“On Tuesday last Mr. E. Hooper, coroner, held an inquest at the JUNCTION INN, Tividale, on the body of Ellen Ann Willey, aged six years. On the 24th ult the deceased was in a bedroom where there was a fire, and her clothes took fire. Her father ran to her on hearing her screams, but the injuries she sustained led to her death on the 4th inst. An inquest was held by the same jury on the body of Sarah Ann Elmore, aged eight years. She went to boil the kettle in a neighbour’s house, on the 31st ult, and on stirring the fire some of the hot cinders caused her pinafore to ignite. The flames were extinguished by two neighbours, who heard her scream, but she died from the injuries she sustained on Monday last. In each case a verdict of Accidental Death was returned.”

Birmingham Journal 28/11/1868

“On Thursday, Mr. C. H. Bayley, Deputy Coroner, opened an inquest at the JUNCTION INN, Tividale, Rowley Regis, upon the bodies of Richard Bowater (25), doggy, Rounds Colliery, and Robert Cambridge (37), miner, Rowley. Mr. J. P. Baker, the Inspector of Mines for the district, attended; and Mr. Bradley, the proprietor of the Tividale Hall Colliery, was also present.

On the 14th inst, the deceased men and a collier named Robinson were at work in the No.13 Pit of the above colliery, when an explosion of sulphur took place, and they were severely burned upon various parts of the body.

Harriet Bowater stated that her husband left home early on the morning of the 14th inst, but was brought back a few hours afterwards, severely burnt upon his back and sides. He died on the 23rd instant. Deceased never complained of the pit.

Mary Cambridge, after referring to the date of the occurrence, stated that her husband died on the 25th inst. During his sufferings he told her that the explosion was caused by Bowater and himself, and, further, that no one was to blame. Deceased said Bowater went into the workings and called out for a light. Deceased asked if there was any danger, and Bowater said he didn't know. A naked candle was then taken down to where Bowater stood, and the explosion occurred. Mr. Bayley said he should not proceed with the inquest until he had the evidence of the man Robinson before him. His statement would be of the utmost importance.

The inquest was adjourned until the 21st of December, in order that the survivor might be in a fit state to give evidence.”

Birmingham Daily Post 23/12/1868

“About three weeks ago, we reported a fatal explosion at Groveland Colliery, belonging to Messrs. Bradley, whereby two men, named Richard Bowater and Robert Cambridge, lost their lives.

At the inquest, opened immediately afterwards, it appeared that the men alone were to blame, inasmuch as they wantonly took a naked candle into the workings, instead of a safety-lamp.

At the adjourned inquest, held at the JUNCTION INN, Tividale, before Mr. C. H. Bayley, the Deputy Coroner, Joseph Bowater, the father of one of the deceased men, and Mr. Evans, the colliery manager, were examined but without throwing much further light on the subject.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

County Advertiser 29/9/1877

"Thomas Pratt, landlord of the JUNCTION INN, Tividale, was charged by Police-superintendent Woolaston with permitting drunkenness in his house, in contravention of the Licensing Acts. Mr. Joseph Stokes (Dudley) appeared to defend.

Police-constable Hicklin gave evidence to the effect that at 10.15pm, on the 17th inst, he was on duty near the defendant's house, and heard a woman screaming and other noises as if a disturbance was going on inside it. He went into a dancing room where the disturbance appeared to be, and found four men there, drunk, and fighting together. Two of the men were named George Melson and Henry Ralph; the others gave the names of John Jones and John Cherrington. There were many people in the room, and there was scarcely room to stir. He spoke to the landlord and called his attention to what was going on, and he replied that a drunken man had come into his house, but he had only had one pint of ale. The men were ultimately got out of the house, but one of them was very disorderly, offering to fight anybody.

Mr. Stokes cross-examined the witness (the only one who was called for the prosecution) as to whether the landlord said one of the men had come in for the purpose of 'kicking up a row,' and whether he (the officer) had not met the servant who was sent in search of him. He also contradicted the officer's statement as to one pint of ale being supplied, and called several witnesses to prove that the defendant took measures to eject the man as soon as he commenced a disturbance, and that the fighting was in consequence of his resisting.

The men George Melson, Henry Ralph, John Cherrington, and John Jones were summoned on charges of being drunk in a public house, but only the two first-named appeared.

The magistrates decided to dismiss the cases against Pratt and Melson, and to fine Ralph, who pleaded guilty, 5s and costs."

“The magistrates at Wednesday’s Petty Sessions (Messrs. W. Bassano and B. Hingley) had before them a case in which John Dabbs, landlord of the JUNCTION INN, Tividale, was charged with permitting gambling on his premises, on the 8th instant. Mr. Hayes prosecuted; Mr. Harper (Dudley) defending.

The magistrates thought the case a very bad one, and inflicted a fine of £5 and costs.”

County Express 26/4/1879

“Arthur Dabbs, landlord of the JUNCTION INN, Tividale, was charged with allowing Police-constable Bishop to remain on his premises whilst he was on duty, and further with supplying him with refreshments at the same time. Mr. Addison prosecuted and Mr. Stokes defended.

Police-sergeant Cooper said that on the 4th inst at about half-past eleven at night he and Police-constable Winfield were near to the JUNCTION INN, Tividale. They heard voices in the house and on looking through the window saw a man named Melson in the room. They heard a voice which they believed to be that of Bishop say, ‘I am three points, high, low, and game.’ The landlady then said, ‘Yes; it is my deal next.’ Witness then went round the back of the house, followed by Winfield. He found the back door open and he walked in. He entered the tap-room and there found the man Melson, the landlord, the landlady, and Police-constable Bishop, who was just in the act of taking a cigar out of a cigar box which was on the table. There were also a pack of cards and two goblet glasses on the table. He spoke to the landlord about it, and the landlord then said they had been playing for nothing but pastime. Witness pointed out that he was harbouring a policeman whilst he was on duty. To this he made no reply.

Cross-examined he said it was usual to wear an armlet on the arm when a constable was on special duty, and sometimes on ordinary duty.

Police Constables Winfield and Bishop gave evidence supporting the charge.

In cross-examination Bishop denied that he had told defendant that he was not on duty till twelve o’clock.

The defendant was then sworn, and he swore positively that the officer had told him that he should not be on duty until twelve o’clock. The man Melson was a guest of his.

Mr. Stokes called attention in his defence to the fact that one charge would embrace the two, because although a publican might harbour a policeman and not supply him with refreshment, yet if he supplied him with refreshment he was harbouring him as well, and thus the two offences merged into one. This he contended was the true reading of the Act of Parliament. He also pointed out that the defendant had sworn that the officer had told him his beat did not commence until twelve, and though it might be an improper act to have a policeman on his premises at that hour still it was not an illegal one. He also contended that the defendant was not to blame as the officer wore no distinguishing mark when on duty, and that the officer ought to have worn some such mark in the present instance.

The Bench considered the case fully proved, and as it was a very serious offence and the defendant had been previously convicted of permitting gambling on his premises they fined him £10 and costs.

Mr. Stokes made an application that the JUNCTION INN might be transferred to the defendant. He had for some time past been holding it under a permit, and Mr. Stokes assured the Bench that it was the defendant’s intention to dispose of the house as soon as possible.

The Bench granted the defendant an interim authority for a fortnight.”

“Yesterday morning, a boatman found the body of a female in a part of the canal known as the Old Locks, Tividale. He gave information to the police, who had the deceased conveyed to the JUNCTION INN, Tividale, to await inquest. At the time of writing the body had not been identified, and there is at present no evidence to show how the deceased got into the water. The deceased, who was about 25 years of age, was respectably attired, and wore a black jacket and kid gloves.”

“On Monday Mr. Edwin Hooper (South Staffordshire Coroner) held an inquest at the JUNCTION INN, Tividale, on the body of Louisa Beddard. aged 32, a single woman, youngest daughter of the late John Beddard, of the Becknell Fields Farm, Kingswinford. Deceased left the house of her sister (Mrs. Caroline Male, Dudley Port) on Thursday night. On the following morning her body was found in the locks near the BLUE BALL INN, at Tividale. When she left home she had some silver money in her possession, but when the body was discovered in the water there was but 1½d in the dress pocket. She was in company with a young man on the Saturday night previous to her death, but there was no evidence to show whether or not she parted with him on good terms.

Henry Cracknell [NEW CART AND HORSES], proprietor of the theatre in West Bromwich Street, Oldbury, said the deceased called at his establishment on the night previous to the day on which the body of the deceased was found in the water. She asked if the theatre was open, and witness replied that it was not. She said she had some friends waiting at the top of the street who desired to come in. Witness asked her to fetch her friends into the house and take them into the smoke room, as they might enjoy themselves there, he being a musician. She went out, but did not return.

Rachel Noon, of Tividale, examined the body of the deceased, but found no traces of injury of any kind. The hair was not dishevelled.

By permission of the Coroner, Mr. Shakespeare, mining engineer, of West Bromwich, brother-in-law of the deceased, stated that he desired the question as to the missing hat of the deceased cleared up.

The Coroner said that had not been brought under his notice.

Mr. Superintendent Woollaston said the hat belonging to the deceased had not yet been found.

Police-constable Winfield produced a jet chain and locket which was round the neck of the deceased when the body was found. There was only 1½d in the dress pocket. He had been unable to find deceased's hat, although the water had been drawn from that part of the canal in which the body was found.

Leah Stanley, barmaid at Cracknell's, said deceased had an umbrella with her when she called there. No umbrella was found in the canal with the body.

A verdict was returned to the effect that deceased was found dead in the canal; but how she got there no evidence was forthcoming to show.”

Dudley and District News 11/12/1880

“Jane Stanley, landlady of the JUNCTION INN, Tividale, was charged with having, on the 29th of November, unlawfully permitted gaming upon her licensed premises. Mr. Wright prosecuted for the police, Mr. Stokes defending.

William Pratt, engineer, of Tividale, said he went into the JUNCTION INN, Tividale, on the 29th of last month, at half-past six in the evening, and saw four men playing at dominoes. They were playing for ale, which defendant herself brought in. They also played for money. He was there till nine o’clock, and the men were playing all the time.

William Moss, a carpenter, of Tividale, corroborated, saying that about half-past ten the defendant took the dominoes away, as a fight was taking place between two of the men. He did not see any money passed, although he told defendant he thought they were playing for ‘dry.’

Sarah Jane Pratt also gave corroborative testimony.

Mr. Stokes denied that the men were playing for money or money’s worth, and called defendant, who, upon oath, said that she let the men have the dominoes on the promise that they would not play for any value. The witness, William Moss, was asked by her to report to her if anything wrong was going on, but he told her it was all right. She had no knowledge whatever of the men playing for any value.

The Bench said they believed the defendant was a very respectable person, but she had a very bad house, unfortunately for herself, which she seemed scarcely able to manage. They believed defendant had been indiscreet, but they must inflict a small penalty as a caution to defendant. She would be fined 10s and costs. Mr. Stokes intimated that defendant contemplated giving up the house.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 3/6/1869

“William Smith was charged with having, in company with another man not in custody, stolen a decanter and a quantity of sherry from the KINGS ARMS, Oldbury, on the 27th May. Prisoner and a companion paid a visit to the house of Mr. Hudson, about two o’clock, and called for a pint of porter. While Mr. Hudson went to fetch it, prisoner and his friend decamped with a decanter of sherry, which was placed on a shelf behind the bar. They were pursued by the prosecutor and a police-officer, and the prisoner was captured, but his companion got away. Prisoner was remanded for a month, to enable the police to apprehend his companion.”

Stourbridge Observer 5/6/1869

“William Smith was charged with feloniously stealing a decanter and some sherry on the 27th ult, the property of James Hudson.

Prosecutor said he lived at the KINGS ARMS, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, and was a licensed victualler. The decanter produced was his property. On the above date the prisoner and another man came into his house, and called for some porter. They paid for it. He had occasion to go into the cellar, and on returning missed the decanter produced. Prisoner had left. He went and gave information to Police-constable Hayes, and followed the prisoner, and caught him. The prisoner’s companion threw the decanter produced over a wall. Police-constable Hayes proved apprehending prisoner.

Remanded for a month, bail being accepted – himself in £20, and one surety in £20.”

“At the Oldbury Police Court, yesterday – before Messrs. J. E. Wilson and B. T. Sadler – William Butterworth (55), alias Holt, of no fixed abode, commission agent, who formerly was an itinerant minister in the Methodist New Connexion Church, was charged with stealing a black leather bag, of the value of 3s, on the 20th of April, 1885, the property of Freeman York.

Betsy York, wife of prosecutor, said that at the time of the theft she resided at the LOCOMOTIVE INN, Trinity Street, Langley, but now kept the KINGS ARMS.

Thomas Short, manager of a pawnbroker’s business belonging to Mrs. Langman, of Dudley, said that on the 20th of April, 1885, prisoner pledged the bag for 1s 3d in the name of John Holt.

Police-sergeant Stanton said he arrested prisoner on the 27th February.

In answer to the charge prisoner pleaded not guilty, and alleged that it was a case of mistaken identity. He remarked that there was one gentleman on the Bench that could see a vast difference in him from what he was four or five years ago.

The Bench fined defendant 40s and costs, or in default fourteen days’ imprisonment. The total fine amounted to £3 11s 6d. Prisoner went to gaol.”

“At Oldbury Police Court yesterday Mr. W. Shakespeare made an application on behalf of the owner of the KINGS ARMS INN, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, for a renewal of the license. The house belonged to the Manchester Brewery Company, and a large sum had been spent on it. About two months ago the tenant made an application to the Bench for a transfer. A certificate of character was produced, and as there was no objection by the police the license was then granted. The license was renewed at the general licensing meeting. The police about three weeks ago discovered that the man ten years ago had been convicted of felony, and the house was ordered to be closed. As the conviction disqualified the licensee, Mr. Shakespeare submitted that his clients ought not to suffer for this. The Magistrates' Clerk said he should like time given him to consider points of law bearing upon the case. The case was adjourned for a month, in order that the matter might come before the same justices."

"Yesterday at Oldbury Police Court Mr. W. F. Vernon made an application with reference to the license of the KINGS ARMS INN, Birmingham Street.

It appeared that the premises are the property of the Manchester Brewery Company, and a month ago an application was made to the Bench for a transfer of the license, but it transpired that the person whose name was mentioned had been convicted of felony some years ago, and it was contended that consequently the license had lapsed, as the man who had been in the house was disqualified under the Act, and the application for the transfer of the license to another person was not made at the proper time. In support of the application now made for the license to be transferred to a man named Bailey it was urged that the Act had been complied with, inasmuch as the application was made at the first sessions after the fact of the man's disqualification became known to the owner.

The Bench granted a temporary authority, on the understanding that enquiries would be made before the special licensing sessions, when the justices would consider any information laid before them as to the character of the proposed holder of the license."

"Yesterday, at Oldbury Police Court, John Turton Taylor, landlord of the KINGS ARMS INN, Birmingham Street, was convicted of supplying drink to a man whilst in an intoxicated condition, and ordered to pay £1 2s 6d, including costs."

"On Sunday the body of Mary Ann Matthews (26), wife of William Matthews, of Canal Side, Low Town, Oldbury, was found in the Birmingham Canal, near her residence.

Deceased visited her mother's house on Saturday night, and left there about 11.30. As she did not reach home, the canal was searched, and her body was found. It is supposed that owing to the dense fog which prevailed at the time she missed her way, and fell into the water.

Last night Mr. A. H. Hebbert (deputy coroner) held an inquest on the body.

The husband (who identified the body), a man named Bryan, Bridget Carroll (mother of the deceased), and Hannah Clews gave evidence to the effect that deceased left her mother's house about 11.30 on Saturday night, and that she was sober.

Police-constable Avern was called, and deposed that on Saturday night he ejected deceased from the KINGS ARMS INN, Birmingham Street, and she was then drunk.

At the request of the jury, the coroner censured the whole of the witnesses, with the exception of Police-constable Avern, for the unsatisfactory manner in which they had given their evidence.

The jury returned a verdict of Found Drowned."

George Thomas Batty (26), formerly a doctor’s assistant, Albert Street, Oldbury, was indicted for supplying Ellen McQueenie with a noxious drug for the purpose of procuring abortion. Mr. Shakespeare prosecuted, and Mr. Vachell defended.

The prosecutrix is a single woman, and at the time of the alleged offence was in service at the KINGS ARMS INN, Birmingham Street, Oldbury. On October 24th she went to the prisoner, who told her she was pregnant and said he would give her something ‘to take it away.’ The girl did not admit that her condition was as suggested by prisoner. She took three doses of the medicine, and as it made her unwell, she placed the bottle and medicine in the back kitchen, where her mistress found it, and thereupon instituted inquiries. Mr. Shakespeare explained that the section of the Act under which the proceedings were taken provided that the prosecution had only to prove that the medicine was supplied with the intention of causing a miscarriage, irrespective of whether the woman was actually pregnant.

The prosecutrix was called, and said after the medicine was discovered by her mistress she saw the prisoner, who told her to say the medicine was supplied for diarrhoea and poorness of blood. In cross-examination, he admitted that at the first interview with the prisoner she said she was suffering from diarrhoea; and the medicine did actually cure this. In reply to His Lordship, prosecutrix said she did not believe she was pregnant, and she took the medicine for diarrhoea. The girl told Mrs. Warner, on October 29 that she was pregnant, and prisoner made a similar statement to Mr. Warner, on October 28. Warner took the bottle to the police on November 2, because he said rumours were getting about concerning him.

