Lloyd was coming.

The jury found that deceased died from drowning, but that there was no evidence to show by what manner or means she got into the water."

"On the 18th inst, at her residence, GREY HOUND INN, Bradley, Elizabeth, relict of the late Mr. Daniel Cooper; aged 67. Deeply lamented."

"Our readers will regret to hear of the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Cooper (67), relict of the late Mr. Daniel Cooper, of the GREY HOUND INN, Bradley, which occurred after a short illness, on Friday last. Deceased will be missed by a great many, always being ready to help in every charitable object, and especially that of the poor. The funeral took place on Wednesday, at Coseley Church, when much respect was shown by the hundreds who formed the funeral cortege. The coffin was of fine oak and bore the following inscription, 'Elizabeth Cooper, born May 8th, 1819; died June 18th, 1886.'" A great number of wreaths were placed upon the coffin by friends of deceased. The Rev. W. Spencer, vicar of Coseley, officiated. Mr. Baines, of Princes End, carried out the funeral arrangements."

"A number of friends and customers met on Saturday evening last at the house of Miss E. Cooper, GREYHOUND INN, Bradley, to partake of a substantial supper provided gratuitously by the hostess. After ample justice had been done to the good things provided, Mr. George Moody was voted to the chair and Mr. John J. Larkin to the vice-chair. Songs were given during the evening by Mr. J. Pascal, and a duet was given by Messrs. J. Gallagher and Hampton. Mr. T. Paul acted as accompanist."

"Yesterday, the Deputy Coroner, Mr. E. B. Thorneycroft, held an inquest at the GREYHOUND INN, Bradley, Bilston, into the death of Mary Morris (70), lately lodging in Cross Street, Bradley. It appeared that the deceased had been taking a breakfast to an ironworks near the canal side, and was seen by a girl named Moody leaving the works. The morning was very foggy, and shortly after she left a splash was heard, followed by a cry of 'Murder!' Subsequently the body was recovered by a boatman. When got out of the water deceased was alive, but she could not speak, and she died very quickly. A verdict of Accidental Death was returned."

"Mr. A. B. Smith (deputy coroner) held an inquest at the GREYHOUND INN, Cross Street, Bradley, on Friday night, touching the death of John Glover, late of 19, Rose Street, Bradley, who was found the same morning to have cut his throat in an outhouse. The deceased, a labourer at an ironworks, had been strange in his behaviour for some time, and had stated that he should have to give up work, but the thought of having to go to the workhouse was driving him mad. A verdict was returned that deceased committed Suicide whilst of Unsound Mind."

"At the GREYHOUND INN, Bradley, on Saturday evening, Councillor W. H. Wells (who for the past 20 years has been in medical practice at Bradley, and who is now retiring, consequent of the new law of the Medical Council of the United Kingdom) was entertained at dinner by a large number of friends and well-wishers. After an excellent repast, Councillor J. A. Jordan presided, and made a presentation to the guest of the evening of a very handsome illuminated address and a purse of gold containing £50. The subscribers to the testimonial included many friends and admirers of Mr. Wells. In making the presentation, Councillor Jordan alluded to the many acts of kindness and consideration which had endeared their guest to the whole population of Bradley and district, and he expressed, on behalf of all, the deep regret they felt on the severance of his professional connection with them. Councillor W. H. Wells, who was enthusiastically received, feelingly acknowledged the gift. The remaining portion of the evening was devoted to harmony."

“Two novel arguments were raised in defence in a case at Bilston Police Court yesterday, when John Robinson, licensee of the GREYHOUND INN, Cross Street, Bradley, was charged with being drunk and disorderly. A police-constable in his evidence said that the defendant followed him into Bilston Police Station, where he was very disorderly.

Mr. Waldron (of Brierley Hill), for the defence, urged that as the charge against defendant was with respect to his conduct at the police station the latter could not be considered a public place or highway in accordance with the Act under which the proceedings were taken, Moreover, as he voluntarily entered the police station and was detained there he had been unlawfully taken into custody.

The Bench overruled both objections, and after hearing evidence for the defence fined the defendant 20s and costs.”

Leonard Kinsey was involved in the Rocket Pit tragedy in 1921.

“James Morris, married, of Broomfield Road, Princes End, was killed, and Leonard Kinsey and Thomas Camm, both of Bradley, sustained injuries as a result of brickwork collapsing on them during the sinking of a pit shaft at Bradley (Wolverhampton). The accident occurred at the Rocket Pit, in the centre of a disused coalfield lying between Bradley and Princes End. Kinsey held a contract for sinking the shaft at the time of the mishap, the other two being at work a little way down the shaft. Kinsey noticed some of the brickwork suddenly begin to bulge and shouted to the others to jump into the ‘bowk,’ and at the same time signalled to the men in charge of the windlass to draw then up. Their weight, however, caused the whole of the brickwork to give way, and this, with a mass of dirt and the windlass itself, hurtled on to the men beneath, while Kinsey himself was also carried in by the collapse. Other men who were at work in the vicinity rushed to the rescue, but this work was very difficult owing to the dangerous condition of the bank, due in some measure to the heavy rain. It was three hours before Morris was extricated, and he died soon afterwards. The other two were buried up to their armpits. Stimulants were administered to them while the rescuers toiled to remove the debris which pinned them down. Fortunately they escaped with minor injuries. The body of Morris was conveyed to the mortuary at Bilston, where the inquest opens today.”

[At the inquest a verdict of Accidental Death was returned.]

Blackcountryman (Autumn 1984) ‘Bilston’s Ancient Pile’ by Ron Davies

“.....The former Stowheath Manor, dating from the 15th century, situated in High Street, now goes by the sign of the GREYHOUND AND PUNCHBOWL, though formerly known as the GREYHOUND, which title it is believed was adopted from the former Greyhound coach line, who appear to have used the old building as a coach-house, owing to its being situated on the A41 London to Holyhead road. This ran through the main town and Wolverhampton Street until a more direct route was laid down by Thomas Telford c.1821 (now Wellington Road). As many as 30 coaches passed daily through the town in its hey-day; the London coach once each week.

Quite how long the building has been used as an Inn is uncertain, but G. T. Lawley, referring to the interior décor of the building in his History of Bilston, 1893, says, ‘After a century of hard usage from miners and iron workers, the habitues of its drinking rooms, the house is much the worse for wear and is fast losing every semblance of its former substantial importance.’ (Photographs taken at this period justify Mr. Lawley’s comment.)

Some may wonder why the so-called Stowheath Manor lies in Bilston town whilst Stowheath proper lies about a mile to the north. In truth, the former Manor of Stowheath covered quite a large area.....

Lawley noted the building to be a good specimen of the half-timbered, many-gabled structures peculiar to the earlier Tudor period, with low ceilings, queerly shaped rooms, with recesses oddly placed and floors of different levels. It formerly contained some magnificently panelled and carved oak wainscoting and traces of beautiful ceiling in moulding and arabesque are still to be seen. There is, however, one ceiling in fair state of preservation of an unusual character, and that is the liquor vault, where the votaries of Bacchus partake of the usual liberations. This ceiling is moulded in a design of birds, vine leaves and grapes; it was once painted in colours, but is now white-washed and smoke-grimed. The cement is still as hard as stone, and though the surface is broken into compartments by massive oak beams, it is a fine specimen of ceiling decoration of the Queen Anne period.....

The old Bilston humourist John Freeman gave some account of the GREYHOUND in his Black Country Stories and Sketches (1930), mainly concerning a certain Joseph Reeves who was landlord c.1840. He was among the last in the town to wear the quaint 18th century dress of breeches, silk or worsted stockings and swallow-tailed coat, long after the introduction of trousers. Besides being mine host, he was also choirmaster at the Ettingshall Wesleyan Church. Most of the old taverns in the town at that period were rendezvous for members of the various churches. The ACORN, Pinfold Street, was used by the choir of St. Luke’s, devotees from St. Leonard’s met at the WHITE ROSE, and those from St. Mary’s at the ANGEL. The GREYHOUND was no exception; here the Primitive Methodists made free use of its hospitality, and ministers and officials often met there to discuss church affairs. However, landlord Reeves (a dapper little man) was known to turn off his taps at the slightest suggestion of improper behaviour from his customers, saying, 'No more filled for an hour,' and then turn all out into the streets, saints and sinners alike."

Black Country Bugle (1978)

'The GREYHOUND AND PUNCHBOWL'

"The Bilston residence of the Mollesleys was the old, half-timbered house, known at present as the GREYHOUND INN, High Street. There was a tradition current among some of the older inhabitants that it was formerly the Manor House of Stowheath and it was occasionally called by that name. This may have been from the fact that the Mollesleys, for several generations, were Stewards to Lord of the Manor. In one of the bedrooms about the year 1820 the following inscription was found cut in one of the beams: 'John Mollesley 1438.' In his family [John Green, the next owner] it remained until the latter end of the 18th century when it was made into a beerhouse called the GREYHOUND AND PUNCHBOWL. This is the oldest building in the town.....

About the year 1790 it became a Public House used mainly by miners and ironworkers and became the worst for wear."

Black Country Bugle 13/1/2021

'What was brewing in Bilston? Recalling lost pubs and brewers.' by Steve James

"By far the oldest pub in the town is the GREYHOUND AND PUNCHBOWL. Originally built as Stowheath Manor in 1438 by John de Mollesley, it became a public house in 1820. In 1936 Wolverhampton brewers W. Butler and Co. employed architect James Swan to renovate this fine timber-framed building, retaining much of the original woodwork, along with the 17th century plaster ceiling and Jacobean fireplaces. Although it's been refurbished several times, some of the original panelling and seating survives, along with its ghost! It's one of the most historic buildings in the area, nationally recognised and listed (Grade II*)."

Reputedly haunted by the "punchbowl ghost" who walks from the smoke room to the bar, clutching a glass of whisky.

'Supping with the spirits at haunted hostelries' by Steve James

"In Bilston, the GREYHOUND AND PUNCHBOWL is an ancient inn which was originally Stow Heath Manor House, associated with the Mollesley family. It's home to the 'Punch Bowl ghost,' reputed to walk out of the smoke room with a glass of whisky. A tall man in a black cloak and large black hat has also been seen around the kitchen. Other ghosts have been seen walking the corridors, along with the sound of a baby crying for its mother, who was murdered by a cruel landlord. She still wanders around the pub wearing a white gown, seeking her revenge."

Lot 5. All that Old Licensed and well-accustomed Public House, Messuage, or Tenement, called or known by the name or sign of GREYHOUND AND PUNCH BOWL, situate in, and fronting to, High Street, in Bilston aforesaid, and within the manor of Stowheath, together with the brewhouse, two stables, outbuildings, garden, and appurtenances thereunto belonging, formerly in the occupation of Mr. Robert Reeve, deceased, and now of Mrs. Sarah Meachem, and others.

And also all that other Messuage or Dwelling House, situate in, and fronting to, High Street, in Bilston aforesaid, and adjoining on one side to the last described messuage, formerly in the occupation of Mr. Job Hartshorn, deceased, and now of Mrs. Summers.

And also all that Barn or Building, situate in, and fronting to, High Street, in Bilston aforesaid, and adjoining on one side to the last described messuage or dwelling house, and now in the occupation of Thomas Holt.

The land comprised in this lot including the site of the said messuages and buildings contains 1,391 square yards or thereabouts, and the premises produce altogether the annual rental of £44."

Wolverhampton Chronicle 9/6/1858

"On Monday last, an inquest was held at the GREYHOUND INN, Bilston, on the body of a female child, named Margaret Thurstans Adie, aged five months, daughter of Mr. Adie, grocer, of Bilston. It appeared that on Saturday night the child was in perfect health, and retired to rest with the nurse and a servant girl. In the morning the nurse, when she awoke, was horrified at discovering that the child was dead. The Jury returned a verdict of Found Dead, but from what cause death took place, there was no evidence to show."

"John Kirk, jun, manager for his father, who is a butty collier at the Priestfield Colliery, Bilston, appeared on an information charging him with paying 6d to one of his workmen, named William Griffiths, contrary to the terms of the Truck Act. Mr. Waterhouse supported the complaint, and Mr. W. Ward appeared for the defendant.

The statement of Griffiths was that he worked for the defendant as a collier, and that on the 1st of May he received the wages then due to him, less 6d, which was to be spent in ale at the GREYHOUND public house, at Bilston, kept by William Hall, a brother-in-law of the defendant. He went to Hall's house, and was there given a token, in exchange for which he afterwards received a quart of ale. Mr. Hall was called for the defence, and deposed that he was paid for the ale, not by the defendant, but by the doggy of the pit, who, he understood, received the money from the men. It was also contended for the defence that Griffiths had been paid in full. No direct evidence of this was, however, produced, and Mr. Leigh fined Kirk £5 and costs, in default three months' imprisonment. A second penalty of the same amount was imposed upon Kirk, for a similar offence in regard to a collier named Wilden."

"Septimus West, landlord of the GREYHOUND INN, High Street, was charged with permitting drunkenness on his premises on the 2nd inst.

Inspector Gasson said he went in company with Police-constable Wilson into a marquee on the defendant's premises, and found a prostitute, named Martha Cooper, and a man named Severn, both of whom were in a state of intoxication. The landlord and his waiter were sworn, and stated that none of the persons named appeared to be drunk, but the defendant, believing they had had enough, refused to fill them any more.

The Bench did not consider the case a very serious one, and ordered the defendant to pay a fine of 5s and costs.

The defendant said he was a stranger to the town, and he should have expected that the police would have cautioned him as to the kind of characters that frequented the house."

"Septimus West, landlord of the GREYHOUND INN, High Street, Bilston, was charged with permitting drunkenness on the morning of the 8th inst. Mr. R. A. Willcock defended.

From the evidence for the prosecution it appeared that two men named Richards and Clarke went into the house on the morning in question, and at half past nine Police-constable Brian found the two men drunk on the premises.

For the defence it was contended that the landlord, when he observed the men were under the influence of liquor, twice left the house to get the assistance of an officer to eject them. He could not find a policeman, and he then tried every means in his power to put them out of the house.

The Bench considered the charge proved, and the defendant having been previously convicted of a similar offence, was ordered to pay a fine of £5 and costs."

“What is believed to be Bilston’s oldest building, now used as a licensed house, is to be restored, as near as possible, to its original appearance. The building is the GREYHOUND INN, High Street, and yesterday the licensing justices approved plans for alterations to be carried out.

Erected in 1458, the building was formerly the Manor House of Stowheath. It once had handsome fireplaces adorned with Dutch tiles, fine panelling and oaken floors and staircases. Rather more than a century ago it was converted into a public house, the GREYHOUND AND PUNCH BOWL, its courtyard being used some years later as a weekly pig market. Though many of the original features have disappeared, one that still remains is a fine Arabesque ceiling in what is now the public bar. It is moulded into a design of birds, fruit, and vine leaves. The only other ceiling of its kind within knowledge is at Blickling, Norfolk.

Appealing for the Justices consent, Mr. F. L. Steward said the house was really a delightful piece of antiquity, and his clients desired to restore it as far as possible to its original appearance. Part of the house which was added 40 or 50 years ago would be demolished, so as to reveal once again the beauty of the half-timbered structure. Granting the application, the Justices said it would be a welcome improvement.”

Evening Despatch 13/9/1935

“Alleging she was twice attacked Mary Hall, of back of 74, High Street Bilston, at Bilston, today summoned Alice Wheeler, wife of the licensee of the GREYHOUND INN, High Street, for assault. Mrs. Hall said that on the morning of 5 September Mrs. Wheeler came to her in the High Street and struck her twice in the face. When she went into the public house to tell Mr. Wheeler, Mrs. Wheeler knocked her down. Mrs. Wheeler contended that Mrs. Hall, who had assisted her in the house for over a year, had been causing mischief between her and her husband. When she met Mrs. Hall in the street she only smacked her lightly on the head. When she found her in her house afterwards she ordered her out. The case was dismissed.”

It was restored by the brewery in 1935-1936.

It was reopened on 7th October 1936.

Evening Despatch 7/10/1936

“The Mayor of Bilston (Ald. T. R. Wood) today opened the GREYHOUND AND PUNCH BOWL INN, at Bilston, once the Manor House of the town. While hundreds of people lined the streets, the Mayor alighted from his car in the place where knights and cavaliers used to dismount. The house still retains all its old glory of timbered façade and decorated rooms in the fashion of five centuries ago. It was built by the family of John de Mollesley Bylston in 1458.

The house has been restored to all its former dignity and antiquity. The front of the building is now a complete example of timer framing and over-hanging gables while the inner posts, once the trunks of trees which were growing on the site, have been restored. In the old days the house was important because it was situated on the old Watling Street, from London to Holyhead, where warriors were wont to meet as they journeyed to the Wars of the Roses. The work of restoration has been carried out by Messrs. W. Butler and Co. Ltd., brewers, of Wolverhampton, under the direction of Mr. A. J. Swan.

The mayor was presented by Mr. W. R. Wilson with a silver tankard, inscribed with the coat of arms of the town, as a memento of the occasion, and out of which he said the future mayors of the borough could drink a toast. The Mayor added that the tankard would be something towards the Mayor’s Parlour, which to them was still a dream, but which might some day become a reality. After the ceremony a reception was held in the old rooms of the house, and members of the borough corporation warmed themselves at the large open fireplaces.”

‘Bilston’s Ancient Pile’ by Ron Davies

“.....By the 1930s the building became such a decaying eyesore that it could easily have been demolished, so wretched and unimportant was its outlook. The property, however, was purchased by Messrs. W. Butler & Co. Ltd., brewers of Wolverhampton (now Mitchells & Butlers Ltd.), and thanks to the managing director at the time it was given a second look and, with the help of architect Mr. J. A. Swan, it once again became alive. A new gable was added taking up most of the old bibble [pebble] fold, but giving the property its original features, so that it now looks exactly as it did all those 500 years ago, and is now truly a great credit to the town.”

"A timely reminder that Bilston, for all its industrial aspect, has important links with the past is given by the announcement that eleven buildings in the town are scheduled for preservation for their special historical or architectural interest.

Heading the list is the GREYHOUND AND PUNCHBOWL, the oldest building in the town. Believed to have been built during the Wars of the Roses by John Mollesley, it was formerly the Manor House of Stow Heath and a Court Leet. Restoration of the inn in 1936 revealed several features hitherto unknown, including an overhanging gable that had been hidden for 120 years."

"Inns in Midland counties which have been scheduled during the past twelve months by the Ministry of Housing and Local Government as being of outstanding historical and architectural interest.....

GREYHOUND INN, High Street, Bilston, Staffordshire."

Sandwell Evening Mail 10/11/1978

"If you ask where to go for a pint in Bilston people will usually say 'The GREYHOUND.' Not only is it the oldest pub in town, but also the oldest building. Licensee Len Fieldhouse has become an expert on the pub's history since he took over with his wife, Dot, four years ago. 'When we had the chance to take the GREYHOUND, we couldn't believe it,' said Dot. She was born 'just down the road' from the pub, and Len proposed to her in the oldest part of the pub, in the first smoke room. She accepted, and little knew they would both one day run the pub.

The pub was originally a manor house built for the aristocratic De Mollesley family when Bilston was one of the largest villages in the Midlands. In the first and second smoke room you can see the original oak beams which were cut from the once surrounding woodland of Stow Heath. The pub was on the Roman Watling Street and eventually became a coaching inn called the GREYHOUND AND PUNCHBOWL. It was restored as faithfully as possible to its origins by W. Butler and Co. Ltd. in 1936.

Pensioner Charlie Burns has been a regular drinker at the GREYHOUND for nearly 60 years, and can make history come alive over a pint of mild. The pub is reputed to be haunted by a 'good' ghost (one who buys spirits all round each time it appears). Charlie, an ex-chauffeur and mechanic for an undertaker, swears he saw a white lady descend the stairs one night and disappear into the ladies parlour – without buying a drink.

Of course not everybody drinks at the pub because of its architecture, though Michael Granton said he liked to take a drink and 'study the pretty patterns on the ceiling,' a Jacobean plaster ceiling with thin leaf scrolls. 'There is a good, quiet atmosphere here, the landlord makes you feel welcome, and you can get a good pint,' said Darrell Richards, ex-lead singer for Wolverhampton's Blithe Spirit pop group. 'A group of us use this pub as a watering hole after French lessons at the local college, because it's quiet, and we can practice our French,' said West Bromwich commercial director, John Blower. And college lecturer, Sharon Morton, said, 'I don't know much about the pub's history, but the interior décor certainly gives the pub a cosy atmosphere.'"

"Detectives were today hunting two raiders who struggled with a Bilston publican before escaping with £1,100 in cash from the pub. Mr. Len Fieldhouse, landlord of the GREYHOUND AND PUNCHBOWL in the High Street, disturbed the two intruders. They had climbed through a kitchen window after spotting part of the weekend takings on a table. Mr. Fieldhouse, aged 58, tried to stop the men, but after a brief struggle they ran off with the money.

Detective Chief Inspector Ken Snell warned publicans all over the Black Country to be on the lookout for 'opportunistic' thefts of this sort. One of the thieves was described as 18 years old, about 5ft 7in tall, well built, with long black straggly hair. Police have appealed for anyone who may have seen the men behaving suspiciously near the pub around 8pm on Sunday night to contact them."

“.....In its very centre, three feet from the bar, is a slender, twisted pillar, running from floor to ceiling. “Part of Bilston High Street has been closed off to make safe the building of an historic pub after an overnight blaze the GREYHOUND AND PUNCHBOWL suffered extensive damage in the fire, which started around 3.40 this morning – the incident is now being treated as arson. Smoke was seen pouring from the Grade Two listed pub, which dates back to the 15th century when it started life as a manor house. West Midlands Fire Service sent crews from Bilston, Willenhall, Tipton and Wolverhampton to tackle the blaze. Police officers were also at the scene to investigate. Fire crews are still on scene along with sniffer dogs as they try to make the structure of the Grade Two listed building safe – traffic disruption is expected for at least the next hour on the high street.”

“A grade II* listed inn has been damaged by a suspected arson attack five miles from the CROOKED HOUSE pub, which burnt down in August. The GREYHOUND AND PUNCHBOWL pub in Bilston, Wolverhampton, which has wonky exterior beams, has been on the Heritage at Risk Register for more than a decade following complex structural problems caused by the introduction of a supporting concrete frame during a renovation in the 1930s. Firefighters called to the 16th-century building at about 3.40am on Saturday had put it out by 5.20am but more than a quarter of the first floor suffered fire damage. “A fire that caused extensive damage to an historic Black Country pub has been confirmed to be caused deliberately. Fire investigators from West Midlands Fire Service have confirmed that the blaze of the pub, which happened around 3.40am on Saturday was an arson, and they have now concluded their investigation and passed it onto West Midlands Police. A spokesperson from West Midlands Police confirmed that investigations continue into the pub blaze. Firefighters were called to the GREYHOUND AND PUNCHBOWL in Bilston High Street at around 3.40am after smoke was seen pouring from the Grade II listed pub.....”

It was badly damaged by fire in the early hours of Saturday and since then has been broken into twice, with burglars taking televisions and alcohol Structural engineers from Wolverhampton Council and officers from Historic England are due on site today to assess the damage and whether it can be reasonably restored. Mr. Kang said he was determined to get the pub up and running again, though he couldn't put a timeline on it.....”

1999 - Dawn & David Wheate

THE GREYHOUND & PUNCH BOWL HOTEL, HIGH STREET, BILSTON

Formerly Stow Heath Manor House - the Home of the De Mollesleys

Built by John de Mollesley who married the daughter and heiress of Edwin de Bilston, the period would appear to be the Wars of the Roses.

The site adjoining the Heath of Stow was thickly wooded country and here the oak was felled for the construction of the House. Old English and French coins discovered in the floors would appear to confirm the period of George III and Louis XVI of France.

The West Front is a complete example of timber framing, the oak trees for the main parts being only worked on the exposed faces with axed surfaces, the inside face being left with the bark removed.

A beautiful example of the period is a richly carved 16th Century Mantelpiece with fine oak panelling which has been refixed in the ladies parlour.

The lounge has a delicately carved mantelpiece showing earlier types of panels with shaped arches. The ceiling with its mellow colouring of old age is a splendid example of plaster work and it can be said that this is the original, handworked in situ, and done by a master craftsman.

The work of restoring the old and carrying out the new additions has been well executed by the Staff of W. Butler & Co., Ltd., under the directions of Mr. J. A. Swan, F.R.I.B.A.

Birmingham Journal 17/6/1848

“At the Wednesbury Public Office, on Tuesday, before John Leigh, Esq, Stipendiary Magistrate, and James Bagnall, Esq, a case of some importance to lodges and friendly societies came on for hearing. Joseph Johnson, landlord of the HAND AND BOTTLE, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, was summoned by Frederick Atkins, Joseph Fellows, and Thomas Worton, as trustees of a Lodge of Good Fellows, formerly held at his house, on a charge of refusing to deliver up to them certain boxes, desks, money, &c, which had been entrusted to him as landlord of the house.

It appeared that about three months back the lodge had been removed to the house of Hannah Caddick, the BULLS HEAD, owing to the members being afraid that the room in which they met would fall in, as it had actually done since they shifted. A special meeting of the members had been held for the purpose of considering the removal, and every step taken in connection with the matter which the rules required, they having been certified by Mr. Tidd Pratt, and the lodge enrolled according to Act of Parliament. The cheque-book of the lodge lay in one of the desks which defendant had refused to give up, and they were consequently unable to draw any money from the bank or get a new book.

In defence, Mr. Johnson said that the whole affair had been managed very quietly, so that those members who were against the removal should know nothing of it, or at least had received so very short notice of the special meeting, as to render it inconvenient for them to attend. This was denied by the trustee who appeared for the lodge, but as the defendant said he should be able to bring forward proof, if the case was adjourned, Mr. Leigh complied with a request made for that purpose, and ordered the parties to be in attendance next Tuesday at Bilston.”

AND

“Bilston Public Office, on Tuesday last....

Joseph Johnson, landlord of the HAND AND BOTTLE, who had refused to give up the property he held belonging to No.3 Lodge of Good Fellows, consented to give up the same upon the members of the lodge paying him £4 for the rent of the room in which they had held their meetings.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 29/11/1848

“A decision of some importance to those masters who, having public houses, allow their workmen to run up scores for liquor, the amount of which is deducted from their wages every Saturday night, was given by John Leigh, Esq, the Stipendiary Magistrate, at the usual petty sessions held on Tuesday, at the KINGS ARMS INN, Bilston.

Mr. Joseph Johnson, weighing machine maker, and landlord of the HAND AND BOTTLE public house, was summoned by Thomas Blyth, one of his workmen, for wages to the amount of £3 10s 3d. It appeared that he had received more than one-half of the amount claimed, but the remainder had been kept back to clear a score which he had run up with his employer for liquor, and for provisions supplied by another person, for the payment of which Mr. Johnson had been responsible.

Mr. Leigh remarked upon the inducements which such a system held out to a workman to spend his wages in drink, instead of taking them home to his wife and family; and in order to show that employers need not expect to have any protection shown them when they allowed their workmen to contract debts of such a nature, he made an order for the payment of the amount kept back, with the exception of what Mr. Johnson had become responsible for in the shape of necessaries of life.”

“At a special sessions for the hundred of Seisdon North, held on Monday last, at the office of the county magistrates, Bilston Street, in this town.....

The license of Joseph Johnson, of the HAND AND BOTTLE, in Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, was, in consequence of his house being thrown down by the working of the mines in that street, transferred to a house in his occupation in another part of the same street.”

“Two charges of theft of money by means of a trick were preferred at Bilston Court yesterday against Lily Boden, aged 48, said to be a native of Coventry, and living at a lodging house, 173, Oxford Street, Bilston.

The first case referred to the theft of 6d. William Henry Porter, licensee of the HAND AND BOTTLE INN, Wolverhampton Street, said that the defendant entered the bar and asked for half-a-pint of mild. She tendered 6d and was given 3½d change. She said that she had been given wrong change – that she gave him 1s. During the argument his wife entered and, having heard the cause of the dispute, said, ‘Give her the 6d.’ Defendant left; he followed her and saw her go into four shops and eventually he gave her into custody.

The second charge was of the theft of 11½d belonging to Clarrie Jones, of 39, High Street, Bilston, who said that the woman asked for a halfpennyworth of sweets, for which she tendered a halfpenny. The woman began to tell her (witness) that there had been a terrible motor accident in the town and then said, 'You haven't given me my change. I gave you a shilling.' She started to shout and she (witness) became confused; not wanting a disturbance in the shop and being desirous of getting rid of the woman, she gave her 11½d and the woman left.

Superintendent Orland: There are quite a lot of other cases in Bilston.

Accused: Not that I can remember.

Prisoner was sentenced to 28 days' imprisonment."

[1] John Lucy (30), publican;

[2] Hannah Lucy (30);

[3] Elizabeth Morris (15), f.s., born Staffordshire:

Birmingham Journal 29/3/1845

“On Wednesday night last, an attempt was made by a man named William Neach to commit self-destruction, at the Bilston Police Station. It appears that during the day he had been indulging rather freely in drink, and while in a state of intoxication he broke the window of Mr. Lucy, publican, and was taken into custody by the police. When at the station, he became very violent, and attempted to strike the officer, for which he was placed for security in a cell. In about a quarter of an hour after the officer visited him, and found him hanging by a woollen neckcloth, which he had contrived to place over the end of a small beam in the lock-up. On being released, he fell insensible upon the floor, but was ultimately recovered by the exertions of the officers – to repent, we hope, of his folly.”

Birmingham Journal 28/2/1846

“On Friday last some gentlemen from the neighbourhood of Bilston were coursing at Paradise and started a hare, which they hunted nearly a mile and a half across the country, when poor puss was killed. On opening her a fine young leveret was taken out of her alive by Mr. Lucy, of Bilston, victualler, who gave it some milk, which it lapped eagerly. Mr. Lucy afterwards parted with the leveret to Mr. Lester, of Bilston, in whose care it was doing well until Tuesday last, when a cat which was in the house pounced upon the poor animal and killed it.”

“J. Adams (the Barber) of Bilston will run Edwards of Wednesbury, who defeated H. Causer (better known as the Crown Street Pet) at Shelford Common, near Walsall, on Tuesday last, 120 or 140 yards level, for £5 or £10 a side; or he will run Hadley of the same place, on the same terms. To run in three weeks from the first deposit. Money ready any time at Mr. C. Lewis’s, HAND AND KEYS, Bilston, or Mr. W. Whitmore’s, SPREAD EAGLE INN, Moxley, near Bilston.”

“Thomas Maybury and John Cording, both residing at Bilston, were brought up charged with highway robbery on Monday evening last. Mr. Claydon appeared for Maybury.

William Harris, miner, and Sarah Harris, his wife, deposed that they were going home from Bilston market on Monday night, about seven o’clock, and as they were passing along Coseley Row – at a place where there are houses on each side of the street – two men attacked them, knocking them both down, and rendering them insensible. They were unable to identify the men who attacked them; but Harris said that he had been drinking with the prisoners at an early part of the evening, and his wife said that Maybury’s father had given her a sovereign to say nothing of the matter. When she came to herself she missed 2s 10d from her pocket.

A girl named Selina Bradley spoke to seeing the two prisoners near the spot where the attack took place, and to seeing them run away whilst Harris and his wife were on the ground. Harris’s wife followed the men on recovering from the insensibility and gave information to the police, who apprehended the prisoners in the HAND AND KEYS, Wolverhampton Street, to which she had traced the two men who attacked her and her husband. Both were very violent when the police attempted to take them into custody. On Cording was found a piece of silk handkerchief which was identified by Mrs. Harris as part of one she had on at the time, which was torn in the scuffle.

The magistrates, considering that the abstraction of the money was not clearly proved, treated the case as one of assault, and disregarding the evidence of a man named Baker, who was called to prove an alibi in the case of Maybury, sentenced each of them to three months’ imprisonment.”

Bells Life in London and Sporting Chronicle 4/9/1859

“J. Turner of Bilston is surprised at J. Rigby’s challenging him, and wanting two yards start; but if he really wants a match Tuner will run him 120 yards, for £10 a side, level; or he will run Gilbert of Darlaston or Keats of Bloxwich 120 yards, or take one yard start in like distance of Ben Garrington of Birmingham, for £10 or £15 a side. Either of the matches can be made at C. Lewis’s, HAND AND KEY, Bilston, any time.”

Bells Life in London and Sporting Chronicle 15/7/1860

“E. Williams and W. Thompson (both of Tipton) are matched to run 110 yards, for £10 a side, to come off at Aston Cross Grounds, on Monday, July 23. A further deposit for the same must be made tomorrow (Monday), at Mr. C. Lewis’s, HAND AND KEYS, Bilston.”

AND

“S. Hollis of Can Lane, Bilston, will run Kellet of Shrewsbury 120 yards level, or take three yards in 120 of Newbold, or two yards in 120 of Crudginton (both of Birmingham); or will run Thrasher of Coventry 200 yards level, for from £15 to £25 a side. Either of the matches can be made any night next week at Mr. C. Lewis’s, HAND AND KEYS, Bilston.”

“Stafford Assizes.....

James Durkin, 40, hawker, Thomas Davis, 28, blacksmith, and Charles Lewis, publican, were indicted on a charge of burglariously breaking and entering into the dwelling house of Benjamin Guy at Bilston, with intent to steal his property, and did then and there attempt to kill and murder him. Lewis was also charged with feloniously receiving, harbouring, and maintaining in his dwelling house the above-named James Durkin.

Mr. Brown and Mr. Hill conducted the case for the prosecution; the prisoner Durkin was defended by Mr. Sawyer, Lewis by Mr. Matthews, and Davis by Mr. Kenealy.

Mr. Brown, in opening the case for the prosecution, said the prisoners were charged with having committed a burglary, and Lewis was also charged with harbouring the other prisoners. Although there would be no evidence of Lewis being engaged in the burglary, still if he was an accessory to the fact it would be the duty of the jury to bring him in guilty with the other prisoners, if they should decide upon convicting them. Of this, of course, the jury would be best able to judge after they had heard the evidence which he should lay before them.

It will be remembered that at the last Assizes a man named Samuel Jones was tried and convicted of being a participator in its burglary. He was sentenced to death, but his sentence was afterwards commuted to 20 years' penal servitude, which he is now undergoing. The facts of the case are briefly these. About half-past two on the morning of the 6th of March last the prosecutor, a butty collier, who resides at Portobello, Willenhall, was awaked from his sleep by three men rushing into his bedroom. One of these men was the convict Jones, who held a lighted candle over his head, the others were the prisoners Durkin and Davis, one of whom had his face covered with a black net, and both armed with life preservers. The prosecutor jumped out of bed and grasped Jones, whom he held down, and then faced the others with whom he had a terrific struggle. His nephew, who slept in another room, hearing a noise, came to his uncle's assistance, and was met as he entered the room by a heavy blow on the forehead from a life preserver. He assisted his uncle, and managed to get to the window and shout 'murder.' The prisoners, finding their attempt fruitless sought to escape and Davis and Durkin succeeded, one by the window and the other by the street door; Jones, however, being still held by the prosecutor, and ultimately handed over to the policeman who, aroused by the cry of 'murder,' came to the spot. During the struggle the prosecutor was seriously stabbed in the arm, and he was also wounded on the head by a blow from a life preserver. Davis and Durkin succeeded in getting clear away and would probably have escaped together, but that Jones, while in prison, made a statement criminating them, which led to their apprehension. The principal evidence against them was that of Jones, who was brought from the gaol in custody. He stated that he met the prisoners the day before the burglary at the house of Lewis, the HAND AND KEYS, Bilston, and Durkin said he owed Lewis £10 and he must have the money to pay him from somewhere, and Lewis said he wanted to get £50 by the next month. Later in the day Jones again met the prisoners, who said they were going to Portobello. The same night, at 12 o'clock, he again called at the HAND AND KEYS, where the prisoners were, and Davis asked Jones to go with him and Durkin to Portobello. Lewis supported the proposal, and told Jones he need not be afraid to go with Durkin; he (Lewis) knew he was all right. Durkin, who had left the room, presently returned with a lot of house-breaking implements, and observed that money was very easy to be got, it was to be had for fetching. Davis then said they were going to Guy's house, adding he knew Guy and Guy knew him, but he did not care for that – they (the burglars) would do for him. Lewis said he had got pistols and went to look for them but could not find them. It was then agreed that Jones should look after the money, and Davis and Durkin (armed with life preservers) were to look after the prosecutor. They laid down until two and then started, Davis leading the way. Lewis previously sent his wife to bed and said he would sit up till the prisoners returned. He gave Jones a candle and some matches, and it was agreed that he should have a share of the plunder. They went to Guy's house by a circuitous route and entered by the back way through the cellar. In the kitchen they found a lot of flannel jackets and each put one on. They left their shoes in the passage and proceeded upstairs to Guy's bedroom. The scene which followed has been already briefly described.

Jones gave his evidence in a very straightforward manner, and it was not much shaken by the severe cross-examination he underwent. To support his statement an old man named James Pugh, who had the ill-luck to be in the station house at the same time as Davis was produced, and he stated that Davis at the time made a full confession to him of his share in the burglary, and expressed a regret that his companions had not done as he wished, if they had Guy would never have been able to appear against them. In cross-examination this witness admitted that he had been a frequent inmate of gaols, and that his life had not been the most respectable. He confessed that he might have committed many a theft, but he did not know how many, for he didn't keep such things in his head.

A good deal of evidence tending both directly and indirectly to criminate the prisoners was taken. In reply to the statement of Jones so far as it affected Davis, the man who was convicted a few days since of stealing a large sum of money with which he ran off to Australia, was brought from gaol, on the application of Mr. Kenealy, and he made a statement to the effect that Jones had expressed while in gaol, his determination to 'pull Davis in,' and ensure his companionship during his twenty years of penal punishment.

The learned counsel for the prisoners each addressed the Jury at some length, the principal argument in each case being the insufficiency of the evidence and the unreliable character of the statements of such men as Jones and Pugh, especially the former, whose animus was clearly shown.

Several witnesses were called to prove an alibi for Davis, and to speak to his character.

It being now a quarter past seven, the Judge decided to adjourn the case. His lordship, however, assented to Mr. Matthews application to be allowed to call witnesses to speak to Lewis's character. Several respectable persons, who stated that they had known Lewis for many years, spoke very favourably of him.

The Court then (at 20 minutes past 7) rose, the Jury being locked up for the night."

AND

“The case for the defence was resumed, when several witnesses were called to prove that Durkin had a black eye and walked lame – the consequence of having fallen down the cellar steps – for several days before the burglary, and also that neither Jones nor Davis was at the HAND AND KEYS at any period of the day preceding the night of the burglary.

Other witnesses were also called to speak to Lewis’s character, after which Mr. Brown replied to the whole case, and the learned Judge summed up. The jury retired at ten minutes past one to consider their verdict, and after half-an-hour’s absence they returned with a verdict of guilty against Durkin, and not guilty against Davis and Lewis.

Sentence of death was recorded against Durkin; the other prisoners were discharged.

At the close of the case Mr. Hill said he had been assured by the officials of the gaol, that the convict Swatman had had no opportunity of making a communication to the convict Jones, so that the story told by Swatman on the previous day was a pure fabrication.

The Judge said he also had been informed by Major Fulford that this was the case..”

“Bilston Adjourned Licensing Meeting.....

Friday was the last day appointed by the magistrates for determining the renewal of publicans’ licenses, the consideration of which had been deferred from the annual licensing meeting through the misconduct of the applicants. The bench admonished each applicant, but renewed all the licenses, except in the case of Charles Lewis, of the HAND AND KEYS, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, who, it will be remembered, was tried at the last Stafford assizes for being concerned in a burglary at Portobello.”

“On Monday, at the HAND AND KEYS, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, Mr. W. H. Phillips, deputy coroner, concluded an inquiry touching the death of William Mansell, who had been in the employ of Messrs. Claridge and North. The evidence showed that on the 10th ult deceased quarrelled at the works with his striker, Thomas Davis, and threatened to run him through with a bar of hot iron. Davis in self-defence wrested the iron from him, and struck him about the head. About a week afterwards Mansell fell ill, and died on the 29th, as a post mortem examination showed, from slow inflammation of the brain, which resulted in apoplexy. The medical testimony pointed to the violence used by Davis as a probable cause of the inflammation; but as Davis did not seem to have used more violence than was necessary for his defence, the jury returned a verdict to the effect that the deceased had died from an attack of apoplexy, but whether it was caused by violence or natural causes there was no evidence to show.”

"Yesterday, the adjourned inquest was held at the HAND AND KEYS, Bilston, upon the body of Mary Jane Griffiths, aged eleven years. The child died a month ago, under circumstances that led to the impression in the mind of Mr. Kellett, surgeon, that the illness was cholera; but Mr. Larkin, surgeon, after making a post mortem examination, deposed that cholera was not the cause of death; nor could he account for the cause of death. The stomach was quite empty, and its lining very inflamed. There had been much vomiting and purging before death, but no cramp. Mr. Larkin was of opinion that death arose from other than natural causes; and as this was the ninth child of the family who had died, the Coroner and the Jury thought that it would be well that there should be an analysis of the stomach....."

AND

Cumberland and Westmorland Advertiser 26/12/1871

"On Tuesday afternoon, the adjourned inquiry into the deaths of three children alleged to have been poisoned by their mother, Eliza Griffiths, the wife of a puddler, was resumed at Bilston in South Staffordshire. The circumstances of the case have been previously fully reported.

The coroner, in reviewing the evidence, said that as to Mary Jane Griffiths, it was first supposed that she had died of cholera, and, as they had heard, a certificate had been given that that was the cause of death. This led to a post mortem examination, and ultimately to an analysis being made, and antimony was found in the stomach. But the physician would not say that antimony caused death. The same symptoms that preceded death in respect of the girl were observed in relation to the boys Thomas and William, and upon an analysis of each of these cases after disinterment, antimony had been found. The whole affair had a most suspicious, and at the same time an extraordinary, appearance. No one of the surgeons was able to say that antimony caused the death of any one of the deceased; still the poison was in the system. It could not have found its way there in any of the medicine that they prescribed, and the mother denied having given any powders in which antimony might be looked for. The symptoms baffled the surgeons in all the cases.

When the jury had deliberated for about half an hour, they returned a verdict of Wilful Murder against the accused in respect of all the three children, and she was committed by the coroner for trial at the next Staffordshire assizes. Subsequently she was taken before the stipendiary magistrate and remanded."

Potteries Examiner 9/3/1872

"Staffordshire Spring Assizes will commence on Monday morning, at the Shire Hall Stafford.....

The cases of wilful murder are as follows.....

Eliza Griffiths stands charged with having caused the deaths of her three children, at Bilston, by poison. The commitment is upon the Coroner's warrant only, the Stipendiary Magistrate, when the case was before him, considering the evidence insufficient to warrant him in sending the case for trial."

Globe 14/3/1872

"At the Staffordshire Assizes yesterday, in the case of Eliza Griffiths, who had been committed by the coroner for poisoning her three children at Bilston, no evidence was offered, and the prisoner was consequently acquitted."

“On Tuesday evening the foremen, clerks, and time-keepers employed by Mr. Joseph Walker on the South Staffordshire Mines Drainage Works, together with a few friends, sat down to an excellent supper at the HAND AND KEYS INN, Wolverhampton Street. Mr. C. Lee, engineer for the Mines Drainage Commissioners, occupied the chair. The evening was spent in a most enjoyable manner.”

“On Monday afternoon the annual inspection of the Bilston Corps of the S. R. V. (Captain W. H. Hatton commanding) took place at the Armoury, Mount Pleasant, before Capt. and Adj. Burke, of the 4th Battalion. The strength of the corps under command was about 50 officers and privates. After the usual inspection of the arms and accoutrements by the Adjutant, Col-sergt. Meanley put the men through the new squad exercise, Sergt. Hughes the manual exercise, Qr. Mr. Harvey company drill, Corp. Lloyd the manual, and Sergts. Meanley and Harvey, and Bugler Hughes the light infantry drill. At the conclusion of the inspection the men were marched to the HAND AND KEYS INN, Wolverhampton Street, where they sat down to a bountiful dinner.”

“This morning while a moulder named Joseph Fletcher was at work at the Spring Vale Foundry, Ettingshall, he suddenly fell down and died in a few minutes. The deceased, who was 45 years of age, resided at 15, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston. Dr. Cameron was called in, but all he could do was to pronounce life extinct.

The body now lies at the HAND AND KEYS INN, Ettingshall. A coroner’s inquest will be held.”

Evening Star 7/7/1882

“This afternoon Mr. W. H. Phillips, coroner, held an inquest at the HAND AND KEYS INN, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, touching the death of Joseph Fletcher (45), of 15, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston. The deceased was a moulder, and engaged at the late Thomas Sheldon’s foundry, Spring Vale, Ettingshall.

On Thursday morning deceased went to his work apparently in good health, but about 5.30, whilst at work, he fell down suddenly and died. Dr. Cameron, of Bilston, attended as soon as possible, but found life to be extinct.

The jury returned a verdict to the effect that deceased died suddenly from Natural Causes.

The deceased was in no society, and leaves a widow and five children wholly unprovided for. The youngest child is only four months old.”

Darlaston Weekly Times 10/2/1883

“On Saturday afternoon an inquest was held at the HAND AND KEYS INN, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, before E. B. Thorneycroft, Esq, deputy coroner, on the body of Ambrose Bowen (16), a miner, of Wolverhampton Street, who was killed by falling down a pit shaft at Sandy Gay Colliery, on the evening of the 31st ult.

Francis Tart, a fellow workman of deceased, said deceased, who had been working all day as a ‘gin’ minder, left work about 6-20 on the night in question, and then was about to carry some fire to put into the ‘lamps’ in the shaft.

It was witness’s duty to put the fire in, but deceased was helping him. The fire was required in the shaft to keep up the current of air. Witness asked deceased to stand on the iron plate at the top of the shaft, while he and deceased’s brother went and wound up the lamp by the gin. At this time the gate, which was at the top of the shaft, and with the railing round, was four feet high, was closed, and deceased was asked to stand outside the rails and the gate. Witness suddenly heard a noise, and upon turning round, found the gate open, and deceased, fire, and shovel missing.

Witness and deceased’s brother afterwards went down the pit, and discovered the body of the lad, terribly mutilated. Samuel Bowen, deceased’s brother, said the lad knew his work thoroughly, having been engaged at the pit three years. The pit was properly fenced, four feet six inches high, all round. Had the boy remained where he was told to stay, he could not possibly have fallen.

The jury found that the lad had contributed to his own death, and returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

“William Reeves, of the HAND AND KEYS, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, was charged with supplying drink after hours.

PC Wilson stated that he was on duty at 10-45 on Sunday night, when he saw a woman go to the back door of the defendant's house. He waited, and presently saw her come back with a can of beer (produced) under her shawl.

Mr. Bowen defended, and contended that the beer was supplied before the time of closing, and was handed to a servant named Caddick, to take across to the person who had ordered and paid for it. She, however, went ‘courting,’ and left the beer in a gateway, from which she was taking it, when seen by the officer. Several witnesses were called, their evidence bearing out this statement.

The case was dismissed.”

“James Pitchford, landlord of the HAND AND KEYS INN, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, was summoned for assaulting Eliza Jones, who appeared with her lip plastered.

On Thursday night, shortly after eleven o'clock, defendant, together with her son and several others, came out of defendant's house. They commenced to fight. Defendant had her son down, and she went to him to try to induce him to release him, when defendant struck her in the mouth. The effect of the blow was that her lip was split, and it had to have several stitches put into it by a doctor.

In reply to defendant prosecutrix said she did not stick a knitting needle into his back while her son had him down. Defendant said prosecutrix's son was in his (defendant's) house and caused a disturbance and wanted to fight. Defendant ordered him out, and when he got them outside prosecutrix's son struck him and knocked him down. While down he seized defendant by the legs and held on by them. When they were on the ground prosecutrix and her daughter came up and attacked him, and prosecutrix stuck a knitting needle into him. The father of his assailant had to come and release his hold of defendant's legs. The woman pulled the shirt off his back, and he hit the prosecutrix accidentally, but after the disturbance he took her to a doctor and had her lip stitched. He paid the cost of it.

George Ward saw the women round defendant when he was on the ground. They ‘pulled him to pieces.’ They pulled his shirt off his back.

The Stipendiary said there could be no doubt that the woman had received a severe blow, but he believed it had been given accidentally. Defendant had evidently been set upon and had only acted in self-defence. The case would be dismissed.”

“Mr. W. H. Phillips (district coroner) yesterday held an inquest at the HAND AND KEYS INN, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, concerning the death of Israel Brookes (20), who was knocked down by a horse and cart, in Swan Bank, on the evening of the 5th inst, and died on the following morning.

Evidence was now given that the driver of the cart in question was Edward Grosvenor, of Graiseley Passage, Wolverhampton, a carrier between that town and Birmingham. Grosvenor stated that he did pass through the thoroughfare mentioned on the date and at the time named, but he did not know that he had run over anyone.

A verdict of Accidental Death was returned, the jury expressing themselves as not satisfied that Grosvenor's was the cart which caused the accident.”

Staffordshire Advertiser 18/4/1896

“John Thomas Chew, baker and licensed victualler, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, attended for his public examination. The liabilities were estimated at £307 10s 10d and the assets at £6 5s 6d. The debtor was formerly a baker. In 1892 he commenced business as a licensed victualler at the HAND AND KEYS INN, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston. He borrowed £80 to pay for the in-going, and in 1894 he took to a bakery business. In December of the same year he borrowed £100 in connection with his public house, and gave a bill of sale, and on being pressed by his creditors he was sold up by the bill of sale holder. The debtor attributed his failure to want of capital, heavy expenses, and bad trade. He was allowed to pass.”

South Staffordshire Times 10/6/1922

“Application was made by Thomas Samuel Bate to have the license of the HAND AND KEYS INN, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, transferred to himself.

Superintendent Higgs made an objection, saying he did not think applicant was a proper person to hold a license as manager of a public house. He formerly held the license of the WHITE HORSE INN, Ettingshall, and while there he was convicted for selling beer during prohibited hours.

A representative of the brewery company pointed out that conviction took place in 1917, when Bate was only fined 15s, which indicated that the offence could not have been regarded as a serious one. For five years afterwards Bate held the license, without the slightest complaint being made against him. The house had been closed with compensation. The company had every confidence in Bate.

PC Wright, called by Superintendent Higgs, said that during the last few years in which Bate kept the house in Ettingshall the conduct of the house was generally bad. He did not think Bate was a fit person to hold a license for a public house. Replying to the company’s representative, witness said no proceeding were taken against Bate after the one referred to, but the house so situated that it was difficult to keep proper observation.

After deliberation, the Chairman said they had decided to grant a temporary license, but Bate must be careful in the conduct of his house.”

Thomas Samuel Bate died in the 2nd quarter of 1934.

“There was a beer bonanza at the HAND AND KEYS public house, Bilston, the night the publican, Mr. John Halford, left. Before he left, Mr. Halford, whose whereabouts are unknown, left instructions with his staff to give all the beer and cigarettes to the customers. And while the customers had their free beer, Mr. Halford went out and did not return. One of the regulars at the public house, in Wolverhampton Street, said, ‘When we came into the pub we were told we did not have to pay for the ale.’

A spokesman for Banks Brewery at Wolverhampton confirmed yesterday that Mr. Halford had left the HAND AND KEYS and they had no idea where he had gone. ‘It has been reported to me that he did leave his stock for his customers,’ he added. But there was no question of the brewery having to foot the bill. The spokesman added, ‘He was the tenant of this public house and the stock was his.’ There is now a relief manager at the public house.”

“Wine and spirit stocks were damaged when fire occurred in a first floor store room at the HAPPY WANDERER public house in Green Lane, Bilston, early last night. Bilston firemen, wearing breathing apparatus, had the outbreak under control before opening time, but part of a floor was damaged and the bar beneath was also affected.”

“A judge has praised the bravery of an off-duty policeman who went to break up a fight in a Bilston pub car park on Christmas Day. Judge John Evans QC commended PC Michael Allsopp who was attacked as he tried to stop a nasty disturbance outside the HAPPY WANDERER pub in Green Lane.

PC Allsopp was kicked and punched by brothers John Hall (26) of Winston Churchill Court, Bilston, and Peter Hall (22) of Ward Street, Wolverhampton, Dudley Crown Court heard. John Hall was sentenced to a total of 27 months prison and his brother, Peter, to nine months. The brothers denied to assaulting PC Allsopp but a jury found them guilty. John Hall admitted two offences of unlawful wounding on other occasions.

The court heard how PC Allsopp went to restore order after the fight broke out. He said he was a police officer and asked the two brothers to go home, but instead they attacked him, said Mr. William Wood, prosecuting. Mr. Wood said, ‘The officer was off-duty and was driving in the area when he saw a nasty fight on the pub car park. Peter Hall was fighting another man and was obviously giving him a beating. The officer went to intervene, but the Hall brothers kicked and punched him, knocking him to the ground,’ he said.

The brothers denied attacking the officer, telling the court that they didn’t know he was a policeman.”

Alterations were approved in 1988.

“A Bilston pub is sending local handicapped people to the Special Olympics in the Isle of Wight following a charity battle of the sexes. Male and female regulars of the HAPPY WANDERER in Stow Lane, Bilston, lined up on opposite sides to take part in darts and football matches. The sporting event was organised to raise the £125 needed to send Down’s Syndrome sufferer Malcom Walker, a regular visitor to the pub, to the Special Olympics in October. However, pub licensee Mrs. June Grashion said, ‘We have done so well that we are now hoping to collect £500 to send four competitors from the Wolverhampton area to the Isle of Wight. We decided to hold the matches to get Malcom to the Isle of Wight after he qualified at the regional heats in Birmingham on July 7. He won a silver medal for running, but will be competing in three events at the Olympics.’ A charity disco and barbeque were held after the matches.”

“Arsonists are believed to have started a fire at a derelict Wolverhampton pub. Around 40 firefighters battled the blaze at the HAPPY WANDERER, in Bilston, on Thursday night. Greens Lane was closed to traffic while firefighters tackled the flames. They operated hoses from a hydraulic platform, dosing the charred building with water. Parts of the roof were left gutted. A spokesman for West Midlands Fire Service said, ‘We had a call at 7.58pm to the HAPPY WANDERER. The first crew got there in three minutes. We had six crews in attendance, along with the hydraulic platform, which is around 35 to 40 personnel. We do believe it was started deliberately. The building was derelict, which crews said was well alight when they arrived. Crews had to split the firefighting operation into sections. The gas and electricity board was in attendance. Greens Lane was closed to the public. Our firefighters carried out a thorough search of the building using breathing apparatus and thermal imaging cameras. Police were making investigations as to who the owner of the building was.’”

“Work has started to demolish an eyesore former pub and neighbouring derelict garages to transform the site. The arson-hit former HAPPY WANDERER pub, in Green Lanes, in Stowlawn, Wolverhampton, has been subject to arson attacks since the pub closed four years ago due to poor trade. Wolverhampton Council planners have now given the owners of the property, Kam Sanghera and Josheel Sanghera, of Bilston Solutions Ltd permission to flatten it after it was deemed dangerous by building control. The site clearance work will now pave the way for potential new homes to replace it. The council’s city assets and housing boss Councillor Bhupinder Gakhal said, ‘This positive action will make the site safe and remove the risk of further anti-social behaviour, making a big difference to the local community in Bilston. The development of the site, subject to planning approval, will make a huge difference to the street scene in the area. Furthermore, there is the potential to deliver much-needed new homes, boosting the local economy.’”

The disused council-owned garages to the rear of the pub have been subject to anti-social behaviour and will also be demolished. A planning application has been submitted by the owner to build 33 apartments on the site with dedicated parking. If approved the development would see 11 one bedroom and 22 two-bedroom flats built across three buildings. Delighted councillors in the area have welcomed the arrival of the demolition crew. Bilston North ward representative Councillor Linda Leach said, ‘A lot of hard work has gone into getting to this point and I am delighted to see demolition works starting. This is the first step in transforming this troublesome site and creating something that will provide a real uplift for neighbouring residents.’

Nearby residents have campaigned for action after the community faced a series of anti-social behaviour related incidents including blazes and drug taking at the site resulting in numerous calls to the emergency services.

‘The pub has been derelict for many years. It is the cause of a lot of problems for residents especially the homes next to it. It has been set fire to on numerous occasions and the police have also made visits. Incidents like those prevent the fire brigade from attending live saving emergencies,’ she added.

“More than 30 new apartments will be built on the site of a former Bilston pub which has been torn down after being a target for vandals. Bilston Property Solutions will build 11 one-bedroom and 22 two-bedroom flats across three buildings on the vacant land in Greens Lane which used to house the HAPPY WANDERER. The pub was built in the 1950s or 60s but was closed and boarded up back in 2018 after experiencing an increasing level of poor trade. It has now been demolished. Developers said it became no longer financially viable to run a pub at the site due to its poor condition and the lack of business it experienced prior to closure.....”

“A vacant former pub site near Wolverhampton is to have 33 new residential apartments built on the land, council bosses have agreed. The HAPPY WANDERER in Green Lanes, Bilston, closed in 2018 and demolition work began in September last year. The application, made by Mr. Kam Sanghera of Bilston Property Solutions, is for three new buildings housing 11 one-bedroom and 22 two-bedroom apartments. This meant knocking down both the pub and a garage block that was also on the site. A statement from CT Planning, acting on behalf of Mr. Sanghera, said, ‘The pub was typical of suburban pubs built during the 1950s and 60s, being of fairly bland appearance and situated on a large prominent plot. It was closed for several years and was trading poorly prior to that. The premises were in a poor condition and would have required significant investment to enable it to get close to being a viable concern. It is no longer viable for pubs of this size to trade mainly in drink – food sales need to be a significant part of the business. Without this investment the pub was not a viable concern. Unfortunately, there had been no interested parties willing to invest the significant sum required given the high risk and low return. This has only been compounded by the coronavirus pandemic and the various restrictions placed on the hospitality industry. Whilst smaller pubs can remain prosperous by serving mainly drinks, buildings of the HAPPY WANDERER’s size need to attract diners to become a destination,’ added the statement. There are at least three pubs of equivalent size within approximately one kilometre – namely the GRAPES, the CLEVELAND ARMS and the MERRY BOYS. All three premises provide food and drink and thus serve the local community admirably. The site is a previously developed site within a built-up area and close to shops, services, other amenities and public transport connections. The principle of residential apartments on the site is therefore considered to be acceptable subject to justification for the loss of the pub.”

“.....The Licensed Victuallers Tea Association, founded in 1867, and owing its origin to the irregular competition of the Grocers in the sale of Wine, is now supplying through the following appointed Agents in this county its unequalled Teas.....

G. Riley, HEN AND CHICKENS, New Village, Priestfield.”

Birmingham Daily Post 5/8/1869

“An inquest was held at Mr. Riley’s public house, Priestfield, on Monday evening, upon the body of William Cadman (15), of Ettingshall. On Friday, deceased was hanging-on at a stone pit in Messrs. H. and G. Ward’s New Priestfield Colliery. A brick fell off a skip, which was standing by the side of the mouth of the shaft, ready to be lowered, struck the boy on the head, and caused instant death. A verdict of Accidental Death was recorded.”

“At the Wolverhampton Police Court, yesterday, George Riley, a publican and pawnbroker, of Priestfield, was charged by George Jackson, commercial traveller, Tettenhall Road, with having, on the 7th inst, at Priestfield, unlawfully and maliciously published a certain defamatory libel concerning him. Mr. Barrow represented the plaintiff, and Mr. Thurstans the defendant.

It was agreed between the two solicitors that the case should be withdrawn, and Mr. Spooner said he would rather not hear any statement from the legal gentleman representing the complainant under these circumstances.”

Birmingham Weekly Post 7/7/1877

“Attempted Murder by a Lunatic.

On Tuesday, a respectably connected man, named John Griffiths, aged 31, was brought before Mr. Moses Ironmonger, sitting as magistrate at Petty Sessions at Bilston, charged with attempting to murder John Lewis, at Priestfield. The accused was very excited, and had his hands tied together at his back. Evidently Griffiths was not master of his actions.

Chief Superintendent McCrea remarked that he had brought up Griffiths merely to obtain a remand, and proposed to give only enough evidence to permit of compliance with the request. In the interval the prisoner’s mental state could be ascertained.

Policeman Wade, stationed at Ettingshall, deposed: This morning I was called to the prisoner at about a quarter-past two. I found him, with nothing on but his shirt, in the bed room of John Lewis, landlord of the GOLDEN FLEECE beerhouse, Ettingshall. I found John Lewis lying in a helpless state on the room floor, in a pool of blood. I took the prisoner into custody, charged with attempting to murder Lewis.....

[John Griffiths was remanded for a week.]

The prisoner is the son of parents, now dead, who owned the BRITANNIA INN, Temple Street, Bilston, and other house property there. For many years they kept that inn, and likewise a provision shop. As a boy he was subject to fits. Growing into manhood he showed a liking for whisky, and often surreptitiously obtained it. Symptoms of lunacy then developed themselves, and he was placed as a pauper lunatic in Stafford Asylum, the cost being repaid to the Guardians by his sister, Mrs. Riley, wife of Mr. Riley, of the HEN AND CHICKENS, New Village. By-and-by he was removed from Stafford to Burntwood. Possessing, with Mrs. Riley, an interest in the property left by the parents in Temple Street, some gossips had hinted, with disagreeable plainness, that Griffiths was being kept in an asylum for motives originating in his right to share in the property; and Mrs. Riley, who has always been kind to him, sensitive of such allegations, applied to the surgeons at Burntwood that her brother might be released in her care, and he came out on the 16th April last. A few times previously during the three or four years he had been under restraint he had been temporarily released; but he had always got at the whisky, and had had to be sent back. Mr. Jennings, relieving officer for Bilston, therefore declined all responsibility touching his release on this occasion. Mrs. Riley could not have Griffiths at her home, for it was an old-licensed house, and the tempting spirit would be too near to him. Beer has no attractions for him; and as her friend Mrs. Lewis, wife of the landlord of the GOLDEN FLEECE, was ready to take him as a lodger, he was placed in her custody.....”

[Further on the attempted murder under GOLDEN FLEECE.]

“Thomas Parker (28), waggoner, was charged with being drunk and refusing to quit the HEN AND CHICKENS public house, Ettingshall, and also with assaulting Police-constable Golding, on Saturday night. For the first offence he was fined 10s 6d, or 14 days’ hard labour, and for the assault he was committed to hard labour for a month, without any alternative.”

“Reuben Blunt (21), labourer, Heath Street, Heath Town, was brought up in custody charged with unlawfully wounding Jabez Harper, tap and die maker, of John Street, Ettingshall.

The parties were together with other men at the HEN AND CHICKENS public house, at Ettingshall, on Saturday night. Shortly before 11 o’clock a quarrel took place, and prosecutor and prisoner fought, and in the course of the fight it was alleged the prisoner drew a knife, and with it stabbed the prosecutor in the lower part of the jaw. The injured man was taken to the Hospital at Wolverhampton, and there attended to by Mr. Miller, assistant house surgeon, and the prisoner was arrested on a warrant.

The Bench committed the accused for trial, offering to accept his own bail in £50 and two sureties in £25. For being drunk and refusing to quit licensed premises the prisoner and also William Blunt, his brother, were each fined 10s and costs.”

“The body of an infant was found on Friday afternoon by two boys in a swag at Priestfield, near Wolverhampton. A piece of hurden had been tied round the neck and attached to a brick. The matter was reported to Police-constable Head, who communicated with Mr. Stokes, the county coroner, and an inquest was ordered to be held on Saturday, at the HEN AND CHICKENS INN, George Street, Ettingshall. After the coroner had viewed the body, that of a female child, he informed the jury that it was in so frightfully decomposed a condition that he was quite certain the jurymen could not gain any information by looking at it, and unless some information could be obtained from the inspection of a body there was no need for him to hold an inquest. He found that the head was severed from the body, and a great deal of flesh was off the scalp. The jury were then discharged, and Mr. Stokes afterwards informed Police-constable Head and Detective Kent, of Bilston, that in such a case as this, where a body had lain in a place for a long time, and become much decomposed, the matter was one for the magistrates to deal with, and, if necessary, order a post mortem examination to ascertain, if possible, if the child had had a separate existence, The offices stated that they would report the views of the coroner to Superintendent Walters.”

“A special meeting of the Bilston magistrates was held yesterday to consider the discovery of a female child in a swag at Priestfield, under circumstances already reported. On Saturday an inquest should have been held on the body, but the coroner, Mr. Stokes, stated that the remains were in such a decomposed condition that the jury could gain no information from a view of them, and it would not be necessary to hold an inquest unless the magistrates ordered a post mortem examination. Mr. Pratt, magistrates clerk, now stated that since the jury were called together a post mortem examination had been made, and the coroner would now be able to deal with the matter on the medical evidence which had been supplied to him. The Bench expressed the opinion the Mr. Stokes should continue the enquiry, and the case was left for the coroner to deal with. Yesterday afternoon Mr. Stokes held an inquest at the HEN AND CHICKENS INN, George Street, Ettingshall, on the body of the child. Dr. Kendrick gave the result of the post mortem examination, and an open verdict was returned.”

“A Speculator’s Failure. A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Matthew Rhodes, of the HEN AND CHICKENS INN, George Street, Priestfield. His debts are estimated at £9,490, and, after allowing for secured creditors, £1,781 will rank for dividend. It appeared that he had purchased a number of licensed houses at Bilston, Wednesbury, and other places, and borrowed money on mortgage. He had expended large sums on altering several of the houses, and owed over £8,000 on mortgages.”

Staffordshire Advertiser 24/1/1852

“An inquest was held on Wednesday morning, at the HIMLEY ARMS, Dudley Street, Bilston, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, on the body of Elijah Hughes, a miner, aged 28. It appeared that the deceased was ‘doggy’ at a pit at Mobb’s Bank colliery, belonging to P. Williams, Esq, and on the morning of the 19th instant was pushing an empty skip near the pit mouth; the poor fellow not being aware the pit was uncovered, pushed it too near, and it fell down the shaft, dragging the unfortunate man with it. A verdict of Accidental Death was returned.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 8/12/1858

“Ann Burke, described as a prostitute, was charged with uttering base coin, in the month of September last. Evidence was given to show that on a certain evening, in September last, she had passed a bad crown piece at Mr. Bache’s liquor shop, in High Street, Bilston, and another at the HIMLEY ARMS, kept by Mr. Tombs; she also on the same night offered another at Mr. Peck’s liquor shop in Oxford Street. She had absconded immediately afterwards, and was only recently arrested in Wolverhampton, where she was living, somewhere in the neighbourhood of the notorious ‘Cat-yard.’ She was remanded for a week to give time to communicate with the authorities at the Mint.

AND

“Staffordshire Quarter Sessions.....

Ann Burke, alias Durkin, 21, no occupation, was indicted for uttering two counterfeit crown pieces, at Bilston, well knowing the same to be false and counterfeit. On the 22nd of September last the prisoner, late in the evening, went to Tome’s liquor vaults, in High Street, Bilston, and called for a glass of porter, in payment for which she tendered a crown piece. The coin was taken, and was put by the daughter of the landlady into the till. On counting, the same evening, the money in the till, the landlady discovered that this crown piece was counterfeit, and having marked it, she gave it to the police. It was afterwards discovered that the same evening the prisoner went to Peck’s liquor vaults, in Oxford Street, and called for a glass of ale, for which she tendered another counterfeit crown piece. On being told that it was counterfeit she said that it had been given to her by a gentleman, and that she did not know it was counterfeit. She paid for the ale with three half-pence, and then went to Bache’s spirit vaults, and there offered another counterfeit crown piece in payment for some drink, repeating, on being told it was counterfeit, the same story that she had, told at Peck’s. Information was given to the police, but as the prisoner had been allowed to leave, she made her escape, and was not apprehended until the 1st of December.

Mr. S. Hill, who appeared for the prisoner, submitted to the Jury, as the defence, that these counterfeit crown pieces had, as she stated, been really given her by a scoundrel who had been wicked enough to take advantage of the unhappy calling which the unfortunate woman followed, and contended that considering the facilities which unprincipled men had for passing off bad money under such circumstances, nothing could be more likely to be true than the story told by the prisoner.

The Jury found the prisoner guilty. The learned Chairman, in sentencing her to twelve months’ hard labour, reminded that two and a half years previously she had been convicted of stealing money.”

“Yesterday at the HIMLEY ARMS, Bilston, a coroner’s inquiry touching the death of John Richards, aged 43, once a sailor, but at the time of his decease a miner, working at Highfield, was resumed. He cohabited with a woman named Riley, who had absconded, and who is believed to have a husband working in America. They lived at Hallfields, at the house of a widow named Rose, to whom they represented themselves as man and wife; and who described Riley as ‘an awful woman to get drunk.’

On the evening of Sunday the 18th inst, she went out, and after spending some time with a young man, purchased two quarts of ale, and returned home with him. She then commenced kissing him in the presence of the deceased, whom she frequently kicked and then attempted to strangle. On deceased’s brother, who had just called at the house, attempting to take him away, the woman took up a table knife and attempted, though unsuccessfully, to cut the brother’s throat.

On the following Tuesday the deceased and his paramour went out together, and at night they returned home drunk. They then commenced a quarrel, which terminated, according to a statement made by deceased before he died, in the woman dealing him a terrible blow on the head with the edge of a flat-iron. Mrs. Rose was in bed at the time, and could only speak to sounds and oaths. Immediately after the blow was struck, Riley ran up into her bed room and hid herself under the bed. Deceased followed, and not finding her came into Mrs. Rose’s room with the blood streaming from his head. He at first threatened to burn all that belonged to Riley, but, saying it was not right to create a disturbance in other persons’ houses, quietly left the place, and passed the night in the hovel of the pit where he worked. He subsequently went to the house of a married sister, where he was attended by Mr. Gilbert, surgeon, and died of his injuries on Wednesday, the 21st inst.

The evidence of the surgeon was to the effect that he was called in to the deceased on the Monday preceding his death, and found him in a very low and feverish condition. He learned that he had been much addicted to drinking, and was then suffering from its effects, and was unable to retain any food on his stomach. He prescribed for him, and left him, no mention having been made of any injury upon the head. He heard of that on the following evening, and went and examined the man’s head, when he found an ensanguined scab on the top of his head, but there was no inflammation about it, and the injury was of a character which required no special treatment. By direction of the Coroner he made a post mortem examination of the body, which he found much emaciated, the eyes being deeply sunken. On the right side of the head, near the vertex, was a small lacerated wound, which was dry, and nearly healed up. The wound had penetrated the scalp, but had not invaded the brain or pericranium. The brain and its membranes appeared quite healthy. With the exception of some signs of congestion in the lungs, some portions of the stomach, and the cortical substance of the kidneys, the other viscera were free from morbid appearances. Judging from these appearances, and the result of his inquiries into the habits of the deceased, he concluded that he had died from exhaustion consequent upon his excesses. He was certain that the wound on his head had neither caused nor accelerated his death.

In answer to the jury, he would not say how far the loss of blood resulting from the wound might have affected his life, as he did not know how much blood he had lost. It would hardly be a great quantity, there being no large blood vessels in the neighbourhood of the wound, and deceased having walked to several places at various times during the night, after receiving the wound.

Samuel Richards, brother of deceased, was called and questioned as to the habits of his brother, and acknowledged, with evident reluctance, that he was much given to drinking, and that Riley was, if anything, more depraved in that respect. As soon as he got his money on a Saturday night, they would both go drinking, and continue doing so until the money was exhausted.

The woman Riley, who surrendered herself to the police on Saturday morning, was then called in, and the evidence having been read over to her, she made a very lengthy statement, wherein she sought to exculpate herself from all blame, and representing the deceased as a most determined and reckless drunkard. Stating that he had not been sober since the Saturday night preceding their last quarrel, she commenced her history by telling how on the Monday morning she pawned his jacket at Bilston, the events being a detail of visits paid from public house to public house until their return home on Tuesday night. There they quarrelled. He called her vile names, seized her by the hair of the head, which he twisted under his arm, and swore he would cut her heart out. She put her hand behind her, and took from the table a ‘pop’ bottle, and struck him on the head with it. He then loosed his hold, and she ran away, fearing he would take her life.

The jury returned a verdict in accordance with the medical testimony.”

“John Adamson, jun., summoned Edward Allen, landlord of the HIMLEY ARMS, Dudley Street, Bilston, for assaulting him, and Allen summoned Adamson and his brother Charles, who were charged with being disorderly in Allen’s house. On the 7th inst, the Adamsons went to the HIMLEY ARMS, and, after some words had passed, Allen struck John in the face. The young men remained on the premises for some time afterwards, and behaved in a disorderly manner, refusing to leave when requested. Allen was fined 10s and costs, and the other two were fined 5s and costs each.

The father of the youths, an eccentric individual, known as ‘Jack the Barber,’ who had been very noisily during the hearing, afterwards wished to address the Bench, and on being told he could not do so as the case had been decided, he excited some merriment by declaring that he should ‘make an appeal.’ He continued to be very violent, and eventually had to be forcibly ejected from the court by Police-constable Wiley.”

“Abraham Baker, Bridge Street, was charged with creating a disturbance in Dudley Street, on Saturday night. Police-constable Brindley stated that he was sent for by the landlord of the HIMLEY ARMS, Dudley Street, and upon requesting him to leave, defendant declined to go, created a disturbance, and had to be locked up. Fined 2s 6d and costs, or seven days.

William Bryan, of Bridge Street, was charged with a similar offence to the foregoing. He was the companion of the last defendant, and created a disturbance when asked to leave the house. Defendant stated that he was excited because the landlord accused him of stealing a bagatelle ball, which had been put into another man’s pocket. Police-constable Myatt corroborated. Fined 5s and costs.”

“Noah Davies, miner, of The Lunt, was charged with using threats and obscene language to Mr. Isaac Harris, landlord of the HOPE AND ANCHOR INN, Bradley, on the 4th instant.

Mr. Fellows prosecuted, and stated that on the night in question, complainant was standing near his door, when the defendant came and challenged him to a pigeon flying match. Complainant said he had given up that pursuit, and defendant then commenced to swear, and threatened the complainant, who, on declining to have anything to do with him, was followed to Bankfields, where defendant threatened to jump on him and knock his head off, concluding by telling him that when he came to Bilston, he would not get off so lightly. Several witnesses bore out this statement; but for the defence, a man named Clews asserted that Harris was the aggressor.

The Bench bound the defendant over, but on his character being shown up, including 20 offences, ordered him to pay 37s and also to be bound over in £5 to keep the peace for six months.

Davies confidentially informed the Bench, as he left the Court, that it was all a ‘big pack of lies.’”

Birmingham Mail 5/3/1909

“Mr. Stokes (County Coroner) held an enquiry at the HOPE AND ANCHOR INN, Bradley, yesterday, into the circumstances attending the death of Samuel Bettelley (29), a furnaceman, of Slater Street, Bradley. Bettelley was employed at the Britain Ironworks, Bradley, belonging to Messrs. Greenaway Brothers.

Sarah Ann Bettelley, the mother of the deceased, said her son returned home from the works on February 23, and complained that he had received a blow in the chest from a spanner. On Wednesday morning he went to Dr. Maitland. Her son died at four o'clock last Monday afternoon, and Dr. Maitland gave her a certificate of death.

Sarah Ann Smith, sister of deceased, said her brother called at her house last Friday. He showed her a bruise on the right side of his chest. Subsequently he became delirious.

The Coroner: Dr. Maitland gave a certificate of death which you took to Mr. Colley, the registrar? – Yes.

Did the certificate say that the cause of death was alcoholic poisoning, delirium tremens, and the secondary cause, cardiac failure? – Yes.

Was your brother given to drink? – I never saw him drunk in my life.

The next witness, William Rowley, a roller, employed at the Britain Ironworks, spoke to hearing Bettelley say, ‘I feel a bit low. I think I have twisted myself with that spanner.’ In answer to questions the witness said Bettelley was a strong man, and never ailed. He liked a pint of beer.

Dr. Maitland, who was called, stated that Bettelley first came to see him on the Wednesday, and complained of his stomach, and that he was out of sorts. Witness felt his pulse, took his temperature, looked at his tongue, and gave him a bottle of medicine. Early last Saturday morning Bettelley’s brother called, and said his brother was ‘struggling and saying things.’ Later in the day he went to Bettelley’s house. Bettelley had all the symptoms of delirium tremens but he did not complain of pain, there was no cough, and he had a normal temperature. The pulse was feeble, and the heart was becoming weak. On the Monday morning the end seemed near. In answer to the coroner, the doctor said no mention was made to him of a blow until the Monday night. He gave the certificate as stated.

Dr. David Christie, practicing at Bradley, stated that he, in company with Dr. Clendinnen, made a post mortem examination of the body of the deceased, which was that of a well-nourished man. There was a bruise on the right side of the chest the size of a four shilling piece. The heart, brain, and liver were normal.

The Coroner: I take it that all these organs might have been diseased. – Slightly, but nothing to cause death.

Did you see traces of alcoholism? – No.

Did you see any indications that the man had suffered from delirium tremens? – No.

What do you say was the cause of death? – Pneumonia of the left lung. The blow set up pneumonia.

The witness, in answer to Mr. Duffell, said he had known cases, by experience, where the temperature of the patient suffering from pneumonia had not only been normal but sub-normal.

You do not agree with Dr. Maitland’s diagnosis of the case? – No.

The Coroner said the jury had to decide which of the medical gentlemen they preferred to accept as the proper authority on the cause of death. It was clear that the doctors were in conflict.

After a short consideration the jury returned a verdict in accordance with Dr. Christie’s evidence, that death was due to pneumonia, set up by a blow.”

“The annual Licensing Sessions for Bilston district was held yesterday, at the Police Court.....

Mr. Best applied for a license for Mr. W. Rogers, to the SHAKESPEARE INN, Bilston. The house had formerly been a licensed one, but in consequence of the misconduct of the then occupant it was withdrawn, on the intimation, however, that if a suitable tenant could be obtained the license would be renewed; hence the present application. Mr. Thurstans opposed on behalf of Mr. Evans, of the HOP POLE, a licensed house on the opposite side of the street..... Birmingham Daily Gazette 31/8/1871

“At the Police Court, yesterday, before Mr. I. Spooner (stipendiary), William Goodwright and Isaac Goodwright, puddlers, of Bilston, were summoned for violently assaulting Daniel Evans, landlord of the HOP POLE, Market Street, Bilston. Mr. H. Best appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. Barrow for the defence.

On the 15th inst complainant, who was returning home from the Wolverhampton Races, stopped to speak to a friend in Lichfield Street. Whilst he was standing with one foot on the step of his trap and the other on the ground, the defendants came up from behind in a cart at a smart trot, and the shaft of the vehicle caught complainant and nearly knocked him down. He recovered himself as soon as he could, and he then ran and seized defendants horse by the bridle, and at the same time shouting out to defendants, ‘Lads; I want your names.’ He felt very weak from the effects of the blow from the shaft; in fact, he was nearly unconscious, but he clung to the horse’s head, as defendants refused to give him their names. Defendants jumped out of the cart, and commence beating him in a most unmerciful manner. They struck him in the face, cutting his cheeks inside, and blacking his eyes, and one of the brave fellows dealt him a violent blow with some kind of instrument, presumed to be a ‘life preserver,’ which rendered him unconscious. He remained unconscious upwards of a hour.

The defendants were then charged, together with William Goodwright, furnaceman, of Bilston, with having violently assaulted John Higgins, son-in-law to the complainant in the previous case. Higgins was in the company of his father-in-law, and he naturally enough did his best to protect him from the violence of his assailants. The defendants beat complainant in a most brutal manner. They knocked him down, and kicked him as he lay on the ground. One of his teeth was knocked out by the defendants.

For the defence, Mr. Barrow said the defendants were much provoked by the complainant refusing to let go the horse’s head. Defendants told him who they were, and complainant was well acquainted with them. Through his seizing the horse’s bridle a female in the cart was much terrified, and in endeavouring to get out of the vehicle she fell and was hurt considerably.

Mr. Best said complainant did not wish to press the case harshly against the defendants, as their friends had entreated him to forgive them, and offered to give him any reasonable sum by way of compensation.

Mr. Spooner said this was not a case for compensation. He considered that it was an outrage on the public. Here was a respectable tradesman stopping for a few minutes to speak to a friend in the street run upon by defendants, and whilst exercising the simplest legal right which belonged to everybody under such circumstances (demanding the names of the offenders), he was set upon by them, and beaten in a most brutal manner.

For the assault on Mr. Evans, William and Isaac Goodwright were fined £3 and costs, or in default six weeks’ imprisonment each; and for assaulting John Higgins, they were also fined £3 and costs, or six weeks; William Goodwright, the furnaceman, for assaulting John Higgins, was fined £5, or in default two months’ imprisonment.”

“Yesterday the annual licensing meeting for Bilston and the neighbourhood was held in the Petty Sessions Court..... The Rev. A. Collingwood (Wesleyan), accompanied by the principal temperance advocates of Bilston, attended, and presented a memorial signed by 1,300 persons. It prayed that, considering the increasing decorum prevailing throughout Bilston and the neighbourhood during the past year, especially on Saturday and Monday nights, owing to the earlier closing of public houses, that the committee would not allow, during the next twelve months, public houses to be opened before half-past six in the morning, and after half-past ten in the evening, and as, in the opinion of the memorialists, many individuals were deterred from attending a place of worship by public houses being opened at six o’clock in the evening, it prayed that public houses would be compelled to close until seven o’clock. Mr. Hall (Magistrates’ Clerk) said that the committee possessed no judicial power to alter the hours of opening licensed premises on Sunday evenings.

Mr. Daniel Evans, of the HOP POLE, Bilston, in the absence of the chairman of the Licensed Victuallers’ Association, questioned the presenters of the memorial as to whether they had given the requisite twenty-one days’ notice.

Mr. Hall explained that, however favourably the magistrates might feel inclined towards the memorial, they could not, until the adjourned licensing sessions in September, make any order. If they then determined to do so, it would be necessary that twenty-one days’ notice of their intention should be given to all holders of licenses.

Mr. Evans remarked that licensed victuallers never meddled with the affairs of ministers, and considering that a minister’s stipend exceeded the profits of a publican, he thought that they had no justifiable cause to interfere with their business.

The Committee now retired, and, after an absence of about fifteen minutes, Mr. Rogers stated.....

With regard to the testimonial, they were resolved not to act on any of the suggestions it embodied.”

“Bilston. Application for Extension of Hours at Christmas.

Mr. Daniel Evans, of the HOPPOLE, and Mr. Rogers, of the SHAKESPEARE, applied for an extension of hours; an extra hour of Christmas Eve, an hour on Monday the 27th, and an hour and a half on New Year’s Eve. The matter was adjourned until Tuesday.”

Midland Examiner 1/1/1876

“George Prince and William Clamp were charged by Mr. Daniel Evans, HOP POLE INN, Bilston, with being disorderly in his house. The Magistrates ordered Prince to pay costs, and Clamp 10s and costs.”

Daniel Evans died in the 1st quarter of 1877.

Birmingham Daily Post 21/3/1877

“Yesterday, at Bilston, by the Stipendiary, Richard Porter, miner, Bristol Street, was mulcted in two fines, each of £1 10s, for assaulting, on Saturday, in the HOP POLE, Market Street, George Roberts, the brewer, and John Higgins, who is related to the landlady, Mrs. Sarah Evans; and George Porter, miner, Quarry Lane, was fined £2 for being disorderly in, and refusing to quit, the same house. The two defendants are brothers, and the offences were committed while they were being ejected. The prosecution, conducted by Mr. Charles Barrow, Wolverhampton, was instituted by the Wolverhampton Licensed Victuallers Association.”

“The Strike of Ironworkers.....

The result of the interview between the masters and men at Birmingham was discussed last night by the men in the Wolverhampton and Bilston districts. It had been rumoured that a delegate would communicate the decision at the HOP POLE INN, Bilston, at eight o’clock, and numbers of men were in the vicinity of that inn at the hour appointed, but no meeting was held. Both in Wolverhampton and in Bilston disappointment was expressed that the masters would not consent to a resumption of work except at the reduction; but the determination to play on was less firm than had been anticipated. The police authorities are maintaining their precautions; but there seems no probability of disturbance. About a dozen men resumed work during the morning at one of the special bar mills of Messrs. Isaac Jenks and Son's Minerva Works, Horseley Fields, at the reduction. With this exception, there is no alteration in the position of the various works as last recorded."

"On Saturday night a meeting of millmen, adjourned from the 3rd inst, was held at the HOP POLE INN, Bilston. Mr. J. S. Whatton, of the Britannia Works, Bradley, presided, and about fifteen mills were represented from Wolverhampton, Willenhall, Wednesbury, Darlaston, and Tipton.

The objects of the meeting were stated by the chairman to be (1) the question of extras on long lengths and 28 w.g.; (2) the restriction of the output; (3) the employment of boys before the rolls; (4) the question of supporting the Wages Board; (5) the question of forming an association for protecting the card list of prices as it now exists. The chairman, in the course of his remarks, said he understood there were works playing in that district now because the masters were getting their sheets rolled at other mills more cheaply than they could at their own. This was the case, for instance, at Gospel Oak.

Several suggestions were made upon the subjects on the programme, and it was moved that these should be sent to Mr. Capper with a request that he would wait upon the masters of the various works. The Chairman, however, pointed out that Mr. Capper could only represent men who contributed to the Board, and went on to strongly urge those in the meeting who were not contributing to do so. Ultimately, however, a resolution was carried to the effect that an organisation for millmen was needed separate from the Wages Board, and a committee of one delegate each from about twenty works was nominated and elected to consider how such an organisation could be established so as to move in all matters mentioned in the programme."

"On Tuesday evening, the 30th ult, a concert was given at the HOP POLE (Mrs. Sarah Evans, proprietress) to assist the miners on strike. After a most successful musical entertainment, and paying the necessary expenses, £3 17s 3d was kindly handed over by Mrs. Evans to the treasurer, Mr. John Williams, of the SAMPSON AND LION INN, to be divided amongst the men on strike. Mr. Curley, secretary, of Bilston, desires us to thank Mrs. Evans, on behalf of the committee, for her kindness, and also to thank all who attended the concert."

"Yesterday a mass meeting of the ironworkers in the Bilston district was held at the HOP POLE INN, Bilston. Mr. J. York presided over a large attendance.

Mr. J. Capper, the operative secretary to the Wages Board, reiterated his statement that the two large and important districts of Staffordshire and the North of England would always bear some relation to each other. That there had not been an improvement in trade or an alteration in the wages of the two districts justifying the ironworkers of Staffordshire to at present put in a claim for an advance in wages was a cause for regret, and he himself regretted it. The English iron trade had been between 1864 and 1874 undergone very rapid development, but since then steel had largely superseded iron. If, however, the great railway companies had continued to use iron, their mills and forges and blast furnaces and collieries would have been kept more regularly employed. This was especially seen in rails, locomotive engines, and tenders. Formerly these, and many other things which went to make the railway system, had been manufactured of iron; but now not a few were made of steel. This proceeding had been of great advantage to the user, since steel rails, for instance, had five lives as compared with iron rails. Mr. Capper then dealt with the necessity for the men becoming reorganised; for unless they were properly organised they could not of necessity protect their own interests. The best way to carry this out was to join the Conciliation Board.

Ultimately a resolution was to come to giving the men's representatives upon the board full power to deal with the wages question."

“The HOP POLE INN, next to Bilston’s market, will be demolished under a proposal by Wolverhampton council. Marston’s has agreed to surrender its lease of the pub, which is owned by the council.

Cabinet member for city economy, Councillor John Reynolds, said, ‘We are delighted to have reached this agreement with Marston’s over the HOP POLE INN. It will enable the land to be better utilised for the benefit of the town and, in particular, the outdoor market. It is part of the wider regeneration of the area to deliver new homes, new jobs and more investment. It demonstrates our commitment to Bilston and ensures it will continue to be a thriving area.’

The pub in Market Street was built in the early 1970s.

The council said it has ‘limited use’ but will continue to trade until it is taken down. A planning application is due to be submitted for knocking it down in May. The work will provide the opportunity to improve links with the bus station and the Midland Metro once completed, the council said. The outdoor market will continue to operate during the demolition works. The proposal forms part of the wider regeneration of Bilston.

Marston’s recently opened the WHITE RABBIT pub in Bilston Urban Village.

A pub spokesman said, ‘We are currently in consultation with the local council in regards to a planned demolition date. Until that stage, the pub is open and will trade business as usual’.”

Express & Star 7/1/2019

“The demolition of a former Bilston pub will begin next week. Marston’s HOP POLE pub is set to be torn down under council plans to improve the town’s outdoor market. The site on Market Street is leased by Marston’s from the council, and the brewery has agreed to surrender its long-term lease. The local authority plans to enhance links with the bus station and metro and potentially create development land by knocking the building down. Bulldozers will move in on the site on January 14 and the process is expected to take up to six weeks. The council has confirmed the market will stay open throughout this time.....”

It was demolished in 2019.

"The Journeymen Filesmiths of the Wolverhampton District will hold a General Meeting, at the HORSE AND JOCKEY, Church Street, Bilston, at Ten am, on Monday, the 1st April, 1872."

Birmingham Daily Post 3/9/1873

"A meeting was held on Monday, at the HORSE AND JOCKEY, Bilston, of the filesmiths representing the whole of South Staffordshire, to consider what steps should be taken with the view of obtaining a further advance of wages. Mr. Josiah Simcox presided, and there was a good attendance.

The Chairman remarked that for some time a little ill-feeling had appeared to exist between the district and the Birmingham branches, but he was pleased to see that this ill-feeling did not at present prevail, as was evinced by the attendance of two delegates from that town. The Birmingham men had determined to obtain an augmentation in their wages; and the question that naturally arose was whether the district was to be surpassed by Birmingham men? Were they to remain passive, whilst their neighbouring compeers were working for higher remuneration? He considered that they ought to all stand on an equal footing. (Hear, hear.) They must demonstrate strength and will to obtain what they required, and they would succeed. (Hear, hear.) There was no substantial reason, of which he had acquaintance, why, if their attempts were prosecuted with zeal, they should fail.

Mr. Silas Round then read a circular from the Birmingham Executive Committee of Operative Filesmiths, setting forth that the members were petitioning their employers for the adoption of the Sheffield revised list of 1872. The speaker explained that the Birmingham men were placed upon a different principle to themselves, inasmuch as Birmingham workmen provided their own tools. If they adopted such a system it would make a material difference to both the masters and men. (A Voice: It would be on the men's side though.)

Several speakers addressed the meeting, urging upon the members the absolute necessity of taking decisive steps, and concertedly acting together.

The Secretary said that if they succeeded in gaining the desired list, it would mean not only 10 per cent on the ruling rates, as it would with the Birmingham men, but 15 per cent increase, because their basis was a decrease of 5 per cent on the Birmingham basis.

A person present advocated delay, but others counselled immediate action, firmness, but no measures that would culminate in a strike. It was pointed out that the Birmingham men did not even as much as hint at a strike. Eventually it was resolved that the men of the surrounding districts should join the Birmingham men in the application for the revised Sheffield list of 1872.

Another resolution was adopted to the effect that the date of their application should be coincident with that of the Birmingham men – namely, the first Monday in October."

Wolverhampton Express and Star 16/3/1876 - Advert

"To the Filesmiths of South Staffordshire.

A General Meeting of all the Men will be held on Monday, March 20th, at the HORSE AND JOCKEY INN, Church Street, Bilston. Chair to be taken at 7 o'clock. As there is important business to be done all are invited to attend."

Birmingham Daily Post 22/3/1876

"On Monday, at the JOCKEY INN, Church Street, Bilston, there was a general meeting of all the filesmiths of South Staffordshire, to transact important business. Mr. Wm. Blakeney was the chairman, and there were about thirty people present.

The Chairman explained that at present the South Staffordshire Union of Filesmiths paid 3d per week to a common trade fund. Such contributions, however, would not aggregate enough to give efficient help in the event of a strike; and it was desirable that the South Staffordshire filesmiths should amalgamate their union with the stronger union which existed in Birmingham. Before, however, such an amalgamation would be accepted in Birmingham, the weekly contributions in Staffordshire must be doubled and certain entrance fees would have to be paid....

The meeting approved the project, and passed a resolution to amalgamate upon the Birmingham conditions.

During the speaking it transpired that the wages of filesmiths in Staffordshire are 10 per cent under those of the Birmingham operatives."

Birmingham Daily Post 15/12/1876

“A meeting of the filesmiths was held at the HORSE AND JOCKEY, Church Street, Bilston, on Tuesday night, and was addressed by delegates from Birmingham. The following resolution was passed.

That this meeting pledges itself to assist the union of South Staffordshire, and to use every legitimate means to induce non-unionists to join, that they may gain the desired end – namely, the Birmingham list of prices, and, if possible, amalgamation.”

Evening Express 4/5/1877

“Peter Nixon, landlord of the HORSE AND JOCKEY INN, Bilston, was charged with being drunk on the licensed premises of John Fowler, landlord of the LEOPARD public house, Church Street, and the latter was charged with permitting the drunkenness.

At five minutes past 12 on Tuesday night, Police-constables McGuire and Downey were passing down Church Street, when they observed a man coming out of the LEOPARD. They immediately knocked on the door, and enquired of the servant who opened it if anyone was in the house, and she replied no. They, however, went inside and found the defendant Nixon in the bar drunk.

The defendant Fowler was found in the back yard. After informing Mr. Fowler of Nixon’s presence in the house, the officers went to the station and reported the case, and about ten minutes later they saw Fowler leading Nixon home. Mr. Barrow, who defended, urged that Nixon had only drunk one glass of brandy whilst in the house, and that he had not left at closing time owing to a sudden attack of diarrhoea.

The Magistrates was of opinion that the case was perfectly clear, and fined Nixon 10s and costs, and Fowler £1 and costs.”

Peter Nixon died on 2nd February 1880.

“Last (Thursday) evening the committee who so successfully carried out the recent Foresters fete at Bilston, dined together at the HORSE AND JOCKEY HOTEL, Church Street, to celebrate the completion of their labours. About 20 partook of an excellent repast provided by host Bowater, and which was served up in a style that reflected great credit upon his establishment.....

“At the Bilston Police Court today (Friday), before Messrs. Twentyman and Loveridge, Thomas Price (35), now of Coseley, but formerly landlord in charge of the HORSE AND JOCKEY, Church Street, Bilston, was charged on a warrant with embezzlement on the 21st February, 1887, £3 10s, the money of his employer, Mr. William Henry Simpkins, brewer, Brierley Hill. Mr. Holberton, Brierley Hill, prosecuted, and Mr. Dallow, Wolverhampton, defended.

Mr. Holberton, in opening the case, stated that the prisoner was placed in charge of the HORSE AND JOCKEY public house as manager, for which he received £1 a week. He also travelled for the prosecutor and was allowed 10 per cent commission on cash and also 5 per cent on the orders for the first three months. It appeared that on the 21st of February he received £3 10s from a man named James Wedge, landlord of the NELSON INN, Bridge Street, Bilston, for beer supplied to Wedge. Prisoner gave Wedge a receipt for the money, but failed to account for it to his employer, and had not entered it in the counterfoil.

William Henry Simpkins, prisoner’s employer, was then called, and stated that he took over the good will and business of the HORSE AND JOCKEY, Bilston, and placed defendant as manager and traveller, on terms which had already been mentioned. Prisoner had not paid to him the £3 10s received from Mr. Wedge. It was prisoner’s duty to pay any monies to him the week after they had been received.

James Wedge, the next witness called, stated that he paid the £3 10s to the prisoner, and the receipt produced and shown to him was the one signed by the prisoner for the money.

The prisoner pleaded guilty, and elected to have the case summarily dealt with.

Mr. Dallow, speaking on behalf of the prisoner, said it was the first time the prisoner had been in trouble on any such charge. He had hitherto borne an unimpeachable character, and hoped the Bench would deal with him in a merciful way. The prisoner was in very low circumstances at the time he was engaged by the prosecutor. He was also a widower with four children, was in very ill health, and had been locked up some days, during which time he had been attended by a doctor. He hoped they would make the sentence as light as was consistent with their duty.

The magistrates said the prosecutor wished the prisoner to be mercifully dealt with, but they could not pass over an offence of that description. Prisoner would have to go to prison for one month with hard labour."

"It will be seen from our advertising columns that the members of the local Foresters courts have made arrangements for holding a demonstration and fete on a grand scale, in Hall Park recreation grounds, Prouds Lane, Bilston, on Monday next. We may say that brother Joseph Holiberry, of the HORSE AND JOCKEY INN, Church Street, has charge of the stage amusements; and that brother S. Hughes, of the RED COW INN, has been appointed referee for the foot races. There will be a grand procession headed by the Bilston Brass and Reed Band. The committee and members have done all in their power to make the fete a success, and it is earnestly hoped that the public will show their appreciation of their praiseworthy efforts by extending to them a liberal patronage. Should the weather be fine the fete cannot fail to prove a great attraction."

"Alfred Whitehouse, Frieze Land, Priestfield, was sentenced, at Bilston Police Court, yesterday, to six weeks hard labour, for an assault upon Ann Oldbury [sic], wife of the landlord of the HORSE AND JOCKEY INN, Church Street, on August 9, 1887."

Birmingham Weekly Mercury 21/9/1889

"On Saturday a special meeting of the members and friends of the local branch of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers was held at the HORSE AND JOCKEY INN, Church Street, Bilston, when Benjamin Dudley, of Gozzard Street, Bilston, who has become incapacitated from work through the loss of his eyesight, was presented out of the accident fund of the society with a sum of £100. Dr. Smith presided, and amongst those present were deputations from Wolverhampton, Wednesbury, Smethwick, and other places in the locality.

Mr. Parish gave an interesting account of the rise and progress of the society, which now numbers 470 branches in various parts of the world. The total number of members was 58,184, and the balance of funds amounted to £180,000.

Messrs. Daft dwelt upon the advantages of belonging to such a society, and stated that last year £3,000 was paid out of the accident fund to men entitled to £100 each, £52,000 was paid to men out of employment, £30,962 in sick benefit, and £2,000 in benevolent grants.

Other speakers addressed the meeting, and the presentation was made by Mr. Banks, who referred in feeling terms to the great affliction which had befallen Mr. Dudley, and trusted that in time such sufferers would be paid a weekly sum out of the funds (hear, hear). Mr. Dudley, in returning thanks, said that although the £100 was due to him, he was very pleased to find himself with so many friends around him in his hour of need."

“A one-armed man named Thomas Higginson, of Salop Street, Bradley, was charged with begging in a public house; with refusing to quit when requested to do so; and assaulting a man named Isaac Campbell, Greencroft, Bilston, on the previous evening.

George Jones, licensee of the HORSE AND JOCKEY, Church Street, Bilston, said that on the previous evening defendant went into the house and asked him if he could go round and beg money from customers. Witness told him that he could not allow it, as there had been several others in doing the same the same thing, and the customers did not like it. Defendant, however, insisted on going round, and witness ordered him out, but he said he would not go. At last he said he would go outside, but when he got there he smashed the windows. On going out defendant struck a man named Isaac Campbell, who had in no way interfered with him. Witness then sent for the police.

Isaac Campbell said he was sitting quietly in the house when defendant came in, and he saw all that took place, but did not in any way interfere with defendant. As defendant was leaving the house he struck witness on the jaw, and knocked him down.

PC Davy said that he was called to the HORSE AND JOCKEY on the previous night, and there found defendant being detained by the licensee, who made complaint against defendant. Witness took defendant to the Police Station. Defendant was under the influence of drink.

Defendant said he was unable to follow his occupation, and was trying to get an 'honest copper or two' towards his lodgings. He was 'born and bred' in the town, and thought he had as much right to go into a public house and ask for coppers as people from outside had, but they were not prevented from doing it. He was sorry he struck Campbell, but that was because Campbell interfered.

Defendant was sentenced to 14 days' imprisonment for assault, but the other two charges were dismissed."

NOTES

It opened on 4th January 1972.

A team from here played in the Sandwell Sunday (football) League. [1978-79], [1979-80], [1980-81], [1981-82]

“Sandwell Sunday League.....

The District One Cup final between IRONMASTER and Sival was a dour affair. Sival looked the better side in the first half, but IRONMASTER got on top after the interval and finally made a breakthrough in the last minute when Gary Moore netted the only goal.”

Sandwell Evening Mail 26/6/1979

“The Sandwell Sunday League will have a new trophy next season, but it is unlikely to mean extra football.

The trophy will be in memory of Steve Faulkner, who was killed in the recent explosion at the KVE pork scratching factory at Tipton. League secretary Geoff Spicer said, ‘Steve was a stalwart with IRONMASTER, and the idea of a new trophy came from other teams in the First Division. Arrangements are being made for clubs to make donations towards the new award, but I think we will replace an existing trophy rather than create a new competition. We already have a very busy programme, and any more football could really create fixture congestion.”

IRONMASTER won the Premier Three division of the Sandwell Sunday League in the 1979-80 season.

They lost in the Premier Two cup final to Coneygrye in the 1980-81 season.

They played in the Premier One division in the 1981-82 season under their new name of Western Athletic.

Sandwell Evening Mail 13/10/1980

“Darts.....

Tipton’s Matt Kelly and West Bromwich’s Steve Parkes have fought their way through to the Staffordshire finals of the famous News of the World competition. They battled their way through an area final at Princes End Ex-Servicemens Club, and now compete at the Littleton and Mid-Cannock Sports Club on February 10. Kelly, representing the IRON MASTER, Bradley, eliminated Len Price and Bill Evans before coming up against Gary Coxsell of Willenhall in his final.....”

“Darts.....

Wolverhampton’s Peter Webb has reached the Midland final of the News of the World championship. The Heath Town WMC player battled his way through from the Staffordshire round at the Littleton and Mid-Cannock Sports Club. But it was the end of the line for Sandwell stars Matt Kelly and Steve Parkes, who were both outsmarted by the super-sharp Webb.

Kelly was first to fall. Representing the IRONMASTER, Bilston, he beat Stoke’s Rod Cotterill in the opening round, but then went down 2-1 to Webb who produced some stunning form in the deciding leg.....”

Express & Star 2/2/2010

“A man was recovering in hospital today following a suspected stabbing in Bilston. Police say the 28-year-old had injuries to his hand, face and chest but it is not clear how he came about them. The IRONMASTER pub in Wesley Street, Bradley, was cordoned off yesterday while investigations took place into the attack, which was reported at 8am. West Midlands Police spokesman Brigg Ford said today that house to house inquiries were on-going.”

It closed in 2010.

Sold as a development opportunity for £125,000.

Demolished [2013]

Housing was built on the site.

“Richard Finch, landlord of the JAPANNERS ARMS, Greencroft, Bilston, was summoned for having sold ale without a license.

The evidence showed that the defendant took to the house a short time ago from Mr. Harper, auctioneer, and the license had not been transferred to him. On Thursday Police-sergeant O’Brien and Police-constable Smith went to the house and were supplied by the landlady with two glasses of ale. It transpired that the defendant had paid a deposit upon the fixtures in taking possession of the house, and understood that the license had been transferred. Under these circumstances a fine of 40s only and the costs was ordered to be paid, the Bench remarking that Mr. Harper ought to repay the amount.”

“At Bilston Police Court, yesterday, Joseph Fletcher, of Canal Row, Bilston, who was only apprehended on Saturday, was charged with unlawfully wounding Aaron Lockley, of Wooden Well Yard, Bilston, on the 1st of September last. Evidence was given to the effect that the two men were in the JAPANNERS ARMS, Temple [sic] Street, Bilston, when a dispute arose, and the prisoner taking up a quart jug struck the prosecutor on the side of the head with it, inflicting a wound half an inch deep, and nearly three inches long. He was committed for trial.”

“Staffordshire Quarter Sessions.....

Joseph Fletcher (33), miner, was charged with unlawfully wounding Aaron Lockley, on the 1st September, at Bilston. On the date named prisoner, prosecutor and others were at the JAPANNERS ARMS, Oxford Street, Bilston. Prosecutor said he remonstrated with the prisoner for teaching a child to use bad language, whereupon the prisoner struck him on the side of the face with a pint jug, cutting his cheek open and breaking the jug.

The prisoner after the event disappeared, and was not arrested until May last, when he was said to have remarked that he should ‘only get two years, and would murder the whole lot when he came out.’ He now denied having used these words, and stated that he struck complainant because he had hit his child.

Prisoner was found guilty of a common assault, and was sentenced to six months’ imprisonment.”

Staffordshire Advertiser 3/6/1848

"Thomas Townsend, alias Gipsy Tom, was brought before John Foster, Esq, on Tuesday, charged by Henry Riley with threatening him, and creating a disturbance at his house on the 14th of May. In the course of the inquiry it transpired that about two years ago the defendant sold his wife to the complainant for £2 10s, and she had since lived with her purchaser. The complainant kept a public house in Bilston, and the defendant, with others, had often gone to the house for the purpose of making an uproar. On the 14th the defendant, with twelve other men, repeated the offence, threatening the complainant's life, and getting drink from a neighbouring public house, because they were refused any at the complainant's. The defendant was ordered to find bail for six months, and pay the expenses."

Birmingham Journal 20/6/1857

“Michael Mann was charged at Bilston Public Office on Tuesday under the following circumstances. He is in the employment of Henry Riley, who is a beer-shop keeper, in Bilston. On Saturday night he had been drinking for about three hours in Riley’s house, and being partially intoxicated, rose for the purpose of going home. Riley attempted to prevent him, stating that it was a rule that all his men should pay for a shillings-worth of drink before leaving on the pay night. Mann refused to take any more drink, but offered to pay 1s if another man present would do the same. An altercation ensued, in the course of which Mann picked up a stone ginger beer bottle, and knocked Mrs. Riley down with it, rendering her insensible. He was committed to prison for fourteen days, with hard labour.”

‘The Cry Of The Children’ by C. J. L. Elwell

“John Tomkyns, landlord of the KINGS ARMS at Bilston, argued that the Tommy-shops were ‘a good thing, because the working classes are very improvident and extravagant; if they had their wages in money, the majority of them would spend it in ducks and geese and fowls, and starve the rest of the week; most of the colliers have large families and their wives, by means of the Tommy-shops, get sufficient provisions instead of the husband spending all the wages at once on drink or other extravagancies.’”

Freeman's Black Country Folk 'Abel Hill'

".....His first hearing took place in the Justices Room at the rear of the old KINGS ARMS....."

British Press 27/3/1820

"A horrid murder has been discovered in the liberty of Bilston. A woman, named Mary Martin, and her infant natural child, were missed on the 23rd ult and some days after their bodies were found in the Birmingham canal, near Bradley, with marks of violence upon them. The event excited a strong sensation in the neighbourhood, and as several circumstances tended to criminate one Abel Hill, by whom the woman had the child, and by whom also she was again far advanced in pregnancy, he was apprehended. An inquest has been held upon the woman and child, and on Thursday the Jury, after three days of minute investigation, returned a verdict of wilful murder against Hill, who has been committed to Stafford gaol."

AND

Sun (London) 28/7/1820

"Wolverhampton, Tuesday night, 10 o'clock.

The trial of Abel Hill, for the wilful murder of Mary Martin and Thomas Martin, in the parish of Wolverhampton, which was most interesting, and consisted almost entirely of circumstantial evidence, came on at eight o'clock this morning, and was not finished until seven this evening. The Learned Judge summed up in the most ample and perspicuous manner, commenting, as he proceeded, upon the nature of the evidence; and the Jury, after consulting about five minutes, returned a verdict of Guilty. His Lordship, who seemed almost exhausted with fatigue, then passed sentence in the most affecting and impressive manner. The prisoner was to be executed yesterday."

[Abel Hill was executed on the Thursday morning by hanging and his body was delivered to Mr. Best, surgeon, of Bilston, to be dissected and anatomised, according to the sentence.]

"To the Noblemen, Gentlemen, & Clergy, Magistrates of the County of Stafford.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

As the Office of Gaoler, and Keeper of the House of Correction at Stafford, will become vacant at the next Epiphany Sessions, I beg to solicit your votes and interest to fill that situation.

In offering myself a Candidate on the present occasion, I am fully aware of the various and important duties attached to the Office; but I humbly hope I shall be able to produce such testimonials of my character and abilities, as a Police Officer in the County for the last twenty years, as will be considered satisfactory.

Should I be fortunate enough to become the object of your choice, I shall be most grateful, and will earnestly endeavour to discharge my duty with zeal and fidelity.

I am, my Lords and Gentlemen, most respectfully, your obedient servant. John Tomkys, Constable of Bilston."

[He was not elected.]

British Mercury or Wednesday Evening Post 15/5/1822

"The following pathetic appeal from the starving miners is generally circulating through the disturbed districts.

An Humble Address from the Coal and Ironstone Miners of Bilston, and the Neighbourhood.

To the worthy and honourable Magistrates that attended at a Meeting of the Coal and Iron Masters, at the KINGS ARMS INN, Bilston, April 23, 1822.

It appears, according to publications that are in circulation, that your meeting was respectably attended by a part of the Coal and Iron Masters, who have declared that the men are receiving Two Shillings and Sixpence to Three Shillings per day, with the advantage of three pints of pit drink. But instead of three pints, a many of us receive but one pint, and that worth no more than One Halfpenny. And allowing we have Two Shillings and Sixpence per day in the Ironstone Mines, as has been suggested, and that there should be Five Days per Week done (but upon an average there is not above Four Days per Week) which will amount to Ten Shillings; and out of that, suppose we deduct One Shilling to buy coal, and Three pence which the Masters stop for Club, that will bring it to Eight Shillings and Nine-pence; then in most places we are obliged to pay One Shilling for Ale when we receive it. Then in the next place there is about Two Shillings and Three-pence for Rent, which will bring it to Six Shillings, the nett money for a family to subsist on.

Now, Sirs, we humbly wish that you would investigate these things minutely; considering the many dangers we are exposed to, the hardness of our labour, and the small sum that we receive for it, you must be led to think that we must be almost in a state of starvation!! So we hope you will reflect for a moment, and not draw too hasty conclusions by hearing the reports of masters, who are almost always acting too much for self, and not listening to the cries of the poor and needy. But we believe you have been informed wrong by these Gentlemen, if we may so call them; who would send us to the grave without any feeling for our case. But considering that we are, or should be in a free nation, and not born to be slaves; we take the liberty of addressing you in this plain and simple manner, hoping you will interpose for us accordingly to your wisdom; and we pray that God may direct you, so that there may be a speedy tranquillity between masters and servants; that masters might not make their servants like the Egyptians of old, to serve with rigour; and that servants might pay that regard that is due to masters, not as a slave, but as a servant.

Signed on behalf of ourselves and brethren, R. Hartshorne, S. Lister, W. Hartshorne, W. Jones, J. Lomas, G. Cartwright, S. Brooks.”

"On Friday, 5th inst, a most elegant dinner was given to the Rev. J. Clare and the Rev. W. Leigh, at the KINGS ARMS, Bilston, for their constant and zealous attention to the interests of that town and neighbourhood, as magistrates. About sixty of the principal inhabitants were present, and the dinner and wines were of the first order, and reflected great credit on the landlady of the house and the managing committee. There are few rooms better calculated for a public dinner, than this, in which sixty persons could be accommodated at one table with the utmost convenience to every visitor. The musical and vocal exertions which enlivened the festivities of the entertainment between the powerful harangues of the chairman and the eloquent replies of those whose names and heaths were drank, gave to the enjoyment of the evening a rational happiness which will long be remembered by those who partook of the banquet."

"Masonic Intelligence. On Saturday last, the Right Hon. Earl Ferrers, Provincial Grand Master for the counties of Warwick and Stafford, held his first Provincial Grand Lodge for this county, at the KINGS ARMS INN, Bilston. He was accompanied by several of the provincial Grand Officers of Warwickshire, and was met by Major Hawkes, and the Masters, Officers, and Brethren of the Lodges at Bilston, Dudley, Stafford, &c. The business commenced at one o'clock, when his Lordship delivered a most truly Masonic address to the assembled brethren, appointed provincial grand officers for this county, and paid very flattering and appropriate compliments to all present, for their genuine masonic order and regularity. The customary business being ended the lodge was duly closed with solemn prayer. A most sumptuous dinner was provided, and the company sat down at half-past four; his Lordship in the chair. The superior flavour of the wine, and the excellent arrangements made by Miss Tomkys, called forth his Lordship's high approbation, and he paid Miss T. a well-merited compliment on the occasion. When the cloth was removed, the Noble Chairman gave the following toasts, 'King William the Fourth,' 'Queen Adelaide,' 'The Duke of Sussex,' and several other loyal and patriotic sentiments, which were duly honoured by the craft; several excellent songs were given in a superior style; and the evening was spent in the greatest harmony. The company separated truly and highly gratified at the condescension and affability of the Noble Chairman."

“The annual dinner complimentary to the Magistrates acting for the Bilston district, was held on Thursday se’nnight at the KINGS ARMS Bilston, and was attended by a numerous and respectable party.....

The dinner, which was elegant and abundant, was served up in a very superior style, and reflected great credit on the Misses Tomkys. The table was in particular plentifully supplied with venison, and other descriptions of game, for which the worthy hostesses and the company were indebted to the kindness and liberality of the following noblemen and gentlemen, Earl of Dartmouth; Lord Grey, of Groby; Sir John Wrottesley, Bart, MP; Sir George Pigot, Bart; E. J. Littleton, Esq, MP; and Thomas W. Giffard, Esq; whose healths, as the donors, were collectively given in the course of the evening. To conclude, the whole entertainment was of a very superior cast, and such as to merit the undivided approbation of, and give unmixed satisfaction to, the guests assembled.”

“It has seldom been our painful duty to record a more pitiable event than that which took place at Bilston, on Wednesday morning last, by the explosion of a large steam boiler at the wood-screw manufactory of Mr. J. Hawkesford, in that town. The accident occurred about ten o’clock, a time when all the work-people, amounting upwards of 300, were upon the premises; and we grieve to state that it has already proved fatal to eight persons, and fifty-six others are most seriously injured. The entire top of the boiler was blown off, and carried through the gates of the manufactory into an adjoining field. The report, at the moment of the explosion, was dreadful, and the shock was so powerful that a considerable part of the roof of the mill, where many women and children were at work, fell in, and forcing down the floors of two rooms, fell through into the rooms on the ground floor.

A little girl, the daughter of one of the workmen Abraham Worall, who had come to the manufactory with her father’s breakfast, and was near the boiler at the time it burst, was so dreadfully scalded that she died on the spot. The father, who was also within the reach of the hot vapour, was injured to such a degree that he died in a few hours afterwards. Mary Flavel and Sarah Burton died on Thursday, and Thomas Tennant and Hannah Price on Friday morning; Mary Anne Gittins on Friday night; and Mary Hughes on Saturday; they were all children under thirteen years of age. The scene at the manufactory, immediately after the explosion, was, we are informed, quite terrific; women and children, in a state of the greatest consternation, were jumping through the windows of the rooms from the second and third stories, and their shrieks, together with those of the sufferers upon whom the building had fallen, were distressing in the extreme.

An inquest was held on Friday afternoon, at the KINGS ARMS INN, Bilston, before H. Smith, Esq, coroner, upon the bodies of Abraham Worrall, Mary Worrall, Mary Flavel, Sarah Burton, Thomas Tennant, and Hannah Price.....”

“.....An inquest was held on the bodies and a verdict of Accidental Death returned. The engineer, it appeared, was so badly scalded, that he was confined to his bed, and could not attend the inquest; and therefore nothing could be ascertained respecting the precise cause of the accident. Robert Blaze, a boiler maker, proved that the boiler had been put up about a month ago, and was in a perfect state of repair. A meeting has since been held, at which it was resolved that a subscription should be entered into, for the relief of the surviving sufferers.”

The members of the lodge mustered numerously on the occasion, and several members of the adjoining lodges attended. Brother Thomas Aston was in the chair, and the usual loyal and masonic toasts were given and drank with the customary cordiality. Upon Brother Lewis's health being drank, he replied in a truly masonic and feeling manner, much regretting his separation from the brethren. The evening was spent with great conviviality and real masonic feeling."

"The 5th annual meeting of the Bilston District Bank took place on Tuesday, at the KINGS ARMS, Bilston.

The report of the directors was of a highly satisfactory nature, and exhibits, after deducting the bad debts, a net profit of £2,800 10s 9d, out of which the directors recommended a dividend to be paid at the rate of seven per cent upon the paid up capital, leaving a surplus of £674 5s 9d to be added to the guarantee fund, which would then amount to £4,478 0s 7d. The report was unanimously adopted by the meeting, and the two retiring directors re-elected, after which votes of thanks were passed to the directors and manager. A party of the shareholders dined together in the afternoon, under the presidency of W. H. Sparrow, Esq, the chairman of the directors."

“The brethren of the Noahs Ark Lodge, No.435, met at the KINGS ARMS INN, Bilston, on Monday the 12th instant, to celebrate the Festival of St. John the Evangelist, when brother Thomas Lewis was installed, with the usual ceremonies, as WM for the present year. Brother the Rev. Dr. Slade, DPGM and GC for Staffordshire, favoured the brethren with his company, and addressed them in an most eloquent and impressive speech on the duties of the craft. A most excellent dinner was provided by Mrs. Tomkys, widow of the late respected brother John Tomkys, which, together with the wines, gave universal satisfaction. The evening was spent in the true spirit of harmony, and the brethren retired highly delighted with the intellectual meeting.”

“On Wednesday last the friends and supporters of Mrs. Tomkys, landlady of the KINGS ARMS, Bilston, held their annual dinner at her house. There were upwards of fifty respectable tradesmen living in the neighbourhood, and several ironmasters, as well as visitors who use the house from Wolverhampton and Birmingham. The dinner was served up by Mrs. Tomkys in her usual good style, and consisted of an abundance of the delicacies and more substantial fare of a good old English dinner. In compliance with the request of a deputation which waited on Samuel Griffiths, Esq, of Wolverhampton, proprietor of the property, that gentleman kindly took the chair.....

Mr. Griffiths said he had been brought up in Bilston, and the little knowledge he possessed had been imparted to him there. When he was an apprentice in the town some few years ago, he little thought he should have the honour to preside over a meeting so influential as the one before him. They were met to support the widow of their late worthy host, and he was gratified to see so numerous an assembly, whose presence was creditable not only to their own feelings, but to the memory of their departed friend. He begged to thank them for their kindness in drinking his health, and concluded by proposing the health of Mrs. Tomkys.

Mr. Hollingsworth responded on behalf of their hostess, who, he could assure them, was most grateful for the kind support she had received since the death of her husband.

The health of the vice chairman, the magistrates of Bilston, and other toasts of a local character, were afterwards drunk, and responded to in a suitable manner, after which the company separated at a late hour, much gratified with the entertainment and the kind feeling which pervaded the meeting.”

“William Marlow was brought before the Bench, and charged with stealing a coat, the property of Mr. Thomas Smallwood. It appeared that the prosecutor was an attorney, practising at Wellington, and on the 8th of June he left a coat in the KINGS ARMS INN, Bilston. He made inquiries about his coat, but could not find it, and all the servants denied any knowledge of it. On Sunday, the 23rd ult, from circumstances which had occurred at the inn, Mrs. Tomkys, the landlady, went to the house of the prisoner at Wood Green, and found the coat in his box. On being charged with stealing it he said that Emma Barnes, a servant at the inn, with whom he kept company, had given it to him, but she denied having done so. He was committed.”

“Staffordshire Michaelmas Sessions Not Guilty.....

“Staffordshire Michaelmas Sessions.....

Emma Barnes, aged 28 years, was indicted for stealing in the dwelling house of Mary Tomkys, at Bilston, eighteen yards of silk ribbon, the property of Joseph Francis.

The prosecutor stated that he was a ribbon manufacturer, residing at Coventry, and travelled through the country with a stock of ribbons. On the 21st of August he went to the KINGS ARMS INN, Bilston, kept by Mrs. Tomkys. According to his custom, he arranged the ribbons, which were in various boxes, in one of the rooms, for the inspection of his customers. There were three doors leading to the room, two of which he locked himself, and the other he did not fasten, thinking it was merely a private entrance. On going into the room on the following morning, he found one of the boxes had been disturbed, and various lengths of ribbon cut from six half pieces. He lost about eighteen yards in the whole, the value of 17s or 18s. The same day Mrs. Tomkys gave him five pieces of ribbon, which corresponded with the patterns and quantity he had missed.

Mrs. Tomkys, the landlady of the KINGS ARMS, deposed to the prosecutor being at her house on the 21st of August. On his making a complaint that some of his ribbons had been stolen, she searched the box of the prisoner, and found the pieces of ribbon produced, which Mr. Francis identified as his property. The prisoner had been in her service five years, and also two years on a previous occasion.

William Hollingsworth purchased the ribbons from the prosecutor for Mrs. Tomkys. He did so, because he (the prosecutor) had said he should hold Mrs. Tomkys responsible for any loss.

Mr. Woolrych addressed the jury at length on behalf of the prisoner, and called several witnesses to character.

Guilty. There was a second indictment against the prisoner, which charged her with stealing several silver teaspoons, and other articles, belonging to Mrs. Tomkys, which was not proceeded with.

The prisoner, who was recommended to mercy by the jury, on the ground of her previous good character, and also by her late mistress, was sentenced to twelve months imprisonment.’

“Yesterday morning an influential meeting of the inhabitants of Bilston was held at the KINGS ARMS, to take into consideration the best method of raising local subscriptions to alleviate the deep distress and famine now existing in Ireland and parts of Scotland. At eleven o'clock, the chair was taken by the Rev. H. S. Fletcher, who opened the business by stating the object of the meeting, and expressing his sympathy with the distressed people of the neighbouring kingdoms. A resolution, deploring their present position, and rejoicing in the efforts now being made throughout this country to aid them, also recognising it as a duty to cooperate with the British Association in London in raising funds for their support, was passed; and a committee, consisting of ministers of all denominations, and many influential gentlemen of the town, was appointed to carry out these views. It was agreed to send weekly remittance to London to the British Association; and Mr. Thomas Cross was appointed treasurer, and the Rev. J. Heafield, secretary. One hundred pounds was subscribed in the room; and the meeting was adjourned until seven o'clock in the evening, to give greater facilities for carrying out the object sought to be attained.”

“On the afternoon of Sunday last, one of the police had his attention called to a man lying in the street, apparently unwell, and as he was a stranger to the town, he took him to the station, where the poor man was in the course of the evening visited by Mr. Dickson, the surgeon, who pronounced him dangerously ill. Some medicine was given him, but he continued to grow worse during the night, and died on the following morning. An inquest was held on Wednesday, at the KINGS ARMS INN, before T. M. “An inquest was held on Wednesday last, at the KINGS ARMS, Bilston, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, on the body of Catherine Onions, a widow, sixty years of age, who appears, from the evidence, to have been literally frightened to death. Rebecca Steerer stated that on Monday night last, the deceased and herself were walking from Wolverhampton to Bilston, about ten o’clock, the deceased being apparently in good health. When they reached the railway between Ettingshall Lane and Gibbet Lane, two men (whom the witness did not know) overtook them, and used indecent language towards them, on which the deceased instantly reeled, and they both called out, which caused the men to run away. The deceased walked on for a few yards, and then fell down lifeless, apparently from fright. The witness stated that deceased was a very timid woman, and she had frequently known her faint from very trivial causes. The men did not touch either of them, and there were no marks of violence on the deceased. The jury returned a verdict that the deceased died from the Effects of Fright.”

“On Saturday last, two inquests were held at the KINGS ARMS, Bilston, before Thomas Moss Phillips, Esq, Coroner. The first of them was on the body of John Jones, who was killed in a stone pit in Mr. Banks’s field, near Bilston, on Friday afternoon, by about three tons weight of stone and clod falling upon him. He had been told, a short time before, that the stone and clod were likely to fall, but he tried it with his pick, and said it was all safe. Shortly afterwards, however, it fell, and he was killed on the spot. Verdict, Accidental Death.

The other inquest was on the body of Eliza Hollingshead, who, on Saturday morning about ten o'clock, was assisting as a bank's girl at the mouth of a pit in the neighbourhood of Bilston, and was in the act of pushing a skip from the platform on to the bank, when the catch gave way, the platform fell back, and the deceased (who was standing between two men) fell backwards down the pit, which is eighty-four yards deep, and was killed on the spot. The two men narrowly escaped with their lives by jumping off the platform to the side of the pit, catching hold of the frame, whilst their legs hung down the pit until they were rescued from their perilous position. The Jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death."

"Another instance of the recklessness with which some colliers prosecute their dangerous occupation took place a few days ago in a coal pit near Bilston. Some colliers descended the pit in question about six o'clock in the morning. One of them, Richard Thompson, was cautioned by another collier not to go up a gate road till it had been properly examined by the doggy, but Thompson persisted in his original intention, and took with him a lighted candle. After he had proceeded some distance an explosion of fire damp took place, and Thompson ran back, badly burnt about his arms, back, face, and breast. He was taken home, and was subsequently attended by Mr. Dunn, surgeon, of Wolverhampton, but after lingering from Monday till Wednesday morning, he died in consequence of the injuries he had received. "On Tuesday, an adjourned inquest was held at the KINGS ARMS, at Bilston, Staffordshire, on the body of a newly-born female child, who had been found dead at the bottom of a coal pit at Bilston, on the morning of the 3rd instant. Bridget Killgallan, the mother of the child, who is in custody on suspicion of having caused its death by unfair means, was present at the inquest. It appears that she is a lodging-house keeper at Bilston, and that her husband is transported. The only evidence against the mother was her own statement, made to a neighbour, and that of her own daughter. She was secretly delivered of the child, and finding it alive, wrapped it up in bed and left it for some time; that finding it dead when she again visited it, she went out and threw it down the pit. The jury returned a verdict of Wilful Murder against her, and she was committed for trial at Stafford Assizes.

The evidence disclosed a fearful want of common decency, the wretched woman slept on a bed by herself, two men were in another bed, and three in another. The daughter slept in a bed in another room, in which were also sleeping two women and three men, a lodger's child and her brother and sister."

"Staffordshire Lent Assizes.....

Bridget Kilgallan, an Irishwoman, was charged with the wilful murder of her new-born female child, on the 30th of December, at Bilston.....

Mr. Hancox, surgeon, of Bilston, who had made a post mortem examination, now described the child as being healthy and full-grown; but he was unable distinctly to state the cause of death.

His Lordship: Then the case is too obscure for the Jury to find a verdict of wilful murder against the prisoner. There was no evidence to sustain that charge, as they must have indisputable testimony in regard to the cause of death; but there was abundant evidence for the Jury to find the prisoner guilty of concealing the birth of the child, and consequently of a misdemeanour. The Jury having returned a verdict to this effect, his Lordship addressed the prisoner, and said that he was not surprised at suspicions being raised that the child had been murdered, because, where a woman took pains to conceal the fact of her labour, and took the chance of her own death and that of the child, it might justly be considered ample proof that she did not desire the child to live. She had been found guilty, however, of a misdemeanour of a very aggravated character, and he therefore sentenced her to twelve months' imprisonment, with hard labour."

“Court of Bankruptcy, Birmingham, Wednesday, June 7. Before Mr. Commissioner Daniell.

In re James Walter Busst, of Bilston, Innkeeper.

This was a meeting for the choice of trade assignees, which was carried by Mr. Phillips, of Wolverhampton, Mr. Foley, Mr. Taylor, and Mr. York being appointed trade assignees. The bankrupt was examined relative to transactions with his brother, when it appeared that he now owed his brother £400 for moneys lent and groceries, for which sum the bankrupt’s brother held a bill of sale, under which he was now in possession of the bankrupt’s property, but whether he would relinquish possession was not known. Mr. Wright, who appeared for the bankrupt, was of opinion that the property would be available to the creditors generally, but as nothing definite could be stated, it was determined that the bankrupt’s brother should be summoned to attend the court to give the required explanations. On the 10th instant the bankrupt’s brother attended pursuant to the summons, and relinquished his bill of sale, consequently the effects comprised in it will be available for the creditors.”

"The recently appointed Magistrates, having resolved to hold an additional Petty Sessional sitting weekly, E. B. Dimmock, Esq, and John Jones, Esq, sat for the first time on Friday last at the KINGS ARMS INN....."

AND

"On Wednesday last an inquest was held at the KINGS ARMS INN, in this town, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, on the body of Francis Portens, about five years of age, who was drowned on the previous afternoon by falling into a well of water, about three feet six inches deep, in the cellar of an unoccupied house, near his parents house in Wooley's buildings, Wolverhampton Street. The child was soon after taken out by Henry Davis, an engineer, but life was quite extinct. Verdict, Accidental Death."

"On Wednesday last an inquest was held at the KINGS ARMS INN, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, to inquire into the circumstances attending the death of two newly-born female children, who had been found buried in a pit bank on the morning of Tuesday.

Inspector Thompson, having heard a report that some interment had taken place, went to the house of the persons said to be the parents, a poor Irish couple, of the name of Durkin, residing in Birch's Buildings. On making inquiry of the father, he at first denied knowing where the children were, but afterwards admitted that he had been forced to bury them in a field of land in the occupation of Messrs. Abbots, near Bilston, not having money to bury them in a churchyard. Application had been made to Mrs. Johnson, the wife of the relieving officer, for medical relief, but she told Durkin that his wife would require to go into the workhouse to be delivered. The advice was not taken, however, and Durkin's wife was delivered of twins, one of which was stillborn, while the other died directly after its birth. The relieving officer was informed of the circumstances. Durkin states that Mr. Johnson refused to give him coffins for the children, but this has since been denied by the relieving officer, who states that he asked Durkin if he could not bury them (meaning to inquire whether he had the means of doing so), but Durkin took the question in its literal meaning, and said he could bury them, and on the same night interred them in a pit mound, which was 'convenient' to his house.

The inquest having been adjourned till Wednesday evening, in order that Mr. Hancox, surgeon, might make a post mortem examination, on its being resumed, that gentleman proved that one of the children had been stillborn, and that the other had died from natural causes. A verdict to this effect was returned by the jury, who, however, expressed their dissatisfaction in the strongest manner in regard to the conduct of Mr. Johnson, and forthwith drew up a memorial on the subject to the Poor Law Commissioners. (It will be observed that Mr. Johnson gave an explanation at the meeting of the Board of Guardians on Friday, and the Rev. Chairman undertook to write to the jury, stating to them that both medical relief and food was given by the relieving officer, and that they had been misinformed.)”

“An inquest was held at the KINGS ARMS, Bilston, on Saturday, before Thomas Moss Phillips, Esq, on the body of Phillip Dyke, who was killed through being drawn over the pulley at a pit in Mr. Hickman’s field, on Friday. The deceased and a boy had finished work about ten o’clock at night, and gave the signal to be drawn up. Joseph Derry, the engineer, started the engine at a very moderate pace, and was not aware the men were so near the top, when in an instant the dolly, with the deceased and the boy, was drawn over the pulley, and Dyke fell about five yards from the mouth of the pit on a cinder pit; he was taken home and died about twelve o’clock the same night. The boy was also injured, but he is progressing favourably. It appeared from the evidence that a shot had been fired in the pit about nine o’clock, and Dyke called out for some fire to be thrown down to light his candle that had been extinguished; a shovel full of fire was thrown down, and it is supposed that a gleed caught the token (a piece of tow) attached to the chain and burnt it off. There was no banksman in attendance when the parties came up. The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

“On Tuesday last the police committee of the mining district assembled at the KINGS ARMS INN, Bilston, to investigate the charge made against the police, who are stated to have used unnecessary violence in the protection and assistance of Mr. Boydell, in taking possession of a boat laden with iron ore, as messenger from the Birmingham Court of Bankruptcy, in the case of Messrs. Jones and Oakes, bankrupts, to whom the ore belonged.

George Bate, Esq, presented a memorial, which he stated was most respectably signed, and that he himself knew many of the parties to be most respectable; but on reference to the minutes of the quarter sessions it appears that the case must be investigated at Wordsley, and Friday, the 21st instant, was appointed by the committee for the purpose.”

“An inquest was held on Saturday last, at the BIRD IN HAND public house, Bilston, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, Coroner, on the body of George Davis, a lad aged thirteen years, who met with his death under the following melancholy circumstances. It appears that on Monday morning, the 1st inst, the deceased was at play in Mr. Hickman’s field, Mount Pleasant, when two lads, one George Bust, aged twelve years, son of Mrs. Bust, of the KINGS ARMS INN, and the other son of Mr. Obadiah Batte, parish constable, went up to him and asked him why he had been throwing stones at them, but before the deceased had time to answer the boy Bust struck him a violent blow above the left ear with a constable’s staff which he had in his hand. The deceased instantly dropped to the ground, and remained insensible from the effects of the blow for nearly an hour, when he was taken home to his father’s house, in Black Horse Yard, and put to bed. On Wednesday he appeared much better and came down stairs, but towards the evening he became worse, and died on Thursday. The inquest was adjourned till Wednesday last, at three o’clock, in order that a post mortem examination might be made. It was again adjourned, however, till next Thursday, for the production of the lads, Bust and Batte.”

“Worcester Insolvency Court. Wednesday, July 9.....

In re Edward Dickenson, Dudley, skin-broker.

Insolvent applied for his final order, supported by Mr. Rea and Mr. Wilson, and unopposed. His liabilities were set down as £2,777 9s 2d, and assets as £93 13s 1d. He attributed the cause of his insolvency to the loss he sustained in having his goods seized and sold by one of his creditors, the ruinous rate of interest charged him for money lent, the large sums expended in improving the KINGS ARMS at Bilston, and the CASTLE INN, Dudley, and having but a small capital when he commenced business.

His honour remarked upon the large amount of debts incurred by the insolvent in the short space of four years, he having been a bankrupt in 1851. Insolvent replied that he had been in a very large way of business, and had been unfortunate. His honour said as no creditor appeared to oppose, neither would he oppose him, but would grant his final order.”

“At Bilston Petty Sessions yesterday, Sarah Jane Beddard preferred a charge of assault against William Alltree. Mr. Beddard, the husband of the complainant, who is the landlord of the KINGS ARMS INN, is about to emigrate to America, and Mr. Alltree, who is an auctioneer, was called in to value the stock and fixtures in the house between Mr. Beddard and the incoming tenant. Thursday last was the settling day, and according to the statement of the complainant £38 had to be paid over to her on behalf of her husband by Alltree. He, however, only paid her £37. She remonstrated, and he insisted that he had paid £37 10s, having kept half a guinea as his own fee. An altercation ensued, in the course of which, as the complainant alleged, Alltree put his arm round her waist and attempted to kiss her, at the same time intimating that ‘he would not mind £5.’ This constituted the assault complained of. Mrs. Beddard was cross-examined at some length by the defendant. She admitted having made similar charges against two other persons for taking liberties with her in the bar; also that she went with the defendant to the VINE INN to see a cousin of hers after the alleged assault took place; and also that she had held out a threat to be revenged on him for keeping the half sovereign for the valuation. At the close of her examination the Magistrates dismissed the case without inquiring further into it or calling upon Mr. Alltree for his defence, stating they were satisfied no assault was committed.”

“Mr. F. Altree, auctioneer, of Bilston, was charged on Saturday with an infringement of the Excise Laws. Mr. Harding appeared on behalf of the commissioners of Inland Revenue, stating that the defendant was charged with letting horses for hire without taking out a license, by which he had incurred a penalty of £100. On the present occasion he should prove that the defendant had been employed by a Mr. Beddard, who had kept the KINGS ARMS INN, Bilston, as a valuer, and in the bill subsequently sent in by him, had charged a guinea for the hire of a horse and trap from Bilston to West Bromwich. That bill had been laid before the Board of Revenue in London, and it was by the express command of the revenue authorities that the present charge was brought. He then called as witness Mr. William Beddard, who stated that some time since he was owner of the KINGS ARMS, and employed the defendant, Mr. Altree, an auctioneer, of Bilston, to make a valuation of the house to a Mr. Wade, with whom he had negotiations at the time, to take the house. On September 29th, Mr. Altree, Mr. Wade, and himself went to West Bromwich in Mr. Altree’s trap, and the expenses of that journey were charged in the bill. Witness objected to the amount at the time, as being too much, as he himself paid horse keep and other expenses on the occasion. The witness was examined by the defendant as to a charge brought by him against the latter of indecently assaulting his wife, which had been dismissed by the Bilston magistrates. The object of such examination being to show an animus.

The defendant maintained that he had not let his horse and trap for hire. He had driven the witness over to West Bromwich certainly, but the charge of a guinea was made, not for the hire of the vehicle, but for his own professional services as an auctioneer and valuer on the occasion. He should have made the same charge had he gone alone, or travelled by railway. Mr. Harding, in reply, contended that Mr. Altree had charged for the hire of the conveyance, and that the onus rested upon him to prove his license. If dissatisfied with their decision he could appeal to the next quarter sessions, and a case could be then sent up for the opinion of a higher court.

The Bench, after a short consultation, intimated that they did not consider the case proved against the defendant, and must consequently be dismissed. Mr. Harding said, under those circumstances, he should himself take a case.”

[The Board of Inland Revenue withdrew the appeal against the magistrates decision.]

“At the Bilston Police Court yesterday (Tuesday), before J. Leigh, Esq, seven persons, named William Fellows, John Fellows, Mary Fellows, Mary Pearson, Joseph Pearson, Rebecca Fowler, and Elizabeth Cope, were charged with stealing a silver watch from the person of Mr. Henry Oliver, the landlord of the KINGS ARMS, Bilston. Mr. Henry Underhill was engaged for the prosecution, and Mr. Ebsworth for the defence.

The evidence of the prosecutor was to the effect that on Thursday night last, at about eleven o’clock, the prisoners were drinking in a room at his house; he went to the room to tell them that it was closing time, and sat down upon a chair next the door. While he was sitting there Rebecca Fowler, who is a widow, and keeps a beerhouse [OLD CROWN, Bridge Street] in Bilston, came and sat beside him. Shortly afterwards a quarrel commenced between Fellows and Pearson, which led to a fight, and Mr. Oliver, after considerable difficulty, succeeded in getting them out of the house. As soon as they had gone he missed his watch, but he could not say which of the parties had taken it. At the time he first entered the room he pulled out his watch and told the parties it was closing time. The following day police constable M’Nulty took the prisoners to the prosecutor’s house, when they admitted that the watch must have been taken by one of their number, but no one would acknowledge it. They were remanded for a week, to obtain additional evidence, bail being refused.”

“Staffordshire Quarter Sessions. Yesterday.....

Elizabeth Cope, 40, William Fellows, 20, Rebecca Fowler, 34, Joseph Pearson, 48, Mary Pearson, 46, John Fellows, 43, and Mary Fellows, 42, who surrendered on bail, were indicted for assaulting Henry Oliver, at Bilston. Mr. Kenealy was counsel for the prosecutor, and Mr. Hill defended the prisoners.

The first witness was Henry Oliver, who deposed that he was a licensed victualler, keeping the KINGS ARMS, Bilston. On the 20th of October, about twenty minutes after eleven o’clock at night, he went into the smoke room and told the prisoners, who were drinking there, that it was time to shut up. John Fellows then requested him to sit down a few minutes, as it was not late, observing that there was no need for them to choke themselves. He then sat down close to the door, which he kept open with his knee. After remaining about five or six minutes, W. Fellows began to quarrel with J. Pearson, when he told him he would not have any bad language there, to which Fellows replied, ‘If you stop me I’ll strike you,’ and he was then knocked down and struck several times, and his forehead was cut with a glass thrown at him. His female servant came to his assistance, and ultimately the prisoners were turned out.

There was an indictment charging them with stealing the prosecutor’s watch, but this bill the Grand Jury had ignored. Mr. Hill addressed the Jury on behalf of the prisoners, and called several witnesses, who deposed that at the time named no disturbance took place at the KINGS ARMS; that the prosecutor was very drunk, and that on attempting to turn the prisoners out after midnight, he fell down and cut his forehead, and that the utmost that had been done was a slight resistance on the part of the prisoners to being turned out of the house.

The Jury returned a verdict of guilty of the graver charge of occasioning grievous bodily harm. The verdict of the Jury was received by a crowded Court with considerable surprise, which was not lessened when the whole of the prisoners were sentenced to six months’ imprisonment with hard labour. (The female prisoners, who fully expected a verdict of acquittal, gave vent to their surprise in loud screams and lamentations.)”

“A boiler explosion, the most fatal in its results of any of that too frequent class of accidents we ever remember, occurred on Tuesday morning last, at the Millfield Iron Works of Mr. Thomas Rose, situated at Priestfield, near Bilston. No less than twenty-six lives have been already sacrificed, a considerable number of persons seriously injured, and property to the amount of some thousands of pounds destroyed.....

The forge which was the scene of the accident contained fourteen puddling furnaces, of which ten were in work, and five boilers connected together. There were about forty men and boys employed in the forge at the time of the accident, and at some of the puddling furnaces they were taking out the heat, so that the engine was at work at the time. The boiler which exploded was about ten feet six inches in diameter and twenty feet long. It was heated by four puddling furnaces, and the one next to it, which was unseated, by three, so that these boilers were in the very centre of the puddlers’ operations.

At about a quarter past eleven on Tuesday morning the boiler referred to suddenly burst. The upper portion, weighing about eight tons, was lifted up, dashed through the roof of the works, which was completely destroyed, and rising to a great height in the air, probably 200 yards or more, after crossing the West Midland Railway, fell on a piece of waste ground at the distance of 170 yards. The noise was compared to thunder, and the ground shook at a considerable distance as the boiler was rent apart. This large portion of the boiler rose into the air, and as it ascended steam issued from the bottom of it. The other, or lower portion of the boiler, was torn into several portions and driven in different directions. The brickwork in which the boiler was seated, the slates, ironwork, and timber of the roof, and portions of the puddling furnaces, walls, &c, were driven in various directions, and the whole place rendered a complete wreck. Several of the puddling furnaces were destroyed, the iron plates used in their construction broken, and the chimneys scattered about in showers of bricks. The molten or semi-molten contents of the puddling furnaces, the burning coals, and hot bricks and scalding water were strewn about, and a great deal of timber was burnt to a cinder, though it did not break out into a blaze, as was at one time feared. Boats were sunk in the canal which runs through the works by the heavy showers of materials falling into them. Some of the bricks were carried a great distance, and the roofs of some houses fully 300 yards distant were broken by them. The most fearful sight presented, however, was that of the killed and injured men scattered over the place Great difficulty was experienced in identifying the bodies, not only from the complete destruction of all personal likeness in many cases, but also owing to the fact that the works having been newly started, several of those employed were strangers, and at least two, one of whom is killed and the other only slightly injured, only began to work that morning. It is needless to depict the misery of the scene, wives and mothers and fathers frantically seeking for their husbands and sons, and endeavouring to discover amongst the fearfully mangled remains traces of identification. It was not until Wednesday afternoon that all who had lost their lives were identified, and the last was only found on that morning in the canal, dreadfully disfigured, so that it is certain that he was killed by injuries before being blown into the water.....

With regard to the cause of the accident further enquiry must take place before any positive opinion can be formed.”

AND

Walsall Free Press 3/5/1862

“On Thursday afternoon the inquest was again resumed [after several adjournments] before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, at the KINGS ARMS INN, Bilston, on the bodies of the 28 deceased killed by the boiler explosion at the Millfield ironworks.....

The coroner, in addressing the jury, said that they could not return a verdict of manslaughter against the engineer. After an hour’s deliberation, the jury returned the following verdict. That the boiler exploded from an over pressure of steam; but how caused sufficient evidence doth not appear to the jurors. We are of opinion that boilers of the size and description of the one in question should not be made or used for high pressure steam.”

“The KINGS ARMS, Bilston.

To be Let or Sold, the above large and commodious Inn, situate in the most eligible part of Bilston, in the centre of the mining district, and which has been carried on for many years as a commercial hotel. The house, which is replete with every convenience for that business, contains thirteen good sleeping rooms, commercial room, smoke room, parlour and kitchens, with large entire Yard, good Stabling and Coach-house. There is also a large and beautifully fitted up room, lately occupied by the Township Commissioners, and suitable for public meetings, &c.

The proprietor would alter the premises, if desired, to suit the wishes of a permanent tenant.

Apply to Mr. Morrell, Auctioneer, Bilston; or to Mr. G. Jones, House and Land Agent, Cleveland Road, Wolverhampton.”

The license appears to have been renewed for some years after the building ceased to be the KINGS ARMS.

Staffordshire Advertiser 1/4/1865

“In compliance with the invitation of Mr. Samuel Griffiths, of Wolverhampton, the men locked out of the ironworks yesterday assembled from all parts of the surrounding district, to the number of between 5,000 and 6,000, opposite the house once known as the KINGS HEAD [sic], Bilston, but now in the occupation of Mr. Gray, chemist and druggist.....”

AND

“In accordance with an announcement which was placarded about Wolverhampton, Bilston, and the neighbourhood on Thursday last, and signed by Mr. Samuel Griffiths, a numerously attended meeting of puddlers, millmen, and other operatives employed in connection with the iron trade of this district, took place at Bilston, on Friday, for the purpose of listening to an address by that gentleman, on the subject of the ‘Lock-out,’ and also to take into consideration a plan he proposed to lay before them for at once terminating the same. Mr. Griffiths had in the first instance thought of holding the meeting in Wolverhampton, but the Mayor of the borough (J. Ford, Esq), on being applied to, prohibited any open-air meeting in this town. Under these circumstances, Mr. Griffiths decided to have the meeting called in the neighbouring town of Bilston, and he ultimately obtained the consent of Mr. Gray, chemist and druggist, who occupies the premises formerly known as the KINGS HEAD [sic] INN, at the junction of Church Street and Swan Bank, to address the assemblage from the balcony over his shop.....”

In the 1871 census 12, Church Street is occupied by Charles Grey, pharmaceutical chemist.

The license was abandoned.

It became Bilston Conservative and Unionist Club, and later shops.

To the Noblemen, Gentlemen, & Clergy, Magistrates of the County of Stafford.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

AS the Office of Gaoler, and Keeper of the House of Correction at Stafford, will become vacant at the next Epiphany Sessions, I beg to solicit your votes and interest to fill that situation.

In offering myself a Candidate on the present occasion, I am fully aware of the various and important duties attached to the Office; but I humbly hope I shall be able to produce such testimonials of my character and abilities, as a Police Officer in the County for the last twenty years, as will be considered satisfactory.

Should I be fortunate enough to become the object of your choice, I shall be most grateful, and will earnestly endeavour to discharge my duty with zeal and fidelity.

I am,

My Lords and Gentlemen,

Most respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

JOHN TOMKYS,

Constable of Bilston.

“John Smith, alias David Hogan, Rosannah Smith, and James Smith, were charged at Bilston Police Office on Tuesday with uttering base coin. Mrs. Ann Stretton, landlady of the TURKS HEAD, stated.....

The prisoners were also charged with uttering two base sixpences at the house of Mr. Rhodes, Middle Field Lane; also to Mrs. Mary Lester, High Street.”

AND

AND

“Daniel Hogan, Rosanna Smith, and John Smith, remanded from Tuesday, were brought before W. Baldwin, Esq, on Monday last, charged with uttering base coin, at the house of Mr. Stretton, TURKS HEAD, High Street, Bilston. The evidence being conclusive against Hogan, the Mint authorities were determined to prosecute, and he was committed to the sessions. The other prisoners were discharged.”

AND

“Staffordshire Quarter Sessions.....

Daniel Hogden was charged with uttering counterfeit coins at Bilston, in November last, knowing them to be false and counterfeit. Mr. Kynnersley and Mr. Gordon conducted the prosecution.

Mr. Kynnersley opened the case, which was more fully detailed by the several witnesses, and also stated to the jury the law respecting the uttering of base coin.

It appeared that the prisoner, who is a labouring man, went to a beerhouse in Bilston kept by Mrs. Lester, about five o'clock in the evening of the 23rd of November, and, in company with another man, called for a pint of ale, which was given to them by the servant, Fanny Brevitt, and for which they gave her fourpence. They then asked for more ale, and gave Brevitt a base sixpence, which she subsequently marked and placed on the mantelpiece. About half an hour afterwards the prisoner returned with a bottle, and asked for a gallon of ale, putting down two base shillings in payment. Brevitt told him they were counterfeit, and took them to her mistress, during which time the prisoner decamped. Scarcely an hour had elapsed before the prisoner went to the TURKS HEAD public house, and Mrs. Stretton, the landlady, stated that he brought a bottle for half a gallon of ale, in return for which he gave her two sixpences, which she almost immediately discovered to be counterfeit. In less than an hour a woman brought the same bottle for half a gallon of ale, when Mrs. Stretton made some remarks to her about the bottle and the sixpences, upon which she went to the door, where it appeared the prisoner was standing, and returned with two good sixpences and paid for the ale. Mr. Stretton stated that whilst his wife was filling the bottle, he went round the house to the front door, when the prisoner ran away, but was almost immediately captured. When caught he spit a shilling out of his mouth, which, with three sixpences found in his pocket, were also counterfeit. The whole of the coins, which were marked, and produced by Inspector Thompson, were proved by Mr. Lithgoe, silversmith, of Stafford, to be counterfeit.

The prisoner, in his defence, said he had received the coins in changing some silver.

The jury found him guilty, and he was sentenced to be imprisoned one year to hard labour.”

[A few weeks after being discharged from prison Daniel Hogden was again passing counterfeit coins at Bilston. At the Sessions in March 1853 he was sentenced to eighteen months.]

Richard Travis Openshaw was indicted for feloniously embezzling the sum of £14 on the 27th March; £5 on the 24th April; and £5 on the 5th of June, the moneys of Thomas Tomkinson Riley, at Wolverhampton.

It appeared that the prisoner had been engaged as traveller and book-keeper by the prosecutor, and that his duties were to receive orders and accounts, enter them every day, and pay the amounts received to the prosecutor. On the 27th of March last the prisoner called on a Mr. Shore, who paid him £14, for which he gave him a receipt; but the sum had never been accounted for to the prosecutor. On the 24th of April, in the same year, and also on the 5th June, the prisoner received the sum of £10, £5 on each occasion, but had entered £4 on each date in the day book instead of the amounts received.

Thomas Tomkinson Riley, wine and spirit merchant, at Wolverhampton, said that the prisoner was in his employ as traveller until June, 1855, having been in the service of himself and partner since 1853. His duty was to go round receive orders and money, putting down on his return the amounts received, and accounting to him for them every evening. He produced a book containing all the transactions with the prisoner and their customers. On the 27th March, 1855, there was no entry of a sum of £14, received from Mr. Shore by the prisoner. On 24th April, 1855, there was a sum of £4 entered as received from Mr. Rhodes. The entries in the book were in his handwriting. On the 5th June, 1855, there was an entry of £4 from Mr. Rhodes, as received by the prisoner. The prisoner had £60 per year and his board. On the 8th June, when the entry was made, there was no money due to him – there was money due to the prisoner for money lent. The amount was £173. He (witness) and another put him into a public house, and he was to pay the money back by coming to work as usual. The document produced showed a statement between himself and the prisoner.

Joseph Shore, a publican on the Bilston Road, said he had purchased goods of the last witness. On 25th March, 1855, the prisoner called and asked for money, and he gave him £14, taking off £1 12s as discount.

William Rhodes, publican, of Bilston, deposed to having on two occasions paid the prisoner £5. He recollected the prisoner and prosecutor calling in December last; the prisoner came in first, when he (witness) asked if he had brought the bill, to which the prisoner replied, ‘Say nothing to the master – when I come I’ll bring it right.’

The Jury returned a verdict of guilty, accompanied with a recommendation to mercy; and his Lordship sentenced the prisoner to two months’ imprisonment with hard labour.”

"An inquest was held yesterday, at the house of Mr. Butler, the KINGS HEAD, Broad Street, Bilston, by Mr. W. H. Phillips, Deputy-Coroner, on the body of William Elton Needham, aged five weeks, whose death was supposed to have been caused by an overdose of some sleeping mixture.

The first witness called was Eliza Needham, the mother of the deceased, and wife of William Needham, a grocer, residing at New Village, Ettingshall, who said that the child had usually been in good health. On Friday last the deceased was cross, and witness, by the advice of Mrs. Proverbs, a neighbour, purchased a poppy-head at the grocer's, boil it in water, and gave some of the fluid to the deceased. Witness purchased one poppy-head from Mr. Butler, a grocer, at New Village, and there was a quarter of a pint of the liquid remaining after its having been boiled a quarter of a hour. Her mother gave the child two teaspoonfuls. The deceased gradually became quieted after taking the fluid, between ten and eleven at night, and slept very nicely until five o'clock next morning, when he would not take the breast. Witness went for a medical man and Mr. Hancox, surgeon, and Mr. Gray, chemist, came, and Mr. Gray administered some medicine. Witness afterwards took the child to Mr. Larkin, surgeon. The child died at half-past five the same afternoon; it had continued sleeping most of the day. The deceased was not in any burial club, nor was its life insured in any office. Witness had thrown away the remainder of the poppy water.

The Coroner pointed out to the witness the danger of dealing with narcotics in the case of children, and advised her to refrain from such a practice for the future, at the same time observing that had the mixture been given to the deceased by any third party, a criminal charge might have been the result. He trusted the press would aid him in cautioning mothers against such dangerous practices.

Mr. G. Liddington, chemist, was sent for, and requested by the Coroner to state, for the benefit of the public, the strength of the liquid which would be produced by the boiling of one poppy head in a specified quantity of water, namely, one pint. Mr. Liddington stated that the liquid administered was a poison, but he could not say what quantity would occasion death.

The Jury at once returned a verdict of 'Died from the innocent administration of poppy-water.'

It is right to state that all the medical gentlemen whose names have appeared in this report were engaged at the Stafford Sessions, and therefore could not attend the inquest; and that Mr. Gray, the chemist, was also absent from home. Before she left the room the Coroner again cautioned the mother of the deceased against using drugs, except under medical advice, which, if her means did not permit her to obtain at her own cost, was provided for her by law."

"The Engineers Head-Quarters at Bilston is at the KINGS HEAD INN, Broad Street, where all communications will be promptly attended to.

The Miner and Workman's Advocate taken in weekly."

The Miner and Workman's Advocate 1/10/1864

"Engineers Union.

To the Editor of the Miner and Workman's Advocate.

Sir, In your impression of the 24th of September appeared a paragraph signed 'A Colliery Engineer,' who said he had a right to canvass the affairs of the association, and I believe he has a right to do so, so long as he does so in truth and honour; but when he deviates from the path of truth and rectitude, I think it proper to call upon him to deny his false assertions, or to give his name and come forth to prove what he has said. In the first place, the assertion that he gave the complainant 14s is false, and that any such sum was paid from the branch fund we deny, and I now challenge the 'Colliery Engineer' or the secretary of his branch to come forward to prove that it is correct.

By inserting this you will greatly oblige, your truly, William Butler, Treasurer to the said Branch.

KINGS HEAD INN, Broad Street, Bilston, September 24, 1864.

PS. I shall decline answering any more anonymous letters."

"To the Benevolent Public and Enginemen Especially.

To the Editor of the Miner and Workman's Advocate.

Sir, Knowing your willingness at all times to benefit the working classes, I crave a small space in your valuable paper respecting an engineman, named Samuel Crew, who met with an accident through a man starting his engine. After suffering upwards of three months, amputation of the leg was deemed necessary. It being above the knee, an artificial one will come very expensive. He now makes an appeal by the following petition.

Commonside, Pensnett, January 1865.

Your humble petitioner, Samuel Crew, engineman, was disabled under the employment of the Right Hon. the Earl of Dudley, at the No.41, Old Park Colliery, and has since suffered amputation of the leg. He now appeals to the benevolent public, and enginemen especially, for a subscription to enable him to get an artificial one. By doing so he may again be enabled to follow his usual occupation, or any other his capabilities may allow. Donations will be thankfully received; and for his benefactors he will ever pray.

NB. The nature of his accident and the circumstances under which he met with the same are well-known throughout the district to which he belongs. All donations and donors names will be acknowledged through the public press.

Post-office orders to be made payable to Samuel Rushton, Dudley Post Office, or to Mr. William Butler, KINGS HEAD INN, Broad Street, Bilston, South Staffordshire, National Treasurer to the Engineers Philanthropic Association. About £12 is already collected.

By inserting the above this week you will greatly oblige your obedient servant, Samuel Rushton, Secretary to the above subscription. Woodside, near Dudley, January 30, 1865."

"Mr. W. H. Phillips, Deputy Coroner, held an inquest, in Bilston, on Monday afternoon, on the body of Thomas Green, deputy engineer of a water shaft on the Stow Heath Colliery of Messrs. Sparrow and Co, Ettingshall, who had died on the previous Friday. The deceased had been down the shaft to superintend some repairs, and was being drawn up, when, by some means, he fell out of the skip, and was killed. His brother-in-law, Police-constable Denston, was at the mouth of the shaft at the time, and finding that the man in charge of the horse which turned the winding apparatus was drunk, would not allow him to proceed with his work. The Jury were very much inclined to commit the driver for manslaughter, but, after long deliberation, returned a verdict of Accidental Death, at the same time censuring him."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 27/12/1865 - Correspondence

"To the Editor of the Daily Gazette.

Sir, Thomas Green, engineer, was killed in an engine pit at Stow Heath Colliery on the 20th of November last, under Mr. John Sparrow, and left his widow with four young daughters, and she has since given birth to two other twin daughters, making a total of six, and not one of them able to get a penny, and as the whole of the mother's time will be required to nurse and attend to those children, the whole seven are entirely dependent upon charity. This is really a needy case, and my object in giving it publicity is to procure as much money for the widow as would enable her to manage some business at home, whereby to assist in maintaining herself and children.

The smallest donation will be thankfully received by Mr. Daniel Morris, chief engineer, Stow Heath; Mr. William Butler, KINGS HEAD INN, Broad Street, Bilston; Mr. Joseph Hancox, SHIP AND RAINBOW, Highfields, near Bilston.

By inserting the above in your valuable paper you will greatly oblige.

“Bilston Police Court. Florence Winyard, 37, Broad Street, Bilston, summoned her husband, John Winyard, Oatmeal Square, Bilston, for desertion, and applied for a maintenance order.

Mr. A. J. Glover appeared for the complainant, and Mr. Pritchard for defendant.