Mr. Warner was uncertain of dates and conversation with the prisoner, and His Lordship expressed himself as dissatisfied with the evidence. He said there had been too much hurry in getting up the case, and added that had the prisoner been committed to the Sessions instead of the Assizes it would have enabled the prosecution to complete their case, and it would also, by that time, have enabled them to decide as to the girl’s condition. He thought the evidence was insufficient on which to convict the prisoner. He had read through the depositions, and it appeared that unless the girl was pregnant the medicine was harmless. The girl herself said she did not believe she was pregnant, and the medicine actually cured her of a complaint from which she was suffering.

Mr. Shakespeare intimated that he would not proceed further with the case.

His Lordship directed the Jury to return a verdict of not guilty, and prisoner was discharged.

The Judge again commented on the practice of sending cases to the Assizes which ought to be tried at Quarter Sessions.”

“Yesterday, at Oldbury Police Court, William Frederick Hughes, described as a tipster, of Dudley, was charged with doing wilful damage at the KINGS ARMS INN, Birmingham Street. Defendant said the customers in the bar asked him to sing a song, but the manager refused to let him. During a scuffle which ensued he struck at the landlord, and his fist went through the glass. He was ordered to pay 19s 6d.”

Mr. Jeffries opposed the renewal of the license of the KINGS ARMS INN, Birmingham Street, kept by the Manchester Brewery Company Limited; the TRAVELLERS REST INN, Hales Owen Street, kept by Samuel Sherwood; the JOLLY COLLIER INN; Albert Street, kept by Alice Baker, on the ground that they continued to give the long pull. The objection set forth that it was an unfair system of trading, that it was opposed to the wishes of the licensed trade generally, that it was contrary to public order and morality and calculated to increase drunkenness, that the license in each case was not necessary, and that the holder was not a fit and proper person to hold such license.

Mr. R. J. Lawrence appeared on behalf of the Manchester Brewery Company, and Mr. J. Clark represented the other two.

Mr. Jeffries, who opposed the licenses on behalf of the Oldbury Licensed Trade Association, gave evidence to the effect that the three publicans in question were giving more than 25% over measure agreed upon by resolution of the trade. Witness was subjected to a severe cross-examination by Mr. Lawrence, in the course of which he acknowledged that trade combinations did sometimes fail, and that in the event of this particular one failing all the publicans would go back to the old plan of giving excessive over-measure.

The Bench retired to consider their decision, after which the chairman remarked that the justices did not consider there was any reasonable ground of objection in the arguments laid before them why the licenses should not be renewed. The licenses would therefore be renewed.”

John Windmill (47), labourer, was indicted for the manslaughter of Edward Matthews at West Bromwich, on October 21st. Mr. Wilkinson prosecuted and Mr. Lawrence defended.

It appeared that previous to the commission of the alleged offence the deceased had an altercation with the prisoner in the KINGS ARMS, Oldbury, while they were drinking together. They were put out of the house, and left by different ways. Afterwards Matthews went to prisoner, who was working as a uth on the tram-way, and struck him in the face, knocking out a tooth. Prisoner struck deceased with his shovel, but without hurting him. Deceased followed up his attack and knocked prisoner down, and in a struggle that followed Matthews fell over a tram line, and sustained a compound fracture of the leg, from which blood poisoning set in, causing death.

The defence set up was that prisoner was acting in self-defence.

The medical evidence brought for the prosecution did not show that there was any sign of a blow on the head, such as might have been given with a shovel.

The jury returned a verdict of not guilty, and prisoner was discharged.”

He was afterwards left alone for a minute or two, and then went to the KINGS ARMS INN, Birmingham Street, where he said that he had had some money from the other public house, and proceeded to treat all the customers, spending 4s 6d. Subsequently he went to the DOG AND PHEASANT INN, Flash Road, and while there was seen by a servant from the scullery window to lean over the counter and interfere with the till. Joseph James (24), miner, was charged with stealing some money belonging to Emmanuel Love, licensee of the BIRD IN HAND, Simpson Street, Oldbury.

Prosecutor said he put 7s 4d in a jug on a shelf at 9.30. Later he missed 6s 5d.

Other witnesses stated that prisoner was at the inn, and afterwards spent 4s 6d at another house.

Prisoner now said he had never drank any beer in his life and he was not in Oldbury that night.

The jury found the prisoner guilty. Superintendent Hill said prisoner had respectable parents, who tried to keep him from a life of crime, which he commenced in 1903. Prisoner had been charged at Oldbury Police Court several times for offences similar to this, whilst he had also been convicted for burglary.

Prisoner said that if the Commissioner gave him three years it would be the making of him.

The Commissioner: Very well, I will. Three years' penal servitude.”

“The Worcestershire Licensing Committee met at the Shire Hall, Worcester, yesterday to consider the cases of several houses referred for compensation.....

Mr. Lawrence objected to the reference of the KINGS ARMS, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, a fully licensed house referred for compensation on the grounds of redundancy. Mr. Lawrence contended that either the WHITE LION or the CROWN AND ANCHOR, houses in the same neighbourhood, should have been referred (if there was only the question of redundancy) before the KINGS ARMS.

It was stated by both sides that the trade of the house had increased fourfold since the property was bought by Mr. F. Myatt from Messrs. S. Allsopp and Sons Ltd., the explanation being good management by a popular licensee.

The committee deferred giving their decision until 30 July, when they meet again.”

Evesham Standard 28/3/1914

The Committee considered the claims of the persons interested in the license of the KINGS ARMS, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, in which £2,320 was claimed. The parties claiming to be interested were Henry Benton as licensee, S. Allsop and Sons Ltd, as registered owners, the Manchester Brewery Company as freeholders, and the Royal Exchange Assurance Company as mortgagees. Another claim was made by Frederick Ralph Sturgis, 63, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, and the Chairman asked why he did not appear when the case was before the Committee previously.

When the question of the Committee approving the amount of compensation claimed was considered, the Chairman said the claim was made in an ingenious way. It was based upon figures for two payments for two years. He asked Mr. Jeffries to prove those figures, and Mr. Jeffries said he could not carry them any further. The Chairman said the Committee could not accept the figures, and Mr. Jeffries suggested that the Committee should refer the matter to the Inland Revenue.

The Chairman said the Committee had no power to do that, and said that the claim would come up at each meeting until proof of the figures was offered. He thought that the Committee would have to make some representation to the Justices as to whether they ought not to refuse to allow any further transfer of the license. The costs would be reserved, and would come out of the compensation when it was awarded.”

“At a meeting of the Worcestershire Licensing Committee on Saturday, the Chairman (Mr. Willis Bund) said they had had before them on many occasions the case of the KINGS ARMS, Oldbury. It was a peculiar case, in which the claimants gave particulars as to trading in two periods of a few months, and, by a process of ingenuity, constructed a claim for no less a sum than £2,320. The committee asked for evidence as to how the claim was made up, but, for some reason or another, best known to the claimants themselves, they never produced any evidence except as regards two bits of trading. The result was that the committee were wholly unable to approve the sum of £2,320, and the claimants went to the Inland Revenue. The Commissioners had now given their certificate, and, instead of £2,320, the claimants were entitled to the sum of £1,240. Further consideration of the matter would have to stand over until the next meeting, and he expected that there would be some controversy as to the division of the money.”

Birmingham Daily Post 13/7/1915

“At a meeting of the Worcestershire Licensing Committee yesterday, Mr. Willis Bund presiding, consideration was given to the settlement of shares in the amount of compensation money in respect of the following houses.....

KINGS ARMS, Birmingham Street, Oldbury; the amount of compensation determined by the Inland Revenue Commissioners being £1,340.....

Mr. Bund, alluding to the case of the KINGS ARMS, Oldbury, said it was an extraordinary one, and they had to be careful what they did. The claim was one of the worst the committee had had before them. It was made out in a most extraordinary way, and the sum asked for was £2,320. They refused to assent to this, and the parties went to the Inland Revenue. It was proved to the committee that this was one of the houses where the long-pull had been in use, and thus the amount of liquor consumed was by no means a fair representation of the trade done. The Inland Revenue Commissioners awarded a sum of £1,240. This was the amount which they deliberately decided was the right amount to be paid. The Commissioners, however, were told that the 'decision' would be appealed against, and then they had a bargain with the claimants and agreed to give another £100, making the amount £1,340. All he had to say was that in these things the committee endeavoured to do their best. They had an inflated claim before them – one of the worst claims – and it ought never to have been put forward in the way it was. They were trustees of the fund, and if this were the way things were to be done the sooner there was some legislation providing some better procedure than the Inland Revenue hearing appeals the better.”

Compensation was paid on 1st November 1915.

“Oldbury justices yesterday refused application for.....

A provisional order for the removal of the licence of the GOLDEN BALL, Parsonage Street, Oldbury, to premises proposed to be erected on land in Hagley Road West, at the corner of Monckton Road.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 4/3/1937

“The Rowley Regis licensing justices refused an application made on behalf of Mitchells and Butlers for the removal of the licence of the GOLDEN BALL, Parsonage Street, to premises which it was proposed to erect at the junction of Hagley Road and Monckton Road, Warley.”

Smethwick Telephone 5/3/1938

“Mr. Harold Eaden appeared on behalf of Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers Ltd, to apply for the removal of the license of the EAGLE INN, Park Lane, Oldbury, to premises proposed to be erected at the corner of Kingsway (formerly Monckton Road) and Hagley Road West, Quinton. The application was supported by a number of residents of the district, who were represented by Mr. H. H. Willison; whilst opposition was forthcoming from the Rev. W. C. Russell (Minister of College Road Methodist Church) and other residents, who were represented by Mr. R. K. Brown.

Mr. Eaden said with regard to the EAGLE INN, this was in no sense a redundant house in which the trade fully justified itself. He had been privileged for some few years to make the present application, which was a progressive one in the sense that the increase of houses built and being built in the area of the site during the past three years would indicate that what he had said year after year had come true: the district had developed and was still developing. There had now been reached a point when they might reasonably come to the Justices and ask for the removal of that license. In 1936, there were 597 houses nearer to this site than to any other full license. In 1937, there were 696 houses built and 92 being built – a total of 788 houses. This year, developments had been such that there were now 816 houses built and occupied, and 86 houses being built – a total of 902 houses nearer to this site than to any other full license. Taking the generally accepted figure of four persons to a house, Mr. Eaden said this gave a population of 3,680 persons. The two nearest full licenses to these people were the STAG AND THREE HORSE SHOES (three-quarters of a mile away) and the HOLLY BUSH, also three-quarters of a mile away in the other direction. Both were built to serve a purely local population and not the new district which had sprung up between them. Mr. Eaden gave particulars of a petition which had been prepared. Of the 816 householders approached, 571 had signed in favour of the proposed licensed premises – a total of 70 per cent. Those against numbered 87 (10.66 percent), and neutral, 83 (10.17 per cent). A few persons did not sign either way.

In evidence, Mr. Edwin F. Reynolds (architect) said the new house was intended to serve the needs of the neighbourhood, and not to cater for passing motorists. In reply to Mr. R. K. Brown, he said the car park would be used on the occasion of evening functions in the clubroom.

After a lengthy hearing, the Justices decided to grant the application, conditional upon the surrender of the NEW INNS, Ridgacre Lane.”

"The instinct to make the most out of a rise in the value of commodities is not limited to the stock market; it goes all the way down to the increased deposit on beer bottles. For a week after the recent increase in the deposit on beer bottles, from twopence to threepence, was introduced publicans in Birmingham were paying out pocketfuls of threepences to bottle-laden children who were cashing in on the extra penny. At the KINGS HIGHWAY HOTEL, in Hagley Road West, during the weekend, I was told, 'Children were bringing all kinds of bottles back, hoping to get threepence on them. “Smethwick brewers M&B have scotched rumours that the giant KINGS HIGHWAY pub in Quinton is to be demolished to make way for a motel.

The huge Hagley Road pub – one of the few large scale social venues left in the area for dinner dances and other major functions – has been the subject of speculation about a new motel near the M5 motorway.....

A member of the pub’s 40-strong staff said, ‘There have been a lot of rumours that M&B are selling the pub off because of a drop in trade, and that it will be knocked down to make way for a motel or turned into one.

We’ve heard that several people have already put in offers for it.’

But M&B press officer Mr. Mike Taylor said, ‘There is no way that M&B are selling off the KINGS HIGHWAY, or knocking it down to make way for a motel.

‘These rumours may have come about because we are intending to develop the KINGS HIGHWAY as a Toby Inn.....”

“About 100 jobs will be created by a plan to demolish a well-known pub and build a hotel and restaurant in its place. Toby Restaurants has submitted detailed plans to Sandwell Council for a multi-million pound scheme to pull down KINGS HIGHWAY pub in Hagley Road West, Quinton, and build a 91-bedroom four-storey hotel. It also wants to build a 90-seat pub/restaurant and provide car parking.

A spokesman for Toby Restaurants, which owns the site, said today, ‘This is a significant project which will run into millions of pounds, but we would not be contemplating building a 91-bedroom hotel if there wasn’t a demand. This area is beginning to be a boom town because of the undoubted business which the new Convention Centre in Birmingham will generate. There is already increased accommodation in the city and we see this as an ideal opportunity to add to it.’

Sandwell planning officer Mr. Roger Lemon said, ‘This is a full planning application to demolish the existing pub and build a new hotel and pub/restaurant. We have already begun the process of consultation with local residents and there is substantial interest in this proposal.’

Work on the hotel is expected to start later this year if planning permission is granted.”

Sandwell’s development control committee approved the project despite objections from five residents who said their homes would be overlooked.”

Halesowen News 35/7/2007

“Confusion reigns over the future of a landmark Quinton building amid rumours it could be demolished to make way for housing. The KINGS HIGHWAY public house, on Hagley Road West, is the subject of speculation after owners Mitchell and Butlers decided to sell the property for redevelopment. Residents believe the 67-year-old building could now be bulldozed and used for housing, though Sandwell Council confirmed no application has yet been lodged to build on the site.

Ron Sargeant, who lives near the pub, said it had become a magnet for anti-social behaviour in recent times. He said, ‘The main problem is you have had people congregating on the large car park. It has become very quiet in the pub itself and I think it will be a good thing if it does close.’

The large pub first opened its doors on December 23 1940 and is situated close to some of the area’s oldest buildings.

Bernard Taylor, chairman of the Quinton History Society, said he would have concerns about the effect a large housing development might have on other buildings near the site. He said, ‘It is disturbing because you don’t actually know what the specific plans are will be. The two Highway cottages sit right next to the pub and they are nearly 200 years old.’

A spokesman for Mitchells and Butlers confirmed the pub will open for the final time next Thursday, August 2. He said, ‘We review our estate on a regular basis and on this occasion we have taken the decision to sell the property. Our staff have been briefed and have been offered redeployment in other outlets nearby.’”

It closed on 2nd August 2007.

Halesowen News 19/8/2010 – Review by Adam Smith

With money too tight to mention the recent travel phenomenon of the ‘staycation’ has become ever more popular. The idea is that instead of killing the planet by jetting half the way across the world to put money in Johnny Foreigner’s pocket why not stay at home and see all the attractions on your doorstep. Well I live in Quinton with the Mrs. So I decided I’d take her for a romantic break in Oldbury. Never let it be said I don’t know how to show a woman a good time.

With Oldbury fast becoming the Las Vegas of the Black Country with hotels springing up all down the Wolverhampton Road ‘strip’ I thought it wouldn’t be hard to find a cheap place to stay. Well as they say around these parts, ‘If it’s good enough for Lenny Henry, it’s good enough for me’ so we plumped for the Lakeside Premier Inn where you can get a room for under £30 if you book online in advance. Surrounded by trees, which also obscure the view of the lake, the Premier Inn gets its name from the LAKESIDE pub and restaurant, which was a Brewers Fayre but has been rebranded Lakeside Table Table. It has always been a landmark pub due to its imposing position over the Wolverhampton Road and I had that happy feeling of finally going into a pub which I must have driven past a hundred times. Within seconds of walking in there was service with a smile as we were greeted by a cheerful looking assistant manager who showed us to our table overlooking majestic West Bromwich. It was a Saturday night and the place was nicely full without being rammed and the diners ranged from a lone salesman staying at the hotel, to couples enjoying a date to families celebrating special occasions. The I makes the pub seem full of nooks and crannies and there are several alcoves where either couples or friends can enjoy their meals without prying eyes.....

And after all it’s not where you are but who you are with, there is no point being on a Caribbean beach with the world’s most moody partner. The cost of a similar staycation at Oldbury’s Table Table and Premier Inn would cost well under £100 for two including room, food and drinks. It was such a success we are thinking about pushing the boat out and maybe going to Blackheath or Rowley Regis for our next staycation.”

It was renamed COOKHOUSE AND PUB in 2017.

On the previous Wednesday night, Mr. Richard Powell, of the Moat Farm, Warley Wigorn, two miles from Oldbury, was returning home. When he was within a short distance of his house he heard a shuffling by the roadside, and thinking that some dangerous persons were near, he drew a spring pocket knife. Instantly after he was struck on the head with a missile, and was stunned by the blow; but, nevertheless, as one man rushed upon him, he plunged the knife into his side with as much force as his exhausted strength would permit. Finding that Mr. Powell offered resistance, the first robber held him tightly whilst the second pelted him with stones, chiefly aiming at his head. Having weakened Mr. Powell in this way, the thieves searched his person. One first dipped his hand into one of Mr. Powell’s trouser pockets, which contained only 2d. A large sum of money was in Mr. Powell’s possession at the time, but the robbers did not find it.....”