Mr. Pritchard having intimated that desertion would not be disputed, Mr. Glover said he could considerably shorten the case, as it was now resolved itself into a question of means. The parties were married on the 8th December, 1920, complainant being then a widow with three children. Defendant also was a widower with several grown-up children. There was one child, aged four months, of the present marriage. Defendant formerly kept a licensed house in Broad Street, Bilston, but on 30th October he gave it up. He bought himself a new house and went to it, but told complainant that he would not have her there. He had previously told her that he should cease living with her. He said he would let the matter be brought before the Court, and whatever the magistrates put on him he would pay. He had recently repeated that assertion, week after week, and, as he at last put it into effect, the complainant took out a summons for desertion. With regard to defendant's means, when complainant married him she was a licensee in Bilston, but she gave up that business and went to live at defendant's licensed premises. While living together there defendant used to give her £7 10s to £8 per week for household expenses. He was then not only a license-holder, but also carried on business as a wood-turner and case-maker, in which he employed two men and two boys. Shortly after the marriage, defendant showed her some figures, and told her he had £3,000 invested in war loans and in the bank. Complainant now had herself to keep, also the child of the last marriage, and the children of the former marriage. Therefore, he (Mr. Glover) appealed to the magistrates to make an order for the full amount of £2 per week for complainant herself, and 10s per week for the young child of the marriage with defendant. He understood that she could not claim anything for the children by the former marriage, although defendant was well aware that she had them when he married her. In addition to buying the new house referred to, defendant must have received a good sum for fixtures and stock at the licensed house which he vacated, and therefore could not be short of means.

Complainant stated that she married defendant at Wolverhampton Registry Office, on 8th December, 1920. She was then a widow, with three children. There was one child living of her marriage to defendant. It was born on the 14th August last. On 30th of last month defendant left the public house, and went to a private house which he had bought. On the day they were leaving the public house, she went to the bar door and asked defendant if she could go to the private house, and he said she could not, even if she took proceeding against him. He said he would have the children, but not her. He had made similar remarks on many occasions. He had many times told her to clear out, and said that whatever separation allowance the magistrates ordered him to pay he would be willing to pay. Knowing that defendant would not have her at the private house, she did not go to it. She took the four children and went into lodgings. Defendant had not given her any money since then. Defendant used to allow her between £7 10s and £8 per week for the whole of the household expenses. He had carried on business as a wood-turner and case-maker for about 18 years, and still had the business. She believed defendant gave £575 for the private house, and spent about £12 on repairs. About a week after they were married defendant showed her some figures. They represented about £3,000, and defendant said that was what he was worth in War Savings Certificates and money in the bank. He also received money from the sale of the stock and fixtures at the public house.

Mr. Pritchard: Did you ever see the certificates for £3,000?

Complainant: No, he has taken care never to let me see them.

Mr. Pritchard: You say he showed you the figures?

Complainant: Yes they were written on a piece of cardboard. It was one night in the bedroom, and he said, 'You can go into the street tomorrow knowing that you are worth £3,000.'

Mr. Pritchard: Have you never seen any evidence of it?

Complainant: No; but I have seen some certificates.

In the witness box defendant said he was quite willing for a separation order to be made, as he thought it was most desirable at the present moment. It was impossible for himself and complainant to live together. He would offer her £1 a week for herself and child. She was capable of taking a business. When he bought the private house complainant said she would not live with him there. She said she had been used to a business house, and she must go to another. He then told her he would never go to another public house, as that was the cause of all their trouble. With regard to the £3,000, it was not true that he had that much invested. Whatever there was complainant had had her share of it, and the other had been used up. He had lost money at the public house, but there had been a little profit on the wood-turning business. He had five sons living with him in the private house.

Mr. Glover: Do you seriously make an offer of only £1 per week to complainant for herself and children, and suggest that is enough?

Defendant: Yes.

Mr. Glover: I repeat the question. Do you seriously offer her only £1 per week for herself and children, and suggest that is enough?

Defendant: Yes; if she takes another business, as she intends to do.

Mr. Glover: What do you say are the profits and the wood-turning business?

Defendant: Very little; £1 per week would clear it. I lost money on the public house.

Mr. Glover: Will you swear you have not been making more than £1 per week profit at the wood-turning business?

Defendant: Recently I have not. I lost £104 on the public house last year.

Mr. Glover: Have you four sons living with you?

Defendant: Yes.

Mr. Glover: What do they pay you?

Defendant: One is out of work, and the other three, when working, pay 25s per week each for their board and lodging.

The Bench made an order for defendant to contribute £2 per week to complainant, and 10/- per week for the child, defendant also to pay two guineas solicitor's fee."

'Two Notorious Public Houses In Bilston'

".....But if the SWAN was rowdy, the LAMB AND FLAG of Salop Street was positively the most riotous in the area, and was also a great resort of ironworkers. Standing as it did on high ground it was known as HILL HOUSE, but as riotous repute increased so it gradually assumed more suitably to Hell House. Tommy Banks, who kept the house for a time, was a big burly character who in addition to keeping the inn also managed the butchery department of the noted Banks' tommy-shop. He entered into all of the excesses of the place with gusto and was locally known as the devil One singular feature of the inn was that it stood in the Parish of Sedgley and for that reason after became a sanctuary for men under pursuit when the cry was raised that the local bobby was on his rounds. Culprits simply entered the inn out of his jurisdiction The inn had quite spacious cellars where dog fights and cock fights took place Trading at the inn appears to have ceased early in the century."

"An inquest was held yesterday (Tuesday) at the HILL HOUSE, Bilston, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, on the body of William Perks, six years of age, who was very badly burnt by his clothes catching fire in his mother's house, in Shropshire Row, on Tuesday, the 13th instant. The boy lingered until the 16th instant, when he expired at his grand-mother's house. The accident took place during the absence of the child's mother, a widow, who was following her ordinary occupation at Mr. Baldwin's tin works. The boy had been left in charge of his grand-mother, but subsequently went into his mother's house, where the accident occurred. Verdict, Accidental Death."

"Bilston Petty Sessions, on Friday, the 4th instant.....

Edmund Bate, a puddler, was charged with attempting to utter a counterfeit shilling. George Parkes, an assistant to Mr. Banks, the HILL HOUSE, Shropshire Row, stated that on Thursday afternoon the prisoner came into his master's house and called for a pint of ale, in payment of which he tendered a shilling, which on examination proved to be counterfeit. On being told that it was bad, he produced a good one, paid for the ale, and left the house. Information was given to the police, and the prisoner was shortly afterwards apprehended, and on being searched, four counterfeit shillings were found in his pocket. Police-constable John Oldridge stated that he searched the prisoner's house the same evening, and found two counterfeit shillings in his clothes on the bed. They all appeared to have been made in the same mould. On searching the pantry he found a Britannia metal coffee-pot hid behind the lumps of coal, and upon making inquiries he found that it had been stolen from Mr. Henry James Lester, landlord of the SHAKSPERE INN, and that the prisoner had been drinking there the same day. The prisoner, who said nothing in defence, was remanded till Tuesday, in order to communicate with the Mint authorities.”

“Staffordshire Adjourned Sessions.....

Edmund Bate, 22 (who yesterday pleaded guilty to a charge of having uttered a counterfeit shilling at Bilston), was charged with stealing a coffee-pot from the house of Henry James Lister, at Bilston. The prisoner was found guilty. A prior conviction at the Adjourned Epiphany Sessions of last year, for uttering counterfeit coin (when he was imprisoned for six months), was proved against the prisoner. For stealing the coffee-pot he was sentenced to one month's imprisonment; and for the uttering, twelve months' imprisonment, the sentence to commence at the expiration of the former.”

“An inquest was held on Friday, at the LAMB AND FLAG, Shropshire Row, Bilston, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, on the bodies of Jabez Richards, aged eleven years, and Daniel Caddick, aged nine, who were drowned while bathing in the canal near the iron works of Mr. Banks. It appeared that they got out of their depth, and being unable to swim, they were drowned before assistance could be rendered. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

“On Tuesday, an inquest was held at the LAMB AND FLAG, Shropshire Row, Bilston, on the body of Joseph Arnold, a child two years old. The cause of death was attributable to the coffee pot having been upset and most of the scalding contents having fallen upon the chest of the deceased.”

Chester Courant 2/1/1861

“From the result of the inquest held at the LAMB INN, Shropshire Row, Bilston, before Mr. T. M. Phillips, as to the cause of death of Maria Pearson and her youngest daughter, Harriet Pearson, it would appear that the statements with regard to their having been poisoned were at least premature, and that their death may have been caused by suffocation.

Pearson went to his work on the day previous to his wife's death, as watchman for Mr. Baldwin, as usual, leaving his wife and four daughters at home. They partook of supper about half-past nine o'clock, and about an hour later they went to bed. They reside in a small cottage, which has only one room below, one bed-room, and a small attic above it, which was never used. The whole of the family, therefore, slept in one bed-room, which is very small, and must have been exceedingly unhealthy when the confined air was breathed by five persons. In preparing for Christmas, the floor of the bed-room had been washed on Friday, and to obviate the dampness consequent upon this a fire was lighted in the room, and supplied with coke. Owing to its form, the chimney was not sufficient to carry off the deleterious vapours arising from the combustion of the coke, and on retiring to rest they noticed that there was a strong smell of sulphur in the room. Instead of taking proper precautions, and opening both the door and the window, they took the worst course possible in placing more coke upon the fire and closing the chamber door, not being aware of the dangerous position in which they were placing themselves. Ann Maria and Eliza got into the bed nearest the door, where there was a slight draught, owing to which they were probably saved from the fate of their mother and youngest sister, who, with Hannah, slept together in another bed.

A post mortem examination has been made on the bodies of the deceased, but no trace of poison had been discovered.”

Mr. Fellows, solicitor, applied for a license on behalf of Thomas Holland, the owner and occupier of the PRINCE OF WALES, Shropshire Row. The house had been put on land near to Mr. Perry's foundry, and amongst some eighty houses that had been built in the past two years. The only opposition was from the owner, not the occupier, of the LAMB AND FLAG, situated some seventy or eighty yards off; but that house was notoriously incommodious, especially for the holding of inquests and the like, and Mr. Ball, the keeper, had been several times summoned before the magistrates for offences against his license. Mr. Holland, on the contrary, had kept his house without any complaint being made against him, and he had obtained a certificate of character from the Churchwardens and other respectable people of the locality.

Mr. Underhill, in opposing the application, admitted that the house was a good one, but said that inasmuch as Mr. Holland was a member of the firm of Brereton and Co, the magistrates would scarcely believe that it was likely that he would carry on the house. He (Mr. Underhill) apprehended that before their worships granted the application, they would require to know by whom it was intended it should be kept.

Mr. Fellows: It is for no other person than Mr. Holland.

Mr. Underhill, continuing, said that his clients were the Barbor's Field Company, who were the owners of the LAMB AND FLAG. Besides which house, there were some three other licensed houses, the CROWN, the CROWN AND CUSHION, and the ROLLING MILLS, all within 100 yards away. Mr. Fellows contended that they were 250 yards away. Application granted.”

The capital Old-Licensed PUBLIC HOUSE and Premises, called the “Lamb and Flag,” in the occupation of Mr. James Ball; and Five LABOURERS' COTTAGES. Also the House, Workshops, Rope Walk, and Premises, in the occupation of Mr. Hawley, part of which is held under a lease for an unexpired term of 61 years.

The above Estate is eligibly situated near to the centre of the Town of Bilston, and by means of the continuation of the new street, called Dudley Street, into Shropshire Row, will afford many valuable Sites for Building. “Yesterday (Tuesday) afternoon, three youths recklessly ventured on the ice at the Old Bankfield pool, Bradley, when the ice, which was rotten, suddenly gave way, and precipitated all three into the water. Two of the three, after some difficulty, succeeded in getting to land, but the third, a youth named John Stubbs, 15 years of age, who resided with his parents in Bradley Street, Bilston, was unfortunately drowned. The deceased’s companions gave information of the occurrence to Police-constable Clarke, of the Bradley Police Station, who at once proceeded to the scene of the fatality, and, with the assistance of a number of bystanders, the pool was dragged. The jury, after hearing the evidence of the boy Joseph Pargeter, who was bathing with the deceased, returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

“An adjourned inquest was held at the LAMB AND FLAG INN, Salop Street, Bilston, this (Thursday) afternoon on the body of a child, named Harry Aston, whose death was reported on Monday.

William Mott Hancox, surgeon, said that on the 4th instant he received a note from the relieving officer to attend deceased. He visited the child on that day and found it in a dying condition. He observed an abrasion upon the forehead and left side of the face, which, he was told, were caused by scalds. He also found an abrasion on the right foot. On Monday he made a post mortem examination of the body, assisted by Dr. Cameron, surgeon, of Bilston. The body weighed six pounds and a half, and presented a very emaciated appearance. The abdomen was collapsed, and the body reduced to a mere skeleton. Externally he found an extensive abrasion of the skull, extending over the left side of the forehead and nose; also similar injuries on the right instep and on the foot. There were also two blue marks on the left side of the cheek and a bruise on the left hand. On opening the child he found the lungs pale, collapsed, and bloodless. The heart and large vessels were destitute of blood. The stomach contained one ounce of coagulated milk. The whole of the intestines and the brain were slightly congested. The result of the post mortem enabled him to arrive at the conclusion that the child had not received sufficient nourishment during life. He should think the scalds had existed for six or seven days. If the child had died from starvation or from scalds he should not have found any material difference in the appearance of the child in post mortem. The irritation from the scalds might have prevented the child taking the necessary substances, but would not have prevented it altogether from taking food in small quantities. The bruise might have been produced by slight pressure on the skin, owing to the impoverished condition of the blood. In answer to a question from the coroner, Dr. Hancox said the child had died of starvation, accelerated by scalds. In reply to a further question, he said he should think the child had been neglected from its birth, more or less, to produce such a state of things as the post mortem showed.

William Upton, puddler, said he recollected the mother of the child coming to live with them about 11 weeks ago, accompanied by Aston. They did not sleep together as man and wife. Aston paid for the lodgings, and for the support of the woman and child. When the child came to his house it was small, but appeared well. The child always took nourishment when it was offered to it. Aston generally fed it himself, because the mother was not so sharp as she should be, though she seemed capable of taking care of herself. They lodged about three weeks with witness, and then they went to live by themselves. There was no alarm called when the child was scalded. Witness had heard Aston say it was his child, and also heard him deny it. He had never heard Aston threaten, or seen him hit the child. Aston had been all the time in full work.

Mary Ann Goodreid said she saw the baby when Aston and the mother came to live in the court; it was a poor little creature. While the deceased's parents were living at Upton's, the mother did not pay proper attention to the child. When they went into housekeeping witness visited them most days. On the Tuesday after the child was scalded she went into the house, and asked how the scalds had happened. The child's mother replied, 'Don't say anything, because Aston had said he would do something at her, and go and leave her.' The mother told witness Aston was putting his shirt on and pulled the saucepan on to the child. She also said Aston told her, if anyone asked about the baby, to tell them that it had broke out with the measles. The scalds had no dressing upon them whatever. Aston told her the child's bottle was broke and no use. He broke the bottle purposely. The child always took food when it was offered it in witness's presence.

William Upton said one morning in September, while Aston and the mother were lodging at his father's home, he and Aston were in the same room sleeping. They had both been working nights, and when they were in bed the deceased's mother brought the child to Aston and it began to cry. Aston then struck the child, and it had a black eye. Joseph Upton, an intelligent little fellow of eleven, who satisfactorily answered the coroner's inquiries as to his knowledge of an oath, said he slept with Aston while the latter lived at his mother's house. Just after they came to witness's father's house deceased's mother brought the child to Aston in bed, and he struck the child on its face, and said he would quieten it. He also shook the child, and kept on shaking it till the child was quiet.

Ann Atkins said she remembered seeing the child one morning in Mrs. Upton's arms; it had a black eye and a bruise up each side of its neck. This was when Aston and the mother resided at Upton's. Aston threatened Mrs. Upton for showing the child. She heard nothing more of the child until last Wednesday week, when deceased was found in bed. Witness had given both the mother and child food since they had been in housekeeping. The child could always eat when it had food given it. Witness considered the mother capable of nursing the baby.

Joseph Corbett said Aston worked with him until the last week. During the last month Aston had earned £3 9s 10d, out of which 17s 10d had been paid to him, and his wife the remainder.

Louisa Freeman had seen bruises on the child on two occasions. One of the bruises was on the eye, and one under the chin. When the witness Talbot brought the deceased to her house on the Wednesday morning the child was in a most wretched and neglected condition. Witness attended to the child after it was brought from the Hospital, and fed it on the Thursday with milk, but he only took about two teaspoonfuls at a time. On the Friday the child took less milk still, and died on Saturday. The mother was capable of minding her own child, though not quite sharp. Witness had seen deceased's mother rush out of the house.

Emily Pearson, daughter of a previous witness, said she was an in-patient in the Wolverhampton Hospital about five months ago, when the mother of the deceased, who was suffering from gathered breasts, became an in-patient. Dr. Winter attended upon them, and gave the child, who was with its mother, medicine three times a day.

The Coroner said it was material that the jury should know what was the condition of the child at that time, and he thought they had better have evidence of Dr. Winter on the point.

The inquiry was accordingly adjourned for this purpose until Friday, the 18th inst."

"The adjourned inquest on the body of the child Harry Bailey, who died under circumstances already reported, was held at the LAMB AND FLAG, Salop Row, Bilston, before W. H. Phillips, Esq, district coroner.

Henry Trimmer Winter, house surgeon at Wolverhampton Hospital, said he remembered the mother of the deceased being in the Hospital. She went in on April 11th, and came out on the 24th May. The child which she had with her was a very small one, but might have been reared by careful nursing. The child was under treatment when the mother was in the Hospital, at which time the mother was in such a state as to nurse and care for it herself.

In answer to the foreman, witness said the medicine the child had was a tonic to strengthen it.

Mary Ann Rigby said she lived next door to Priscilla Aston's father's at Priestfield, and witness took her to the Workhouse to be confined. During that time she did not visit her because the authorities would not allow any one to do so. When the mother and child came from the Workhouse the child was very thin. The mother suckled it until her breasts got bad, and she had to go to the Hospital on that account. When the child came out of the Hospital it was a nice child, but thin. On the Wednesday, when Mary Talbot found the child in bed scalded, she saw it, and it then looked to be in a dying condition; but she did not notice that it was much thinner. It then took milk freely, and did not vomit after it. She saw the child daily after until it died. She never saw the mother ill use the baby, and was of opinion that she was as sound in mind as she (witness) was, and quite capable of taking care of the child.

Elizabeth Upton, recalled, said when she saw the father strike the baby the mother was not present. The child had a bruise on the eye.

After the Coroner had read over the evidence, Aston, the father of the child, and Mrs. Pearson, one of the witnesses, came to him and said it would be better to burn the tube of the child's bottle. She asked him what he should get for the child, and he replied, 'We can't afford best milk, but it shall have a pint of skim a day.' She said she would not get skim milk.

Priscilla Aston, the mother of the deceased, said her husband had beaten the child dreadfully at times. She heard him smack it several times. On Saturday night, when he scalded the baby, he beat her as well. She did not know of the scalds till she came back from Bilston. When she asked her husband what was the matter with the baby, he replied, 'Shut up,' and she let it be till Sunday morning. He would not let his mother-in-law see the baby, or let any one else see it.

The Coroner then summed up. He said they had to consider how this child Harry Bailey came to his death, and they must be guided in their verdict entirely by the evidence they had heard in that room, and not from any kind of rumour or report which they might have heard circulated in the neighbourhood. They had heard that this child was from the first a very delicate child, and one that the mother was not able to suckle and rear herself in consequence of her having gathered breasts. They had heard from the surgeon to the Wolverhampton Hospital that the child was, when in that institution, a very delicate and weakly child, and such was its history all along. That this child was very improperly treated whilst in the care of Aston before their marriage was undoubted, and that he ill treated it in a very brutal manner. At the same time they had to consider the actual cause of death, and they would have to be guided very much by the medical evidence of Mr. Hancox. He had told them that the child had died of starvation, accelerated by scalds. He said in his evidence, also, that the child being scalded, would exhibit feverish symptoms, which would tend to make the child refuse to take food freely. They would consider whether the scalds which were on the child prevented it from taking food. At the same time, if they believed that starvation was the actual cause of death, and was brought about by the ill treatment and neglect of the father, or the mother, or both, then they had the power to bring in a verdict of manslaughter against one or both.

The jury, after a lengthened deliberation, returned a verdict of Manslaughter against Harry Aston and Priscilla Aston, his wife."

"Staffordshire Assizes.....

Harry Aston (22), puddler, and Priscilla Aston (23), his wife, were indicted for killing and slaying Harry Bailey, an infant, on the 29th October last, at Bilston. Mr. Plumptree prosecuted, and Mr. Jackson, at the request of his lordship, defended the prisoners.

It seems that in February last the woman, who was not then married, was confined of a boy at Wolverhampton workhouse, the man being the putative father of the child. Whilst in the workhouse the female prisoner appeared to behave well to her offspring, and towards August the two prisoners, along with the child, obtained lodgings at the house of a Mrs. Upton, in Bilston. In October the prisoners were married, at which time the child was weakly and emaciated, and subsequently some of the neighbours noticed that the infant was scarred over one eye and other parts of the body. The child was taken by them to the hospital, and its sores dressed, and subsequently the prisoners were requested to call in a doctor, but they declined, though eventually the medical officer of the Union attended the infant. He found it was in a rapidly-sinking condition, and it shortly afterwards died.

The male prisoner was a puddler, in constant work; and even if he had had no money to provide food for the child, it was urged on behalf of the prosecution that he ought to have applied for relief, instead of acting in the manner he did.

Witnesses were called, some of whom spoke to the female prisoner being without food herself at times, and thus was unable to provide for the infant; and others to seeing the male prisoner thrash the baby because it would not be quiet. Dr. Hancocks stated that on the 7th November he made a post mortem examination of the body, which weighed but 6½lb, and presented an extremely emaciated appearance, being reduced to a mere skeleton. He found extensive abrasions over the left forehead, and smaller ones on the instep. In the stomach was a little coagulated milk, which showed that the child had been fed before death. He attributed death to starvation, in not having received sufficient nourishment during life.

Dr. Winter also gave evidence to seeing the child before death, when it was in a weakly condition, and his opinion was that it might have lived if it had good nursing and good food.

The jury acquitted the prisoners; and the learned Judge said he was sorry to find they had been prisoners so long a time on such a charge. No evidence was offered on a second count, charging them with not providing the child with sufficient food, and the prisoners were discharged."

Darlaston Weekly Times 6/9/1884

"On Sunday afternoon, whilst Mr. John Fletcher and his wife, of the LAMB AND FLAG INN, Bradley, were driving home from Coseley, they met with an accident. A heavy shower of rain came on, and while Mr. Fletcher was trying to open his umbrella, the off-wheel of the trap came into contact with a bank, and the vehicle was overturned, and the occupants thrown out. Some persons soon came to their assistance, and they were removed to Tettenhall, and, after there resting a short time, were taken home. Mrs. Fletcher escaped with a shaking, but Mr. Fletcher sustained severe injuries."

“E. B. Thorneycroft, Esq, deputy-coroner, held an inquest on Monday afternoon, at the LAMB AND FLAG INN, Bradley, touching the death of William Attley (60), carter, of Moxley.

From the evidence it appears that deceased was on Friday evening in charge of a horse and wagon, when on driving past Messrs. Hatton's Ironworks a steam whistle blew, which caused the animal to rear, throwing deceased violently against a brick wall. When picked up it was found that he had sustained very severe injuries. He was conveyed to the LAMB AND FLAG INN where the unfortunate man died before medical aid could be rendered.

“The Borough Coroner (Mr. W. H. Phillips) held an inquest at the LAMB AND FLAG INN, Bradley, on Tuesday afternoon, on the body of Mary Smith (22), wife of Henry Mortiboy Smith, roll turner, of Broad Street, Bilston.

Deceased went to bed with her husband about ten o'clock on Sunday night. Early on Monday morning he woke up and missed her. On going downstairs he found some notes on the table which deceased had written, stating that she was tired of life, and that the next time she would be seen in a watery grave near the Bankfield Works. Shortly after three o'clock on Monday morning Edwin Turner, boatman, of Hall Green, was passing along the canal side, when he found deceased's hat and shawl and a pair of gloves. He informed Police-constable Tytherleigh, who went with him to the place. They looked about, and at length found the body of the deceased in the water. She had attempted suicide about five years ago.

“Walsall County Court.....

John Barton, coachbuilder, Holly Edge Lane, sued James Osborne, landlord of the LAMB AND FLAG, Bradley, near Bilston, for £10 10s, being the price agreed for a barrel organ. Mr. Cotterell appeared for plaintiff, and Mr. A. Whitehouse for the defence.

Mr. Cotterell, in opening his case, said that the plaintiff, John Barton, was a man very well known in the town as a coachbuilder, and he also dealt with odd things which he purchased now and again, and amongst some things he bought was a barrel organ, about which the dispute had arisen. The barrel organ in question originally cost £150, and it was for many years at the SHAKESPEARE, and was knocked down to a witness he had present for £10. That witness was subsequently offered £15 but did not sell it.

Mr. Whitehouse: Really, I cannot have the history of the organ. I will let your Honour send in any musical man in Walsall to hear the machine, and if he says it was a musical instrument in any sense of the word he would pay for it. It was simply a piece of furniture and nothing more.

Mr. Cotterell said the plaintiff wanted to sell it, and a man named Partridge, of Sedgley, saw it and recommended the defendant to buy it. Mrs. Osborne came and saw the machine, said she should like it, and eventually she agreed to purchase it. It would not play then, and she was told that if she liked to have it play he would get it repaired. His client got it repaired by a Mr. Lord at a cost of £3 10s, and it was subsequently taken to the house. Mrs. Osborne gave the men two pints of beer for taking it, and as one was a teetotaller she gave him a cup of coffee. The organ was filled up and started to play, but defendant complained that it did not play long enough.

The plaintiff Barton gave evidence in support of the statements of his solicitor, and said that Mr. Osborne offered them £1 to take the instrument back. He also said that he had sued both Mr. and Mrs. Osborne, but the latter made the purchase.

Mr. Whitehouse: There is not a semblance of a tune in the instrument at all; there is not as much in it as a bagpipe.

Mr. Cotterell: I do not know whether my friend is musical, he may have been.

His Honour contended that Mr. Cotterell must sue against either Mr. or Mrs. Osborne, and prove that Mrs. Osborne has a separate estate.

Mr. Cotterell then said that he would now ask that the case against Mrs. Osborne be struck out, and the case be heard against Mr. Osborne.

Mr. Whitehouse (to plaintiff): Did you sell the organ to the defendant as a piece of furniture or a musical instrument?

Plaintiff: I sold it as a barrel organ that would not play; I sold it as it stood. I would not care for anyone to test its musical qualities (laughter).

Mr. Whitehouse: Did you tell Mrs. Osborne that you were selling it because music was stopped at Walsall? Plaintiff said that he did tell her so and that in was in consequence of an order of the magistrates. His Honour gave verdict for the defendant with costs."

"SPOTTED LEOPARD, Bilston, Old Established Public House.

To be Disposed of by Private Treaty, the License, Goodwill, and Immediate Possession of that well-known old established Public House, in High Street, near the Market Place, Bilston, known by the sign of the SPOTTED LEOPARD. The present occupier, having carried on the business successfully for more than forty years, is now necessitated to retire on account of infirmity and old age. Any one in want of a public house would find this a desirable investment. It is the best situation in the populous and thriving town of Bilston, with stables, yard, and piggeries, and is a good market house. The stock, &c, to be taken at a fair valuation.

To treat for the same apply to Mr. John Morris, New Cross, Wednesfield."

"Wolverhampton Police Court.....

William Clark, who had been several times remanded, was brought up today and committed for trial for passing base coin. It appeared that he first attempted to put off a counterfeit florin at the house of Edward Foster, the LEOPARD INN, Bilston, on Monday, the 13th ult, but it being discovered to be a bad one it was returned to him. He then went to the SEVEN STARS INN, offered the coin in payment for something to drink, and it was received, and not discovered to be spurious until after he had left the house. On the same day he attempted to utter a bad shilling at the shop of Mr. Dangerfield, provision dealer, in the same town. The prisoner was apprehended by Sergeant Heath, but denied the charge."

AND

"Staffordshire Adjourned Sessions.....

William Clarke, 27, labourer, was indicted for uttering and putting off a false and counterfeit florin, well knowing the same to be false and counterfeit. Mr. Davis appeared on behalf of the authorities at the Mint; the prisoner was undefended.

From the evidence it appeared that the prisoner went to the provision shop of Joseph Dangerfield, at Bilston, and tendered a shilling in payment of some small purchases which he made. Mr. Dangerfield told the prisoner that the shilling was counterfeit and broke it with his teeth, upon which the prisoner tendered a good shilling, and appeared very desirous that the counterfeit coin should be returned to him, but this was not done. At a later period of the same day the prisoner went to the SEVEN STARS public house in Bilston, and called for a pint of ale, for which he tendered a florin, which was counterfeit, and which he had previously attempted to put off at a shop in Bilston, where he had been warned against trying to pass it at any other place.

The fact of the coins being clumsy counterfeits was proved by Mr. Lithgoe, of Stafford, who stated that the florins were without dates. In the many years experience which he had had in attending as a witness in cases of this description he had never before met with so singular a mistake.

The jury at once found the prisoner guilty, and he was sentenced to one year's imprisonment."

They were to meet and draw up articles on Thursday last, at the SPOTTED LEOPARD INN, to increase the stakes into £2, and appoint a stakeholder."

"At the Wolverhampton County Court, last week, Richard Churm, miner, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, brought an action against Owen Smith, a sergeant in the Bilston police force, to recover £15 damages for false imprisonment. Mr. Bartlett was for the plaintiff, and Mr. Owen defended.

Both parties, with other companions, were at the SPOTTED LEOPARD public house, Bilston, on the 20th of April, and a disagreement arising out of a wager, it was suggested that plaintiff should stake his money with the defendant, who was in plain clothes. Plaintiff demurred to this, as he did not know him; whereupon defendant, as was alleged, abused him, and said he was one of the biggest scamps in Bilston. An angry altercation followed, and they went out to fight, when Smith pulled out a pair of handcuffs and struck plaintiff on the head until he became senseless; and then, with the assistance of two other officers, took him into custody. Next morning he was charged before the Magistrates with assaulting the defendant, but the case was dismissed.

For the defence it was set up that the plaintiff was the aggressor, that the defendant only acted in self-defence, and that the Magistrates dismissed the charge, not because they believed it had not been proved, but because they thought the plaintiff had been sufficiently punished. Defendant had been twelve years in the force, and bore an excellent character.

His Honour admitted that a man had a right to defend himself from attack, but in taking his assailant into custody he was bound not to use unnecessary violence. In the present instance he considered unjustifiable violence had been exercised, and he strongly reprehended the practice of constables striking with the handcuffs. His Honour gave judgement for the plaintiff, damages £5."

“At the County Court, on Thursday, before A. M. Skinner, Esq. judge, and a jury, Elizabeth Ashton, widow of George Ashton, a deceased member of Court 3502 Sons of Freedom, of the Order of Foresters, holding its meetings at the LEOPARD INN, Bilston, sought to recover from the society £9 4s, the balance of £10 which she alleged to be due to her in respect of a funeral donation payable by the society on the decease of her husband. Mr. Walker appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Thurstans for the defendants.

The defence was, first, that the plaintiff had sued the wrong society, it being the district fund which was liable, if there was any liability at all, to pay the amount, but the substantial answer to the claim was that at the time of his death Ashton was ‘suspended’ from the benefits of the society on account of owing arrears of fines and subscriptions. The society, however, failed to prove that they gave notice, as required by the rules, informing Ashton that unless he paid the money due by a certain date he would be suspended, and a verdict was accordingly given for the plaintiff for the amount claimed.”

“.....Mr. E. Foster, who was defended by Mr. Bowen, attended on a summons charging him with spitting in the face of Mr. William Wilkes, shoemaker, of Darlaston, and for whom Mr. Ebsworth, of Walsall, appeared. The quarrel out of which the complaint arose took place at the late annual meeting for the election of Commissioners for Bilston. The case for the complainant was that at the close of the meeting defendant called him a foul name, pushed him, and finally spat in his face. The defence was that defendant was first insulted, and simply blew in the complainant’s face. He was, however, fined 20s and costs.”

“A few evenings ago, Charles Brown, a porter, in the employ of Mr. William Pratt, grocer, Church Street, Bilston, experienced a narrow escape from death under singular circumstances. He was in the LEOPARD INN, Church Street. A person in handing some coppers to the landlady, dropped a penny into a jug of ale. Brown, a minute afterwards, took up the jug and drank the ale, and the penny also. The coin lodged about three inches down his throat. First Mr. Larkin, surgeon, and then Mr. Malin (assistant to Mr. Best) attempted to extract it, but found such a course impossible, and the last-named gentleman thrust it into the stomach. Medicine was afterwards administered. What ultimately became of the penny is not quite clear; but the man is now well, and goes about his customary work.”

“Peter Nixon, landlord of the HORSE AND JOCKEY INN, Bilston, was charged with being drunk on the licensed premises of John Fowler, landlord of the LEOPARD public house, Church Street, and the latter was charged with permitting the drunkenness.

At five minutes past 12 on Tuesday night, Police-constables McGuire and Downey were passing down Church Street, when they observed a man coming out of the LEOPARD. They immediately knocked on the door, and enquired of the servant who opened it if anyone was in the house, and she replied no. They, however, went inside and found the defendant Nixon in the bar drunk. The defendant Fowler was found in the back yard. After informing Mr. Fowler of Nixon’s presence in the house, the officers went to the station and reported the case, and about ten minutes later they saw Fowler leading Nixon home.

Mr. Barrow, who defended, urged that Nixon had only drunk one glass of brandy whilst in the house, and that he had not left at closing time owing to a sudden attack of diarrhoea.

The Magistrates was of opinion that the case was perfectly clear, and fined Nixon 10s and costs, and Fowler £1 and costs.”

“Wolverhampton County Court Neast v Fowler.

This was an action to recover £12, the value of a trap. Mr. A. J. Langman for the plaintiff, E. R. Neast, baker, Bilston; and Mr. R. Willcock (Queen Street) for the defendant, John Fowler, landlord of the LEOPARD INN, Bilston.

The plaintiff stated that he had been in the employ of his father, who had been in business as a baker in Church Street. His father was ‘sold up’ for rent in December, and on the 20th of November he (the father) owed him £17 wages, and in lieu of paying him money he sold him the trap in question for which he produced a receipt. The trap was now in possession of the defendant. It transpired that the plaintiff had parted with possession of the trap to Mr. Tart, a provision dealer, as security for a sum of money due on the purchase of flour.

The Judge, without calling on Mr. Willcock for the defence, non-suited the plaintiff, ruling that Mr. Tart, as the person to whom the trap was mortgaged, should be the plaintiff, if an action were brought at all.”

The prisoner, who was formerly employed at Wolverhampton, has lately been lodging at the LEOPARD INN, Church Street, Bilston, and on the 11th inst, as he was going upstairs, he told one of the servants that he should not come down alive. The girl thought he was joking, but shortly afterwards, hearing groans proceed from his room, she called the landlord, who found the prisoner writhing in great agony in his bed. On the dressing table were a

"Thomas Claridge, Blakenall, recently a well-known ironmaster in the district, was charged with stealing a bottle of brandy from the LEOPARD INN, Bilston, the property of John Fowler.

Annie Cooper, the barmaid, stated that on Thursday accused went into the house, and tried to beg a glass of whiskey. It was refused, and upon the girl leaving the place, he left the house, and a bottle of brandy was missed. He was afterwards seen to drink the brandy having previously borrowed a corkscrew from the PLOUGH INN. Accused, who presented a pitiable spectacle in the dock, stated in reply to PC Jackson, who arrested him, that he knew nothing of it; 'it was the drink which did it.'

Mr. Loveridge referred feelingly to the case, which he stated was the most painful he ever had before him. However, it would be better, however sad it was to see a respectable man in such a position, that accused should be kept in confinement for a time. One month's imprisonment."

“Staffordshire and Shropshire Assizes.....

Thomas Anslow (34), ironworker, and Jane Anslow (29), his wife, were indicted for feloniously wounding Joseph Shelley, iron-plate worker, Princes Street, Bilston, on the 3rd of October, with intent to do grievous bodily harm..... Prosecutor said he was in the SPOTTED LEOPARD INN, Bilston, on the 3rd of October, and the prisoners were there. They had a dispute about some pigeons, which resulted in prosecutor and the male prisoner going to the back of the Great Western Goods Station to fight. The female prisoner followed, and threw a cinder ‘as big as a man’s hand,’ which cut through prosecutor’s hat and cut his head. Prosecutor was knocked down, and the female prisoner again struck him with a cinder as he was rising. When prosecutor regained his feet he put himself in a fighting attitude, but was again knocked down by a cinder. While he was struggling on the ground with the male prisoner the latter stabbed him twice in the shoulder, and when he was getting up the woman stabbed him twice in the lower part of the back, remarking at the time, ‘Kill the —.’ He became unconscious from the loss of blood. Cross-examined by Thomas Anslow: He was sure prisoner stabbed him while he was on the ground.

Henry Allen, an iron-plate worker, deposed to seeing the female prisoner striking prosecutor with a firebrick or cinder.

Dr. Kennedy, who attended prosecutor, gave evidence of the nature of the injuries, which, he said, were serious. They were probably inflicted by a chisel or sharpened screwdriver. Great violence must have been used.

The male prisoner said that he only had a fair fight with the prosecutor, and Jane Anslow said that when she saw the prosecutor had got her husband down she picked up a cinder and struck him on the back.

His Lordship said he thought the prosecutor was a little to blame, because he went out voluntarily to fight. Prosecutor very properly did not complain of the fight, but complained of unfair weapons being used. He put it to the jury whether they should find prisoners guilty of wounding with intent or unlawfully wounding.

The jury found prisoners guilty of unlawfully wounding.

His Lordship, in passing sentence, said prisoners need be thankful to the jury for the merciful view they had taken of the case. It was absolutely necessary to teach people who did use knives and other weapons in a stand-up fight that they must expect to be severely punished. Prisoners were sent to gaol for six months each.”

“At Wolverhampton Police Court, yesterday, Patrick Edward Connolly, wine and spirit merchant, Worcester Street, appeared to answer charges of stealing two receipts, for £60 and £31, the property of Arthur Ray, formerly the tenant of the LEOPARD INN, Bilston. Mr. Kettle appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. Vachell for the defence.

In April last Mr. Connolly was the landlord of the LEOPARD INN, and Ray became the tenant, paying certain sums for the stock and fixtures, for which he received receipts, which were placed on a bill-file. Subsequently the prosecutor relinquished the tenancy of the house, and a difference of opinion arose as to the sums paid by Ray when he took possession. The license was transferred to another man, and the prosecutor removed his goods and chattels, but missed the two receipts from the bill-file, and accused Connolly of stealing them. Connolly denied stealing the receipts and offered to supply duplicate ones. The prosecutor was now willing to withdraw the charges.

Mr. Vachell said his client denied stealing the receipts, and was willing to supply duplicates.

The Stipendiary said he had no power to allow the matter to be settled as suggested, and adjourned the case for a week to obtain the views of the Public Prosecutor.”

“The annual licensing day for the division of Seisdon North was held at the Public Office, Bilston Street, Wolverhampton, on Thursday last.....

There were about forty applications for new [spirit] licenses, of which eight were granted.....

Mr. Hayes applied, on behalf of Mr. Hollingsworth, for a license to a house, which the applicant had rebuilt at an expense of about £2,000, opposite the Market Place, in Bilston, and near the site of the intended Town Hall. Mr. Hayes handed in a testimonial signed by many respectable inhabitants, and observed that Mr. Hollingsworth was one of the oldest and most respectable inhabitants of Bilston, and he believed was well known to several of the Magistrates.

Mr. Whitehouse said he opposed on behalf of Mr. Holland, a much older resident than Mr. Hollingsworth. By a plan which he would put in, prepared by Mr. Bidlake, the Magistrates would almost be led to suppose that every person in Bilston was a friend of John Barleycorn, for there were, between the top of the street in question and the KINGS ARMS, thirteen beershops, and no less than thirty-one houses which had obtained spirit licenses. (Mr. Hayes observed that Mr. Whitehouse had forgotten to state that Bilston was almost one street.) Mr. Whitehouse admitted that it had been called an overgrown village. There were now, he added, two licensed public houses in the same street unoccupied – the BALLOON and the GOLDEN CUP.

Mr. Underhill opposed for Mr. Price, who keeps a public house about 150 yards from Mr. Hollingsworth's.

The Magistrates, after some consideration, granted the application. Some conversation ensued as to whether the necessary notices had been given in the form prescribed by law, but the Magistrates were ultimately satisfied that the Act had been complied with.”

“Mr. W. Hollingsworth having recently obtained a license for some spacious premises belonging to him, situate opposite the Market Place in Church Street, his housewarming dinner took place on Tuesday, and was attended by upwards of eighty gentlemen, comprising the principal tradesmen and residents of the town, and friends from Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and the adjacent district. A more respectable party has never assembled in Bilston, and seldom has any company sat down to a more splendid dinner than that provided by Mrs. Hollingsworth. Thomas Spencer, Esq, occupied the chair, and C. G. Brown, Esq, the vice chair; and a due admixture of speechifying, music, and fun, made the evening pass very pleasantly. The wine with which ‘the LION’ was baptised was worthy of the dinner.”

“Thomas Highway, a determined fellow, a fishmonger, who had just been released from gaol, where he had undergone six months imprisonment for illtreating his wife, was brought before Bilston Magistrates on Tuesday, on a series of charges of assault, &c.

It appeared that on the Saturday night previously the prisoner went into Mr. Hollingsworth's, the LION public house, and called for something to drink. Seeing that he was tipsy Mr. Hollingsworth refused to supply him. The prisoner then assaulted Mr. Hollingsworth, and before the police, who had been sent for, could arrive, escaped into the house of Mr. Johnson, another publican, where he made a similar application, and, upon receiving a refusal, treated Mr. Johnson in a similar manner. Upon the arrival of a policeman at Mr. Johnson's the prisoner started to run away. The policeman followed him, and subsequently a great disturbance was created by the riotous conduct of the prisoner, who assaulted the officer and was eventually carried to the station. No sooner had the fellow been placed in a cell than he broke the whole of the windows.

He was fined £10 for the assaults, in default two months; and for breaking the windows a fine of 10s was imposed, in default to be committed for one month. The fines were not paid.”

“At Bilston, on Tuesday evening a public dinner was given to Lieutenant and Adjutant Evans, of the 38th (1st Staffordshire Foot), on the occasion of his safe return from the Crimea. The dinner, which was served up at the LION, did infinite credit to Host Hollinsworth, and the wines were of the first quality.....”

“A ball was held on Thursday evening last at Mr. W. F. Hollingsworth's, the LION INN, Bilston, which was numerously and respectably attended. Refreshments were liberally supplied by the worthy host, and the general management was highly creditable to himself and Mrs. Hollingsworth. We believe the stewards of the late ball now contemplate having one annually in the town. The principal difficulty in their way is that there is no public room in the town of the proper size. ‘Why,’ says a correspondent, ‘do not the directors of the Public Baths and Town Hall Company bestir themselves and give the people of Bilston what – the promise of which induced many of them to take shares in the concern – a town hall?’ The stewards desire us to state that they are not answerable for a specimen of erudition and bad taste which appeared on Saturday in a Birmingham contemporary.”

“On Monday, in the County Court at Wolverhampton, Matthew Bradey, a travelling draper, sued William George Masters, wine and spirit merchant, of Wolverhampton, and the tenant of the LION HOTEL in Bilston, to recover £10 as damages for the bite of a dog, on the 28th of March last. Mr. Bartlett was for the plaintiff, and Mr. Thurstans for the defendant.

It appeared from the statement of the plaintiff that he was in the LION, at Bilston, when upon going into the yard a dog flew at him and bit him upon the calf of the leg. In consequence of the injuries thereby sustained he had to call in a surgeon, and was incapable of carrying on his business during three weeks.

For the defence it was urged that the dog had belonged to the former landlord of the LION, and had been bequeathed by his executors to Job Kirkham, the ostler and brewer at the LION when the former owner of the dog died; and that Kirkham, who was not now one of the servants at the hotel, had taken the animal away, and had sold or given it to someone else; but that it persisted in remaining on the defendant's premises, where, however, it was asserted that it was not fed. The defendant deposed that he had given orders for the dog to be driven away, and the ostler and a female waiter both swore that they had endeavoured to carry out their employer's instructions. Further, it was deposed by the waitress that the plaintiff, in disregard of her caution, irritated the animal by shaking a stick at him. The case was tried by a jury, who returned a verdict for the plaintiff, damages £2.”

“William Venables, and John Taylor, working men, were yesterday charged before Mr. Spooner, Stipendiary Magistrate, with having been drunk, engaged in a fight, and broken a table, at the LION INN, Church Street. “At the Bilston police court, on Friday, Mr. Masters, wine and spirit dealer, Wolverhampton, charged Edward Hollis with assaulting him on Wednesday last. Mr. Langman, Wolverhampton, appeared for the complainant, and Mr. Waterhouse, of Bilston, for the defendant.

The evidence adduced was to the effect that the defendant had been in the employ of the complainant as ‘boots,’ and on the day in question he was sent by his employer (who is also the landlord of the WHITE LION, Bilston), with a conveyance, containing a quantity of spirits. Complainant was induced to follow the defendant to Bilston, and when he overtook him he (defendant) was intoxicated, and the horse appeared to have been over-driven. On a very slight remonstrance, to the effect that the defendant might leave the horse and see him next morning (at the same time making use of a somewhat unguarded expression), defendant became very fractious, and struck the complainant on the right ear, which was very much discoloured. The complainant called a female servant, who partly corroborated his evidence, and the Bench, after a short deliberation, imposed a fine of 10s and costs – in all, £1 0s 6d, which the defendant paid.”

“Bilston. Harboursing Thieves.

To the Editor of the Daily Post.

Sir, In your impression of Saturday last a paragraph appears, under the above heading, which refers to a case which was brought by the police against me, and, in answer to which I hope you will allow me, in justice to myself, and to the general body of licensed victuallers, the great majority of whom are subscribers to your paper, and any one of whom is open to a similar charge to that which was preferred against me, to say a few words in explanation, and to express my surprise that your report should be so worded as to make the case appear so much worse than is warranted by the facts as stated.

That there was a number of people in my vaults, some of whom were known to the police to be thieves and prostitutes, is admitted; but it is not true, as anyone would naturally infer from your paragraph, that they were so known to me or any of my servants. My vaults, like others, are open to all, and it is not at all likely that any licensed victualler can know the character of all the persons who present themselves at his counter from day to day. As to the case itself, as presented before the Magistrates, if I or my solicitor, Mr. Thurstans, had suspected gross perjury would have been resorted to by the policemen to prove their charge we should have adopted a very different course; and I do not now intend to let the matter rest, for I am using every exertion to find out the address of some respectable parties who were in the vaults at the time the policemen came, and who heard the conversation which took place between myself and them; and if I succeed in this the public shall have a specimen of the quality of the evidence upon which respectable tradesmen are often, I suppose, convicted.

I am, sir, your obedient servant, W. G. Masters.

After a series of acts of shocking violence, for which he has been in gaol, Cooper twice strapped his wife dreadfully on Saturday, vowing that when he began again he would kill her outright. He repeated his violence late on Tuesday night, and he kept his word. He killed her by first beating her with a poker, and then striking her upon the region of the heart with a rolling pin.”

“Yesterday the inquest was concluded before Mr. W. H. Phillips, coroner, at the LION HOTEL, Bilston, on the body of Lucy Cooper, who was supposed to have been killed by the violence of her husband, under the circumstances already set forth in the Daily Post.

Mr. H. W. Larkin, surgeon, who, in the presence of Mr. R. Macdonald, had made the post mortem investigation, deposed that occasionally during life he had attended the deceased for dyspeptic affections. At about ten minutes past nine on the night of the death he was called into deceased, and found her dead. She had been dead about ten minutes. He made an examination of the body last Friday, when he found a severe contusion over the left temple, two abrasions on the right side of the neck, five abrasions on the back and shoulders, all of more than 24 hours’ standing, and most likely occasioned three or four days before death. There were recent severe bruises on the right hand, and some trifling marks on the left side of the chest below the breast. There was, however, no external injury sufficient to account for death. The lungs were in a state of chronic inflammation, only one-fifth remaining available for breathing; and it was the result entirely of the cold weather. The actual cause of death was suffocation by fainting. In reply to the Coroner, Mr. Larkin said that to a woman in the state of health he had described a blow in the back might prove highly dangerous, and that any violence which would occasion a kind of stupor would greatly accelerate death.

John Smith, aged ten years, was sworn. He said that he saw Cooper beat his wife with a rolling pin on the right side, not long before she sat down and died.

This was all the evidence, and the Coroner, after reading to the jury the depositions of all the witnesses, reminded them if they were satisfied that the violence used by Cooper had accelerated deceased's death, then they must return a verdict of Manslaughter; but if they were not so satisfied, their verdict must be Death from Natural Causes.

The jury found a verdict of Manslaughter against Roland Cooper, who, upon the Coroner's warrant, was committed for trial at the Assizes. Cooper remains in prison upon the remand of the magistrates."

"Stafford Summer Assizes.....

Roland Cooper (58), miner, convicted of causing the death of his wife under circumstances of great aggravation. The woman, his Lordship said, was small, weak, and diseased, and the prisoner new that, and yet he inflicted a series of blows on her, causing her death in a very short time. He was sentenced to fifteen years' penal servitude."

"Startling Occurrence in a Bilston Hotel.

Considerable alarm was caused on Wednesday morning, by the announcement in the town that a building had fallen in, and done a great amount of damage near the LION HOTEL, Church Street, Bilston. Investigation revealed the fact that a chimney pot on Mr. Plant's premises adjoining the LION HOTEL, having become loosened by the heavy winds, had fallen, and in its descent had detached some bricks, which fell through the roof of the liquor shop, breaking through the plaster of the ceiling and falling with a crash into the shop. Fortunately no person was near the spot at the time, or the results might have been serious, especially as the spot where the bricks came in is just over the stove near which customers are in the habit of congregating. As it was, no harm occurred to anyone, and beyond the damage to the ceiling and glassware in the shop, there was no cause for the startling reports circulated in reference to the matter."

Butlers, brewers, Wolverhampton, for permission for structural alterations at the MARKET TAVERN, Church Street, Bilston and the LION INN, which adjoins it, and BRITANNIA INN, Bradley. Dealing with the MARKET TAVERN first, he said the proposed alterations would be an improvement in the domestic and sanitary accommodation of the premises, and the building of a bath room upstairs. The premises would be made more comfortable for the occupants and also more convenient for the customers of both sexes.

The Chairman said the Bench quite approved of the desire to make the occupants more comfortable. That was a very reasonable request, and the application would be granted.

Mr. Wright explained that the alterations at the LION would be similar, and the application was also granted.....”

“Rescued from his Burning Bar. Licensee Owes His Life to Policeman.

A policeman’s dash through a volume of thick smoke to rescue the licensee of the LION HOTEL, Bilston, was the feature of a fire which broke out there in the early hours of yesterday morning and caused damage to the extent of about £800. Mr. Howard Collins, the licensee, and his wife were sleeping in a room above the smokeroom, and in the early hours Mrs. Collins was awakened by the smell of smoke. She immediately aroused her husband, who ran into the road and gave the alarm, and the fire brigade was soon on its way. Meanwhile Mr. Collins raced back into the house to recover some papers, but collapsed in the bar where the fire originated. He was dragged into safety by Police-constable Martin.”

“A Police raid at the LION HOTEL, Church Street, Bilston, last Saturday had a sequel at the local court yesterday when 23 defendants were summoned for offences under the Betting Acts. William Howard Collins, the licensee, was summoned for keeping the bar of the hotel to be used for purposes of betting and suffering the licensed premises to be used for this purpose between 4 and 19 April. His wife, Ethel Collins, Annie Martin, a barmaid, and Philip Morris, of 110, Moxley Road, Darlaston, were summoned for aiding and abetting, and Morris was also summoned for using the bar. Nineteen defendants, all men, were summoned for using the bar for the purposes of betting. Mr. Ernest E. Brown (prosecuting) mentioned that the male defendant Collins had been licensee of the LION HOTEL since 1907.

As a result of information received by the police, Constable Williams visited the house on 4 April. He stayed in the bar from 12.15 till 1.50pm. There were between 25 and 30 men present when Morris came in and took up a position near the counter. He had a pencil behind his right ear during the time he was there, and Mr. Brown contended that this fact was obviously noticeable by the persons responsible for the conduct of the house. The constable saw people offer Morris slips and money. Some of the men looked at a sporting paper Morris had with him, and then sat down at a table, wrote something on a piece of paper, and handed it to Morris. Altogether on this particular day the constable saw 39 men hand pieces of paper, and money, to Morris.

On Saturday, 11 April, when Constable Williams entered the bar at 12.15 with Sergeant Martin, Morris was there, and during their stay the police-officers saw 47 persons hand slips to Morris. On this day the barmaid was in the bar assisting the licensee and his wife.

On 18 April Sergeant Martin again visited the house, when, it was alleged, 41 men handed slips and money to Martin. At 1.35 Superintendent Orland entered the bar. At that time a man was standing at the bar counter writing on a piece of paper. The superintendent obtained the slip and on it was written 'Windjammer,' the name of a horse running at Derby that day.

In the possession of the men summoned for using the house for betting purposes, papers referring to betting were found. On Morris was found a book of racing rules, two paying out slips, 24 betting slips, and £9 18s 8½d in cash. The prosecution contended, added Mr. Brown, that for some time Morris had been conducting betting in the licensed house. Evidence was given in support of this statement by Constable Williams, Sergeant Martin, Superintendent Orland, Inspector Jones, and other police officers.

Mr. A. Dallow, for the defence, said that the whole case against Collins, his wife, and the barmaid, rested on the conjecture of the police officers that they knew the betting was going on, and having regard to that, and a positive oath of denial made by Collins, who had a good record, Mr. Dallow urged the magistrates to dismiss the case. He submitted that there was no evidence against Miss Martin, and the magistrates dismissed the summonses against her. In evidence Collins and his wife denied that they knew betting was going on.

Collins was fined £10 for suffering the house to be used for the purpose of betting, and Mrs. Collins was fined £5 for aiding and abetting. Morris was fined £50, with £12 12s special costs, for using the house. The summonses against the other 19 defendants were withdrawn on the payment by each of 4s costs."

“On Monday last, an inquest was held at Mr. George Roper’s, the SWAN INN, Gozzard Street, Bilston, on the body of Daniel Onions, forty-six years of age, who died on Christmas eve from the effects of injuries received by the bursting of the tuyere of a furnace at Mr. Blackwell’s works. The explosion was caused by some water having accidentally got into the tuyere. The shower of molten iron which fell upon deceased (who was the furnace man) burned his body in the most shocking manner. A verdict of Accidental Death was returned.

Some few weeks ago the deceased was seen to consign the young foal of an ass to an equally horrible but more speedy death. He dropped it into the furnace, which was soon to be made the means of retributive justice (as his fellow workmen think) for such a gross act of barbarity. This fact was privately mentioned at the inquest.”

“Bilston Annual Licensing Meeting.....

LITTLE SWAN, Gozzard Street, Bilston.

Mr. Bowen applied for a license to this house, which is kept by an old man named William Parker, by trade an engineer, and who had, it was stated, occupied one situation in the town for thirty years, but was now disabled from following his employment in consequence of an accident to his shoulder. Mr. Bowen handed in a testimonial as to the applicant's good character, signed by the whole of the Township Commissioners, and property owners in the district where the house is situate.

There was no opposition to the application, which the Bench adjourned for further consideration.”

“The annual licensing sessions for the district of Bilston was held yesterday, at the Police Court, in that town.....

Mr. Bowen made application, on behalf of Samuel [sic] Parker, of the SWAN INN, Goddard [sic] Street. The application was backed by the Bilston Town Commissioners. There was no opposition. The Magistrates deferred their decision.”

“Bilston Adjourned Licensing Day.....

Mr. Bowen made an application on behalf of Mr. William Parker, of the SWAN, Gozzard Street. The house had been built expressly for the business of a licensed victualler; had two entrances and commodious stabling.

Mr. Sparrow said, after consulting with his brother Magistrates, the Bench was of opinion that another licensed house was not wanted in that neighbourhood.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 29/7/1868

“At Bilston Police Court, yesterday, before H. D. Best and W. Hatton, Esqs, a man named Henry Bradley, a collier, was charged, on the summons with assaulting Mrs. Eliza Parkes, landlady of the SWAN beerhouse, in Gozzard Street, and stealing a purse.

The complainant's statement was that on Tuesday evening the defendant was drinking at her house. Whilst he was there she went into the brewhouse to look at some ale. The defendant followed her in, put his arms round her neck and commenced kissing her, and otherwise attempting to take liberties with her. She resented this conduct, and in the struggle that took place between them the defendant tore open the front of her dress. She called out for assistance, and on her servant girl making her appearance the defendant released her. She then found that her purse, which was in her bosom when she went into the brewhouse, was missing, and although a search was made it could not be found. Complainant called her servant girl as a witness, and the latter stated that she saw her mistress go into the brewhouse, closely followed by the prisoner. In about a minute afterwards she heard the complainant call out ‘Eliza,’ and on going into the brewhouse, saw her with her dress very much torn and disordered, and her mistress said to her that she had ‘lost her purse.’ She did not hear her charge the prisoner with taking the purse till afterwards, and the girl added that her mistress promised her that if she would come and swear that the defendant took the purse she would make her a handsome present; if not she would discharge her at once.

The defendant's reply to the charge was that he accompanied the complainant into the brewhouse at her own request, for an immoral purpose, as he had often done before, but she, finding that the servant girl was peeping at them through the window, commenced screaming out, and then charged him with having assaulted her.

The complainant, a tidy-looking little woman, having her husband by her side, indignantly denied the defendant's allegation, but another witness being called, who to some extent bore out the defendant's statement, the Magistrates dismissed the case as not having been proved.”

"An inquest was held at the LITTLE SWAN INN, Gozzard Street, Bilston, on Tuesday, before W. H. Phillips, Esq, district coroner, on the body of a child, aged three months, named Alice Emberton, who died suddenly on Monday afternoon.

The mother of the deceased stated that the child had been entirely in her own care, and had only been suffering from a slight attack of diarrhea. On Monday deceased seemed a little better, and she laid it down while she went into the yard. When she returned, about twenty minutes after, the child was dead. The yard in which she lived was in a very unhealthy condition. In wet weather a pool of stagnant water lay in front of the dwelling, and remained there until it was absorbed, the smell arising from it being, at times, very strong.

A neighbour gave similar testimony. She said that the mother of the deceased had lost four children since she had lived in the yard. The yard had been in its present bad condition for two or three years. A number of other children had been taken ill. She believed some of her neighbours had complained about the state of the yard.

A juryman said he had been told that the surveyor had seen the place, and had stated that he did not think it was the province of the Township Commissioners to put it in proper order.

The coroner said whether that was so or not, he thought it was the duty either of the inspector of nuisances or the surveyor to see that the yard was put in a healthy condition either by the owners of the property or someone else. It was utterly impossible to rear a healthy child whilst the yard was in its present filthy and badly drained state; and he hoped the jury would call the attention of the Commissioners to the matter.

The jury returned a verdict of Natural Causes, and adding to their verdict the following rider: That the attention of both the surveyor and inspector of nuisances should be called to the terrible condition of the yard, with a view to affecting some remedy of the existing sanitary defects."

"Yesterday Mr. W. H. Phillips held an inquest at the LITTLE SWAN, Gozzard Street, Bilston, on the body of Joseph Siddons (51), Gozzard Street, who died very suddenly on Saturday last.

Elizabeth Price deposed that the deceased, who was a heavy drinker, had lodged with her for some time past, and had been working as a grocer's assistant. Lately, however, he had been supported by charity. The day before his death he went to a medical practitioner, and complained of ill-health; and on Saturday night he died.

Samuel Shaw, grocer, High Street, stated that he had employed deceased for about three and a half years, and that he was a heavy drinker.

Police-sergeant O'Brien deposed that in deceased's box goods worth £10 had been found.

Darlaston Weekly Times 2/6/1883

".....On its resumption yesterday, Dr. Larkin stated that he had made a post mortem examination of the body and found that deceased was a generally well-nourished man. The stomach was absolutely devoid of food. The immediate cause of death was effusion of blood into the heart's sac, causing asphyxia, or pulselessness. Deceased was also suffering from inflammation of the pleura, the membrane covering the lungs. The state of deceased was accelerated by intemperance. A verdict in accordance with this evidence was returned."

"We have to record the death of a Bilston individual, whose duties, and the performance of them, were familiar to all the residents of what is known as the New Town. For upwards of eight years, Henry Lane, of Gozzard Street, has performed the duties of night watchman to the entire satisfaction of the shopkeepers and others, by whom he was employed.....

Deceased was generally respected, and on the occasion of his funeral at the Cemetery, on Thursday, many of the blinds near his dwelling were drawn, and he was attended to the grave by a number of Free Gardeners, of the Flourishing Bough lodge, held at the LITTLE SWAN, Gozzard Street, with which deceased had been connected since its formation, seven years ago. 26 of the members attended the funeral, bearing beautiful bouquets of flowers. The funeral service was conducted by Mr. Ashley, and was listened to with marked attention. At the conclusion of the ceremony, the funeral oration of the order was impressively read by Brother Lloyd, and as each member of the lodge shook hands, in accordance with custom, over the grave, each dropped upon the coffin a large bouquet of flowers."

Darlaston Weekly Times 27/6/1885

"Much regret was felt among the brotherhood of the Free Gardeners of Bilston, at the death which occurred on Sunday last, of Brother John Green, 26 years of age, of Warwick Street, Bilston. The deceased, who was a blank tray maker, in the employ of Mr. J. Froggat, japanner, was a member of the Flourishing Bough Lodge of Free Gardeners, held at Mr. D. Ratcliffe's, LITTLE SWAN INN, Gozzard Street. The kindly feeling which prevails among the members of this order was apparent from the circumstances that sixteen members paid the last tribute of respect to their departed brother by attending the remains to the cemetery, where the interment took place....."

“Thomas Hawthorn, miner, Gozzard Street, Bilston, was charged with stealing three pigeons value 7s 6d, the property of Daniel Ratcliffe, SWAN INN, Gozzard Street.

Prosecutor said he kept some pigeons in a stable behind his house. On the night of Monday, the 7th February, he saw the door locked safe. On the morning of the 8th, about 7.30, he found that the staple had been drawn, and the stable entered. He missed five pigeons, but two of them returned next day. He identified the three pigeons produced as his property. He knew the prisoner, who frequented his house. Prisoner was in his house on the night of the 7th ult.

Hannah Mottram, Monmore Green, said her husband kept a pigeon cage. On the 8th February the prisoner brought three pigeons to her house, her husband being out, and said he wished to sell them. She identified the three pigeons produced as those which prisoner offered for sale. He asked 9d each for them, and she gave him 7d each. In reply to her questions prisoner said the pigeons were his own, and he was selling them because they expected the bailiffs in. He gave the name of William Jones, and said he had other two pigeons for sale. Witness gave the pigeons up to the police.

Detective Moreton said from information he received he arrested the prisoner on Saturday night in prosecutor's house. He charged him with stealing five pigeons, and in reply prisoner said, ‘You're a liar, Moreton. I own I stole three, but the others have gone back.’

Prisoner now pleaded guilty to stealing three pigeons, and was sentenced to six weeks imprisonment.”

Enoch Jones, greengrocer, Chads Moor, said that at the request of a constable he went up to Degville and asked him for a dozen of stout. Degville sold him a box of stout for 3s 6d, remarking, ‘I know it's not legal. Keep it quiet.’

Constable Bennett spoke to seeing Degville and Tomkinson delivering cases at Chads Moor.

Inspector Campbell spoke to interviewing Haskew who said if his men had sold anything without its being ordered they had done it entirely on their own responsibility. Haskew read to witness his instructions to travellers, which warned them that they were liable to instant dismissal if they delivered goods not previously ordered. He said, ‘Everything sent out from here has been ordered and properly appropriated on the premises.’”

“Thomas Jones, who was defended by Mr. J. E. Fellows, was charged with stealing 12 feet of lead piping, the property of Mr. Elijah Price, from the premises of the NELSON INN, Bridge Street, Bilston, on October 3rd.

The case was somewhat peculiar. A sale took place on the premises, and included in the catalogue was the piping which the defendant was charged with stealing. Defendant bought the piping at the sale, but it was claimed by Mr. Price, on the ground that the tenant had no right to sell that which was a part of the property really.

The Bench said there was no evidence of stealing, and dismissed the case.”

“At the Bilston Police Court today (Friday), before Messrs. Twentyman and Loveridge, Thomas Price (35), now of Coseley, but formerly landlord in charge of the HORSE AND JOCKEY, Church Street, Bilston, was charged on a warrant with embezzlement on the 21st February, 1887, £3 10s, the money of his employer, Mr. William Henry Simpkins, brewer, Brierley Hill. Mr. Holberton, Brierley Hill, prosecuted, and Mr. Dallow, Wolverhampton, defended.

Mr. Holberton, in opening the case, stated that the prisoner was placed in charge of the HORSE AND JOCKEY public house as manager, for which he received £1 a week. He also travelled for the prosecutor and was allowed 10 per cent commission on cash and also 5 per cent on the orders for the first three months. It appeared that on the 21st of February he received £3 10s from a man named James Wedge, landlord of the NELSON INN, Bridge Street, Bilston, for beer supplied to Wedge. Prisoner gave Wedge a receipt for the money, but failed to account for it to his employer, and had not entered it in the counterfoil.

William Henry Simpkins, prisoner’s employer, was then called, and stated that he took over the good will and business of the HORSE AND JOCKEY, Bilston, and placed defendant as manager and traveller, on terms which had already been mentioned. Prisoner had not paid to him the £3 10s received from Mr. Wedge. It was prisoner’s duty to pay any monies to him the week after they had been received.

James Wedge, the next witness called, stated that he paid the £3 10s to the prisoner, and the receipt produced and shown to him was the one signed by the prisoner for the money.

The prisoner pleaded guilty, and elected to have the case summarily dealt with.

Mr. Dallow, speaking on behalf of the prisoner, said it was the first time the prisoner had been in trouble on any such charge. He had hitherto borne an unimpeachable character, and hoped the Bench would deal with him in a merciful way. The prisoner was in very low circumstances at the time he was engaged by the prosecutor. He was also a widower with four children, was in very ill health, and had been locked up some days, during which time he had been attended by a doctor. He hoped they would make the sentence as light as was consistent with their duty. The magistrates said the prosecutor wished the prisoner to be mercifully dealt with, but they could not pass over an offence of that description. Prisoner would have to go to prison for one month with hard labour.”

“At the Bilston Police Court today (Friday), before Messrs. T. Holcroft and H. Ward, Thomas Byrne, a discharged soldier, was charged with obtaining by false pretences £1 from John Blewitt, RAILWAY TAVERN, Willenhall; money, food, and lodgings from Mrs. Preece, 4, Birmingham Street, Willenhall; and 3s from James Wedge, landlord of the NELSON INN, Bilston.

Blewitt stated that prisoner represented to him that he was about to take charge, as sergeant-instructor, of the Birmingham Volunteers, and that his soldier’s kit was at Mr. Preece’s house in Birmingham Street. On the strength of these statements witness lent him, as requested, two half-sovereigns.

Mrs. Preece went into the box to give evidence as to the charge in which she was concerned, when the prisoner became very excited shouting, ‘For — sake tell me off, gentlemen; I plead guilty to all this, I have just come out of the asylum; I don’t remember anything about it. For — sake tell me off, gentlemen.’

The Clerk explained to the prisoner that it was necessary to take the evidence, to which he replied excitedly, ‘What’s the use; I plead guilty to it all; send me to gaol, gentlemen. I can’t stand the suspense; my head’s bursting now.’

Prisoner having been quieted somewhat, Mrs. Preece stated that he went to her house and said he had been recommended by witness’s son, who was a soldier in Ireland, to apply to her for lodgings, as she would make him ‘sweet and comfortable.’ Her son, he said, looked fat and well, and she was very glad to hear it. He told her he had a note to cash, and borrowed 2s from her on the strength of this statement. He subsequently asked her to lend him 3s, but she did not do so.

James Wedge stated that the prisoner told him he had £10 worth of goods at the railway station for a man named Whalley, who was a soldier, and whom witness had formerly known. He further stated that there was £10 due to him in the Post Office Savings Bank, and went down to Bilston Post Office and inquired if the authorities had any money for him. He was told they had not, and he then filled up a printed form of some kind. He asked witness to go to the station to help him to fetch up his ‘kit,’ in which he said there were £10 worth of goods for Whalley, 50 yards of cloth, two Poll parrots, and two cages. He told witness that until he got his money from the bank he was without means, and witness then lent him 2s, another shilling being afterwards lent to the prisoner by witness’s sister. The magistrates informed the prisoner that they were determined to commit him for trial upon the first charge only. Prisoner appealed to the Bench not to send him to the Sessions. If they did he would have two men guarding him all the time he was in gaol, and he would be sent to the asylum again.

Mr. Ward: What shall you do if we discharge you?

Prisoner: I don’t want you to discharge me – send me to prison. He further stated that he had been a soldier in Egypt and had received a wound in the head. He had been told that the magistrates could deal with him under the Vagrancy Act, and he could, after he came out of gaol, obtain the help of the Prisoners Aid Society in getting a situation.

A consultation took place between the Bench and the Clerk, during which prisoner broke out, ‘Give me three months, gentlemen; anything, only for — sake tell me off.’

Ultimately the magistrates decided, by the prisoner’s wish, to send him to Stafford as a rogue and vagabond for three weeks.”

TO SPIRIT MERCHANTS, INNKEEPERS, MALTSTERS, AND OTHERS IN WANT OF A FIRST-RATE BUSINESS SITUATION, VALUABLE FREEHOLD PROPERTY, IN OXFORD STREET AND TEMPLE STREET, NEW TOWN, BILSTON.

TO be SOLD by AUCTION, by J. CORBETT, on TUESDAY, the 13th day of July next, at the house of Mr. Thomas Bowen, Angel Inn, Bilston, at Five o'clock in the afternoon, in the following or such other lots as may be agreed upon at the time of sale, and subject to conditions to be then produced:—

Lot 1.—All that valuable old-established INN and RETAIL SPIRIT SHOP, known by the sign of the "MALT SHOVEL," in the New Town, Bilston, together with a MALTHOUSE in the rear thereof, capable of wetting fifteen quarters of barley, now and for many years past in the occupation of the proprietor, Mr. William Brown, who has carried on a very extensive trade in the Brewing, Spirit, and Malting Departments, and is retiring from business. The House comprises six large Cellars or Spirit Vaults, front Retail Spirit Shop and Tap Room, neatly fitted up Parlour, with private Hall Entrance, back Tap Room and Parlour, large Bar, five convenient Chambers, an excellent Club Room, 61½ feet by 17 feet 8 inches, with all necessary Closets attached. The Out-offices consist of a large Brewhouse, Cooking Kitchen, Dairy, Piggeries, and two large Soft Water Cisterns. In the rear of the House there is a large enclosed Yard, which, with the site of the Buildings, contains 800 square yards of Land or thereabouts.

This Lot will be sold with a Carriage or Cart Road from Temple Street, ten feet wide, as a back entrance to the House and Malthouse.

The above Property is decidedly the best situation in the New Town. With the aid of a moderate capital, an enterprising tradesman might do a first-rate business in these Premises. The House is substantially-built and well-arranged, and from its greatest extent is capable of being divided into two convenient Houses of business, at a small outlay.

Lot 2.—All that newly and substantially-built MALTHOUSE, capable of wetting 12½ quarters of barley, situated in Temple Street, Bilston aforesaid, with all necessary Store Rooms, &c., attached, and also a five-stall Stable and Gig-house, with Water Cistern underneath, range of Shedding, Piggeries, &c., and an enclosed Yard; having a frontage to Temple Street of 23 yards, and containing, with the site of the Buildings, 600 yards of Land or thereabouts. Wolverhampton Chronicle 7/8/1844

"Staffordshire Summer Assizes.....

Mary Garcett, 34, was indicted for breaking into the dwelling house of James Fellows, at Bilston, in the night of the 9th of April last, and stealing therein two flannel petticoats, his property, and part of a loaf of bread, the property of Paul Fellows. Mr. Neale conducted the prosecution.

Paul Fellows stated that he was a miner and lived with his father, James Fellows, at Bilston. On the evening of the 9th of April, about ten o'clock, he was at the MALT SHOVEL public house in Bilston, when the prisoner came in and told him that her husband had deserted her, and that she had had nothing to eat for two days, in consequence of which he took her to his father's house, and gave her some bread and bacon from a chest belonging to him (witness). She afterwards went back to the MALT SHOVEL and drank with him, after which he bid her good night, and she said she was going home. He returned to his father's house and latched the door, but any one could get into the house from the outside. On the following morning he was called up by a woman named Badger, who had been attending his mother, and on his going down stairs he found the chest unlocked, and the bacon and bread gone which he had left there on the previous night. In cross-examination witness denied having asked the prisoner to stop in a hovel with him.

Prisoner here said that the prosecutor wanted to take advantage of her if he had had a chance.

Mr. Godson cautioned the prisoner against making her case worse by throwing imputations upon the prosecutor; she would not deceive the court or jury by this course.

Sarah Badger proved having on the 10th of April found the chest unlocked, and two flannel petticoats, with part of a loaf of bread, missing.

John Fellows, a constable, stated that when he apprehended the prisoner on the 10th of April, she said she was drunk when she took the property.

The prisoner, in her defence, said she was dead drunk on the night in question, when a woman met her and gave her the petticoats as she was coming along by the Catholic Chapel, and in the morning she determined to return them to Fellows.

The jury found a verdict of guilty.

Mr. Godson told the prisoner that if she had not set up such an ungrateful defence he should only have sentenced her to an imprisonment of one month; but under all the circumstances he should increase the punishment to three months' hard labour; and if she was ever again detected committing a felony she would most assuredly be transported, whether the act was committed at a time when she was drunk or sober."

Birmingham Journal 3/1/1846

“On Tuesday an inquest was held before T. M. Phillips, Esq, Coroner, at the sign of the MALT SHOVEL, Bilston, on the body of Mary Baylis, a girl sixteen years or age, whose death was caused by her gown catching fire, while she was standing with her back towards the fire in a bed room in the house in which she lived, on the evening of Sunday, the 21st instant [sic]. The poor child lingered until Saturday last, when death put a period to her sufferings. The Jury having heard all the particulars of the melancholy occurrence, returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

“At Bilston, on Tuesday, Ellen Durkin was charged by Mr. William Brown, of the MALT SHOVEL INN, with stealing a piece of flannel and a silver table spoon, his property. It appeared that on Wednesday night, between nine and ten o'clock, the prisoner went into the MALT SHOVEL for something to drink. She was in the bar, and after taking some liquor she left the house. Soon after her departure 2½ yards of flannel were missed, and the prisoner being suspected as the thief, Mr. Brown went for a constable, who traced the woman to the house where she lived. The constable there apprehended her and charged her with stealing the flannel; upon which she gave it up. They then returned to Mr. Brown's house with the prisoner, when they found that during their absence a silver table spoon had also been taken, and on the constable being informed of it, he returned to the prisoner's house and found it hid behind some things upon the table. The property was sworn to by Mr. Brown and a servant, and the prisoner was committed.”

“Josiah Jenks, a miner, about 25 years of age, was charged by Joseph Pershouse, of Daisy Bank, in the parish of Sedgley, with stealing from his house, on Saturday, the 12th inst, a purse containing a £5 bank note and thirteen sovereigns.

From the evidence of the prosecutor and his wife, it appeared that the prisoner had been an apprentice to prosecutor's father, and that for about three years he had been a lodger in the prosecutor's house. On Saturday last, about two o'clock in the afternoon, the prisoner came home and went up stairs, and then left; soon afterwards the prosecutor's wife went into her bed room, and found that her husband's box had been robbed of the purse and money. Prosecutor went with a policeman to Wolverhampton in search of the prisoner, but without success.

Paul Pershouse, a brother of the prosecutor, proved that he also went in search of the prisoner, and that about 12 on the Saturday night he found him in a liquor shop, at Wolverhampton, dressed in a new butcher's frock, hat and shoes. He took him into custody, and charged him with robbery, which the prisoner denied, and brought him to Bilston the same night. When within a quarter of a mile of Bilston, the prisoner asked the witness to allow him to go out of the road for a private purpose, to which witness assented, and stood at a few yards distance. On the prisoner being brought to the station at Bilston, he was searched, but no money, excepting 1s 10d, was found upon him. Police-constable Conway, finding that the witness had suffered the prisoner to stop on the road, advised Pershouse to retrace his steps, as in all probability the prisoner had 'planted' the money at that place. Early on the Sunday morning witness went as advised, and found the purse, with fourteen sovereigns in it, concealed under the turf at the place where the prisoner had stopped on the road.

Mr. William Brown, of the MALT SHOVEL INN, at Bilston, produced the £5 bank note, which the prisoner had paid him on the Saturday afternoon, and to whom he gave four sovereigns and a half sovereign in exchange.

Inspector Hogg also proved showing the prisoner the purse, and asking him if he knew it, when he replied, 'Yes, I do; it is of no use denying it, for I took the money, but was drunk at the time.'

The prisoner being asked if he had anything to say, admitted the charge to be true. He was then committed for trial at the Sessions.

The prisoner, it appeared, had purchased a silver watch, a new hat, a new frock, shoes, and stockings, with a portion of the stolen property."

Josiah Jenks, charged with stealing from the dwelling house of Joseph Pershouse, at Sedgley, a bag, containing one £5 Bank of England Note, and thirteen sovereigns, his property."

"Staffordshire Sessions.....

Josiah Jenks, aged 23, was indicted for stealing a bag, containing a £5 Bank of England note and thirteen sovereigns, the property of Joseph Pershouse, of Sedgley. He pleaded guilty. In answer to questions from the learned Chairman, it appeared that the prisoner was a lodger, and lived with the prosecutor. In September last he broke open a box, and took the money, with which he decamped, but was taken at Wolverhampton the same night. On being searched, £14 was found upon him, but he tried to conceal it by throwing it upon a coal-pit bank, on his way to the station. He was sentenced to be imprisoned for twelve months."

"To Spirit Merchants, Innkeepers, Maltsters, and Others in want of a first-rate Business Situation.

Valuable Freehold Property, in Oxford Street and Temple Street, New Town, Bilston.

To be Sold by Auction, by John Corbett, on Tuesday, the 13th day of July next, at the house of Mr. Thomas Bowen, ANGEL INN, Bilston, at five o'clock in the afternoon, in the following or such other lots as may be agreed upon at the time of sale, and subject to conditions to be then produced.

Lot I. All that valuable old established Inn and Retail Spirit Shop, known by the sign of the MALT SHOVEL, in New Town, Bilston, together with a Malthouse in the rear thereof, capable of wetting fifteen quarters of barley, now and for many years past in the occupation of the proprietor, Mr. William Brown, who has carried on a very extensive trade in the brewing, spirit and malting departments, and is retiring from business. The House comprises six large cellars or spirit vaults, front retail spirit shop and tap room, neatly fitted up parlour with private hall entrance, back tap room and parlour, large bar, five convenient chambers, an excellent club room, 61½ feet by 17 feet 8 inches, with all necessary closets attached. The Out-offices consist of a large brewhouse, cooking kitchen, dairy, piggeries, and two large soft water cisterns. In the rear of the House there is a large enclosed yard, which, with the site of the buildings, contains 800 square yards of land or thereabouts.