Morning Post 12/11/1858

“On Tuesday the Police Court at Oldbury was crowded, on the examination of William Billington..... Mr. Powell remained seriously ill for several days, and was attended by Mr. Holland, surgeon, of Oldbury, and he is now in a great measure restored. He appeared in court with his head and neck covered with plaster. He described the circumstances of the attack and robbery, and said that, though Billington concealed his face, he could not be mistaken, for he had known Billington a long time; knew his stature and build, and believed that he was his first assailant.....

Sergeant Simmonds, of the Oldbury police, who apprehended the prisoner, gave evidence as to the stab, as did a surgeon, as a wound likely to be caused by such a knife as that of the prosecutor.

The prisoner alleged that he received the stab at the LAST public house near Langley Green, on the Monday night following that of the robbery, but two or three witnesses disproved this statement.

This being the whole of the evidence, the magistrates considered a prima facie case was established, and committed the prisoner to the next Worcester assizes for trial."

"Worcester City and County Assizes.....

William Billington, a miner, was charged with committing an assault on Richard Powell, at Warley Wigorn, on the night of the 27th of October, and stealing from his person a handkerchief and a shilling, his property. Mr. Powell prosecuted; Mr. Kenealy defended the prisoner.

There being doubts as to the identity of the prisoner, he was acquitted."

"About ten o'clock on Saturday night a fire broke out at the LAST INN, Mill Lane, Langley, kept by Mr. David Bates. It appears a lighted candle was left by one of the inmates upon a chest of drawers in one the bed rooms, which being accidentally upset lighted the cover. The flames spread rapidly, and in a few minutes the furniture, woodwork, and clothing in the room were ablaze. Information of the outbreak was conveyed to the alkali works, and the brigade turned out, but upon their arrival at the place it was found that the fire had been extinguished by means of buckets, there being a plentiful supply of water at hand. The front window was burnt out, and it is estimated that the damage to the furniture and wearing apparel will amount to about £20, which is not covered by insurance."

A letter as received from Messrs. Chance Brothers, stating that since an accident which happened on the 18th ult, to one of their men who accompanied their engine to a fire at the LAST INN, Langley, they had considered the question of allowing their brigade to attend fires outside their own premises, and had decided that they must henceforth confine the use of their fire engine to their own works, as it was their opinion that it was the duty of the local authorities in each township to provide adequate protection against fire at the expense of the ratepayers generally, and not to depend upon the good nature of private firm. The matter was referred to the Highway Committee.”

“The adjourned licensing session for the Oldbury Petty Sessional Division was held yesterday, at the Court-house.....

Mr. A. Young made an application on behalf of Henry Howard Paine for the removal of the license attached to the LAST INN, Langley, to an out-door beerhouse in Vicarage Road which it was proposed to name the Duke of York Inn. He explained that both licenses belonged to Showell’s Brewery Company. Mr. Waldron opposed for residents Refused.”

Smethwick Telephone 31/8/1895

“The annual Licensing Session for the Oldbury Petty Sessional Division was held on Tuesday. Superintendent Chare in his report said there were 147 persons licensed for the sale of intoxicants. One house had been closed since the last annual licensing meeting. During the year three license-holders had been proceeded against for offences under the Licensing Acts. The number of persons proceeded against for drunkenness was 210, a decrease of 38 males and 10 females compared with 1894. He had received notices of three new applications.....

Mr. W. Waldron (Brierley Hill) applied on behalf of Mr. Harry Howard Paine for the removal of the license from the LAST INN, Mill Lane, Langley, to premises situated in Vicarage Road, Langley, which he asked to be made into a full-licensed house. A similar application was made last year, and no doubt the Bench would wonder why it was again made. The answer was of a twofold character; first, because there was a great necessity for the granting of the license in that particular district; and secondly, because there was a change of circumstances from last year. The house was suitably adapted to carry on a full-licensed trade. There were four rooms downstairs, five bedrooms, four cellars, a capital yard, and a coach-house for the accommodation of three horses. If the Bench decided to grant the application it was proposed to call the house the Duke of York Inn. The situation of the house was on the main way from Warley to Smethwick and Birmingham, and there was a great deal of traffic passing the house. The immediate neighbourhood was an increasing one, and within a mile of this house there were only six licensed houses, the nearest fully-licensed house being about 600 yards away. The police had not made any objection to the application, but he believed an objection had been made by a Mr. Hill, who kept the post office in Vicarage Road. A memorial had been signed by 130 persons residing in the neighbourhood in favour of the alteration.

Evidence was then called. Messrs. J. S. Sharpe and J. Clarke opposed the granting of the license on behalf of several residents at Langley Refused.”

The license was not applied for in 1897 and was dropped.

It was demolished c.1900s.

The site was later part of Hughes Johnson's offices.

Wolverhampton Chronicle 8/12/1858

“A special sitting of the Magistrates was held on Friday last, in the Big House, Church Street, Oldbury, to inquire into the truth of the statement of Joseph Baker, a steel worker, at Langley Green, near that town, to the effect that he was acquainted with the circumstances attending the death of a woman, named Catherine Moore, aged thirty-six, a hawker of drapery goods, who was found drowned in the canal near the Seven Stars Bridge, on the Oldbury and Birmingham turnpike-road, on the 24th of February, 1854.

An inquest was held upon the body of the woman Moore at the time, and a verdict of Found Drowned was returned.

During last week the man Baker, whilst intoxicated in a public house, avowed that he knew the two men who murdered her. The police were informed of this statement, and Serjeant Simmonds went to the house of Baker’s parents, with whom he lived, and who said that he had made similar assertions to them.

A search was made for Henry Webb, one of Baker’s companions, and he was brought up as a witness, at the private offices of the Clerks to the Justices.

Mr. James Ballard, licensed victualler, of the LOCOMOTIVE INN, Oldbury, the only accused person now living, attended to defend himself from the aspersions cast upon his character by Baker.

Henry Webb, the person who overheard the prisoner’s observations in the SEVEN STARS, was examined. He stated that her was in the room of the public house when Baker, who was sitting as if in a reflective mood, said, ‘Yes; I saw it all with my own eyes; they are the murderers.’ One of the company present, astonished by this remark, said, ‘What did you see?’ and Baker replied, ‘Oh, I saw the body in the water; I wanted to pull it out, but Ballard got hold of me and wouldn’t let me, whilst Markwick stood watching on the bridge.’ On being asked how it was that he saw the men, Baker said he encountered them on his road home.

Serjeant Simmonds stated that Baker had made similar statements when he was sober as well as when he was intoxicated. Baker had also said that he intended never to ‘spilt,’ but that he could not keep the secret, for his conscience would not let him be quiet.

Mr. Ballard stated that he was altogether innocent of the extraordinary charge now brought against him. He could prove an alibi, as he was in business in London at the time named by Baker.

In reply to the Magistrates, Baker said, ‘I have no remembrance of having made such statements; and if I have, I must have been out of my senses.’

The Magistrates expressed their astonishment at Baker’s conduct, and severely reprimanded him. They also expressed a hope that, for the sake of surviving family and friends of Mr. Markwick, and in justice to Mr. Ballard, full publicity would be given to the issue of the inquiry. Mr. Ballard left the Court without a stain on his character. They did not believe a sentence of what Baker had said; they thought he was insane.”

"Yesterday (Tuesday) se'nnight, an inquest was held at the MALT SHOVEL public house, Oldbury, before George Hinchliffe, Esq, on the body of Eliza Harris, who died on the Friday night previous, under the following circumstances.

Her husband, who is in regular work, had for some time deprived her of the common necessities of life, besides having beaten and ill-used her in a most brutal and unmanly manner. It was proved that on the morning of her death, he compelled her to get up from bed, and in attempting to obey his request she fell upon the floor, when his language and treatment was most disgraceful.

The fellow was brought before the Jury in custody, and was most severely reprimanded by the Coroner and Jury, who told him they were only sorry they could not give him what he so richly deserved. The verdict was to the effect that death was caused by disease of the heart, brought on by excitement from the intemperate language and treatment of Levison Harris, her husband.

A post mortem examination had been made by Mr. T. R. Cooper, surgeon.

When the unfortunate deceased was buried, the churchyard was thronged to excess, and with great difficulty the fellow escaped being forced into the grave."

The deceased was at work with other men, and while the latter were at dinner, he went with a naked candle into a part of the mine where he had been at work, and shortly afterwards the men, by a sudden gust of wind, became aware that an explosion had taken place. On proceeding to the spot, they found Casey lying in the road very much burnt. He was taken up the pit and carried home, but died in about a fortnight from the effect of the burns. It was said that very little sulphur had accumulated; and that the explosion was right in the current of air. But the witnesses stated that the ventilation was sufficient, and it was supposed that the sulphur accumulated near a sudden slip of the mine. This being a stone-pit, the Government Inspector was not present. The Jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

Benjamin Astle, Talbot Street, said about 3 o’clock on the 29th ult, he saw the deceased in the act of ascending a ladder, which he had placed against a beam to put a strap on a pulley. The ladder being rather short was almost in a perpendicular position. The bottom of the ladder gave way, and it fell, the deceased falling with it. He saw the deceased get up and walk a short distance, holding his left side.

Joseph Plant, Halesowen Street, blacksmith, said he was in the shop when the accident occurred. He did not see the deceased fall but he went to him immediately afterwards, and saw him walk a short distance to a box. He appeared to be in great pain, and put his hand to his side. Deceased walked home about fifteen minutes after the accident occurred.

Charles Turbitt, surgeon, of Church Square, said he was fetched to deceased about 6 o’clock on the evening of the 29th ult. He complained of great pain in the bowels. There were no external injuries, with the exception of a bruise and abrasions of the skin, on the right arm, such as would be occasioned by the fall. The deceased gradually became worse, and died at 4 o'clock the following day.

"Mary Ann Morris, landlady of the MALT SHOVEL INN, Low Town, Oldbury, was charged with keeping her house open during illegal hours on the 16th inst.
Police-constable Peart stated that at seventeen minutes past eleven o'clock on the night in question he visited the defendant's premises, and found a man named Michael Welch there.
Mr. Shakespeare, who defended, admitted that Welch was there, but pleaded that he was courting the landlady.
Defendant was fined 10s and costs.
Michael Welch was then charged with being on the above-named premises during prohibited hours. The magistrates imposed a fine of 1s and costs, and advised him in future to do his courting before eleven o'clock."

"Oldbury Police Court. Mary Ann Morris, landlady of the MALT SHOVEL INN, Low Town, was charged with permitting drunkenness on the 16th inst, and Michael Welch, an ironworker, was charged with being drunk on the premises.

The landlady, it appeared, was a widow with four children, and for the defence Mr. Shakespeare argued that her only defence was that she allowed this young gentleman (Welch) to remain rather too long courting her. The landlady was fined 10s and costs and Welch was fined 1s and costs, the parties being told that if they wished to do their courting on licensed premises they must do it before 11 o'clock."

“At the Police Court, yesterday, John Fenton [sic] Taylor, of the MALT SHOVEL INN, Low Town, Oldbury, applied for a temporary authority to be converted into a permanent license. Mr. J. S. Sharpe supported and Superintendent Chare objected to the application.

The Superintendent said he had received complaints of betting on horse-racing going on in applicant’s house.

Mr. Sharpe said those complaints should have been made in the shape of a summons, then the applicant could have defended himself.

Mr. Heaton said the Bench considered Superintendent Chare had acted strictly within his duty. They should grant a further temporary authority; but on the distinct understanding that it would not be made a permanent license, to give the owners of the house an opportunity of finding another tenant to whom the magistrates might grant the license.”

John Pugh, MALT SHOVEL INN, Low Town, Oldbury, because the house and premises are so constructed as to facilitate the commission of offences against the licensing laws, and also prevent proper police supervision being exercised over the house.....

“Yesterday, the adjourned licensing sessions for the Oldbury Division were held at the Court House, the magistrates present being Messrs. G. Heaton, A. M. Chance, T. Lavender, and H. Heaton. A long time was occupied in the consideration of applications for sanction to make alterations in licensed premises.....

Mr. J. S. Sharpe appeared on behalf of Messrs. J. A. and A. Thompson, the owners and licensees of the WHITE HORSE INN and the MALT SHOVEL INN.....

Mr. Heaton, referring to the MALT SHOVEL INN, said that the Bench had consented to the renewal of that license on the understanding that a doorway into another property should be blocked up within fourteen days. He asked if that had been done. Mr. Sharpe said it had been fenced off.....

After deliberating in private, Mr. Heaton said the license of the WHITE HORSE would be granted and the Bench wished it to be understood that in future alterations of licensed premises should not be made without plans being submitted and proper sanction of the justices being obtained. The other licenses were renewed, and the applications for alterations were approved, with the exception of the case of the WHY NOT INN, which was refused.”

William Edwards (18), labourer, was indicted for breaking into the dwelling house of William Spittle, at Oldbury, on January 19, and stealing a sovereign and three three-penny pieces. Mr. E. G. M. Carmichael prosecuted.

Florence Spittle, wife of the prosecutor, who is a dairyman, said that on the evening of January 19 she locked the premises up securely before leaving, but on returning she found the trap door leading into the cellar open, a cash box broken open, and the money abstracted. Prisoner used to work at the house, and sometimes slept there.

Thomas Aston, a lad of 11, spoke to having a conversation with prisoner on the same evening, in the course of which prisoner asked him when Mrs. Spittle would be back, and who had got the key.

Elizabeth Tyldesley, daughter of the landlord of the MALT SHOVEL INN, Oldbury, said that on the evening of the 19th she served prisoner with two small bottles of stout, for each of which he paid with a three-penny piece.

PS Male went to prisoner's house the same evening. Prisoner was in bed, and in his pocket were found a sovereign, a three-penny piece, and other coins. The point of the blade of a knife fitted a broken blade of a knife in prisoner's possession. After denying the offence for some time, prisoner admitted that he had done it.

The Jury found prisoner guilty, but in consideration of his youth and that being his first conviction, they recommended him to mercy.

PS Male said that although prisoner had not been previously convicted, he was suspected of having broken into his master's house, and stolen £4, a watch, and a pair of gold earrings.

He was sentenced to three months in the second division, and as he was being removed, shouted out that he hoped the officer would 'drop a corpse.'"

"Worcestershire Quarter Sessions.....

Joseph Brown (29), and Anthony Walker (23) were charged with stealing a hundred and twenty-four pennies, a brass lock, and a tin money box, the moneys and property of the Oldbury Urban District Council, on March 29, at Langley.

The prisoners were seen by several witnesses in the vicinity of a void house in Junction Street, Langley, to which an entrance was forced, and the money and box taken from a penny in the slot gas meter. The same night Walker, in the MALT SHOVEL INN, Oldbury, gave 12 coppers in change for a shilling. Brown on the way to the police station dropped a skeleton key, which it was found would open the door of the house from which the money was taken, and he also had upon him a filed down latch key and a file.

Brown, on oath, denied all knowledge of the offence. He was not at the scene of the theft at the time named. Walker alleged that he and Brown were together at Langley, and Brown left him to go to these premises. Brown gave him a shilling's worth of coppers and some other money he had earned. He admitted that Brown, at the NEW HOTEL, Whiteheath, had earlier in the day given change in copper for a two-shilling piece.

The jury found both prisoners guilty, and recommended Walker to mercy.....

Mr. Bund passed the following sentences.....

Anthony Walker, recommended to mercy for theft at Oldbury, 12 months' hard labour.

Joseph Brown, for burglary at Oldbury, 12 months."

'Recovering First World War Theatre' by Linda Cooke

".....It's a Long Way to Tipperary.....

The lyrics and music originated in Oldbury, the work of Henry James 'Harry' Williams, and Jack Judge.

Jack lived in Low Town next door to the MALT SHOVEL public house run by Harry Williams' brother Benjamin. Harry, though disabled and a wheel-chair user, was a brilliant pianist. Jack and his sister Jane Anne were well-known music hall regulars at the Gaiety Music Hall in the centre of Oldbury. This, however, was a side-line to his regular occupation of fishmonger in Low Town in Oldbury. Jack's link to Ireland came via his Irish parentage settling in Oldbury in 1870. Jack's grand-parents originated from Tipperary. Oldbury, at this time, appeared a magnet for Irish emigrants coming into the Black Country to work as navvies.

Jack and Harry became good friends, writing numerous songs. However, it was the night of 30th January 1912 when the two collaborated on It's a Long Way to Tipperary, allegedly for a 5 shilling bet at the Stalybridge Grand, that changed their lives. The song was performed the next night by Jack at a music hall, being well-received by the audience. The song came to be played and sung throughout the First World War, becoming an anthem for working class soldiers.....

Publishing the song ensured a wider audience and lead to the conversion of song into a full-length theatrical drama Such was the success of the play that by February 1915 three professional companies were touring the country....."

"There are many people buried in Westminster Abbey who did less for their country than the composer of 'Tipperary,' that rollicking marching song which stimulated our lads during those touch-and-go moments when the Germans were almost at the Channel ports. Apparently someone in London is disputing the authorship of it, and suggesting that a certain deceased Mr. Harry Williams was responsible for the words, but Jack Judge, of Tipperary Gardens, Oldbury, is taking up the cudgels in his own defence, and proving that he and he alone concocted the famous song.

I can substantiate this to some extent, for I remember well a certain day in 1914 when Jack Judge walked into the old Gazette office in Corporation Street with the original script of the song and told us the story of his life – how he had been a fish hawker in Smethwick, and how he had turned to account his natural gift for putting catchy words to lively music.