This Lot will be sold with a Carriage or Cart Road from Temple Street, ten feet wide, as a back entrance to the House and Malthouse.

The above property is decidedly in the best situation in the New Town. With the aid of a moderate capital an enterprising tradesman might do a first-rate business in these premises. The House is substantially built and well arranged, and from its great extent is capable of being divided into two convenient houses of business, at a small outlay.

Lot II. All that newly and substantially built Malthouse, capable of wetting 12½ quarters of barley, situate in Temple Street, Bilston aforesaid, with all necessary Store Rooms, &c attached, and also a five stall Stable and Gighouse, with water cistern underneath, range of Shedding, Piggeries, &c, and an enclosed Yard, having a frontage to Temple Street of 23 yards, and containing, with the site of the buildings, 600 yards of land or thereabouts. The Malthouse is also occupied by the proprietor.

To view the property apply on the premises; and for further particulars to Mr. C. G. Brown, solicitor, Mr. George Brown, or the Auctioneer, all of Bilston."

“At the Public Office, Bilston, on Tuesday, before J. Leigh, Esq, an information against Isaac Dolphin, a butty collier, and landlord of the MALT SHOVEL INN, for paying wages to John Jones, a workman, in a public house, contrary to 5th and 6th Victoria, c.99, was heard. Mr. Waterhouse attended for the defence.

The complainant stated that on Saturday week he reckoned as usual, with Mr. Dolphin, in a building at the back of the MALT SHOVEL, and occupied by him therewith. It appeared, however, on the cross-examination of this witness, and from the evidence of a witness named Banks, who was afterwards called by Mr. Waterhouse, that the building in question was originally a small private house; that it was rented at a separate rent from the landlady; that the door of it was distant several yards from the door of the public house, and might be approached by a road out of Temple Street, without going near the public house; and that it was never used for the sale of liquors, but merely as a private sitting-room for Mr. Dolphin and his family, and as an office. Mr. Waterhouse urged in defence that Mr. Dolphin, as a butty collier, was not within the description of persons prohibited by the Act from paying wages in a public house, and that the building in question was not one to which the prohibition extends. Mr. Leigh, however, overruled the objections, and convicted the defendant in £10, being the highest penalty allowed by the Act.”

“Yesterday, at Bilston Police Court, before the Rev. H. S. Fletcher and H. Ward, Esq, Sarah Hazeldine and Jane Richards were charged with assaulting Moses Baggott, a brickmaker, living at Moxley, and stealing from him the sum of £4 4s 6d. It appeared from the evidence of the prosecutor that about eight o'clock on Friday evening last he was at the BARREL public house, in Bilston, where he met the prisoners, and Hazeldine having been an old servant of his father he treated her and her companion to some drink. They remained there together until about ten o'clock, when the prosecutor left to go home. Before he left, the woman Hazeldine told him to be careful of his money, and advised him to put it in his stocking, which he accordingly did. On his road home, as he was passing the Bilston gas works, he was suddenly attacked from behind by the two prisoners and a man whom he did not know. Richards put her hand over his mouth, while the man held him, and Hazeldine took his money, amounting to £4 4s 6d.

Richard Groves, the landlord of the MALT SHOVEL public house, proved that between seven and eight o'clock on the morning after the robbery the two prisoners came to his house for some rum and coffee, and that Richards had at that time a couple of sovereigns in her hand.

Both prisoners were committed for trial.”

“Staffordshire Quarter Sessions.....

Sarah Hazledine, 45, Jane Richards, 21, and George Bentley, were indicted for having stolen from the person of Moses Baggott, at Bilston, a purse containing £4 4s 6d. The prosecutor deposed that on the evening of the 30th of September he was at the BARREL public house, Bilston, and offered Hazledine some drink, she having been an old servant to his father. The woman seeing he had some money advised him to place it in his stocking before starting from the house. He adopted her suggestion. When passing the Gasworks at Bilston the male prisoner suddenly caught hold of his arms, Richards put her hand upon his mouth, and Hazledine took the money from his stocking. They then threw him down and made off. The Jury found the prisoners guilty, and they were each sentenced to six months' imprisonment.”

[8] Rhoda Holcroft (17), general servant, born Bilston:

“William Matthews, landlord of the MALT SHOVEL, Oxford Street, Bilston, was charged with permitting drunkenness, on July 5th.

Thomas Haynes, drayman, employed by Mr. Butler, Springfield Brewery, stated that he had been fined 10s and costs for being drunk in the house, and PC Johnson stated that he saw the last witness leave the house in a very drunken state, almost incapable.

Dr. Larkin was called as witness for the defence, and stated that Haynes, when in the police cell, answered perfectly coherently, but seemed to be in a drowsy condition. If he had been up the whole of the previous night, it would have accounted for his state. The appearance of the man was very misleading, on account of a physical imperfection in his eyes. He should say that Haynes was decidedly not drunk, but decidedly sleepy.

Haynes, recalled, said he was up all the previous night, and was not drunk, but very tired. He had only had a share of five pints of ale among four of them.

A fine of 20s and costs was imposed.”

Darlaston Weekly Times 9/12/1882

“At the Bilston Police Court, yesterday, four little girls, named Harriett Jones (15), Mary Ann Petley (14), Louisa Emberton (13), and Eliza Emberton (12), all of Bridge Street, were charged with stealing three dozen of scarves, value 10s, from the shop of John Nolan, general dealer, of Oxford Street, on the 15th ult.

Prosecutor stated that the goods were safe in the shop at two o’clock on the day in question, but at six o’clock they were missing.

John Toole, bailiff, of Gozzard Street, said he bought eight of the scarves from Petley in the SADDLE public house for fivepence.

Daniel Darby, licensed victualler, of Moxley, said he bought two of the scarves from Petley for sixpence, thinking this a fair value for them. He had previously bought matches from the same child.

The landlord of the SADDLE spoke to the prisoners Jones and Petley offering the scarves for sale in his house.

William Matthews, manager of an Oxford Street public house, was called as a witness, but Chief Superintendent Longden stated that the witness had said he’d see the Court d— before he gave evidence. A summons, however, was issued to compel his attendance.

Detective Hayward said he arrested Petley and Jones. They denied the offence at first but afterwards said that Eliza Emberton stole them, and they shared the money. The prisoner Eliza Emberton told him it was the fault of a woman named Sarah Jones, or Folden, who beat her until she went into the shop and stole. He, unfortunately, could not connect the woman with this particular case, although there was no doubt that the woman was the instigation of the thefts.

The case was adjourned for seven days, to compel Matthews’s attendance, and the children in the meantime to be sent to the workhouse. Louisa Emberton was discharged.”

“Yesterday, at the Bilston Police Court three little girls, named Harriet Jones, 13 years of age, Elizabeth Emberton, aged 11 years, and Mary A. Pethley, aged 14 years, were charged with stealing three dozen scarves, from the shop of John Nowlan, Oxford Street, under circumstances reported in our last issue.

The witnesses called last week recapitulated their evidence, and in addition, William Matthews, publican, of Oxford Street (who appeared on a summons), said Pethley came into the MALT SHOVEL alone, and offered several scarves for sale, some of which he bought, but he declined to swear whether the scarves (produced) were those he bought. He was not certain of the price he bought the scarves at, nor did he refuse to give them up to Detective Hayward when requested. He knew the child as a general hawker, having bought other things from her at different times.

The mothers of the children appeared before the Bench, and gave several versions of the matter, concluding by an appeal for mercy.

Emberton was discharged, Pethley and Jones were each fined 5s and costs, or 21 days’ hard labour.

Matthews and Tool, the witnesses, were called before the Bench.

Detective Hayward stated that Matthews objected to produce the scarves, and when told that he would have to appear as a witness, said he would see the Court d— first. Matthews denied this, and said that the officer had a spite against him. Witnesses were severely reprimanded, and their expenses disallowed, the Bench stating that both witnesses seemed to be encouraging rather than repressing theft.”

"Bilston Brewster Sessions.....

The police opposed the renewal of the licenses attached to the NEW INN, Oxford Street, Bilston; the MALT SHOVEL INN, Oxford Street Bilston; the RED LION INN, Bilston, the FOUNTAIN INN, Parliament Street, Bilston; and the ORANGE TREE INN, Ettingshall. Infringement of the licensing laws were the grounds of the objection in each case, with the exception of the ORANGE TREE INN, the landlord of which had been sentenced to two months' imprisonment for assaulting his wife. The whole of the licenses were renewed with the exception of the FOUNTAIN INN, the consideration of which was to be held over until the adjourned licensing sessions."

“Eliza Glide, an elderly women, no fixed abode, was charged with assaulting George Powell, of the MALT SHOVEL INN, Oxford Street, Bilston, and also with drunkenness. She went into the house, and being the worse for drink was refused. She then threw a glass and struck Powell on the forehead, causing a wound. She was sentenced to 14 days for the assault, and was fined 10s or seven days for drunkenness.”

“Joseph Thomas Roach (Wednesbury) and John Waling (Oxford Street, Bilston), were charged with being drunk and disorderly in Oxford Street, Bilston, on February 23rd, and further with refusing to quit the MALT SHOVEL INN when requested to do so by the manager.

The evidence was to the effect that the two men who have no particular occupation, were drunk and disorderly in the street; but previous to that they had gone into the MALT SHOVEL INN and when the manager refused to serve them with drinks they became threatening and abusive, and tried to get over the counter to help themselves. They had to be forcibly ejected.

Defendants, who had previous convictions against them, were each fined £6, or two months imprisonment.”

“The marriage, with Nuptial Mass and Papal Blessing, took place at the Church of the Holy Rosary, Hickman Avenue, Wolverhampton, England, of Mr. Edward Clifford Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hall, 12, Beechgrove Terrace, Drogheda, and Miss Janet Penrice, 2, Avenue Road, Darlaston, Staffordshire.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was attired in a full-length gown of white lace and she carried a bouquet of roses and maidenhair fern. She was attended by Miss Valerie Brown and Mr. Oliver Leape, a friend of the groom, was best man.

A reception was held at the MANOR, Stowheath Lane, Bilston, and the honeymoon was spent in Bray, Ireland. Going away, Mrs. Hall wore a navy two-piece suit with white accessories.”

“Thousands of Midland drinkers will be forced to change their drinking habits next year – because of a Government report. Three major breweries are to swop 437 pubs – leaving drinkers to choose between their favourite public house or their favourite beer. The deal was announced yesterday by Ansells, owned by Allied Breweries, Mitchells and Butlers, owned by Bass Charrington, and Courage. The move, involving public houses valued at £11,000,000, was prompted by a Monopolies Commission report seven years ago which claimed that breweries had too much of a stranglehold in certain towns and cities Tenants and managers are being given the opportunity to stay on new terms or change to another establishment. Managers can also opt for voluntary redundancy.....

“At a special sessions for the hundred of Seisdon North, held on Monday last, at the office of the county magistrates, Bilston Street, in this town, the following victuallers’ licenses were transferred that of William Bath, of MARKET TAVERN, Church Street, Bilston, to John Greene, of Great Bridge, Tipton, corn dealer.”

“John Edwards, a coffee mill maker, residing in North Street, Wolverhampton, was charged with breaking a square of glass in the window of Mr. John Green, MARKET TAVERN, Church Street, Bilston. The defendant, it appears, had been drinking in Mr. Green’s house the whole of Wednesday evening; a quarrel ensued between him and some parties who were present, and, in aiming a blow at one of them, he struck his fist through the window. He was ordered to pay 8s costs.”

“At Bilston Petty Sessions on Tuesday last, before J. Leigh, Esq, Mr. John Green, of the MARKET TAVERN, Church Street, appeared to prefer a charge against Elizabeth Hayward, under the following circumstances.

It appeared that the defendant’s brother was engaged by the complainant to play the harp at his saloon, and in consequence of some irregularities in his conduct, Mr. Green had complained to the defendant, and requested her to ‘lecture him.’ Before doing this, she requested to be allowed to see the agreement which had been drawn up between her brother and the complainant. On this being shown to her, she directly pocketed it, and still refused to return it, in consequence of which he had summoned her before the bench. Mr. Leigh asked to see the document, and on its being handed to him, he directly gave it up to Mr. Green, and after cautioning the defendant against playing such tricks in future, dismissed the case.”

“Foreign Publicans at Darlaston Wake.

Mr. Harper; Mr. William Coates, Bulls Head, Kidderminster; Mr. William Ashcroft, of Bilston; Mr. Aaron Stokes, of Walsall; Mr. Francis Jones, of West Bromwich; Mr. William Grattage, of Wolverhampton; and Mr. Joseph Archer, of Wolverhampton, were severally charged at Wednesbury Petty Sessions, on Tuesday, with having, on Sunday, the 22nd current, the opening day of Darlaston wake, unlawfully sold, by retail, quantities of exciseable liquors (spirits or ale) to be drunk and consumed on their premises there situate, the said parties not being then and there licensed so to do, and not being then and there the heirs, executors, administrators, or assignees, of the parties duly licensed so to do. Mr. Bartlett, solicitor, of Wolverhampton, appeared for the defendants, and Inspector Blaney conducted the case for the prosecution.

The charge against Harper was first taken, when Serjeant Went proved that he saw exciseable liquors sold in the defendant’s booth on the day in question. Mr. Bartlett, on the part of his client, said that for a good number of years it had been customary for persons like his client to fix booths for the sale of their liquors at such places of pleasure and pastime.

Mr. Leigh: I must decide according to law.

Mr. Bartlett: I speak merely as to mitigation of fine.

Mr. Leigh: In the case of a village festival, which may occur only once a year, I would consider it very hard that certain tradesmen should come from a distance and endeavour to deprive the local publicans of the chance of reaping a good trade. There may have been licensed victuallers from Kidderminster at Darlaston wake. Just at the very moment when the publicans of Darlaston, who are subject to pay rates and all other legal taxes, expected to command a good business, they were suddenly pounced upon and put in competition with ten or twenty licensed victuallers from a distance. This is not allowed by the spirit of the law.

Mr. Bartlett stated that his client had acted under misapprehension of the law, and he considered supplying refreshments at wakes similar to erecting booths at race-courses. Mr. Bartlett also quoted notices, intimating that on each day of the wake there would be a pony race for a purse of money.

After a patient consideration of the case, Mr. Leigh decided that the law had been infringed; and, as Mr. Bartlett gave notice of appeal to the Quarter Sessions, he would impose a penalty of £20.

In the course of the other six cases being tried – for they were all similar – Mr. Bartlett, on consulting his clients, withdrew his notice of appeal, when the whole defendants were fined each in the mitigated penalty of £5.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 8/6/1859

“At the Petty Sessions, on Friday, Thomas [sic] Taylor, the occupier of the MARKET TAVERN, Church Street, Bilston, was fined 10s, and the expenses, for allowing disorderly characters to assemble in his house at an improper hour.”

“The annual meeting of Magistrates for the purpose of the renewal and granting of licenses for the township of Bilston and the neighbourhood was held at the Bilston Police Court on Friday last.....

The following publicans having been fined during the past year their licenses were suspended until the adjourned licensing day.....

Benjamin Taylor, MARKET TAVERN, Bilston.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 14/9/1859

“At the Bilston petty sessions, on Friday, the following cases which had been reserved from the annual licensing meeting for further consideration in consequence of complaints having been made by the police against the applicants, were disposed of, the licenses being renewed conditionally that the respective occupiers are more circumspect in their conduct MARKET TAVERN.”

“Hezekiah Webb and Charles Hughes, both of Bilston, were charged at the Police Office, yesterday, with having stolen a gold watch from the person of Thomas Hughes, at the MARKET TAVERN, on the 28th ultimo. The prosecutor was a schoolmaster at Stone. On the 28th ultimo he had occasion to visit Bilston, and while in the town he called at the NEW MARKET TAVERN. He was there robbed of an old-fashioned gold watch, and the prisoners being near him at the time the robbery was committed, they were taken into custody. The watch has not been recovered. Hughes was not present to prosecute yesterday, and the prisoners were bound over on their own recognisances to appear when called on.”

“Walter Plant, of the MARKET TAVERN, was summoned for permitting drunkenness on Saturday night. Mr. Barrow defended. Police-constable Webb said that he entered the defendant’s house at nine o’clock on Saturday night, and found a man named Lavender drunk. He told him to leave, but going again in half an hour found him still there, and saw him drink some whisky. Several witnesses were called who swore that Lavender was not supplied with drink in the house, but that after being put out at nine o’clock he returned and concealed himself in an obscure corner of the liquor shop, and on being discovered was again put out.

The learned Stipendiary allowed the summons to be withdrawn on defendant paying the costs.”

“Sarah Kempson, Hall Green Street, Bradley, was charged with the theft of a drinking glass from the MARKET TAVERN, Bilston, the property of Messrs. Plant and Son.

Mary Nicholls, of Ash Street, Bradley, said she saw the defendant take the glass from a bench in the shop and put it in her basket.

PC Kinson said the defendant told him she saw the glass stolen, but did not steal it herself.

Sentenced to one month’s hard labour. Prisoner left the dock shouting to a companion to bring her some ‘grub,’ as she could not eat the rubbish supplied in the cell.”

“Peter Ryan, of Vine Street, Bilston, was charged with assaulting John Adamson, barber, of High Street, by setting a dog upon him.

Complainant stated that on Monday evening he was in the MARKET TAVERN, Bilston, when defendant, who was mad drunk, came and asked witness to take him home. Witness refused, and shortly after left the house. Defendant followed, and with the remark, ‘At him, Jack,’ set a large Newfoundland dog upon him. The result was that he was bitten in the arm.

Defendant contended that the whole of the evidence was false; the dog was only six months old, and could not bite. Corroborative evidence was given, and a fine of 10s and costs was imposed.”

“Thomas Nodes and Elizabeth, his wife, was charged with creating a disturbance in the MARKET TAVERN, Bilston, on Monday night.

PC Hayward was called to a disturbance in the house, where he found the defendants trying to assault the landlord. He requested them to leave, which they did. When they got into the street, both commenced using abusive and insulting language, defying the officer to take them into custody, and drawing a crowd of 300 persons round them. The male defendant said he had been teetotal, and drunk nothing but brandy for nine months. Inspector Harrison said the police were compelled to take the man’s boots off lest he should kick the cell door to pieces. The female defendant was, if anything, worse than the man.

The female defendant was fined 5s and costs and the male defendant 10s and costs; having imputed cruelty to the constables, which was disproved by officers, and a prisoner who was in the cell at the time of the alleged cruelty.”

The deceased was well known in Bromsgrove, his native town, in which his brother, Mr. Edward Harris, is in business. No tradesman was ever held in greater esteem, evidence of which was plainly seen on Friday in last week, when his remains were laid to rest. At the Church of St. Luke, where the deceased attended during his residence in Bilston, a large number of relatives and friends assembled, many of whom wended their way to the cemetery. The hearse and coaches were covered with beautiful wreaths, more than twenty having been sent by relatives, members of the firm, managers, and friends. Mr. Harris leaves a wife, two sons, and two daughters to mourn his loss....."

Butlers, brewers, Wolverhampton, for permission for structural alterations at the MARKET TAVERN, Church Street, Bilston and the LION INN, which adjoins it, and BRITANNIA INN, Bradley. Dealing with the MARKET TAVERN first, he said the proposed alterations would be an improvement in the domestic and sanitary accommodation of the premises, and the building of a bath room upstairs. The premises would be made more comfortable for the occupants and also more convenient for the customers of both sexes.

The Chairman said the Bench quite approved of the desire to make the occupants more comfortable. That was a very reasonable request, and the application would be granted.....”

“Distressed because of leaving Bilston after a period of 23 years, Amy Waldron, aged 63, left her home at Dudley, on the afternoon of Thursday, December 17th, and was never seen alive again, her body being recovered from the canal at Bloomfield, Tipton, on Xmas Eve. These facts were revealed at the inquest conducted by Mr. J. H. S. Addison (Deputy Coroner for South Staffs) at the RISING SUN INN, Toll End, Tipton, on Monday afternoon.

Walter Waldron, aged 65, licensed victualler residing at the ROYAL OAK, Salop Street, Dudley, identified the body as that of his wife, whose 64th birthday, he held, fell on December 22nd. She underwent a severe operation ten years ago, but apart from that had always enjoyed good health, until about six weeks ago. For 23 years, up to then, he had kept a licensed house at Bilston. Leaving there was a great shock to his wife and she had never really recovered from it, she had had a nervous breakdown and had been depressed ever since. She had been attended by Dr. John Wells, of Bilston, and although they moved, to the Dudley district, she still went to him.

On Tuesday, December 15th, witness took his wife to see Dr. Wells, who said she ought to go away. The next day, however, she seemed to pick up wonderfully, but when she got up on the Thursday she appeared rather more depressed than usual, taking no interest in anything. During the course of the morning witness several times went into the living quarters to see her, the last occasion being about 1.40pm, when she was preparing dinner. When he went to have his dinner at two o'clock his wife was missing, and he sent round to relatives and informed the police. The spot where she was found in the canal, on December 24th, was a long way from the house. He had no idea why she went over that way, although they returned via Tipton on the bus from Bilston.

The Deputy Coroner: You mean she made a note of the district on the way? Is that what is at the back of your mind? – Yes, sir.

Continuing, witness said there was nothing to prop upon his wife's mind, except that they had left Bilston.

Horace Wellings, of 113, Walsall Road, Willenhall, a gauger, employed by the Birmingham Navigation Company, gave evidence of the recovery of the body from the canal at Bloomfield.

PS Windridge, of Tipton Green, said every enquiry had been made, but no one apparently saw the woman from the time she left the house until she was found in the water. Witness was called to the side of the canal at Bloomfield shortly after 9am on Thursday, and upon examination of the body formed the opinion that it had been in the water for some days. There were no marks on the canal bank and the weeds were not disturbed. The woman had been very queer during the past few weeks, and Dr. Wells had informed witness that there was very marked depression.

Dr. W. Murdoch, who said he had examined the body, said there were no marks of violence. Death was due to asphyxia from drowning. It was his opinion that the body had been in the water for several days.

A verdict was recorded of Suicide whilst Temporarily of Unsound Mind.”

"Police have closed off Bilston town centre today after two men were stabbed in the early hours. Officers were called to a disorder involving a group of men at the MARKET TAVERN in Church Street just after 1am. They found two men, aged 20 and 35, with stab wounds. Some businesses have been unable to open today due to police investigations at the scene. The men were treated by paramedics before being taken to hospital, with injuries which are not believed to be life-threatening. Police have cordoned off the area as forensics experts examine the scene, and CCTV is being retrieved and reviewed as part of the ongoing enquiries. A spokesman for West Midlands Police said, 'Officers will also be out on extra patrols around the town centre to offer reassurance to residents and businesses.....'"

“On Thursday, Mr. Archer B. Smith (Deputy County Coroner) held an inquest at the MINERS ARMS INN, Thompson Street, Bilston, touching the death of Frederick Lewis (14), whose parents live at 37, Thompson Street. Dr. Ashley Smith said death was due to an abscess on the brain, caused by a blow. Whilst larking together at Bilston Wake the deceased and other boys knocked down a boy named David Dudley, aged 12. Dudley thereupon threw a stone, which struck the deceased on the head.

The jury returned a verdict that the boy died from effects of the blow, adding that as Dudley was of tender age they thought he could not be held responsible.

Evening Despatch 5/10/1934

“An admission that he had failed to account to clients for £849 6s 6d he had collected for them was made by Joseph Wilfred Law, of 19, Tividale Road, Tipton, a house and estate agent carrying on business under the style of Trevor and Law, when he appeared for his examination in bankruptcy at Dudley today.

His liabilities amounted to £849 6s 6d, with a deficiency of £712 6s 2d, and he said that his failure was due to living beyond his income, particularly in the last two years, when business declined owing to slum clearance orders, involving property for which he collected the rents, and heavy betting losses during the last nine months.

He said in 1921 he became the licensee of the MINERS ARMS, Bilston, the ingoing being paid by his father-in-law, Mr. Downing, but he removed in 1922 owing to ill health. In July 1923, with £350 given to him by his wife, he purchased for £300 a business of house and estate agents. At first his weekly rent collections were £120, and his commission was £5 or £6, but he increased his business very considerably. For some time he lived within his income, but then his personal expenses increased, and in 1927 he had to sell some property to keep himself straight. The Official Receiver: So as long ago as 1927 you were living on monies that did not belong to you? – Yes.

In July, 1930, said Law, a statement was prepared which showed that he was deficient in moneys collected for clients to the extent of £1,108, but that was put right by a gift from Mr. Downing of £1,100. He was then solvent, and for 12 months he endeavoured to reduce his expenses and live quietly. His expenses increased again, however, and his income began to fall owing to slum clearance schemes.....”

“A well-known Dudley estate agent, Joseph Wilfred Law, who was sent to prison for three months yesterday for offences under the Bankruptcy Acts, blamed slum clearance orders for his decline in income which resulted in gambling to try to retrieve his position. He pleaded guilty to failing to keep proper books and increasing the extent of his insolvency by gambling....”

“An unusual point arose at Bilston today affecting Sunday morning trips from public houses.

Job Lockley, licensee of the MINERS ARMS, Thompson Street, Bilston, pleaded guilty to supplying beer during prohibited hours, while three members of the Miners Arms Outing Club pleaded guilty to aiding and abetting. Lockley was fined £3 and the four other defendants 10s each.

Evidence showed that a number of members from the club were going on a tour and eight bottles of beer and a quantity of mineral water and sandwiches were brought from the house and placed in two chars-a-banc. Lockley told the police that he had drawn the beer the previous night and placed it in the yard. He did not think he was doing wrong and no money had been paid for the beer. Later, Lockley explained that the members of the club paid so much a week for refreshments.”

Bilston and Willenhall Times 4/2/1928

“In applying for the renewal of the license of the MINERS ARMS, Thompson Street, Bilston, to J. Lockley, Mr. F. Cooper (Walsall) mentioned that on July 22nd there was a conviction against the house, and it might be imagined that the offence was a serious one. It arose, however, purely through a misunderstanding on the part of the licensee. It applied to some beer, which had been served on a Saturday night, and had been put on premises at the back, to be called for on Sunday morning by a party who were having a day’s outing. The licensee had held the house for six years without the slightest complaint by the police or the owners of the property, and at the legal proceedings the police were good enough to intimate that they did not regard this as a case where the Brewery Company should be asked to get rid of the licensee. Mr. Cooper asked the Justices in this case, where the conviction was due entirely to a misconception, to renew the license to a man who had borne so excellent a character in the eyes of the police and his employers.

The application was granted.”

“Richard Lockley (61), licensee of the MINERS ARMS, Thompson Street, Bilston, was committed to Staffordshire Quarter Sessions at Bilston yesterday on a charge of breaking into a butchers shop, and stealing £1. Lockley had pleaded not guilty and declined to give evidence or call witnesses at that stage.”

Birmingham Daily Post 26/9/1956

"Richard Lockley (61), a Bilston licensee, who admitted breaking into his friend's shop and stealing a marked £1 note, was given a conditional discharge and ordered to pay £5 cost at Staffordshire Sessions yesterday. Lockley was said to have resigned his post as licensee of the MINERS ARMS, Thompson Street, Bilston. Mr. Stephen Brown, defending, said Lockley, who had previously borne an excellent character, could give no explanation for the offences. He was not short of money and was not a man who had dishonest tendencies."

Birmingham Journal 25/12/1852

“At Bilston Public Office, on Friday, Elizabeth Clarke, a servant in the employ of Mr. Thomas Jones, licensed victualler, Wolverhampton Street, was charged with stealing three yards of silk, a silk shawl, and several other articles of wearing apparel, the property of her mistress. The prisoner had been in Mr. Jones’s service about five weeks, and in consequence of having lost a number of articles from his house, suspicion fell upon her, and she was discharged on Friday last. On Wednesday the prisoner went again to the house, when Mr. Jones gave her into custody, having received information which induced him to do so. The property produced he identified as belonging to him. A witness, named Mary Evans, stated that the prisoner came to her house on the night she left Mr. Jones’s service, and produced a piece of silk, which she said she intended to have made into a bonnet; she also saw the shawl, which was now produced. Having heard that some things had been missed from Mr. Jones’s house, she informed him of what she had seen, and prisoner was given into the custody of Inspector Thompson. The prisoner, who denied the charge, was committed to the Sessions.”

AND

“Staffordshire Epiphany Sessions.....

Elizabeth Clarke, aged 21, was indicted for stealing two yards of black silk, a silk handkerchief, silk shawl, and other articles, the property of Thomas Jones, at Bilston. It appeared from the evidence of the prosecutor, that the prisoner, a domestic servant, was dismissed from his service on the 10th December, when some of the articles were found in her box. The articles were produced, and identified by prosecutor; but in the course of cross-examination, it was elicited that the things were missed by the prosecutor’s wife, and not by himself, and that the prisoner had given an account to her mistress of how she got the things, and that she had given her 2s for the handkerchief.

Mr. Wright, who conducted the prosecution, having closed his case, Mr. M’Mahon submitted that there was no evidence to go to the jury in the absence of the prosecutor’s wife, contending that it was a rule of law, when a person had in his possession stolen property, and gave a reasonable account of that possession, for the prosecution to show that account to be untrue. The Court, however, considered there was evidence to go to the jury; when Mr. M’Mahon addressed the jury on behalf of the prisoner. Mr. Wright replied.

The Chairman, in the course of his summing up, directed the jury to dismiss from their minds the evidence respecting the handkerchief, the prosecution having failed to disprove the prisoner’s statement. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty, and the prisoner was discharged.”

“The inquest on the body of the child named Isaac Davies, found dead in a well, in its father’s house, at Bilston, was resumed on Friday last, when the jury returned a verdict of wilful murder against the mother.”

AND

Ellen Davies, a meanly-attired female, 24 years of age, was indicted on the Coroner’s inquisition for the wilful murder of her infant child, Isaac Davies, on the 17th of December last, at Wolverhampton. Mr. Corbett prosecuted, and Mr. Cooke, on the suggestion of the Court, defended the prisoner.

Margaret Holmes, the first witness, said: The prisoner at the bar and her husband live next door to my house, at Wolverhampton. She had a child, which would have been a month old on the 17th of December last. The husband came to my house on the evening of that day, and made an alarm. The prisoner was in her own house at the time.

I went into the house with the husband, and after he had lighted a candle, I went into the cellar, where I saw the child in a small well of water. The husband, by the aid of a pick, got the child out. I asked the prisoner how she came to place the child there, as if, she had made an alarm, she (the witness) would have gone to her assistance. The prisoner said she did not make an alarm because she was not able to speak. The prisoner seemed moping at the time the child was found, but did not render any assistance. After laying the child out, the prisoner said she went down the cellar for water, and the child slipped out of her hands. This occurred, the prisoner said, soon after six in the morning. I again asked her why she did not make an alarm, when she again said she was not able to speak.

Cross-examined by Mr. Cooke: I do not remember when she was taken to the Lunatic Asylum.

Superintendent McCrae said the well in which the child was found was 5ft 11in in depth, and contained about 3ft of water. The well had shelving sides.

Mr. Cooper, surgeon, stated that from the appearance of the deceased child, it had evidently been in the water some hours. There were no marks of violence upon it. He some years before attended the prisoner for symptoms of insanity, and recommended her removal to the Asylum. His impression undoubtedly was that the prisoner was temporarily insane at the time she dropped the child into the well.

Cross-examined: He had known cases of insanity where the person afflicted had a consciousness of doing wrong, but yet could not resist doing it.

The witness Holmes being recalled, said the prisoner had always been kind to her children.

Mr. Cooke briefly addressed the Jury on behalf of the prisoner, and contended that the child got into the well by accident.

In summing up the evidence, the learned Judge remarked on the absence of mind displayed by the prisoner on the discovery of the child in the well, and also on the evidence of the surgeon, showing that the prisoner had before been subject to temporary insanity. After a short consultation, the Jury returned a verdict of not guilty, on the ground of insanity."

"Thomas Jones, of the NAGS HEAD, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, was charged with having in his possession and using grains of paradise, for the adulteration of his beer. Mr. Underhill was retained for the defendant, who pleaded not guilty.

Mr. John A. Taylor, officer of inland revenue, stated that on the 23rd of June last, he, in company with another officer, visited the brewhouse premises of the defendant. In the corner of the yard, on an ash heap, the witness discovered a quantity of spent hops, containing a large admixture of grains of paradise. They then examined the hop sieve, and found grains of paradise in a crushed state, and on the edge of the copper they discovered several particles of the same article, which had evidently been boiled up.

Mr. Henry Hoyte, supervisor, confirmed the evidence of the last witness in all its main particulars, and added that about twelve or fourteen days after the discovery the defendant called on the witness, and said he came to explain how the grains of paradise were found as they had been; that a number of beer barrels, belonging to another brewer, had been brought to his premises to be cleansed, and that the grains of paradise must have dropped from them. The witness laughed, and asked the defendant why he had taken a fortnight to concoct such a tale, and why he had not made this statement at the time of detection. The defendant replied that Mr. Underhill, his attorney, had told him to say so.

Mr. Underhill then addressed the Bench, and offered an ingenious defence, namely, that John Whiston, a broker at Darlaston, had purchased five beer barrels at a sale at West Bromwich, and finding a sale advertised at the defendant's house on the 19th of June, he had transferred the casks thither; that he (Whiston) had himself brought them in, and that finding they were foul, and that Jones was about to brew on the 22nd of the same month, when hot water would be plenty, he had asked and received permission to cleanse them; that in performing this operation he had used the hop sieve, and fetched the water from the copper, and that thus the sieve first, and subsequently the copper, received that portion of the seeds detected by the officers. Mr. Underhill called Whiston to sustain his statement. The witness was sharply handled by Mr. Dance in cross-examination, and could not tell from whom he purchased the barrels, or to whom he sold them.

Mr. Underhill then proposed to call the defendant Jones as a witness, but after referring to the authorities, the Bench decided he could not do so.

Mr. Leigh then announced that the Magistrates considered a reasonable defence had not been sustained, and therefore inflicted a penalty of £50 in one count, the collector not having pressed for a conviction on the other."

Staffordshire Sentinel 3/1/1857

“On Monday an inquest was held at the NAGS HEAD, Bilston, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, on the body of Diana Winsfer, a child about five years old, who died in consequence of burns she received on Wednesday, the 24th of December, 1856. From the evidence of a woman named Emma Severn, and the mother of the deceased, it appeared that the child was left in the house with a younger sister and a boy about eight years old, the mother of deceased being out washing. About six o'clock screams were heard, and Emma Severn went out of her house to the deceased's parents house, and there met the deceased running out of the house with her clothes on fire. Verdict accordingly.”

Birmingham Journal 17/8/1850

“On the afternoon of Friday last, a melancholy accident occurred in an old pit shaft, in the field belonging to Messrs. Pemberton and Benton, at the Deepfields. Two men, named Hugh Roberts and John Sheffield, were employed in cleansing the pit, which had not been in use for some time, and they had been clearing away a large mass of soil that had accumulated on a scaffolding situated about halfway up the shaft. When they had reached within two feet of the scaffold, however, the decayed boards gave way beneath their feet, and Sheffield having instantly got into the ‘bowk’ used for taking the rubbish out of the pit, he was hoisted to the top in safety. Roberts was less fortunate, for upon the ‘bowk’ descending to relieve him from his perilous position – it being supposed that he had managed to get upon a safe portion of the scaffold, as his voice was heard after Sheffield got to the pit mouth – it was found he had disappeared, and his body was afterwards recovered from the bottom of the shaft, where it lay in eight feet of water. His head was fractured in two places, and his body was also much injured by the fall. On Monday an inquest was held before T. M. Phillips, Esq. at the NAVIGATION INN, Shropshire Row, when a verdict of Accidental Death was returned. The deceased was about fifty years of age, of tall stature, and stout make.”

“Annual Licensing Meeting for Seisdon North.....

Application was made by Mr. Bolton, on behalf of Mr. William Hayward, of the NAVIGATION INN, Shropshire Row, Bilston. The house was stated to be worth £1,000 and to possess every requisite accommodation. It was also in the immediate neighbourhood of several large ironworks; and the testimonials in behalf of the applicant were unexceptionable. An accident had occurred, a gentleman having been thrown from his gig and taken to the house, and the want of some brandy had been severely felt on the occasion. After some consultation the license was granted.”

Worcester Journal 2/9/1852

“An inquest was held at the NAVIGATION INN, Shropshire Row, Bilston, on Wednesday, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, on the body of John Smith, thirty-six years of age, labourer, of Halls Buildings, Bradley, who had his head fractured in an affray near Pothouse Bridge, by a blow from a stone, so far back as the 16th of May last, and died on the afternoon of the 24th of August, from the injuries he received. The inquest was adjourned till the 7th instant, and Mr. Hancox, surgeon, was directed to make a post mortem examination of the body. Three young men, named David Jarman, Richard Jarman, and William Martin, were committed to the Sessions on the 3rd August, for the assault, and the deceased was then supposed to be out of danger, having been attended by Mr. Hancox, after several other surgeons who had been attending him had given up.”

AND

“The inquest held on the body of John Smith, at Bilston, terminated on Tuesday week in a verdict of manslaughter against three young men who were previously committed by the magistrates for the assault, namely William Martin, Richard Jarman, and David Jarman, and they were committed on the coroner’s warrant to Stafford gaol, on Wednesday.”

AND

William Martin, Richard Jarman, and David Jarman were found guilty of the manslaughter of John Smith, on the 24th August last, at Wolverhampton. The deceased was knocked down and severely kicked by the prisoners and other men, and was wounded in the forehead by a stone thrown at him. The prisoners were sentenced to two years’ imprisonment, the Judge remarking that if it had been clearly proved that they threw the stone, the sentence would have been one of transportation.”

Worcester Journal 28/10/1854

“On Saturday last an inquest was held before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, at the NAVIGATION INN, Bilston, on the body of a boy named George Dicken, about fourteen years of age, who was engaged to straighten iron at Messrs. Higgins and Row’s manufactory, at Bradley. He went to his work as usual, and there being not sufficient iron for him to commence with, he began playing near the spindles, and was caught and turned round so rapidly that his brains were dashed out before the engine could be stopped. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 1/8/1855

“An inquest was held at the NAVIGATION INN, Shropshire Row, Bilston, by T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, on Wednesday, touching the death of Morris Fellows, a little boy, about four years of age. The boy’s father, after giving deceased some bread and butter, a little before 8 o’clock on the preceding evening, left him to go to bed, and went to the NAVIGATION, where, in about twenty minutes, word was brought him that his boy had fallen in the canal, near the Pothouse Bridge. He instantly went there, and while inquiring of some bystanders after his child, he observed his cap floating on the canal, into which he plunged, and in about five minutes brought up the boy dead from the bottom of the canal. No one had previously sought to rescue the child. Verdict, Found Drowned.”

In this case Mr. H. Underhill appeared for the plaintiff, Mr. John Brereton, of Bilston, and Mr. Kettle, barrister, for the defendant, Mr. William Hayward, of the same township.

It appeared from the opening speech of Mr. Underhill, that the plaintiff is the administrator of Mr. Abraham Brereton, who died in the month of November, 1855, and the action was brought against his relative, the defendant, to recover £50 due upon a promissory note, which had been given by the defendant to the testator previously to his decease. The testator resided in the house of the defendant at Bilston, an inn, where he had a private room. He was a man possessing considerable property, and had been in the habit, from time to time, of lending the defendant sums of money.

The testator died between three and four o'clock on the morning of the 17th of November, and shortly afterwards, in the presence of the defendant, several relatives, and a person named Wood, a box in the testator's room was, with some unwillingness, opened. The box contained his will, and a pocket book in which were found two notes of hand, the one signed by a person named Duffield, and the other for £50, signed by the defendant, and payable to the testator 'on demand.' After the latter was produced, Wood read it, and said to the defendant, 'This is yours.' Hayward replied, 'Yes; it's all right,' and added, 'There were £50 worth of hops which the old man (the testator) bought for Isaac (meaning the defendant's eldest son), which will make him (Isaac) and me level.' The notes of hand were again put into the pocket book, which was replaced in the chest, the latter and the room door locked, and the keys kept by the defendant.

The executors to the will were Mr. R. Bew and Mr. Henry Wootten, of Bilston, but the latter gentleman dying, and the former refusing to act, letters of administration were taken out by Mr. John Brereton.

Mr. Underhill said he was informed that the defence would be that the £50 had been paid. No doubt a receipt for that sum would be produced; but his answer to that was that there had been several money transactions between the testator and the defendant, and although a certain promissory note or a bill of exchange for £50, payable in three months after date, might be produced, yet that was not the promissory note upon which the plaintiff sought to recover.....

The learned counsel remarked upon the evidence of the witnesses, the confusion of the affairs of the family, as testified by witnesses, the bad conduct of the members of the family towards the defendant, and mentioned circumstances which, he said, went to show that the defendant had acted honourable and honestly to the family.....

Mr. Bolton, solicitor, stated that Wood, one of the witnesses for the plaintiff, had told him that he could not swear that the note found in the pocket book bearing the defendant's signature, was payable 'on demand.'

His Honour summed up, and the Jury returned a verdict for the defendant.

There was a cross action, Hayward v Brereton, but the hearing of this was adjourned.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 10/2/1858

“On Monday last, W. H. Phillips Esq, deputy coroner, held an adjourned inquest at the house of Mr. Haywood, the NAVIGATION INN, Bilston, on the body of Harriet Haywood, 37 years of age, wife of the landlord of the inn. The inquest was held in accordance with the wish of the friends of the deceased, certain rumours having been current to the cause of death. At the opening of the inquest Mr. Hancox, surgeon, gave it as his opinion that the deceased had died from excessive drinking, but according to the desire of Mrs. Haywood's friends the inquest was adjourned in order that Mr. Best, surgeon, might make a post mortem examination of the body. At the adjourned inquiry Mr. Best confirmed the opinion of Mr. Hancox as to the cause of the deceased's death, namely, the excessive use of intoxicating drinks. There were, he said, no marks of violence upon the body. The Jury returned a verdict accordingly.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 22/1/1868

“On Monday last, an inquest was held at the NAVIGATION INN, Salop Street, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, touching the death of Hannah Plant, a child three years of age, who died on Saturday from the effects of burns. The deceased it seemed was on Thursday last left in the care of an elder sister; but it went upstairs without her knowledge, and whilst igniting some lucifer matches set fire to its clothes and was severely burnt. A verdict of Accidental Death was returned.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 27/5/1868

"On Thursday week, the inquest on three of the four deceased killed by the boiler explosion, on the 1st inst, at Bradley Hall Ironworks, near Bilston, belonging to Messrs. East and Co., was concluded at the NAVIGATION INN, Bradley, before Mr. W. H. Phillips, coroner.....

The coroner read the report upon the explosion by Mr. E. B. Marten, chief inspector of the Midland Steam Boiler and Inspection Company, whom his worship had instructed to make the official examination.....

The coroner summed up. All the responsibility, he said, of seeing that the boilers were in good condition seemed to have been thrown upon two working engineers, neither of whom in their evidence could account for the explosion. Mr. Marten, finding the boiler in fair condition, looked elsewhere for the cause of the explosion, when he detected the dash-plate affixed as he had described. Danger was thus existing without the engineer in charge knowing it. It was a matter of very great regret that the plate was so affixed.

The jury debated their verdict in private. In half an hour they announced as their verdict that the deceased persons lost their lives in consequence of the explosion of a boiler, at Messrs. East's works, and such explosion was caused by the injudicious placing of a plate on the boiler, and allowing it to be left there in such a way as to interfere with the escape of the steam. In an addendum the jury censured the engineers in charge of the boiler for allowing the dash-plate to remain in the dangerous position described. They recommended the owners of boilers to do away with all dash-plates in boilers, but that if they were used there should be an independent safety-valve attached to every boiler; and they likewise recommended that the owners of all boilers should have them frequently examined by competent engineers."

William Hayward died in the 1st quarter of 1880.

"Charles Preston, landlord of the NAVIGATION INN, Salop Street, Bradley, was summoned on a charge of having permitted drunkenness in his house on the night of the 22nd November. The prosecution was conducted by Chief Superintendent Longden, Mr. H. B. Hill, of Wolverhampton, appearing for the defence.

Mr. W. M. Hancox, surgeon, said that nearly at midnight on the date given, on passing defendant's house, he saw a short distance away two men, named Joseph Price and John Webster, in a drunken condition. Witness made a remark about men getting in such a disgraceful condition, whereupon Webster, who carried a gun, pointed the weapon at witness.

Price and Webster admitted having been in defendant's house, but said they only had a glass of brandy there, but a man named Brockley swore that he saw them supplied each with whiskey.

The defendant was fined 10s and costs, and Webster and Price were each fined 14s 6d, including costs, for being drunk."

"Thomas Beech, grocer, Salop Street, was charged with refusing to quit the NAVIGATION INN, Salop Street, Bradley, on the night of the 26th of January, and with using threats to Charles Preston, the landlord. Mr. Dallow appeared for the complainant, and Mr. R. A. Willcock for the defence.

From the evidence (which was most contradictory), it appeared that certain reports had been in circulation in Bradley, and defendant went to Preston's house for an explanation, when Preston desired him to leave.

Beech was fined 6d and bound over in his own recognizance to keep the peace."

Darlaston Weekly Times 10/10/1885

“On Monday morning, W. H. Phillips, Esq. Coroner, held an inquest at the NAVIGATION INN, Salop Street, Bradley, on the body of James Hawkes (63), stock-taker, of William Street, Bradley.

Charles Hawkes, son of deceased, stated that he last saw his father alive on Thursday morning, when he appeared to be in his usual health. Witness heard that he was missing on Friday morning. His breakfast had been sent to the Bankfield Ironworks (Messrs. Groucutt’s), and he was not there. Witness afterwards saw deceased’s body on the canal side, and his legs were then tied with his neck handkerchief. Deceased had been in trouble ever since Messrs. Groucutt’s ironworks stopped, and he lost his job. He had only been working lately as a casual hand since the works had been re-started, earning boy’s wages, and he had often expressed a wish that he could die.

Mrs. Eliza Cotterill stated that on Friday morning she heard of deceased being missing from his work, and later on she was passing an opening near her house, which looked onto the canal, and saw deceased’s body in the water. When he was got out witness noticed that his legs were tied. She had noticed that deceased had been strange in his manner lately, and had seen him walking about, clapping his hands and crying. The previous witness stated that deceased had worked for Messrs. Groucutt for about 35 years, and he had been in great trouble since he lost his situation.

The jury returned a verdict that deceased Drowned himself whilst in a state of Temporary Insanity.”

“Thomas Richards, a miner, of 38, Oxford Street, Bilston, who has been missing since Saturday evening last, was found drowned in the Canal at Pothouse Bridge this morning, and his body has been removed to Mr. Preston’s, the NAVIGATION INN, to await an inquest.

Another man named Thomas Richards, who was thrown out of a trap on Sunday evening, was also removed to Mr. Preston’s, and little hopes are entertained of his recovery. It is said the two men are relatives.”

“This (Wednesday) morning, Mr. E. B. Thorneycroft, deputy coroner, held an inquest at the NAVIGATION INN, Salop Street, Bradley, on view of the body of Thomas Richards, aged 34, collier, of Oxford Street, Bilston.

The evidence adduced went to show that on Saturday night the deceased had been drinking somewhat heavily, and that he went along the canal side for the purpose of reaching his home. As he did not return on the Sunday, and as a hat had been found floating on the waters of the canal, it was feared that some ill had befallen him. The canal was dragged and the body of the deceased found on Monday morning.

The police stated that there were no suspicious circumstances connected with the case, and the jury returned a verdict of Found Drowned.”

“On Saturday, an inquest was held at the NAVIGATION INN, Bradley, by Mr. W. H. Phillips, Esq, coroner, on the body of Sarah Moseley (65), who lately resided with her son, at the Pleck, Walsall.

William Ashdown, labourer, Salop Street, Bradley, stated that he was passing alongside the Birmingham Canal, on Friday, and saw some bubbles arising on the surface of the water. He stood for a few minutes, and saw the body of a woman in the water. With assistance he got the body out and it was removed to the NAVIGATION INN.

Corroborative evidence was given by a man who assisted in taking the body out of the water.

Edward Moseley, of Bridge Street, Bilston, gave evidence that on Wednesday night, about half-past eight o’clock, deceased, who was his mother, came to his house, but only stayed a few minutes. She did not go inside, saying she had only called as she was passing.

The inquest was then adjourned to give time for a post mortem examination, until Monday.

Mr. F. J. Griffiths, surgeon, of Bilston, gave medical evidence to the effect that he had made an examination and found that there were no marks of violence of any kind, and death had been the result of drowning.

Emma Norton, a relative of the deceased, living at the Fiery Holes, stated that the deceased called at witness’s house on the Wednesday preceding her death, about two o’clock. After having tea, witness went with her as far as Moxley Church, deceased then saying that she was going home.

The Jury returned an open verdict to the effect that deceased was Found Drowned, but by what means there was no evidence to show.”

Lancaster Gazette 7/5/1887

“On Wednesday, at Wolverhampton, William Porter, a policeman stationed at Bradley, near Bilston, was charged with burglariously entering the NAVIGATION INN, Bradley, kept by Charles Preston, on the 21st ult, and again on Tuesday last, and stealing four bottles of home-made wine. The prisoner, it is alleged, committed the burglaries after the house was closed at eleven o’clock at night by lifting up the bar-room sash window on Tuesday night. He was apprehended while committing the burglary by the landlord.

The prisoner pleaded guilty, and was committed to the Assizes on both charges.”

“Stafford and Salop Assizes.....

William Porter, 21, police officer, pleaded guilty to burglariously breaking and entering the dwelling house of Charles Preston, at Bradley, near Bilston, on two occasions, and stealing bottles of ginger wine, aniseed, orange bitters, and peppermint, the property of Charles Preston.

Mr. Corser, for the defence, called attention to the paltry character of the offence, and asked his lordship to bear in mind that the prisoner had been three years in the police force, during which time he had always borne a good character, and that this conviction would result in his discharge from the force.

His lordship said that the prisoner's position made the offence more serious than it otherwise would have been. Prisoner would be sentenced to eight months' hard labour.”

“At Bilston Police Court, yesterday, Charles Preston, publican, Salop Street, Bradley, was charged with a serious assault upon William Bayliss, also of Salop Street. Evidence was given that on the night of the 18th inst, the two men quarrelled, that the prisoner struck Bayliss several times, and that he knocked him into the gutter.

Mr. J. H. Gough, house surgeon at the Wolverhampton Hospital, stated that Bayliss was suffering from a serious compound fracture of the leg.

Preston was remanded for a week.”

“On Tuesday, at Bilston Police Court, Charles Preston, publican, late of the NAVIGATION INN, Salop Street, Bradley, was charged with unlawfully wounding, on the 18th of June, William Bayliss, ironworker, Bilston Street. The defendant has been in the hospital since the date of the alleged assault.

The prosecutor's evidence was to the effect that prisoner, after he had spoken as to the payment of some money that prosecutor owed him, knocked him down twice. Prosecutor's leg struck the kerbstone as he fell, and it was found at the Wolverhampton Hospital to be fractured.

After hearing corroborative evidence, the Bench committed the prisoner for trial.”

[At the Assizes in November 1887 Charles Preston pleaded guilty to common assault. To pay a fine of 10s and £5 towards the costs of the prosecution; in default of payment to be imprisoned for one calendar month hard labour.]

“Bankruptcy Proceedings.....

Charles Preston, coal dealer and publican, NAVIGATION INN, Bradley, appeared at the Wolverhampton Bankruptcy Court, yesterday, on his public examination. He was represented by Mr. Rhodes.

The liabilities were £575, and the assets £152, leaving a deficiency of £423.

The debtor acquired the NAVIGATION INN in October 1880, he having previously been a keymaker, at Willenhall. The lease of those premises he assigned the following year by way of mortgage to secure £200, which he borrowed to enable him to pay on the fixtures and fittings at the BRIDGE INN, Ettingshall, which he took in that year. In 1885 the BRIDGE INN was disposed of, as the debtor asserted, at a loss of £167. He had also carried on the businesses of a pig dealer and coal dealer. Finding his affairs becoming complicated the debtor called a meeting of his creditors on the 14th June, when he offered to hand over to them his estate. This, however, they declined to accept, and a receiving order was made.

The examination was adjourned until the 23rd August.”

"Bilston foundry worker Sam Ellis, of 14, Rosemary Road Tipton, won the annual Bradley Bank Holiday marathon race for the NAVIGATION Challenge Trophy on Monday – and all because of his workmates. 'The only reason I entered was because they kidded me I wouldn't get into the first half dozen,' he said breathlessly after the race. He added that the race was his first for a 'good many years.' Receiving a 3½ minutes allowance, Sam, who at 38 was the second oldest competitor in the race, covered the four mile course in 25min 30sec.

Thirty-five-years-old Ron Bilboe, of 11, Chantry Crescent – one of three brothers in the race – was a close second, five seconds behind. He received a three minutes allowance.

Third place went to the youngest competitor and one of two scratch men in the race, 20-years-old Albert Smith, of 23, Valley Road, Upper Gornal. His time of 23min 50sec was 2min 50sec outside the record set by Alf Norman in 1950.

Last years' winner, Raymond Holmes, and R. A. Newall, the first man home in 1954, finished joint sixth.

Fifty-four-years-old J. T. ('Jotter') Perrins, of Coseley, was the oldest man taking part. He has been a competitor in the event for 33 years and each time he covers the course walking. A well-known local walker, 'Jotter' says he would rather do that than break into a 'degrading' run.

At the presentation which took place at the NAVIGATION INN on Monday night 'Jotter' received a specially struck medal commemorating the 33 years he has been associated with the event.

The race, which started and finished at the NAVIGATION INN in Salop Street, was watched by nearly 1,000 spectators. All proceeds from the event will go towards the Bradley Old Age Pensioners Fund.

For the record, 13 runners took part in the race and not one of them was tempted to pop into any one of the 13 public houses on the route."

“Inquests before T. M. Phillips, Esq, Coroner.....

On Tuesday last, at the NEW BULLS HEAD INN, Bilston, upon the body of a child 8 years old, named Abraham Layton. The parents of the deceased lived in a cottage in the Old Friezland Colliery, within three yards of which there is an open coal-pit, and while the deceased was missing for a few minutes, his mother heard something fall down the pit, and immediately informed her husband of it, and as the child could not be found, the father tied a rope round his waist, and in that way was let down the pit by his wife and a man named Garbett; he brought up the child, who died in about half an hour afterwards, in consequence of the injuries he had received. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

“The following inquisitions have been held before T. M. Phillips, Esq, Coroner.....

At the NEW BULLS HEAD, Bilston, on the body of John Jones, a miner, about twenty-six years old, whose death was caused by his driving a head towards the shaft of an old pit, instead of making a hole into it, as directed by the bailiff, with a long punch, in consequence of which the water in the shaft rushed upon the deceased and other workmen, and he was much hurt by a great stone which the water rolled over him. The deceased died on Thursday last, in consequence of the crushes and bruises he received. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

“An excellent roadside Inn, a Dwelling House, and Two Plots of Building Land adjoining, also two small Tenements, in the township of Bilston.

To be Sold by Auction, by Richard Corbett, by direction of the devisee in trust for sale, acting under the will of the late Mr. Phineas Bullock, on Friday, the 9th day of May, 1845, at the BULLS HEAD INN, Holyhead Road, between Bilston and Wolverhampton, in the county of Stafford, at five o'clock in the afternoon, in the following or such other lots as may be agreed upon at the time of sale, and subject to conditions then to be produced.

Lot I. All that newly-erected and substantially built House and Premises, known as the BULLS HEAD INN, now occupied by Mr. P. Bullock, comprising on the basement five spacious cellars; on the ground floor an entrance hall, stair lobby, back passage and staircase to the club room, two large parlours, spacious tap room, convenient bar and back kitchen; on the chamber floor, a large club room or lodge room, with wainscot partition and four commodious bed chambers, with two large attics extending over the whole length, which may be converted into four good bed rooms.

At the back of this lot there is an enclosed yard, part of which is paved with blue bricks, a large brewhouse with soft water cistern, lead pump and store room, gig house, malt and store rooms over, an excellent five stalled stable, with hay loft over, and numerous other conveniences. The whole of the premises are newly and substantially built, and are fitted-up with grates, cupboards, racks, stalls, and every other requisite.

Lot II. A Plot of Building Land adjoining Lot I having a frontage of twenty-nine yards to the Holyhead road.

Lot III. A neat Dwelling House adjoining Lot I comprising an excellent cellar, entrance hall, parlour, and sitting-room, stair lobby, two capital bedrooms, and a large attic, an enclosed yard, in which is a convenient servant's kitchen with soft water cistern under, a lead pump, and other conveniences. These premises were built with Lot I, are fitted up in the same manner, and are now in the occupation of Miss Bullock.

Lot IV. A Plot of Building Land adjoining Lot III having a frontage of twenty yards or thereabouts to the Holyhead road.

Phineas Bullock, NEW BULLS HEAD, Priestfield. [1849]

“On Saturday afternoon last Abraham Collins, a boy about seven years of age, was killed under distressing circumstances, in an engine house at Priestfield, the property of Mr. William Ward. It appears that the boy was in the habit of playing about the engine house, and going in and out to see his father, Michael Collins, who had the management of the engine. About twenty minutes past four o'clock his father went up into the gallery of the engine house for the purpose of oiling part of the machinery, and found his boy on a piece of wood, called the bunting piece (upon which the catchpin of the beam falls upon every alternate stroke of the engine), with his head dreadfully fractured, and quite dead. An inquest was held on his body on Monday last, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, at the NEW BULLS HEAD, Wolverhampton Road, Bilston, when the father of the boy detailed the circumstances of the accident, and gave it as his opinion that the death of the deceased was caused by his being crushed between the catchpin and the bunting piece. Sarah Gratton deposed that the parents of the child were very kind to him, and that the father was in very great distress when he found the boy killed in the gallery of the engine. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

Lot 1. All that substantially erected and well fitted up Freehold Old-Licensed Public House, known as the NEW BULLS HEAD INN, fronting the Great Holyhead Turnpike Road, in the township of Bilston. The House consists of five dry and excellent cellars on the basement, with entrance into yard; on the ground floor, front parlour, front tap room, bar, back parlour, china closet, cooking kitchen, larder; the upper rooms consist of four bed rooms, large club room, dressing room, and two large attics. At the rear of the premises a large brewhouse, with soft water cistern and lead pump; coach-house, five-stall stable, over which is hay-loft, malt and store rooms; a large yard, walled in; piggeries, and other out-offices; an excellent gateway entrance to the back premises. The whole of the Premises are erected and fitted up in the best manner, and offers for capitalists and others either for occupation or investment one of the best opportunities that has occurred in the neighbourhood for a considerable time. The late proprietor occupied the premises upwards of twenty years, and they are now in the occupation of Mrs. M. Bullock.

Lot 2. All that valuable piece of Freehold Building Land, adjoining the last lot, and having a frontage to the above road of 28 yards, and containing in the whole 330 yards or thereabouts.

Further particulars from John Willim Hall, Esq, Solicitor; or the Auctioneer, all of Bilston."

"On Friday, at Bilston Police Court, John Doughton, John Holmes, and Samuel Jones, were committed for trial at the assizes for an assault on George Roberts, in Salop Row, Bilston, on the 9th inst, and robbery from his person. The parties had been drinking together. Afterwards Doughton knocked the prosecutor down, Jones struck him on the left temple and Holmes stood by. Prosecutor was robbed of his waistcoat, shoes, handkerchief, etc. Doughton and Jones were afterwards found sleeping together and the prosecutor's waistcoat was on the bed. Mr. Hancox, surgeon, said that the prosecutor was severely injured; he was at first senseless, having sustained concussion of the brain."

"Staffordshire Summer Assizes.....

Samuel Jones, 25, miner, John Doughton, 22, miner, and John Holmes (on bail), were indicted for feloniously assaulting George Roberts on the 8th of March, 1865, at the township of Bilston, and stealing from his person one waistcoat, and one pair of shoes, his property. Mr. Staveley Hill conducted the case for the prosecution. Mr. Brindley defended the prisoner Holmes, and Mr. Young defended the prisoner Doughton. The other prisoner was undefended.

It appeared that the prosecutor and the prisoner were drinking together on the day in question at the WATERLOO public house, Bilston, that they left there and went to the BULLS HEAD in Wolverhampton Road, and that after the prosecutor leaving there, the prisoners followed and committed the offence with which they were now charged. The evidence was very conflicting, and therefore the jury returned a verdict of not guilty."

“Elizabeth Ann Russell, aged twelve years, step-daughter of the landlord of the NEW BULLS HEAD INN, Bilston, was missed about six o'clock on Monday evening last. On search being made her body was found in a cistern of water in the brewhouse. The cistern, which is about eight feet deep, had been left uncovered by some negligent person who had been using it.”

It appeared from the evidence that on the night in question Davies, after receiving his pension at Wolverhampton, went into the BULLS HEAD INN, on Wolverhampton Road, Bilston, and had a glass or two of beer. Prisoner was there at the time, and heard the prosecutor state that he had been to Wolverhampton and drawn his pension. A little time after, he left, and was closely followed by the prisoner. Prisoner walked behind complainant some yards, until he got to a lonely spot, when he pounced upon him, threw him down, and robbed him of over £3 in money, a belt, and some articles.

Prisoner admitted his guilt, and expressed his sorrow for what he had done.

“An inquest was held at the NEW BULLS HEAD INN, Wolverhampton Road, Bilston, on Monday afternoon, before W. H. Phillips, Esq, the district coroner, on the body of Florence Louisa Sheldon, aged three months, the child of Charles and Maria Sheldon, of Cemetery Row, Bilston, who was found dead in bed by the side of its mother, on Saturday morning.

The evidence given by the mother showed that the child had suffered since its birth from tightness of the chest, for which complaint it had been treated by a medical man, and seemed to get better. On last Thursday week she took the child, which had recently been vaccinated, to Dr. Smith, to have the lymph removed from its arm. It seemed continually sleepy after this, and before being put to bed on the Thursday night, was sick. On Friday it was better, and did not awake all night. When the mother woke on Saturday morning, she found the child quite dead and cold, with its hands clenched. The child was entitled to half-benefit from a Foresters Club. The child had shown no signs of convulsive movements before, but the mother was quite satisfied that death proceeded from convulsions.

The Coroner said the child seemed to have been particularly well nourished and cared for, and the jury returned a verdict of Death from Natural Causes.”

“The South Staffordshire coroner, Mr. T. A. Stokes, held an inquest yesterday at the NEW BULLS HEAD, Bilston, touching the death of Elizabeth Pugh (46), widow, late of Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, whose dead body was found lying on the line at Priestfield on Saturday morning. The right side of the head was cut off.

The mother of the deceased said the latter had been practically destitute. She earned 2s 2d one week, and 1s 9d of that went in rent.

The body was seen on the line by the driver of an express train, and he gave information at Priestfield. Near the body was found a letter, of which the following is the substance: Mother, I am not so well as Betts says I am, and I leave home Saturday. Am out of the road now, so no more from your Elizabeth Evans. Tom said last time I went to see him that I was not his mother. So good night and God bless you, and Mary and Tom and all.

Police-constable Head said the deceased had a liking for intoxicants.
A verdict of Suicide whilst Temporarily Insane was returned.”

“On Monday afternoon an inquest was held at the BULLS HEAD INN, Bilston, respecting the death of Elizabeth Pugh (46), widow, late of Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, whose decapitated body was found on the Great Western line at Priestfield early on Saturday morning.

Evidence was given to the effect that the last week the deceased worked she earned only 2s 2d, out of which she paid 1s 9d for rent.

Mary Beddoes said she kept deceased for two days. On Friday night deceased said she was going to fetch three chairs from her house to sell in order to purchase some food. She left a letter with witness, written apparently by one of her sons, in which he said he should not go home again, but would allow his mother two shillings a week on condition that she did not come near him.

"A police raid at the NEW BULLS HEAD INN, Wellington Road, Bilston, on 8 June, led to the licensee, Percy Thomas Mercer, being fined £15, with £6 5s special costs, at Bilston today for using the bar of his premises for the purpose of betting. His wife, Eva Mercer, was fined £5 for assisting, and fines of £2 each for aiding and abetting were imposed on Joseph James Hale, Hall Park Street; Timothy Thomas Lewis, Green Lanes; William Booth, Prouds Lane; Enoch Downes, Best Road; and Jack Thomas Davies, Wellington Road.

The defendants pleaded guilty, and Mr. Ernest Brown, for the prosecution, said that when the raid was made Supt. Orland found nine betting slips and some money under the counter. Mercer told him, 'There is no denying I have taken some slips on the premises, but I do not take for myself. I have never received a halfpenny benefit from it. My trade was dropping off badly, and that is what made me do it. It has made a difference to trade.'

Mrs. Mercer said, 'I am only here to do my job. If anyone has come in with one I have put it on the top. There have not been any papers taken here until the last few months.'

Mr. Frank Cooper, for the defence, said Mercer had been very frank about the whole matter and had not made a penny out of any transactions. He had simply allowed regular customers to leave their bets at the inn for a bookmaker to collect. He became licensee of the inn because the firm with which he held a very responsible position was going out of business, and that was the only means of livelihood left to him. He had not previously been in the licensed trade."

“John Pritchett and Benjamin Badger were to have run five score yards, for £10 a side, at the Pleck, near Walsall, on Monday last, but owing to the illness of the former the race did not come off. Badger was ready to run, and claimed the money down, but it is withheld. Unless the matter is fairly settled we shall expose all parties concerned.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 2/8/1848

“At the Police Office, on Monday last, John Wilson and George Buxton were charged with burglariously breaking into the house of Philip Partridge, licensed victualler, at Ettingshall Lane, and stealing a top coat, some silver spoons, a variety of other articles, and some copper money, altogether of the value of £14 or £15. The house of the prosecutor was broken into on the night of Tuesday in Whitsun week, and a part of the property taken. It was again broken open within eight days afterwards, and other property stolen. On the night of Saturday the prisoner Wilson was seen by a woman named Hayward attempting to get into the house through a chamber window, but on her noticing him he ran off. Buxton came to see Wilson (who was apprehended with a tea kettle, battered to prevent identification, belonging to the prosecutor, in his possession) at the police station, and was taken into custody. When charged in the presence of Wilson with stealing the tea kettle, he said, ‘We bought it.’ Wilson said they found it under a rick near Penkridge, where they had slept the Sunday night before. The prisoners were committed.”

John Wilson and George Buxton were indicted for burglariously breaking into the dwelling house of Philip Partridge, on the 13th June, 1848, at Wolverhampton, and stealing a copper tea kettle, and other articles, his property. Mr. Kynnersley conducted the prosecution; the prisoners were undefended.

The prosecutor stated that on the night of the 13th June, 1848, he fastened his doors and windows before retiring to bed; and that on the following morning he received information from his servant that the cellar window had been broken open and an entrance effected into the house. Upon examination he missed a tea kettle, some silver spoons, a great coat, and other things. The copper kettle was produced and identified by the prosecutor and his servant, Ann Humphries, as the one stolen from his house on the night in question. The prisoners were apprehended about five weeks after the burglary, Wilson having the kettle, beaten up for old metal, under his arm.

The jury returned a verdict of guilty against Wilson, and acquitted Buxton.

A previous conviction for felony was proved against Wilson, and he was sentenced to be transported for seven years.”

“Celebration of the Marriage of the Princess Royal. On Monday the workmen of Mr. Edwin Dixon, tube works, Bilston Road, were entertained with a capital dinner, given them by Mr. Philip Partridge, NEW INN, Bilston Road. The chair was taken by Mr. Woodley, and the health of the Queen, the Prince, and Princess, were proposed and received with the most lively demonstration of loyalty. Several excellent songs and toasts were given, and the entertainment altogether afforded the greatest satisfaction.”

Staffordshire Advertiser 3/4/1858 - Marriages

Nottinghamshire Guardian 1/12/1859

“On Wednesday afternoon, the dead body of a man was found at the bottom of an old coalpit shaft in a worked out coal field, at the back of the NEW INN, on the Bilston Road, near Wolverhampton. Thomas Sabin, a workman to Messrs. Dixon, tube makers, aged about 30, left the NEW INN between eight and nine o’clock on Monday night, under the influence of drink; but as he had not reached his home, and as nothing more had been heard of him, search was yesterday being made for him in the canal over which he would have to pass. Whilst the search was being made, a woman discovered appearances about the pit referred to which raised her suspicions that Sabin might have fallen in there. The efforts of the searchers were turned into that direction, and Sabin’s dead body was found at the bottom of the eight feet of water which had accumulated in the shaft. The only protection which the pit had against such an accident was a covering of boarding first, and then earth. The boarding had evidently rotted till it could not bear the weight of the earth, and had gone in sufficiently to allow a man to fall through. The pit lies within fifteen yards of the road, along which Sabin would go from the inn to his home, and there is little doubt that he missed the pathway, and wandered, unconscious of his danger, to the fatal spot.”

“On Tuesday an inquest was opened at the NEW INN, Bilston Road, on the body of the child William Ellis Reece.....”

Sarah Ellis Reece was indicted for unlawfully and feloniously killing and slaying William Ellis Reece, at Wolverhampton, in March last. The prosecution was conducted by Mr. Hill; Mr. Motteram defended the prisoner. It appeared from the evidence that the prisoner was step-mother to the unfortunate child, whose death she was charged with causing. At the time of the child’s death he was about four years old, and it was shown by the evidence of Sarah Thompson, a neighbour, that the child was locked up by the prisoner in the depth of winter, and kept without fire or food, and that the poor little creature was often found lying at her door. She had also seen him go to the tub and drink soap suds, in consequence of not being able to get clean water. She further stated that the child always seemed ‘clammed.’ She had frequently given him food, and had heard his mother say she would kill him.

Mrs. Lear stated that she nursed the mother of the deceased during her confinement, and was with her until her death, which took place during confinement. The deceased was a healthy child. She had frequently seen the child since, and he appeared ‘clammed,’ and she had often given him food.

The medical evidence showed that the deceased had his right arm fractured in two places and his left arm broken. No less than eight bruises were found upon his head. The stomach was empty and contracted. Death had been caused or accelerated by violence or want of food.

The learned judge summed up the evidence very carefully. The jury immediately returned a verdict of guilty.

His Lordship said it was one of the most aggravated cases that had ever come before a court of justice, and then sentenced the prisoner to penal servitude for life.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 16/9/1863

“An inquest was held at the NEW INN, Bilston Road, on Saturday morning last, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, Coroner, on the body of Samuel Preston, a youth 14 years of age, who lost his life in a coal pit at Roughills Colliery on the previous Thursday. It seems that while standing at the bottom of the shaft a brick fell out of some part of the side and struck him upon his head and killed him.

“A question as to whether a part-time commercial traveller went by car from Stourbridge to Wolverhampton to deliver orders or to go to dog races on Whit-Monday arose in the prosecution at Wolverhampton Police Court today. Albert Horace Matthews, aged 34, of the DUKE WILLIAM INN, Stourbridge, was fined £10 and £1 special costs for improperly using petrol. A summons for using motor fuel to make a journey, the whole of which could have been made by public service vehicle, was dismissed.

Supt. Balance said Matthews had an arrangement with the licensee of the NEW INNS, Bilston Road, Wolverhampton, to call for orders for tobacco and cigarettes on a Saturday and deliver them the next Saturday.

War Reserve Young saw Matthews' car at a greyhound track and Matthews admitted he had been to the races, but he had also delivered articles elsewhere. The delivery was in fact a dozen boxes of matches.

The prosecution suggested that the journey was made simply for Matthews to go to the dog track and in any case there was a 20-minute bus service from Stourbridge to Wolverhampton.

Matthews denied that he made the journey because the dog races had been brought forward from the following Saturday. In addition to delivering at the NEW INNS, he had two other calls to make at Princes End on his way back, and he should have made the journey if there had been no dog races. With regard to the dozen boxes of matches, he said the licensee's wife only accepted that number.

The South Staffordshire Stipendiary said he was quite sure that Matthews would not have gone there on the Monday if there had been no dog races that day.”

"A landmark former Wolverhampton pub alongside the Metro route could be converted into apartments if a proposal is given the go-ahead. Bilston-based developers RJ & Sons Ltd want to create 14 flats at the NEW INN on A41 Bilston Road. If approved, there will be nine one-bedroom apartments and five two-bedroom apartments, along with 17 parking spaces on the site. The venue closed as a pub a number of years ago but operated as a Chinese buffet restaurant until it closed completely in 2018.

The application states, "The NEW INN is a large roadside public house occupying a prominent corner position on the junction of Bilston Road and Ettingshall Road. It was built in 1937 to designs by the architects A T and Bertram Butler of Priory Street, Dudley to replace an earlier public house which was demolished to make way for improvements to Ettingshall Road. Although built as a public house and run for one for many years the NEW INN was converted and operated as a Chinese buffet again for many years but has been closed since the middle of 2018. It is a prominent local landmark and a relatively rare example of an inter-war public house which survives, internally and externally, in virtually its original form. We intend to turn the building into 14 apartments. They all will have their own entrance with along with all separate services. There will be parking for 17 cars on the car park and is on a main bus route from Wolverhampton into Bilston. It is also on the main tram line through from Wolverhampton into Birmingham. And the Priestfield Metro stop is in walking distance."

It was converted into housing. [2021]

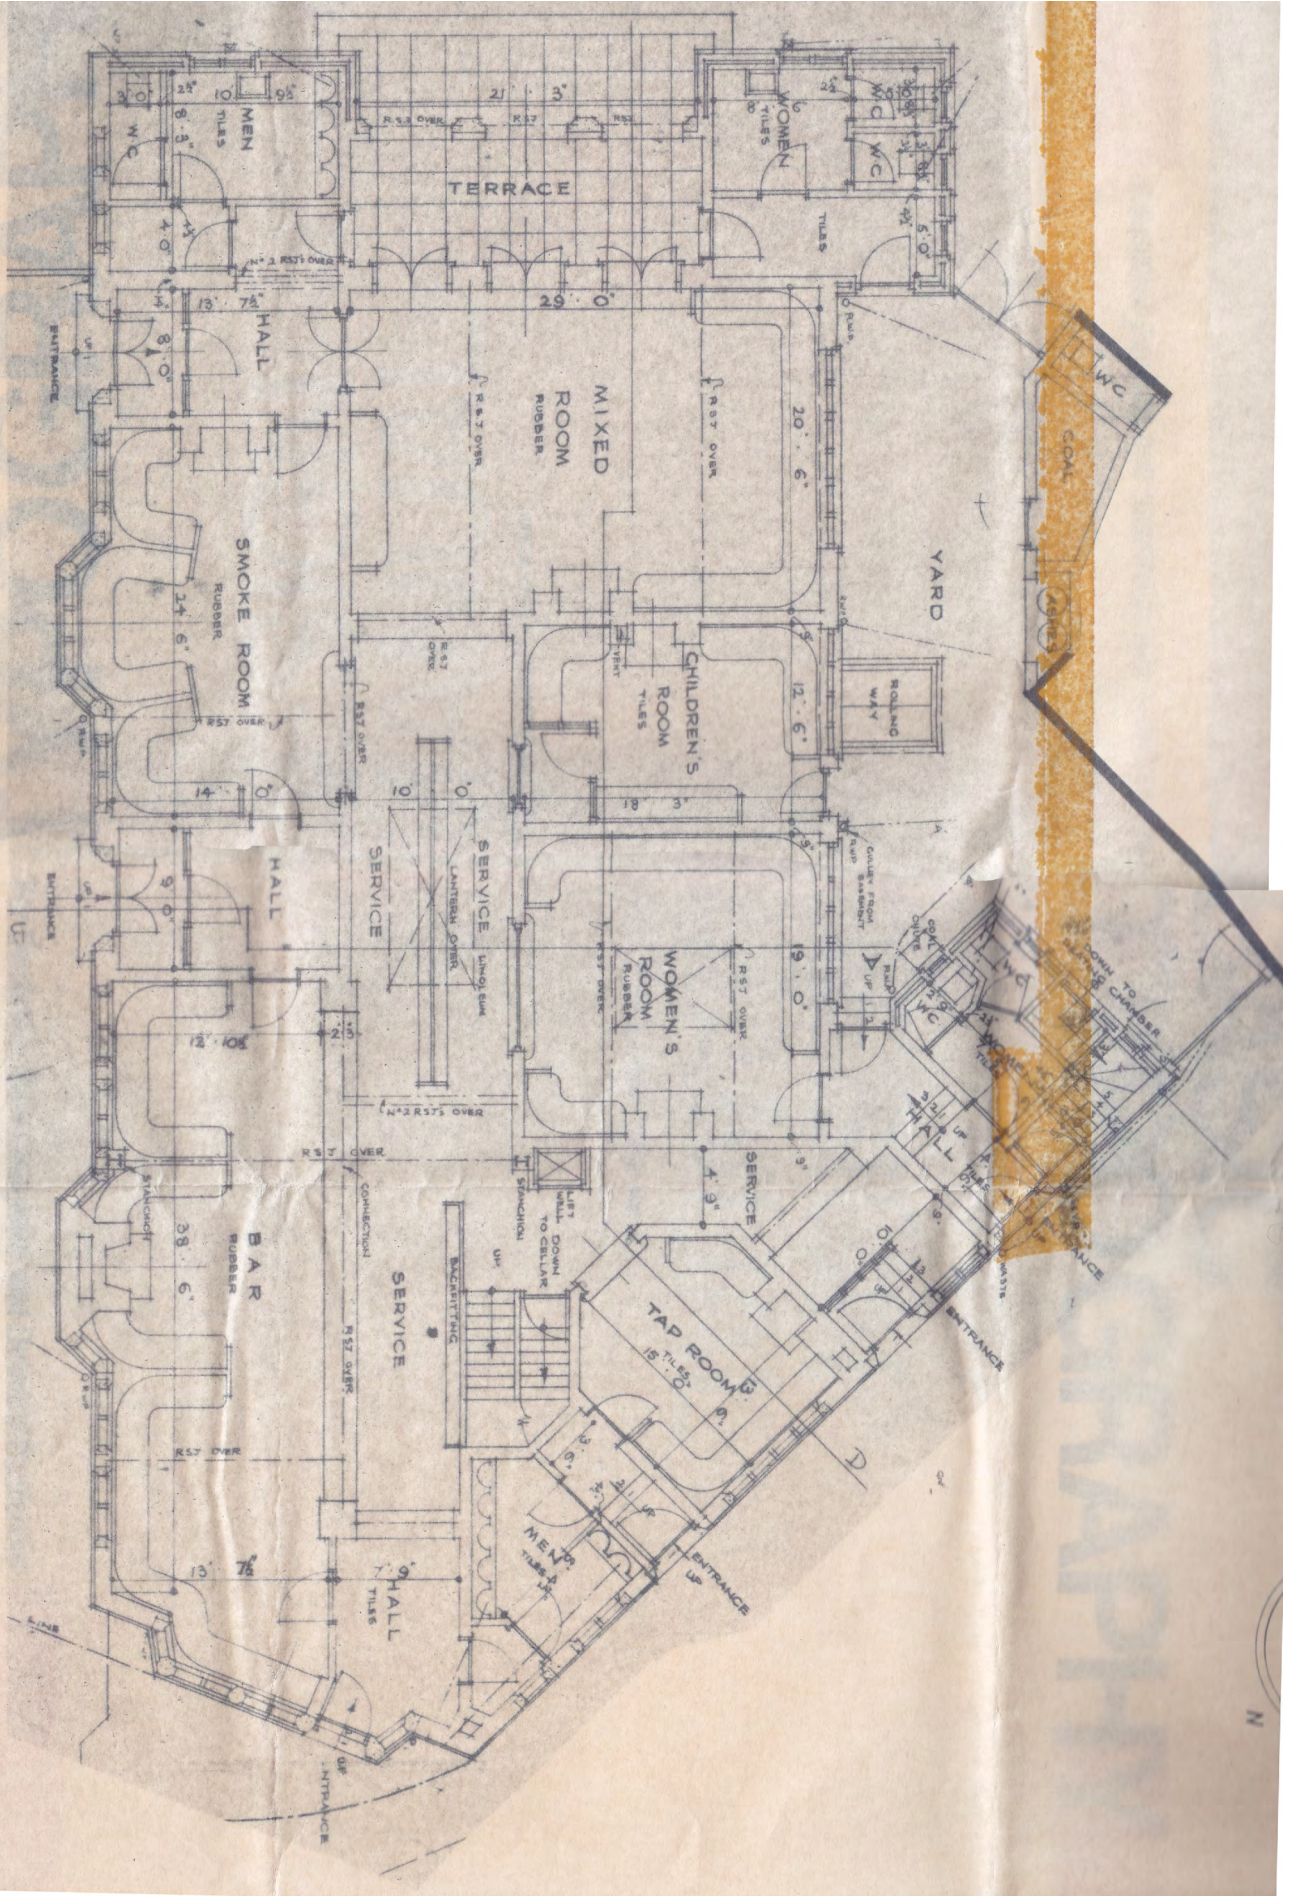

Goodwill, Licenses, and Possession of an old established Roadside Inn, in the midst of a densely populated district.