On Monday evening I happened to be the guest of Captain C. Crosland and Sergt-Major Wilson at an Old Grenadiers' social evening, and, much to my surprise, there was the veteran Jack Judge on the platform entertaining the ex-campaigners with some of his old-time compositions. He was in splendid voice, and pirouetting round the stage like a juvenile lead. For fully an hour he amused us with a sort of song recital and, strange to say, I could have listened to more, for there is something gaily infectious about his nimble-footed old gentleman. He told me over his tankard afterwards that the late Harry Williams, whose name appeared with his as a joint composer of 'Tipperary' on the song sheets, did not write a single word or note of the song.

Harry Williams and his brother, Thomas Williams, were proprietors of the MALT SHOVEL INN, Oldbury, next door to which Mr. Judge lived at the time he was in the fish trade. 'One day,' said Mr. Judge, 'I publicly declared that if I ever wrote and published a song I would put Williams' name on the copies and share the proceeds with him. Not only did I generously fulfil that promise, but I placed his name on many more of my own published compositions, thereby presenting him with a small fortune.'

A curious feature of the 'Tipperary' business is that a brass tablet is actually to be seen on the wall of the Plough Inn, Mere End, near Kenilworth, where Harry Williams lived for some time, associating him with the famous song.

Answering my query as to what he was doing nowadays, Mr. Judge said he was quite comfortably situated, and enjoyed a sort of pension of £5 a week for life from his publishers, Messrs, Feldman and Co. At the same time, he still evolves popular songs, his latest being 'Snooze the Blues Away,' and 'I Go to Monte Carlo,' with syncopated melodies."

At the Tipperary Inn you can read the following over the fireplace 'In remembrance of Harry Williams of Tipperary Fame World Famous Song which Helped to Save Old England.

Jack Judge of Oldbury in the Black Country wrote the words of Tipperary and his friend Harry Williams is credited with the tune. Harry played piano at the MALT SHOVEL, Oldbury, run by his parents, before they moved to Meer End."

Who Really Wrote 'Tipperary'?

".....He (Jack Judge) would sing and sell his fish from a small cart and horse which he used to keep in the big opening at the MALT SHOVEL in Low Town – a place where they ought to make a shrine to the writer of the greatest song ever. Harry Williams, always a delicate child with a spinal deformity had been trained as a pianist Entertaining customers on the pub piano and helping with chores when necessary suited Harry and his parents very well and they were popular licensees of the MALT SHOVEL....."

Two other men were injured by the explosion. They were engaged in assisting other men in casting pig iron, the metal for which was flowing through the ‘tweer’ in question from the furnace. It seemed that the nose of the ‘tweer’ got burnt off, and the water which was kept within it for the purpose of preserving it from being burnt consequently escaped. A loud explosion was the result, and the molten iron was scattered to a distance of fifty yards. It was stated that the manager had examined the ‘tweer’ previous to the explosion.

A verdict of Accidental Death was returned.”

“On Monday afternoon an inquest was held at the MALT SHOVEL INN, Tat Bank, before Mr. Ralph Docker, Coroner, on the body of Amples Barratt (23). It appears that the deceased, who was a married woman with one child, rose about two o’clock on the morning of Saturday last, and, as she alleged to her mother, was about to proceed into the yard. Instead of going there, however, she went out at the front door, across to the canal only a few yards distant from the house, and deliberately threw herself in. The mother of the deceased thinking her daughter a long time absent, commenced to seek for her, and fearing that something serious might have happened, called in the assistance of two neighbours, who at once began to seek for the deceased. After some time had elapsed the unfortunate woman was found dead upon the top of the water. Evidence being adduced that the deceased had of late been somewhat peculiar in her manner, the jury returned a verdict to the effect that the deceased committed Suicide while in a state of Insanity.”

Liverpool Courier 11/10/1870

“A woman named Matilda Ledger, the wife of William Ledger, residing at Tat Bank, Oldbury, has been arrested by Police-sergeant Simmonds, under the following circumstances. Mr. William Parker, a man advanced in life, and nearly blind, since giving up the MALT SHOVEL INN, at Tat Bank, has lived in a private house, with his wife – an invalid – a few doors away. In Matilda Ledger, their niece, the greatest confidence had been placed, and she had been in the habit of attending upon them daily, superintending and managing their household affairs. In a Birmingham bank Mr. Parker had deposited about £500, and whenever it was deemed requisite to draw any money out, Matilda Ledger was sent to the bank for that purpose. The amounts withdrawn, however, appear to have been considerably in excess of what it is alleged she was directed by her uncle to obtain, having varied from £5 to £12 per fortnight. A few days ago it was discovered that only about £110 remained in the bank, £400, or thereabouts, having been drawn in something like two years. At the prisoner’s house a numerous collection of expensive articles of wearing apparel have been found, many of which are not made up. Upon making a search, on Friday night, of the premises occupied by the prisoner, Sergeant Simmonds found £100 hidden in a nail shop at the back of the house. Since her arrest, the prisoner has complained of being ill, and has been allowed to keep her bed, a police-constable being in charge. Dr. Dempsey has been attending her, and the case will probably come before the magistrates today (Tuesday). The prisoner’s husband, it is stated, has been in entire ignorance of his wife’s transactions.”

Birmingham Daily Post 26/10/1870

Mr. Motteram (instructed by Mr. Cottrell) again appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. Shakespeare for the defence. In consequence of the inability of Mr. Parker, the prosecutor, to attend, through illness, the case was adjourned for a fortnight, the prisoner being admitted to bail.”

Either match for £10 or £15 a side. Money ready at Mr. C. Darby’s, MALT SHOVEL INN, Tat Bank, Oldbury.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 29/3/1871

“John Taylor, of the OLD CROWN INN, Green Street, was summoned at the Petty Sessions, yesterday, for getting up in his house, at Christmas last, a ‘Sweep’ for ten sucking pigs, several fowls, quantities of meat, and ale and porter. Several witnesses were called, who deposed to purchasing tickets, and afterwards, being successful, receiving prizes. The magistrates remarked that as a similar case had been previously before them, of which they had taken a lenient view, they would look upon the present case in the same light. The case would be dismissed on payment of costs; but if the defendant was brought before them again on such a charge, he would be convicted.

Charles Darby, of the MALT SHOVEL INN, Tat Bank, was summoned for similarly offending at Christmas last, and was dealt with in the same way as the other offender.”

Birmingham Daily Post 23/8/1872

“On Wednesday evening, an inquest was held by Mr. E. Docker (Coroner), at the MALT SHOVEL, Tat Bank, Oldbury, upon the body of Henry Jacques, 61 years of age, who lived in Mill Lane. Mr. France appeared as the representative of Messrs. Chance, at whose chemical works the deceased was employed. A fresh-water culvert passing underneath the works, but in no other way connected with them, having become choked, and caused the works to be flooded, the deceased and another man, named Thomas Nolan, were directed on Saturday night to clean it out. About two o’clock on Sunday morning Jacques became very ill, and appeared to be suffering from diarrhoea, in consequence of which he was compelled to desist work, and was taken home about seven o’clock. He died during the afternoon of Sunday.

Mr. Sainsbury, surgeon, stated at the inquest that he saw the deceased about half-past seven o’clock on Sunday morning, and found him in a state of collapse. The surface of the body was quite cold, and breathing was scarcely perceptible, although there must have been pulsation. The brain was undoubtedly the seat of the injury, and he treated him accordingly. He saw him again about eleven o’clock, by which time he had somewhat rallied, and was in a semi-conscious state. He saw him again in the evening, and found that deceased had had a collapse, and was gradually sinking. He did not see him again. His opinion was that the deceased’s condition when he (witness) saw him was due to blood poisoning from the inhalation of some of the noxious gases.

The Coroner: Is blood poisoning brought about so quickly? – Witness: Under certain circumstances.

The Coroner: Deceased must have been a man peculiarly susceptible? – Mr. Sainsbury: He was. I have known him some years, and he was not what you might call a strong, healthy man. Where several men are employed, one man might be affected to that extent, and the others not perceptibly affected.

Mr. France said he had been requested by Mr. Chance to state that an opportunity would be afforded to the Jury to inspect the culvert if they wished to do so. The jury thought it was unnecessary.

The Coroner: The gases arising from decayed vegetable matter are among the most injurious to health, are they not? – Mr. Sainsbury replied in the affirmative.

The Coroner, in summing up, said the deceased appeared to have been at work with another man in cleaning out a culvert, which they understood had not been cleaned out for many years. At least, a man who had been employed at the works for twenty-six years said that within his memory it had not been cleaned out. They heard also that there was a considerable deposit of mud, so much so that it was found necessary to take steps to remove it. They could very easily understand that water which was not perfectly pure would invariably leave a deposit along its track, unless there was a considerable decline in the course it took; and it was not surprising that there was a great deposit of mud, seeing that the culvert had not been cleaned out for so many years. Mr. Sainsbury was no doubt correct in his theory. Vegetable matter collected together was subject to decay, and after the lapse of time there must have been a considerable amount of decayed vegetable matter, which, being disturbed, would evolve some of those injurious gases which resulted from the process of decay. He (Mr. Docker) did not think the question of responsibility arose in any way. There was nothing in the atmosphere to cause inconvenience, and the deceased might have left his occupation at any time he liked. The Jury, after a brief consultation, returned a verdict to the effect that death was brought about by the inhalation of noxious gases arising from dirt in the culvert in which the deceased was at work.”

“At Oldbury Court, today, John Lowe and George Perry, both of Churchbridge, were charged with being drunk and disorderly, and refusing to quit the licensed premises of the MANCHESTER STORES, in the same locality, on the 12th inst. The two men went into the house the worse for beer, and on being requested to leave they refused. Perry became violent and picked up a poker, which was taken from him by Police-constable Clarke. Perry was ordered to pay £1 and Lowe 15s, including costs.”

“At Oldbury Police Court, yesterday, William Thornton, alias Lalley, and Thomas Averill, both of Birmingham, were charged with stealing an overcoat, valued at 5s, the property of George Cooper, landlord of the MANCHESTER STORES, Church Bridge, on the 14th inst.

Prosecutor said that on the date in question a coat was taken from his trap whilst standing at the COCK AND MAGPIE INN, Beech Lanes, Warley.

Thomas Joseph Brown said that he saw the coat taken from the cart belonging to prosecutor. One of the prisoners attracted the attention of a boy who was in charge of the horse and trap whilst his confederate abstracted the coat from the trap.

The Bench sentenced Thornton to three months' imprisonment, and Averill to two months."

MANCHESTER STORES, alehouse, Churchbridge, owner Messrs. Jordan and Co.....

Evidence was given in each case by Superintendent Hill and Mr. F. H. Jones, auctioneer and valuer, as to the nature of the houses, and the proximity of other licensed premises. The magistrates afterwards retired to consider the cases, and upon resuming Mr. Albright said they had decided to refer the following six houses to Worcester to be dealt with under compensation: CRYSTAL PALACE, NAVIGATION INN, HOPE AND ANCHOR, FOUNTAIN, CROSS KEYS, and BIRD IN HAND. All the other licences would be renewed, and the licences of these six would be provisionally renewed pending the county committee's investigations....."

“A bar and grill can stay open but will have to find a new licence holder after police said they had ‘little faith’ in the current owner. Sandwell Council has ruled that MS Bar and Grill in Oldbury must find a new venue supervisor after owner Mandeep Sanghera was struck off following ‘serious’ concerns from West Midlands Police. Police had called on Sandwell Council to investigate ‘serious’ concerns over the ‘uncontrolled consumption of alcohol’ and ‘the age of some people at the premises’ during the Black Country derby between West Bromwich Albion and Wolverhampton Wanderers on Sunday, January 28.

Much of the four-hour hearing on March 19 was held in private with West Midlands Police showing councillors excerpts of body-cam footage captured by officers at the Oldbury venue during the ‘high-risk’ football game in January. Councillors said they had been shown evidence by West Midlands Police of patrons drinking alcohol at the venue on January 28 where the game kicked off at the Hawthorns at 11.45am, 15 minutes before the venue is licenced to open and begin serving. Ms Sanghera told the hearing her brother, who she believed was the holder of a personal alcohol licence but is not named on MS Bar and Grill's licence, had been left in charge on the morning of the Black Country derby and she was not present. West Midlands Police then argued the admission made their concerns 'even more serious' as he was 'not a layperson' and 'should have known better.'"

“A former Oldbury pub could be transformed into a Hindu temple under plans lodged with Sandwell Council. The vacant MERRIVALE pub, in Vicarage Road, will be given a new lease of life under the proposals. The pub has sat empty for nearly five years and is described as an ‘eyesore’ in planning papers. Now applicant, Mr Anand, wants to keep the building and use its historic features as part of a planned renovation. The report, submitted to the council, said, ‘The building was formerly utilised as a public house but has been left vacant and derelict for the past four to five years and is becoming an increasing eye sore for local residents and location for vandalism and other non-socially acceptable behaviour. The building is in reasonable condition, however is in need of a second lease of life, the Hindu committee are seeking change of use application with possible future proposals to renovate the building taking into account its architectural style and maintain as many of the original features as possible.’

The pub was formerly used by the community and also held live events. Under the new proposals, the temple would cater for up to 250 people at peak gatherings, the report said. But these numbers would only gather at the spot once a month. It is also expected the temple would attract crowds of 100 to 120 worshippers every Sunday.

Warley MP John Spellar said Sandwell Council would need to consider factors like parking when deciding on the plans. He said, ‘This pub has been a local eyesore for some time. Obviously the planning committee would need to look at parking in the area. But the pub has been an eyesore for the past five years and it is causing a lot of complaints from local residents.’

The application will be decided by Sandwell’s planning committee at an upcoming meeting.”

Express & Star 7/5/2019

“A derelict Oldbury pub has been damaged in a fire overnight. The fire started on the first floor of the former MERRIVALE pub, off Vicarage Road and Dog Kennel Lane, shortly after 2am on Tuesday morning. Ten firefighters were sent to the scene and investigations are underway into the cause of the fire. West Midlands Police also attended the scene.

A spokesman for West Midlands Fire Service said, ‘The fire involved the first floor of the three-storey derelict former public house. Twenty per cent of the building has been affected but the fire was contained to the first floor. Smoke and heat damage has been caused throughout the property. We returned to the scene to check for any hotspots.’

Karl Renar posted on Twitter, ‘Had a bit of a shock this morning when I saw what had happened to my former local pub the MERRIVALE. Fire in the early hours of this morning. Such a shame as it’s a really nice building.’

Plans were lodged with Sandwell Council last year to turn the former pub into a Hindu temple. The plans said it would give the pub a ‘new lease of life’ after being sat empty for nearly five years. It was also described as an ‘eyesore’ in the proposals. But the applicants withdrew the proposals earlier this year.”

Stourbridge News 14/5/2019

“Another fire ripped through derelict pub the MERRIVALE in Oldbury last night. The blaze at the former MERRIVALE pub in Vicarage Road started at around 11pm yesterday (Monday) – and is the second fire there in just a week. Just last Tuesday (May 7) the building was gutted by what was believed to be an arson attack. Last night saw four fire engines attend the scene, with firefighters using a hydraulic platform to fight the flames, which were on the first floor and in the roof space of the building. West Midlands Fire tweeted at around 11.12pm, ‘We currently have 4 pumps and 1 aerial appliance in attendance at a fire at the MERRIVALE PH on Crosswells Road, Oldbury. Fire involves 1st floor and roof space of the building. Currently we have 2 breathing apparatus, 1 hose reel and 1 main jet in use.....”

“An ‘eyesore’ pub left empty for more than a decade looks finally set to be demolished to make way for new shops and flats. The fire-damaged remains of the former MERRIVALE pub in Oldbury, which has lay empty since 2013, would be knocked down and the site given a new lease of life under new plans by ‘upmarket’ grocery shop Simply Fresh. A four-storey building with space for two ground-floor shops and 12 one, two, and three-bed flats would then be built on the site of the former pub in Dog Kennel Lane and Vicarage Road in Oldbury. The plans also include 15 parking spaces.

A planning application was submitted to Sandwell Council in early 2019 looking to convert the former pub into a Hindu temple but that move was eventually scrapped. The pub was then badly damaged by two arson attacks in a week later that year.”

William Baker = William Barker

Worcester Journal 23/11/1848

“On the evening of Wednesday last, an adjourned inquest was held at Tividale, on the body of an infant child, which was found on Friday, the 3rd instant, lying in a hole of water about six inches deep, with no covering but a bandage round it.

At a previous stage of the inquiry, Mr. Cooper, surgeon, of Oldbury, gave it as his opinion that death had been produced by suffocation; and from the evidence of the daughter of Mr. Baker, of the MINERS ARMS INN, it was suspected that the child belonged to a woman who had been at that house two days before the discovery of the deceased. The police were accordingly instructed to look after the woman in question, and a notice was inserted into the Police Gazette. In consequence of this, a woman was taken into custody at Alstey, near Coventry, who was supposed to be the mother of the deceased; but Captain Roberts, Superintendent of Police, discovered that she was not the mother of the child. As no other information could be obtained, the Jury, at the adjourned inquest, returned a verdict of Wilful Murder against some person or persons unknown.”

“William Baker, landlord of the MINERS ARMS, Tividale, was charged with keeping his house open during the hours of divine service on Sunday, the 22nd of May. Police-constable Teafley found about a dozen men in the house in an excited state, as though they had been fighting. Defendant admitted the charge, and a fine of 20s and costs was inflicted.

The defendant was then further charged with cruelty to a dog by inciting it to fight. Baker appears to be the owner of a ferocious dog, which he set upon another dog belonging to Mr. Gilbert, while with the watchman, a man named Whitehouse. The dog was severely injured by the treatment it received. Defendant contended that it was Whitehouse’s fault that the dogs came together, but the evidence was conclusive as to his inciting the animals, and he was fined 10s and costs, in default a month’s imprisonment. The money was paid.”

County Advertiser 5/11/1859

“On Monday, the 17th ult, the attention of the police was directed to certain disturbances at Tividale, caused by the holding of foot races, at which a large number of disorderly characters – extending along the turnpike road upwards of a mile – assembled from the entire district for many miles around. These ‘races,’ which appear to have been the occasion for drinking and its accompanying evils, led to various excesses, which resulted in the interference of the police, and the bringing of summonses against William Baker, landlord of the MINERS ARMS, Tividale, for ‘unlawfully, wilfully, and knowingly allowing disorderly conduct in his house,’ and also against him and seventeen others, answering to the names of Charles Higginson, James

Hales, Timothy Thomas, Henry Thomas, Joseph Thomas, William Baker, William Kendrick, Richard Ford, John Walker, George Jones, John Smith, William Smith, Joseph Wall, and George Morgan, and three others who did not appear, for assembling on the Dudley and Oldbury turnpike road, and 'wilfully preventing certain persons passing along the said road, contrary to the statute in that case made and provided.' Seven of the defendants pleaded guilty. Mr. Burbury prosecuted, and Mr. Lowe appeared for Baker, the landlord. The information was laid under the 4th of George IV, chap 95, sec.72, which empowers a penalty not exceeding 40s for the latter offence. The witness called to prove the charge was Police-constable Lees, stationed at Horseley Heath, who stated that from information he received on the day in question, he went to the turnpike road in front of Baker's house, which leads from Oldbury to Dudley. He saw the whole of the prisoners there, engaged in a race. A great many vehicles were obliged to stop while the race was going on, and one man, a waggoner named Roberts, came up to him after the race was over and complained that he had been assaulted and his horse turned aside. The man who assaulted him he ascertained to be John Smith, one of the defendants. Kendrick was carrying a flag.

Cross-examined by Mr. Lowe: He saw Baker there among the crowd talking to the runners – Higginson and Hales. These two defendants pleaded guilty.

Police-constable Torr gave corroborative evidence.

The evidence against defendants was so clear in proof of the charge that Mr. Lowe here withdrew his plea of not guilty on behalf of Baker, and this example was subsequently followed by the rest of the defendants, who were each fined 6d and costs, in default of distress, one month's imprisonment.

The charge against Baker of allowing disorderly conduct in his house was proved by Police-constable Denholme, and he was fined 5s and costs."

“Mr. Hooper, District Coroner, held an inquest on Thursday, at the MINERS ARMS, Tividale, on the body of Robert Russell, a labourer, aged 42, who was killed on Saturday morning, at the New Horsley Company’s Ironworks. It appears that at about half-past seven o’clock in the morning the deceased was engaged in assisting to lift a girder on to two cross girders. The apparatus for lifting, which had previously carried up to 6 cwt of girders, gave way, and a bolt pin fell upon Russell, and inflicted such serious injuries as to prove fatal. The Jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

Inspector Walters, in his annual report, stated that there were in the division 93 full-licensed houses, 49 beer-houses, 19 off-licenses, four wine and spirit licenses, and 10 houses licensed to sell refreshments. Since last licensing meeting there had been 16 transfers, and two licensed victuallers had been proceeded against for offences against the Licensing Act. One was fined 10s and costs for permitting drunkenness, and the other was ordered to pay costs for being drunk on his own premises. During the year, 157 males and five females had been proceeded against for drunkenness. Of these 159 were convicted, being a decrease of 36 compared with the previous year.

Joseph Brown, landlord of the MINERS ARMS, Tividale, and Joseph Foley, of the TWO FURNACES INN, Old Hill, whose names appeared in the black list, were called before the Bench and cautioned, and their licenses were renewed. There were no applications for fresh licenses or transfers.”

Dudley Mercury 2/3/1889

“Ralph Jenkins, a native of Dudley, was charged with stealing 3s 6d and 38 cigars, of the value of 12s, the property of Elijah Swayne, MINERS ARMS, Tividale.

The evidence showed that at half-past two the prisoner went into prosecutor’s bar, and remained there four hours. Mrs. Swayne left the bar for a minute, and upon returning saw prisoner hurrying through the door. She afterwards missed the money from the till and the cigars from a shelf. At the time prisoner left the house Police-constable Winfield was standing near the door, and Mrs. Swayne came out and said, ‘He has taken the money out of the bar.’ The officer then took prisoner back to the house, and asked him what money he had. Prisoner took from his pocket some money, including a bent threepenny-bit, which Mrs. Swayne at once identified. Prisoner was at once arrested, and at the Police Station 38 cigars were found loose in his overcoat pocket. When asked how he came in possession of them, he replied that a lady, whom he previously lived with at Birmingham, gave him them that morning. The cigars were found to correspond with the cigars in the boxes at prosecutor’s house.

When charged, prisoner said he knew nothing about the money or cigars, but on the way to Old Hill Police Station admitted stealing the cigars, but denied taking the money.

Prisoner now pleaded guilty to stealing the cigars, but said the money was his own.

Prisoner was committed to three months’ hard labour.”

"Thomas Hollick, Rounds Green, Oldbury, was charged with stealing 8s, the moneys of Sarah [sic] Jane McDermott, landlady of the MINERS ARMS INN, Tividale, on the 23rd inst. Mr. John Wright, of Dudley, appeared to prosecute, and the prisoner pleaded guilty to the charge.

It seemed that in the afternoon of the day in question, prisoner, accompanied by a companion, went into the MINERS ARMS. They asked for something to drink, and sat down near the bar. When tea time was approaching Samuel Bowen, the barman, looked into the till at the back of the bar, and to the best of his knowledge there was about 12s in it at the time. He then went away to his tea, and shortly afterwards prisoner was seen by prosecutrix's daughter leaning suspiciously over to the till. When he saw her he drew his hand back quickly, and pretended to be drinking out of the jug before him. The theft was discovered by the barman when he returned, and information was at once given to the police. Police-constable Winfield arrested the prisoner at his residence, and in answer to the charge he said, 'I was drunk; I did take 2s 6d out of the till, but not 8s.'

Prisoner said he had never been in trouble before, and Inspector Bishop gave him a good character. The Bench, in consideration of this, only fined defendant 20s and costs."

Birmingham Daily Post 10/8/1893

"Yesterday, at the Police Court, Gillah Whitehouse (17), domestic servant, was charged with stealing wearing apparel belonging to her mistress, Mrs. McDermott, of the MINERS ARMS, Tividale. Inspector Bishop said prisoner had been in prosecutrix's employ for a fortnight, and during that time several articles of clothing had been missed. Police-constable Winfield arrested the prisoner, and upon searching her home found a quantity of the missing clothing between the bed and mattress. Some other clothing was also found at the house of a relative at Tipton. Prisoner was remanded for a week for enquiries."

Mrs. Cormack McDermott was also a brewer. [1895]

"Frederick Emery, of Tividale, was charged with refusing to quit the licensed premises of the MINERS ARMS INN, Tividale, and also with damaging windows, to the extent of 2s, belonging to the landlord, Wallace Laight, on the 16th inst.

He was fined 5s and costs in the first, and 12s, including costs, in the second charge."

“Extenuating circumstances were pleaded in a case in which Thomas William Hadley, landlord of the MINERS ARMS INN, Tividale, was charged with permitting drunkenness on the 26th ult. Mr. Clulow prosecuted and Mr. Vernon defended. The former said his friend had decided not to contest the allegation, but said there were extenuating circumstances, which he (the speaker) was not prepared to deny. Police-constables Heatherly and Edwards found a man named Street sitting in the tap room with a glass of whisky in front of him, and he was obviously in a drunken condition. They called the landlady’s attention to him, and her excuse was that she had told him to go some half-hour before, and she thought he had gone out. It was urged for the defence the defendant had kept a licensed house for many years without complaint, and this was the first offence. Defendant was fined 20s, and costs, including solicitor’s fee.”

Dudley Chronicle 16/10/1920

“Hospital Helping. The Tipton and district friendly societies’ propaganda campaign was resumed at Tividale on Friday night. The propaganda since it was started last January has already resulted in the allocation to the several hospitals and kindred institutions in Dudley, West Bromwich, Wolverhampton, and Birmingham of over £550, or £300 more than has ever been collected by the committee’s efforts during the last 30 years. It is a continuation of the public house ‘stunt.’ The men are approached in their social moments, their sympathies appealed to and their efforts invited to help the cause from which they – when occasion offers – are the very first to receive the benefit. At Tividale on Friday night the project of putting a collection box into the houses was received with acclamation. The meetings were held at the BRITANNIA and the MINERS ARMS, Mr. Burns (the landlord of the former) and Mr. Cheall (the landlord of the latter) – with the help of Mr. E. Hall – making every arrangement for the holding of the meetings. Both the audiences were enthusiastic, and declared that every effort would be made to win the shield from the present holders, the PRINCE REGENT. At each meeting, which was well attended, the speakers were Messrs. T. J. Stinson (chairman), L. Lawrence (secretary), J. H. Wright (originator) and Councillor T. Rogers, JP, all of the Propaganda Committee.

At the BRITANNIA there was a decided feeling to ear-mark all subscriptions for the Guest Hospital – which each house has a perfect right to do. Mr. Webb, a three weeks’ inmate of the Guest Hospital, made a good plea for it, based on the excellent treatment he had received there. So did Mr. John Godfrey, basing his observations on the fact that the hospital was ‘our own’ and deserved support. Eventually Mr. Godfrey and Mr.

J. Workman were appointed to represent the house on the committee.

At the MINERS ARMS Messrs. W. Richards and Arthur Jones were appointed as delegates, Mr. Hall (the acting landlord) warmly supporting and promising assistance to the movement on the ground that the Guest Hospital was the 'only institution the workers could call their own.' The landlord (Mr. Cheall) also promised every assistance.

At both houses the propagandists were warmly thanked, the spokesman at the BRITANNIA saying the company felt a bit aggrieved that though boxes had been sent to other houses near, they had not had a look in. This it was explained was due to no fault on the part of the committee, the intention being to take every house in its turn. Judging from what was done at both meetings, and the enthusiasm displayed, the hospitals have got another couple of bands of men who are determined not to be left."

"A complicated case, arising out of the matrimonial troubles of a Tividale publican, came before the Oldbury magistrates yesterday, when William Frederick Norris, aged 45, of 7, Bridge Street, and Mrs. Jane Cheal, were jointly charged with stealing £135, the property of the woman's husband, James Cheal, of the MINERS ARMS, Tividale.

It was stated Mr. and Mrs. Cheal had lived together for some years at the MINERS ARMS. This money was put away in a drawer in their bedroom. It was alleged Mr. Cheal had occasion to forbid Norris to come to the house and also to forbid his wife to see him.

On 15 July the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cheal came home for tea and found that her mother had left the house, and subsequent investigations revealed that the money had been removed from the drawer.

It was claimed in defence that the money actually belonged to the wife.

The magistrates ultimately held that the evidence was insufficient to convict, and dismissed the case."

From this amount there has been sent to the Dudley Guest Hospital £3, Dudley Dispensary £1 10s, Birmingham Orthopaedic 7s....."

Dudley Chronicle 10/1/1935

“The Coroner (Mr. F. Cooper) held an inquest at the MINERS ARMS, Dudley Road, Tividale, on Saturday week, concerning the death of Sidney Clements (32), of 74, Dudley Road, Tividale, who was found dead with a gunshot wound in his head in a bedroom at his home earlier in the same day.

Dr. T. D. Brettell, assistant to Dr. McPherson, of Dudley, stated that deceased had been attended for some time past by Dr. McPherson. He was suffering from a severely damaged rheumatic heart. In response to an urgent call, witness had attended deceased that morning at about 5.25am. The man was then in the living room, and was fully dressed. He was breathless, and was obviously suffering great pain. Witness examined deceased, and gave him a sedative. He then advised that he should be got to bed. Whilst he was there deceased spoke rationally, and did not threaten to take his own life. He did not hear of the tragedy until later in the morning, when Dr. McPherson informed him of it. He had not seen the body, but from the position of the wound as described to him he should think that death was due to shock.

Thomas Nathan Clements, of 74, Dudley Road, Tividale, identified the body as that of his son, who was 32 years of age. His son was an electrical assembler by trade, but owing to his heart he had been unable to work for over twelve months. During the whole of that time he had been attended by Dr. McPherson, of Dudley. His son suffered from heart trouble, brought on by scarlet fever and rheumatism.

On Friday evening his son complained of being in worse pain than previously. He went to bed about eleven o'clock, but later got up again. He returned to bed shortly afterwards, but later became so ill that the doctor was sent for. After the doctor had seen him they got him to bed, but he continued to complain of the pain he was suffering. He kept saying that he felt he could not stand it much longer, and wished the doctor could give him something to relieve it. Witness sat by deceased's bed for some time, until his place was taken by his other son (Roland). After a while Roland came out for some water, and whilst he was getting it they heard a report. Witness and his son rushed into the bedroom, and they found the deceased sitting in a chair beside the bed with a rifle between his legs. He spoke to deceased, but the latter (although then still alive) was unable to reply. Witness sent for the doctor and the police.

Mr. Clements identified the gun as the property of deceased, who had bought it for shooting sparrows. It had not been used for over two years, and witness had not been aware that his son had any bullets for it.

The Coroner, in giving his verdict, stated that the young man had obviously been suffering tremendous agony because of his heart trouble. He (the Coroner) thought that the turn had come that morning when the deceased thought he could stand it no longer, and accordingly took his own life whilst he was not of sound mind in consequence of the great pain he was experiencing. His verdict would, therefore, be Suicide by shooting himself with a rifle whilst not of sound mind.

The Coroner expressed sympathy with the relatives of the dead man.”

“Sixteen applications, granted earlier in the year by local justices, remained to be dealt with when an adjourned meeting of the Staffordshire County Licensing Confirmation Committee was held at the Shirehall, Stafford, on Tuesday.....

The justices confirmed the removal of the full license of the MINERS ARMS, Tividale, to the PEAR TREE INN, Rowley Regis, which at present has only a beer and wine license. On behalf of the applicant, Garnet Wesley Cornwell, Mr. Bergendorff said the MINERS ARMS was in a district which was well served by other houses. The PEAR TREE was in the heart of what was open country ten years ago, but which now contained 1,700 new houses.”

The removal of this license to the PEAR TREE, Rowley, was granted on 2nd March 1938, and confirmed on 17th May 1938.

It closed on 20th May 1938.

It became a fish and chip shop.

"Oldbury County Court. Warrant of a Cow.

Bridge v Mould. In this case Mr. Shakespeare appeared for the plaintiff, a butcher, retired from business, and Mr. J. T. Bayley was retained for the defendant, the landlord of the QUEENS HEAD, Langley.

The plaintiff said that on the 12th of February he was walking along the road to Langley, with a friend, and met the defendant, who asked him to purchase a cow. They went to the field in which the animal was being depastured, and after some bartering he agreed to purchase her for £8. The defendant stated that the cow was 'all right, and as sound as a bell.' The animal was in calf, and did not walk as well as a sound beast should have done. She died on the following Friday, and he (the plaintiff) went to the defendant, who refused to accompany him to the person from whom, in the first instance, he had bought her. The body was subsequently opened by a farrier, who found that her inside was perfectly decomposed, and the disease must have existed for several months.

Mr. Bayley cross-examined the plaintiff at some length, with a view to show that he had bought the animal with his eyes open, and that he had endeavoured to induce the defendant to seek compensation from the person who sold it to him. He, however, persisted in his statement that, had he not received a full warranty, he would not have effected the purchase.

A witness, named Sheldon Cox, corroborated the statement of the plaintiff as to the warranty.

Mr. Colley, farrier, deposed that he had seen the cow, on the 16th of February, and found her in the last stage of consumption. He prescribed some medicine for her, but she died on the following Friday. The animal had died from putrid fever, and she must have been suffering from inflammation for three months previously. The inflammation was chronic and not acute.

Mr. John Turvey, a knacker, said that he had bought the carcase of the cow for 15s, and saw it opened. The inside was in a state of corruption, and the disease must have been in existence for some months.

James Cornwall, another knacker, stated that he had bought the carcase of the cow from the last witness, and opened it. It was much diseased.

After having heard Mr. Bayley, who rested his defence on the ground that it was not customary to warrant cows, and that the plaintiff had acted on his own judgement, and who quoted from ‘Addison on contracts,’ and called evidence to support his statement, the witness Colley was recalled, and in reply to Mr. Skinner, the Judge, said that tubercles might exist in the lungs of a cow without any external symptoms having been displayed. He had no hesitation, however, in affirming that the disease was not the result of an acute inflammation, but was essentially chronic.

Mr. Shakespeare said that Mr. Justice Bailey had ruled that the representation made by the vendor at the time of sale was to be considered in the nature of a warranty.

In the course of the hearing of the case, it transpired that some curious transactions in the way of the sale of diseased meat, alleged to be disposed of for the feeding of pigs, had taken place between the parties, on a former occasion. The defendant, Mr. Shakespeare said, had been fined £5 by the Magistrates for having exposed for sale as good meat, and fit for human consumption, the carcase of a cow which had been disposed of by the plaintiff to a drover, who had resold it to Mould.

Jesse Sheldon deposed that he had sold the cow to the defendant, and could perceive no symptoms of disease about her. In reply to Mr. Shakespeare, the witness admitted having sold the animal at a loss of £1 12s 6d. When the defendant and plaintiff called on him on Sunday, the cow had been paid for.