TO BE LET, and may be immediately entered upon, all that old established and well known PUBLIC-HOUSE, called the "New Inns," situate at Ettingshall Lanes, fronting the great Holyhead road, nearly midway between Wolverhampton and Bilston, which was for many years occupied by the late Mr. Bill, and lately by Mr. J. Bayliss, and which has for a long time enjoyed a greater portion of business than any house in the district.

The Fixtures and Brewing Utensils may be taken to at a valuation, with or without the Furniture. Coming-in about 60%.

“On Monday afternoon last an inquest was held before Thomas Phillips, Esq, coroner, at the house of Mr. William Fellows, NOAHS ARK, upon the body of William Herrington, who died in consequence of an explosion of fire damp, in a mine, after a lingering and painful illness of eighteen days.

Joseph Smith was the only witness examined. He said that he was a miner, and lived in the Hall Fold, Bilston. He knew the deceased, who was also a miner, twenty-eight years old, and resided in Coseley Row. On the first of this month witness was at work in an ironstone pit in Mr. Vernon’s colliery, in Mill Lane, and about eleven o’clock at night the deceased went to set some timber under the roof. He asked witness to go with him, but he was some distance behind, as he waited to put his flannel waistcoat on. Before he got it on, the deceased being at the time about fifteen yards in advance, a violent explosion of sulphur took place, and Herrington was blown back about four yards. Witness was slightly injured, but went as soon as possible to the assistance of the deceased, and found him badly burned. He then helped him up the shaft, and took him home, where he died on the 19th inst. The sulphur, it appears, was ignited by a lighted candle which he carried in his hand. There was a safety lamp in the pit, but they did not use it, as they had no idea there was any sulphur. Witness had been in the workings farther by two or three yards a short time before, and there was no appearance of sulphur then. The occurrence was purely accidental.”

“The following inquests have been held before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner.....

On Saturday last at the NOAHS ARK INN, Bilston, on the body of Robert Price, a miner, about seventeen years of age, whose death was occasioned by a large fall of clod, while at work in an ironstone pit, in Parkfield colliery, on Monday the 3rd instant. He was badly crushed and bruised, and died on Thursday last. The place where he was working appeared to be perfectly safe. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

“On Wednesday morning last, another of those fearful accidents, which are of such common occurrence in the mining districts, occurred at Mr. North’s field, about a quarter of a mile from Bilston. The results have, unfortunately, been fatal. It appears that about a quarter past six o’clock on Wednesday morning, seven men and boys met at the top of the mine, which is a stone one, for the purpose of proceeding to their work. Mr. F. Armstrong, residing at Bilston, who is the butty, saw them get into the skip, and they were gradually lowered. When about ninety feet down, Mr. Armstrong, who was standing by the side of the pit, heard a shrill cry of agony, and a loud report, and turning hastily round, observed a huge body of flame dart up the shaft, and for nearly fifty feet into the air. The fact instantly flashed upon him that an explosion of sulphur had taken place, and running into the engine house he gave the alarm by sounding a clapper. The engine man, though quite unconscious of what had taken place, instantly reversed the engine, and the skip was drawn to the top. A most sickening spectacle presented itself. Out of the seven men who had entered the skip, only five remained, and these so blackened and burned that they could scarcely be recognised. For about a hundred feet they had been literally drawn through a mass of fire. Their hair was singed, their faces and hands blistered and burned, and portions of their dress in a state of ignition, and partly crumbling away at the touch. Even when at the mouth of the pit it was with difficulty that they were rescued from the fearful abyss, in which the flames still ascended in great broad volumes, and reared and curled up the shaft, and for many feet beyond into the air. Their shrieks, which were heard for a great distance off, produced a painful excitement, and not many minutes elapsed before a number of persons had gathered round anxious to render assistance. The poor men, who were suffering fearful tortures, were at length got out of the skip, and three of them, named Robert Redgeford, Edward Potter, and William Biddler, were conveyed to Mr. Armstrong’s house at Bilston – the two former being young lads and his apprentices. The other two named William Love and an old man named Thomas Roden, were conveyed to their residences. But what had become of the two men who had entered the skip, but who could then nowhere be seen? It is almost unnecessary to say that the most dreadful apprehensions were entertained regarding their fate. Certainty, however, could not be attained, as for more than twenty minutes a body of flame continued to shoot up the shaft, threatening to destroy the framework, and precluding all approach. At length, with a loud explosion, the flame gradually expired; and Mr. William North, of Bilston, the proprietor of the mine, who had proceeded to the spot to render any assistance in his power, having received a direct refusal from the miners who were standing round, to go down the shaft, courageously resolved to descend himself, and rescue, if still in life, the two unfortunate persons whose fate was but too apparent. On learning Mr. North’s resolution, three of the miners intimated their willingness to descend, and accordingly they were lowered to the bottom of the shaft. It was then found, that a wall which had been built about forty yards from the bottom had been thrown down by the explosion, and the unfortunate persons, whose names were Thomas Roden (the son of the old man who was burned) and William Henslow, who was his brother-in-law, were buried underneath the ruins. After incredible exertions they were at length got out quite dead; but in such a state as to be beyond description. The true cause of the occurrence is enveloped in some mystery; but all subsequent inquiry tends to the probability that the five miners in the skip came in contact with an accumulation of sulphur by the side of the shaft, when the explosion ensued. The two unfortunate men who were suddenly deprived of life had either, by the shock of the explosion, or by having loosed their hold, been thrown out of the skip, and precipitated through the flames to the bottom, a distance of about two hundred and fifty feet. Henslow, who was married to the daughter of the old man Roden, has left a widow and three children; Thomas Roden junior was about 16 years of age. All the men who went in the skip were now lying in a very precarious state, more especially Roden senior, Biddler (who has been lately married) and Ridgeford, and it is not improbable that fatal results may still ensue from the effects of the catastrophe. An inquest was held on the bodies of the two unfortunate men who had been deprived of life, at the NOAHS ARK TAVERN, Bilston, on Thursday, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, when after a lengthened investigation, a verdict of Accidental Death was returned."

"On Saturday last an inquest was held before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, at the NOAHS ARK INN, Bilston, on the body of Thomas Roden, a miner, fifty-four years of age, another of the sufferers by the awful explosion which took place in Mr. North's field, about a quarter of a mile from Bilston, on Wednesday, the 21st ult. The deceased, who was very badly burned, lingered until Friday last, when he died. The deceased was the third victim of the disaster, and all the other men remained too ill to attend the inquest. Verdict, Accidental Death.

"On Tuesday last, an inquest was held at the house of Mr. Thomas Wall, SWAN INN, Bradley, near Bilston, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, upon the body of Eliza Bullock, a girl seven years old, who was burned to death by her clothes taking fire on Monday morning, while standing by a cinder mound, near her father's house.

On Thursday another inquest was held at the house of Mr. William Fellows, NOAHS ARK, on the body of Samuel Robinson, a child four years old, who also lost his life in a similar melancholy manner.

In both cases verdicts of Accidental Death were returned."

Wolverhampton Chronicle 14/4/1847

"On Saturday last an inquest was held at the NOAHS ARK, at Bilston, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, on the body of Benjamin Rudge, a labourer, about twenty-five years of age, who had died from injuries received by the fall of a large iron column at Mr. Vernon's ironworks, at Stoneyfield, Bilston, on the previous Tuesday. It appeared that the column had been erected only a few days before, upon a body of brickwork about a yard high, for the purpose of supporting the iron steam pipes leading from the boiler, and that it had a circular hole at the top to admit the pipe into it. It was put up in the usual way, and appeared to be quite safe. One of the witnesses gave it as his opinion that the column fell in consequence of a great pressure of steam causing the pipes to heave up. Rudge was badly crushed and bruised, and one of his legs was broken. He died on Thursday. The witnesses described the occurrence as accidental, and the jury returned a verdict to that effect, but expressed an opinion that there had been want of caution on the part of the proprietor of the works, and requested the coroner to write to him on the subject."

"On Thursday last an inquest was held by T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, at the NOAHS ARK, Bilston, on the body of a miner, named Thomas Smith, 40 years of age, who was killed by a fall of coal, while at work, on the previous day, in a coal pit at Mr. Bagnall's colliery, Caponfield. Verdict, Accidental Death."

"The following inquests have been held since our last before William Webb Ward, Esq, coroner (officiating for T. M. Phillips, Esq).....

On Monday last, at the NOAHS ARK, at Bilston, on the body of James Ball, about four years of age, who was very much burnt by his clothes catching fire in his parents house on Saturday last, and died on the following morning. Verdict in accordance with the evidence."

Staffordshire Advertiser 8/1/1848

“On Wednesday last, an inquest was held by G. Hinchliffe, Esq, at the NOAHS ARK, Bilston, on Samuel Harris, a miner, 18 years of age, who was killed by a fall of coal, while at work in one of Mr. Ward’s coal pits, at Bilston, on the previous Monday. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 8/3/1848

“On Friday last an inquest was held at the NOAHS ARK, Bilston, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, on the body of William Green, a collier, about 22 years of age, who met with his death under the following melancholy circumstances.

On the previous Tuesday afternoon he and another collier named Dodd, who had been at work in a stone pit at Hall Park Colliery, belonging to Mr. William Riley, coal and iron master, foolishly got upon the water barrel at the bottom of the shaft, for the purpose of going up the pit. It went steadily all the way up, and when they got to the top, the banksman pushed the waggon partly over the pit; but, finding that the engine man had not drawn the barrel quite high enough to enable him to push the waggon completely over, he called out twice to the engine man, ‘pull up.’ The engine man mistook this direction for a request to ‘short,’ that is to let the barrel a little lower down, and as it lowered upon the waggon the barrel tilted on one side. Dodd, who was on the side that tilted, fearing the barrel would fall against him, jumped off upon the side of the pit, but Green, who was on the opposite side of the barrel, either jumped off or was thrown off the barrel, and fell to the bottom of the pit, which is upwards of one hundred yards deep. The deceased was shortly afterwards brought up the pit quite dead.

It appeared from the evidence of Dodd that it is usual for the engine man to ‘short’ when the water barrel is drawn up. He attributed the circumstance of the engine man not drawing the water barrel high enough to the fact that it was considerably longer than the skip. Dodd admitted that he and Green ought not to have gone up on the water barrel.

The engine house is about one hundred yards distant from the pit. There was about a ton of water in the barrel at the time of the accident. All the witnesses agreed that no blame could be attached either to the banksman or engine man; indeed it appeared that, a short time before Dodd and deceased came up without giving any signal to the banksman, one of the witnesses went to the engine man and told him that no other men would come up the pit for an hour.

The jury returned a verdict to the effect that the deceased died from the injuries he received by being thrown from a water barrel to the bottom of a stone pit.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 29/11/1848

“On Saturday last an inquest was held at the NOAHS ARK, Bilston, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, on the body of Betsy Davies, six years of age, whose death had resulted from her having been badly burned on the morning of Saturday, the 4th instant, by her clothes catching fire in the kitchen of her parents house. During the time she was ill the little girl stated to a neighbour that she got up early in the morning before her mother was awake, and went down stairs, that she was standing before the fire, when the wind blew down the chimney, and her nightgown took fire. It appeared that the mother of the child was in the habit of raking the fire every night, and that her husband, on getting up, placed some more coal upon it. The girl was attended by Mr. Cooper, surgeon, but she died on Wednesday last, from the serious injuries she had received. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

“Caroline Stubbs, a married woman, was charged with stealing a quantity of coal, the property of Mr. William Fellows, NOAHS ARK, Bilston. Mr. Fellows declined to prosecute, and after a severe reprimand from Mr. Leigh, she was discharged.”

“On Friday last an adjourned inquest was held at the NOAHS ARK, Bilston, before Thomas M. Phillips, Esq, Coroner, on the body of Jacob Tipton, a miner, lately residing in Wolverhampton Street, and whose death had taken place suddenly. At first his decease was supposed to have taken place from natural causes, but a report having become current that he had died from having been kicked and beaten by one of his companions, whilst in a state of intoxication, an inquest was held, after which Mr. Harper, surgeon, performed a post mortem examination of the body. As he was unable to account for the cause of death, and suspected that it had arisen from poisoning, the inquiry was again adjourned, and Mr. Harper having made an analysis of the contents of the stomach, and submitted them to the usual tests, deposed that the deceased had died from the effects of arsenic, of which several grains must have been taken. The case being at present involved in mystery, the inquiry was adjourned to afford time to collect evidence. We understand that the police have been unable to obtain any clue which would justify them in attaching suspicion to any one, although their inquiries have been principally in reference to a young woman named Jane Dyke, who bears a rather loose character. The deceased formerly kept company with her, but they had quarreled."

"Fellows v Lawley. This was an action brought by Mr. Fellows, of the NOAHS ARK, Bilston, against Mr. Joseph Lawley, to recover £15 damage done to the plaintiff's house by undermining.

Mr. Bolton having briefly stated the nature of the plaintiff's case, Mr. Hayes (with whom was Mr. Bartlett) submitted that the particulars of demand in this case were not sufficiently stated, as they did not describe by what means the damage was caused, or where the property was situate. Mr. Bolton intimated that he was not aware who had drawn up the particulars of demand for the plaintiff, but certainly they were vague. He thought, however, that there was a sufficient allegation that it was the property of the plaintiff. His Honour expressed an opinion that the particulars were not sufficient, and the case was therefore adjourned to the next court, on payment of costs by the plaintiff."

"The Chartist Movement.....

At our meeting on Sunday evening last we had some of the old body guards present, and it was unanimously agreed to re-establish a branch of the N.C.A. Mr. Thompson, on being appointed to the chair, said that he felt much pleasure in meeting his friends once more, and he trusted that they would not let any opportunity pass that would benefit his fellow man in any privilege that he did not enjoy. He thought that in the forthcoming agitation the friends of Democracy should be on their guard, and see that they were not entrapped into any humbug reform.

On the motion of Mr. Stringer, T. Parker was appointed treasurer, and J. Sykes secretary, and the meeting adjourned to Sunday evening.

It is particularly urged that all readers of the Peoples Paper, and friends of Democracy in Bilston and district, will meet at the house of Mr. Thomas Parker, NOAHS ARK INN, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, on Sunday evening next, at five o'clock, to re-establish a branch of the N.C.A. He commenced by observing that there never was a time so favourable as the present for the working classes to secure that for which they had so long been struggling, namely, their political rights (hear, hear). He was convinced there was a good prospect of the working and middle-classes uniting upon a basis of reform that would be really worth struggling for, and which, with energy, was certain to be obtained. Let them relax no efforts in making the coming Conference one that would redound to their credit as a body of Democratic Reformers....."

"Staffordshire Adjourned Quarter Sessions.....

Patrick Michael Eggington (17), committed from Bilston, pleaded guilty to having broken and entered the NOAHS ARK INN, Bilston, and stolen property, including 1,590 cigarettes, value £4 18s 9d, between November 7 and 8, 1940; and not guilty to a charge of burglary in respect of a dwelling house at Bilston between November 21 and 22, where he was alleged to have stolen articles value £2 7s 6d.

Mr. W. Field Hunt, prosecuting, said the prosecution were prepared to accept prisoner's plea. Eggington was originally charged with another man, who was dealt with at the last Sessions, but prisoner then failed to appear and a warrant was issued for his arrest. Counsel said the case was remarkable because of the large number of cigarettes stolen. The licensee heard no disturbance, and, in fact, could not find out next morning how entry had been effected, but the cigarettes were missing.....

Prisoner did not appear at the last Sessions, and on inquiry was found to be serving in the Army. An officer from prisoner's regiment and the battalion chaplain said he had a clean sheet in the Army, and they expressed the opinion that he could become a good soldier.

In a statement to the Bench, accused said the five weeks which he had spent in prison awaiting trial had taught him a lesson, and he appealed for a chance to rejoin his regiment, saying he thought the Army 'a grand life.'

Eggington was bound over for two years, the Assistant Chairman telling him that the Bench were giving him an opportunity to make good."

"Free Gardeners Friendly Society.

The first dinner in connection with the Oak and Ivy Lodge, No.1486, was held on Saturday evening, at the lodge house, OAK AND IVY INN, Oxford Street, Bilston. The dinner was served up in the host's best style, and gave great satisfaction. After dinner, Brother Baldwin, district master, was voted to the chair, and Brother Whutton to the vice-chair. The usual loyal and patriotic toasts were duly honoured, after which Brother Caldwin gave, 'The National Order of Free Gardeners.' Brother Whatton responded to the toast. The Secretary (Bro. J. Clark) in giving his report, said that he was glad to say the finances of the lodge had greatly improved since he took office. There were now 39 financial members on the books, and the lodge was as prosperous as any in the order. The health of the host and hostess (Bro. and Mrs. Woolley) was then given. Songs by Bros. Harris, Orton, and Connolly followed, and brought a very pleasant and enjoyable evening to a close."

“It was reported that a successful season had just ended, when cups and prizes won by players in the Bilston Charity Darts League were distributed at the OAK AND IVY, Oxford Street, Bilston, on Tuesday night by the Mayor (Councillor C. H. Green).”

Sandwell Evening Mail 26/5/1983

“Regulars at the OAK AND IVY pub in Bilston will never forget the day in February they pulled a four-ton lorry up a hill. But they knew it was all worthwhile when the money they raised in the sponsored lorry pull went almost half way to buying a guide dog for the blind. And on Monday, Courage brewers brought the dog to a presentation evening at the Oxford Street pub. Two teams of five – one from the public bar and one from the lounge – took it in turns to pull the lorry up a steep 100-yard hill behind the pub to raise £300. A rifle shoot, dominoes and billiard competitions helped to raise another £150. This made the pub one of the most successful to take part in Courage’s guide dog appeal. Most of the brewery’s 120 Midland pubs took part and raised £15,000 altogether. OAK AND IVY landlady Mrs. Jane Spencer said, ‘It was hard work but they enjoyed every minute of it. We are already planning our next set of events.’”

John Spencer was married to Jane.

OLD BARLEY MOW [1842], [1854]

The Hell Lane Gang met here occasionally.

"Sketches of the Black Country in the Olden Time. No.VII. Marvels and Mysteries of Hell Lane.....

A few evenings ago, accompanied by two pleasant companions, I set out on a pilgrimage to Hell Lane, in quest of that oft quoted individual 'the oldest inhabitant,' a great authority in antiquarian matters. Leaving Wolverhampton, we proceeded for some distance along the Bilston turnpike road, until we noticed a lane branching off to the right, and straggling up towards Sedgley beacon. 'This,' observed my companions, 'is Hell Lane,' and in another moment we had commenced our tour of inspection.....

At the entrance to the lane stands an antiquated hostelry, of a nondescript style of architecture, known as the DUKE OF YORK, a place which fifty years ago was the terror of the whole neighbourhood.....

The Oldest Inhabitant: Hell Lane was a queerish place I do assure you. Nobody durst venture down it after nightfall; and even in broad day-light it was hardly safe. There were certain public houses where gangs of highwaymen used to meet,. There was the OLD DUKE O'YORK, and the BARLEY MOW, as stood near by each other; two fearsome places were these for all sorts of plots and mischief. Then there was old Trilly Riley's place, the BULLS HEAD, where they used to get up bull baiting and such like sports; and Billy Moore's, by the brook. But the worst placed of the lot was called 'Hell House,' kept by old Evans, a butty collier. This was a great fighting place for the colliers, and there used to be a pitched battle every night. Evans's daughter, a big, strapping wench, used to be second to one of the men, and when the fight was on she would jump on the screen and shout, 'Wind him Jack lad,' 'Tap his wine bottle,' or 'Give him a red shirt, my bonny boy.'"

"To be Let, and may be entered upon immediately.

That well known established Public House, called the BARLEY MOW, situated at the bottom of Ettingshall Lane, on the Bilston road. The Stock and Fixtures to be taken to at a fair valuation.

Inquire of Thomas Royster, on the premises."

Staffordshire Advertiser 9/5/1840

“Thomas Royster, keeper of a beer shop in Ettingshall Lane, charged by the Excise officers with having used grains of paradise in brewing, on the 13th March, was fined £50, with a recommendation to the commissioners to reduce the fine to £15, this being his first offence.”

“On Wednesday last, an inquest was held at the house of Mr. John Cooper, BARLEY MOW, Monmore Green, Wolverhampton, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, on the body of Joseph Bullen, a boy twelve years old. It appears that he lived in Ettingshall Lane, and on Sunday last, between two and three o’clock, he was sliding upon a slough in Stow Heath Colliery, when the ice broke, and he fell into the water. There were two other lads on the ice at the time, but in their alarm they ran away, without rendering the unfortunate youth the slightest assistance.”

“On Wednesday se’nnight an inquest was held at the BARLEY MOW, Ettingshall Lane, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, on the body of Moses Haywood, a lad about eleven years old, who came by his death in an ironstone pit in Messrs. Sparrow’s colliery, at Stow Heath, on the previous day, in consequence of a large quantity of clod falling upon him. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

Aris's Birmingham Gazette 19/12/1863

"Yesterday, at the Wolverhampton County Court, Mr. Charles Crook, licensed victualler, of Bilston, sued Mr. William Lewis, licensed victualler, of Wolverhampton, for the sum of £6 7s 6d, the balance due on a bill of exchange. The sum of £40 odd was paid into Court, and as to the remainder, it was urged that a certificate of a deed of arrangement having been filed, that was a sufficient answer to the action; that £7 10s, part of the consideration for the bill, was money due for a bet on horse racing, and that a further sum claimed for spirits supplied was not recoverable, the plaintiff being only a retail dealer. Mr. Waterhouse appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Thurstans for the defendant, and after a long argument his Honour gave a verdict for the plaintiff, with leave for the defendant to move at the next Court to set aside the verdict, and enter one for himself on the grounds urged by Mr. Thurstans on his behalf."

"Yesterday the action Charles Crook v William Lewis, to recover £6 7s 6d, the balance of a promissory note given by defendant to the plaintiff, again came on for hearing; Mr. Waterhouse, of Bilston, for the plaintiff; and Mr. Thurstans, of Wolverhampton, for the defendant. It will be remembered that the case was tried last month, and a verdict given for the plaintiff, after the defendant had pleaded a deed of arrangement with his creditors as a bar to the action, and that part of the consideration of the bill was a betting transaction. Leave was, however, at the same time given to the defendant to move at this Court to set aside the judgement on the points stated.

Yesterday, Mr. Thurstans withdrew the plea in respect of the deed, and confined himself to that relating to the illegal character of the debt. He said that both the plaintiff and the defendant were publicans of Bilston, and that two or three years ago the plaintiff came to Wolverhampton, and, in partnership with the defendant, made a bet 30 to 4 upon a certain horse which was about to be run in the Derby. Plaintiff lost the wager and paid the money; and the amount now claimed was the defendant's share, and formed part of the consideration of the bill. The transaction being an illegal one, the document, Mr. Thurstans contended, was thereby invalidated. Mr. Waterhouse maintained, for the plaintiff, that the money claimed – and that formed part of the consideration of the bill – could not be regarded as a betting transaction, but as money due from the defendant to the plaintiff for cash paid by the plaintiff on his behalf. The arguments on either side were continued at some length; but his Honour ultimately confirmed his former decision, and again gave judgement for the plaintiff.”

“A fight between a mob and some bailiffs, who attempted to take possession of the BOARS HEAD, Bilston, took place yesterday. Several of the bailiffs were injured, and the entire proceedings are described as ‘lively.’”

"Yesterday, at the Wolverhampton Police Court, before Mr. Isaac Spooner (stipendiary), the two ironworkers, of Bilston, named Richard Bray and George Slater, were charged on remand with having unlawfully wounded William Wragg, with intent to inflict grievous bodily harm. Mr. Fellows, of Bilston, prosecuted; Mr. Barrow defended. In his opening speech. Mr. Fellows said that a Mr. Hunt leased the BOARS HEAD, Bilston, but tenanted it to a Mr. Wright, under provisions which gave the former the power, in case of breach of covenant of the lease, to eject the latter by force if necessary. Wright had agreed to pay £200. One of the instalments became due in June last, and, as it was not paid, on the 7th July bailiffs were put into possession. On the next day Mr. Wright filed a petition, a trustee in liquidation was appointed, and another bailiff was put in for the creditors, and he remained in possession until last Friday, when the sale took place. On August 3rd Mr. Wright advertised that he would reopen the business on the night of the 3rd inst, and on the following day he (Mr. Fellows) gave the legal authorisation to Mr. Joseph Potts, bailiff, to take possession, and eject Wright.

The prosecutor, who appeared in Court with his head bandaged, was then examined. He stated that he and seven other bailiffs took possession of the house yesterday morning week. Mr. Wright stayed in the house for some time bargaining with a Mr. Whitehead about some fittings, and subsequently other men came, among whom were the two prisoners, through the back door; but as they refused to leave the police were sent for. A short time afterwards the bailiffs were all ejected themselves, and a large crowd gathered around the house. Witness sent for a sledge hammer, with which the front door was broken open. Then witness saw inside the house Bray, armed with a piece of iron, and many other people. As he entered witness was felled with a blow which rendered him insensible, and he remembered nothing till he found himself in the hospital, where he was still an in-patient.

In cross-examination, witness admitted that he had expected a 'warm reception,' but he was not aware, he said, that four persons claimed the right of possession; and he did not see 'Gentle Nigger' and another bailiff trying to strangle Mr. Wright.

His worship: If they had been lawfully in position, and were turned out, they had an undoubted right to break in.

Mr. Barrow: I am going to show you, sir, that they had not.

Cross-examination continued: While the door was being forced witness did not see a bar of iron laid across the inside. He did not recollect Chief Superintendent McCrea remonstrating with him about breaking open the door.

Mr. John Appleyard, house surgeon at the Wolverhampton and Staffordshire Hospital, deposed that Wragg had two incised wounds over the left forehead, both extending down to the bone, and that the one most to the left was a linear depressed fracture following the mark of the wound. There was a small lacerated wound on the back of the head. Witness did not think the wounds dangerous; but prosecutor was not yet able to leave the hospital.

His Worship: The charge is reduced to that of unlawfully wounding.

Timothy Hill, bailiff, of New Street, Wolverhampton, mainly corroborated Wragg's testimony. He saw Bray with a piece of wood in his hand and Slater with an iron bar, both inside the house, and heard the former say, 'Lay on them; don't let them come in.' Slater felled Wragg on the forehead with the iron bar, and Bray struck witness on the back of the head with a piece of wood. Witness then seized Slater. Chief Superintendent McCrea apprehended Bray, and both were removed in custody.

Chief Superintendent McCrea spoke as to seeing the prisoners armed with the weapons, but he had not seen the offence committed on Wragg. The house was full of people, the noise made was very great, but he saw no one but the prisoners striking with anything.

Sergeant Thomas Barnes deposed to having seen Bray strike the prosecutor with his fists, and Slater with the bar in his hand in the attitude of inflicting a blow. When charged Bray declared, 'I only used my fisses,' and, turning towards Slater, said, 'You had no business striking him with the bar.' Slater replied, 'I did not hit him. I was only holding it up to keep off the hammer. The hammer knocked it on his head.'

As his Worship intimated that he should commit the prisoners for trial, Mr. Barrow reserved his defence, but applied for bail. His Worship said he would consider the matter next Friday, when the prisoners would be brought to have the depositions read over. In answer to the charge, Bray said, 'I am not guilty; you are sending me for nothing.'

The prisoners were then formally committed for trial.

The eight bailiffs were then charged with an assault on Mr. Wright. Mr. Barrow prosecuted. On Mr. Wright entering the witness box, his Worship said that the prosecution would be quite hopeless. Mr. Barrow: Then I will not occupy your time by examining Mr. Wright. His Worship: Has Mr. Wright been to hospital? Mr. Barrow: No, sir. His Worship smiled, shrugged up his shoulders, and remarked, 'I think he ought to be had up for a conspiracy.' Mr. Barrow, to Mr. Wright: Then get down out of the box, or you may be. The case was then dismissed.”
[At Staffordshire Quarter Sessions in October 1874, Richard Bray and George Slater, for unlawfully wounding, were entered into their own recognizances of £5 to appear and receive judgment when called upon.]

In the Matter of Proceedings for Liquidation by Arrangement or Composition with Creditors, instituted by Iram Bould, of the OLD BOARS HEAD INN, Church-street, Bilston, in the county of Stafford, Licensed Victualler. Notice is hereby given, that a Second General Meeting of the creditors of the above-named person has been summoned to be held at the offices of U. Stratton, Solicitor, 57, Queen-street, Wolverhampton, on the 30th day of September, 1878, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon precisely. Dated this 18th day of September, 1878. U. Stratton, Wolverhampton, Solicitor for the said Debtor.”

“Betsy Oakley (43), Hall Street, and Mary Ann Ashley (27), Vine Street, married women, were charged with stealing an umbrella, the property of Robert Hunt, landlord of the SADDLE AND STIRRUPS, Oxford Street, Bilston. Prosecutor visited the BOARS HEAD INN, Church Street, on Thursday last, and, after being there some time, he went away, leaving his umbrella behind him. Returning about a quarter of an hour afterwards, he missed his umbrella from the place where he had left it. Information was given to the police, and the women were found in possession of the article trying to sell it. Each was sentenced to 14 days' imprisonment.”

"Ann Jones (45), married woman, of 6, Hall Street, was charged with stealing a 'pony' drinking glass, the property of John Harriman, BOARS HEAD INN, Church Street.

On Saturday night PC Jackson saw the woman go into several shops, and come out without making a purchase. He questioned her, and found the glass in her basket. She could not account for it, but said she must have put it in her basket while at Harriman's, as she was subject to loss of intellect through fits. The bench, taking this into consideration, ordered her to pay 6d and costs. At the conclusion of the case, Mrs. Hatherley, witness in an assault case, stepped forward and offered to pay the money."

“An inquest was held on Saturday, at the OLD BROWN JUG public house, Temple Street, Bilston, on the body of John Edwards, aged thirty-two years, who was employed as banksman at one of Mr. Walker’s pits, at Gospel Oak. It seemed that on the 18th instant the deceased was endeavouring to put a piece of wood into a skip that was about to descend the pit, when he unfortunately over balanced himself and fell down the shaft. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

“On Tuesday last the members of the St. Patrick’s Hibernian Benefit Society, together with a number of friends, had their annual feast, at the house of Mr. Joseph Shale, BROWN JUG INN, Temple Street, Bilston. Amongst those present were Fathers Terry (Newcastle-on-Tyne), O’Connor (Bilston), Clarke (Bilston), and the Rev. Father Montgomery (Wednesbury). There was a good attendance. Dinner was laid upon the table about three o’clock, and the excellent manner in which it was got up by the worthy host gave the greatest satisfaction to all present. After the cloth was removed a number of speeches were delivered, and some fine old English and Irish ballads sung with good effect. The company broke up at an early hour, well pleased with the day’s enjoyment. The financial state of the society was reported to be satisfactory.”

“On Friday last an inquest was held by T. M. Phillips, Esq, at the OLD BUSH INN, Bradley, on the body of Thomas Cox, a boy about nine years of age, whose death resulted from the reprehensible though shamefully common practice of leaving old coal pits without any fence or covering over them.

The deceased, who lived at Bradley, left home on Wednesday morning, with his father, for the purpose of going to work in a coal pit, near Darlaston. When they got into Mr. Loxdale's field, near Potters Bridge, the deceased's hat was blown off, and they both ran after it a short distance. It began to rain, and deceased's father desired him to go into a hovel close by whilst he (the father) looked for the hat. As the morning was dark and windy, he could not find the hat; and in going to the hovel to meet his son, he had, using his own words, ‘a very narrow escape of his life, in not falling into an old pit, which was exposed without any fence round or over it.’ He could not find his son, and then it occurred to him that he had fallen down the pit. Some tackling was obtained, and the deceased brought up, with his head fractured, both his legs broken, and otherwise dreadfully crushed, quite dead.

‘The pit in question,’ the boy’s father said, ‘is an old coal pit, situate in the Old Squirrel field, near Bilston, the property of Mr. Loxdale, and in the occupation of Mr. William Baldwin, of Bilston, coal and iron master. A public road passes within twenty yards of the pit in question, and there is no fence against either the road or the pit. The pit is about thirty-five yards deep. There are two or three other pits near the one in question in an equally dangerous state.’

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death, expressing an opinion that there had been a great want of proper attention and care on the part of the occupier of the pit in question, in not having seen that it was properly protected.”

“On Saturday last an inquest was held at the OLD BUSH INN, at Bradley, in the parish of Wolverhampton, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, on the body of Elizabeth Meek, three years and three months old, who fell off the wharf into the canal at Bradley, on Thursday afternoon, having a short time previously arrived in her father’s boat from Worcester. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

“An inquest was held on Monday last at the OLD BUSH INN, Bradley, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, on the body of John Morris, five years and a half old, who was found drowned on Saturday morning in the Birmingham Canal, at Bradley, into which it is believed he had accidentally fallen. He had been seen by a little girl near the Canal on the previous evening. The jury returned a verdict of Found Dead.”

“On Monday last, T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, concluded, at the OLD BUSH INN, Bradley, an inquiry which had been several times adjourned, as to the death of Henry Gough, one of the men who were killed by the explosion of the boiler at the Darlaston Green Colliery, on the 3rd of February last. The whole particulars of the melancholy occurrence have been so recently and so fully reported in this paper that it is unnecessary to repeat them now. The jury, after a careful consideration of the facts of the case, returned an open verdict, to the effect that the death of the deceased had been caused by scalds and wounds which he received from the explosion of a boiler in consequence upon a flow of cold water upon the hot plates of the lower part of the boiler.”

“On Tuesday, William Bevan, George Stanley, and about twenty-five other men, were charged by Superintendent McCrea with being engaged in a cock-fight, at Bradley, on the 22nd of December. It appeared that the accused had assembled at a public house kept by James Griffiths. A pound a side was staked on a battle between two cocks, which were provided by Bevan and Stanley; the parties adjourned to the public road near the house, and the battle then came off. Mr. Watson was retained for the defendants, who were fined 2s 6d each and costs, or in default 21 days’ imprisonment.

James Griffiths, landlord of the public house in question, was then charged with permitting gaming on his premises. It appeared that after the cock-fight was concluded, the parties adjourned to the defendant’s house, and played for money with dice for two or three hours. The magistrates inflicted a penalty of 20s and expenses.”

“Mr. Phillips, the District Coroner, opened an inquest, on Friday night, at the BUSH INN, Bradley, Coseley, respecting the death of Ann Farmer (16), who met with her death on Thursday under shocking circumstances, at the Bateman’s Hill Ironworks, Bradley. The deceased was employed as a breeze washer, and on Thursday she went into a shed at the works where there was a small engine at work for the purpose of grinding stone. By some means her clothes became entangled in the fly-wheel of the engine, and she was subsequently found quite dead, the skull being laid open and her brains scattered about the ground. The enquiry was adjourned for the attendance of the Inspector of Factories. At the resumed inquiry the Inspector said the machinery should have been fenced. The law distinctly stated that the fly-wheel of every engine should be fenced.

The Coroner: Should the fly-wheel in this case have been fenced?

Witness: Certainly; the proper fence in this case would have been a railing of about three and a half feet high. The engine was undoubtedly a dangerous place, and ten times more to women passing on account of their dress.

The Coroner said he thought females should be stopped from going near the machinery when in motion, and also that it was necessary that the law should be strictly carried out as to fencing.

“On Saturday afternoon, as a child named Jemima Dutton, aged five years, was playing near the canal side, it by some means got into the water, and as no aid was at hand was drowned. On Monday morning, Mr. W. H. Phillips, district coroner, held an enquiry into the death, at the BUSH INN, Bradley Bridge.

Sarah Dutton, the mother of the deceased, said the child was five years of age, and resided with her in the building on the side of the canal. On Saturday afternoon, at a few minutes to four, the child was in the yard playing, and witness went on an errand. When she returned she was told that her child was drowned, and she found that the body had been recovered by a man named White, who lived near.

In response to the coroner, who asked if any restorative means had been employed, witness said that White turned the child upside down to get the water out of it, but there appeared to be no life in it. The Coroner said it could not be too well-known that to turn a body upside down in such a case was the very worst thing that could be done, but it would be the means of driving away the little life that might remain. What should be done was to lay the body on its side, keeping it in motion, and, if hot water could not be obtained, a hot brick should be placed to the feet.

A boy named Mark Higginson spoke to seeing the child playing in the yard as he passed, while going on an errand. When he returned the body was in the water. No one was about, and no boat had gone up or down the canal while he was near.

The Coroner commented strongly on the death traps existing all along the canal side by reason of such persons living there, and allowing their children to play near the water. At the spot where deceased met her death there was every facility for drowning, as the brick work at the side was at least six feet above the water’s edge.

As there was no evidence to show how deceased got into the water, the jury returned an open verdict of Found Drowned.”

“Betsy Jeavons, landlady of the BUSH INN, Cross Street, Bradley, was charged with selling intoxicating liquor to a drunken person, and also with permitting drunkenness on her licensed premises on the 13th April.

Mr. A. Turton prosecuted on behalf of the police authorities and Mr. R. A. Willcock defended.

Mr. Turton said it was only proposed to proceed with the case of permitting drunkenness. It appeared that at six o'clock on the 13th ult Police-constable Patrick and another officer visited the house and found a man named Henry Nock, sitting with a number of others, in a very drunken condition. It was ascertained he had been there since one o'clock, and when the officer asked how much drink had been served him the man himself shouted out, ‘Fourteen pints, but what the — has it got to do with you.’ The defendant had kept the house for thirty years, and had previously given satisfaction to the authorities.

Police-constable Patrick and Police-sergeant Gibbs gave evidence proving the charge.

Mr. Willcock urged that defendant had not remained in the tap room during the whole of the afternoon, and that Nock procured most of his drink from friends who had come to visit him from Wales.

The magistrates, after retiring for a few minutes, fined defendant £5 and £3 18s 6d costs.

Mrs. Jeavons was then charged with selling intoxicating liquor to a girl under the age of fourteen years in an unsealed vessel.

Police-sergeant Gibbs deposed that on the 28th ult he saw a girl named Bertha Mole, aged ten years, come out of the defendant's house with a bottle containing beer, the cork of which was not sealed.

In cross-examination by Mr. Willcock, who defended, witness admitted there was sealing wax both on the cork and bottle, but it was not attached.

The Bench gave defendant the benefit of the doubt in this case.”

Wolverhampton Express and Star 18/11/1909

“Mr. Coroner Stokes held an inquest at the Town Hall, Bilston, on Wednesday evening, touching the death of Josiah Smith (57), ironworker, of 17, Daisy Street, Daisy Bank, who died suddenly on Tuesday morning.

Frederick Smith, son of the deceased, said his father had complained of pains in his stomach, but had worked three and four turns a week. Last week, however, he only worked one turn.

Henry Jones, employed at the Bradley Bar and Sheet Ironworks, Bradley, said the deceased had been engaged there during Monday night, and left shortly before six o'clock on Tuesday morning. When witness left his work a little later he found him lying on some boulders at Lower Bradley. He called to witness, 'Oh, Harry, I'm dying; my breath is going.' Witness got him up, and assisted him to the OLD BUSH INN, where he procured some brandy for him, but he was unable to take it. He seemed to doze off to sleep on the bench, and witness then left him.

Thomas Jeavons, licensee of the OLD BUSH INN, said the deceased seemed very ill indeed when he was brought to the house. He was conscious, and made no complaint of any kind. After sitting on the bench some time he dropped to his knees and vomited some blood. He died whilst in that position.

Police-constable Lewis said he had ascertained that the deceased had been medically attended for catarrh and gout, and had been in the Dispensary at Dudley. It was in consequence of failing health he had to give up puddling, and he had since been kept on at the works labouring.

A verdict of Natural Causes was returned by the jury."

"William Edward George, Cross Street, Bradley, licensee of the OLD BUSH INN, was summoned for selling intoxicating drink during prohibited hours, and also for aiding and abetting in the same offence.

At 10.30 on the night of March 28th PS Maddox and PC Moore found the front door of the house open, and in the club room at the rear of the premises were 17 male customers and one female. Four glass jugs containing beer and one full glass of port were on the tables, and when the officers entered a man named Hadley picked up his glass and drank the contents. Edward Cooper and his wife were singing at the piano and a man named Jackson was playing. After the singing Cooper sat down near a glass containing beer, but he would not admit that it was his. Mrs. Cooper took her seat near the port wine, but said it belonged to a woman who had just left the premises.

In another room marked 'Refreshments Room' were six women and three children, and to all appearances business seemed to be going on as usual. Defendant told the sergeant that there were only four glasses on the table and the drink had been served before ten o'clock.

The defendant said he called 'Time' at ten o'clock and asked the customers to empty their glasses. There were 27 glasses on the table, and those with drops of beer in them had been left by persons who had gone. He denied that Hadley consumed drink in the presence of the officers.

Before giving their decision the magistrates heard a summons against William Joseph Hadley for consuming drink on licensed premises during prohibited hours. PS Maddox said he saw the defendant drink half a pint of beer from a glass mug. A fine of 10s was imposed.

The summons against the licensee for selling during prohibited hours was dismissed. For aiding and abetting he was fined 60s, with the option of a month's imprisonment."

"A licensee is entitled to entertain his friends in a bona fide manner, but the onus is on him to prove the party is a private one," said the Stipendiary, Mr. B. G. Grimley, at Sedgley yesterday when he gave his reserved decision in a case in which Frank Frederick Holmes, licensee of the OLD BUSH INN, Bradley, Bilston, was summoned for supplying and permitting the consumption of intoxicating liquor during non-permitted hours.

Two police officers found seven men drinking in the club room of the inn after 11pm on Christmas night, but the licensee's defence was that they were all members of a bagatelle club, and that he had entertained them to celebrate a recent victory.

The Stipendiary said he was not satisfied that the defence had proved the party to have been a private one, but if the defendant was prepared to pay the costs, a certain course would be taken.

Mr. E. E. Brown, who prosecuted, agreed to the summonses being withdrawn, on payment of costs amounting to £10 3s. Summonses against seven men were also withdrawn on payment of costs."

"A landlord known for 'pulling the best glass of beer in Wolverhampton' has died aged 88.

Dennis Jones was today described as a 'true gentleman,' having stood behind the bar of the FORGE HAMMER in Lanesfield for a decade from 1974 to 1984. He also worked at the ROCKET POOL and OLD BUSH in Bradley and the DOG AND PARTRIDGE in Bilston. Mr. Jones, of Bamber Close, Bradmore, was married to Pat, who died five-and-a-half years ago. They had five children, David, now 64, Alan, 62, Brenda, 56, Andrew, 53, and Mark, 45.

Daughter Brenda, who lives in Lanesfield, said her father was a well-known member of the community. 'He was a very quiet man,' Mrs. Paddock said today. 'Mum was the bubbly one behind the bar but dad was well-known for pulling the best glass of beer in the city. People would always tell him that. He was a meticulous landlord and a true gentleman.'

Mr. Jones died of a heart problem on August 13. He moved into the pub trade aged 51 after working as a tool maker at firms including Villiers and Jone Hawk Engineers.

Mrs. Paddock added, 'He was a wonderful dad. He never told us what to do – just gave out advice when we needed it. He very rarely raised his voice, because he didn't need to. He commanded such respect. He was a very amiable person and was very well-read and articulate. He enjoyed working behind the bar and meeting people but I think he moved into the trade for mum really.' Mrs. Paddock said her father enjoyed gardening and reading. 'He also loved his animals and was very upset when his dogs and cats passed away,' she added. Mrs. Paddock had been her father's full-time carer for two-and-a-half years.

His funeral will take place at Bushbury Crematorium on Wednesday at 2pm."

“On Tuesday morning a shocking accident occurred to a young woman, named Mary Evans, about eighteen years of age, employed in Mr. Riley’s works, at Mill Fields. She was engaged in filling a barrow with some hot calcined ironstone, when a large quantity fell upon her, and completely buried her from sight. On the ironstone being removed it was found that she was quite dead, having been cut and bruised all over the body in a dreadful manner. The inquiry was held on Tuesday, at the OLD BUSH, Gilbert [sic] Lane, before T. Phillips, Esq, coroner, when it appeared that only a few minutes before the accident happened she had been cautioned against continuing to work on the spot. She persisted in doing so, however, saying that ‘the ironstone would not come down yet.’ A verdict of Accidental Death was returned.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 1/5/1850

“On Monday last, T. M. Phillips, Esq, held an inquest at the OLD BUSH, Gibbet Lane, on the body of James Holding, 26 years of age, a furnace filler at Mr. Jones’s ironworks, Bilston Furnaces, who on Friday afternoon was in the act of trying to jump off the waggon of one of the water lifts, whilst it was ascending, on to the other waggon which was descending, when his foot slipped and he fell into the waggon hole below, a distance of about eight yards. On his being taken out of the waggon hole it was found that he had received a severe fracture of the skull, and was in a dying state. He expired on the road to his house. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

William Fellows was also a coal master. [1851]

“William Gardener (46), of Ward Street, Ettingshall, was on Sunday morning last, discovered by his wife Hannah, hanging by a cord suspended by a hook in the ceiling of an outhouse. Assistance was obtained as quick as possible, and deceased was cut down, but life was quite extinct. Deceased had for some time been employed by Mr. Webb, ginger beer manufacturer, of Bilston Road, and was described as being a respectable and well-conducted man. No definite cause had yet been assigned for his rash act.

On Tuesday, Mr. W. H. Phillips, district coroner, held an inquest on the body of deceased at the OLD BUSH INN, Ward Street, Ettingshall. It was shown that some time ago deceased had his skull fractured by an accident, and in consequence of this he was at times very excitable, and took small affairs to heart too much. On the morning in question deceased rose early, and was not afterwards seen until discovered by his wife.

The jury returned a verdict that deceased committed Suicide whilst in a state of Temporary Insanity.”

William Poole was fined £20 and costs for permitting consumption on the premises after 9pm, contravening the Defence of the Realm Act.

Birmingham Daily Post 18/11/1916

"William Poole, BUSH INN, Ward Street, Priestfield, was summoned before the Bilston magistrates yesterday for selling and supplying, and also for permitting to be consumed on his licensed premises, intoxicating liquor, contrary to the regulations of the Liquor Control Board. He was fined £20, and £3 8s 6d special costs, and Richard and Catherine Legge and Sarah Wilks and Martha Lavender, all of Priestfield, who were summoned for consuming liquor, were each fined 20s, and £1 5s 2d special costs.

Evidence was given that at 9.25pm, on October 29, two constables visited the BUSH INN. Mr. and Mrs. Legge had a jug three parts full of ale and a glass containing ale, Wilks had a quart bottle of ale in her hand, and Lavender was drinking out of a glass."

"A case of interest to the licensing trade was heard yesterday in the Bilston Police Court, when Francis William Brooks, licensee of the BUSH INN, Priestfield, was proceeded against for using his premises for the purpose of public music and singing without having first obtained a license.

For the prosecution Mr J. Sharp pointed out that the days of the offences were Sundays. Defendant had been cautioned by the police about playing the piano, and on 28 March two police officers visited the premises and found a nephew of the defendant at the instrument.

Defendant denied that piano playing was going on. His nephew went to the piano while defendant was in the cellar. The keys were sticking and the nephew came again to put them right.

The Stipendiary intimated he would give his decision in 14 days' time."

"On Friday last an inquest was held at the OLD BUSH, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, on the body of William Smith, 37 years of age, who was killed on Wednesday afternoon, in a coal pit near Stokes Engine, on the Willenhall Road, the property of Philip Williams, Esq, by a large quantity of coal falling upon him while holing. The workmen were upwards of an hour before they succeeded in getting the body out. The deceased has left a wife and five children, and the wife is also near confinement. The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death."

Staffordshire Advertiser 1/9/1849

"An inquest was held on Thursday, at the OLD BUSH, Shift End, on the body of Thomas Hughes, aged 31, a miner, whose death was occasioned on Tuesday by some bricks falling upon him while at work in a pit. Verdict, Accidental Death. The deceased has left a wife and three children in the greatest distress."

Wolverhampton Chronicle 11/9/1850

"An inquest was held on Thursday last at the OLD BUSH, Shift End, Bilston, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, on the body of Edward Jones, about 50 years of age, who was killed on the previous day at Mr. Frost's sand mine near Moxley. He had, it appeared, charge of a cart and two horses, and stopped to speak to Joseph Highway, a labourer. As the fore horse hovered about the deceased struck at him with his whip, and the horses started off at full trot. The deceased followed them, and when they were at full trot, on the off side of the road, where the land shelves off suddenly, he made an attempt to lay hold of the bridle of the horse in the shafts, and in doing so fell or was knocked down by the shaft to the ground, and the near wheel went over his head, killing him on the spot. The deceased's skull was fractured. Verdict, Accidental Death."

Staffordshire Advertiser 15/1/1853

“On Monday last, T. M. Phillips, Esq, held an adjourned inquest at the OLD BUSH INN, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, on the body of John Sheffield, aged 48, a banksman, of Puddle Dock Lane, Shift End, in that town.

The inquiry was opened on Friday, when a married woman named Mary Jones, of Farthing Row, Shift End, deposed that about nine o'clock at night, on the 1st instant, she saw the deceased intoxicated, staggering past her house from the town of Bilston, in the direction of his house. He stumbled and fell opposite to her house. She afterwards heard that he was missed by his friends up to the Tuesday morning following, when his corpse was found in a disused coal pit, situated on the left hand side of Dock Lane, which lane he went up when she last saw him. This pit, she said, was the property of Mr. Henry Ash, clerk to an attorney. It was open at the top and without any proper fence.

Jeremiah Francis was the next witness. He said that he was a miner, and a neighbour of the deceased, who worked at Mr. Frost's fields. On Tuesday morning, Ann Sheffield, deceased's sister-in-law, came to him and said it was feared that John had fallen down a pit. He took a rope to Ash's old thick coal pit, where he found the deceased lying dead with a wound upon his head four inches in length. The pit was quite dry, and without any proper fence!

Both witnesses added that the pit lay out of the pathway to the deceased's house.

On Monday morning Francis stated that the pit was in as dangerous a state as when he found in it the body of Sheffield.

T. Wynn, Esq, the Government Inspector of Mines for this district, was present at the adjourned inquest, and spoke in terms of great indignation at the prevalence in South Staffordshire of open pits, long since disused which were now lying as monster traps for human life; but which, at the cost of a few shillings, might be made perfectly safe. He had not the slightest hesitation in saying that in the county of Stafford there were seven times more deaths from this cause than in all the other parts of England. He had written to many persons whose old pits were left unguarded, and the result had been that whilst some of the pits were closed others remained as before; so that there were at the present time a large number of pits in the same disgraceful state as that into which the unfortunate man Sheffield had been precipitated. Mr. Wynn gave it as his opinion that the best course which the widow and five orphans of the deceased could now take would be to sue the owner of the pit in the County Court, for damages under Lord Campbell's Act. He expressed his intention of specially reporting this case to the Secretary of State; and said that he should have taken measures for imposing here the fine of £10 – a penalty incurred by the proprietors of 'collieries' who, having an accident upon their premises, neglect to report the same to the Secretary of State – but Ash's pit having been worked out could not now be called a colliery.

The jury returned a verdict of Found Dead in a Pit.”

Wellington Journal 19/7/1879

“Mr. W. H. Phillips, coroner, held an inquest on Saturday afternoon, at the OLD BUSH INN, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, on the body of Mary Jane Pitt, aged 21. The deceased had been in the service of Mr. Farmer, of the same street, for two years, and on Friday took a quantity of ‘mice powder.’ She afterwards went to a neighbour, informed her of the fact, and stated that she was much distressed in mind about several things. Dr. S. J. Smith, who was sent for, used every possible means to save the girl’s life, but unsuccessfully, and she died in great agony at about half-past three o’clock.

A verdict that the deceased died from the effects of poison taken whilst in a state of Temporary Insanity was returned.”

Darlaston Weekly Times 1/4/1882

“The family and friends of Mr. James Henry Farmer, a retired butcher, residing in Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, were deeply shocked by the painful news of his suicide, on Saturday evening. For a few months past, Mr. Farmer has been in a desponding state of mind, and a competent man was employed to be with him. The deceased was an old inhabitant, and carried on a successful business as butcher for many years in Church Street, Bilston, being followed by his son, Mr. James Henry Farmer, junior, who still conducts the same business. He had been long connected with the Wesleyan denomination; and has a son a minister. Mr. Farmer was widely respected, and his death is deeply regretted. He took no interest in public matters; but was formerly ever attending to his business with an energy that secured for him a large trade.

The inquest was held on Wednesday morning, at the OLD BUSH INN, Wolverhampton Street, before W. H. Phillips, Esq, the borough coroner. Mr. W. Bishop was the foreman of the jury, by whom general sympathy was expressed with the family.

Harriet Evans, a domestic servant in the employ of Mrs. Farmer, stated that a keeper had been employed to watch the deceased, because he had recently been low and desponding, and seemed to be labouring under the delusion that he was in financial difficulties. She last saw him alive at 7.30 on Saturday evening, when she left him in the dining room. The keeper was with him. At 9.10 she returned, but deceased was missing, and Harris, the keeper, had gone out to look for him. She saw him brought home dead at 1.30 in the night time, he was partly dressed, and very wet. She laid the body out and noticed that water and foam oozed from the mouth. He had previously tried to destroy himself, having taken a carving knife into the garden; this was the morning the man came. She got the knife from him, and deceased said ‘they’ were going to take him away to an asylum.

Joseph Harris said he had been engaged by the son of the deceased to be with deceased continually. He had been with him for a fortnight. On Saturday, Mrs. Farmer gave him permission to go into town, promising to look after deceased during his absence. He returned in about 15 minutes, when he found the deceased gone. In company with Mr. James Farmer a search was made, and the clothes were found at the side of the pool. A further search revealed the body lying in the pool quite dead. Deceased was in the habit of swearing, and saying he was going to be sold up, but he always expressed the greatest horror of self-destruction, and was never violent.

Mrs. Farmer, widow of the deceased, stated that after giving permission to Harris to go to town, she saw her husband reclining in an easy chair, apparently dozing. Thinking him asleep, she went upstairs for some trifling article, leaving him alone in the room. When she came down stairs, he was absent, but she allowed some few minutes to elapse before becoming alarmed, as she thought he had gone to the back of the premises. It was by the request of Dr. Best that a keeper was provided.

Janes Henry Farmer, eldest son of the deceased, corroborated the previous testimony, adding that his father had wished him good bye the last time he saw him, and that his mind had been affected for a long time. There was no cause for despondency in reference to pecuniary affairs.

PS O’Brien testified to the finding of the body, and the coroner in summing up regretted that deceased had been left even a moment. The jury returned a verdict of Suicide when in a state of Temporary Insanity.”

“About half-past nine on Sunday morning, a child named Florrie Waddams, two years and seven months old, living with her parents at 78, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, received scalds that resulted in her death. Deceased, on the morning in question, caught hold of a cup of tea, and pulled it on to her, inflicting such injuries that she expired about 6-30 on Wednesday morning. Dr. Matthie was called in at the time of the accident, and attended the little sufferer throughout.

An inquest was held on the body at the OLD BUSH INN, Wolverhampton Street, on Thursday morning, before E. B. Thorneycroft, Esq, deputy coroner. The mother of the child and a neighbour were examined and proved the before mentioned facts.

“Mr. E. B. Thorneycroft the Deputy Coroner held an inquest on Wednesday at the OLD BUSH INN, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, touching the death of John Langston (miner), aged 64, of Shale Street.

From the evidence it appeared that deceased was taken suddenly ill on Saturday night last and expired on the Sunday morning following. Dr. Kennedy, surgeon, High Street, saw him but he was unable to take any medicine. Deceased had been hurt several times in the pits. The coroner said that everything seemed to have been done that could be done. The jury returned a verdict of Death from Natural Causes.”

“Henry Bate was on Tuesday charged at Bilston Police Court with attempting to utter two spurious half-crowns at the house of Mr. Thomas Fowler, the OLD CROWN, Bridge Street. On Saturday night the accused was drinking at the house in question, and tendered a base half-crown to the landlady, who quickly perceived it was a bad one, and told him so; he instantly offered another of a similar description, but was given into custody. When apprehended he was the worse for drink, and told Superintendent M‘Rea that he had changed half a sovereign in the house, and received the change from a prostitute who was there. He had since stated that a friend of his and another man were dancing; that he backed his friend to be the better dancer of the two; that the stakes were put down on the table, and that the changes must have been rung with his money. Mr. M‘Rea thought the latter supposition extremely probable, as he had reason to believe there were a gang of smashers in the house on the night in question, added to which, the defendant was a hard-working man of good character. Under these circumstances Mr. Leigh ordered him to find two sureties for his appearance at the Sessions, if called on.”

“At the Bilston Police Court yesterday (Tuesday), before J. Leigh, Esq, seven persons, named William Fellows, John Fellows, Mary Fellows, Mary Pearson, Joseph Pearson, Rebecca Fowler, and Elizabeth Cope, were charged with stealing a silver watch from the person of Mr. Henry Oliver, the landlord of the KINGS ARMS, Bilston. Mr. Henry Underhill was engaged for the prosecution, and Mr. Ebsworth for the defence.

The evidence of the prosecutor was to the effect that on Thursday night last, at about eleven o’clock, the prisoners were drinking in a room at his house; he went to the room to tell them that it was closing time, and sat down upon a chair next the door. While he was sitting there Rebecca Fowler, who is a widow, and keeps a beerhouse in Bilston, came and sat beside him. Shortly afterwards a quarrel commenced between Fellows and Pearson, which led to a fight, and Mr. Oliver, after considerable difficulty, succeeded in getting them out of the house. As soon as they had gone he missed his watch, but he could not say which of the parties had taken it. At the time he first entered the room he pulled out his watch and told the parties it was closing time. The following day police constable M'Nulty took the prisoners to the prosecutor's house, when they admitted that the watch must have been taken by one of their number, but no one would acknowledge it. They were remanded for a week, to obtain additional evidence, bail being refused."

"Staffordshire Quarter Sessions. Yesterday.....

Elizabeth Cope, 40, William Fellows, 20, Rebecca Fowler, 34, Joseph Pearson, 48, Mary Pearson, 46, John Fellows, 43, and Mary Fellows, 42, who surrendered on bail, were indicted for assaulting Henry Oliver, at Bilston. Mr. Kenealy was counsel for the prosecutor, and Mr. Hill defended the prisoners.

The first witness was Henry Oliver, who deposed that he was a licensed victualler, keeping the KINGS ARMS, Bilston. On the 20th of October, about twenty minutes after eleven o'clock at night, he went into the smoke room and told the prisoners, who were drinking there, that it was time to shut up. John Fellows then requested him to sit down a few minutes, as it was not late, observing that there was no need for them to choke themselves. He then sat down close to the door, which he kept open with his knee. After remaining about five or six minutes, W. Fellows began to quarrel with J. Pearson, when he told him he would not have any bad language there, to which Fellows replied, 'If you stop me I'll strike you,' and he was then knocked down and struck several times, and his forehead was cut with a glass thrown at him. His female servant came to his assistance, and ultimately the prisoners were turned out.

There was an indictment charging them with stealing the prosecutor's watch, but this bill the Grand Jury had ignored. Mr. Hill addressed the Jury on behalf of the prisoners, and called several witnesses, who deposed that at the time named no disturbance took place at the KINGS ARMS; that the prosecutor was very drunk, and that on attempting to turn the prisoners out after midnight, he fell down and cut his forehead, and that the utmost that had been done was a slight resistance on the part of the prisoners to being turned out of the house.

The Jury returned a verdict of guilty of the graver charge of occasioning grievous bodily harm. The verdict of the Jury was received by a crowded Court with considerable surprise, which was not lessened when the whole of the prisoners were sentenced to six months' imprisonment with hard labour. (The female prisoners, who fully expected a verdict of acquittal, gave vent to their surprise in loud screams and lamentations.)"

"Winter Assizes. Oxford Circuit. Stafford, December 30. (Before Mr. Baron Rolfe.)

Samuel Fellows, aged 19, Robert Purslow, 21, John Parry, 18, and Daniel Webb, 20, who were acquitted of the charge of having murdered Mary Jane Wild, on the 29th November last, were indicted for the violation of her person on the above day, at Bilston, in this county. Mr. Yardley and Mr. Huddleston conducted the prosecution; Mr. Allen defended the prisoners.

Mr. Yardley briefly opened the case to the jury, and called Ann, wife of Benjamin Willis, of Bilston, who stated that on the evening of Wednesday, the 29th November, she and the deceased went to Wolverhampton. They started about half past four o'clock, and remained there until eleven o'clock at night. When they got to Wolverhampton they were joined by the four prisoners and Thomas Haynes. They all went to Peter's gin-shop, where they had five pints of ale, but had no spirits. They afterwards went to another gin-shop, where they had more ale. About eleven o'clock they started back to Bilston. When they got to the Gibbet Turnpike she and Haynes went across the road from the other party, and the four prisoners, with the deceased, proceeded in the same direction, on the other side of the road. In a short time Webb came across and asked her if she would submit to him, and made use of some very improper language. On her refusing he struck her on the mouth and knocked her down, and Thomas Haynes picked her up. When Webb struck her he said he would serve the other girl the same. He then joined his companions on the other side. In a short time afterwards witness asked the deceased to come to her, on which one of the four said, 'Nobody shall molest her; I will see her righted.' She and Haynes then went on to Bilston, and left the four men and the deceased together. She saw her again about half-past one o'clock when they brought her out of the pit. She was then quite insensible, and the surgeon was sewing up her head. She knew Fellows before, but not the others.

Thomas Haynes corroborated her testimony.

John Turner, shoemaker, said his house was on the Wolverhampton road, a short distance from Blaze's works. On the night of the 29th of November last he was called up by John Perry and Samuel Fellows. They said, 'Here is a woman in a pit down below; come and help us to get her out.' He asked them how they knew it, and they both said, 'We were walking up the road, and heard her shouting down the pit, and asked her if she had any bones broken, and she said, 'No.' Witness immediately went down to them, and said they had better send for a policeman; but they expressed themselves anxious to get her out themselves. He then accompanied them to the coal-pit, which is near to a footway leading out of the turnpike road. He called down, but no one answered. Perry and Fellows then procured a rope, and witness informed the police. Fellows went down the pit in what is called a 'horse,' and having placed the deceased in his lap, they were both drawn up, a piece of timber having been placed over the pit's mouth for that purpose. About twelve persons assisted to draw them up, and she was then removed to the CROWN public house, in Crown Street, Bilston (where she died), accompanied by Perry and Fellows, who said they knew where she lived. Witness did not hear her speak; she seemed unable, and to be very badly injured by the fall. The deceased's way home was not by the pit, but just the reverse. The height of the pit bank from the foot road is about three yards, and the pit is about twenty-eight yards deep.

Thomas Tomlinson, said he was a police-officer in Bilston, on the 29th and 30th days of November last, and was on duty on the first of those days, and met the two witnesses, Haynes and Willis, who made a charge of assault against Webb, who was in company with three other men and a young woman, on the Wolverhampton road. He soon after met Purslow and Webb, who asked if they had seen four young men and a girl coming from Wolverhampton, and Purslow said, 'No.' He then went back into the town, and met the last witness, and accompanied him to the pit. He there saw Purslow and Webb, who assisted to get the deceased out. They said, 'You saw us on the road; we were then going to get assistance, to fetch her out of the pit.' Fellows brought the deceased out of the pit, and he said, 'She slipped in as we were going by the pit, and I might as well have slipped in myself.' The deceased's dress was much disordered; she had a pair of drawers on, but they were over her heels and torn.

Elizabeth Salt, the landlady of the CROWN public house, at Bilston, recollected the deceased being brought to her house on the morning of the 30th of November, where she remained till her death. In her cross-examination she said that on asking the deceased, when she came to herself, how she got into the pit she answered, in a laughing manner, 'Why I tumbled in, to be sure.'

John Baldwin Esq, a Magistrate for the county, said that on the 22nd of December he went to the CROWN public house, at Bilston, to take the deposition of a woman who he understood to be in a dying state, from injuries received by having been thrown into a coal-pit. He found the deceased in bed, and the four prisoners in custody. He took her declaration, which she made in the immediate prospect of death. She signed it with a cross, and his clerk witnessed her signature.

The following deposition was then read by the officer of the Court.

'I am 18 years old, and have lived in Bilston, in the county of Stafford, about six months. I never was married. I went from Bilston to Wolverhampton on Wednesday last, in company with another girl, named Ann Willis. I came back with the same Ann Willis. That we were overtaken on the road by five men, who I shall know when I see them. That four of these men ill-used me. They pulled me out of the turnpike-road, and wanted to have 'concerns' with me, but I would not suffer them, and the same four men threw me down a pit because I would not suffer them to have concerns with me. That the fifth man never came from the turnpike-road with me, but he went along with Ann Willis. The man that was with Ann Willis never injured me at all. They pushed me into the pit, and I cannot recollect anything after that. It was late at night when this happened, and I was quite sober; and I make this declaration in the prospect of death soon taking place, and fully believe that I shall live but a short time through the injuries I have received. I was in service until the latter end of July last, and since then I have been on the town. The men said to me, before they pushed me into the pit, that if I would not let them have concerns with me, that that should be my doom to be thrown into the pit. I did not think they would have put me in. I thought they were only threatening me. They took hold of me round the waist, and then pushed me into the pit. The four men are now present. I know them all, having seen them before, except John Perry. They are the same that were with me on Wednesday night. I had been with three of them previous to that night. There were four men went off the road with me, and one went back again, but I can't say which it was, I was so knocked about by them before they got me to the pit.'

Mr. Allen addressed the jury on behalf of the prisoners, who were all convicted of the crime imputed to them, and were sentenced by the Court to eighteen months' imprisonment, with hard labour."

"Thomas Salt, of the CROWN public house, in Bilston, was fined 20s and costs, for keeping his house open on Sunday, the 18th instant, during the usual hours of afternoon divine service."

Birmingham Journal 11/10/1845

"On Saturday last, about one o'clock, an accident, which proved fatal to a man named John Roberts, occurred in a pit belonging to Mr. Lester. While working in the mine, he was buried by a fall of coal, and after remaining for three quarters of an hour in this perilous position, he was extricated by his fellow-workmen. When taken out, he was not quite dead, but after lingering in agony for an hour, death put an end to his sufferings. An inquest was held on the body the same evening, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, Coroner, at the OLD CROWN, Crown Street, when a verdict of Accidental Death was returned."

“Pursuant to the several Acts for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors in England.

The County Court of Warwickshire, holden at Coventry, the fifth day of June, 1848.

Upon the due filing of the schedule of John Ruscoe, of the OLD CROWN INN, Hall Green, in the parish of Sedgley, in the county of Stafford, licensed victualler, collier and hallier, formerly of Turner's Lane, in the said parish of Sedgley, retailer of ale and beer and hallier, a prisoner in the gaol of Coventry, in the county of Warwick, whose estate and effects have been vested in the provisional assignee by order duly made in that behalf; and upon reference of the petition and schedule of the said prisoner for hearing made to this Court by order of the Court for Relief of Insolvent Debtors pursuant to the said Acts; it is ordered and appointed that the said prisoner shall be brought up to be dealt with according to the provisions of the said Acts before the Judge of the said County Court, at Coventry, in the said county, on the Twenty-Seventh day of June instant, at the hour of ten in the morning precisely.

John Powell, Attorney, 156, Moor Street, Birmingham.”

“James Law, a well-known character, by trade a file cutter, but who at one time kept a public house in the Horsefair, was charged with obtaining, under false pretences, four quarts of ale and half an ounce of tobacco, from Mr. John Welch, landlord of the CROWN, at Hall Fields, Bilston. It appeared that on the 6th of March the prisoner called at the CROWN, and stated that Joseph Sutton had sent him some ale and tobacco. He drank a pint and took away with him four quarts and half an ounce of tobacco. On Friday, the 29th of March, prosecutor gave Sutton a bill of the ale and tobacco, when Sutton said he had never authorised Law to order the ale. Joseph Sutton now proved that he had never given Law any order or authority to fetch ale or tobacco for him from Welch's. The prisoner was committed for trial at the next sessions.

It was stated that forty of fifty persons had suffered from the fraudulent acts of the prisoner, but, with this exception, they had all been so contrived as to give them more or less the character of a simple debt. One instance was mentioned to the Bench in which he had obtained, by means of a false character, employment from Mr. Richards, of Dudley Port, and having been entrusted with £7 worth of files to cut, he erased Mr. Richards's name from them, and sold them as his own property. He was taken into custody five or six weeks ago, but managed to escape from the Bilston Police Station. He was retaken at Dudley."

"The annual meeting for the renewal of existing licenses, and for receiving applications for fresh ones, was held at the Police Court, on Friday.....

Bilston Division, August 31, 1866.

'I beg to submit to the Magistrates the attached list of licensed victuallers who have been complained against during the year. Twenty-five have been convicted, and three have paid costs; one had been convicted three times, and five convicted twice. This is a large increase on last year's list; but I think it has arisen from the police being more particular in reporting cases of permitting drunkenness – as it was found to be an evil rather on the increase. I believe it has caused landlords to be more careful in supplying drink to persons intoxicated.'

H. McCrea, Superintendent.

Black List.....

James Walters, OLD CROWN, Hall Green, Sedgley left over until the adjourned licensing meeting on the 28th of September."

Birmingham Daily Post 29/9/1866

"Yesterday, the Bilston adjourned Licensing Session was held at the Police Court.....

The landlord of the OLD CROWN INN, Hallfields, was granted a license, the former proprietor, who had been fined, having left the house.

James Walters, who had been fined three times as keeper of the OLD CROWN, mentioned above, applied for a license to be renewed to the SPREAD EAGLE, Ladymore. The Bench, however, thought that they ought not to grant one, and Walters then said that rather than injure the house he would leave; and the Magistrates granted the license to the landlord, but that it should not be renewed until he had obtained a new tenant."

“On the 16th instant, an inquest was held at the CROWN AND ANCHOR INN, Coseley Street, Bilston, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, on the body of Sarah Caddick, a married woman, aged 46, who met with her death under the following distressing circumstances.

Emma Caddick, daughter-in-law of the deceased, stated that about three o’clock on Monday afternoon she left the Deepfields, accompanied by the deceased, with the intention of going to Bilston. They had got as far as the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton Railway, which crosses the bottom of Coseley Street, when they saw a man driving a horse attached to a waggon. The horse was going as fast as he could, and the driver was running by the side of it. When the waggon had reached the middle of the road the horse was unfastened, and the waggon allowed to go on. The deceased crossed the road, when some persons who were near shouted to her to go back and she heard them, but remarked that she should be over before the waggon reached her. She had crossed the road, when she became frightened at the horse, and was about to return again, when the waggon caught her, and pushed her three or four yards, when she fell, and the waggon passed over her neck, severing the head from the body.

Mr. Farwell, solicitor of Wolverhampton, attended on behalf of the contractors, and at the Coroner’s suggestion said a young man should in future be placed at the crossing to prevent persons passing, and that the horse should not be detached from the waggon until it had crossed the road.

The Jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death. The deceased has left ten children, the youngest only twelve months old.”

“In the County Court of Staffordshire, holden at Wolverhampton.

Whereas a Petition of Thomas Henshaw, at present and for five years last past residing in Coseley Street, Bilston, in the county of Stafford, Licensed Retailer of Spirituous Liquors, Ale, Beer, and Tobacco, an Insolvent Debtor, having been filed in the County Court of Staffordshire, at Wolverhampton, and an Interim Order for Protection from Process having been given to the said Thomas Henshaw, under the provisions of the statutes in that case made and provided, the said Thomas Henshaw is hereby required to appear in Court before the Judge acting in the matter of the said Petition, on the 26th day of August, 1856, at ten o’clock in the forenoon, at the Court House, Queen Street, Wolverhampton aforesaid, for his First Examination touching his debts, estate, and effects, and to be further dealt with according to the provisions of the said statutes; and notice is hereby given that the Choice of Assignees is to take place at the time so appointed.

All persons indebted to the said Thomas Henshaw, or who have any of his effects, are not to pay or deliver the same but to Mr. Charles Gallimore Brown, the Official Assignee, acting in the matter of the said Petition, at his Office, in Queen Street, Wolverhampton, aforesaid.

James Wells, Attorney, Bilston.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 19/11/1856

“The Magistrates on the Bench at Bilston Petty Sessions on Friday last were engaged for a considerable time in investigating several charges and cross charges arising out of a dispute concerning property.

In the first place Thomas Henshaw charged Charles James Abbott and Richard Abbott with assaulting and threatening him, and in return the Abbotts summoned Henshaw for wilful damage and threats.

Henshaw, it appeared, is landlord of the CROWN AND ANCHOR INN, Coseley Row, Bilston, and the Abbotts are pattern makers, living near, and have, as it was said, some interest in the CROWN AND ANCHOR. With the consent of Henshaw, and upon certain specified conditions, a wall was erected to divide his yard so as to allow the Abbotts to have a portion of it. Henshaw, however, contended that the conditions had not been complied with, and said that the wall remained there on sufferance.

A Mrs. Williams, who has a further interest in the property, went to the public house and commenced to pull down the wall, stating that she had not given her permission for it to be erected. In the work of demolition Henshaw joined her and went upon the other portion of the yard. Here it was said that James Abbotts knocked him down and would have kicked him had not Mrs. Williams threatened that if he did so she would give evidence against him. The assault alleged against Henshaw was that he threw bricks at James Abbotts.

The Magistrates, after hearing witnesses on both sides, ordered the two Abbotts and Henshaw to be bound over to keep the peace.”

“William Williamson, of the OLD CROWN AND ANCHOR, Coseley Road, Bilston, was fined £1 2s 6d, including costs, for keeping his house open on Sunday morning last.”

Staffordshire Advertiser 14/3/1857

Glasgow Herald 30/6/1859

“Hereford County Court.....

In re William Williams, late of Bramble Knoll, near Ledbury, Herefordshire, miner and excavator, in lodgings; previously of the CROWN AND ANCHOR INN, Crosley Street, Bilston, Staffordshire, miner, excavator, and licensed victualler.

The insolvent petitioned for his discharge from the Hereford County Gaol, where he had been confined since 31st August last. The aggregate amount of his debts, contracted since January 1857, was £188 11s 11d, but for £9 15s of this he had received no consideration. The amount of debts owing to him was £72 11s 7d, of which £46 8s 9d was written ‘bad.’ Insolvent in his balance sheet said, ‘The cause of my present insolvency is badness of trade, having a number of debts due to me which I could not get in, and my being employed away from home, my wife was incompetent to manage the business.’ There was no opposition and insolvent was declared entitled to the benefit of the act, and ordered to be discharged from custody forthwith.”

Thomas Jones, retailer of beer, Thompson Street. [1862]

“Thomas Jones, a beerhouse keeper, in Batch Croft, was summoned before the Bench, yesterday, for permitting gambling in his house. A witness named Partridge proved that he was present in defendant’s house on Saturday night last, when he saw a number of men adjourn to a bowling alley, which adjoins the house, and play for several quarts of ale. The defendant was standing by the whole of the time, and he made bets with some of the spectators as to the results of the game. The Magistrates ordered him to pay a penalty of 40s.”

AND

“Thomas Jones, of the OLD ENGLISH GENTLEMAN public house, Thomas [sic] Street, Bilston, was charged with having allowed gambling in his house. The case was proved by the Policeman Partridge, who stated that on the night of Saturday last he had found the defendant and others bowling for ale and betting threepences on the event. Superintendent McCrea said that the house was a notorious resort of gamblers.

For the defence, two witnesses were called to deny the truth of the policeman’s statements. The Bench, however, inflicted a fine of 40s and costs, and cautioned the defendant that a repetition of the offence would be visited by an infliction of the full penalty.”

“A youth named George Hazledine was brought before the Magistrates, at the Wolverhampton Police Court, on Wednesday last, charged with committing a rape upon a young woman named Ann Turner. Mr. Green James was engaged for the defence, at whose request all females were ordered out of court.

Ann Turner on being sworn stated that she was formerly a servant at the MERMAID INN, at Bilston, kept by the defendant’s father. On the previous Wednesday the defendant in a jocular manner asked her to leave her bed room door open at night, but thinking that he meant nothing she took no notice of it. She went to bed about eleven o’clock and latched the bed room door, but did not bolt it, as she was not then aware there was a bolt on the door. Some time after she had been in bed she was awoke by the defendant, who came into the room and got into bed to her. She resisted as well as she was able, but she was so excited that she could not cry out, and ultimately the defendant had connection with her. He remained with her about ten minutes. She did not tell her mistress, but she mentioned what had occurred, on the Friday, to Mary Nichols, the person to whom she went after she left her situation. The prosecutrix said she had neither father nor mother, nor any friends in Bilston. Mr. James cross-examined the prosecutrix, when she admitted that other men had had criminal connection with her.

The Magistrates said there appeared to have been no alarm raised and very little disposition to resist on the part of the prosecutrix. The evidence was therefore insufficient to support a charge of so grave a nature.

Mr. James wished it to be publicly stated that the defendant positively denied that there was the slightest foundation for the charge.”

“Wolverhampton County Court.....

The plaintiff was John Pritchard, Shropshire Row, Bilston, and the defendant was William Hazledine, MERMAID INN, Shropshire Row, who was sued as the husband of the treasurer of a Woman’s Funeral Society, held at his house. Mr. J. Walker appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Thurstans for the defendant.

The amount claimed was £5, alleged to be due to the plaintiff on account of his wife’s death, she being a member of the society. For the plaintiff it was contended, and the facts supported in evidence, that a member of this Woman’s Funeral Society, named Banks, proposed the plaintiff’s wife, and paid the usual proposal fee of 1s 3d; the same woman subsequently made two monthly payments of behalf of Pritchard’s wife, and a day or two afterwards Mrs. Pritchard died.