Baker said he was present when the animal was bought from Sheldon by the defendant, and that she was then in good health. He saw Mould pay a sovereign as ‘earnest money.’

By Mr. Bayley: I have never been charged with selling diseased meat.

After some other evidence had been taken, his Honour remarked that there was no doubt about the warranty, but the simple question was, whether the animal was diseased at the time of sale.

Mr. Shakespeare said he fully relied on the evidence of the witnesses Colley and Turvey, who had distinctly sworn that disease had existed for a period of three months.

His Honour, in giving judgement for the plaintiff, observed that he did not believe the defendant was aware of the disease when he sold the cow. He accepted Sheldon’s account of the transaction, and thought that that witness had given his evidence in a straightforward manner. Judgement would be for the plaintiff for the full amount claimed, but three months would be allowed for the payment.”

“At the Hales Owen Petty Sessions, on Tuesday, before Major Smith and E. Gem, Esq, Thomas Holland, an unqualified medical practitioner, residing in Birmingham Street, Oldbury, was charged with holding an appointment of surgeon to a Friendly Society, held at the QUEENS HEAD INN, Langley, Oldbury, he not being duly qualified. Mr. W. Shakespeare (Oldbury) appeared to prosecute. Mr. Holland was undefended. Mr. Shakespeare said the charge was preferred under the 30th section of the Medical Act, and, after making a few opening remarks, called the secretary to the society, Charles Tomlinson, who stated that, until lately, the sick notes for the club were given by Mr. Holland, the defendant, but within the last month or two these had been given by Dr. Dempsey (who had lately taken to most of the clubs in the town of Oldbury). Dr. Dempsey's name was printed at the bottom of the notes, but they were filled up in Mr. Holland's handwriting. Mr. Dempsey had never been elected as surgeon to the society.

Charles Nicholls, of Blackheath, was then called. He said he was a member of the above-named club.

During the month of September last, he had been very ill, and had been attended by Mr. Holland, had had all his medicine from him, had never been attended or examined by Mr. Dempsey. The club paid Mr. Holland for attending him.

Mr. Phillips, surgeon, of Rowley, proved that the defendant had the word ‘surgery’ written on his door.

The Medical Register of 1868 was put in to prove that the defendant was unqualified.

For the defence, Mr. Dempsey was called, and stated that he was surgeon to the club, and that the defendant acted as his assistant, at £100 per annum. He was closely cross-examined by Mr. Shakespeare, in the course of which he stated that he had only engaged Mr. Holland a month ago, had never paid him any salary, and the agreement was in writing. Mr. Holland had paid for all drugs which had been purchased. Mr. Holland attended all patients, received the fees, and kept the books. He (Mr. Dempsey) had never seen the books, or taken from them any extracts. His surgery was about 100 yards from Mr. Holland's, and none of the patients seen by Mr. Holland went to his (Mr. Dempsey's) surgery.

A second case was then gone into against the defendant, who was then charged with acting as a surgeon, he not being qualified. This case was also proved, and the Bench, remarking that they could not close their eyes to the fact that he had been previously convicted upon similar charges, inflicted a fine of £15 and costs in the last case, and £5 and costs in the former case.”

“On Friday evening an inquest was opened at the QUEENS HEAD, Langley, before Mr. Ralph Docker, Coroner, upon the body of James Waterhouse (35), collier, Titford Road, Langley, who died on the 22nd inst, from injuries received whilst at work at the Buffery Colliery, near Dudley, belonging to Messrs. Howl and Mason, from an explosion which occurred in No.3 pit on the 10th inst. The body having been identified by Police-constable Jones, the inquest was adjourned in order to allow time for an inspection of the colliery by the Mines Inspector.”

[The adjourned inquest was held at the TALBOT HOTEL, Dudley. The Jury returned the following verdict. We are of opinion that the deceased met with his death accidentally, but that the proprietors are to blame for not having provided better ventilation in that part of the workings where the accident occurred.]

County Advertiser 13/5/1871

“Mr. Peter Shaw, deputy of the Buffery Colliery, Bumble-hole, was charged by J. P. Baker, the Inspector of Mines, with neglecting the first General Rule, and with being unprovided with proper ventilation in every part of his pit. Mr. Walker prosecuted, and Mr. Shakespeare defended.

The prosecuting attorney detailed the facts of the explosion at the pit, whereby six men, including the defendant, were seriously burnt, and stated that some weeks after the occurrence one of the men (Waterhouse) died from the effects.

Mr. Shakespeare admitted that there was no defence to the charge, but said his client was only legally guilty, and not morally so, he being under the impression that the place was quite safe, and as proof of this he would mention that the defendant was seriously burnt.

The Bench said the case was a bad one, and called for little or no mitigation of the highest fine. Had the owner been summoned, the maximum amount would have been inflicted, but in the case before them a fine of £10 and costs would meet the justice of the case.”

Dudley Herald 6/12/1879

“A meeting of miners was held on Wednesday night, at the QUEENS HEAD INN, Langley, Oldbury, in reference to the wages question. Mr. William Hughes presided.

Mr. T. Griffiths, miners' agent, said the men did not think that they were properly paid for their labour. They thought the present improved state of trade would fully justify a further advance in the price of coal and colliers' wages. He urged the men to work harmoniously together, in order to get the sliding scale altered. They were not satisfied with it. The masters were very cautious in giving advances to the men, as they only gave 1½ d and 3d each time. If they could have 4d instead of 3d, and 8d instead of 6d, it would be better for them. (Hear, hear.) That sliding scale was made at a very unfortunate time, and they wanted the opportunity which good trade would afford to get it altered. They should insist upon the advance being at the rate of 4d in the shilling instead of 3d. If this extra 1d in the shilling could be secured, it would mean 10d per day at the top more than they had before. He contended that the colliers were fully entitled to it. If they had 4d to the shilling at the top the masters could afford it – (hear, hear). In order to effect these alterations the men must become thoroughly united – (hear, hear). They wanted to extend the union to every pit in Staffordshire.....”

“Pride of the Queen Lodge of the National United Order of Free Gardeners has lately gained a well-merited distinction in the neighbourhood of Langley by its continued prosperity. Presentations to its officials seem to be the order of the day. At its first club night this year the Past Master (Brother E. Field) was presented with a Past Master’s Certificate. On Saturday last another presentation was made, on that occasion to the present Treasurer (Brother J. Nickless), in the shape of a very richly framed Past Master’s Certificate.

Brother J. J. Taylor, in making the presentation, complimented the lodge on the great success it had experienced since the present treasurer had been appointed. He had acted in that capacity for six years, and during that time the lodge had increased from 20 to 108 financial members and from 2 to 17 honorary members; and this was, to a great extent, due to having a good treasurer.

Brother G. Satchwell, DDM, followed, and then Brother J. Fox, secretary.

Brother Fox dwelt on the prosperity the lodge had had since its existence. It was opened at the QUEENS HEAD INN, but a few months afterwards it was removed to its present quarters, NEW INN, Station Road, and they never had cause to regret moving their lodge to the NEW INN. Their landlord and treasurer had always treated them with great respect, and had done his best to make them comfortable. He only hoped their members would be increased more in the future than they had in the past.....”

West Bromwich Weekly News 26/3/1887

“On Monday evening, Mr. E. Docker held an inquest at the QUEENS HEAD INN, Langley, touching the death of Florence Beatrice Summers, aged two months and three weeks, the daughter of Ann Summers, residing in Titford Road, Langley, who was found dead in bed on the 19th inst. The mother stated that on Friday last the child seemed all right and in good health when she took it to bed, but the next morning when she woke she found it dead. In reply to the Coroner witness stated that there was only one bedroom in the house, and that she and six children slept in it, their ages varying from 15 down to six years. A man who was not her husband slept down stairs. She also stated that the boards of the floor gave way some time ago while one of the children was walking across them.

Priscilla Harris stated that when the child was found dead she was sent for, but she had not been in the habit of going into the house because of its wretched condition.

Dr. Turbitt was called and stated that he found no marks of violence on the body.

The Coroner remarked that the inquiry had revealed a terrible state of things, and a large number of persons were sleeping in a room that was certainly not fit for occupation. The jury declined to view the body because of the dangerous state of the building, but they returned a verdict of Death from Natural Causes, adding as a rider that the Coroner be requested to communicate with the Oldbury Local Board of Health, calling their attention to the condition of the house and the overcrowding.”

“An inquest was held on Saturday evening at the QUEENS HEAD INN, Langley, by Mr. Edwin Docker (coroner), touching the death of Jesse Light (64), builder of Arden Grove, who was found dead in bed on Friday morning, the 2nd inst.

Susan Light, wife of deceased, stated that her husband had been carrying a plank for a coffin on the Thursday previous to his death, and before going to bed, about a quarter to 11 o'clock, complained of a pain in his arm, but she did not think it anything unusual, as he had it broken some three years ago. He was rather restless in the night, and she dressed it with turpentine, but he continued to complain of the pain. She got up about seven o'clock next morning, and seeing his one hand out of bed she covered it with the clothes, thinking how odd it was. She thought he had fallen into a sound sleep, and she went downstairs.

James Light, son of deceased, gave evidence to the effect that he went to call his father about nine o'clock, and found he was dead.

Dr. Cunningham deposed to examining the body of the deceased, but found no marks of violence about it, and gave it as his opinion that death was due to synope.

Jury returned a verdict of Death from Natural Causes.”

Birmingham Daily Post 2/8/1890

“Last night Mr. E. Docker (coroner) held an inquest at the QUEENS HEAD INN, Langley, concerning the death of Philip Cross (10), whose parents reside in Titford Road, Langley, who was drowned in a marlhole near Park Hall, Langley, on Thursday night.

Thomas Sheldon, a boy, said deceased was sitting on a steep embankment, near the edge of the water, when his foot slipped and he fell in. Witness tried to catch his hand, but deceased sank.

John Owen, who lives near the marlhole, said upon hearing cries that a boy had fallen into the water he ran to the place, and saw deceased go down the last time. He made an effort to save the boy, but failed. Where deceased was sitting before he fell into the water was a very dangerous place. In reply to a juror, witness said the only protection close to the marlhole was a small wire-fence to keep horses and cattle out. He did not consider it was a sufficient protection for the public. There was a foot-road close to the marlhole. One of witness's children fell into the same marlhole a few days ago, and not long ago a man and a horse were drowned.

A Juror said it was a most dangerous place, and was simply a death-trap.

Another Juror said the marlhole had been in its present dangerous state for years, and it was surprising that scores of people had not been drowned in it.

Witness said some of the people living near the marlhole had walked into it.

The Coroner: It seems to be a very dangerous place. – Witness: If a person gets in it is impossible to get out without assistance.

The Coroner, in summing up, commented upon the extremely dangerous condition of the marlhole, and said it should be either filled up or fenced properly.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidentally Drowned, and recommended the coroner to communicate with the Oldbury Local Board and the owner of the property, calling their attention to the dangerous state of the marlhole, and requesting that it should be either filled up or fenced immediately.”

Birmingham Daily Post 28/10/1891

“Last night Mr. E Docker (coroner) held an inquest at the QUEENS HEAD INN, Langley, respecting the death of Joseph Chadwick, aged eleven weeks, whose parents reside in Park Lane, Oldbury, who was reported to have died on Sunday, the 25th inst.

The evidence showed that on the date named Mrs. Chadwick was the worse for liquor, and neighbours deposed to seeing her fall with the child she was carrying in her arms. Upon her husband returning home she gave him the infant to nurse, and he said he noticed it seemed peculiar. The child was cold, and he thought it was asleep. He sent his wife for some medicine, and some hours afterwards neighbours who came in told him the child was dead.

Dr. Cunningham, who had made a post mortem examination, attributed death to syncope, which might have been caused by a fall or from shock. In his opinion death was instantaneous.

The jury returned a verdict ‘that the deceased Joseph Chadwick came to his death through the neglect of his mother,’ and added a rider to the effect that the evidence was not sufficient to send Mrs. Chadwick for trial on a charge of manslaughter. The Coroner severely censured Mrs. Chadwick.”

“A Warley public house was open again for business last night after a two-hour ‘strike’ by the licensee. Today, the publican – 35-year-old Mr. Edward Gillies – is to meet a brewery representative to discuss his action. Mr. Gillies locked the doors and sat alone in the bar of the QUEENS HEAD, in Titford Road, Langley, for two hours on Saturday night. He said he was protesting because the brewery – Mitchells & Butlers – had not redecorated the public house for six years. He claimed the plaster was flaking off the walls and that the rain was dripping through the roof into the bedroom.

A brewery spokesman said last night that a director of Bass, Mitchells & Butlers (Midlands) would be seeing Mr. Gillies. ‘In our opinion we do not think that the decoration at this public house is in any way below standard,’ he said. ‘Some damage was caused by the high winds recently, but this has been put right.’” “Joseph Bird, hairdresser, of Flash Road, Oldbury, was charged with unlawfully wounding Samuel Mansfield, sheet-glass cutter, of Green Street, Oldbury, on the 15th instant.

Prosecutor said that on the date in question he was at the NAGS HEAD INN, Flash Road, about half-past eight, and after having been there half an hour the prisoner entered. Witness had three half-pints of ale, and remained at the house until close on 11 o'clock. Defendant was standing by the door with a quart jug in his hand. Witness passed him, and in doing so asked him to give him a drink. Defendant replied, ‘Do you want some?’ Witness rejoined that he would like a drop. Defendant thereupon dealt him a blow with the jug on the side of the head and face, smashing the jug. Witness became unconscious after the blow. He was conveyed to the doctor’s, where his wounds were dressed. He lost a large quantity of blood.

Defendant: What were you doing at 9.30? Were you not playing at cards?

Witness: Yes; we had been playing at whist.

Dr. Lyddon said the prosecutor was brought to his surgery suffering from a wound on the left side of his neck, about six inches long, and also a wound on the left ear. He regarded the case as being a critical one, as erysipelas set in on the third day.

Defendant said the quarrel arose out of a game at cards. He was playing for a quart of ale and 5d, and his partner was playing for the same amount. The prosecutor wanted some of his ale, and because he would not give him some prosecutor struck him a blow, and he then retaliated by striking him with the jug.

Police-constable Buggins, recalled, said both parties were the worse for beer.

The Bench reduced the charge to one of assault, and fined defendant 20s and costs.”

“James Lines, landlord of the NAGS HEAD INN, Flash Road, Oldbury, was charged with permitting gambling on his licensed premises on the 15th inst [sic]. Mr. J. S. Sharpe defended.

Joseph Bird, who figured as the defendant in an assault case which arose at the house kept by Lines, stated that on the date mentioned he visited the NAGS HEAD INN, where he saw three or four men playing at ‘crib,’ in which he joined. Witness lost two quarts of ale whilst he was playing. He afterwards played with the defendant for another quart of ale, but lost. They were playing from about half-past nine until a quarter to eleven o'clock.

Samuel Mansfield, who was the complainant in the case referred to above, corroborated.

Police-constable Buggins said that on the 29th ult the defendant met him in New Street and said he should plead guilty to playing for beer, but not for money.

The defendant denied the statements for the prosecution.

The Bench imposed a fine of £1 16s, including costs.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 2/3/1910

“The adjourned Licensing Sessions for the Oldbury division were held yesterday, Mr. G. S. Albright presiding over the magistrates. The principal business was the consideration of six licences which the magistrates proposed to refer to the Quarter Sessions for compensation on the ground of redundancy. The houses in question were the CART AND HORSES, West Bromwich Street; BIRD IN HAND, Simpson Street; ROYAL OAK, Park Lane; NAGS HEAD, Flash Road; HOPE AND ANCHOR, Halesowen Street; and BOAT INN, Tat Bank.....

Mr. Albright then announced that the magistrates had decided to refer only four licenses to the Quarter Sessions at Worcester this year instead of six as originally proposed. They would therefore renew the licenses of the BIRD IN HAND and ROYAL OAK.....

Respecting the NAGS HEAD, of which the licensee was James Lines and the owners Messrs. J. A. and A. Thompson, Superintendent Hill said the present tenant had been there for twenty years, there being one conviction against the house for an offence in 1907.

Mr. Jones remarked that in the immediate district there was one house for every thirty persons and one licence in every thirty-five square yards. Within an area of 500 square yards there were twenty-two alehouses and two beerhouses on, while within a radius of 200 yards there were eleven licensed houses.....

All four houses were referred to the Quarter Sessions.”

The license renewal was referred to the Compensation Authority.

The renewal was refused on 2nd July 1910.

Alcester Chronicle 9/7/1910

“Worcestershire Licencing Committee sat at the Guildhall, Worcester, on Saturday, to consider the fourteen houses referred to them as compensation authority by the several local benches.....

Of the houses reported, the following did not oppose extinction of their licenses.....
NAGS HEAD, Flush Road, Oldbury.”

A supplemental meeting of this Committee was held on Saturday at the Shirehall.....

The special purpose of the meeting was for the purpose of determining the amount of compensation to be paid for the extinction of licenses. Fourteen such licenses had been reported by the justices to the Committee, and the Committee had already decided to renew one. The amounts claimed in respect of the other thirteen were.....

NAGS HEAD, Flash Road, Oldbury, £3,166.....

The Committee took evidence in support of the claims calculated on the capitalised loss of trade, the capitalised loss in the value of the premises by the extinction of the license, and the loss on the sale of fittings.....