The secretary of the club, a stout buxom old lady, named Cox, was acquainted of the death, and she gave an order on the treasurer, the defendant’s wife, to pay the funeral money, £5. This order was conveyed to Mrs. Hazledine by the woman Banks, but as the letter had not got a receipt stamp, the £5 was not paid over to her. Mrs. Banks thereupon went in search of a stamp, and when she returned she found a committee of women discussing the case; after a lengthy and talkative deliberation, the conclusion they arrived at was to offer £2 10s instead of £5, because Mrs. Pritchard had so recently joined the club. The £2 10s was afterwards withdrawn, and it was determined to make no offer at all. The society possessed two stewards, and this committee meeting was called by one of them; the other was unable to attend, she being out washing. The proceedings of the committee led to a dispute, and the matter was taken into court.

Mr. Thurstans, for the defendant, denied that the woman had been received into the club at all. She failed to show herself after the proposal, according to the rules, and therefore her club money was refused – though thrust upon the secretary by Mrs. Banks, it was not handed to the society’s fund. The decision of the ladies committee was quite in accordance with the rules, which directed that disputes should be settled by members of the society. The society was not enrolled, but it was agreed to put in the rules, and to make them evidence. They were, however, quite incomprehensible, excepting that a very fair proportion of the money raised by the club should be devoted to the purchase of ale. Forfeitures were to be disposed of in this manner. Three half-pence were to be disbursed at every monthly meeting by each contributor; members refusing to act as stewards should be fined 2d; and, as though aware of the ungovernable property of a woman’s tongue, the heaviest penalty of the club (6d) was imposed on any member beginning a quarrel in the club room. Another very sapient rule was, ‘If any member commit suicide, she shall not be entitled to the funeral money.’ For giving notice of a funeral, the stewards were each to be rewarded with a pint of ale; and once a year –Bilston Wake Thursday – the club should sit down to its annual dinner, to which every member should pay, whether she were present or not. As to the benefits of the society, the rules spoke of them very ambiguously. In the case of the death of a member’s child, under 12 years of age, such member shall be entitled to £2 10s; over 12 years of age £5. Not a single rule referred to the claims in case of the death of a grown-up member; and the objects of the society were further mystified by this proviso, ‘No member shall be entitled to this benefit, except father or mother, or children unmarried.’ Mrs. Cox, the secretary, was asked to explain that rule, for, as the Judge observed, it would exclude a husband claiming club money on the death of his wife. Mrs. Cox explained, with more readiness that the Court seemed able to comprehend, that the club looked on husband and wife in the light of father and mother. The rules that had been handed in, she said, had been in force for 17 years, and the club had never been disgraced by having its integrity called into question.

The Judge observed that the club must indeed be a happy company, for no one could enter it if they had affliction in the family, and this happiness was the more remarkable when one considers the peculiar element of the club. The Judge said he certainly thought that justice abided with the plaintiff, but he did not see how he could give him a verdict, for it was utterly impossible to understand the rules. The strongest point in his favour, and the one by which he (the Judge) felt disposed to decide, was the retention of the order from the secretary, which, he thought, amounted to an admission of liability.

Mr. Thurstans explained that that order, being unstamped, was an illegal document; and as a committee could settle all disputes, the order was over-ruled.

The case was ultimately adjourned, with a view to its settlement out of Court.”

“Yesterday, James Cole was committed to the Sessions for trial, charged with assaulting James Gill, and robbing him of 15s. The parties met at the MERMAID INN, Shropshire Row, where there was much drinking, and a great deal more of what is called ‘haggling,’ and in the midst of the squabble prosecutor had his purse and 15s taken from him. Prisoner was apprehended at Birmingham, with the purse upon him.”

Bilston Division, August 31, 1866.

‘I beg to submit to the Magistrates the attached list of licensed victuallers who have been complained against during the year. Twenty-five have been convicted, and three have paid costs; one had been convicted three times, and five convicted twice. This is a large increase on last year’s list; but I think it has arisen from the police being more particular in reporting cases of permitting drunkenness – as it was found to be an evil rather on the increase. I believe it has caused landlords to be more careful in supplying drink to persons intoxicated.’

“At the Police Court, Wolverhampton, yesterday, before Mr. I. Spooner (Stipendiary), Patrick Hanman (22), labourer, living in Carribee Island, was charged with having, in company, with several other men, violently assaulted Job Dolphin, landlord of the MERMAID INN, Salop Street, Bilston, and stolen £4 10s from him. Mr. Barrow appeared for the prosecution.

Prosecutor attended the races on Tuesday last. At the close of the racing he was assisting a friend to lift a barrel into a cart when he observed the prisoner strike an old woman a violent blow in the face with his fist. There was a ‘row’ going on close by, and prisoner had been taking an active part in it. On seeing prisoner strike the woman, prosecutor remarked to his friend upon the cowardly and unmanly nature of the act. Prisoner evidently overheard the remark, and without saying a word he rushed at prosecutor and dealt him a blow with his fist on the left side of the head with such force as to knock him down flat upon the ground. Whilst prosecutor lay on the ground the prisoner and several other men treated him most brutally. They beat and kicked him in the face and other parts of the body, and finally the prisoner took two sovereigns and five half sovereigns from his waistcoat pocket. Prosecutor called out for help, and one of his assailants placed his hand over his mouth, whilst the other ruffians continued kicking and punching him till he became insensible. He was much bruised about the face, both his eyes were blackened, and one of his teeth knocked out. Eventually he was recused by some of his friends, and his assailants succeeded in getting clear away. Prisoner was arrested by Police-constable John Wild on Sunday morning, and prosecutor, on seeing him, instantly identified him as being the man who first attacked him.

Prisoner admitted that he was in the ‘bother,’ but denied all knowledge of the robbery.

Birmingham Daily Post 29/7/1874

“Permitting gambling was the charge preferred against Job Dolphin, landlord of the MERMAID INN, Salop Street, Bilston, at the Police Court, yesterday, before the Stipendiary Magistrate. Mr. C. Barrow (instructed by the Licensed Victuallers’ Association) defended, and the interest evinced in the case was shown by the crowded attendance.

Hugh McGowan, hollow-fireman, of Canal Street, Wolverhampton, deposed that he was at the defendant’s house on the 4th inst, between eight and nine in the evening. A man named Meek was spinning a teetotum on the kitchen table for ‘glasses round.’ Afterwards Meek ‘spinned’ for money. Witness staked, and lost nearly £4.

In cross-examination, witness acknowledged that he had met the landlord before he began to gamble, and that he had promised him, as the landlord had to go to the house of a dying relative, to remain quiet, and see that all went straightforward. The defendant had got the same promise from a companion of witness, named Emerson. He saw two men, named George Lowe and Samuel Hazeldine, get a plate, on which they deposited the stakes, and the landlord’s daughter took it away, and the men then obtained another. Witness prevaricated on being asked whether when the plate had been taken away the defendant’s daughter had not prohibited gambling. He admitted that he had not spoken to the landlord about the matter for six and to the police for twelve days after it had happened.

William Emerson, iron refiner, of Wolverhampton, said that he was in the house when the gambling for sums varying from 1s to 5s took place, but after he had lost 1s, he declined to further participate in the ‘spinning.’ Witness saw the defendant’s daughter fetch the plate away, and heard her desire the men not to gamble.

In defence, Mr. Barrow asked his Worship to take a fair and reasonable view of the case. He contended that his client had not broken the spirit of the law. The circumstances were special and peculiar. The landlord had been unexpectedly called away, and he had enjoined the two men who had lost the money to assist his daughter in preserving order. Mr. Barrow maintained that McGowan was actuated not so much by a desire to secure justice as the restitution of his money. He called the daughter of the defendant, who stated that she had removed the plate several times, and expostulated with the men.

Mr. Spooner said he believed that the men with the teetotum were sharpers, and that they had fleeced McGowan of his money. The girl should have sent for a policeman when the men would not stop gambling. He was afraid that if he dismissed the case it might be regarded as a dangerous precedent for leaving girls to manage houses who were unable to properly attend to business.

Mr. Barrow again pleaded that the peculiar circumstances caused of the defendant to adopt precautions which in calmer moments he would not have thought sufficient.

One of the witnesses expressing his belief that McGowan had not lost more than £2, and McGowan admitting that the landlord had given him 30s, the Stipendiary allowed the case to be withdrawn on the defendant undertaking to pay the costs and give an additional 10s to McGowan.

Mr. Barrow subsequently applied for summonses against McGowan and Emerson for having gambled on licensed premises.”

Stallard, solicitor, and Mr. D. Shaw, of this city. The liabilities were estimated at £650, and assets £162. An offer of 5s in the £ was proposed and accepted, Mr. D. Shaw being appointed trustee.”

Wolverhampton Express and Star 1/10/1875

“At Wolverhampton County Court, today, before A. Martineau, Esq, (Judge), Mr. Thorne (of the firm Thorne, Smith and Thorne) mentioned to his Honour a case in which a High Bailiff (Mr. Curtis) had thought it desirable to summons two men named John Smith, beerhouse keeper, and Job Dolphin, licensed victualler, of Shropshire Row, Bilston, for having threatened and assaulted a bailiff named Samuel Potts, whilst in the execution of his duty.

Mr. Thorne apologised to his Honour for troubling him with the matter, because as the offence was to all intents and purposes a criminal one, it ought, in his opinion, to be adjudicated upon by a magistrate. The chief bailiff was, however, to some extent prohibited from taking this course, as one learned magistrate on the Wolverhampton Bench had, on two or three occasions when cases of this kind been taken before him, not only expressed his disinclination to deal with them, but had stated distinctly that the Judge of the County Court was the proper person before whom such cases should be taken. He (Mr. Thorne) might state that the complainant Potts was not a regular officer of the Court, but had been specially engaged in this matter by the High Bailiff to levy an execution on the goods of the defendant Smith, for a sum of £23 2s 8d, at the suit of Mr. Whitehouse, brewer, of Tipton. Since the assault was committed both Smith and Dalton [sic] had expressed to the High Bailiff their regret for what they did, and under these circumstances Mr. Curtis had no desire to press the case against them. On behalf of the High Bailiff, he (Mr. Thorne) would suggest, if it met with his Honour’s approval, that an apology from the men should be accepted, together with payment of a nominal sum, say 5s each, as a fine, and the costs of those proceedings, including his (Mr. Thorne’s) fee.

His Honour expressed his desire to hear the particulars of the case, and the complainant, Samuel Potts, was then sworn. He said he went to Smith’s house, on Friday, he first saw the daughter. Afterwards Smith himself came in, to whom he stated his business, and exhibited to him his authority. After looking at it, Smith said there was some mistake, and he would go and see Mr. Whitehouse (the plaintiff in the suit) about it. He then went away and returned in about three hours, between six and seven in the evening. He then commenced to threaten him (Potts), and said if he did not go away he had a gun upstairs, and he would fetch it downstairs and shoot him. He went to fetch the gun, but did not bring it, because he said the door of the room was locked where it was. He, however, threatened to knock his (Potts’s) brains out if he did not go away, and sent to some works close at hand for some men to come and help him turn him out. He continued his threats to such an extent, and became so violent in his conduct, that witness became frightened, and he called in a policeman to protect him. After the policeman came Smith was quiet for a bit, but when the policeman went away he again began to threaten him. About midnight the other defendant, Dolphin, who is a neighbour of Smith’s, came into the house and asked witness to let him look at his authority, pretending that if he would do so, and it was alright, he would pay him the money. Witness, however, doubted what he said, and refused to produce his authority. He did afterwards show it to the policeman, when he came in a little later, and when the policeman was handing it him back again, Dolphin tried to snatch it from him. The policeman then left, and the two men again commenced to threaten him to get him to go out. As he refused to leave, Smith went and opened the door, and then Dolphin, who is a tall, powerful man, seized hold of him and threw him, or pushed him, out of the house.

The Judge said the offence was a very serious one, and one which he could not allow to be compromised in the way suggested.

Mr. Barrow, on behalf of the defendants, said they acted under a mistaken notion, and now desired, through him, to express their deep contrition for what they had done.

His Honour said what made the matter worse in regard to Dolphin – by whom it appeared the actual assault was committed – was that he had no business to interfere in the matter at all. They had both committed an offence of a very grave character, and as the officers of that Court had a right to be protected in the execution of their duty, he should order that the defendant Dolphin pay a fine of £2 and costs, and Smith £1 and costs. His Honour at the same time expressed his concurrence with Mr. Thorne that cases of this character, the offence being a criminal one, should be dealt with by a criminal tribunal, such as Magistrates Court, for although a magistrate himself as well as a County Court judge, still he was not so well acquainted with the criminal law as those who daily administer it.”

“Samuel Haseldine, licensed victualler, of Salop Street, Bradley, was summoned for having assaulted Police-constable Tracey. On the night of the 7th instant, the officer saw defendant drunk in the street and attempting to break open the door of a house adjoining his public house. He had a stick in his hand, and on Tracey speaking to him he threatened to strike him with the stick. The officer took defendant into custody, and the defendant then committed the assault by striking him.

Sureties of the peace and payment of costs were ordered against the defendant.”

together with a SHOP and COTTAGES.—To be sold by Auction,

BY Mr. THOS. J. BARNETT, at the Star and Garter
Hotel, Wolverhampton, on MONDAY, the 21st day of July, 1890, at Five for Six o'clock in the evening prompt, in one lot, and subject to conditions of sale to be then produced and read, and which may be inspected at the Office of the Vendor's Solicitor three days prior to the day of sale—all that Old-established, Fully-licensed PUBLIC-HOUSE, called "THE MERMAID INN," situate in and fronting Salop Street, Bilston, in the county of Stafford. The House contains Vault, Bar, Snug, large Smoke Room, Kitchen, good Cellars, large Club Room, four Bed Rooms, two-stalled Stable, and other Out-buildings, and is now in the occupation of Mrs. Annie Walmsley.
Together also with the Lock-up SHOP adjoining, now in the occupation of Mr. T. Ady, Butcher; and the Seven DWELLING HOUSES at the rear thereof, now in the respective occupations of Mrs. Caddick, and Messrs. G. Portman, J. Caddick, G. Jones, J.
Good, J. Millington, and one untenanted.

The Inn is reputed to be one of the oldest and best business houses in Salop Street. It is surrounded with Ironworks, and has good front, side, and back entrances. The whole of the property has recently been put in good repair, is well tenanted, and affords to capitalists, Brewers, and anyone desiring a compact block of property and a free Public House an opportunity for investment seldom to be met with.

All the premises are freehold of inheritance.

For further particulars apply to the Tenant of the Inn: Mr. J.
Woods, Estate Agent, Regent Street, Bilston; Mr. J. Rawson, Oak
Farm Hotel, Crewe; the Auctioneer, Wolverhampton; or to S.
Yearsley, Vendor's Solicitor, Crewe.

Birmingham Journal 27/6/1846

“On Tuesday last, at Bilston Police Court, Andrew Howell, a collier, appeared before the Bench to complain of the conduct of Mr. Elijah Price, spirit merchant, of the Swan Bank, Bilston. It appeared from the statement of the complainant, that about nine o'clock on Monday morning he went into the shop of Mr. Price for a half-quartern of rum. There were two men tossing, and they asked for a cake each. He also asked for a cake, but Mr. Price held the cake and he said he had no money. Complainant replied that he would bet him all the silver he had in his pocket that he had got more money about him than he had, if he would not go to any drawer. Mr. Price then went to a drawer, and took out a four-square staff, or mallet, with which he struck complainant on the arm. He was then going to strike him again, when complainant picked up a stool to ward off the blow, and with it knocked two or three glasses off the table. In consequence of the injury he received upon the arm, Howell said he had been unable to work for five days, and had been obliged to pay a man 5s 3d a day to do his work.

In defence, Mr. Price said he was in the shop, and was tossing for gin. He grumbled about the measure, and wanted to bet with him, but he refused, and Howell threatened to throw a handful of silver in his face. He then struck him in his own defence, upon which Howell picked up a stool, which he threw at him, and bent the gas pipe, which was damaged to the amount of 2s 6d.

The Bench said the assault had been committed under great provocation, and fined Mr. Price in the mitigated penalty of 1s and cost. A summons which was taken out against Howell, calling on him to find sureties, was dismissed.”

“At Bilston Public Office on Tuesday, Betsy Jarvis, Margaret Fellows, Ruth Wardle, and Henry Lawley were charged with assaulting Henry Usher, foreman to Mr. Elijah Price, spirit merchant, of Swan Bank. Lawley, Fellows, and Wardle, were each fined 10s and costs, in default to be committed for one month; Jarvis was fined 20s and costs, in default to be committed for a like period.”

“Wine and Spirit Establishment, Dudley Street, Wolverhampton.

Elijah Price, begs respectfully to inform the inhabitants of Wolverhampton and the surrounding neighbourhood that having purchased from the Executors of the late Mr. George Hardwick, with a view of conducting the same in connection with his Old Establishment at Bilston, earnestly solicits a continuance of that support which has been so kindly conferred upon his predecessor, pledging himself to keep none but articles of first-rate qualities, thereby insure that confidence and satisfaction which will ever be his study to merit.

NB. Brenan, Price and Co's, Dublin Porter.”

“Charles Price was brought up at Bilston Public Office, before J. Leigh, Esq, on Thursday, to answer the charge of stealing, on Thursday evening, a brass tap, belonging to Mr. Elijah Price, the proprietor of some liquor vaults, at Swan Bank. It appeared the accused asked a female servant of the prosecutor to permit his having a swill, and that another servant saw him take away the property. It was stated that Mr. Price was unwilling to proceed with the case, as he did not wish to have his own and his servant's time taken up at the Quarter Sessions. Mr. Leigh, in committing the prisoner for trial, observed that he could make no distinctions in favour of trade, and that he wished he had the power of sending the prisoner for ten days, as it would be much better for the prisoner himself and the country that such trifling charges should be adjudicated upon summarily. The accused, a blacksmith by trade, said he was so drunk he did not know what he was about at the time.”

“Church Street, Bilston.

Notice of Sale of Important Freehold Public House Property. By Roderick and Son.

To be Sold by Auction (by direction of the Executors of the late Mr. George C. Peters), at the Acorn Hotel, Temple Street, Birmingham, on Thursday, July 6, 1865, at Six o'clock in the evening, subject to conditions to be then read. A highly-important, valuable, and improving Freehold Property in Church Street, Bilston; comprising the well-known ROSE AND CROWN Wine and Spirit Vaults, with commodious Dwelling House, and extensive Yards and Premises, capable of being used for Building, Brewing, and other purposes, commandingly situated in the most central and best business part of the town, and for the last twenty years occupied by Mr. Elijah Price, who is now the annual tenant thereof.

The prominent central position and extent of this Property render it safe and highly-improving as an investment, and the old-established and lucrative business attached adds still further and greatly to its value, if purchased with a view to occupation.

For plans and further particulars, apply to Messrs. Harrison and Wood, Solicitors, 25, Waterloo Street, or to the Auctioneers, 35, Cherry Street, all of Birmingham.”

“We deeply regret to announce the death, at the early age of twenty-one, of Miss Alice Price, the daughter of our townsman Mr. Elijah Price, of Swan Bank. After a comparatively short illness, during which she was most assiduously attended by ‘troops of friends,’ she quietly passed away on Tuesday afternoon, greatly to the grief and regret of many who knew her. Miss Price, by her energetic assistance in the work of St. Luke’s Sunday School, was familiar to all connected with that place of worship, and her speedy recovery was most earnestly wished for; and we feel sure all who knew her will regret that she has been thus early ‘called away’.....”

“At the Police Court, yesterday, Esther Ward (17), domestic servant, of 2 Court, Old Moxley, was charged with stealing a money-box containing 23s, a ring, and a brooch, the property of Stephen Allen Corbett, landlord of the WHITE ROSE INN, Swan Bank, Bilston.

On May 23 the prisoner was charged at Wednesbury with stealing boots, and ordered to come up for judgement when called upon. The police court missionary obtained a situation for her, but she only stayed two days, and refused to go to another situation he secured for her; and she then went to the WHITE ROSE INN. From this place she disappeared, and then the box was missed. The prisoner was afterwards apprehended at the Bilston Theatre. She was now sent to gaol for two months, with hard labour.”

Application for the removal of the license of the BULL AND MOUTH to the WHITE ROSE was granted on 8th February 1929.

It was confirmed at Stafford on 13th April 1929.

“County Licensing Committee.....

Mr. F. L. Steward, of Wolverhampton, applied on behalf of Charles James Webb for the removal of the full license of the BULL AND MOUTH, Bilston, to premises known as the WHITE ROSE INN, Bilston. He explained that the WHITE ROSE had a full license for six days only, whilst the BULL AND MOUTH held a seven day license. Both houses had come into the same ownership of combined companies, Messrs. Eley's (Stafford) Brewery Co. and Messrs. W. Butler & Co. Ltd. Many years ago a seven day license was attached to the WHITE ROSE, but the former owner voluntarily surrendered his right to sell on Sundays. The brewery company felt that if the application were granted, not only would the licenses of the district be reduced, but it would be a public convenience, because the WHITE ROSE was situated in the centre of the town, and in a very prominent position, and would be open on Sundays.

Replying to the Chairman, Mr. Steward said the BULL AND MOUTH was not so good structurally as the WHITE ROSE, which was nearly opposite the Town Hall, Bilston.

The committee confirmed the decision of the local justices, and granted the application.”

Charles James Webb died in the 3rd quarter of 1929.

“The OLDE WHITE ROSE, Bilston, is a 16th century building with extensive cellars. It was in the cellar system early one morning that landlord John Denston clearly witnessed an apparition. At the end of a long disused cellar was a drop which was convenient for lifting empty barrels up to ground level. Early one morning in 1998 John clearly saw a figure exit the drop and stand at the end of the cellar. He was wearing old fashioned and quite scruffy clothes. After standing stock still for a few moments staring at his upturned palms the swarthy and unkempt looking man disappeared into a side tunnel. By this time John realised it was an apparition he had seen as the side tunnel actually went nowhere. It was securely bricked up at the end.”

More than £650,000 will be ploughed into the venture which will feature en-suite bedrooms, each with a flat-screen TV. The development is the brainchild of John Denston, who has owned the CAMRA award-winning pub for the past 10 years and transformed it into one of the region’s finest for traditional ales.”

A former printing works to the rear of the pub was purchased and converted into a hotel facility which opened in August 2010.

The police opposed the renewal of the licenses attached to the NEW INN, Oxford Street, Bilston; the MALT SHOVEL INN, Oxford Street Bilston; the RED LION INN, Bilston, the FOUNTAIN INN, Parliament Street, Bilston; and the ORANGE TREE INN, Ettingshall. Infringement of the licensing laws were the grounds of the objection in each case, with the exception of the ORANGE TREE INN, the landlord of which had been sentenced to two months' imprisonment for assaulting his wife. The whole of the licenses were renewed with the exception of the FOUNTAIN INN, the consideration of which was to be held over until the adjourned licensing sessions.”

“Bilston Licensing Business.....

The license of the ORANGE TREE INN, Priestfield, was opposed on the ground of the structural part of the house being bad. The owners had tried to obtain a small plot of land adjoining it, but failed. The license was renewed and the magistrates stated that in the coming year the house and premises must be put in a clean condition, otherwise it might be serious for the owners.”

“The following inquisitions have been held before T. M. Phillips, Esq, Coroner.....

At the WATERLOO INN, at Bilston, on the body of John Blower the younger, a boy about fourteen years of age. It appeared that the deceased and two other boys were at work in a coal and ironstone pit in Baldwin’s colliery, Bilston, on the 11th of February last, when an explosion took place, by which he and they were very badly burned. There was, it seemed, a powder can near the spot, and by some means the powder unfortunately exploded. One of the boys, named Mullard, died in consequence of his wounds, and the other is now in Birmingham Hospital. The deceased was taken to his home and lingered until the 10th instant, when he died. He said he did not know how the powder got fired, unless one of the candles dropped into it, as the lid was off; he did not blame any one. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

Birmingham Journal 22/7/1848

“On Saturday an inquest was held before T. M. Phillips, Esq, at the WATERLOO INN, Bilston, on the body of Stephen Linney, about twenty years of age, a miner, who was at work on the previous morning in the hollows of a coalpit, at Bunkers Hill, where a large quantity of coal suddenly fell upon him and covered his body. He was taken out as soon as possible and conveyed to his lodgings in Bilston, where he was attended by Mr. Best, surgeon, but died about four o’clock in the afternoon. A verdict of Accidental Death was returned.”

Birmingham Journal 23/12/1848

“An inquest was held on Wednesday, at the house of Mr. John Fellows, sign of the WATERLOO, by T. M. Phillips, Esq, Coroner, on the body of a child named Elizabeth Lowe, three years of age, who was killed on Monday afternoon by a cart belonging to Mr. Richard Marsh, grocer, of Bilston, which ran over its head in Oxford Street, causing immediate death. A verdict of Accidental Death was returned. Mr. Marsh very kindly gave the mother of the child a sum of money towards burying it, as did also Mr. Phillips and several of the Jury. There was no blame to be attributed to Thomas Wellings, the young man who was with the cart when the accident occurred.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 21/11/1849

“Yesterday (Tuesday) T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, held an inquest at the WATERLOO INN, Bilston, on the body of Samuel Harper, thirty-four years of age, who met with his death on Saturday under the following circumstances. Harper and eleven other persons, including boys, were upon of the bank of a coalpit in Mr. Philip Williams’s field on the Willenhall Road, Bilston, for the purpose of descending the pit to work. The banksman pushed the waggon over the mouth of the pit, the engineer lowered the skip upon it, and the men and boys got in it, when the waggon, by some means, slipped back about half a yard, and the deceased and the others jumped off, but Harper slipped down and fell into the pit. It is supposed that the catch of the waggon gave way in consequence of some boys, who were running round the pit at the time, and treading upon the catch, causing it to spring up, and letting the waggon run back. No blame was attributed by the witnesses to the banksman. It appeared that the unfortunate deceased was brought up the pit shortly afterwards, when it was found that both his legs were broken, and that his skull was fractured. He was quite dead. The other persons, who were in the skip at the time, had a very narrow escape of their lives. Many of them were married men with families. The deceased was a married man. The jury gave a verdict of Accidental Death.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 26/12/1849

“An inquest was held on Friday last at the WATERLOO INN, Bilston, before W. W. Ward Esq, officiating for T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, on the body of a girl named Emma Davis, who died on Wednesday last, from the effects of having fallen into the reservoir at Hickmans Field. It appeared that she had been sent there with dinner for a man, and in returning, saw a piece of coal by the side of the reservoir, when she stooped to pick it up, and fell in. When rescued and taken home, she exclaimed, ‘O! Mother, I am scalded, the skin is all off me,’ she never left her bed afterwards, and died on the 19th instant. She was the daughter of Joseph Davis, labourer, Bilston. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 27/2/1850

“An adjourned inquest was held on Monday last at the WATERLOO INN, Bilston, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, on the body of Mary Quinton, ten months old, who had died rather suddenly at a lodging house in Old Meeting Street. It appeared that the child had first been taken to a druggist and subsequently to Mr. Hancox, surgeon, who gave the mother some medicine for the infant, under the impression that it was suffering from inflammation of the lungs. The child died at half-past four on the following morning. In the course of the day the father called on Mr. Hancox and asked for a certificate to take to the registrar. He gave him one, certifying that the child had died from inflammation of the lungs. The father then asked him to give another certificate to send to Liverpool that he might get some money from a burying society in which the child had been entered. Mr. Hancox then suspected that the child might not have died from natural causes and reported the case to the coroner, who subsequently directed a post mortem examination of the body to be made, and Mr. Hancox at the adjourned inquest deposed that on making the post mortem examination he found that the cause of death was inflammation of the lungs brought on by natural causes. The jury returned a verdict in accordance with the medical evidence.”

“An inquest was held on Saturday last, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, at the WATERLOO INN, Bilston, on the body of Thomas Nowland, 22 years of age, who had his leg broken on the previous day by the falling of a large quantity of clod in the workings of a stone pit in Mr. Frost’s field, and expired almost directly afterwards. It was stated by Thomas Lloyd, a collier, that there was plenty of timber in the pit for the purpose of propping, but the part from which the clod fell upon the deceased could not, from its situation, have been propped. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

On Wednesday, at the WATERLOO INN, on the body of Samuel Higginbottom, a miner, aged 26, who was killed by a fall of coal in Messrs. Gibbons’s field on the 6th ult. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

Staffordshire Advertiser 25/1/1851

“On Saturday last, T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, held an inquest at the WATERLOO TAVERN, Oxford Street, upon the body of Mary Machin, wife of a blacking manufacturer, living in Rowlings Square, Gozzard Street. The deceased it appeared died from the effects of arsenic which she had taken herself. No cause can be ascribed for the deceased committing suicide. The inquest was adjourned till yesterday, to allow of a post mortem examination being made.”

“Inquests held before T. M. Phillips, Esq, Coroner.....

The inquest on the body of Mary Mackin, who committed suicide by swallowing arsenic, was resumed, at the WATERLOO INN, Bilston, on Monday. P. H. Harper, Esq, surgeon, having made a post mortem examination, stated that he found a large quantity of arsenic in the stomach, which was the cause of death. There being no further evidence as to the motive for the commission of the rash act, the jury returned the following verdict. That the deceased died from the effects of poison administered by herself, but whether in a sound or unsound state of mind there was no evidence to show.

The same day, at the WATERLOO INN, Bilston, on the body of Robert Parry, aged 13, who met with his death under the following circumstances. It appeared that on the 27th November last the deceased, accompanied by two other lads, named Daniel Walters, aged 9, and John France, 13, stole a quantity of powder from a pit, belonging to a person named Sheppard, after which they went to the cinder floor at Messrs. Hickman’s furnaces, where they laid a train of the powder, which the lad France fired, and which, coming into contact with the deceased, ignited a quantity he had in his pocket, severely burning him. He lingered until Monday, when he died. Verdict, Accidental Death.

At the same time and place, on the body of George France, aged 36, a miner. It appeared from the evidence of John France, brother to the deceased, that they both worked together at a pit in Messrs. White and Lester’s field; about five o’clock on Friday evening they left work, and the deceased having arranged the water barrel for drawing water for the night, they both proceeded towards home. They had not gone far, when the deceased, without saying anything, turned back towards the pit; directly afterwards witness heard a scream, and on hastening to the spot he missed his brother. A skip was immediately lowered, and in about twenty minutes he was brought up quite dead. Witness was not aware that his brother had any reason for returning to the pit. The jury, after a lengthened inquiry, returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

“On Monday last an inquest was held at the WATERLOO INN, Bilston, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, on the body of Francis Seager, twenty-five years of age, a miner, who was killed on Friday morning, by the fall of about twenty tons of coal, whilst he was in the act of cutting out one of the coal props or pillars in the hollows of a pit at Broad Water Field, in the parish of Darlaston. Charles Kendrick, who was working with the deceased, was also killed upon the spot by the fall of the coal. It was stated at the inquest that there was plenty of timber in the workings for the purpose of propping. The inquiry was adjourned.”

[At the adjourned inquest no further evidence was adduced and the verdict was Accidental Death.]

Bilston District Illustrated Almanac and Advertiser for 1933

“The following story dates back to about the forties of the last century Jacky Fellows, the parish constable of the WATERLOO INN, in Oxford Street, Bilston.....”

Morning Advertiser 4/9/1851

“Yesterday a very deplorable occurrence took place at the steps of the Pier, at Hungerford Market. Mrs. Fellowes, the proprietor of the WATERLOO INN, at Bilston, Staffordshire, has been for a short time on a visit to the metropolis, for the purpose of seeing the Exhibition, and the other sights of London, and was staying at 23, Albany Street, Regents Park. Yesterday she was going down the steps of Hungerford Market, in order to take a short trip by a steam-boat, when she unfortunately slipped, and it was evident a very severe injury had been sustained. As the Charing Cross Hospital was near at hand, she was conveyed there, and seen by Mr. Dalton, the house-surgeon, who discovered that one arm was extensively fractured, and other mischief was perceptible. The fractured limb was soon successfully set, and, at her own request, she was sent home to her friends in Albany Street, where, however, the medical officers of the hospital kindly told her, she should be attended to by them until sufficiently recovered to return home. Mrs. Fellowes, it was said, is most respectably connected; but, while her friends will deeply regret the accident, they must be pleased at the kind attention she has received. She is going on most favourably.”

Staffordshire Advertiser 27/12/1851

“An inquest was held on Wednesday (by adjournment), at the house of Mr. John Fellowes, WATERLOO INN, Bilston, on view of the body of Peter Saunders, a miner, residing in Temple Street, who was killed on the 18th instant by a fall of coal while at work in a pit at Willingsworth colliery, the property of Sir Horace St. Paul. A verdict of Accidental Death was returned

At the same time and place an inquest was held on the body of Anthony Rowland, aged 16, who was killed in a pit at Mobs Bank colliery, on the 16th. A similar verdict was returned.”

James Hogan, 25, labourer, was indicted for killing and slaying John Fellowes, on the 26th December last, at Bilston. Mr. Corbett prosecuted; the prisoner was undefended by counsel.

The first witness called was Obadiah Bratt, who stated that he was a parish constable at Bilston, and knew the deceased, who, when alive, kept the WATERLOO INN in that place. On the evening of the 26th December, between eight and nine o'clock, in consequence of a disturbance having taken place in the house, he (witness) was sent for to assist in quelling it. The deceased, however, had succeeded in putting a stop to it before he arrived, but he was requested to turn the prisoner out of the house. Witness laid hold of him to do so, and at first he seemed disposed to go away quietly, but he almost immediately broke out into some very violent language against a female who was sitting in the room. Almost at the same moment the prisoner seized a jug from the table and threw it over witness's shoulder, in a contrary direction to where the woman was, and witness did not see whom it struck. On turning round, however, he saw the deceased standing up with his hand to his head, which was bleeding. The deceased was a parish constable as well as witness.

Joseph Ashforth, a shingler, deposed that he was present on the evening in question, and saw the prisoner throw the jug which struck Mr. Fellowes on the head.

Mr. W. M. Hancox, surgeon, Bilston, stated that he was sent for, after the occurrence, to attend the deceased. He found he had received a slight wound on the left side of the head; and at that time he did not in the least apprehend serious consequences from so trivial an injury. Two days afterwards, however, erysipelas supervened, from the effects of which the deceased died on the 14th January. The deceased was predisposed to erysipelas. He received every care and attention during his illness.

The prisoner, when called upon for his defence, said he did not throw the jug with the intention of hurting anybody, and that when Mr. Fellowes appeared against him before the Magistrates for the assault, he expressed his belief that he (the prisoner) did not throw it at him wilfully.

The learned Judge told the jury that it was an unlawful act on the part of the prisoner to throw a jug in the manner pointed out by the evidence, and whoever caused death by occasion of an unlawful act was legally guilty of manslaughter, although at the time the offender did not intend to commit an injury. Applying that rule to this case, if the jury were of opinion, upon the evidence adduced, that the prisoner threw the jug, that that missile inflicted a wound upon the deceased, who died from the effects of erysipelas produced by that wound, they must find the prisoner guilty. The jury accordingly found the prisoner guilty, but strongly recommended him to mercy. His Lordship sentenced him to three months' imprisonment with hard labour.”

“An inquest was held on Thursday last, at the WATERLOO INN, Bilston, on the body of John Laffey, collier, who was killed by a fall of coal in a coal-pit at Baldwins Field, near Bilston, on Wednesday. A collier named Ford deposed to having properly propped the roof immediately before it fell. About 13cwt of coal fell on the deceased, who was killed on the spot. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

“On Tuesday an adjourned inquest was held at the WATERLOO INN, Bilston, before W. H. Phillips, Esq, on the body of John Toole, a rag and bone collector, who, on Thursday morning week, about five o’clock, was found lying in the snow on the canal bridge, at Moxley, by some men who were proceeding to their work, in a state of insensibility. His shoes were missing, and his pockets turned inside out. He was carried to an adjoining hovel, and those who found him endeavoured to restore him by rubbing and other remedies. He was afterwards conveyed to his house, where he died the same night at six o’clock.

The inquest had been adjourned for the purpose of a post mortem examination being made, the result of which was the discovery of a violent wound on the left temple, apparently the result of a blow, which Mr. Hancox, surgeon, who made the examination, believed to be the cause of death.

It appeared that the deceased and Michael Dolan, a partner in the trade, had been the day before at Tipton, selling scrap iron, and that they had been drinking at almost every public house they passed. At night they called at a beerhouse at Gospel Oak, kept by John Moon. They had some ale there, and left about nine o’clock, in a state of intoxication. The bridge where the deceased was found was not far from Moon’s house. Dolan, on being asked what had become of Toole, said he did not know; they were both drunk, and he was unable to give any account of what occurred after they had left Moon’s house.

Moon was on the Tuesday following charged before Mr. Leigh, at the Petty Sessions, with allowing drunkenness in his house in the case of the deceased and Dolan, but as the charge rested entirely on the evidence of the latter, who limited himself almost entirely to saying that he and the deceased were very drunk, it was dismissed. A man who was in the house, and who was called for the defence, said the deceased and Dolan walked straight into the house, and did not appear to be much intoxicated. They had two pint jugs of ale between them. When those were emptied the deceased got up and went to call for another jug of ale, but as he did so he fell against the screen. The landlady then perceiving him to be tipsy refused to draw any more ale, and the two went away together. A number of witnesses were examined, but no evidence tending to show by what means the deceased met with his death was adduced.

At the resumed inquiry yesterday, Mr. Hancox, surgeon, added to his former evidence that he had reason to think the injury the deceased had sustained was caused by direct violence, and he did not think that such consequences could have been produced by a simple fall. Such a blow would have produced instant insensibility; and he did not think a man, after receiving such an injury, could have walked a distance of a mile.

The coroner very briefly directed the jury, who, after some consultation, returned a verdict to the effect that the deceased died from extravasation of blood upon the brain, produced by external injuries, but how such injuries were received did not appear to the jurors.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 28/1/1855

“On Friday last, at the house of Mr. Fellows, the WATERLOO INN, Bilston, T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, held an inquest on the body of John M’Cue, aged eighteen, a miner, who met with his death under the following circumstances. On the Wednesday deceased was on the bank of a coal pit, the property of S. H. Blackwell, Esq. Isaac Bennett and William Roberts were emptying water from a barrel which had just come up the pit, and just as the signal given to the engineer to ‘pull up’ deceased took hold of the barrel while it was swinging over the pit, and he was pulled into the pit, and fell to the bottom, a distance of about seventy-five yards. Bennet and Roberts immediately descended the pit, and found deceased in a dying state at the bottom. He was drawn up, and carried in a chair to his lodgings, where he expired immediately on his arrival. The jury returned a verdict in accordance with the evidence.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 13/2/1856

Wolverhampton Chronicle 20/8/1856

Wolverhampton Chronicle 7/4/1858

“On Monday last W. H. Phillips Esq, deputy coroner, opened an inquest at the WATERLOO INN, Bilston, on two men named Michael Conniff and Michael Kelly, who, with George Hudson, a fellow workman, had been killed in a pit at the Fiery Holes Colliery, belonging to Messrs. Fletcher, Rose and Co., on the previous Saturday, by a fall of coal adjourned.”

Staffordshire Advertiser 17/4/1858

“During the week the boy Lamb, who, with Michael Cuniff and Michael Kelly, was buried under a fall of coal in the pit of Messrs. Rose and Fletcher, near Bilston, but was extricated alive, has died of the injuries he then received. The inquest on the two men who were killed at the time having been adjourned on account of Mr. Brough, the Government Inspector, having expressed his doubts as to the pit being properly propped, was resumed before Mr. W. H. Phillips, deputy coroner, on Monday last.

The evidence of Mr. Brough, the result of an inspection of the place on the day after the accident and subsequently, was that he found the stall five yards wide. The fire-clay coal had been extracted and taken away. The bat or shale also had been brought down, and the new mine-holers were in course of removal. That left the ‘four foots’ hanging over the head, which ought to have been supported by timber on each side of the railroad. There was only one tree set up, and that a very ineffectual one in strength, whereas the stall demanded at least six trees instead of one for the protection of the loaders – that was to say, three trees ought to have been stuck up on each side of the railroad, and thus the men would have been saved.

Mr. Cope, the mine agent, deposed that he examined the pit two days before the accident, and saw nothing to indicate the necessity for further propping, and he said that the cause of the accident, the working of two seams at an angle, could not then be perceived.

Joseph Lunn, the doggy, and John Branaghan, a collier, who was at work close to the spot when the fall took place, gave evidence to the effect that the roof appeared to have been sufficiently propped before the accident occurred.

The coroner then put the case to the jury in brief terms, saying that he could not advise them to return any other verdict than that of Accidental Death, and after a lengthened deliberation the jury returned that verdict. A similar verdict has been returned in the case of Lamb and Hudson, killed by the same accident, the inquests on whom have been held before Mr. Hinchliffe, at Wednesbury.”

“John Guest was charged with having stolen two bagatelle balls, the property of Daniel Parsons, publican, of Bilston. The prisoner was the last customer in the room on Saturday night, and the gas was put out before he left. The balls were safe a few minutes before, and he was seen to put his hand towards the bagatelle board. Directly upon his leaving they were missed. The prisoner denied the charge, but was committed for trial.”

“At the Police Court on Friday last, an Irishman, named John Brennan, was charged with violently assaulting Mr. Daniel Parsons, of the WATERLOO INN, Bilston, on the 17th of December last. On the night in question the prisoner and a number of other Irishmen were creating a disturbance at the house of Mr. Parsons, and while Mr. Parsons was attempting to turn them out of doors, Brennan attacked him. He struck him on the forehead with a gutta percha life preserver, inflicting a dangerous wound, and by reason of which, Mr. Parsons was under medical treatment for some time after. Brennan absconded, but was apprehended at a house in Temple Street, on Sunday night. The magistrates considered the case too serious for them to deal with, and committed the prisoner for trial at the sessions.”

“At Bilston police court yesterday, two boys named William Bamford and Michael Killogan were charged with stealing a quantity of lead from the WATERLOO INN, Oxford Street, which is at present unoccupied. The lead was stripped off the roof at the back of the premises on Sunday night, and was found at the shop of Patrick O’Malley, a marine store dealer, in Temple Street. Bamford sold the lead on Monday, and when apprehended, said the other prisoner gave it him to sell, but as this was the only evidence against Killogan he was discharged. Bamford was fined 10s, or in default, a month’s imprisonment.

Bridget O’Malley, wife of the marine store dealer, who had purchased the lead, was then charged under the recent statute with having stolen metal in her possession, and for which she could not satisfactorily account.

The prisoner Bamford was put into the box, and swore that he went to the female defendant and asked her whether she would buy some old lead. She asked him where it was from, and he said from some old building. He then fetched it, and she bought it. She was fined 10s and costs, and an order was made for her husband to register his house, which involves keeping an account of all metals bought, and liability to constant inspection by the police. The defendant said she could not keep books, as she could not write, and the magistrates said in that case she must get some one who could.”

“Martin Doyle, man of all work at the house of Mr. Guest, the WATERLOO INN, Bilston, was charged with robbing Aaron Tompowski of a watch and two sovereigns. On Wednesday the prosecutor put up at the above house, and before he went to bed he secured the door of the room in which he slept, but when he got up the next morning, though he found the door still secured on the inside, yet some one had entered during the night and carried off his watch and the amount in question. On examination he found in a partition that divided the once larger room into two, a door, which formed an inlet and outlet to his room. The chief evidence connecting the prisoner with the robbery was the finding the candlestick Tompowski took upstairs to his room in that of the prisoner. He endeavoured to explain this by saying he saw it alight in Tompowski’s room, and took it out to prevent fire. He was committed for trial.”

“At Bilston Police Court, on Tuesday, a man named Martin Toole was charged with having stolen a silver watch and two sovereigns, belonging to a Jew named Aaron Tombusco. It appeared that on the previous Wednesday night, Mr. Tombusco took up his lodging at the WATERLOO INN, kept by Mr. Joseph Guest, in Bilston, where the prisoner was that time employed as a general kind of waiter. When prosecutor retired to bed he took the precaution of locking his room door, but when he arose on the following morning he found that some person had by some means got into his room and stolen the above property out of his pocket. Suspicion fell upon the prisoner, and although neither the money nor the watch could be found, the suspicion was strengthened by the fact that the prosecutor’s candlestick was found in his bedroom. The Bench committed him for trial.”

Mr. Staveley Hill conducted the case for the prosecution. Mr. Brindley defended the prisoner Holmes, and Mr. Young defended the prisoner Doughton. The other prisoner was undefended.

It appeared that the prosecutor and the prisoner were drinking together on the day in question at the WATERLOO public house, Bilston, that they left there and went to the BULLS HEAD in Wolverhampton Road, and that after the prosecutor leaving there, the prisoners followed and committed the offence with which they were now charged. The evidence was very conflicting, and therefore the jury returned a verdict of not guilty.”

Midland Examiner 6/2/1875

"In the Divorce Court, on Wednesday, the Staffordshire case of Mack v Mack came before Sir James Hannen. It was a petition presented by the wife for dissolution of her marriage on the ground of adultery and cruelty of the respondent, John Mack, the proprietor of the WATERLOO INN, at Bilston. The respondent denied the adultery. Dr. Dean, QC, and Mr. Underhill appeared for the petitioner; Mr. G. Brown appeared for the respondent.

At the date of their marriage, which was solemnised in June 1872, the petitioner was a widow with two children; the respondent a widower, also with two children. After the marriage they took a tavern at Bilston, in the county of Stafford, and lived together on indifferent terms until June 1874, when the petitioner, who had condoned numerous acts of violence which she had suffered at the hands of the respondent, who had been a police-constable, finally separated from him on discovering that he had also been guilty of adultery. The respondent denied both charges, but on the close of the petitioner's case, his counsel virtually admitted that he could not maintain the denial in the face of the body of evidence adduced in support of the petition.

The Court held that both charges had been fully established, and pronounced a decree nisi, with costs."

Midland Examiner 13/11/1875

"For being disorderly while in the WATERLOO INN, Oxford Street, Bilston, Michael Smith and John Toole were fined, the former 20s, and the latter 10s and costs."

Wolverhampton Express and Star 28/3/1876

"John Toole (22) was brought up on a charge of stealing 20s in silver from the house of John Mack, WATERLOO INN, Oxford Street, Bilston, on Saturday last. Prosecutor stated that whilst in the house on Saturday he heard a noise in the bar, and on going there he saw the prisoner leaving. He seized him, and found that he had got a sovereign's worth of silver in his hand. He afterwards handed him over to the police.

The prisoner who is an old offender, was committed to the Sessions."

AND

"Staffordshire Easter Sessions.....

John Toole, 22, labourer, was indicted for stealing £1, the money of John Mack, at Bilston.

The prosecutor is a licensed victualler at Bilston. On the 25th of March, about half-past eleven in the evening, his attention was attracted by a noise proceeding from a room in which he had deposited his cash-box, containing about £5. He immediately went to the room. No person was there, but he found that a packet containing a pound in silver had been removed from the box, and on searching the premises he discovered the prisoner concealed in the passage, with the packet of money in his possession. He compelled the prisoner to deliver up the money, which he did very reluctantly, at the same time remarking, as if to palliate his offence, that he might have taken all the cash in the box if he had felt disposed.

The jury returned a verdict of guilty.

It appeared that though the prisoner had not been previously convicted of felony he was a man of violent and worthless character.. He was sent to gaol for eight months."

"The Adjourned Licensing Sessions.....

Attention was then directed to the complaints made by Chief-superintendent McCrea at the annual licensing sessions respecting the performance of music at certain public houses in Bilston on each week day evening.....

Mr. Loveridge remarked that the chief cause of complaint was the fact of music being played in the public houses every night during the week except Sunday, and he and his brother magistrates had received a letter from the Board of Commissioners on the same subject.....

With reference to music playing at the WATERLOO INN, Oxford Street, Bilston, kept by John Tranter, Mr. Willcock said that Mr. Anderson, the owner of the house, had taken the matter into consideration, and had arranged to have the music played in the assembly room at the rear of the house License renewed."

“A painfully sudden death occurred at Bilston on Tuesday morning, Mrs. Ann Sowrey (44), wife of the manager of the WATERLOO MUSIC HALL, Oxford Street, having been found dead in bed. It appears that beyond a little failing health, Mrs. Sowrey retired to rest in her usual health on Monday night, and her husband on coming down on Tuesday morning, left her apparently sleeping. As she did not rise at her usual hour, Mr. Sowrey instructed the servant to call her mistress. She was about to do so, when Mr. Sowrey went upstairs, and was distressed to find his wife dead in bed as stated. Death is stated to have resulted from heart disease, to which she had been subject for three years.”

“Bankruptcy Proceedings.....

At the Wolverhampton County Court, yesterday, Joseph Holberry, manager of the WATERLOO INN, Brook Street, Bilston, came up before Mr. Registrar Sanders for his examination. The debtor's statement of affairs showed his liabilities to be £278, and his assets nil. He was formerly a journeyman toolmaker, but in September 1882, went into business on his own account at the BROWN LION INN, Birmingham Street, Oldbury. This business he carried on until May, 1885, when he found that owing to bad debts, bad trade, and other circumstances he could not make it pay. Since then he had been waiting for an improvement in trade, when he hoped to pay off his debts. The debtor was allowed to pass his examination.”

"A three nights entertainment, consisting of comical ventriloquism, conjuring, &c, is being given at the WATERLOO CONCERT HALL, Bilston, by Nimrod, the well-known ventriloquist, assisted by several celebrated artistes. The entertainment is one which should be well patronised by the working men of the town."

"An application was made for the transfer of the license of the WATERLOO INN, Oxford Street, Bilston, from Richard Hall to John Beebee.

In reply to Chief-superintendent Longden, Beebee said that he was not the actual tenant, but was a manager to Chesters Brewery Company, at a salary of 25s a week.

Mr. Longden said that they had been selling at the inn for the last twelve months without a license, in the name of Hall, and had been convicted for it. He objected to the transfer, because very likely tomorrow they would take out

Mr. Beebee, and intoxicants would be sold in his name while he was living perhaps at Wolverhampton or Manchester.

Mr. S. Tovey, JP, agent for Chesters Brewery Company, said that Beebee was in the house under the same terms as the other managers and under a month's notice. Besides his salary he had commission.

The application was refused, and Mr. Tovey expressed his intention of appealing against the decision."

Wolverhampton Express and Star 18/4/1889

"At Bilston Court today, Mr. C. A. Loxton, of Walsall, applied for a temporary authority for John Beebee to sell at the WATERLOO INN. He said that the case had been before the Bench on several occasions, and objections had been raised each time. The last objection was that Beebee was only a manager, and not a tenant. They were quite ready that Beebee should be a tenant. Chief-superintendent Longden then said that if were the case he would have no objection. If the proceedings had been regular there would have been no objection to the application. The application was granted."

Alfred John Pardoe was convicted on 11th March 1902 for two cases of permitting drunkenness.

“At the Bilston Police Court on Tuesday, Alfred J. Pardoe, landlord of the OXFORD INN, Bilston, was summoned for permitting drunkenness on his licensed premises. Mr. A. Turton prosecuted on behalf of the police, and Mr. R. A. Willcock defended. It appeared that a woman named Hall found her husband drinking in the house, and mentioned the circumstances to the police, who visited the place and found three men the worse for drink. A fine of £10 and the costs, £13 6s 6d in all, was imposed. For a like offence committed on the following day a fine of £1 and the costs was imposed. Fines were inflicted on two women found drunk on the premises. Hall and another man, it was stated, had absconded.”

“An extraordinary tale of domestic infidelity was unfolded at the Tipton Police Court today, the defendant being John Thomas [Wilson], who was summoned by his wife for a maintenance order. The parties were married at Handsworth, and had three children. Defendant was now the licensee of the HORSELEY TAVERN, Tipton, but formerly was landlord of the OXFORD INN, Bilston. Whilst at Bilston he became acquainted with Rose Waldron, licensee of the DOG AND PARTRIDGE INN, Bilston. Subsequently he told his wife that he loved Waldron, and should have nothing more to do with her, adding that he wished she was a corpse. The wife stated that in consequence of his intimacy with the woman she went to reside with a nephew, and her husband took Rose Waldron to the HORSELEY TAVERN, where, it was alleged, she still lived with him. Defendant had sent sums of money to his wife amounting to £7. Defendant was ordered to contribute 30s weekly, his wife being allowed the custody of the children.”

Mr. Bowen applied for a license for Mr. T. Johnson, of the PARKFIELD TAVERN, Parkfield, which was refused, one ground of refusal being that the applicant was a butty collier, and that it was most mischievous for persons in his position to keep public houses.”

AND

“The annual meeting of Magistrates for the purpose of the renewal and granting of licenses for the township of Bilston and the neighbourhood was held at the Bilston Police Court on Friday last.....

Application was made by Mr. Bowen for a license to the PARKFIELD TAVERN, kept by Mr. Thomas Johnson. It was stated that the applicant was a butty in the employ of the Parkfield Colliery, from whom he had received a very excellent testimonial. The Bench refused the application upon two grounds, first that it was not advisable to entrust victualling licenses to persons holding situations as butty colliers, and next because the locality was not at present sufficiently populated to necessitate another licensed house.”

Woolley v Johnson. This was an action for false imprisonment. Mr. S. A. Hill, QC, MP, and Mr. Macnamara were for the plaintiff, and Mr. Powell, QC, and Mr. Underhill for the defendant.

The plaintiff is a chemists and druggists assistant, living near Bilston, and on the 25th August last he visited the PARK FIELD TAVERN, Bilston, which is kept by the defendant, and called for a glass of ale. He tendered a sixpence in payment, the only money he had with the exception of a halfpenny, and defendant’s daughter gave him what she believed to be fourpence in change. Shortly afterwards the defendant’s daughter missed a half-crown from the till, near to which the plaintiff was, and she called to the servant, and was about to question her concerning it, when it was recognised in the plaintiff’s hand, and, simultaneously with it being seen, it was stated the plaintiff called out not to blame the girl, that it was Miss Johnson’s own mistake. Plaintiff, however, was retained till a policeman was sent for, and he was given into custody on a charge of stealing it. He was taken to the police station, and was, after being detained a short time, admitted to bail. He was afterwards brought up before Mr. Spooner at the Bilston Petty Sessions, and was discharged.

For the plaintiff it was contended that he had received the half-crown in change, and that he did not know he had received it until he pulled it out of his pocket, and that before he had time to return it he was taken into custody. For the false imprisonment the plaintiff now claimed compensation.

It was pleaded on behalf of the defendant that he had reasonable grounds for giving the plaintiff into custody. The jury found a verdict for the defendant.”

“Staffordshire Adjourned Quarter Sessions.....

Edward McHale (37), locksmith, was indicted for stealing, on February 8th, a clock, value 30s, belonging to Isaac Johnson, of the PARKFIELD TAVERN, Parkfield Road, Sedgley. Mr. Harvey appeared for the prosecution.

Prisoner and a companion visited prosecutor's public house, and were served with liquor by Mrs. Johnson. Shortly afterwards she missed a clock, which had hung in the kitchen, and, on inquiring about it, the two men ran out and up the lane, with Mrs. Johnson in pursuit, prisoner being caught by a young man named Powis, the other runaway escaping. The clock was found on the kitchen screen.

Prisoner now denied having touched the article, and he was found not guilty and discharged.

The Chairman pointed out that the prisoner had been in trouble eight times before.”

Isaac Johnson died on 4th December 1889.

“Fatal Colliery Accident in Wolverhampton.

Isaac Johnson (49), chartermaster and landlord of the PARKFIELD TAVERN, Parkfield Road, was killed on Wednesday morning in his own pit. He had gone into the workings between ten and eleven o'clock to see that all was right, when a large quantity of coal, perhaps a ton's weight, fell upon him from the roof, and injured him so severely that he died in about a quarter of an hour before medical aid could be obtained. The pit is situated at the back of the ASH TREE INN, Dudley Road. The body of the deceased was removed home. He leaves a widow and six children.

Deceased was very well known in this district. As a young man he was a very clever pugilist, but did not pursue it very much, in deference to his parents wishes. At one time he was in partnership with his brother-in-law in the Sedgley Park, but they afterwards dissolved partnership, deceased taking the Cockshead pit, where he employed about a dozen men. His father was a chartermaster before him.”

“Mr. E. B. Thorneycroft, deputy coroner, held an inquiry today (Saturday), at the PARKFIELD TAVERN, Parkfield Road, Sedgley, relative to the death of the landlord of the house, Isaac Johnson (49), who was also the owner of the Dudley Road Colliery. The deceased, it will be remembered, was killed in his own pit on Wednesday last by a fall of coal. Mr. W. B. Scott, Government Inspector of Mines for the district, was present.

The coroner before proceeding asked whether any of the jury had any personal interest in the colliery at which the deceased was killed. Police-constable Clarke, who had summoned the jury, replied that most of the jurors had been employed by the deceased at his colliery; and Mr. Scott stated that the whole of the pit's company were included. He further pointed out that no person working at a colliery at which a fatal accident had occurred was qualified to serve on the jury inquiring into the matter. The coroner said he could not take the present jury, and another one must be summoned. Police-constable Clarke replied that he had been all morning in getting the requisite number of jurymen, and he would be obliged to get any new ones from the borough, the PARKFIELD TAVERN being a few yards over the borough boundary. At length, with the assistance of Police-constable Parsons, of the borough force, a new jury was obtained, and the inquiry proceeded.

Joseph Walters, miner, deposed that on Wednesday morning he was working in the Dudley Road Pit, with the deceased. At about eleven o'clock a fall of coal occurred, about a ton of the mineral descending from the roof upon the deceased and killing him instantly. On examining the coal afterwards witness noticed a 'fault,' which had not previously been perceptible. Emanuel Dainty supported this statement.

The coroner remarked that the evidence showed that no blame could be attached to anyone, as it was the deceased's duty to have fixed timbers if necessary, and to have taken whatever precautions were required. A verdict of Accidental Death was returned.”

“Mr. T. A. Stokes (county coroner) held an inquest at the GREEN DRAGON, Upper Gornal, on Monday evening, on the death of Thomas Smith (33), no fixed abode, formerly a blacksmith employed at Wolverhampton, whose lifeless body was found in a ditch in a field. The evidence showed that Smith had been recently employed in doing odd jobs at the PARKFIELD TAVERN. Last Friday he visited some friends at Upper Gornal, and complained that he had lost his situation. He was provided with food, and subsequently he stated that he was going to Bilston, intimating that he should go a near way to Woodsetton across some fields. A woman named Martha Jeavons urged him to go by the main road, but he did not follow her advice. He left the house at about 8pm to go across the fields. At about nine o’clock the following morning his body was found in a ditch in a field about forty yards from the footpath. There was a depth of water in the ditch of about four inches, and the man’s legs and body were embedded in the mud to the extent of 3ft. The head was quite free of either the mud or water. There was a severe frost during the night in question.

The jury returned a verdict of Death from Exposure, the result of Misadventure.”

"The adjourned Licensing Sessions for the Bilston Division were held yesterday, before a full Bench of Justices, Mr. E. Hickman presided....

Considerable opposition was offered to the provisional application for a license to new premises it was proposed on land in Parkfield Road. Mr. Skidmore made the application. Mr. Turton opposed on behalf of the owner and tenant of the RED LION, Parkfield Road, and Mr. J. F. Bourke (instructed by Messrs. Landon and Barrows) on behalf of the owner and licensee of the PARKFIELD TAVERN. The application was opposed by the Rev. W. E. Richardson, Primitive Methodist Church, Parkfield Road; the Vicar of Ettingshall (Rev. W. H. R. Gipps); Mrs. Hodgetts on behalf of herself and neighbours; Mr. Geo. Watkins, on behalf of the Vicar of Blakenhall; Mr. Staghouse, on behalf of the trustees of the Primitive Methodist Church, Parkfield; and Mr. Joseph Hatley, on behalf of the residents and trustees of Parkfield Primitive Methodist Church.

Mr. Skidmore, in his remarks to the justices, said the proposal was to remove the GIFFORD ARMS, Codsall Wood, which was a rural district and already well served, to a proposed site in Parkfield Road. The site to which it was proposed to transfer the license was a different proposition. The site was directly opposite the new estate which was being developed by the Wolverhampton Corporation and a large number of houses had been run up there. The new road to Birmingham would run within a very few yards of the site. He knew it was unusual to ask for the removal of a license in one district to another, and the justices might say that Codsall would lose one license and this district get one more. If the justices granted the removal of the license of the GIFFORD ARMS, the applicant was prepared to give up the license of the ROYAL EXCHANGE, Queen Street, Bilston, an 'on' beer license. So at any rate they would get rid of one license in the county for nothing. They would get a license transferred from a place where it was not particularly required, to a site where it would be of great public convenience, and he ventured to suggest that the justices should not take too narrow a view. Mr. Skidmore added he should produce plans by which it would be seen that the house it was proposed to erect upon the site was most modern and up-to-date in every way.

Mr. Tomlins, Wolverhampton, explained the plans and spoke of the increase in dwellings which would take place by a housing scheme which was being pressed forward.

Mr. F. B. Housiaux, the owner of the estate upon which it was proposed to build the new premises, said he was a general dealer and he approached Mr. Myatt with a scheme suggesting it would make a good site for a licensed house, and agreed to sell it to him.

Mr. Bourke, in his opposition to the application, emphasised the fact that the justices were asked to remove a license which was outside, into their district. Much had been said on housing and the new road, but under the present conditions he urged that the district was well supplied with licensed houses.

Mr. Turton expressed the opinion that the present was not a suitable time to grant such an application.

The Rev. W. E. Hutchinson, speaking on behalf of the petitioners against the granting of a license, said one point was that there were sufficient licensed houses in the neighbourhood to meet requirements. They felt the future should take care of itself and they asked the justices to wait and see what may be the conditions in the future. Within half a mile of the proposed site were seven places where refreshments could be obtained. Nearly seventy-five per cent of the people living in the new houses had signed a petition against it.

The Justices retired, and after a brief absence, the chairman announced that they had given careful attention to the application, and the petition against it, and were unanimous in declining it."

“John Woodham and Thomas Jones were charged with stealing two half-crowns, two shillings, and three handkerchiefs from the person of John Toy.

The prosecutor stated that he was a boatman, and lived at Parkfields. Last Monday he was in company with the prisoners for some hours, at the PEACOCK beer shop, in Sedgley parish. About six o'clock he fell asleep, and was awoke by the prisoner Woodham attempting to get his hand out of his (witness's) pocket. Witness said to him, 'Don't take my money, Jack; call for a quart of ale, and I'll pay for it.' Witness got up and missed his money, namely two half-crowns, two shillings, and three pence halfpenny. He asked Woodham for it, and he said he had not got it. Witness then saw Jones with one of his handkerchiefs, and then discovered that he had lost three handkerchiefs, namely a cotton one and two silk ones. Jones admitted having one of his (prosecutor's) handkerchiefs. Corroborative evidence was given by Samuel Cartwright, Mary Smart, and Fenn, the constable, and the prisoners, who said nothing in reply to the charge, were committed.”

“Ann Cooper, a banks-girl, was charged with embezzling 15s 9d, the moneys of George Cosley, a butty at the Parkfield Colliery. Cosley stated that he was in the habit of giving the girl a sum of money every two or three days to pay for the pit beer, which she used to fetch from Mr. Taylor’s, the PEACOCK beerhouse, at Catchems Corner. Last Tuesday Mr. Taylor sent in a bill for 15s 9d, all of which the prosecutor had previously given to the prisoner to pay off the ale scores. Joseph Taylor proved the supply of ale to the amount of 15s 9d for which he had not been paid. The quantity of beer amounted to 158 quarts, at 1d per quart, and eight quarts of ale. The prisoner pleaded guilty, but in extenuation said that Taylor had agreed to take the money fortnightly instead of day by day. She was committed to Stafford for one month, with hard labour.”

"All Bilston district was horrified on Sunday evening when it became rumoured that a woman had been murdered in Broad Street, Bilston, in the early part of the afternoon. The news, unfortunately, afterwards received what appeared to be convincing affirmation. In a small, unattractive licensed house, there had lived, for the past six years a man named Pountney, manager, aged 50; his wife Alice Gertrude Pountney, aged 47; their only son, John Henry Pountney, aged about 20 years, and one or two other persons. Previous to going to Broad Street, Mr. and Mrs. Pountney lived at the RAILWAY INN, Wallbrook, Coseley, where both of them were well known. Pountney at one time also worked as a blacksmith at Bradley. More recently, in addition to having the management of the PHEASANT INN, he had been employed as a labourer at the Tarmac Works, Ettingshall.

The actual facts of the terrible affair could not be disclosed until the inquest has been completed, or full magisterial proceedings had been taken, but from communications made to the police, and statements made by people who saw most of what transpired at the time of the alleged crime, a dispute of some description arose between Pountney and his wife at mid-day on Sunday, but nothing unusual was observed by the few customers present until shortly before two o'clock, the time for closing. Mrs. Pountney was then in the back kitchen, peeling potatoes for dinner. With her was her only son, John Henry Pountney. As a customer, named Joseph Henry Norton, of 5, Sankey Street, Bilston, was about to leave the house, the others in the kitchen were joined by Elijah Pountney himself, Norton called and asked the latter what time he proposed closing, but he made not reply. It was stated that Mrs. Pountney herself then called out 'Come here, Joe,' and when Norton got to the kitchen, she said, 'He (her husband) has accused me that I am going to have a baby.' She added, 'If he don't know, who should know. That's why he has been so sulky with me for a long while.' Norton asserted that the woman had a knife in her hand with which she had been peeling potatoes, and that she said, 'If it wasn't for this lad (meaning her son), I'd' but the sentence remained unfinished.

Pountney turned away, and walked a few yards, but turning about, so it is alleged, he put his arm around his wife's shoulders in a caressing manner (as Norton thought), and said, 'Come here,' exactly as though he was about to kiss her. Norton, however, alleges that he had then perceived a razor in Pountney's other hand, and although he sprang forward and tried to seize it, he was not quick enough to prevent Pountney from drawing the blade across his wife's throat.

It was afterwards noticed that the arteries and the windpipe had been severed, and a stream of blood gushed from the wound. Norton saw the woman stumble for several yards into a verandah and then fall to the ground. He rushed off to the nearest surgery, and on the way he saw PCs Piddock and Maw at the corner of Broad Street and Church Street. He quickly related what had occurred and the police officers went to the house, Dr. Matthews following within a few minutes. The woman however was then dead, the police finding her lying face downwards on the verandah floor in a pool of blood.

Maw was at once dispatched to the police station, and Superintendent Higgs and Sergeants Cartwright and Daniels joined Piddock at the PHEASANT. It was ascertained that Pountney had left the house immediately after the tragedy, and had been seen to go in the direction of Bradley. The police therefore took up pursuit.

At Bankfield, midway between Bilston and Bradley, they learned that a lad named William Doughty, of 5 court, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, had been proceeding along the road with friends named Jesse and Leonard Hamblett, and that on arriving at the canal bridge the former's attention was called to a bottle floating on the water. He went to the parapet intending to throw at it when he perceived a man in the water apparently wedged between two boats alongside Mr. J. Toole's coal wharf. He was then up to the armpits in water. The boys called the attention of two youths to the man's position, and together they succeeded in getting him out.

Doughty stated that Pountney – for it was he – wanted them to leave him on the wharf, but they led him on to the road. They asked where he lived, but he is stated to have replied, 'I don't know; but I can find my way.'

He walked a few yards, and the youths then saw him go down the other side of the bridge, but before he reached the water he collapsed, apparently from exhaustion.

The police arrived almost immediately, and PCs Piddock and Royce resorted to artificial respiration, which they afterwards carried on under the superintendence of Drs. Waddell and Acheson, who had been summoned. At length the man showed signs of consciousness, and a motor belonging to Mr. F. W. Collins, which was passing, was requisitioned to convey him to the police station. Upon arrival there was found necessity to continue artificial respiration for a period.

Some time later he was formally charged by PS Cartwright with causing the death of his wife, and acting on medical advice, the man was afterwards removed to the infirmary at New Cross, Wednesfield, to be kept under observation until brought before the magistrate.

There were two other persons living at the PHEASANT INN, in addition to Pountney and his wife and son. These included a man who was stated to have been in bed at the time and a brother of the woman – Arthur Cornelius Reynolds. In a statement made by the latter he asserted that soon after he got up he heard his sister to say to her husband, 'You are opening your mouth too wide.' He did not hear anything else until the son called him, and he saw the latter with his mother in his arms and blood streaming profusely from her throat. Reynolds also alleged that he heard Pountney, when in drink, make use of threats concerning himself and his wife.

It was expected that the husband would be brought up at Bilston Police Court on Tuesday morning and charged with the wilful murder of his wife, but Supt. Higgs stated that he had an intimation that owing to his physical condition it had been deemed advisable to detain him in the infirmary a little longer.

The inquest on the deceased was formally opened by Mr. J. T. Higgs at Bilston Police Court, on Tuesday afternoon, Mr. Hewitt being foreman of the jury.

The coroner said he did not intend to proceed with the inquiry that afternoon, but to take evidence of identification only, and then adjourn the enquiry till Friday, to enable the husband to be present.

John Henry Pountney, framemaker, only son of deceased, said he saw his mother alive and well on Sunday morning, and saw her dead a little after two o'clock. She was 47 years of age.

The inquest was then adjourned.

Continuing his evidence at the adjourned inquest last evening, John Edward Pountney said that at 1.40pm on the 16th inst, he was in the back kitchen of the house. Deceased was there paring potatoes for dinner. His father came in and said something to his mother, but witness could not hear what it was. His mother said, 'What? In front of my son?' and he said, 'Yes; in front of him.' His father then left the kitchen and went to another part of the house. About 1.55 his father returned to the back kitchen. Joseph Norton followed him in. His father then pushed his (witness's) mother towards Norton, and said, 'Kiss her Joe; it might be the last time.' Norton replied, 'If that's it, I'm going home.' His father then said, 'Don't take offence, I don't mean anything,' and walked toward the door, but he soon came back, and sat on a chair. A few moments afterwards he got up, put his arms round his wife's neck, as if he were going to kiss her, and witness heard Norton say, 'Oh!' and he then noticed blood flowing from his mother's neck. Witness caught hold of her, and walked with her to the verandah. She then fell down, and he saw a terrible wound in her throat. He saw his father standing in the passage, wiping his hands on a piece of newspaper which he threw down. He then said to witness, 'Do you want any money, or do you want the bank book?' His father then left the house by the front door. Witness handed the newspaper to PC Piddock. His mother died in a few seconds.

Joseph Henry Norton said he was a bedstead caster, and lived at 5, Sankey Street, Bilston. He went to the PHEASANT INN about 12.25, and sat down in the kitchen, where Pountney was sitting. Pountney served him with a drink. Witness remained there till about half-past one and then went into the back yard. Mrs. Pountney was in and out of the kitchen all the time. Witness returned to the same room and had another drink, remaining there till about three minutes to two. Then he got up to leave, and at the door, he said to Elijah Pountney, 'Elijah, what time are you shutting up?' Pountney was then in the big kitchen with his wife and son. Pountney and his wife were arguing about something, but what it was he could not say, as he was 'hard-hearing.' Pountney did not answer witnesses question, but Mrs. Pountney called, 'Come here Joe.' Witness then went toward her, and put his hand on her shoulder, and she said, 'He has accused me that I am going to have a baby. If he didn't know, why should I know? That's why he has been sulky with me a long time.' She was paring potatoes at the time. With the knife in her hand, she pointed to Pountney and said, 'If it wasn't for the lad I would.' She did not say what. Pountney moved a bit away, and the turned back and caught hold of her round the neck with one hand, and said, 'Come here,' as though to kiss her. Witness then saw a razor in his other hand, and jumped up to grab hold of it, but he had drawn it across her throat. She did not speak after he had done that. When she was talking to witness she was speaking close to his ear, because of his deafness. Pountney and the son could hear every word she was saying. She staggered out to the verandah, her son having held her all the time. Then she fell down, slipping from the arms of her son. Witness went for a doctor, but his opinion was that Mrs. Pountney was dead before witness had left the house. The blood was gushing from her throat. Witness and Mrs. Pountney as children were brought up together. It was why he used to go there. They were friends and nothing more. That was the only suggestion he could offer why she called to tell him of her trouble.

Edmund McCann, bricklayer, who had his lodging at the PHEASANT INN for about six months, said that about November last Pountney and his wife were quarrelling. He heard Pountney say, 'I shall do you in, before the night is out.' Witness did not know the cause of the quarrel. On many occasions since he had heard them quarrelling. On the Saturday night previous to the tragedy witness went to sleep in the kitchen and did not go to bed with the other residents. He could not say what time he went to bed. He did not get up on Sunday until he was called, after the tragedy. Replying to further questions by the Coroner, witness said he had rarely ever seen Pountney sober, and he was under the influence of drink on Sunday morning.

The other witnesses, recalled, also spoke of Pountney's intemperate habits, but said that on Sunday morning he was well able to serve customers, although he had had drink.

PS George Cartwright said that at 2pm on the 16th inst, he went to Bradley in search Elijah Pountney. Arriving at the canal bridge, he saw him there, and assisted in the artificial respiration. Pountney was afterwards removed to Bilston Police Station and Dr. Waddell examined him. Witness afterwards accompanied the doctor to the PHEASANT INN, and was present when he made an external examination of deceased. Later the same day witness charged Pountney with murdering his wife, by cutting her throat with a razor. He cautioned Pountney and he replied, 'It's correct, I have had cause for it.' Owing to his physical condition Pountney was removed to the New Cross Infirmary, and witness went with him.

Dr. Charles Hope Waddell said that at the PHEASANT INN he examined the body of Mrs. Pountney. He found an incised wound four inches long, extending right across the front of the neck. All structures lying in front of the vertebral column, including the trachea, were severed. In his opinion death would take place in a few moments from haemorrhage and shock. On the 17th inst, he made a post-mortem examination, in order to ascertain if there was any foundation for the statement that she was pregnant, and the result was that he found she was not.

Pountney was found guilty of wilful murder.

Pountney was brought before Messrs. B. Adams and J. A. Jordan yesterday morning, charged with the wilful murder of his wife. Prisoner, whose appearance would suggest that he is one of the most harmless men alive, was perfectly composed, and on being asked if would have any objection to remand he said he had not, as 'it would have to be gone into later on.'

PS Cartwright said that at Bilston Police Station he charged prisoner with the murder of his wife, and he replied, 'Quite correct I had cause for it.'

On the application of Superintendent Higgs prisoner was then remanded for a week.

Mr. T. R. J. Tildesley, representing the owners of the PHEASANT INN, asked for the license to be temporarily transferred to Mr. Edward Pountney (son of prisoner). He said arrangements had been made for him to carry on the business, and he would have the assistance of an uncle who had been living at the house. The application was granted.

The funeral of the deceased woman took place Coseley early yesterday afternoon and a large crowd assembled to witness the interment."

"At Bilston Police Court, yesterday, before Messrs. J. A. Jordan and G. H. Sankey, Elijah Pountney, 48, formerly licensee of the PHEASANT INN, Broad Street, Bilston was brought up on remand, charged with the wilful murder of his wife, Alice Gertrude Pountney.

Mr. Paling represented the Director of Public Prosecutions, and Mr. J. A. Sharpe represented the prisoner, who seemed to have recovered from his immersion in the canal, and was perfectly composed in appearance.

Mr. Paling said he did not propose to make an opening statement but would at once call evidence.

John Edward Pountney, son of prisoner, said that about 1.10pm, on the 16th inst, he was in the back kitchen of the house. Deceased was there preparing potatoes for dinner. His father came in and said something to his mother, but witness could not hear what it was. His mother said, 'What? In front of my son?' and he said, 'Yes in front of him.' His mother then left the kitchen and went into another part of the house. About 1.55 his father entered the back kitchen, Joseph Norton followed him in. His father then pushed the witness's mother toward Norton, and said, 'Kiss her, Joe, it might be the last time,' Norton replied, 'If that's it, I'm going home.' His father then said, 'Don't take offence,' and walked towards the door, but he soon came back, and sat on a chair. A few moments afterwards he got up, put his arms round his wife's neck, as if he were going to kiss her, and witness heard Norton say, 'Oh!' and he then noticed blood flowing from his mother's throat. Witness caught hold of her, and walked with her to the verandah. She then fell down, and he saw a terrible wound in her throat. He afterwards saw his father standing in the passage, wiping his hands on a piece of newspaper, which he threw down. Witness went upstairs and called a lodger named McCann, his father then left the house by the front door. Witness afterwards saw a razor on the floor.

Cross-examined by Mr. Sharpe:

Was Norton a relative of yours? – No he was an old friend of the family, and very often came to the house.

Who is McCann? – He was a lodger, and had been there about six months.

Where was he when the tragedy occurred? – In bed.

Had your father been drinking a good deal? – Yes.

Did he that morning appear very strange in his manner? – No.

Did he appear to be suffering from the effects of drink? – Yes.

Norton was in the kitchen all the time when this happened? – Yes.

He would see everything that took place as well as you? – I cannot say.

Was your mother peeling potatoes at the time? – Yes.

And she had a knife in her hand? – Yes.

Did you hear her threaten your father? – No.

Did you see her raise the knife? – No.

Was there any unpleasantness at all, leading up to this occurrence? – No, nothing at all.

But there had been unpleasantness between them, before that morning? – Yes.

Over a lodger? – Not that I am aware of.

Did you know that there had been quarrelling that morning over money? – No.

Examined by Mr. Paling:

I think your mother lent some money to somebody. – Yes.

Was it not to McCann? – No, somebody else.

And your father appeared to be suffering from the effects of drink. Had he been serving in the bar that morning? – Yes.

And he could walk and talk all right? – I think so.

Would you say he was drunk or sober? – I would say he was drunk.

You have been asked about the lodger, McCann. As far as you have seen has McCann's conduct in the house been everything that could be desired? – Yes.

Have you seen the slightest thing to cause your father to be jealous regarding your lodger and mother? – No.

Has your father ever shown the slightest sign of insanity? – No.

Would you describe him as a perfectly sound man? – Yes.

As well as being licensee of the house he went to work regularly? – Yes.

By Mr. Sharpe: Did your father meet with an accident about twelve months ago at the works? – Yes.

His head was cut? – Yes.

Was he at home about two months? – I forget the length of time. I do not think he had to stay at home.

Joseph Henry Norton said he was a bedstead caster, and lived at 5, Sankey Street, Bilston. On Sunday the 16th inst, he went to the PHEASANT INN about half-past one, and there he went into a back yard. Mrs. Pountney was in and out of the kitchen all the time. Shortly before two o'clock Mrs. Pountney called, 'Come here Joe.' Witness then went towards her and she put her hand on his shoulder and said, 'He has accused me that I am going to have a baby. If he don't know, who should know. That's why he has been so sulky with me for a long time.' She was peeling potatoes at the time. With the knife in her hand she pointed to Pountney and said, 'If it wasn't for the lad I would' She did not say what. Pountney moved a bit away. He turned back and caught hold of her round the neck with one arm and said, 'Come here,' as though to kiss her. Witness then saw a razor in his hand, and jumped up to catch hold of it, but he had drawn it across her throat. She did not speak after he had done that. Pountney was not quite sober then, but witness could not say he was drunk. He could walk and talk all right. Witness had not seen any signs of insanity in the prisoner. He remembered prisoner meeting with an accident around twelve months ago, but did not notice any strangeness in him after that.

Cross-examined by Mr. Sharpe: Your expression before the Coroner was that prisoner that morning seemed to be 'dozy?' – Yes.

So he did not appear to be quite in his right mind at the time? Evidently he had been drinking? – But I had not seen him having any.

Edward McCann, bricklayer, said he had been lodging at the PHEASANT INN for about six months. He had heard the prisoner threaten his wife. That was about the second week after he went there. He struck her, and knocked her down, saying, ‘That is not all you will have. I shall do you in before the night is out.’ Witness did not know the cause of the quarrel. On many occasions he had heard them quarrelling. On the Saturday night previous to the tragedy witness went to sleep in the kitchen, and did not go to bed with the other residents. He could not say what time he went to bed. He did not get up on the Sunday until he was called, after the tragedy.

Cross-examined by Mr. Sharpe:

Were you on friendly terms with both Mr. and Mrs. Pountney? – Yes, we had been drinking together on Saturday night.

The prisoner had been drinking heavily? – I have never seen him sober since I have been there.

Did you tell the Coroner anything about the prisoner knocking his wife down? – He did not ask me that.

Did you tell him you heard him threaten his wife the first fortnight you were there? – Yes.

Had she lent you any money? – No.

None at all? – No, never.

I understand she had lent money to someone else, and there had been a lot of ‘tiffs’ about it.

Do you know that was partly the cause of the quarrels? – No. I think drink was the cause of it all.

Do you say both of them were quarrelsome? – Yes. Six of one and half-a dozen of the other.

There was not much difference, so far as their quarrelling went. Have you ever seen her assault him? – On occasion, with cause.

When there was any cause she would not be backward in assaulting him? – She always took her own part.

Re-examined by Mr. Paling:

Was she a very hard working woman? – Yes.

You have never seen her drunk? – No.

William Doughty, 5, court, 26 house, Wolverhampton Street, Bilston, gave evidence as to seeing the prisoner in the canal near Bradley, and calling for assistance.

PS Piddock stated that having received information of the tragedy, he went to the PHEASANT INN, and there he found deceased lying on her face in a pool of blood. She was quite dead.

PS George Cartwright said at 2.30pm on the 16th inst he went to Bradley in search of the prisoner. Arriving at the canal bridge, he saw him there, and assisted in the artificial respiration. Pountney was afterwards removed to Bilston Police Station, and Dr. Waddell examined him. Witness afterwards accompanied the doctor to the PHEASANT INN, and was present when he made an external examination of the deceased. Later the same day witness charged Pountney with murdering his wife, by cutting her throat with a razor. He cautioned Pountney and he replied, ‘It’s correct. I have had cause for it.’ Owing to his physical condition Pountney was removed to the New Cross Infirmary, and witness went with him. On the way to the Infirmary, ‘They had been up before me, having oysters and drinking beer and stout, and when I got up and asked for my breakfast she said the bacon was in the kitchen and I could go and get my own. There is a bank-book in the house and when I was going down the cellar for some beer, I heard her and McCann arranging to go away together. If she ain’t in trouble, a post-mortem will prove it.’

PS Westbury said that on Friday, March 3rd, prisoner went into the police station and said, ‘Do you mind sending an officer up to my place, the PHEASANT INN, I have got a lodger I want putting out.’ Witness asked, ‘Cannot you put him out?’ and prisoner replied, ‘No, he’s too big for me. My wife encourages him there. I’m not going to be dominated over by them any longer. If he stays any longer I shall do her in. I’m sure to kill her.’ Witness told him he must not talk like that. As prisoner walked away he said, ‘Well, you’ll see, I shall find you a job.’ He then left the place. Witness sent two constables to the inn, and they afterwards reported on their visit.

Dr. Charles Hope Waddell said that at the PHEASANT INN he examined the body of Mrs. Pountney. He found an incised wound, four inches long, extending right across the front of the neck. All structures lying in front of the vertebral column, including the trachea, were severed. In his opinion death would take place in a few moments, from haemorrhage and shock. On the 17th inst he made a post-mortem examination, in order to ascertain if there was any foundation for the statement that she was pregnant, and the result was that he found she was not.

This concluded the evidence, and prisoner, who reserved his defence, was committed to take his trial at the next Assizes.”

"The trial of Elijah Pountney (48), labourer, indicted for the wilful murder of his wife Alice Gertrude Pountney, at Bilston, on April 16th, opened at Stafford Assizes on Friday morning before Mr. Justice Shearman.

Mr. Graham Milward and Mr. Vachell prosecuted, and Mr. A. J. Long defended.

'I don't remember anything,' said prisoner, in pleading not guilty to the indictment.

In opening Mr. Graham Milward said the case was not a long one; it was quite a short and simple tale. Prisoner and his wife kept the PHEASANT INN at Bilston, and prisoner also worked at the Tarmac Works. A man named McCann came to lodge at the house in the early part of the year and there was trouble between prisoner and his wife. He knocked her down, McCann was present and took the woman's part, and from that time prisoner felt anger against McCann. As time went on prisoner got into his mind that there was a wrong relationship between the lodger and his wife, and he remarked to a police officer, 'If the lodger stays much longer, I shall do her in.'

On the day of the alleged crime prisoner came home having apparently had some drink and he said to a man named Norton who was in the house, 'Kiss her Joe; it may be for the last time.' Subsequently he put his arm round her neck and cut her throat with such violence with a razor that she died almost immediately. Prisoner afterwards attempted to commit suicide by throwing himself into the canal.

John Edward Pountney, son of prisoner, first gave evidence, and said after committing the crime his father wiped his hands on a piece of paper. Witness afterwards saw a razor on the floor.

Mr. Long: While your father was at work something like twelve months ago, did something happen to him? – Yes, a piece of cinder fell on his head.

Since that time he has been continually drinking more than was good for him? – Yes.

Have you observed any changes in his manner since he had this blow? – Yes. He said things to mother, and when asked what he meant, he has turned round and said he never said anything.

Since the accident a very little drink has a great deal of effect on him? – Yes.

Did he suggest sometimes that there was improper relationship between McCann and your mother? – Yes. Witness added that his father had never suggested it to him, but he had overheard him say to his mother that she had kissed McCann or that McCann had kissed her.

Counsel: Was there the slightest foundation for such a suggestion? – No.

McCann, the lodger, said in his opinion drink was the cause of all this trouble. There was no truth in the suggestion that there was any impropriety between prisoner's wife and witness.

William Doughty, a boy, of Bilston, spoke of seeing prisoner in the canal. He was got out, and he asked them not to make any bother about it.

PS Cartwright said when he charged the prisoner with murdering his wife he replied, 'It's correct, I have cause for it.'

Dr. C. H. Waddell, in reply to Mr. Long, said when he saw prisoner he formed the conclusion that he had taken a considerable quantity of alcohol.

Sentence of death was passed."

Staffordshire Sentinel 24/7/1922

"The Criminal Appeal Court today dismissed the appeal of Elijah Pountney, innkeeper at Bilston, against the death sentence passed at Stafford Assizes on July 7th for wife murder. The Court said any question of the prisoner's mind would be dealt with by the Home Secretary."

Elijah Pountney was hanged at Winson Green Prison on 11th August 1922. The executioner was Ellis.

“The annual licensing meeting for Bilston and its neighbourhood was held on Friday.....

Mr. Waterhouse applied for a license to the PHEASANT, Walsall Street, Bilston, on behalf of Mr. Henry Beebee. Refused.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 22/9/1858

“On Monday night last a young man was in company with his sweetheart, Jane Bowdley, about eighteen years of age, of Gibbet Lane, somewhere in the neighbourhood of a pool at Priestfield, when a quarrel took place between them, and the young woman ran off towards the pool, declaring that she would drown herself. She plunged into the water, and was immediately followed by her lover, who attempted to save her, but was unable to do so. John Beebee, about twenty years of age, a journeyman saddler, at Monmore Green, son of Henry Beebee, of Walsall Street, Bilston, also went to the girl’s assistance; but in his efforts to rescue her both he and the young woman were unhappily drowned. The pool was dragged as soon as possible after the occurrence, but the bodies were not found until four o’clock yesterday morning.”

“The Annual Licensing Meeting. This meeting was held in the Police Court on Friday last.....

Mr. Whitehouse then applied on behalf of Mr. John Rogers, hairdresser, news agent, and collector of assessed taxes, for a license to premises he is erecting by PIPE HALL. Mr. Whitehouse remarked that he was well aware that the Bench were of opinion that the number of public houses in Bilston was sufficiently great already; but his client had expended £700 in the purchase of the ground and the erection of a house, which would provide accommodation for the important class of the community, commercial travellers, which he declared was afforded by no public house in Bilston. Mr. Underhill, who opposed on behalf of Mr. Elkington, of the ANGEL, argued that the best proof that no such house was wanted, was that neither the railway company nor Mr. Pugh had used the license for PIPE HALL. The application was refused.”

Mr. Waterhouse, solicitor, of Bilston, made an application for a license to be granted to Mr. George Rodgers, landlord of the GREAT WESTERN INN, Market Street. It appeared that when the Great Western Railway Company constructed their line of railway through Bilston, some years ago, some land, on which stood two old licensed houses, known by the names of the GLOBE and HOP POLE, were taken in by the company, and the license of the former house was subsequently transferred to PIPE HALL, a large and commodious house near the Great Western Railway Station. Mr. Bull, the owner of the house, had never availed himself of the license, but had let the house to a schoolmaster, and it was now used as an educational establishment, and called the Pipe Hall Academy. The applicant had purchased a piece of land formerly belonging to PIPE HALL, and as he had extensive accommodation, and was so close to the railway station he (Mr. Waterhouse) thought there was great necessity that the house should be licensed.....

Mr. Rodgers, in answer to the Bench, guaranteed that in a very short time he would be in a position to give accommodation for at least six horses and conveyances, and with this understanding, and also taking into consideration the applicant's previous good character, the application was granted.”

It was still a school in the 1871 census.

Forest of Dean Examiner 10/12/1875

“At a large and influential meeting of mine-owners who work within the area of the South Staffordshire Mines Drainage Act, held at the PIPE HALL HOTEL, Bilston, on Monday evening last, a Masters Miners Mines-rating Protection Association was duly formed. The movement originated owing to the fact of many persons working mines within the area mentioned being of opinion that there was a need of such an agency for the purpose of effective co-operation by the smaller class of master miners who were individually very helpless. Theree preliminary meetings were held, and at the second the following resolutions were passed.

‘That it is desirable to form an association, having for its objects. 1. Watching proceedings under the Mines Drainage Act. 2. Resisting the imposition of any tax, being either unauthorised, excessive, not properly graduated, or not levied with proper discrimination, as to benefits or burdens. 3. Co-operating generally, for the common advantage of the members as master miners.’

A committee was also appointed for the purpose of drawing up rules for the regulation of the association. At a meeting held on the 24th of November those present signed a memorandum that the association be registered under the Joint Stock Companies Act. The meeting on Monday evening last was convened for the purpose of receiving the report of the registration of the association and to determine upon future operations. Mr. J. W. Hall, solicitor, of Bilston, was appointed solicitor to the company and secretary pro tem, and he reported to the meeting that the registration of the association had been accomplished. The directors, seven in number, were next appointed, and they were directed to take steps for obtaining the opinion of counsel as to the validity of the proceedings under the South Staffordshire Mines Drainage Act. After the transaction of some formal business several persons applied for shares in the company, and the whole of the applications were complied with.”

Dudley Herald 13/5/1876

“At Bilston Police Court on Tuesday, a woman, named Eliza Campbell (47), was charged with having stolen the sum of £2 11s 6d from the person of Mary Ann Cross. Whilst the prosecutrix was in the market on Monday she was taken ill, owing to which she adjourned to the PIPE HALL VAULTS, and got something to drink. She became worse in the vaults, and the prisoner, who was present, kindly volunteered to unloose the prosecutrix’s dress. In doing so she took off a loose pocket, in which was a purse containing £2 11s 6d. After extracting the money, prisoner placed the pocket in a basket belonging to the prosecutrix. Soon afterwards Cross missed her purse and charged the prisoner with stealing it. She denied the charge and left the place. Cross followed her, and in Church Street, after much trouble, prisoner gave up the purse and the money.

The Bench designated the case as one of a heartless character, and sentenced the prisoner to three months’ imprisonment with hard labour.”

South Wales Daily News 29/4/1899

“At Bilston Police Court, near Wolverhampton, yesterday, Alfred Smith, collier, of Ebbw Vale, was charged with attempting to commit suicide. The prisoner came from South Wales to Wolverhampton two months ago in search of work, and lived first with his brother and then at an inn at Darlaston, where, it is alleged, he paid attentions to a barmaid. After attempting suicide by drowning at Kettenhall on the 19th inst, and creating a great sensation by stating that he had been robbed and thrown into the canal, he went to Bilston and cut his throat at the PIPE HALL HOTEL.

Mary Chinnock, waitress at the PIPE HALL HOTEL, said the prisoner engaged a bedroom at 10 o'clock on the 20th, and at 7 the next morning rang his bell and said, ‘Send for a police officer. A gentlemen here is going to cut his throat.’

Constable Finney found the prisoner sitting in a chair. He said, ‘Lock me up, officer; I have cut my throat, and there's the razor.’ He was taken into custody. Dr. Smith sewed the wound up. It was not serious. The prisoner was much depressed, and said, ‘I am guilty of wilfully cutting myself, but not with the intention of taking my life. I was not in a fit state of mind.’

The prisoner was committed for trial.

The prisoner's mother and sister from Ebbw Vale, where the father is a tin-plate worker, were present, and also the young woman referred to from Darlaston, all much affected.

At the close of the Court and affecting scene took place between the prisoner and his mother, the prisoner throwing his arms round her neck and exclaiming, 'Oh, mother, what shall I do? They've committed me for trial.' He, however, told her to go home to his father. He should be all right, and was much better now.

The prisoner told our correspondent he had been betting, but the mother said drinking. As he left in company of a police officer his sister called after him, 'Cheer up Alfred, for the family's sake.'"

"Wolverhampton District Electric Tramways Trial Trip.

A preliminary trial trip over the Parkfield, Coseley, Moxley, Bilston, and Willenhall sections of the track recently constructed by the British Electric Traction Company, was conducted last evening. Invitations had been forwarded to the members and officials of the Urban District Councils, situated within the area, and which included Sedgley, Coseley, and Bilston, and two of the company's double-decker cars were placed at the disposal of the party. Commencing from their Sedgley terminus in the afternoon, the cars conveyed the guests over the various lines, making double journeys over each one. A halt was called at Bilston, where the party adjourned to the PIPE HALL HOTEL to partake of a champagne luncheon After luncheon the party resumed their journey and completed the tour, which throughout gave every satisfaction."

“The fourth round of the Birmingham and District Licensed Victuallers billiard handicap was concluded yesterday.....

H. W. Matthews (PIPE HALL, Bilston), rec. 30, met J. Dale-Rodgers (Swan Hotel, Yardley), rec. 250. The game proved a most interesting one. Matthews did not catch his opponent until 384, but ran out winner by 8 points. Matthews made breaks of 26, 43, 33, 24 and 20. Scores Matthews 400, Rodgers 392.”

“The semi-final heats in the Birmingham and District Licensed Victuallers billiard handicap were contested yesterday.....

H. W. Matthews (PIPE HALL HOTEL, Bilston, owes 50) met R. Jones (Central Hotel, Cannock, rec. 190). The last-named won the handicap two years ago, when he also secured the Sporting Buff trophy. Matthews has had to fight hard in every heat, and for the veteran to figure in the penultimate stage was indeed a fine performance. Yesterday afternoon Jones played soundly, never taking the least risk, and Matthews’s position became a hopeless one Jones’s safety tactics were the means of his winning by the big margin of 181 points.”

“Messrs. John Male and Son, auctioneers, of Bilston, submitted for sale at the PIPE HALL HOTEL, Bilston, on Tuesday evening, 50 ‘A’ shares and 120 ‘B’ shares, all of £5 each, in the Bilston Gas Light and Coke Company and 30 ‘D’ shares of £10 each in the Willenhall Gas Company; and it says much for the popularity of the companies that the whole were snapped up within half an hour. They were offered in 25 lots, and bidding was of the most spirited character. The highest price reached for five ‘A’ in the Bilston Company was £12 3s, and the whole of the remainder were knocked down at £12 1s. Lots of ten ‘B’ shares in the same company reached the sum of £8 11s, while the £10 shares in the Willenhall Company found buyers at £16, £15 18s, and £15 4s.”

“‘There is only one verdict, and that is Accidental Death,’ said the Coroner (Mr. J. T. Higgs) at an inquest on William Robert Vowles, aged 55, manager of the PIPE HALL HOTEL, Hall Street, Bilston.

The widow said that about four and a half years ago, on a night after closing time, her husband went into the cellar. She had gone to bed, and when he came upstairs he said that he had slipped on ‘the old step’ and had had a fall; that he had been calling for help for a quarter of an hour, and that no one had heard him. Next morning a doctor was called, and after a time her husband underwent an X-ray examination. Tuberculosis in the spine supervened and he died last Monday. Up to the time of the accident her husband had been a very healthy man. Medical evidence was that death was due to acute toxæmia, from tuberculosis; that the condition was due to the tubercular condition of the spine, and that the condition was set up by the injury.

Mr. H. J. Pritchett, who represented Bent’s Brewery Co., owners of the hotel, said that the company much regretted the death of Mr. Vowles, who had been a very good servant.”

"Salaried and progressive position open to keen and adaptable Man, age 22-48. Must be of good appearance. Call at PIPE HALL HOTEL, Bilston, on Wednesday next, 10.30 to 12.30."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 15/11/1937

"Alfred Victor Griffiths, aged 40, a lorry driver, of 221, Hammersmith Road, London, was charged at Bilston with obtaining food to the value of 7s 6d by false pretences from the PIPE HALL HOTEL, Bilston, and with stealing a purse and contents of the total value of £5 9s 4d, the property of Gladys Maddocks, from the same hotel.

The licensee, Edgar John Adey, said that Griffiths went to the hotel on 19 May and asked for bed and breakfast. He was accommodated and the next morning said he would be staying for a day or two. He returned at night and on the morning of the 21st had breakfast and left the hotel without paying and was never seen again. Witness added that Griffiths told him he was buying scrap steel for Stewarts and Lloyds.

Det. C. E. V. Jones said the matter was reported to the police but Griffiths' identity was not known at the time. He examined the room which had been occupied by him at the hotel and found some pieces of paper in a fire grate. These were pieced together with some difficulty and made a postal letter card which was addressed to a woman at Wolverhampton and signed Vic. Further inquiries were made and Mr. Adey identified Griffiths from a number of photos shown to him.

On the charge of theft, Gladys Maddocks, barmaid at the hotel, said she went to bed on 20 May, taking her handbag which contained the money. Griffiths' bedroom was on the same landing. The following morning she went downstairs taking her handbag with her and found the money missing.

Griffiths pleaded guilty to both charges and asked for another charge for false pretences at Wolverhampton to be taken into consideration.

Det.-Con. Jones said Griffiths was a married man and had been courting a young woman in London who came of a good family, to whom he had posed as a well-to-do business man. The Metropolitan Police felt strongly about this because there could have been another charge against him.

Supt. Orland read out a list of previous convictions which included two terms of three years' penal servitude for fraud and larceny from lodgings.

Griffiths was sent to goal for six months on each charge, the sentences to run consecutively, 12 months in all."

"A copy of the American Declaration of Independence may seem a strange thing to hang in the bar of a Staffordshire hotel; but Mr. John McArdle has given it this place of honour for two good reasons. First of all, Mr. McArdle, who is licensee of the PIPE HALL HOTEL, Bilston, has been presented with this copy by American friends while on a visit to the USA. Secondly the Declaration has a very definite 'local connection.' For the second of the 56 men who signed it on that historic day in July, 1776, was Button Gwinnett, who belonged to a wealthy Wolverhampton family, was married in the town, and was once a governor of the former Blue Coat School there.

Recently Mr. McArdle was in America to visit his brother-in-law who farms in Ohio. A member of Bilston Rotary Club, he travelled 380 miles to Carlisle, Pennsylvania, and back, to renew a friendship with an American Rotarian. He was invited to address the Carlisle Rotary Club and his talk was recorded on a tape, which was given to him as a souvenir. One of the Rotarians, who knew of Gwinnett's Wolverhampton origin, also gave him the copy of the Declaration, printed on parchment in Washington in 1902....."

"A Bilston timber merchant and five of his customers narrowly escaped injury when part of the roof of a hotel bottle store adjoining his premises collapsed on Saturday. Shoppers were walking through The Orchard, which links Market Street and Lichfield Street in the centre of Bilston, when the accident occurred near by at the rear of the PIPE HALL HOTEL. The roof of the bottle store caved in and several tons of slates and bricks fell on to several thousands of pounds worth of stock on the ground floor. Debris also showered into the timber yard of Mr. H. A. Freeman, where he was serving customers. As bricks began to fall, he shouted a warning and the customers ran to safety into a workshop. Police cordoned off The Orchard while the rest of the store was examined by Bilston Corporation officials and made safe.

Mr. J. Cooper, the hotel manager, said afterwards that the question of renovating the store, which was part of the original PIPE HALL, was under discussion only on Friday. The collapse was thought to be due to vibration from trains on the neighbouring Western Region main line."

“A cardboard box containing what appeared to be a home-made bomb was found last night at the PIPE HALL HOTEL, Hall Street, Bilston. About half an hour before closing time Bilston police received a 999 call. The caller said that a bomb had been planted in the PIPE HALL VAULTS, a public bar about 20 yards away from the main building. Police went to the hotel and made a search after customers had been asked to leave. Near the rear entrance they found a shoe-box containing a metal tube marked ‘Danger. T.N.T.’ followed by what appeared to be a chemical formula. The device was wired in a manner similar to the ‘bomb’ planted in a hoax at Dudley on Monday. The box was left in the vaults under a police guard to await examination by an Army explosives expert called from the Donnington Ordnance Depot.”

“A Bilston licensee assaulted a 15-year-old schoolboy who he believed had damaged his car with a gang of other teenagers, Mr. Michael Garrett, prosecuting, alleged at Wolverhampton Crown Court. Mohinder Singh Mondair, upset and annoyed at the damage to his vehicle wrongly accused David Mountford of being involved it was said. He caught hold of the boy, said Mr. Garrett, dragged him inside his public house, and punched him in the face with his fists, knocking him into a chair and onto the floor. Mondair, of the PIE HALL public house in Hall Street, Bilston, pleaded not guilty to assaulting the boy causing him actual bodily harm.

Mr. Garrett said that when questioned by police, Mondair told officers that he did not know whether or not the boy was one of the gang of youths who had damaged his car. He said that he thought that Mountford was one of the gang ‘because he was there’ and added, ‘He must have been one of them.’ Mondair then denied hitting the boy and he said that he must have been injured when he pulled him into the public house. (Proceeding).”

“A 43-year-old Black Country licensee has been cleared of punching a schoolboy he thought was one of a gang who damaged his parked car. Mohinder Singh Mondair, of the PIPE HALL public house in Hall Street, Bilston, had denied causing actual bodily harm to 15-year-old David Mountford. It had been alleged at Wolverhampton Crown Court that Mondair suspected the boy of causing damage to his car and had taken him into the lounge of the public house. The prosecution said he punched the boy in the face.

In a statement to police, the boy said Mondair hit him while another man had poured beer over his head. But in evidence Mondair told the jury that he had left the boy in the lounge while he telephoned the police about the damage to his car. When he returned the boy was injured. He had not hit him.”

“Glamour comes to the Black Country with the opening of ALEXANDER’S in Hall Street, Bilston town centre. The plush bar near the new town centre bus station occupies an imposing Grade II listed building, known as the PIPE HALL, set in the heart of Bilston.

Midlands company LM Enterprises has spent £250,000 refurbishing the ground floor as a luxury executive meeting spot for smartly-dressed over 25s. A smaller, cosier champagne room provides the setting to impress with a range of cocktails and champagnes while a larger, public room features a laser display and an impressive satellite monitor system.

Courage Brewers will supply the ales, lager and stouts and for the smart set there will be trendy bottled lagers such as Sol and Grolsch as well as the more John Smith bitter, Holstein export and Beamish stout.

ALEXANDER’S will open 7-11 Sunday-Wednesday and 5.30pm-11.30pm Thursday-Saturday with happy hour specials and free buffet 5.30-7.00pm Thursday-Saturday.”

It reopened as GAVIN’S SPORTS BAR. [2009]

Swinder Singh Batth was married to Palwinder.

Express & Star 3/8/2009

“Seven people who appeared in court charged with the murder of a Bilston man shot dead outside his pub have been remanded in custody. The group of seven appeared at Wolverhampton Magistrates Court on Saturday, and are jointly-charged with the murder of Swinder Singh Batth, who was gunned down outside GAVIN’S SPORTS BAR in Bilston just after midnight last Tuesday.....

It has also emerged that father-of-four Mr. Batth, who was aged 47 and ran the bar with son Gavin, was a world class Kabaddi player and former professional wrestler. Kabaddi is a sport where participants aim to wrestle each other to the ground, and is staged in the UK by Indian promoters.

On the Kabaddi.org forum, a poster said, ‘He was one of the best stoppers in England over the years. He went toe-to-toe with much heavier men and was a big crowd favourite.’

His nickname during Kabaddi bouts was Shina Batth. A banner has now been placed across the website’s message board saying ‘RIP legend of UK Kabaddi’ to pay tribute to him.

The first message posted on the topic says, ‘With very sad news that we have deep regret in reporting that UK Kabaddi Legend Shinda Amli was shot dead outside his bar in Wolverhampton. Our thoughts are with his family.’ Another fan wrote, ‘What a tragedy. Great player of the game, but more so, he was well known for being one of the truly great characters. And one more wrote, ‘RIP. He was a real character who will be a big loss for all the Kabaddi world.’

Mr. Batth, a well known businessman in Bilston, who lived with his family in Moxley, died in his son Gavin’s arms following the shooting. Family members have told how the 18 year-old had cradled his dying father as he waited for police and ambulance crews to arrive at the scene.

Police say Mr. Batth was hit with a bullet in the chest.”

In August 2010 two men were found guilty of Swinder Singh Batth’s murder.

“A bar where an innocent landlord was shot dead is to be sold at auction. GAVIN’S SPORTS BAR in Bilston has been closed since the fatal shooting of Swinder Singh Batth following a trivial row over a laser pen almost two years ago. It is now to be sold at auction with a guide price of £225,000 and community leaders in the town hope that the Hall Street venue can be transformed into a positive attraction. Bilston councillor Susan Constable said she wanted to see new owners turn the building into a business that would help to attract investment and people to the area. ‘It used to be a hotel many years ago,’ she said. ‘It is right on the Metro line, and I think it could be put to good use as a restaurant or a hotel. That would be better than a pub. Pubs seem to have fallen out of favour and attract the sort of things we are trying to dissuade.’

Mr. Batth, who was from Moxley and ran the pub with his son Gavin, was shot dead by Sukwinder Sanghera on July 28, 2009. Sanghera had been recruited by Jasbir Takhar to take revenge on whoever had shone the laser beam at his girlfriend. During a trial at Birmingham Crown Court, jurors were told that two vehicles carrying nine men and a woman pulled up outside the bar at about midnight on the night of the fatal shooting. Takhar and another defendant argued with a man called Craig Martin on the steps of the bar. Jurors heard that he was the likely target of Sanghera, who got out of one of the cars and fired the shot, which hit Mr. Batth in the chest. Sanghera, aged 24, of West Bromwich, and accomplice Takhar, 23, are serving life for the murder. Five other men and a woman were found guilty of conspiracy to commit violent disorder. Two other men were found guilty of intimidating a witness. They were given jail terms ranging from 195 days to three-and-a-half years. The Grade II listed building is being sold by Cottons Chartered Surveyors.”

A ‘menacingly dangerous’ Wolverhampton bar where a landlord was gunned down almost a decade ago will not be knocked to the ground, council planning chiefs have ruled. Developers wanted to demolish the former GAVIN’S SPORTS BAR in Bilston after claiming it had become a ‘magnet for vandals and squatters’ since Swinder Singh Batth’s murder. But Wolverhampton council denied developers the chance to flatten the Grade II listed building, also known as PIPE HALL, after declaring it can be preserved. Councillor for Bilston East Stephen Simkins said he was ‘all for’ proposals which would bring the historic building back into use for the community. He added, ‘PIPE HALL is iconic for lots of people in Bilston. For a lot of families, their parents got married and held receptions there. It’s really precious to people in Bilston. It’s right next to the tram stop so there should be lots of business opportunities which could bring employment to people living in Bilston. It does look like it’s tired. Everything should be done to bring this building back into use. We can’t afford to have it lay empty for another ten years. But if it’s unsafe, that has got to be addressed. The developers should talk openly and frankly with our officers so we can get the best for Bilston.’

Property development company WV14 LTD claimed the site, next to the Bilston Central tram stop, had fallen into a ‘grave state of disrepair’ after closing following Mr. Batth’s death in 2009. Heantun Housing Group bought the site and proposed to transform it into a cafe and job training centre but was unable to secure a government grant needed for restoration. In their application to the council, developers said they wanted to ‘clear the eyesore building’ to create a ‘very promising future development’ at the site but did not reveal any detailed plans. They added, ‘It is necessary to demolish the building as it has been established that there is no economical or viable use today or in the foreseeable future for this property.’ In a structural report commissioned last June, Daniel Paul claimed the derelict building was ‘menacingly dangerous and hazardous’ and in need of extensive structural repair and renovation. Wolverhampton South East MP Pat McFadden has called for a further assessment of the building’s condition, adding, ‘This is a valued local building and the issue in recent months has been trying to get a professional independent view of the condition of the building. The owner wants to knock it down but I don’t believe local people would want to see it knocked down if there is a viable alternative that would mean it could be repaired and brought back into productive use.’

A Wolverhampton council spokesman said Historic England objected to the proposals after stating demolition would cause ‘the loss of a significant heritage asset.’ The council added, ‘Following this, the council rejected the planning application and has strongly advised the applicant to put forward a restoration plan, or consider marketing the property, to achieve a development solution that conserves its heritage value and contribution to the conservation area. There are many acceptable uses for this building, including residential.’”

“A bar in Bilston which has lain derelict for more than a decade after its landlord was gunned down will be redeveloped, it has been revealed. The PIPE HALL building, the former home of GAVIN’S SPORTS BAR, closed in 2009 after Swinder Singh Batth’s murder. But now the Hall Street site, which dates back to 1810, has been bought by the West Midlands Combined Authority (WMCA) – in a bid to kick-start the town centre’s regeneration.

West Midlands Mayor Andy Street said, ‘Truthfully, we’ve not yet decided but the critical point is that it’s been lying derelict for well over a decade. It’s of huge significance and I would describe it as a monument – it’s a symbol of the decline which we want to stop. It could be for business start-up hub which is my personal favourite suggestion. The WMCA is using the cash to intervene where no one else has stepped in and I’m proud to get on and sort it out. It’s quite right we should get on with the regeneration.’

The building dates back to 1810 and was originally built for the Pipe family, but it became Pipe Hall Academy, a private girl’s school, in 1869.

Councillor Harman Banger, Wolverhampton Council’s cabinet member for city economy, said the authority had been working closely with WMCA to make the purchase happen. The building, which was converted into a hotel and pub, will now undergo urgent remedial work.....”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 12/7/1854

"An adjourned inquest was held on Monday last, before W. H. Phillips, Esq, deputy coroner, at the PLOUGH INN, High Street, Bilston, on the body of an infant illegitimate child of a woman named Mary Ann Jones, of Wynns Court, Bilston, which had died very suddenly on Wednesday, at the age of four days. As this was the woman's second illegitimate child that had died, the inquest had been adjourned for a post mortem examination of the body to be made. Mr. Cooper, surgeon, of Bilston, gave it as his opinion that the child had died from convulsions, produced by pressure on the brain. The jury gave a verdict in accordance with the evidence."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 16/5/1866

“At Bilston yesterday, before the Stipendiary, Richard Giles, trustee of No.3 Lodge of the Royal Victoria Order of Odd Fellows, appeared on a summons, charging him under the Benefit Society Act, with withholding the funeral regalia of the lodge, consisting of bands, scarfs, and gloves, in a box, value in the whole £11. The box and regalia up to the time of Miss Cook leaving the PLOUGH INN, where the society was held, was kept in her bed room, but Giles, a trustee, held the key. In November last the box was given to Giles’s wife that she might examine and brush the things to prevent or remove spots. At the next monthly meeting of the club, when Miss Cook delivered herself of her stewardship in relation to the club, defendant acknowledged the receipt of the regalia, and said it was all right. On the 6th of March he informed his co-trustee, James Raybould, that he had neglected to examine the box until the previous day, and then found that all the regalia had disappeared, except the gloves and scarfs ties. There was a want of technical proof that the regalia was in the box when it was delivered to defendant’s wife, and the Stipendiary said he could not make an order upon the defendant to deliver up what he had not got. There might be a case under the Bailee Act. The summons was dismissed.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 19/12/1866

“On Friday last, an inquest was held at the PLOUGH INN, High Street, Bilston, before W. H. Phillips, Esq, Deputy Coroner, on the body of Emily Hipkiss, a child two years of age, who had died from burning. The child lived with its parents, in the Black Horse yard, High Street, and it appeared from the evidence that on Monday evening, the 19th instant, the father of the deceased left her sitting on a sofa, whilst he went into the back yard. There was a lighted candle on the table, and the only other person in the house besides the deceased was a boy about seven years of age, whom the father told to look after the child in his absence. In about two minutes afterwards piercing screams were heard, and on two of the neighbours rushing into the house to see what was the matter, the little girl was found by herself with her clothes on fire. The flames were at once extinguished, but the child was found to be very severely burnt about the arms and neck. The burns were dressed with oil &c, and the child was afterwards attended to by a woman who resided in the neighbourhood, and as the child seemed to be going on well up to Sunday last no medical man was called in. On Monday morning the child seemed so much worse that the father called in Mr. Best, surgeon, but although that gentleman prescribed for it, the little sufferer never rallied, and died on Tuesday morning. The father gave as another reason why he did not get the assistance of a doctor earlier that he had been out of work for some time, and could not afford the expense, but the Coroner told him that was not sufficient excuse when his child’s life was in danger, and especially as he might have had the parish doctor free of charge. There was no one who could give any evidence as to how the child got on fire, but it was supposed that the little boy having left the house the little girl was trying to reach the candle, and pulled it on to its clothes, as the house was in darkness when the two neighbours rushed in. The Jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

County Express 23/2/1867

“On Friday week, an inquest was held at the PLOUGH INN, Bilston, before Mr. W. H. Phillips, deputy-coroner, on the body of a girl, aged 16, named Hannah Reynolds, of Wallbrook, who was found in the canal, near to Messrs. Sparrows works, on the Wednesday previous. From the evidence of her mother, it appeared the girl left home on Friday, the 8th inst, to go to her aunt’s in Can Lane, and it is supposed that, on returning at night, the brightness of the fires in the works dazzled her eyes, and being rather near-sighted, she walked into the canal. A verdict of Found Dead was recorded.”

“Yesterday Reuben Robert Humphries, landlord of the PLOUGH INN, High Street, appeared at Bilston Police Court in answer to a summons charging him with permitting drunkenness in his house.

At about three o’clock on the morning of Tuesday the 19th instant, Sergeant Hall visited the defendant’s house, and on going inside he found several persons there drunk and making a noise, and one or two of them were so intoxicated that they could hardly stand.

Mr. Sheldon, who appeared on behalf of the defendant, contended, in reply to the charge, that the men did not get the drink in his client’s house; but that they got it elsewhere before coming there.

There was a previous conviction recorded against him, and the defendant was ordered to pay a fine of £5 and costs.”

"The annual licensing meeting for the Bilston division took place yesterday, at the Police Court.....

The licenses of the following publicans were suspended until the adjourned licensing meeting.....

Frederick Higgold, PLOUGH."

"Yesterday, Frederick Higgett, of the PLOUGH INN, Bilston, was charged with having permitted disorderly conduct in his house.

On Saturday night, the 28th ult, Sergeant Lightfoot and Police-constable Chaplin visited defendant's house at half-past ten and a quarter to twelve o'clock, and on both occasions found, in the club room, 40 girls and boys dancing. They were all between 13 and 20 years of age. A large portion of them were drunk, and were creating a great disturbance.

Inspector M. Williams said that the house had been very badly conducted, and at the last licensing meeting the license had been suspended until the adjourned meeting, and then the present charge would be brought before the magistrates,

The Bench said that it was a very bad case, and the worst one that had been before them for some time past. They should fine defendant £5 and costs, or in default he would have to be imprisoned for two months with hard labour."

"The annual sessions for the renewal of existing and the granting of new licenses to licensed victuallers and beersellers in Bilston and Sedgley, was held yesterday at the Police Court, Bilston.....

All the applications for renewal of licenses were granted except the following, who had been fined for various offences during the year, and whose applications for renewal were adjourned until the adjourned licensing day, November 30 Licensed Victuallers.....

Frederick Higgot, PLOUGH, High Street."

"There were six applications for new licensed victuallers' licenses.....

Mr. Best applied on behalf of Miss Hickman for a license for the PLOUGH INN, High Street. The house was formerly an old-licensed house, but in consequence of the misconduct of the tenant at the time the license was withdrawn. Miss Hickman was the owner of the premises. The application was granted."

"Anchor Bicycle Club, Bilston. This recently-formed club celebrated their opening, at the headquarters, the PLOUGH INN, High Street, Bilston, on Tuesday evening. A capital supper was provided, and done ample justice to. The cloth having been withdrawn, Mr. J. Clark, the captain of the club, was elected to the chair, and Mr. J. Evans to the vice-chair. The toast of the evening 'Success to the Bilston Anchor Bicycle Club,' was drunk with enthusiasm, and an admirable speech in response was made by the hon. secretary, Mr. W. Richardson, who foreshadowed the ultimate success of the club, by the statement that although it had only been started five weeks, it already possessed 25 paying members, and many others were waiting to join. Other toasts followed, and the remainder of the evening was very agreeably spent in songs, readings, recitations, &c."

The backers of the men met at Mr. W. Daniels, the VINE INN, Bloxwich, on Tuesday night last, but the backers of Athersmith failed to go with the match, which, after so much bombast on the part of the latter, caused no little surprise amongst the many who attended. However, Smith is still open to run Athersmith from 120 yards to 200 yards for £50, £100, or £500 a-side. A deposit to the Sporting Life, and articles to Mr. *T. “Alexandra Grounds, Bloxwich. H. Smith and C. Jackson, for £20. An Exciting Race.

These grounds were occupied on Monday last with an important pedestrian match, the contestants being Harry Smith, of Willenhall, and Charles Jackson, of Walsall Wood, who had signed articles to run 110 yards, Jackson to receive two yards start, for £20. Both men are considered high flyers in the Midlands.

Smith is twenty-three years of age, stands 5ft 7in in his boots, and scaled 10st 8lb in his clothes For this match he trained from Mr. Tom Robinson’s, PLOUGH INN, Bilston.

Jackson is twenty-three years of age, 5ft 5in high, and scaled 9st 10lb This was his first match for which he was backed by Mr. J. Dudley, of the TRAVELLERS REST, Darlaston.

The weather was very dull during the day, but nevertheless a good muster of spectators assembled. When the men toed their marks fully 800 spectators were present, and speculation was of a brisk nature, ruling at 6 to 4 and 2 to 1 on Smith. Mr. W. Lewis, of Birmingham, appointed by the Sporting Life, despatched the men to a beautiful start, and an exciting race ensued. Jackson at one time looked all over a winner, but Smith came with a splendid rush in the last twenty yards, and getting alongside five yards from home, he managed to get up in the last few strides, and won on the tape by six inches.

We have received a letter from H. Smith, in which he states that if Jackson is not satisfied with the result, he (Smith) will run him again, on the same terms, for £25, £50, or £100 a-side, on any fair track in the Midlands; or Smith will run A. Stokes, of Bloxwich, or C. Athersmith, of Bloxwich, and concede either of them 2 yards inside 120 yards, for from £25 up to £100 a-side. Either of these matches can be made by calling any time at Mr. Thomas Robinson’s, PLOUGH INN, Bilston.”

“Samuel Proffitt, commission agent, Thompson Street, was charged with wilfully damaging a window, to the value of £3 at the PLOUGH INN, High Street, Bilston. Mr. R. Tildesley prosecuted, and Mr. Rhodes defended.

Evidence was given that the defendant threw a brick, covered with gas-tar, through the plate-glass window and ran away. He was found hiding near, and his hands had gas-tar on them. He called a witness to say that he was at home at the time the window was broken. The magistrates fined him £1 and costs, and the damage, £3, or, in default, one month’s hard labour. An application to allow him time to pay the money was refused.”

Re Thomas Robinson, licensed victualler, Shale Street, Bilston.

A meeting of the creditors was held at the Official Receiver’s office, Wolverhampton, yesterday.

Liabilities £356 18s 7d, and assets £3 4s 9d.

The debtor was an engine-driver until 1883, when he became tenant of the GEORGE AND DRAGON INN, Broad Lanes, Bilston, having borrowed £100 from his brother. He left in 1888 owing £1,800, and the creditors agreed to accept a composition of 7s 6d in the pound. The bankrupt afterwards took to the CHURCH INN, High Street, Bilston, and subsequently the PLOUGH INN, High Street, Bilston, but gave up possession to a brewery company, and subsequently filed his petition. His failure was, he said, due to want of capital, bad trade, and bad debts.

“What the prosecution described as wholesale thefts of beer were alleged at Birmingham Police Court today against five draymen employed by Atkinsons Brewery Ltd. Five licensees of Atkinsons’ houses and the wife of one of them were also summoned for receiving the beer.

Accused were all charged with stealing various quantities of beer. Summoned for receiving beer were George Evans, of the TURKS HEAD, West Bromwich; Arthur James Stringer, of the PLOUGH INN, Bilston; Sydney Buckle and Nellie Buckle, of the RAILWAY TAVERN, Tipton; Clement Euclid Walker, of the Star and Garter, Coventry; and Samuel Thomas Watkins, of the PLOUGH INN, Willenhall. All pleaded guilty, and Mr. M. P. Pugh (prosecuting) said that altogether the brewery had lost beer to the value of some £1,500. ‘I am not suggesting,’ he added, ‘that these men have been responsible for the whole of this, but it is clear that these thefts have taken place to a great degree by these men, though it may be there are others who are also stealing from their employers.’

Mr. Pugh explained that in pre-war days the brewery had a very effective system of checking the stock of beer handed to draymen for delivery, but owing to the depletion of staff during wartime the system had not been so efficient, and the accused had taken advantage of the conditions. One of the accused’s statements said that extra barrels were rolled off the deck unchecked on to the lorry. Generally speaking, the stolen barrels of beer, which normally were sold at well over £12, had been sold to the receivers for about £6, a figure which would not even pay the tax on it. Mr. John Leslie Kimberley, house manager at the brewery, said the tax on beer was about £8 per barrel, but the Government would not be the losers because they had the tax before the beer left the brewery.

On behalf of Buckle and his wife, Mr. Colin Coley said the beer was acquired, not so much to make a profit, as a means of keeping up the reputation of their house and satisfying the customers, who had been grumbling at that time about a shortage of beer.

.....Evans was sentenced to one month’s hard labour; Stringer, Mrs. Buckle, Wager and Watkins were each fined £50, and Buckle £20.”

[The draymen’s sentences ranged from £10 fine to seven months’ hard labour.]

It closed in 1956.

Mr. Fellows, solicitor, applied for a license on behalf of Thomas Holland, the owner and occupier of the PRINCE OF WALES, Shropshire Row. The house had been put on land near to Mr. Perry’s foundry, and amongst some eighty houses that had been built in the past two years. The only opposition was from the owner, not the occupier, of the LAMB AND FLAG, situated some seventy or eighty yards off; but that house was notoriously incommodious, especially for the holding of inquests and the like, and Mr. Ball, the keeper, had been several times summoned before the magistrates for offences against his license. Mr. Holland, on the contrary, had kept his house without any complaint being made against him, and he had obtained a certificate of character from the Churchwardens and other respectable people of the locality.

Mr. Underhill, in opposing the application, admitted that the house was a good one, but said that inasmuch as Mr. Holland was a member of the firm of Brereton and Co, the magistrates would scarcely believe that it was likely that he would carry on the house. He (Mr. Underhill) apprehended that before their worships granted the application, they would require to know by whom it was intended it should be kept.

Mr. Fellows: It is for no other person than Mr. Holland.

Mr. Underhill, continuing, said that his clients were the Barbor's Field Company, who were the owners of the LAMB AND FLAG. Besides which house, there were some three other licensed houses, the CROWN, the CROWN AND CUSHION, and the ROLLING MILLS, all within 100 yards away. Mr. Fellows contended that they were 250 yards away. Application granted."

Dudley and District News 25/10/1884

“At Oldbury County Court, yesterday, Richard Edwin [sic] Lewis, of the GREAT WESTERN INN, Rabone Lane, Smethwick, sued Isaiah Dicken, maltster, Wallbrook, Bilston; Richard Walton, 19, Regent Street, Woodsetton, bailiff; William Church, 19, Regent Street, Woodsetton, bailiff; and William Short, Stone Street, Dudley, auctioneer, to recover £50 damages for wrongful and illegal distraint on the plaintiff's goods on the 24th of April last. Mr. R. C. E. Plumptre, instructed by Mr. R. A. Willcock, of Wolverhampton, appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. W. Shakespeare defended.

Mr. Plumptre, in opening the case, stated that the plaintiff was a farmer and publican, and he formerly kept the PRINCE OF WALES INN, Bradley, Bilston. On the 8th of April he sold the business to a man named Holmes, and he took to the GREAT WESTERN TAVERN. On the 24th of April the two bailiffs entered the GREAT WESTERN, and made a distraint upon the plaintiff's goods and effects for £4 7s 6d, alleged to be due for rent for the PRINCE OF WALES. After the distraint, means were taken to sell the goods, the district was placarded announcing the sale, which caused great alarm amongst plaintiff's creditors and with his banker.

After the plaintiff had been examined, a private consultation took place between the parties, after which Mr. Shakespeare stated they had agreed to settle the matter. The terms were, that he, on behalf of his client, consented to a verdict for £5 and the costs, including the counsel's fee. Mr. Dicken had signed an apology expressing regret for having made the distraint, and acknowledging that he was legally wrong. A verdict was entered accordingly.”

Runcorn Guardian 22/2/1893

“On Saturday night a meeting of the Birmingham branch of the Association of Iron and Steel Workers of Great Britain was held at the PRINCE OF WALES INN, Bradley, Bilston, to take into consideration the rate of wages paid for certain work by a local firm.

Mr. W. Walker, the president of the branch, occupied the chair, and stated that the majority of the masters had offered to support the men (applause) but although he deprecated any resort to a strike, the men who were receiving the full schedule wages could not allow other ironworkers in the neighbourhood to be paid less than the standard wage without remonstrance.

Mr. Sutherland, having explained the rate of payment that should be given for certain classes of work according to the recognized schedule, Mr. Summers said the schedule had been in operation for eighteen months, and he complained that there were some men receiving 25 per cent less than had been paid them by other employers.

A resolution was passed to support the men if they came out on strike. It transpired that there were only twelve men affected, and that they were willing to leave their work unless the list rate of wages was paid. Should a strike take place the underhands will be supported as well as the tonnage men.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 5/11/1856

“On Thursday night last, about nine o’clock, a cigar box containing about £150 was stolen from the ANCHOR INN, Queen Street, Bilston, under extraordinary circumstances. It appears that two men went into the house and had two glasses of brandy each. One of them gave Mrs. Evans, wife of Mr. Evans, the landlord, a sovereign in payment, and the landlady went upstairs for the purpose of procuring change. The £150 was then safe. She came down stairs, gave the person the change, and the two men shortly afterwards left the house in company. Subsequently an alarm was raised that a man had been seen to jump from one of the bedroom windows into the street, join another man, and they both ran away into the fields. A search was made upstairs and it was found that the drawer in which the cash was kept had been broken open, and the cigar box and money stolen. The thieves have not been captured.”

"John Evans, furnace manager, at Madeley Court Works, Staffordshire, and late of the HOPE AND ANCHOR, Bilston, came up for his discharge, supported by Mr. Bartlett, of Wolverhampton, and opposed by Mr. Whitehouse (Whitehouse and Son), of Wolverhampton, for Mr. England, brewer, the detaining creditor. The grounds of opposition were – the defective nature of the schedule, reckless trading, fraudulent preference to creditors, making away with and concealment of property. Some time since the insolvent had filed a petition in the Wolverhampton County Court, which was dismissed, owing to some informality. Insolvent had left the management of the public house (which was taken to at the end of 1856) to his wife, and the concern soon brought them into difficulties. Not being able to obtain the protection of the Wolverhampton Court, the insolvent betook himself to Shropshire, and was apprehended near Oakengates, and lodged in Salop gaol. His Honour commented strongly upon the custom of parties going into counties where the debts were not contracted, and obtaining friendly arrests, and said he looked upon such transactions with the greatest suspicion. The examination was a somewhat lengthy one, but Mr. Bartlett succeeded in showing that the insolvent had fairly stated the situation he was in, and had not concealed anything. Mr. Whitehouse pointed out several adverse statements which the insolvent had made. He was, however, discharged."

"John Hartill Palmer, of the HOPE AND ANCHOR INN, Queen-street, Bilston, in the county of Stafford, and previously thereto of the RED COW INN, Bridge-street, Bilston aforesaid, Licensed Victualler, Retail Brewer, and Dealer in Tobacco, and also working as a Mill Furnaceman, having been adjudged bankrupt under a Petition for adjudication of Bankruptcy, filed in the County Court of Staffordshire, holden at Wolverhampton, on the 30th day of October, 1865, is hereby required to surrender himself to Charles Gallimore Brown, Esq., a Registrar of the said Court, at the first meeting of creditors to be held before the said Registrar, on the 20th day of November instant, at twelve o'clock at noon precisely, at the said Court. Charles Gallimore Brown, Esq., of Wolverhampton, is the Official Assignee, and Mr. N. B. Jackson, of Bilston, is the Solicitor acting in the bankruptcy."

"Bankruptcy. At the Wolverhampton County Court, on Monday, before A. M. Skinner, Esq, QC (Judge), John Harthill Palmer, ex-publican, of Bilston, supported by Mr. Jackson, for Mr. Cresswell, came up at the County Court for his final order, as a publican. Mr. Langman opposed for a creditor named Austin, and elicited that out of £187, bankrupt owed Austin £112 8s 4d. £25 of that amount was for a gig, which bankrupt said he bought to drive his wife out in for the benefit of her health. Mr. Langman asked that the discharge should be conditional upon bankrupt paying something out of his income, as a forgerman, for the benefit of his creditors. The learned Judge said the Court was placed in a most anomalous position. There he had been sitting all the morning compelling people to pay their debts, and now he was sitting in the same Court to administer a legal machinery by which people were relieved from the necessity of doing so. He put it to the bankrupt whether such a state of things was not as abominable as anomalous, and whether he would not make his creditors an offer. After some hesitation defendant offered to pay £25 in twelve months. The offer was accepted, and bankrupt was conditionally discharged."

“Ellen Danks was charged with having on Sunday night assaulted Lucy Clark and Harriet Kinsey.

Complainant stated that she was staying at the HOPE AND ANCHOR INN, Duck Lane. On Sunday night shortly after ten o’clock, and after the house was closed, there was a commotion in the street in front of the house. She heard Mrs. Kinsey, the landlady, shout, and she went out to see what was the matter. She was met by the defendant, who struck her without any provocation. Mrs. Kinsey’s story was of similar character. She said defendant struck her in the face, and also used bad language. Complainant’s sister gave corroborative evidence.

Defendant, on being asked if she wished to question witness, said she never saw either witness or complainant.

Elizabeth Reynolds, called for the defence, said she saw nothing, but she admitted that she was fifty yards away.

Defendant said what caused the disturbance was the fact that her son frequented the house and spent nearly all his money there, giving her little or nothing, although he had a blind father.

Arthur Upton said he was present on the occasion in question, and saw defendant holding her son, who was under the influence of drink. Witness took him home, but he did not see defendant strike any one.

Defendant said she was sent for to fetch her son home, but when she got to the house she found that they had all been turned out. Mrs. Kinsey used abusive language towards her, but she denied having assaulted either of the complainants.

Mr. Tildesley said it appeared that defendant had received a good deal of provocation, but still she ought not to take the law into her own hands. She would be fined 1s, and she would have to pay 6s costs in each case.”

"An inquiry into the death of Zechariah Bayliss (62), miner, of 32, Beckett Street, Bilston, which occurred suddenly whilst on his way home from work at the Dairy Farm Colliery, Bilston, on Monday, was opened by the County Coroner, Mr. T. A. Stokes, at the PRINCE OF WALES INN, Queen Street, Bilston, yesterday.

Mrs. Bayliss said that her husband was in his usual health when he left for work at 6am on Monday. In reply to a juror witness said he had several times complained of fire-damp at his work, and she thought he would have died on Saturday if they had not got him some brandy. He also complained that his work made his heart bump very bad.

Joseph Shortland a driver for Messrs. Thompson Bros, said he found Bayliss sitting by the roadside in an exhausted condition. He asked for a lift in the cart, and witness assisted him into it. Shortly afterwards he became prostrate, and witness tried to force brandy into his mouth, but he would not take it. He died soon afterwards.

George Smith, underground manager at the colliery, said that Bayliss had never complained to him of damp in the pit, and witness had never traced its presence. Deceased complained to him on Monday of feeling poorly, so he told him he could spare him from his work, and the cager took him to the surface.

The colliery manager, William Mansell, said he saw Bayliss several times during the morning, and also when he was brought to the surface, but he made no complaint of damp.

Mr. Pritchard, who appeared for deceased's relatives, submitted that it was a case where a post mortem should be made.

The Coroner: A probable cause of death is sufficient for me. I am prepared to take a verdict of Natural Causes. He had, with some trouble, tried to find if there had been any trace of fire-damp in the pit, but there was no record in the colliery book of any instance where the ventilation of the pit was anything but perfect.

Mr. Pritchard said it was not the idea of compensation. Deceased had complained of fire-damp, and it was not unreasonable that the family should wish the matter clearly settled.

Eventually the inquest was adjourned until today."

“Staffordshire Adjourned Sessions.....

Joseph Goodwin, aged 28, a boatman, was indicted for stealing at Bilston, from the person of John Drake, an Irish pig dealer, one £5 note, ten sovereigns, and several pieces of silver. Mr. Kynnersley conducted the prosecution, and Mr. Rupert Kettle the defence.

It appeared, from the evidence for the prosecution, that on the 10th of December last the prisoner met with the prosecutor in the neighbourhood of Tipton, and walked with him a distance of nine miles, after which they separated; that at a subsequent part of the day the prisoner looked into the tap windows at the QUEENS ARMS, in Bilston, where the prosecutor was sitting, and that prosecutor called him into the tap room, when they both had some ale and beer together. In the course of the conversation the prisoner complained to the prosecutor that he was very poor. Prosecutor fell asleep, and remained in that state for some time Prosecutor found that he had been robbed of his purse. He had taken out his purse in the presence of the prisoner, before he fell asleep.

Prosecutor, on discovering his loss, immediately gave information to the police, and described the person and dress. The prisoner, in the course of the night, was taken to the police station in consequence of being found drunk in the street. He was not at first recognised by Inspector Thompson to be the man who had been described by the prosecutor, as he then had on a new flannel boatman's shirt over his other clothes. It was, however, subsequently discovered that his under garments corresponded with the description given by the prosecutor.

Thompson made inquiries, and ascertained that on the evening of the robbery the prisoner had bought a new flannel shirt, and also a silk handkerchief, at the shop of Mr. Edward Maybury, at Bilston, clothier. He offered a £5 note in payment for those articles. Mrs. Maybury sent the note to be changed at the shop of Mr. Howes, grocer, and afterwards gave the prisoner £4 7s 9d change, retaining 12s 3d for the articles which he had bought. It was also ascertained that on the same evening the prisoner purchased a flannel shirt and a waistcoat at the shop of Mr. Thomas Jones, at Bilston. He paid for them in silver, but took a purse (which contained sixteen sovereigns and a half) from his old waistcoat, and put it into the new one, which he then put on.

The prosecutor swore to the note produced by Inspector Thompson, who had received it from Mr. Howes. He identified it by the letter 'D' written in red ink. Mrs. Maybury could not swear positively to the note, but recollected that the one she received from the prisoner was a note with the word Wolverhampton at the top, and that it was one issued by the Bilston Banking Company.

Mr. Kettle addressed the jury at some length on behalf of the prisoner, and called the mother of the prisoner to prove that on the day before the robbery she gave her son sixteen sovereigns and a half, which would at once account for the fact of his having been in possession of so much money.

Mr. Kynnersley replied, remarking on the nature of the defence, which, he submitted, was a most improbable story, taking into consideration the position in life of the prisoner's mother.

Major Chetwynd (before whom this case was tried) having summed up the evidence, the jury turned round, and after consulting together for about a minute, returned a verdict of guilty.

The learned Chairman, in passing sentence, told the prisoner that although he had not been previously convicted, yet that was not the first time he had been in the county prison. At a sessions in 1842, he was accused of stealing some articles at Pattingham, but he was not then convicted. The offence of which he had now been found guilty was very common, and was rather on the increase in this county; it was one of a serious nature, and must be visited with an adequate punishment. It was necessary that the Court should make an example of him, in order that others might be deterred from the commission of similar offences. The sentence of the Court was that he be transported for seven years.”

"Housewarming at the QUEENS ARMS INN.

The opening dinner of Miss Booth, the hostess of the QUEENS ARMS INN, Bilston, was on Tuesday evening celebrated with much eclat. Upwards of forty gentlemen sat down to dinner, amongst whom were comprised many of the most respectable tradesmen of the town The repast was served up in excellent style. Numerous toasts were proposed, during which the 'Allied Commanders in the Crimea' figured prominently, and some excellent songs and recitations were delivered by Messrs. John Whitehead, W. Fellows, John Baker, O. Batte, &c. The healths of 'The Emperor and Empress of the French' were also proposed, and heartily responded to. The dinner comprised all the delicacies of the season, and a well-deserved tribute of grateful feeling was accorded to Miss Booth, after her health had been duly toasted."

"The anniversary of the Loyal Lodge of United Brothers was celebrated on Saturday last, at Bilston. About seventy persons enjoyed an excellent dinner at the QUEENS ARMS, and afterwards passed a very pleasant evening, under the presidency of Mr. Mills, supported by Mr. Sabury, the secretary of the society, in the vice-chair. The society is in a flourishing state, having upwards of £300 in the bank."

The Era 24/4/1859

"On Wednesday last a large number of the respectable inhabitants of Bilston met at the QUEENS ARMS, Bilston, to celebrate the anniversary of the birth of Shakspeare. Mr. Waterhouse, solicitor, occupied the chair, and Mr. Batte the vice-chair. After amply justice had been done to a capital dinner, and the usual loyal and patriotic toasts given, the Chairman, in an able speech, proposed 'The immortal memory of Shakspeare.' Regretting as he did that the works of the great bard were sometime blemished by coarseness – a defect belonging to the character of the times he lived in, not to that of the man – he pointed out the universal appreciation of his writings as the best evidence of the greatness of a genius of which not only England but the world had reason to be proud....."

Wolverhampton Chronicle 8/6/1859

“About half-past twelve o’clock on Saturday last a fall of coal occurred in Mr. W. H. Sparrow’s colliery at Beasecroft, near Bilston, by which four men working in a gate road were completely entombed. The rest of their comrades escaped, and raised an alarm. A number of men set vigorously to work, and about one o’clock on Sunday morning succeeded in extricating John Clayton, residing in Bilston, who, however, survived but a short time. In a little while after they managed to open a communication with other two, who had been at the farther end of the gate road, and to pass food, drink, light, and tobacco to them; and about four on Sunday morning they were also got out, uninjured. The body of the fourth man, Jabez Hough, of Portobello, was not reached until Monday afternoon. It was evident from the nature of the injuries that in this case death must have been instantaneous. The body of this man now lies at Portobello awaiting a coroner’s inquiry, which will be held this day (Wednesday).

The inquest on the body of John Clayton was held at the QUEENS ARMS, Bilston, yesterday (Tuesday) afternoon before W. H Phillips, Esq.

Thomas Lloyd, a miner, who was employed in ‘holing’ down the pit, about four yards from the spot where the accident occurred, deposed that the deceased and Jabez Hough were engaged in building a ‘cog’ up when suddenly a mass of coal gave way, completely burying them beneath it. There was plenty of timber about the spot where the accident occurred, and witness considered it pretty safe to working. There had been a fall of coal on the Friday night, and the deceased was putting up the cog on the further side of the hole to prevent another fall.

Joseph Langham, one of the two men who were extricated alive, stated that he had been engaged by the bailiff to cleanse the air shaft. At the time witness was passing the hole to go to his work the deceased man, Jabez Hough, said, ‘Hurry through that hole lad, for it is na very safe.’ Witness was in the windway at the time the accident occurred, and did not know he was closed in until three o’clock, when he was going to dinner, and ascertained there had been a fall.

In answer to a question by the Coroner, the ground bailiff stated that the Inspector of Mines had not yet examined the pit, and the inquiry was accordingly adjourned for a week.”

“The adjourned inquest on the body of John Clayton, who, with two other men, was killed by a fall of coal and dirt, in a pit at Peacroft Colliery, at Portobello, belonging to Mr. Sparrow, was held at the QUEENS ARMS INN, Bilston, on Friday last, before W.H. Phillips, Esq, deputy-coroner. The only additional witness examined was Mr. Longridge, the Government Inspector of Mines for the district, who stated that he had examined the pit, and there did not appear to be any lack of timber therein; but he thought that if the timber had been used with ‘settings’ instead of with ‘lids,’ this would have tended to prevent the fall, or at least to have given the deceased notice to get out of the way before the fall. He had, however, no reason to believe that the accident was the result of negligence on the part of the doggy or any one else. He had recommended to Mr. Williams, the ground bailiff, that ‘settings’ should be used in future, and he had promised to carry out the suggestion, not only in the pit in question, but in all the others belonging to Mr. Sparrow in which the roof was not good.

The Jury, without hesitation, returned a verdict of Accidental Death, but wished the Coroner to inform Mr. Williams that they were desirous that the recommendation of the Government Inspector should be carried out.

Mr. Williams was called in, and the Coroner conveyed to him the recommendation of the Jury, adding that it was particularly important that every exertion should be used in the pit to prevent any further loss of life, as Clayton’s was the third or fourth death that had occurred in the same mine.

Mr. Williams said that the wish of the Inspector should be carried out, and Mr. Sparrow wished him to say so.

It appeared, from an observation made by the Coroner, that a good deal of feeling has existed at Portobello in reference to the accident, it having been rumoured that there was not sufficient timber in the pit at the time of the accident.”

“One of the most melancholy instances of sudden death which it has ever been our lot to record took place in Bilston on Friday night last. A number of gentlemen, among whom was Mr. Samuel Mallin, builder, had been spending the evening at the QUEENS ARMS INN, and Mr. Mallin became somewhat the worse for drink. Shortly after eleven o’clock he appeared very drowsy, and his companions endeavoured to rouse him, but without effect. At length it became evident that his drowsiness was something more serious than they at first supposed, and he was wrapped in blankets and conveyed to his own home. Mr. Best, surgeon, was sent for, and was in attendance almost immediately, but death ensued before his arrival. It was generally known that deceased was of very intemperate habits, and on that very morning he was seen in the streets in a state of inebriety.

An inquest was held at the SHIP AND RAINBOW, on Monday morning last, and the first witness called was Isaac Cole, who stated that the deceased was his brother-in-law. He was a very healthy person, and although witness had known him for thirty years he had never known him to have a serious illness.

Maria Vernon, servant at the QUEENS ARMS, proved the fact of the deceased having been at that house on the night referred to, and that she waited upon the company with whom the deceased was spending the evening. Deceased had two glasses of ale for his supper, and three or four glasses of whisky afterwards, but the last glass was scarcely tasted. After the deceased became drowsy witness applied wet cloths to his temples, but could not waken him, and at last his friends agreed to take him home. A barrow was then procured, and a rug and his great coat being put in it the deceased was lifted in and placed with his head towards the wheel. Mr. Viles started with the barrow, and another gentleman was then supporting deceased's head. The barrow was used because there was nothing else at hand. Mr. Bowen, Mr. Viles, Mr. Whitehead, Mr O. Batte, and Mr. Guyon left with the deceased.

A girl named Sayliss, servant at deceased's house, deposed to the fact of her master having been brought home in the barrow described, and said that he never breathed or moved after he was laid on the sofa.

At this stage of the inquiry the inquest was adjourned until Friday next for a post mortem examination. Mr. O. Batte volunteered a statement, but the Coroner declined to receive it until after the post mortem examination."

AND

".....Mr. Henry Best, surgeon, who had made the post mortem examination, states that he found the brain very much congested, and the stomach and liver much diseased. His opinion was that the deceased had died from congestive apoplexy, induced by the excessive use of intoxicating drinks. There was no mark of external injury. The jury returned a verdict accordingly, adding a censure on the conduct of the parties in whose company the deceased had been, and who had conveyed him home."

"A case of Francis Udall, a publican living in Bilston [ELEPHANT AND CASTLE], against Mr. C. Wright, occupier of the QUEENS HOTEL, in the same town, was argued today on an important point raised by Mr. Thurstans, the defendant's attorney. The plaintiff was supported by Mr. Claydon.

The facts were simply these. In November, 1857, Udall, Wright, and a man named Burgess became sureties for a Mr. Hobdy, who has since left the country, on two promissory notes of £70 and £30. Udall was afterwards called upon to fulfil the bond, and he did so, paying the whole, or nearly the whole of the £100. Burgess afterwards undertook to repay his share, and Udall now sought to recover £31 12s, the share of the other co-surety.

In defence, Mr. Thurstans argued that defendant was protected by a certificate in Bankruptcy, under the date of January, 1860; the petition, it should be added, was filed in May, 1859. Mr. Claydon argued, first that the certificate afforded no protection whatever, but subsequently he maintained, and it was on this point the case was decided, that the certificate only afforded partial protection. Nearly two-thirds of the £100 were paid by Udall before defendant filed his petition, and the Court could consider that money to be the shares of Udall and Burgess; the remaining third was paid after defendant's bankruptcy, therefore defendant was liable. The 52nd section of the Bankruptcy Act would not apply in a case like the present – between surety and co-surety, only between surety and principal, and in support of this he cited the case of 'Clements and Longman.' Mr. Thurstans maintained the 117th sec. of the 13 and 14 Vic. provided the debts payable on contingency could be assessed by the Court of Bankruptcy; and the Act further provided that where they were not assessable, the only remedy of the creditor would be to prove his debt, and receive dividends in case the contingency arose, and those dividends should be given without disturbing former dividends, payable to other creditors. Mr. Thurstans further argued that the defendant was only liable at the most for one-third the amount paid after the bankruptcy. His Honour considered that the section of Victoria referred to by Mr. Thurstans was a re-enactment of a section in the case cited by Mr. Claydon. He was, however, of opinion that it was not competent to the plaintiff to appropriate payments he had paid before the bankruptcy in discharge of his own liability only, but he was entitled to prove under the bankruptcy for the defendant's share of that amount. He should consequently give judgement for a third of the sum paid by plaintiff since defendant's bankruptcy, which would be £13 15s 8d."

"At Bilston Police court, on Friday, a man named Seth White was charged with having stolen several billiard balls from a public house at West Bromwich, kept by a Mr. George W. Bayley, where the prisoner had been employed as a billiard marker in the billiard-room. He suddenly disappeared from Mr. Bayley's a few weeks ago, and as it appears afterwards obtained a similar post, as billiard marker, at the house of Mr. Wright, the QUEENS ARMS public house, in Bilston. He sold the balls he had stolen from West Bromwich to Mr. Wright, and after remaining in his new situation a few days he again absconded, and after he had gone a silk dress belonging to Mrs. Wright was missing. Information was given to the police, and they succeeded in apprehending the prisoner a few days ago, and evidence was now brought forward to show that he had been dealing with the dress above referred to shortly after he left his situation at the QUEENS ARMS. This formed a second charge against him. He pleaded guilty to both charges, and was sentenced to two months' imprisonment for each offence."

‘I beg to submit to the Magistrates the attached list of licensed victuallers who have been complained against during the year. Twenty-five have been convicted, and three have paid costs; one had been convicted three times, and five convicted twice. This is a large increase on last year’s list; but I think it has arisen from the police being more particular in reporting cases of permitting drunkenness – as it was found to be an evil rather on the increase. I believe it has caused landlords to be more careful in supplying drink to persons intoxicated.’

"The Adjourned Licensing Sessions.....

The persons who had been convicted during the last twelve months for offences against their licenses, the renewals of which were withheld until today, now appeared before the Bench, and there being no further complaint as to the conduct of their houses in the interval the magistrates granted the renewals."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 12/5/1879

"During the night of the 25th, or in the morning of the 26th March last, the booking office of the Great Western Railway Station at Tipton was broken into and two five pound Bank of England notes, £5 3s 6d in cash, two bags and a timepiece were carried off. On the 27th March the two notes were passed within an hour or so to two clothiers in Birmingham residing within a few doors of each other. One of these notes it has been discovered was given for a suit of clothes by Samuel Thomas, landlord of the QUEENS ARMS INN, Wellington Road, Bilston, and this circumstance, connected with certain contradictory statements which have been made, has induced the railway detectives who have the case in hand to obtain a warrant, and Mr. Thomas was arrested on Friday afternoon by Inspector Evans, of the Bilston division. Later on in the evening he was taken before Mr. W. H. Rogers, one of the county justices at Wolverhampton, where he was charged with breaking and entering the Tipton station on the date mentioned above and stealing the two notes and other articles. The prisoner was admitted to bail, and is to appear before the Bilston magistrates on Friday next."

Alfred Oswin G. Stone died in the 3rd quarter of 1885.

“We have to record the death of Mr. Alfred Osborne Gartside Stone, late of the QUEENS ARMS HOTEL, Lichfield Street, Bilston. Mr. Stone, who is a native of the neighbourhood of Wednesbury, when quite a young man went out to the Colonies, where he remained until some three months ago. His health then failing he was advised by his medical attendant to return to England to try the effect of his native air. He thereupon took his residence in Bilston, where he was attended by Dr. Larkin. This did not, however, produce the desired change, and he died on the 2nd inst, leaving a widow and six children to mourn his loss. The body was interred on the 5th, at Wednesbury Cemetery, where several of the deceased gentleman's friends are buried. Mr. George Edwards supplied the oak coffin.”

“We have received an interesting letter from Mrs. Stone, the second person of that name who occupied the QUEENS ARMS, announcing her safe arrival, with her family, at Timarn, in New Zealand. Mrs. Stone, some year and a half ago, kept the leading hotel, which is her own property, in Timarn, and made a voyage to this country on the recommendation of a medical practitioner, with a view to the restoration of her husband's health. The voyage was of temporary benefit only, and the late Mr. Stone died in Bilston within a few months of his arrival in this country. After enjoying so long the more genial climate of New Zealand, and the greater facilities of doing remunerative business which exist in colonial communities, Mrs. Stone found residence in England unattractive, and so she shipped berths for herself and family in one of the P and O's steamers in May last, and as we now learn has reached her destination.....”

“Mr. T. H. Stokes held an inquest yesterday at the QUEENS ARMS, Bilston, touching the death of Horace Bowen (26), Wellington Road, Bilston, who inflicted fatal injuries upon himself with a razor at his home on the 25th inst. The deceased was the organist at St. Luke’s Church, Bilston, and had resided with his widowed mother and his brothers. Mr. Roland Tildesley, of Willenhall represented the relatives of the deceased.

Mr. K. Bowen stated that on the 17th inst his brother cut his throat with a razor in his bedroom. Several stitches were sewn in the wound. Satisfactory progress was made, the deceased keeping to his bed until Wednesday afternoon last, when he went downstairs and played the piano. Later in the evening, witness stated, the maid went upstairs and asked the deceased if he required anything. He replied, ‘No,’ and his voice was then very weak. The witness then went into the bedroom and found his brother in an armchair. He said, ‘Don’t worry, I’ve done it properly this time. I’ll do it again.’ Death took place a few minutes later.

Staffordshire Advertiser 3/9/1910

“John Davies, aged 27, alias Simeon Raistrick, who said he came from Bradford, was charged with stealing money. He went into the bar of the QUEENS ARMS INN, Wellington Street, Bilston, and sat down without asking for refreshment. A few minutes afterwards the landlord went into another room, and on returning he saw the prisoner leaning over the counter and taking money from the till. He seized him and made him drop 1s 6d from his hand and ordered him to leave. The prisoner soon afterwards was seen by Walter Carson trying to force his way into a house and told him to desist. Prisoner then went up an entry, Carson following him. Prisoner next got on to a wall and was seized by Carson, and they both fell into an ashpit. Police-constable Wright arrived on the scene and arrested prisoner, on whom 3s 9d was found. He stated that he had been trying to earn a living and that ‘he would lose nine months ticket of leave.’ He was committed for trial at the Staffordshire Quarter sessions.”

Dudley Chronicle 8/11/1923

“The popular winter pastime of football has always claimed many adherents at Bilston, and the townspeople have always had the advantage of seeing it played under very favourable auspices. Formerly there were two clubs – the Bilston Town FC, and the Bilston Athletic – running as very competitive interests. On occasions when the two clubs met, probably in one or other of the cup competitions, very keen local rivalry existed, not only between the players themselves, but amongst their respective supporters and admirers. In the background was another club which continued many years, this being known as the Bilston Wanderers The Town and Athletic Clubs at length came to realise they could not run as separate organisations, and in 1893 a meeting was held at the club-house – the QUEENS ARMS INN, Wellington Road – and the outcome was the birth of the present Bilston United, each club agreeing to give equal support to the new combination. For a season they ran as a non-Association club, but in 1894-5 the joined the Association and were elected to the Walsall League.....”

"At the Wednesbury Police Court, yesterday, Samuel Gaunt, lodging at the RAILWAY INN, Brook Street, Bilston, was charged with working a horse in an unfit state and while the animal was suffering from illness, on the 3rd inst. Defendant said Mr. Hackwood, veterinary surgeon, of Wednesbury, had told him last December to work the horse; it would do it good. The magistrates refused to believe anything of the kind, and sentenced the defendant to pay a fine of 40s and costs, or to suffer six weeks' hard labour."

AND

".....Samuel Gaunt, general dealer, Brook Street, Bilston, was fined 40s and costs, or six weeks' imprisonment. He pleaded that he had had the horse in the stables for three months, and that he had only recently taken it out again by the orders of the veterinary surgeon."

Wolverhampton Chronicle 9/9/1840

"An adjourned meeting of Magistrates was held on Friday at the Public Office, for the purpose of considering the applications for public house licenses, and new licenses were granted to the following applicants.....
John Richards, Hall Fields, Bilston."

Samuel Holloway was also a boat builder.

Staffordshire Advertiser 28/10/1843

Samuel Holloway, late of Bilston, in the Parish of Wolverhampton, in the county of Stafford, Boat Builder, Licensed Brewer and Retailer of Beer and Tobacco, sued with John Holloway, the elder, of Bilston aforesaid, being co-partners in trade in the business of Boat Builders.”

“A court for the relief of Insolvent Debtors was held on Monday and Tuesday, in the Shire Hall, Stafford, before John Greathed Harris, Esq. commissioner, when the following cases were heard and disposed of.....

Discharged forthwith Samuel Holloway.”

Bells Life in London and Sporting Chronicle 22/2/1846

“T. Lowe of Bilston had a Novice he will back to run any novice of the same place a quarter of a mile, for from £3 to £5 a side.

William Harrison of Shropshire Row will run John Shorthouse of Hall Green six score yards, for from £1 to £3 a side.

The matches can be made at Mr. Samuel Holloway’s, RAILWAY TAVERN, Hall Fields, near Bilston, tomorrow (Monday) night, between seven and ten o’clock.”

Bells Life in London and Sporting Chronicle 6/2/1848

“Bob Hill of Bradley will fight Thomas Corno of Darlaston, for £15 or £20 a side, at 8st 10lb or 8st 11lb; and if this does not suit, he will accommodate Samuel Newell of Manchester on the same terms. Either of the above matches can be made on Friday next, between the hours of seven and ten o’clock in the evening, at the RAILWAY TAVERN, Hall Fields, near Bilston.”

Shrewsbury Chronicle 21/12/1849

“On Monday last an inquest was held at the RAILWAY TAVERN, Hall Fields, near Bilston, before W. W. Ward, Esq. officiating for T. M. Phillips, Esq. coroner, on the body of John Baldwin, butty collier at Heathen Coalpit, in Bradley Lodge, about thirty-nine years of age, who was killed on the previous Thursday by falling down a pit through the breaking of the chain of the skip in which he was ascending the shaft. It appeared that when he got about half way up the chain broke, and the unfortunate man fell to the bottom. As he was falling one of the witnesses heard him say ‘Oh, Lord!’ and when he got to the bottom he said ‘Amen’ twice. Another collier was called to the spot, and he found deceased lying on his back, with his feet on the skip, and the tackle across his feet. There was a wound underneath his chin. He breathed a few times, and then expired. One of the workmen had noticed some time ago that the foot hook link was bent, and considering it unsafe, mentioned the circumstance to deceased. On the Tuesday preceding the accident three men and two boys were drawn up by the same chain out of the pit. It was stated at the inquest that it was the duty of the butty to report to the bailiff when the chains were unsafe. The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

"An inquest was held on Saturday morning last by T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, at the RAILWAY TAVERN, Hall Green, on the body of Martin Walters, a miner, about 45 years of age, who was killed by a fall of 'bat' while at work in the Walbrook colliery. The deceased's back was broken, and he died on the following day. Verdict, Accidental Death."

"At Bilston Public Office, on Tuesday, Thomas Humpage, a miner, residing at Darlaston, was committed to the sessions for stealing a pair of stockings and a glass, the property of Mr. Samuel Holloway, RAILWAY TAVERN, Hall Green. The prisoner went to the house of the prosecutor about seven o'clock on the morning of the 23rd of December, under pretence of lighting his pipe, and during the absence of the servant from the taproom, managed to steal the articles in question, and leave the house. The prisoner was apprehended about an hour afterwards, near the works of Messrs. Thorneycroft, with the property in his possession."

Thomas Humpage (pleaded guilty), for stealing a pair of stockings and a goblet, the property of Samuel Holloway, at Bilston."

"On Friday week, at Bilston Police Court, Thomas Kirkham, charged with stealing a jacket, a pair of spectacles, and a bottle of rum, from the house of Samuel Holloway, licensed victualler, at Hall Green, was committed for trial."

"Staffordshire Adjourned Quarter Sessions.....

Thomas Kirkland, 18, shingler, was indicted for stealing, on the 25th of August, one pair of spectacles and one bottle containing three half pints of rum, the property of Samuel Holloway; also one black cloth jacket and one pair of gloves, the property of Thomas Holloway, at Bilston. Mr. Kenealey conducted the prosecution; the prisoner was undefended.