In the case of the NAGS HEAD, Oldbury, Mr. Hayes adduced evidence that the average trade had been 712 barrels per annum, apart from bottled goods. The total capitalised trade profits would be £2,895. The rent was £22 a year, but there was a tie for malt and hops, which was worth £40 a year to the owner.....

The Committee then announced the following awards.....

NAGS HEAD, Oldbury, £2,213.”

Alcester Chronicle 14/1/1911

“An adjourned meeting of the Worcestershire Licensing Committee was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, on Saturday.....

At the meeting of the committee in December six claims for compensation were heard, and awards were made. The committee now settled the shares to be paid to the parties as follows.....

NAGS HEAD, Oldbury, £2,213 awarded, £1,531 10s mortgagee, £254 second mortgagee, £427 10s licensee, nothing to the registered owners or the trustees for the benefit of the latter’s creditors.”

The licenses of the following four houses were entered for compensation in 1910, and were refused renewal, but the compensation money not having been paid yet the houses were not closed NAGS HEAD.....

Mr. Albright said that there seemed little doubt that all the arrears of compensation would be cleared off in the present year, and the houses closed, although the amount of money available now would be considerably decreased by the absorption of a large portion of the county in Greater Birmingham.”

Bromsgrove Messenger 9/3/1912

An inquest was held at Mr. John Faulkner’s, the NAVIGATION INN, on Wednesday last, before G. Hinchliffe, Esq, on the body of Samuel Howe, who had been found in the canal near Titford, the same morning, by one of the Canal Company’s men, named John Warwick. It appeared that the unfortunate man was drinking at the WINDSOR CASTLE, on Saturday night, and while asleep, some meat was taken from his basket, and two pounds of candles, the property of the landlord, substituted in its place. The candles being missed in about two hours after he left the house, the police traced them to deceased’s house, and they were found on Sunday morning. He was quite tipsy when he left the house, and knew nothing about the candles, but having been employed at the Brades Works for many years, Messrs. Hunt discharged him, as soon as they heard of what had occurred. This seemed to prey upon his mind, and for several days he was under such depression of spirits that no doubt existed but he had committed self-destruction. However, an open verdict of Found Drowned was returned. He had hitherto born an excellent character; a wife and five children are left unprovided for.”

“The magisterial investigation into the circumstances attending the death of John Willie Barrett (9), of Anchor Yard, Deepfields, whose body was found in the Birmingham Canal at Deepfields on the 8th January, was resumed at Bilston Police Court, yesterday, when Richard Williams (27), of 34, Lower Chapel Street, Tividale, and Jeremiah Edwards (24), Engine Street, Tat Bank, Oldbury, two boatman, were again charged on remand with the wilful murder of the boy, and further with stealing a coat, cap, and can, the property of the boy’s father. Mr. R. A. Willcock conducted the case for the Public Prosecutor, and Mr. J. Clark defended. Mr. Willcock, in opening the case, stated that on January 6 the deceased was sent with his father’s breakfast to Sir Alfred Hickman’s Spring Vale Works. He was seen by a man named Fellows returning home along the canal side near the Ten Score Bridge. He was then wearing a blue pilot-overcoat and cap. It was a bitterly cold day, and it was not likely that he would take the coat off himself, as it fitted very tightly and he was unable to unbutton it without assistance. It was then about nine o’clock in the morning, and from that time the lad was not seen alive. The canal was dragged, and on the 8th January his body was found within one hundred yards of the place where he was last seen by Mr. Fellows. It was then minus the coat and cap, and the breakfast utensils, and a can and saucer were also missing.

On the 6th January the two prisoners were in charge of a boat belonging to Messrs. Chance, of the Alkali Works, Oldbury, which was proceeding to Wolverhampton, and they were near the place where the deceased was last seen alive. On the evening of the same day Edwards entered the NAVIGATION INN at Tat Bank, Oldbury, and remarked that he and his mate had had a good day, as they had found a lad’s coat and cap in the canal at Deepfields, but they had hurried on for fear of being ‘collared.’

An inquest was held on the body, and when Edwards went to the NAVIGATION INN again he was advised to give the articles up which he had found. He then made no reply. An advertisement describing the articles was subsequently inserted in an evening newspaper, and Edwards, on visiting the NAVIGATION INN, was once more advised to give up the things he had found, but he replied, ‘If they want the things they must fetch them.’ The prisoners were afterwards questioned by the police, and they then stated that they found the things in the canal, and as they feared to attend the inquest they sank the coat in the canal near Holcroft’s works at Tividale. The coat had since been recovered at the place described by the prisoners.

Witnesses were then called.

John Barrett, the father of the boy, deposed to the deceased bringing his breakfast on the morning of the 6th January. He started to return home about ten minutes to nine o’clock, and was then wearing a tight-fitting overcoat, which he was unable to put on or take off himself. As the boy did not return home witness had the canal dragged, and the body was found two days later. The coat, cap, and breakfast utensils were then missing.

Enoch Fellows, of 10, Broad Lanes, Bilston, deposed that he was working on a pit bank, near the Ten Score Bridge, on the morning of the 6th January, and saw the deceased returning home. He was then wearing the coat and cap, and carrying the breakfast things.

Evidence having been given that the prisoners went with a boat to Wolverhampton on the day the boy was lost, and returned to Oldbury the same night, Hannah Tolley, the wife of a boatman, living by the canal side at Whimsey Bridge, Oldbury, stated that on the 6th January, between four and five o’clock in the afternoon, she saw a boat passing her house. Edwards, who was steering, threw a cap to her, and said it would do for her boy Willie. The boy came up at the time, and he picked up the cap and wore it for some time, but lost it when he fell into a pool. A fortnight afterwards Edwards called to see her, and asked for the cap he had given her for Willie. Witness told him that it was lost, and asked him what was the matter. In reply, he said, ‘They are after me about an old hat.’ Cross-examined: He did not say where he found the cap.

Eliza Lloyd, a neighbour of the last witness, deposed to seeing Edwards give her the cap, and repeated the conversation which followed. Edwards said he had found the cap, and a topcoat, handkerchief, and saucer in the canal, but he did not state where.

Willie Edwards, the step-son of Mrs. Tolley, also spoke to Edwards giving his mother the cap, on which were the letters 'Play up.'

Thomas Croft Rogers, of the NAVIGATION INN, Tat Bank, Oldbury, stated that on the night of the 6th January the prisoner entered his house and said he and his mate had had a good day, as they had found a boy's overcoat and cap in the canal at Deepfields. Witness asked him if he had reported the matter to the police, and he said he had not. He wished to do so, but his mate would not agree to the information being given. Edwards also said that when they found the things he shouted to some men who were working on a wharf near by and asked them if they had heard of anyone losing an overcoat, and they said 'No.' When they were returning they hurried through the 'stop' for fear they might be collared. Edwards also added that his mate had given him a shilling for his share of the overcoat, and he also had the tins and cap. On the 18th January, after the inquest on the boy, witness again advised Edwards to give the articles he had found to the police. He made no reply then, but when witness spoke to him again on the subject, after the missing articles had been advertised for, Edwards said, 'If they want the things they must fetch them.'

Benjamin Flowers said that on the 6th January he was working at a coalpit belonging to Sir Alfred Hickman, near the Ten Score Bridge. He saw a boat passing, and a boatman asked if he had seen a lad on the canal side taking 'snapping' anywhere, and added that he had found a can and cup.

Sergeant Ellis, of Coseley, stated that on Saturday, the 23rd January, in company with Police-constable Bayliss, he confronted the prisoner Edwards, and the latter in reply to questions, denied that he had been out in the direction of Wolverhampton with a boat for two months, as he worked about the dock, and he further stated that he knew nothing about any boatman finding a coat or anything else on the canal side. Subsequently he (witness) had a conversation with Mrs. Tolley and her son, and in consequence of the statements made he again saw Edwards, when he admitted finding the cap on the canal as he was going to Wolverhampton, but denied having seen a boy on the canal side at Deepfields. He added that he had heard the newspaper account of the inquest read, but he knew nothing more of the affair.

Inspector Bishop repeated the evidence he gave at a former hearing; and John James, a dredger, in the employ of the Birmingham Canal Company, having spoken to fishing the boy's coat out of the canal near the place Edwards said it had been sunk, the Bench intimated that the prisoners would be committed for trial. Mr. Clark asked for bail, as he said there was no doubt the charge of murder would break down, but it was pointed out to him that bail was never granted in the case where a person was charged with murder."

Gloucester Citizen 6/4/1892

"At the Staffordshire Assizes on Tuesday, Mr. Justice Hawkins passed sentence of six months' hard labour upon Jeremiah Edwards, labourer, and Richard Williams, boatman, who, after being acquitted of the murder of the little boy named Barrett, at Sedgley, on January 6th, had pleaded guilty to stealing some of the deceased boy's clothes."

Birmingham Daily Post 12/10/1892

"Yesterday afternoon Mr. E. Docker (coroner) held an inquest concerning the death of John Davis (57), boatman, of Arden Grove, Langley, who was found drowned in the Birmingham Canal on Sunday afternoon. It appeared that on Saturday night deceased visited the NAVIGATION INN at Tat Bank and asked to be supplied with beer, but the landlord, seeing that he had already had too much beer, declined to supply him. After leaving deceased was not seen alive again. Dr. Buttery said death was caused by drowning. As there was no evidence to show how deceased got into the water, the jury returned a verdict of Found Drowned."

Thomas Steventon, 29, was charged with having stolen £9, a telescope, and a silver-plated watch guard, the property of Peter Flavell, from the dwelling house of Major Flavell, at Northfield. Mr. Streeten appeared for the prosecution, and the prisoner was undefended.

The offence was committed so long ago as the 20th of April, 1852, since which time prisoner has been transported for other offences subsequently committed Having undergone his sentence of transportation for other offences, he returned to Oldbury, where he was apprehended in October last. He then stated that the governor (meaning, as we understand, the governor of Portland Prison) had told him that he was not liable to punishment for any offence committed before his transportation. The court, however, were of a different opinion, and the jury returned a verdict of guilty.

Mr. Streeten said that there was another charge against the prisoner for having, on the 29th of June last, at Oldbury, obtained from Hannah Waterhouse, by false pretences, twelve quarts of ale and a quantity of bread and cheese, the property of James Waterhouse. No evidence was offered on that charge, on which prisoner was therefore acquitted.

“On Monday, Mr. Ralph Docker, coroner, resumed the inquiry at the NAVIGATION INN, Titford, touching the death of the five colliers who died from injuries received in the explosion at Titford Long Meadow Colliery, White Heath Gate, near Oldbury.

The accident occurred shortly before ten o’clock on the morning of the 23rd ult, at which time Mr. Joseph Hacket, proprietor of the pit, and ten miners were in the workings trying to quench ‘fire stink’ which had recently been discovered. The following men received injuries: John Dyas, Church Bridge; Abel Cook, Tat Bank; Joseph Roberts, Tat Bank; Richard Roberts (brother to the last named), Tat Bank; James Jackson, Church Bridge; Eli Wassall, Church Bridge; and William Morgan, Black Heath. Dyas died a few hours after the accident. The others, excepting Morgan and Wassall, who have now nearly recovered, died within the following week.

The inquest was opened on the 25th ult, and evidence as to identity having been given, the inquiry was adjourned till last Monday, in order that meanwhile the colliery might be examined by Mr. Baker, Government Inspector of Mines. The state of the pit, however, has not yet allowed the examination to be made. Immediately after the explosion, the mouth was scaffolded and covered with sand, with the view to stifle the fire then known to exist in the colliery.

In answer to the Coroner, Mr. Hacket said in consequence of fire-damp the examination had not yet been made. The pit had been opened that morning, but it was impossible to tell whether or not the fire was out. The pit might be ready for inspection in two or three days.....”

[The inquest was adjourned.]

Birmingham Daily Post 29/8/1874

“Yesterday, Mr. Ralph Docker, district coroner, resumed the enquiry at the NAVIGATION INN, Titford, with regard to the death of the five miners, caused by the explosion of gas several weeks ago at the Titford Long Meadow Colliery, belonging to Mr. Joseph Hacket.

Mr. J. P. Baker, Government Inspector of Mines, attended, and explained that he had been unable to inspect the pit owing to its not being in a fit condition to allow an examination being made with safety.

Mr. Hacket, the owner, stated that he had not yet succeeded in extinguishing the fire in the mines, and the workings were partially flooded with water, which they were now pumping out.

In the absence of evidence on the part of the mines inspector, the Coroner decided to adjourn the enquiry for a month.”

[The next hearing was held at the WAGGON AND HORSES, Oldbury, which was again adjourned.]

Midland Counties Evening Express 28/11/1874

“Yesterday, an inquest was held at the WAGGON AND HORSES, Oldbury, before Mr. R. Docker, touching the death of the five miners who were killed by an explosion at the White Heath Gate Colliery. It was shown that the unfortunate men were trying to extinguish a fire in the upper workings, when a blast of hot air was released and scorched seven of them, five of them dying from the burns they received. The pit could not be examined, as it was still on fire; but the jury, being satisfied that the occurrence was accidental, returned a verdict to that effect.”

“Sarah Holden, of the NAVIGATION INN, Titford, was summoned for keeping her house open during prohibited hours, on Sunday, the 23rd January.

PCs Bayliss and Smith deposed that they watched the defendant’s house for several hours on the day named. Between twelve o’clock noon and four pm they saw thirty or forty persons go into the house. Some of these people were seen by the officers drinking beer. When spoken to about it, the landlady said they were friends of theirs, and they had not paid for anything.

Mr. Shakespeare who appeared for the defence, called several witnesses to prove that the ale supplied was not paid for, but given to relations of the defendant’s who had been skating upon a pool close to.

The Bench said they did not consider that the sale was proved, but they thought it had been proved that the house was open during the day for the sale of liquor.

Defendant was fined 20s and costs.”

Since the last meeting 12 licensed persons had been summoned and convicted for offences against their licenses Thomas Farrington.....

The Bench decided that all the applications for renewals made by those prisoners who had been convicted during the year should be postponed until the adjourned licensing meeting, with the exception of two whose conviction took place on licensing day last year and who were then called up and cautioned. The persons whose renewals were refused would be required to attend and show reasons why their licenses should be renewed.”

Birmingham Mail 24/9/1883

The persons whose names were included in the ‘black list’ presented by the superintendent of police at the annual meeting, and whose applications for renewals were consequently postponed, were called before the Bench to show cause why their licenses should be renewed.....

The license held by Thomas Farrington, NAVIGATION INN, Litford [sic] Road were all renewed, the applicants being cautioned by the presiding magistrate as to their future conduct.”

“Oldbury Police Court. William Comely, NAVIGATION INN, Titford Road, publican, was summoned for permitting drunkenness to take place upon his licensed premises. Mr. Shakespeare defended.

PC Baylis stated that on the 10th instant, at about 9.45pm, he visited the NAVIGATION INN in company with Sergeant Stanton, and found a man named William Hadley asleep in the tap-room. After awakening him he went into the bar where he found a man named Hale causing a disturbance.

PS Stanton gave evidence corroborating.

Mr. Shakespeare said that with regard to Hadley, it was admitted that he was asleep. He had been in the house for an hour-and-a-half, and the defendant was engaged the whole of that time and he really did not know what took place in regard to him. With reference to the other man, he had witnesses to prove that he was drunk when he came into the house and was not supplied with any beer at all.

A fine of 10s and costs was inflicted in the case of Hadley, the other charge was dismissed.”

“The following persons were, at the instance of Mr. J. W. Brookes, School Attendance Officer, summoned for refusing to comply with the Education Act William Comely, Titford Road.”

“At Oldbury, yesterday, William Cowley [sic], landlord of the NAVIGATION INN, Titford Road, Langley, was charged with cruelty, on the 13th inst, to a duck, the property of George Trainer, of Whiteheath.

It was alleged that defendant caught prosecutor’s duck on Titford Pool, which the former rents from the Birmingham Canal Company, and that he beat it with an oar several times, inflicting shocking injuries.

For the defence Mr. Sharpe said prosecutor had been requested to keep his ducks off the pool. On the day in question twelve or thirteen of the prosecutor’s ducks were found on the pool, and the defendant and others went to drive them off, and in doing so one of them was accidentally struck by a stone, and the defendant then got into a boat and struck the injured bird with the oar for the purpose of killing it.

Defendant was fined 15s 6d. Mr. Sharpe gave notice to appeal.”

On Thursday night, whilst on duty at Titford, Police-constable Davis was informed that a boy had fallen into the Birmingham Canal in that locality. The constable ran to the spot, but could not see the boy. A man named Edward Darby, of Oldbury Road, West Smethwick, was, however, in the water, searching for the boy, who had disappeared below the surface. Isaac Timmins, aged 15 years, of Titford, dived into the water, which at this point is very deep, and succeeded in bringing the boy up. He was in an exhausted condition, and appeared to be dead. Police-constable Davis resorted to artificial respiration, and in about 15 minutes the boy began to breathe. Dr. Sharpe was called in and afterwards the boy was removed to the NAVIGATION INN, Titford. His name is Leonard Wright, Mallin Street, West Smethwick, and he is nine years of age.”

“An inquest was held on Monday morning by Mr. A. H. Hebbert (Deputy Coroner) at the NAVIGATION INN, Titford Road, Langley, respecting the death of Alfred Matthew Nash, aged (17), formerly residing in Titford Road, Langley, who died on Saturday last from the effects of injuries sustained whilst following his employment on December 13th, 1899.

From the mother’s evidence it appeared that deceased was employed at the Bell End Colliery, Rowley, as a horse driver. He fastened a horse to some tubs on the surface of the mine, and in consequence of the horse moving before he was ready Nash was crushed between one of the tubs and a wall. At the West Bromwich Hospital he was treated as an in-patient for 16 weeks. The medical testimony showed that death was a result of the injuries, and the jury returned a verdict in accordance with the medical testimony.”