The prosecutor keeps a public house, at Bilston, and on the night in question the prisoner, who was drinking there, was seen by a person named John Pierce, in the house at the time, to pick up a pair of spectacles and put them in his pocket. In consequence of information given by the witness, the prisoner was taken into custody, and afterwards the other articles mentioned in the indictment were traced to him, and identified as having been stolen.

The jury found the prisoner guilty. He was, however, recommended to mercy by the prosecutors, and the Court, in consideration of this being his first conviction, sentenced him to two months' imprisonment with hard labour."

“The annual meeting of Magistrates for the purpose of the renewal and granting of licenses for the township of Bilston and the neighbourhood was held at the Bilston Police Court on Friday last.....

Mr. Bowen applied for a license for the ELEPHANT AND CASTLE at Hall Fields, occupied by Mr. Brywood. Mr. Bowen dwelt at some length upon the requirements of the district, and with respect to the house itself said it was commodious, was provided with ample stabling, and in every way adapted for a licensed house.

Mr. Shipman, who was instructed to oppose the application, said that within half a mile of Mr. Brywood's house there were already two licensed houses, besides a number of beerhouses. The persons for whom Mr. Shipman opposed were Mr. Knight and Mr. Holloway, both of whom occupy licensed houses in the same street as the present applicant. Refused.”

“Bankruptcy Proceedings.....

At the Wolverhampton County Court, yesterday, Samuel Holloway Leech, licensed victualler, RAILWAY TAVERN, Hall Street, Bradley, attended for his public examination. Mr. Lister represented the debtor.

The statement of affairs showed the liabilities to be £431, and the assets £84. The debtor commenced business as a licensed victualler in 1869. In 1877 he purchased the RAILWAY TAVERN for £500, which he mortgaged for £450, and subsequently sold the house for £415. From 1880 to January last he was also employed as an iron roller. The debtor knew that he was insolvent in September last, but thought he would be able to pay his debts when trade revived. It was to bad trade and bad debts that he attributed his failure.

The examination was adjourned until May 13.”

“At Bilston Adjourned Licensing Sessions, on Friday of last week, among the applications was one for the removal of the license of the RAILWAY INN, Bradley, to premises proposed to be erected at the junction of Burton Road and Broadway, Sedgley, or alternatively, for a new license at the site.

It was intimated that there was opposition from local residents, who appointed Mrs. J. L. Cort, of 270, The Broadway, to speak for them. Mr. A. D. Dallow also opposed on behalf of the GREEN DRAGON, a licensed house some 700 yards away.

Mr. O. L. Bergendorff, who appeared for the applicants, said a canvas in the area had been taken and this showed an overwhelming majority of people in favour of a public house being erected on the site and he submitted that a more ideal spot for one could not be found.

After hearing witnesses for the applicants and also the opposition, the justices declined to sanction the removal for a new license.”

“An inquest was held on Thursday last, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, at the sign of the RED COW, Bilston, on the body of James Painter, a child aged about three years and six months old, who was run over by the Greyhound coach, while it was passing through Oxford Street, Bilston, on the previous Saturday evening. The coach was going at the rate of about five miles an hour, and the deceased came suddenly from behind a waggon, for the purpose of crossing the road; the near leader of the coach knocked him down, and the near hind wheel of the coach went over his body. He was much hurt, and notwithstanding medical aid, died on Tuesday last. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 22/11/1848

“On Wednesday morning last one of those fatal occurrences so common in mining districts – death from the fall of a large quantity of coal – took place in a coalpit in Sparrow’s field, near Bilston. Two men and the doggy of the pit went down a little before six o’clock. One of the men, Benjamin Rowley, was requested by the doggy to prop with timber that part of the pit where he was about to commence work. Rowley tried the spot, and said it was safe enough without propping. He then commenced his work, which was ‘holing,’ but in about a quarter of an hour afterwards a large quantity of coal fell upon him from the roof of the pit, the removal of which occupied three quarters of an hour. Rowley was found to be quite dead, being dreadfully bruised and crushed. At the inquest held on the body on Friday last, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, at the RED COW INN, Bilston, one of the men who was at work in the pit said it was the duty of the deceased to prop the roof, and no blame could be attached to the doggy or the owners of the pit. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 6/12/1848

“On Wednesday last an inquest was held at the RED COW, Bridge Street, Bilston, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, on the body of Henry Howell, five years of age, who on that day fortnight accidentally set fire to his clothes whilst playing with a stick, the end of which he put into the grate during the absence of his mother. The child lingered until the following Sunday, when death took place from the injuries he has received. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

Birmingham Journal 26/1/1850

"On Friday last, T. M. Phillips, Esq, Coroner, held an inquest at the RED COW INN, Bilston, on the body of Enoch Williams, a miner, aged nineteen years. On Wednesday last, the deceased was employed at the bottom of Richard Rudge's coal pit, in the coalfield of Mr. D. Jones, taking out the curb and bricks, for the purpose of filling up the shaft, the pit being an old one. Rudge had been down the shaft several times in the course of the day, assisting the deceased, but in the afternoon, when Williams was alone, the whole of the brickwork lining the shaft suddenly fell in and upon him. The banksman was at the mouth of pit at the time, and the weight of the brickwork falling upon the 'bowk' caused the earth where he was standing to give way, and the windlass struck him with great force and knocked him down, a quantity of soil falling down the pit. Five men were immediately set to work to extricate the deceased, and between three and four o'clock on the following morning they came near to his head, when Williams said, 'Lads, I'm all right, but my legs feel stiff.' Almost immediately, a quantity of 'running sand' broke in on the side of the shaft, and smothered the deceased. The workmen were with difficulty rescued, but the body of the deceased was not recovered until Thursday morning. It appears that when the bricks and curb fell, the shaft was not more than six or seven yards deep, and that the deceased filled up the shaft as he took the bricks from the side of the pit. The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death."

John H. Palmer, RED COW, Bridge Street.”

Birmingham Daily Post 16/11/1864

“An inquest was held at the RED COW INN, Bilston, yesterday, on the body of a man, 32 years of age, named Edward Bate, who lived in Stone Street, and who met his death in one of the pits, at the Lunt, on Saturday last. Deceased was driving a loaded skip, when the horse ran against a ‘tree’ that supported the roof of the pit. The roofing fell in, and Bate was killed on the spot. A verdict of Accidental Death was returned.”

London Gazette 7/11/1865

“John Hartill Palmer, of the HOPE AND ANCHOR INN, Queen-street, Bilston, in the county of Stafford, and previously thereto of the RED COW INN, Bridge-street, Bilston aforesaid, Licensed Victualler, Retail Brewer, and Dealer in Tobacco, and also working as a Mill Furnaceman, having been adjudged bankrupt under a Petition for adjudication of Bankruptcy, filed in the County Court of Staffordshire, holden at Wolverhampton, on the 30th day of October, 1865, is hereby required to surrender himself to Charles Gallimore Brown, Esq., a Registrar of the said Court, at the first meeting of creditors to be held before the said Registrar, on the 20th day of November instant, at twelve o'clock at noon precisely, at the said Court. Charles Gallimore Brown, Esq., of Wolverhampton, is the Official Assignee, and Mr. N. B. Jackson, of Bilston, is the Solicitor acting in the bankruptcy.”

George Calloway = George Galloway

“At the Police Court, on Monday, before Mr. Spooner, George Calloway, landlord of the RED COW INN, Bilston, was fined on the information of Mr. Allcorn, Supervisor of Excise, £50 and costs, for attempting to defraud the revenue by making a false entry in the sheet supplied to him by the Excise for marking down the quantity of malt brewed.

The defence was that Calloway’s wife had made the entry, in the absence of her husband; but the Stipendiary said that the defendant was responsible for his wife’s actions.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 5/9/1866

Bilston Division, August 31, 1866.

‘I beg to submit to the Magistrates the attached list of licensed victuallers who have been complained against during the year. Twenty-five have been convicted, and three have paid costs; one had been convicted three times, and five convicted twice. This is a large increase on last year’s list; but I think it has arisen from the police being more particular in reporting cases of permitting drunkenness – as it was found to be an evil rather on the increase. I believe it has caused landlords to be more careful in supplying drink to persons intoxicated.’

H. McCrea, Superintendent.

Black List.....

George Galloway, RED COW, Bridge Street, Bilston left over until the adjourned licensing meeting on the 28th of September.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 31/10/1866

“Yesterday, at Bilston Police Court, John Proffitt, keeper of the RED COW INN, was summoned for allowing drunkenness in his house. The offence was proved by a police officer, who visited the defendant’s house on Saturday last, and found several persons creating a disturbance there.

The Magistrates imposed a fine of 10s and costs.”

John Proffitt and John Palmer appear in the same 1868 Directory.

“Staffordshire Winter Assizes.....

Joseph Gundry, 25, puddler, and William Cox, 23, labourer, were indicted for feloniously assaulting Joseph Cotterill, at the township of Bilston, and stealing from his person the sum of 3s, a key, and pair of boots, a jacket, and other articles. Mr. Young conducted the prosecution.

The prosecutor is deaf and dumb, and his brother was sworn to interpret his evidence, which was given by means of the usual signs. The prosecutor’s statement was that on the evening of the 7th of November he was at the RED COW public house, at Bilston, and saw the prisoners there. He left about half-past eleven, and the two prisoners went out with him. They took him a distance of about 100 yards and then stripped him of his clothes, with the contents of his pockets, and threw him over a wall. Having done this they ran away and left him. It was a very cold night and he suffered much from exposure. Having lain some time where he was thrown, he made the best of his way home. The prisoners were apprehended four days afterwards by Sergeant Chatfield and Superintendent M’Crea.

The prisoner Grundy, on being called on for his defence, said Mr. James Harper, one of the jury, could speak to his character. Mr. Harper having been sworn, said he was manager of the works where Grundy was employed, and he knew nothing against him. Nothing was known against Grundy before.

The jury found both prisoners guilty, but recommended them to mercy on account of their character.
The Judge (to the jury): What do you think of throwing him over the wall?
The foreman said it appeared in evidence that both prisoners were in a state of intoxication at the time.
The Judge: When the drink is in, the true character comes out. It was a most cruel act. It was very cold weather at the time.
The prisoners begged for mercy.
The Judge: What mercy did you show that unfortunate man when you threw him over the wall? I will defer sentence. I have every desire to pay respect to the recommendation of the jury, but I should like to punish both of you for your cruelty.
The prisoners were afterwards sentenced to six months' imprisonment each."

“An inquest was held on Monday afternoon at the RED COW INN, Bridge Street, Bilston, before W. H. Phillips, Esq, touching the death of an infant named John Sanders, whose parents reside in Stone Street, Bilston.

William Henry Sanders, the father, said deceased was about three months old. He was taken to bed on Tuesday night last, and about half past four was found dead. The child had been delicate from birth, and as long as its mother was able to attend to it she did so, but she was very ill, and its grandmother had recently brought it up by hand. The witness had made no application to the parish for relief for the child, but the mother was now being attended to by the parish doctor. He had been out of work, and when in work he had been doing but a day, or two days a week. The deceased was their first baby.

Hannah Harper, the grandmother, who had attended on the child, gave corroborative evidence.

In reply to the Coroner, the husband said they had but one blanket in the house.

The Jury returned a verdict of Died from Natural Causes, accelerated by want of proper nourishment.

The Coroner said the wife, who was lying in the house on a bench, and was evidently in a critical condition, ought to be removed to the union, where she could be kept warm and properly fed and looked after. The woman would die for want if some such course was not taken. If she was left as she was, the husband would be responsible for what happened, and he (the Coroner) strongly urged upon them to consent to her removal.”

“The workmen employed at the Japan works of Messrs. Lawley, Market Street, Bilston, held their annual feast at the house of Mr. John Proffit, the RED COW INN, Bridge Street. The large room was well filled with a jovial assemblage, and the good things provided disappeared like magic under the attacks made on them. After the feast, the chair and vice-chair were ably filled, and the remainder of the evening was spent in proposing various toasts, and the enjoyment of the musical talent displayed by the company.”

“Step Dancing. An amateur dancing contest, promoted under the auspices of that well-known Bilston sportsman and penciller, Mr. S. Hughes, of the RED COW INN, Bilston, was brought to a satisfactory termination on Tuesday night last, and the large and beautiful saloon was crowded to excess, and after some splendid dancing the winner turned up in young Fellows, the pedestrian, of Bilston. This was followed on Wednesday night by the old custom, house warming, in the shape of a splendid supper, which was well served up by the host and hostess in the good old English style. All the leading gentlemen and sportsmen of Bilston and district honoured the proprietor with their presence. Mr. Hughes wishes to return thanks to all those who attended.”

“It will be seen from our advertising columns that the members of the local Foresters courts have made arrangements for holding a demonstration and fete on a grand scale, in Hall Park recreation grounds, Prouds Lane, Bilston, on Monday next. We may say that brother Joseph Holiberry, of the HORSE AND JOCKEY INN, Church Street, has charge of the stage amusements; and that brother S. Hughes, of the RED COW INN, has been appointed referee for the foot races. There will be a grand procession headed by the Bilston Brass and Reed Band. The committee and members have done all in their power to make the fete a success, and it is earnestly hoped that the public will show their appreciation of their praiseworthy efforts by extending to them a liberal patronage. Should the weather be fine the fete cannot fail to prove a great attraction.”

“The strike in the iron-plate trade of the Birmingham and Wolverhampton district was renewed yesterday, when the men at a number of works came out in opposition to the enforcement of a new list of wages.....

Yesterday a meeting of operatives on strike in the iron-plate trade was held at the RED COW INN, Bilston. Mr. Edward Dallow, who presided, said that one employer in Wolverhampton had that morning torn the list from the wall, and told the men to return to work at the price they came out at. He further stated that he believed the masters' association was nearly, if not quite, broken up. In Birmingham and Wolverhampton, he added, employers were giving way, and, as far as Bilston was concerned, he felt convinced that the men would not return to work unless they obtained the old price and 10 per cent on it. Some of the men at Bilston had determined to wait on the masters and demand a 10 per cent advance.....”

“Another meeting of the men on strike in the iron-plate trade was held yesterday at the RED COW INN, Bilston. There were about 300 present. Mr. Stokes (Birmingham) said that the masters' representatives would not consent to grant the concessions they were contending for. That seemed to be the result, so far as the consultation with the employers' representatives in Birmingham on Thursday was concerned. A resolution pledging the men to play on until their demands are conceded was passed unanimously.”

Mr. S. Hughes’s Bendigo and Mr. Dangerfield’s Spot, for £20.

The bill of fare issued at this arena on Saturday last consisted of a sixty yards £10 pedestrian spin and a fox terrier rabbit coursing engagement, and although the atmosphere was anything but encouraging a fair company of the Black Country knights put in an appearance. The first item brought on the grass was the coursing match, the bobtails engaged being that well-known Bilston sportsman, Mr. S. Hughes, of the RED COW INN, Bridge Street, Bilston, dog, Bendigo, and Mr. Dangerfield’s bitch, Spot, of Roseville, who were matched to contest the best of 11 courses, for £10 a-side. Speculation during the progress of the match was of a very fluctuating character. Some splendid working fur was put down, and from the first rabbit spotted to the last one the affair was of a very close and exciting character. Spot drew the first blood by killing the first, and she then gained the first knockdown blow by capturing the second. The bold Bendigo then commenced to use killing powers by gathering the third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh in succession. Spot, however, was not done with, but raised the hopes of Villeites by killing the eight and ninth. Bendigo then put the kybosh on the affair by securing the tenth, and won.”

“Wolverhampton and District. Victoria Grounds, Rough Hills. Mr. T. Jones and Mr. S. Hughes, for £20.

Perhaps no grounds in the Black Country have played a more prominent part in the drama of pedestrianism than the old-established ‘Vic’ and Wednesday night another important pedestrian spin was added to the long list of interesting matches decided here, when two noted sports met to decide a novel kind of match, the two actors being that well known Midland sportsman and supporter of all kinds of outdoor amusements, Mr. S. Hughes, mine host of the RED COW INN, Bridge Street, Bilston, and Mr. Thomas Jones, a well-known local bookmaker of Bilston (late Wolverhampton), who were matched to run the short distance of thirty yards, for £10 a side, Mr. Hughes being allowed four yards start inside. The affair, though only ratified the same week, crated considerable excitement amongst the sporting fraternity. At one time, be it said, Mr. Hughes could fairly well hold his own at this business, many matches and handicaps having fallen to his share. Of late years, however, he has been proprietor of the RED COW INN, Bilston, and scales about 16st, whilst his opponent, Mr. Jones, only scales some 10st 4lb. The latter, too, is not only well known, but has figured in many handicaps and matches. His last appearance was only a few weeks ago, when Mr. Jones met W. Pearson, of Willenhall, in a sixty yards spin, at these grounds, for £50. Jones, however, had to play second fiddle after a slashing spin. Both men were very sanguine, and on disrobing Mr. Hughes presented the appearance of being on the heavy side. However, he and his numerous friends were confident, and odds of 6 to 4 were freely laid on him. Both were very unsteady on their marks, but eventually they were despatched to a good start, and at one time it looked as though Mr. Hughes would land the odds; Jones, however, got up, and won, amidst excitement, on the post. Mr. John Dudley, of Darlaston, was starter, and that well known Bilston sport and backer of Joe Darby (Champion Jumper of the World), Mr. Tom Robinson of the CHURCH INN, Bilston, was stakeholder and referee.”

“Hall Park Recreation Grounds Bilson.

Complimentary Benefit and Presentation to Mr. E. Pike.

Monday last was set down for the benefit of Mr. E. Pike, which was under the distinguished patronage of Mr. R. K. Fox, proprietor of the New York Police Gazette, and all the leading sportsmen of the Midlands. The programme, which was a lengthy one, consisted of football, pedestrianism, a jumping contest, and performances by the renowned wonder, Joseph Darby, the champion jumper of the world, who was billed to do some special feats. Prior to the commencement a procession was formed at Mr. Sam Hughes’s, the RED COW INN, and, headed by the Blackenhall Heath Star Brass Band, paraded the principal streets of the town, and it was late ere the procession reached the grounds.....

The benefit could hardly be considered a great success, as only about 1,800 paid gate. To make matters worse, owing to the late start, half the programme was only gone through, mainly to the football brigade taking up more time than was necessary.

Darby, who was to have accomplished some special feats, failed to do so on account of darkness coming on. His chief feats were as follows. Jumped off a brick over a chair on to another brick, and cleared a bar 5ft 6in. For this feat he received tremendous applause. Darby also cleared eight chairs in one leap and nine chairs in one leap. Darby’s best feat, however, was jumping over a bar 6ft 6in high, for which he received a rare Black Country ovation.....

At the conclusion of the sports all those concerned in the welfare of Mr. E. Pike adjourned to Mr. Sam Hughes, the RED COW INN, where the presentation was made. This consisted of a splendid diamond ring, which was handed to him by Joe Darby, who in a neat speech said he had known Mr. Pike for several years, and had never met a more straightforward man. Mr. Pike responded in a few well-chosen words. Other speeches followed by Mr. John Taylor and Mr. Bacharah, a well-known Dudley sportsman. The evening ended in harmony. The healths of Joe Darby and Mr. Pike were drunk with much enthusiasm.”

“The Strike in the Iron-plate Trade.

There appears to be very little chance of this dispute being brought to a speedy close.....

A meeting of the men out on strike was held at the RED COW INN, Bilston, yesterday afternoon; Mr. Shorthouse (local secretary) presiding. There were also present Mr. Stokes (president of the society), Mr. Fookes (secretary of the Tinsplate Workers Society, Birmingham), Mr. Stringer (delegate from the Lye district), Mr. Ben Cooper (general secretary of the Birmingham Galvanisers Tinnners Trade Society), and others.

The Local Secretary pointed out that on Wednesday those out on strike would march in procession through the town. He was pleased to state that all the men would receive their strike pay regularly.

Mr. Stokes complimented the men on the fact that although they had been out on strike for several weeks their conduct had been such as to elicit the admiration of the press. The Mayor of Birmingham had done all he could to bring about a settlement, and they had sufficient evidence to show that their opponents – the employers – were not honourable in the matter. They said they would not only defeat the men, but tread upon them. It was not only a question of the 10 per cent bonus, as the employers had stated that there would have to be further concessions.

Mr. Fookes said that the strike affected no less than 1,300 human beings – namely, 450 men, with wives and families. Everything that could be done by the men from a conciliatory, honourable, and reasonable point of view had been resorted to, and still the employers were stubborn.....

The following resolution was carried unanimously: That this meeting pledges itself to remain firm against a reduction of 10 per cent bonus.”

The liabilities were set down as £236 16s 8d, and the deficiency at £194 16s 8d.

The debtor was examined by Mr. C. Hoult, the Deputy Official Receiver, and stated that he was a boot repairer, living in Bond Street, Nuneaton. In January 1896, a petition was filed in the Wolverhampton County Court against his brother-in-law, George Lawrence, of the RED COW INN, Bilston, and he (Clay) then purchased from the trustee the stock, furniture, and fixtures of the public house, and the license was transferred to him. Lawrence continued to manage the house, but all the goods were purchased in Clay’s name. No account was rendered by Lawrence, and the debts accumulated until witness had to consult his solicitors, and the petition was filed. He attributed his failure to taking the public house. The debtor was examined at some length as to moneys which were alleged to belong to his wife and to the business carried on by her, and as the answers were not considered satisfactory, the examination was adjourned.”

Mr. Millard, who had attained his 66th year, was taken with pneumonia in an acute form nine days ago, and his condition early gave rise to anxiety. South Staffordshire Times 16/12/1922

“At Bilston Police Court, yesterday morning, before Messrs. Tom B. Adams and C. W. Harris, George Richards, licensee of the RED COW INN, Fraser Street, Bilston, was charged with permitting drunkenness on his licensed premises on November 28th; with selling drink to a drunken person; with selling intoxicating liquor in contravention of Section 4 of the Act of 1921; with supplying intoxicating liquor under same section; and with supplying intoxicating liquor to a person on credit. There were also summonses against the following persons for consuming intoxicating liquor on licensed premises after 10pm: Sidney Jasper, 35, Upper High Street, Wednesbury; Leonard Taylor, 18, Oxford Street, Bilston; Elizabeth Taylor, same address; Gladys Dennis, 39, Thompson Street, Bilston; Ralph Draisey, 21, Bow Street, Bilston; Frederick Thomas Jeavons, 37, Bilston Road, Wolverhampton; Albert Rogers, 3, Bridge Street, Bilston; John Davies, 23 court, Bridge Road, Bradley; William Hubble, High Street, Bilston; and William Cole, 19, Great Bridge Road, Bradley.

Mr. J. A. Sharpe appeared to prosecute on behalf of the police; Mr. Glover represented Dennis, Leonard Taylor, Edith Taylor, and Sydney Jasper; and Mr. Rhodes appeared for Richards, Draisey, Cole, and Jeavons; Mr. Green watched on behalf of the owners of the house. Rogers, Davies, and Hubbard were not legally represented.

Outlining the circumstances, Mr. Sharpe said observations on the RED COW INN, of which Richards had been tenant for eleven months, were kept from a disused burial ground near the Wesleyan Church, directly opposite the RED COW INN. It was a quiet neighbourhood in the daytime, and it was owing to Richards' activities that it had become a somewhat notorious neighbourhood at night. For some time past the police had had reason to believe that Richards had been conducting the house in a disgraceful manner, and the present proceedings were the outcome of it.

Detective-constable Thorpe explained how he and Detective-constable Nixon took up positions in the Wesleyan burial ground. He said he kept observation, and from time to time the other officer made notes of what was seen. At 10.15pm he saw that the doors in the passage inside the house were open. Several men were in the smokeroom. He could tell that by the shadows on the blind. The landlord crossed the passage from the bar to the smokeroom carrying a tray which had glasses on it. About 10.20pm the men left the smokeroom and went into a room at the rear of the bar. The middle and front doors of the house were then closed by the landlord. At 10.25pm a male and female entered the house. At 10.35 witness and Nixon left the hiding place and went under bar window. Witness then distinctly heard movements in the bar, the jingle of glasses, and someone operating the bar pump. Witness tried to see who was actually in the bar, but was unable to do so because of the blinds. About 10.50 witness and Nixon were joined by a number of uniformed men. Witness then knocked at the front door of the inn. It was opened by the landlord, and witness said to him, 'We are police officers, and have reason to believe that drinking is taking place on your premises.' The landlord replied, 'My God.' Witness and other officers then went into the room at the rear of the bar. There were 14 persons in the room. These included the landlady, her son, and his fiancée. There were glasses containing intoxicating liquor on the table on left-hand side of the room, and also others containing liquor over the fire-place. One glass contained port wine. The glasses were then within the reach of all the persons there. At this point the landlady called out to somebody, 'You are all right; there has been no drink served after 10 o'clock.' She also said that Sidney Jasper, Gladys Dennis, Leonard Taylor, and Edith Taylor were staying there, but as witness was taking the names Dennis said, 'No; we are not staying here.' Leonard Taylor had a glass in front of him which contained stout, Edith Taylor had a glass of whisky and lemonade, Gladys Dennis had a glass of beer and lemonade, and Jeavons drank up something from his glass which smelt of intoxicants. Jeavons was sitting at the time with the glass in front of him. Jeavons then got up and staggered towards witness, who said to him, 'You are drunk, and you will be locked up for being drunk on licensed premises.' He was afterwards taken to the Police Station. Sergeant Daniels took the names of William Cole, John Davis, Arthur Rudge, William Hubble, and also that of a man who was being called as a witness. Witness ascertained that there were three adults and a child staying at the inn, and they were in bed at the time. Witness told the landlord that he should report him for selling intoxicating liquor during prohibited hours. The landlord replied, 'I am sorry this has happened; but I have not served a drink after ten o'clock. I can give away as much as I like.' Witness called attention to Jeavons' condition, and told the landlord that he should report him for permitting drunkenness on his licensed premises. To that the landlord made no reply. During the whole of the time witness and Nixon had the house under observation there was a motor car, the property of William Cole, standing in the open ground in front of the house. Witness told the customers in the house that they would be reported for consuming intoxicating liquors on licensed premises. The only one who made a reply was Hubble, who said, 'I have had nothing to drink.'

Mr. Glover: Were Gladys Dennis, Edith Taylor, Leonard Taylor, and Sidney Jasper sitting by themselves, and not mixing up with other people? – Witness: Yes.

Mr. Glover: So far as you know there has been no previous charges against them? – Witness: Not to my knowledge. Cross-examined by Mr. Rhodes, witness said he presumed that the landlord must have had a previous good character, or he would not have been granted the license of the RED COW. Witness knew the landlord had been in the habit of providing board and lodging for theatrical people, and that some of them went to the house after ten o'clock at night.

Mr. Rhodes: Have you ever made any complaint to Mr. Richards, regarding the way he has conducted the house? – Witness: I reported to the superintendent, but not complained to Mr. Richards himself.

Mr. Rhodes: Then the first time he had any knowledge that there was any suggestion that the house was not properly conducted was when you and your fellow officers went in on the night of the 28th inst. – Witness: That is so.

Mr. Rhodes: So far as Mr. Richards is concerned, you have always known him to be a thoroughly straightforward man? – Witness: A very decent fellow.

Mr. Rhodes: A man whose word can be relied upon? – Witness: I have had no dealings with him before this.

Mr. Rhodes: I suggest to you that this particular night the bar was closed at ten o'clock? – Witness: No it was not.

Mr. Rhodes: And that the lights were put out in the bar a moment or two after ten? – Witness: No.

Mr. Rhodes: Also that after the landlord had cleared the glasses from the smokeroom, just after ten, no one entered the house until the officers arrived. – Witness: I saw several men leaving the smokeroom and going into the room at the rear about 10.20.

Mr. Rhodes: I suggest that when you arrived you found the bar door locked? – Witness: No, the bar door was slightly open.

Mr. Rhodes: You had seen Jeavons before that night? – Witness: No.

Mr. Rhodes: Weren't you in the theatre bar that night? – Witness: Yes.

Mr. Rhodes: I put it to you that you saw Jeavons there? – Witness: No, I did not.

Mr. Rhodes: And you recognised him at the RED COW? – Witness: Certainly not.

Mr. Rhodes: Did you not make the remark that you were surprised to find Jeavons at the RED COW? – Witness: No.

Mr. Rhodes: Did you know he was a friend of the family? – Witness: No.

Mr. Rhodes: Did you know he had been in the habit of staying nights with the landlord's son? – Witness: No.

Mr. Rhodes: Did you hear Mrs. Cole say, 'Mind you we have had no drink.'? – Witness: I did not.

Detective-constable Nixon and Sergeant Daniels gave similar evidence as to what had transpired, and as to the identity of the persons charged with consuming on the premises.

Frank William Hind, who said he was in lodging in Bilston, stated that he was at the RED COW on the night in question. He got there about 9.20. He went into the smokeroom and had something to drink, but finished it off before ten o'clock. He did not leave the premises until some minutes afterwards. There were several other people there, and after ten o'clock he saw them having something to drink. He particularly noticed that Jeavons was intoxicated. About 10.30 he saw Jeavons supplied with a drink by the landlord's son. It was not paid for then. Jeavons told the landlord's son to bring in a drink for himself as well. This he did, but Jeavons did not pay for it then. It was bitter beer. Jeavons said he could not pay for the drinks then, but they could be put down to him. Later on witness saw the landlord go into the bar, and afterwards he brought in four glasses of beer and a port. Witness was there when the police came in. He heard the landlady say to some of the people there, that they were all right as they were staying there.

Replying to Mr. Rhodes, witness said he had been subpoenaed to give evidence.

Mr. Rhodes: I submit that at ten o'clock the landlord called, 'Time!' and immediately removed the glasses from the tables? – Witness: That is not correct.

Mr. Rhodes: I submit that you did not see a single drink served after ten? – Witness: I say I did.

Mr. Rhodes: Where was the landlord when his son served the drinks referred to? – Witness: In the bar.

This concluded the case for the prosecution.

For the defence, Mr. Rhodes again submitted that as he had pleaded guilty to two charges, the other might be allowed to be withdrawn. With regard to Jeavons he said he had been drinking elsewhere prior to closing time, and went to the RED COW to ask Richards's son if he could stay the night. Mr. Glover said while he pleaded guilty on behalf of Dennis, the Taylors, and Jasper, he expressed sincere regret on their behalf. The first three were members of the theatrical profession, and Jasper was the son of a respectable Wednesbury butcher. Certain statements had been made of what was going on at that hour on this night, which he described as mere idle gossip without foundation. Cole and Draisey gave evidence denying that they consumed any drink after closing time.

Mr. T. B. Adams intimated that the Bench had decided to convict in all cases, and after retiring they ordered Richards to pay £10 or a month's imprisonment for permitting drunkenness, £10 or a month's imprisonment for selling liquor to a drunken person, and £20 or a month's imprisonment for selling during prohibited hours, together with £11 5s special costs. On the other summonses he was ordered to pay costs.

In the cases of consuming liquor during prohibited hours, Hubble was ordered to pay 5s 6d costs, and the others 10s 6d each.

For being on the premises in a drunken state Jeavons was fined 10s.

Mr. Sharpe undertook to withdraw seven summonses against Richards in respect of previous dates on payment of costs.

Richards's total amounted to £53 3s 6d."

South Staffordshire Times 30/12/1922

"Mr. Green made an application for the transfer of the license of the RED COW INN, Fraser Street, Bilston, from George Richards to George William Newbould. He said that Mr. Newbould had previously held licenses at Wednesbury, Bilston, and Darlaston, and his character was good.

Superintendent Higgs referred to recent proceeding against Richards, and said that the penalties imposed, amounting to about £50, had not yet been paid. He therefore asked the Bench to take that into consideration before consenting to the transfer.

Mr. Green pointed out that Mr. Newbould was already in possession.

The Magistrates' Clerk (Mr. Pratt): That is at his own risk.

Superintendent Higgs said he had no objection to Mr. Newbould personally, as his references were perfectly satisfactory, but he must ask for the point he had raised to be considered.

After a short adjournment of the application, Mr. Green observed that Richards was given a fortnight in which to pay £20 of the fines, and extended time for the balance. On behalf of his client he (Mr. Green) was now willing to pay the first £20.

On this condition the transfer was granted."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 30/12/1922

"The Bilston magistrates were asked yesterday to consent to the transfer of the RED COW INN, the licensee of which was convicted and heavily fined recently for offences. It was stated that the man had removed, but the police objected to the transfer because the fines had not yet been paid. The magistrates at first refused the application, but subsequently granted it on payment of £20 towards the fines, the money being found by the licensee's wife."

South Staffordshire Times 20/1/1923

"George Richards, former licensee of the RED COW INN, Frazer Street, Bilston, who several weeks ago was fined £50 for offences against the Licensing Acts, now applied for an extension of time in which to pay the fine. He said he was out of work, and had no money. As soon as he got employment he would pay the fine as quickly as possible. Applicant was allowed another month in which to pay."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 8/2/1923

"There was an echo of the recent raid by the police on the RED COW INN, Bilston, in the Wolverhampton Bankruptcy Court yesterday, when the former licensee, George Richards, now of Southwick Place, Bilston, came up for his public examination. The statement of affairs showed liabilities expected to rank of £174 16s 4d, and a deficiency of £171 17s 7d. Debtor, referring to the recent raid, said he was fined £53 4s on charges of permitting drunkenness and supplying intoxicants during prohibited hours. Further financial difficulties arose in respect of the purchase of a motor-lorry, in respect of which he declared he only signed as bondman not as the purchaser. Eventually the proceedings were adjourned."

The license was refused at the annual licensing meeting, on 9th February 1923, on the grounds of ill conduct.

South Staffordshire Times 10/2/1923

"Bilston Licensing Sessions.....

Mr. Green on behalf of Mr. Newbould, licensee of the RED COW INN, Fraser Street, Bilston applied for renewal of the license.

Mr. A. J. Sharpe said he had been instructed by the Chief Constable to oppose renewal on the ground it had been badly conducted. The former licensee, George Richards, was on December 15th last, fined for a series of offences against the Licensing Acts, committed at the house. Those all had relation to incidents on the 28th November. There were several summonses issued for offences previous to that date, but those were withdrawn on payment of costs. The police were now entitled to call the whole of the evidence to enable the Bench to see that there had been systematic mismanagement of the house. He (Mr. Sharpe) had not a word to say against Mr. Raybould [sic], the present licensee, except that he was exceedingly indiscreet in taking over a house with such a record as that had got. It was the house itself that he (Mr. Sharpe) was dealing with.

Detective-constable Thorpe then gave evidence in regard to watching the house on successive nights between 21st and 28th November. He said almost every night, between ten and eleven, he saw men and women going into the house and coming from it. Sometimes they came in motor cars, which were often left outside. Frequently after ten he heard the rattling of glasses, the jingling of money, and music. He had also seen drink carried from one room to another. Witness repeated his previous evidence as to what took place on the night of the 28th of November, and all of his statements were corroborated by PC Nixon.

Replying to Mr. Green, the witness said there had not been any complaint against the present licensee. He kept proper time and conducted the house well.

Mr. Green said he did not in any way belittle the gravity of the offences committed by Richards, for which Richards was heavily fined, but he was there that day on behalf of the owners of the house and its present tenant, whose character was everything that could be desired. As soon as the owners knew of the charges against Richards they took steps to get rid of him immediately, and had done everything they could to retrieve the character of the house. They would do everything they possibly could to ensure its being well conducted in future.

The Bench retired to consider their decision and on returning the Chairman said they were unanimously of the opinion that there had been most flagrant acts of mismanagement, and they must refuse the license."

"Bilston Police Court.....

Last week the Licensing Magistrates refused the renewal of the RED COW INN, Fraser Street, Bilston, and Mr. Green now appeared to make application to the Bench to fix the necessary recognisances for an appeal which it was intended to make at the Quarter Sessions against the decision of the licensing Justices.

The Bench fixed the recognisance of Mr. Newbould, the present tenant of the house, at £100 and two sureties at £50 each.

Subsequently, the former tenant of the house, Mr. George Richards, applied for an extension of time to pay the fine imposed upon him for offences against the Licensing Acts, while he was tenant of the RED COW INN, and which amounted to over £50. He said he had paid £20, and would pay the balance as soon as he could. He was out of work, had filed his petition, and had no means at his disposal.

The Bench allowed another month's time, but advised applicant to do his best to pay something."

"County Quarter Sessions.....

An appeal was heard against the refusal of the Bilston justices to renew the license to sell intoxicating liquors on the premises known as the RED COW, Bilston, the appellants being George William Newbould and Julia Hanson and Sons Ltd. Mr. Graham Milward (instructed by Mr. F. W. Green, of Dudley) appeared for the appellants, and Mr. W. J. Wylie (instructed by Mr. H. S. Pratt, of Bilston) was for the respondent justices.

Mr. Wylie stated that on December 15 last George Richards, who was then licensee of the RED COW INN, was convicted of a number of offences – permitting drunkenness, selling intoxicating liquor during prohibited hours, selling to a drunken person, and so on upon various dates from November 22 to November 28, 1922, and fined varying sums in some cases, and in other cases ordered to pay the costs. The license was afterwards transferred to Newbould, and renewal was subsequently refused by the justices.

The evidence showed that the premises were raided by the police on the night of November 28. For several nights previous a police constable had seen people entering and leaving the premises after 10pm, which was closing time. Richards, who was then the licensee, was seen carrying glasses of beer on trays. When the premises were raided at 10.50pm on November 28, 12 or 14 people were found in the house. Most of them had some kind of intoxicating liquor in front of them. One man was so drunk that he had to be taken to the police station.

PC Thorpe said he kept watch on the premises at night from November 21st to November 28th. On each night he saw people entering and leaving the premises after 10pm. Sometimes there were motor cars outside. On November 25 the last person did not leave the house until 1.17am. On the night the premises were raided witness took up observation with PS Daniels and PC Nixon. Whilst under the bar window he heard the clink of beer glasses and also money being jingled. When the door was opened by Richards, the landlord, witness said he had reason to believe that men and women were on the premises, and that drinking was taking place. Richards exclaimed, 'My God.' In a room at the rear of the premises witness found 14 persons, including the landlady and her son. Each person had got intoxicating liquor in front of them. One man was in a very drunken condition, and he was locked up. When told he would be reported, Richards said, 'I can give as much away as I like.'

Mr. Milward said the matter came as an absolute surprise to the owners, and therefore he was not in a position to cross-examine the witness.

Supt. Higgs, who was called by Mr. Wylie at the request of Mr. Milward, was questioned with reference to the original characters of Richards given to the police when the latter became tenant of the RED COW. Witness said he did not raise any objection at petty sessions to Richards having the license. Since the transfer of the license to Newbould the house had been properly conducted.

Mr. Wylie asked for production of the character given to the police when Richards applied for the license, and addressing witness, said: Having that character in your possession, did you say anything to the brewers about it? – No.

Did you at any time while Richards was in the house mention to the owners or the brewery company that you had any suspicion of his conduct? – No.

Lord Hatherton (to witness): Will you explain to the Court how it was that with a character such as this you raised no objection to Richards being allowed to go into the house? – I could not say from memory whether I told the Court his character exactly as it stood, but the Court had discretion.

Had the court at petty sessions knowledge of this character? – I am not prepared to say from memory. I think he was holding the license at that particular time. Witness added that Richards held a license at Wolverhampton up to 1920, and when he went to Bilston there was no objection because he was not asked to give up his tenancy at Wolverhampton or proceeded against.

Thomas Hanson, director and secretary of the appellant company, was then called by Mr. Milward, and said the RED COW was a house they were anxious to retain. Prior to filling the vacancy in tenancy they wrote to the Wolverhampton and Dudley Breweries Ltd., in whose employ Richards had been, and received a reply stating that they considered Richards a fit and proper person to hold a license. Having received that letter and knowing that the character papers had gone to the police, they appointed Richards with thorough confidence in his honesty and straightforwardness, he having previously held a license for some time. Richards conducted the house properly at first. Witness had never heard a word about the late hours business at the RED COW until the police proceedings. When Richards left he owed the firm between £70 and £80. Witness added that there had been no conviction against the house until the present trouble.

Mr. Milward, for the appellants, said the question for the Court was whether they thought there was any necessity to punish the owners to the extent of taking away the license. There was no question that a fully-licensed house was a valuable property. This was one of those curious cases where the purely human factor came in. The owners took all precautions necessary before putting Richards's name forward as tenant of the house, but the man seemed to have behaved like a perfect fool, and kept the house open long after hours. The police watched the premises for several nights, but they did not conceive it to be their duty to apprise the owners of what was going on. The question was, where did the duty of the police end? Ought they to have let the owners know what was going on? Ought they to prevent crime, or ought they to catch criminals, or ought they to try and do both? Counsel submitted that the owners had been 'let down' by Richards, who had jeopardised the license.

Mr. Wylie, in reply, said the State not only looked to the licensee but the owners to see that a licensed house was properly conducted. He suggested that if the owners had made inquiries of the Wolverhampton police as to Richards's character at the time the license was transferred to him, they would have known exactly what was known today with regard to his character.

Lord Hatherton said the Court felt that they ought to dismiss the appeal, though they came to that decision with a certain amount of reluctance. They had some doubt as to whether what was in the minds of the police ought not to have been communicated to the owners."

It closed in 1923.

It became a lodging house.

“Legge v Rudge. At the Wolverhampton County Court, on Thursday last, before A. M. Skinner, Esq. (Judge), an action was tried before a Jury, in which the plaintiff, Mrs. Elizabeth Legge, the owner of the RED LION public house in Bilston, sought to recover from Mr. Peter Rudge, the bona fide tenant of the above house, the sum of £5 10s for one quarter's rent, due in September last. Mr. Thurstans appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Bartlett for the defendant. The hearing of the case lasted about three hours, but the facts are simply these.

It appeared that Rudge entered into the tenancy of the house in the early part of June, 1861, and that being the middle of the quarter, he received from the outgoing tenant, named Taylor, the amount of rent then due. Rudge continued to occupy the house, and to pay the rent for it up to June in last year, when he sublet it to a man named Binks, who afterwards sold up and left the country. No rent had been received by the plaintiff in respect of the house since June, 1862, and the only question for the Jury to decide was whether or not plaintiff recognised and accepted Binks as her tenant. For the plaintiff it was sworn that although she was on several occasions requested to accept Binks as her tenant she always refused, and never recognised any other person as the bona fide tenant of the house but Rudge. For the defence witnesses were called to prove that the plaintiff did accept Binks as tenant, and in recognition of him made certain repairs and improvements in the house in accordance with the wishes of Mr. Binks. This was also denied by the witnesses for the plaintiff, and the witnesses for the defendant contradicted each other to such a degree as to render their evidence quite unreliable.

His Honour having carefully summed up, pointing out the various discrepancies of the case, the Jury retired, and shortly returned into court with a verdict for the plaintiff.

As Rudge has never given the plaintiff notice of his intention to quit the house, which at present remains closed, he is still, by this decision, regarded as the actual tenant, and liable to be sued for the rent now accruing.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 8/3/1866

“On Saturday afternoon last two boys employed at Mr. Perry’s foundry were sliding on the ice over a pond formed by a swag in Riley’s field, when the ice gave way, and the lads were in imminent danger of drowning, but were eventually rescued from their perilous position by Samuel Smart, son of the landlord of the RED LION in Dudley Street. The brave young fellow was several times in great peril, and his hands were much cut and bruised by the ice.”

AND

Birmingham Daily Post 12/3/1866 - Correspondence

Sir, You will extremely oblige me and also many others by publishing the undermentioned, as it may be a caution. A near escape of life took place on Saturday, the 3rd instant, between four and five o’clock pm. A number of boys were on a pool of water – which I have learned since to be of considerable depth – and there were two boys amusing themselves by throwing a glass bottle backwards and forwards across the ice, and the boys were very nigh a hole which was broken in the ice, and they stood in great danger. A youth observing them, named Samuel T. Smart, RED LION INN, Dudley Street, Bilston, aged nineteen, who was skating on a sheet of ice some distance from them, shouted to them to caution them of their danger, but they could not hear him. So, seeing that they stood in great danger, he volunteered to snatch them from the place, but in so doing they all three went down under the ice. Smart coming up first to the surface of the ice, being one who could swim, immediately commenced breaking the ice from around the lads – one of the lads could swim apparently – and after being in the water some ten minutes, he managed to get out, with the assistance of Smart. The other boy, William Johnson, age twelve years, residing in Coseley Street, Bilston, was struggling his last, apparently. Smart seized him, and held him up for three minutes, with his left arm, whilst he was breaking the ice and treading the water, which buoyed him up, until assistance could be rendered. I also saw the blood running from his hands, and he, Smart, had been in the water fifteen minutes. I am, sir, yours, &c, an eye-witness of the scene. Bilston, March 5, 1866.”

“On Tuesday morning, Enoch Hughes, the infant son of John and Sarah Hughes, of Dudley Street, Bilston, was found dead in bed. An inquest was held on Wednesday morning, at the RED LION INN, Dudley Street, before W. H. Phillips, Esq, district coroner.

Sarah Hughes, the mother, stated that the child was eight weeks old, and had slept very much since his birth. He was a seven months child. On Tuesday morning she found him dead in bed, with his face upwards, and his hands clenched. He had suffered from convulsions from his birth. A medical certificate stated that the child had died from convulsions, but the surgeon not having seen the child for six weeks before its death, the coroner said he wished it to be understood that he could not regard certificates where the doctor had not seen the deceased for so long a time. The jury returned a verdict of Death from Natural Causes.”

Wolverhampton Express and Star 8/1/1885

“On Wednesday afternoon an inquiry was opened at the RED LION INN, Dudley Street, Bilston, by Mr. W. H. Phillips, touching the death of a girl, named Sarah Ann Howes, aged eight years (daughter of Thomas Howes, painter, of 58, Dudley Street, Bilston), who met with her death, as already reported, by burns received on Sunday morning last. Janes Howes, the mother of the child, stated that her husband was in the habit of bringing oranges and other trifles home for the child on Saturday night, and on Sunday morning last the deceased went down in her night-dress to get what her father had brought her. Her husband had lit the fire and went out for a few minutes, leaving the child alone. Witness’s attention was attracted from upstairs by the screams of the child, and on going to her assistance she found her in flames. She was much burnt before the flames could be extinguished, and although a doctor was sent for the child died the same evening. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

The police opposed the renewal of the licenses attached to the NEW INN, Oxford Street, Bilston; the MALT SHOVEL INN, Oxford Street Bilston; the RED LION INN, Bilston, the FOUNTAIN INN, Parliament Street, Bilston; and the ORANGE TREE INN, Ettingshall. Infringement of the licensing laws were the grounds of the objection in each case, with the exception of the ORANGE TREE INN, the landlord of which had been sentenced to two months’ imprisonment for assaulting his wife. The whole of the licenses were renewed with the exception of the FOUNTAIN INN, the consideration of which was to be held over until the adjourned licensing sessions.”

“An inquest was held on Thursday, at the RED LION INN, Ettingshall, before T. M. Phillips, Esq, coroner, on the body of David Pitchford, a boy of 13 years of age, who was killed by falling down a pit shaft in Priestfields, while flying his kite on the previous day. The pit had been worked out for some time, but notwithstanding the fearful deaths which occur every few months from this very cause, and the many warnings which mine owners receive through the press, the proprietor of the pit in question had neglected to take any means whatever to fence or enclose it. One of the jurymen wished to return a verdict on Manslaughter against the owner of the pit, and was so resolute that the coroner had to adjourn the inquest.

On Tuesday the inquiry was resumed, when, after a consultation of two hours, the jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death, exonerating the owner, Mr. Loxdale, or his agent, of any blame; but the jury, at the same time, expressed a hope that all worked-out pits would be carefully guarded, and recommended iron plates as more secure than brickwork.

We have been informed that the pit in question was properly secured and arched over with brickwork in 1842, when the land in which it is situate was let to, and has ever since been occupied by the present tenant. Unless, therefore, notice of the dangerous state of the pit had been given to the owner or his agents (which was not the case in this instance), he would not be legally or morally responsible.”

Morning Post 21/9/1875

"An accident of frightful character occurred at what is known as Hot Holes, or Spring Vale Furnaces, near Wolverhampton, on Saturday morning last, as was briefly reported yesterday. The furnaces in question belong to Mr. Alfred Hickman, and are situate between Ettingshall Station, on the London and North-Western Railway, and Bilston, being not very far from Deep Fields, where a frightful boiler explosion took place a few years ago. The works in question consist of three blast furnaces, constructed upon the most modern principles, all of which are at work, turning out an average of 200 or 300 tons of pig iron per week. About twelve o'clock on Friday night, or rather early on Saturday morning, an accident of a terrible character occurred in connection with the top furnace. It seems that about 40 tons of molten metal had been run out of the furnace into a bed, and four men were engaged raking out the cinder, preparatory to the next charge, when an explosion took place, and the four men were frightfully burned by the molten metal, which was scattered in all directions. The explosion occurred through the bursting of the tuyere, which is supposed to have originated through the clay in the tuyere having been burnt away and allowed the water to come in contact with the molten iron. A man named Enoch Lewis, who was near to the place where the metal is tapped, was blown a considerable distance, and part of his remains (which were burnt to a cinder) were taken out of an iron waggon which is used for the purpose of conveying the refuse from the furnaces. His death must have been instantaneous. Three other men were also badly burnt, and they were conveyed to the Wolverhampton Hospital, where one of them, William Eccleston, died soon after being admitted. Although every attention was paid the other two patients, they both expired on Saturday night from the injuries received. The names of the unfortunate men are Enoch Lewis, Priestfield; William Eccleston (34), Ward Street, Priestfield; Thomas Hanan (29), blast-furnaceman, Ward Street, Priestfield; William Cooksey, Blakenall. The body of Lewis was conveyed to the RED LION INN, Ettingshall, where the inquest will be held. He was quite a stranger in the place, and it is stated came from the Potteries only a week ago. Eccleston leaves a wife and three young children, and Cooksey eight or nine children. On Sunday the scene of the accident was visited by a number of people, and the men were busy at work blowing out the furnace in order to make the necessary repairs. The damage occasioned to the plant is not very great."

[At the inquest on Enoch Lewis a verdict of Accidental Death was returned. The inquest on the other three men was held at the NEW MARKET INN, Wolverhampton, and again Accidental Death was returned.]

"Last night a young girl went into a house at Ettingshall, near Bilston, occupied by an old man named James Davenport, and found the latter hanging by a rope attached to a nail on the staircase, quite dead. The deceased's wife ran away from him after a violent quarrel three weeks ago, since which time he has been living in the house by himself. It is supposed that his inability to discover his wife's whereabouts preyed on his mind and caused him to commit suicide."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 26/9/1934

“A verdict of Accidental Death was returned at yesterday's inquest on Thomas Heardmun, aged 22, 16, Junction Street, Brades Village, Oldbury, a lamp-lighter, who met with fatal injuries on the night of Sunday, 19 August, in a collision with a pedestrian, Sidney Heythorpe, aged 32, of 613, Parkfield Road, near the RED LION INN, Ettingshall. Ernest France, 20, Martin Street, stated he and Heythorpe left the RED LION INN at ten o'clock. When in the centre of the road he heard the sound of a motor-horn and saw a motor-cycle with powerful headlights approaching from about 40 yards distance. Witness stopped to let the cycle pass, and when he turned round to look for Heythorpe he saw him moving to the pavement. He shouted, 'Come back, Sid,' put out his hand to pull him back, but he was out of reach. The motor-cycle struck Heythorpe. The front wheel went between his legs, the lamp struck him on the chest and was smashed, he was thrown some distance and fell like a 'bundle of rags.' The motor-cycle was overturned and he saw the driver lying on the pavement.

Dr. T. S. Crowther stated that Heardmun died about a quarter of an hour after the accident, and death was due to a broken neck.

Heythorpe said he did not remember anything after leaving the pavement, and Samuel Butlery, 25, Dudley Road, Brades Village, who was riding pillion on Heardmun's cycle, and had a leg injured, said he did not see any pedestrians in front.

The jury returning their verdict recommended that the attention of the authorities be called to the lighting of the right side of Parkfield Road.”

“Samuel Harris was charged with breaking into the house of William Jones, publican, near Parkfields works, on the night of the 4th instant, and stealing a pair of shoes and several other articles. The house was entered by lifting up the parlour window, and some tobacco, 4lbs of sugar, several loaves of bread, and the pair of shoes in question were stolen. The shoes were pledged by the prisoner at the shop of Messrs. Langman, in this town, in the afternoon of the 5th instant. He represented that they were his own shoes, and pledged them in the name of Edward Jones. He afterwards obtained some ale on the pledge ticket. On being charged by Subinspector Butler with the stealing shoes, he replied, ‘Is that all?’ Upon being subsequently charged with stealing the shoes from Jones’s RED LION, near Parkfield Ironworks, he said, ‘Oh, well.’ The prisoner was committed for trial at the next assizes.”

“Staffordshire Spring Assizes.....

Samuel Harris, 22, was charged with burglary at the house of William Jones, at Bilston, and stealing one pair of boots. The house of the prosecutor, a publican at Bilston, was broken into by the parlour window being forced open, on the night of the 4th of November, and a pair of boots were stolen from the bar. On the following day the prisoner pledged a pair of boots at the shop of Messrs. Langman, at Wolverhampton, for 3s 6d. giving at the time the name of Edward Jones. The boots were identified, and the prisoner being found guilty, after a previous conviction, was sentenced to be transported for seven years.”

“The inquest upon the body of the unfortunate man, George Fletcher, who was killed by the explosion of a boiler at Parkfield Ironworks, on Thursday, the 12th instant, was held at the RED LION, Parkfields, before the coroner, T. M. Phillips, Esq.

The facts given in evidence went to show that the care of the boiler was left to the deceased for a short time by the engineer, who gave him strict orders not to touch the boilers; but that during his absence one of the boilers exploded. On his return he was able to find the deceased, but discovered that the stop valve had been screwed down, which previously to his going away was screwed up and open. The only way in which he could account for the occurrence was that the deceased had screwed it down instead of up from ignorance. The effect of the stop valve being screwed down was that an excess of steam was caused, which occasioned the explosion of the boiler. The boiler was considered to be a good one.

The deceased was seen upon the top of one of the boilers about nine o’clock, by a man named John Lewis, who was also employed at the works.

The boiler had been examined by William Pearson, a man unconnected with the Parkfield Works, who spoke at the inquest to the efficiency of the engineer, and of the size and character of the boilers.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

“At the Wolverhampton Police Court, yesterday, before the Mayor (Mr. James Walker), and Mr. John Ford, William Booth, alias John Wright, a tramp, was charged with obtaining goods by false pretences. Mr. Stratton was for the prosecution.

On the 14th ult, the prisoner went to Mr. E. B. Jukes's boot and shoe shop, Snow Hill (now of Station Street, Walsall), and said he wanted a pair of boots for Mr. W. Jones, of Spring Vale Colliery. The boots were given to him

Mr. Jones, contactor, said he did not know a person of the name of Jones working at Spring Vale Colliery, and he never authorised the prisoner to obtain the boots. The boots were pawned at the shop of Mr. H. Casswell, Horseley Fields, for 4s.

The prisoner was next charged with a seconds offence of the same character.

Mr. J. Lily, grocer, of Victoria Street, Wolverhampton, said the prisoner came to No.35, in that street, on the 10th ult, and, as the shopman did not know him, he took him to another shop belonging to him (the prosecutor) in the same street, and where he was at the time. Prisoner said that Mr. William Jones, of the RED LION INN, near the Spring Vale Furnaces (Park Field), had sent him for a pound of tea and a pound of tobacco. He asked him why it was that Mr. Jones sent him for groceries to a shop so far away, when he said that he was dissatisfied with the groceries that he was at present supplied with, and if he liked the articles, he would be a good customer. He next inquired how it was that Mr. Jones used such a large quantity of groceries, and prisoner said this was owing to his being a contractor for a number of works, and the men had their meals at his house. He referred to the directory, and found that the address given him by the prisoner was a correct one, upon which he supplied him with the articles he required, the value of which amounted to 7s 6d. Prisoner then produced a memorandum book, on which his (prosecutor's) name was written, and in which he entered the articles supplied.

"John Withington, a strong and vicious looking fellow with no fixed residence, was charged with burglariously breaking into the house of Thomas Hampton, and stealing therefrom a quantity of articles of the value of £10. Mr. Langman appeared for the prosecution.

Thomas Hampton said: I live at Park Field, Rough Hills, and am landlord of the RED LION INN. Last night I went to bed about 12 o'clock and locked and bolted all the doors previously. I got up this morning about six o'clock and found the house had been broken into. The witness further stated that he missed a quantity of articles, and identified those produced as his property.

Police-constable Ray said he received information this morning from Charles Lawrence, timekeeper, Monmore Green, to the effect that he saw the prisoner go by with something very bulky. He then went in search of him and traced him to Wednesfield Heath, where he came upon him near the canal side. He, with the assistance of Lawrence, searched the prisoner and found upon him various articles, consisting of four bottles, a large quantity of tobacco, a number of cigars, a watch, £4 15s 11d in loose money, a gold ring, a girl's hat, and a purse. They then took him into custody, but the prisoner became very rough and they had great trouble. When they got to the Low Level Station he lay down and said he would not go any farther.

The Bench then decided, on the application of Mr. Langman, to adjourn the case until Friday."

[He was committed to the Assizes.]

“On Saturday afternoon two brothers named Henry and Alfred Gregory, aged 18 and 16 respectively, sons of William Gregory, horsenail maker, of High Street, Sedgley, were drowned in the reservoir adjoining the Parkfield Furnaces of Messrs. Williams, at Bilston. About six o'clock two suits of clothes were found on the banks of the reservoir, and suspecting that the owners had been drowned the person who found them gave information to Police-constable Snow, of Ettingshall, who caused the water to be searched, and the bodies were discovered. They were removed to the RED LION INN, Parkfield Road, where they were identified later on by their father. It transpired that the youths had been seen fishing earlier in the afternoon in a neighbouring pool, and it is supposed that they afterwards proceeded to bathe in the reservoir and go out of their depth, the water being very deep where the bodies were discovered. An inquest will be held.”

Wolverhampton Express and Star 29/9/1880

“On Tuesday afternoon, W. H. Phillips, Esq, coroner, held an inquest at the RED LION INN, Ettingshall, near Bilston, on the bodies of the two lads named Henry and Alfred Gregory, late of Sedgley, who were drowned in the pool near Parkfield furnaces, on Saturday last.....

A verdict of Accidental Death was returned, and the jury recommended that a notice should be posted near the pool stating the depth of the water.

The deceased were the only support of their aged father, whose case is one deserving of sympathy on the part of the charitably disposed. We are glad to learn that Mr. F. A. Homer, of Sedgley, where the parents of the unfortunate youths reside, has kindly started a subscription on their behalf. The vicar, Mr. Homer, and a number of other residents have already subscribed, and we are informed that from the respectable character of both the parents and the deceased youths, as well as certain painful surroundings of the case, subscriptions could scarcely be more worthily bestowed.”

“This morning W. H. Phillips, Esq, borough coroner, held an inquest at the RED LION INN, Rough Hills, near Monmore Green, on the body of a woman who was found drowned in the canal at Rough Hills, on Monday morning. John Overton, boiler-tube maker, residing at the Rough Hills, said that on Monday morning he was called by a boatman to the canal side at the Bridge Hole, Rough Hills, when he saw the body of the deceased in the water. They got it out, but life was extinct. She did not appear to have been in the water very long. Deceased was about 35 years of age.

Police-constable Nagington said he was called to the deceased after her body was recovered from the water. She wore a brown body jacket, and violet stuff dress skirt, a black velvet bonnet trimmed with flowers and satin, a pair of elastic-side boots, and brown stockings, striped with white-coloured rings. She had a common ring on her wedding finger, and 2½d in a leather purse in her pocket. Witness had been unable to learn who she was.

The inquiry was adjourned until Monday morning next.

"At Wolverhampton County Court, on Tuesday.....

A jury was sworn in a case in which Mr. John Huxley, haulier, of Parkfield, sought to recover £50 as compensation for loss and injury sustained through the bite of a dog belonging to Mrs. Sarah Jane Young, of the RED LION INN, Parkfield. Mr. Plumptre (instructed by Mr. S. Walker) appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. J. W. Hall, of Bilston, defended.

On the 23rd of May the plaintiff went to the defendant's premises on business. On returning he passed a dog kennel, out of which a savage dog sprang and seized him by the leg, biting it severely. He had to obtain medical aid, and was unable to attend to his business for several weeks. It was proved that the dog had previously bitten another person.

For the defence, Mr. Hall contended that the plaintiff had no right on the premises, but his Honour overruled the objection, and held that the premises were public. In defence to the action it was further contended that the dog was kept chained within enclosed palisading four feet high, but it had transpired that there was a hole in the palisading through which the dog got, and the chain was sufficiently long to allow the animal to reach the plaintiff.

The judge pointed out that the law compelled the owner of the dog to keep it absolutely away from anyone, whether that person was indiscreet enough to go on premises where he had no right or not. The jury gave a verdict for 16 guineas and costs, but the judge refused to certify for costs on the higher scale."

"At Wolverhampton Police Court, yesterday, John Peakman (62), carpenter and pattern-maker, was charged with stealing property worth £30 from the Imperial Tubeworks, Monmore Green, of Mr. John Brotherton, where he had been employed for ten years. Mr. J. E. Underhill prosecuted, and Mr. H. Saunders defended.

Detective Hayward, of Bilston, stated that, on the 6th inst, he searched the defendant's house to discover whether the defendant had any stolen cucumbers from a frame belonging to Mrs. Young, licensed victualler, of Parkfield. He found a quantity of unworked brass, iron, lead, and steel, some timber, and iron and copper screws, brass oiltaps, machinists' and gas fittings, and also several new wheel barrows made out of his employer's materials.

Mr. Brotherton deposed that when he engaged the prisoner he knew he had been in trouble previously, but he had taken him on because he promised to be honest in future. The prisoner had been in his employ for ten years, and he had placed such faith in him that he had sent him to Amsterdam to erect a show-case at the recent exhibition.

When charged with the thefts Peakman admitted them, but stated that a fellow-workman named Eccleston had assisted him to carry away the timber, and they had agreed to share the proceeds.

The prisoner reserved his defence, and was committed for trial at the Borough Sessions."

[John Peakman pleaded guilty, John Brotherton asked for a light punishment, and one year's hard labour was sentenced.]

“On Saturday afternoon, Mr. A. B. Smith (deputy county coroner) held an inquest at the RED LION INN, Parkfield Road, Ettingshall, on the body of James Whitehouse (73) a horse-slaughterer, of no fixed home.

Thomas Tildesley, horse-slaughterer, of Green Lane, Wolverhampton, stated that the deceased had worked for him occasionally for about twenty years. As no one would accept him as a lodger, owing to his filthy habits, he was allowed to sleep in the slaughter-house. Deceased left his situation about a fortnight ago.

Alfred Light, millwright, Parkfield Road, said he saw the deceased on Thursday night sitting on the doorstep of a house in course of erection in that thoroughfare. Deceased seemed to be ill, and said he had had nothing to eat since the previous Saturday. Witness gave him 3d, and advised him to go to Wolverhampton. Later on witness saw the deceased sitting in the same place, and asked him if would have some brandy, but he made no reply.

Edward Russell, miner, Parkfield Road, spoke to the man dying on the doorstep at a quarter to ten o’clock.

Police-constable Parsons said he found no money or food upon the deceased, but only an old pipe, some tobacco, and a comb.

A verdict was returned that death had resulted from Natural Causes, and had probably been accelerated by want of food.”

“A mysterious affair took place at Ettingshall last night. A man named John Perks left home apparently in his usual health, but as he did not return home his son made search for him. Entering an outhouse he encountered a sight which confirmed his suspicions. On the floor was a blood-stained table knife. The floor was covered with blood, and the stains marked the ground at intervals from the door. Following these ghastly traces the son eventually found that they led to a pit near which a steam machine is at work on the Parkfields estate. In the pit was the dead body of Perks. An examination showed that a wound had been inflicted in the throat. This, however, was only skin deep, and not sufficiently severe to have caused death, which appears to have been due to a fracture of the skull caused by Perks falling from a bridge into the pit, a distance of about fifty feet. It is surmised that he threw himself over, although he may have been dazed through loss of blood and did not know where he was walking.”

Birmingham Mail 10/2/1908

“At the RED LION INN, Parkfield Road, Ettingshall, today, Mr. Stokes, County Coroner, held an enquiry into the circumstances surrounding the death of John Perks, aged sixty-six, a blacksmith, of Ettingshall, who on Friday night, it was alleged, cut his throat and then threw himself down an embankment, breaking several bones.

The son, who discovered the body, in answer to the coroner, said that although his father was in no trouble of any sort financially he had been suffering from pains in his head. He had attended the hospital, but they had not cured it, as it was a chronic complaint.

A juryman said the man had grown terribly depressed in the last two years, and his complaint lay in the fact that he was continually nodding his head.

A witness said that he saw him after he had cut his throat, and Perks replied to his salutation.

The hole in which the body was found was fifty feet deep, and he was trespassing at the time.

A verdict that deceased committed Suicide whilst Temporary Insane was returned.”

South Staffordshire Times 8/3/1924

“The adjourned Licensing Sessions for the Bilston Division were held yesterday, before a full Bench of Justices, Mr. E. Hickman presided.....

Considerable opposition was offered to the provisional application for a license to new premises it was proposed on land in Parkfield Road. Mr. Skidmore made the application. Mr. Turton opposed on behalf of the owner and tenant of the RED LION, Parkfield Road, and Mr. J. F. Bourke (instructed by Messrs. Landon and Barrows) on behalf of the owner and licensee of the PARKFIELD TAVERN. The application was opposed by the Rev. W. E. Richardson, Primitive Methodist Church, Parkfield Road; the Vicar of Ettingshall (Rev. W. H. R. Gipps); Mrs. Hodgetts on behalf of herself and neighbours; Mr. Geo. Watkins, on behalf of the Vicar of Blakenhall; Mr. Staghouse, on behalf of the trustees of the Primitive Methodist Church, Parkfield; and Mr. Joseph Hatley, on behalf of the residents and trustees of Parkfield Primitive Methodist Church.

Mr. Skidmore, in his remarks to the justices, said the proposal was to remove the GIFFORD ARMS, Codsall Wood, which was a rural district and already well served, to a proposed site in Parkfield Road. The site to which it was proposed to transfer the license was a different proposition. The site was directly opposite the new estate which was being developed by the Wolverhampton Corporation and a large number of houses had been run up there. The new road to Birmingham would run within a very few yards of the site. He knew it was unusual to ask for the removal of a license in one district to another, and the justices might say that Codsall would lose one license and this district get one more. If the justices granted the removal of the license of the GIFFORD ARMS, the applicant was prepared to give up the license of the ROYAL EXCHANGE, Queen Street, Bilston, an ‘on’ beer license. So at any rate they would get rid of one license in the county for nothing. They would get a license transferred from a place where it was not particularly required, to a site where it would be of great public convenience, and he ventured to suggest that the justices should not take too narrow a view. Mr. Skidmore added he should produce plans by which it would be seen that the house it was proposed to erect upon the site was most modern and up-to-date in every way.

Mr. Tomlins, Wolverhampton, explained the plans and spoke of the increase in dwellings which would take place by a housing scheme which was being pressed forward.

Mr. F. B. Housiaux, the owner of the estate upon which it was proposed to build the new premises, said he was a general dealer and he approached Mr. Myatt with a scheme suggesting it would make a good site for a licensed house, and agreed to sell it to him.

Mr. Bourke, in his opposition to the application, emphasised the fact that the justices were asked to remove a license which was outside, into their district. Much had been said on housing and the new road, but under the present conditions he urged that the district was well supplied with licensed houses.

Mr. Turton expressed the opinion that the present was not a suitable time to grant such an application.

The Rev. W. E. Hutchinson, speaking on behalf of the petitioners against the granting of a license, said one point was that there were sufficient licensed houses in the neighbourhood to meet requirements. They felt the future should take care of itself and they asked the justices to wait and see what may be the conditions in the future. Within half a mile of the proposed site were seven places where refreshments could be obtained. Nearly seventy-five per cent of the people living in the new houses had signed a petition against it.

The Justices retired, and after a brief absence, the chairman announced that they had given careful attention to the application, and the petition against it, and were unanimous in declining it.”

“At the Police Court, Wolverhampton, on Wednesday last, before S. Cartwright and R. H. Briscoe, Esqs, a man named Benjamin Silvester was charged by Joseph Green, a collier, living at Bilston, with having picked his pocket of half-a-crown on the previous Monday night. The prisoner was drinking at the ROBIN HOOD beerhouse, Oxford Street, and the prisoner, who was seated by his side, deliberately picked his pocket of half-a-crown. Policeman Grant was called in, and on making a search the missing half-crown was found against the ‘fountain,’ near the place where the prisoner had been sitting. Committed for 21 days’ imprisonment.”

Thomas Halford, 50, was indicted for attempting to murder Phoebe Corfield, at Bilston, on the 16th of February. Mr. Hill prosecuted, and having briefly stated the case, proceeded to call the following evidence.

Phoebe Corfield deposed that she was a widow, and on the 15th of February, which was Saturday, she was living with the prisoner, as his wife, at Salop Row, Bilston. On the evening of that day she was with the prisoner at the ROBIN HOOD INN, Bilston. They left that place between ten and eleven o’clock, and went across the street to the house of Samuel Tonks, with whom they stayed till a few minutes before twelve o’clock, when they started for home. On reaching their own house they went into the kitchen, where were her two sons, the elder of whom was asleep. After they had been seated a short time the prisoner charged her with being too intimate with Samuel Tonks, and after a lengthy conversation he said, ‘You d—— well want hanging,’ and taking a rope from round his neck he placed it over a hook in the ceiling of the kitchen. He then pulled the woman into the middle of the kitchen, lifted her off her feet, and fastened the noose of the rope round her neck. Her two sons were present, but neither of them interfered; in fact the eldest remained sleeping. When the rope was placed round her neck she became insensible, and when she recovered herself she was laid on the floor of the house, with a neighbour administering restoratives. Prosecutrix first thought the man was joking with her, and the rope was too tight to allow her to cry out.

Cross-examined by prisoner: Prosecutrix was by the side of prisoner when he put the noose round her. He then dragged her to the middle of the room, and put the rope over the hook in the ceiling.

Willian Brown, son of the prosecutrix, stated that he was at the prisoner’s house on the night in question. A few minutes after his mother and the prisoner got home the prisoner took the rope from his waist, placed a noose over her head, carried her to the middle of the floor, and placed the end of the rope over a hook in the ceiling. The woman was then hanging by the neck, with her feet about 12 inches from the ground. When the prisoner had done this he sat down, and began to laugh at the woman. Witness cried out for help, and the prisoner threatened to cut his throat. Witness took no notice of him, but awoke his brother, who ‘broke’ his mother down. Mary Ford, a neighbour, was then called in, and a policeman sent for.

Cross-examined by prisoner: The woman struggled before she was hanged up. Witness did not go to sleep before the woman was hanged.

Henry Brown, the elder son of Phoebe Corfield by her first husband, and brother of the last witness, proved that when his mother and the prisoner came home on the night in question he was asleep. He remained in that state till called up by his brother. When the brother awoke witness the prisoner was threatening to cut the brother’s throat, and got up from his chair to ‘set about him.’ Witness broke the rope by which his mother was suspended, and she fell on the floor, insensible. After that witness called on Mrs. Ford, and she came in; a policeman was also sent for. Mary Ford stated that when she was called into the prisoner’s house by the last witness she found Phoebe Corfield on the floor of the kitchen in a state of insensibility. Witness asked the prisoner how the affair happened. He replied, ‘If she had hung for a week, I would not have cut her down.’

Police-constable Craddock proved that on the morning of the 16th of February, he went to the house of the prisoner Halford. Witness heard the prisoner ask Mrs. Corfield whether she did not hang herself. She replied, ‘No.’ The prisoner then said, in explanation, that they had been quarrelling; Corfield told him she was tired of living with him, and he recommended her to go and hang herself. She then asked for some cord, and prisoner gave her his waist-rope. She then placed it round her neck, got into a chair, fastened the rope to a hook, and kicked the chair from under her. The hook was six feet seven inches from the floor, and witness believed that the prisoner could reach it as he stood on the ground. The rope produced (a piece of thin tarred cord), was given to witness by Mrs. Ford.

Mrs. Corfield, recalled, denied having got into a chair as the prisoner alleged.

William Brown, recalled, also denied that his mother got into a chair to swing herself from.

In defence the prisoner said that when he went into the house he sat by the fire, and the boys fell asleep. After smoking a pipe he pulled his rope off, and went to sleep also, and he remained in that state till the arrival of the police.

Louisa Higginson, was called in defence, and she proved going into the prisoner's house before Mrs. Ford. Mrs. Corfield was in a corner of the room, and witness asked what was the matter. William Brown replied that the old b—— in the corner had given his mother a rope, and she hung herself, kicking the chair from under her.

In reply to questions from witness Henry Brown stated that the rope broke after the woman had hung herself.

Mary Knight proved hearing Mrs. Corfield represent that she had said she would hang herself, and the prisoner flung her the rope.

The statements of these witnesses were denied in toto by both the Browns, Mrs. Corfield, and May Ford.

The jury found the prisoner guilty, and in passing sentence his Lordship remarked on the enormity of the offence. Had it occurred a few months ago he would have been liable to forfeit his life for it. It was a most serious case; an attempt to murder a woman, who, though not his wife, had behaved to him most affectionately – at least such might be gathered and presumed. The sentence of the court would be a term of 20 years' penal servitude."

Wolverhampton Express and Star 12/7/1909

"The death occurred very suddenly on Sunday of Enoch Harrison (50), who lived at 59, Greencroft, Bilston. He went for a walk during the morning, and called at the ROBIN HOOD INN, Oxford Street, where he complained that his breath was bad. He was given some water, but almost immediately fell back and expired. Dr. Kendrick was speedily sent for, but could only pronounce life to be extinct. Police-constables Brown and Bennett subsequently removed the body to its late home, and the former notified the occurrence to the Coroner. It is stated the deceased had suffered for some time past from bronchitis."

Letter from Mrs. Mary Matthews (nee Morrall)

“.....My father-in-law, Mr. Albert Matthews, used to play football in the 1930s. He used to be landlord of the OLD BUSH in Bradley Lane, the ROCKET POOLS, Bradley, and also the HOP POLE in Dudley Street, Bilston, with my mother-in-law Ethel Matthews until their retirement.”

Sandwell Evening Mail 16/6/1986

“A youth had a lucky escape when he found an unexploded bomb at the bottom of a pool on a Black Country housing estate – and hurled it to the bank. It was discovered after members of a local angling club drained the pool on the Rocket Pool Estate at Bilston. The youngster, who was helping to clear rubbish from the bottom of the pool, picked up the bomb and threw it onto the bank behind him. Mr. Ken Page, licensee of the nearby ROCKET POOL pub, which had to be evacuated, said, ‘It’s very lucky the thing didn’t go off.’ The bomb was found on Saturday as members of the Rocket Pool angling club were clearing the pool in order to build a couple of islands for wildlife.”

Sandwell Evening Mail 15/2/1994

“A licensee was pushed to the ground and robbed of £2,000 takings in the Black Country. The 51-year-old man was leaving the ROCKET POOL, School Drive, Bilston, to deposit his takings in the Post Office when he was attacked in the pub doorway at about 11am yesterday. Police are appealing for witnesses”

Birmingham Mail 19/12/1994

Stephen’s father, Mr. Martin Childs, aged 39, keeps the ROCKET POOL pub at Bradley, Bilston.

Express & Star 21/8/2008

“A landlord known for ‘pulling the best glass of beer in Wolverhampton’ has died aged 88.

Dennis Jones was today described as a ‘true gentleman,’ having stood behind the bar of the FORGE HAMMER in Lanesfield for a decade from 1974 to 1984. He also worked at the ROCKET POOL and OLD BUSH in Bradley and the DOG AND PARTRIDGE in Bilston. Mr. Jones, of Bamber Close, Bradmore, was married to Pat, who died five-and-a-half years ago. They had five children, David, now 64, Alan, 62, Brenda, 56, Andrew, 53, and Mark, 45.

Daughter Brenda, who lives in Lanesfield, said her father was a well-known member of the community. ‘He was a very quiet man,’ Mrs. Paddock said today. ‘Mum was the bubbly one behind the bar but dad was well-known for pulling the best glass of beer in the city. People would always tell him that. He was a meticulous landlord and a true gentleman.’

Mr. Jones died of a heart problem on August 13. He moved into the pub trade aged 51 after working as a tool maker at firms including Villiers and Jone Hawk Engineers.

Mrs. Paddock added, ‘He was a wonderful dad. He never told us what to do – just gave out advice when we needed it. He very rarely raised his voice, because he didn’t need to. He commanded such respect. He was a very amiable person and was very well-read and articulate. He enjoyed working behind the bar and meeting people but I think he moved into the trade for mum really.’ Mrs. Paddock said her father enjoyed gardening and reading. ‘He also loved his animals and was very upset when his dogs and cats passed away,’ she added. Mrs. Paddock had been her father’s full-time carer for two-and-a-half years.

His funeral will take place at Bushbury Crematorium on Wednesday at 2pm.”

“A Wolverhampton pub could lose its licence after allegedly putting customers ‘at risk’ by committing a number of Covid-19 safety breaches. Officers are calling on of Wolverhampton’s licensing sub-committee to strip ROCKET POOLS INN, on Rocket Pool Drive in Bradley, of its licence when it meets next week. Evidence submitted by authority licensing officers and West Midlands Police states coronavirus regulations were breached on different occasions in August and December last year and again in April this year. Alleged offences include overcrowding, failure to wear face masks, people drinking standing up, more than six people at a table and a failure to implement a number of prevention control measures. Officers also said CCTV footage obtained from the premises showed a clear breach of the regulations and an inability to manage or challenge customers.

Charlotte Rose, the council environmental health Covid compliance officer, said, ‘There has been a flagrant disregard to uphold the licensing objectives, comply with conditions of licence, and ensure that the premises were Covid secure by continuing to flout the requirements set by law during the emergency period. Patrons were unnecessarily put at risk with a clear lack of management. I propose a revocation of the licence.’

Aimee Taylor, West Midlands Police licensing and regulatory officer, added, ‘The Premise License Holder has failed to comply with the conditions on their license and failed to ensure their premise is Covid Secure. From my experience dealing with this premises, it is clear that the Premise License Holder does not manage this premises to the standard West Midlands Police Licensing would expect. I do not believe the Premise License Holder has involvement in the running of this premise and therefore this causes concern. West Midlands Police fully support this application for a review.’

The call for a review of the licence has also been supported by the city’s public health department. Members of the committee could choose to revoke the licence or impose a suspension for up to three months when it meets on Tuesday.”

“Thomas Jukes and Lucy Banks were charged with stealing 18s 6d and a purse from Luke Nicholls, of Wednesbury, a working man, who deposed that having gone from Wednesbury to Bilston to see the wreck after the boiler explosion at Millfields Works, he was drinking at the ROEBUCK, Bridge Street, in company with the two prisoners, when he felt Jukes put his hand in his pocket, and take out his purse and money. He followed him and the girl to a house of bad character, and saw his purse in the girl’s hand, and tried to recover it. The result was that he fought Jukes, who had the best of it, and then informed the police. Jukes and the girl were arrested on the same night. The prisoners were remanded to Wolverhampton on Wednesday next.”