“At a smoking concert held last night at the NAVIGATION INN, Langley, under the presidency of Mr. W. G. Spratling, Mr. J. C. Tillotson, of Birmingham, presented the medals to the members of Langley St. Michael’s Football Club, which were won by being runners-up in the Birmingham Junior League.”

Smethwick Weekly News 13/12/1902

“An interesting point was raised in connection with an application made by Charles Etheridge, of the NAVIGATION INN, Langley, for a license to sell intoxicants on the ground of the Langley St. Michael’s Football Club next Saturday.

Mr. W. Shakespeare (Clerk), addressing the applicant, said he understood that he took the ground in question himself, paid the rent, and then took his own beer to the enclosure to sell, so that he (applicant) was really the Football Club.

Applicant replied that the ground was his, but he rented it to the Football Club.

Mr. Shakespeare remarked that the Bench were not favourable to such arrangements. They did not care to grant a license to a publican who took or belonged to a football ground, and they preferred that the publican to whom such licenses was granted should be altogether distinct from the club.

Mr. Heaton said the matter was under the consideration of the justices, and probably some definite action would be taken in the direction indicated by Mr. Shakespeare. People must not be surprised if they ceased to grant licenses under such circumstances.

Mr. Shakespeare: It is not intended to grant licenses to men who own football grounds and run clubs for the purpose of selling intoxicants.

The license was granted.”

This popular Full Licensed Home Brewing House and Premises is situate in and has a long frontage to Titford Road (which leads from Oldbury, through Langley to Whiteheath, Blackheath, Rowley, and Dudley), and abutts in the rear on to the towing path of the main Birmingham Canal. This is the nearest Licensed House to the well-known ‘Titford Fishing Pools and Pleasure Grounds,’ and is situate near to, and does the trade from the ‘Langley St. Michael’s Football Ground.’

The Auctioneers beg respectfully to call particular attention to this Free Full-Licensed Home Brewing House and Premises, there being only about eight other Free Ale Houses in the whole of the Oldbury Division of Worcestershire.

The House, in its present low state of trade, is doing about 6 to 8 barrels of beer, 36 dozens of bottled goods, and 4 to 6 gallons of spirits weekly, and is largely used by boatmen, fishermen, and large crowds from the football ground, and forms an exceptional opportunity for acquiring a Free Full-licensed Home Brewing House and Premises doing a good, steady trade, which could be very largely augmented.

The Fixtures, Trade Utensils, Stock and Brewing Plant to be taken to by Valuation in the usual way.....”

“A verdict of Suicide was recorded at the inquest at Oldbury yesterday on Eli Davis, aged 47, of 89, Pitford [sic] Road, Langley, whose body was found in a pool near Speedwell Colliery.

The widow said she knew nothing in her husband's life which would lead him to do away with himself. He left the house in the morning, and in the evening she found a note in his handwriting under the front door. In it he said, ‘I have been a bad one. Look after the children; may they never have the curse that I have had. From your broken-hearted Dad.’ Witness added that she did not know what was meant by the term ‘bad one’ for her husband had always been straight and well respected.

Evidence was given by Walter [sic] Griffin, of the NAVIGATION INN, that Davis came into the house on Monday and had a pint of ale. He then asked for paper and an envelope and wrote a letter on the counter. Witness promised that his little girl should take it to deceased's home.”

“James Elwell (68), of 46, Old Park Lane, Langley, was charged with the theft of a collecting box from the NAVIGATION INN, Langley, containing 18s 8d in money.

Margaret Mabel Griffin, of the NAVIGATION INN, Titford Road, Langley, stated that the collecting box, which was for an institution for the blind, was on the counter on Monday of last week, and the following day defendant came in and ordered some ale. Witness left the bar, and after defendant had gone the box was missed. He later came in and ordered three double whiskeys, for which he paid 3s 6d, all in coppers.

The licensee of another local licensed house told the magistrates that defendant paid for several drinks at his house in coppers, and also gave him 8s in coppers in exchange for silver.

PS Ridley said that when arrested, defendant said, ‘I know nothing about a box.’

The Chairman said that whilst there was a very strong suspicion that defendant was guilty, there was not enough evidence to convict, and the case would be dismissed.”

The license was transferred to the NEW NAVIGATION which opened c.1931.

William Griffin was the last licensee here and the first at the NEW NAVIGATION.

“On Monday last the members composing the Independent Order of Odd Fellows met at Brother William Pendlebury’s, the NEW CART AND HORSES INN, in Oldbury, being the anniversary day, and moved in procession to the Methodist Chapel, where a very appropriate discourse was delivered by the Rev. Mr. Lake, from 116th Psalm, 12th verse – ‘What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward me.’ After service the members returned to the Lodge house, where an excellent dinner was provided by the host. The cloth being drawn, the chairman proposed ‘The health of the Queen,’ which was followed by the band playing the national anthem. Many other loyal and appropriate toasts were given during the day. The singing was excellent, surpassing any of the previous years, followed alternately with a tune from the band. “On Monday last, the thirty-sixth anniversary of the Loyal Salopian Lodge of Independent Odd Fellows was celebrated at the house of Host Pendlebury, sign of the NEW CART AND HORSES. The room was tastefully decorated with flowers. Mr. John Bridge presided with his accustomed talent, and the vice chair was ably filled by P. G. Collins. After partaking of a splendid dinner, which was served up in first-rate style, the usual loyal and patriotic toasts were given, interspersed with songs and appropriate sentiments. Amongst other toasts, the vice-president gave the health of their worthy secretary, P. G. Burton, and in the course of his address passed on that officer a well-merited eulogium for the very clear and correct manner in which his accounts had been kept during the past year. The healths of the worthy host and hostess were afterwards given and drank with loud applause. This lodge is, we learn, in a most flourishing condition, having during the past year greatly augmented its funds. After spending a delightful evening the company separated, all highly delighted with the manner in which the anniversary had been celebrated.”

Birmingham Journal 18/7/1846

“A fire broke out in a malthouse belonging to Mr. Thomas Collins, on Monday evening last, which at first assumed a very threatening appearance. It appears that some young men had been indulging in a very brutal ‘lark,’ by tying a piece of rag steeped in turpentine to the tail of a cat, and setting fire to it, allowing the poor animal to go at liberty. In her fright and terror the poor animal ran into the malthouse, and in a few minutes flames were seen issuing from a loft in the building (in which was stored a quantity of hay) by Mrs. Pendlebury, the hostess of the CART AND HORSES INN, who immediately gave the alarm, and with promptitude and decision peculiar to the fair sex in cases of danger, immediately gave orders for, and superintended the procuring of buckets and water, the early application of which was in reality the means of preventing the destruction of that and the neighbouring buildings. The powerful engine at Messrs. Chance Brothers’ Alkali Works, Oldbury, was almost immediately on the spot; and very great praise is due to the workmen of the establishment, for without waiting for horses, they drew the engine to the spot at speed that was really surprising, and got the same into play with an activity and readiness that we have never seen exceeded by the most practiced firemen. The destruction of property was by these exertions confined to the loft, and a portion of hay only was burnt; but greater damage is done, owing to the malthouse being nearly full of malt, some of which is injured by the smoke, and a great deal by the water necessarily poured on it. Police-constables Donnery and Walden rendered very efficient service in extinguishing the flames.”

"John Horton, butcher, of Tatbank, near Oldbury, was charged with violently assaulting John Collins, of West Bromwich Street, Oldbury. Mr. Shakespeare appeared for the complainant, who appeared in Court with his face frightfully disfigured by a severe black eye, cuts on the lips and various parts of the face. On the previous evening the complainant was sitting in the CART AND HORSES public house, talking to the landlord, John Thompson, when the defendant came in, and, without saying a word, struck him a violent blow on the right eye, which knocked him down and rendered him for a time insensible. Not satisfied with this, defendant held him on the floor and struck him a large number of blows, whilst he was down in that position, and also kicked him.

Defendant said he only struck him three times, and his reason for doing so was that complainant had been talking about him and insulting a young woman, who was a friend of his.

This was denied by complainant.

Mr. Shakespeare said he thought that it was a case in which it should not be visited by a fine, but of course, he said that with all due deference to the opinion of the Bench.

The magistrates considering it a very gross assault, fined defendant £5 and costs, or in default two months' imprisonment.

On hearing the decision, defendant said, 'Very well, I will go two months.' He was then removed."

The prisoner being suspected, a policeman was set to watch him. “On Monday Mr. Edwin Hooper (South Staffordshire Coroner) held an inquest at the JUNCTION INN, Tividale, on the body of Louisa Beddard. Aged 32, a single woman, youngest daughter of the late John Beddard, of the Becknell Fields Farm, Kingswinford. Deceased left the house of her sister (Mrs. Caroline Male, Dudley Port) on Thursday night. On the following morning her body was found in the locks near the BLUE BALL INN, at Tividale. When she left home she had some silver money in her possession, but when the body was discovered in the water there was but 1½d in the dress pocket. She was in company with a young man on the Saturday night previous to her death, but there was no evidence to show whether or not she parted with him on good terms.

Henry Cracknell, proprietor of the theatre in West Bromwich Street, Oldbury, said the deceased called at his establishment on the night previous to the day on which the body of the deceased was found in the water.

She asked if the theatre was open, and witness replied that it was not. She said she had some friends waiting at the top of the street who desired to come in. Witness asked her to fetch her friends into the house and take them into the smoke room, as they might enjoy themselves there, he being a musician. She went out, but did not return.....

Leah Stanley, barmaid at Cracknell’s, said deceased had an umbrella with her when she called there. No umbrella was found in the canal with the body.

A verdict was returned to the effect that deceased was found dead in the canal; but how she got there no evidence was forthcoming to show.”

“At Smethwick Police Court this afternoon, William Radbone, boatman, Canal Side, Tipton, was charged with cruelly illtreating a horse on the 17th ult by beating it. Mr. Buller appeared to prosecute on behalf of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, instructed by Inspector Ruane. Mr. T. H. Seedhouse defended.

It was alleged that defendant beat the horse with a boat tiller during a journey from Birmingham to Tipton, along the canal side. Subsequently the animal was taken to Joseph Baugh’s horse slaughterhouse at Oldbury, and slaughtered, when it was found that four of its ribs were broken, and there were other internal injuries, such as Mr. Baugh considered would be likely to be caused by beating with some heavy instrument. Joseph Baugh was called and gave evidence as to the injuries the horse had sustained, and also stated that he gave information to the officer of the society the next day, and it was upon that information that the proceedings were instructed.

The defendant denied striking the horse with the tiller, and said he only used a whip, and a fellow-workman who accompanied him also gave evidence to corroborate that statement. The latter also added that on the way between Birmingham and Smethwick the horse was taken ill, and they were obliged to send it to the slaughterhouse.

The defendant was ordered to pay £3 1s 6d, or go to goal for six days, with hard labour.”

Mr. Jeffries, who prosecuted, said the defendant had been treasurer of the society, in which there were 120 members paying fourpence a week. The money, amounting to £51 0s 0½d, should have been distributed on December 21, but defendant made excuses, and none of it had been forthcoming. He pointed out that great hardship had been inflicted, and many of the members were very poor people.

Mr. Dawes, who defended, applied for an adjournment, and after formal evidence by the secretary the accused was remanded for a week, bail being allowed.”

Mr. A. M. Chance presided at Oldbury. The report of Superintendent Hill stated that there were 126 licences in the district, a reduction of seven on the previous year, which compared with the estimated population, gave a ratio of one on-licence to every 354 of the inhabitants. One licence-holder only was convicted during the year, while eighty-eight persons were convicted for drunkenness, a decrease of forty-three on the previous year.....

The police objected to the renewal of the following twelve licences which will be considered at the adjourned sessions, to be held on March 2.....

CART AND HORSES.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 3/3/1909

“The adjourned licensing sessions for Oldbury were held yesterday, Mr. G. S. Albright presiding in the absence, through illness, of Mr. A. M. Chance. The magistrates were sitting for several hours, chiefly in hearing evidence regarding the following licensed houses, to the renewal of which the police objected on the grounds of redundancy, the magistrates proposing to refer them for compensation.....

CART AND HORSES, alehouse, West Bromwich Street, owner, Messrs. Ansells Limited.....

Evidence was given in each case by Superintendent Hill and Mr. F. H. Jones, auctioneer and valuer, as to the nature of the houses, and the proximity of other licensed premises. The magistrates afterwards retired to consider the cases, and upon resuming Mr. Albright said they had decided to refer the following six houses to Worcester to be dealt with under compensation: CRYSTAL PALACE, NAVIGATION INN, HOPE AND ANCHOR, FOUNTAIN, CROSS KEYS, and BIRD IN HAND. All the other licences would be renewed, and the licences of these six would be provisionally renewed pending the county committee’s investigations.....”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 2/3/1910

“The adjourned Licensing Sessions for the Oldbury division were held yesterday, Mr. G. S. Albright presiding over the magistrates. The principal business was the consideration of six licences which the magistrates proposed to refer to the Quarter Sessions for compensation on the ground of redundancy. The houses in question were the CART AND HORSES, West Bromwich Street; BIRD IN HAND, Simpson Street; ROYAL OAK, Park Lane; NAGS HEAD, Flash Road; HOPE AND ANCHOR, Halesowen Street; and BOAT INN, Tat Bank.....

Mr. Albright then announced that the magistrates had decided to refer only four licenses to the Quarter Sessions at Worcester this year instead of six as originally proposed. They would therefore renew the licenses of the BIRD IN HAND and ROYAL OAK.....

With respect to the CART AND HORSES, Superintendent Hill said that the licensee was Elizabeth Bradbury, and the owners Messrs. Ansells.

Mr. Ashford represented both licensee and owners, and stated that if the magistrates desired to refer the licence for compensation he would not offer any opposition.

Superintendent Hill said the wants of the district were amply provided for without this licence.

Mr. F. Jones said in the locality there was one licence for every 193 persons. Within 500 yards there were twenty full licences, four beerhouses on, and one beerhouse off.....

All four houses were referred to the Quarter Sessions.”

The license renewal was referred to the Compensation Authority.

It was refused on 2nd July 1910.

Alcester Chronicle 9/7/1910

“Worcestershire Licensing Committee sat at the Guildhall, Worcester, on Saturday, to consider the fourteen houses referred to them as compensation authority by the several local benches.....

Of the houses reported, the following did not oppose extinction of their licenses.....

Evesham Standard 10/12/1910

A supplemental meeting of this Committee was held on Saturday at the Shirehall.....

The special purpose of the meeting was for the purpose of determining the amount of compensation to be paid for the extinction of licenses. Fourteen such licenses had been reported by the justices to the Committee, and the Committee had already decided to renew one. The amounts claimed in respect of the other thirteen were.....

CART AND HORSES, West Bromwich Street, Oldbury, £2,185 15s.....

The Committee took evidence in support of the claims calculated on the capitalised loss of trade, the capitalised loss in the value of the premises by the extinction of the license, and the loss on the sale of fittings.....

The Committee then announced the following awards.....

CART AND HORSES, Oldbury, £1,440.”

Alcester Chronicle 14/1/1911

“An adjourned meeting of the Worcestershire Licensing Committee was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, on Saturday.....

Brierley Hill Advertiser 4/10/1856

“On Monday last an inquest was held by R. Docker, Esq, at the NEW INN, Church Bridge, on the body of Richard Dunn, who met his death on Saturday under circumstances which have warranted the return of a verdict of Wilful Murder against Joseph Allmark, a young unmarried man, a collier by trade, who lived with his parents at Tivdale. The facts disclosed in the inquest may be stated as follows.

On Saturday morning last, about ten o'clock, some fourteen colliers, who were employed in the Sampson Colliery, near Oldbury, left their work in one of the pits, in consequence of the water in it having risen to a considerable height. When the men got upon the surface, they, in consequence of the rain, went to a blacksmith's shop, which was only a few yards off, for shelter. A man named Richard Dunn, aged twenty-one, was the smith employed at the forge in the shop, and was at work at the time the colliers entered. Allmark commenced handling the tools in the shop, and pulling these about to such an extent as to attract the attention of Richard Dunn, who remonstrated, and asked him to let them alone, adding that, ‘If he could not leave the tools alone, he must go out of the shop.’ Upon this, Dunn placed his hand upon Allmark's chest, but, as it appeared, without exhibiting any violence. As soon as Dunn placed his hand in the position described, Allmark struck him with his fist in the mouth, remarking, ‘I will do for you, you b——.’ Dunn then gave him a slight slap on the face, with the back of one of his hands, and with the back of the other he struck him upon the chest, but this was said to have been done without violence. Allmark then observed, ‘You b——, I will lay you straight for that before the day is out.’ Allmark then went to another part of the shop, and stood behind one of the colliers (Thomas Pearson), with whom he had previously been at work in the pit, the man Dunn in the meantime returning to his work at the forge. An interval of five minutes elapsed without anything being said between the parties. At the expiration of that period Allmark took up a new pike helve, which had been lying near to the place where he stood. With this in his hand he advanced a couple of paces towards the man Dunn, who at that time had just placed a piece of iron in the fire of the forge. One of the colliers exclaimed, 'Look out, Dick,' and the man Dunn at that instant turning round, he received a violent blow from the helve in the hand of the man Allmark, who, in addition to advancing a couple of paces, leaned forward when the blow was dealt. Dunn received the blow across the right side of his head, and immediately fell to the ground in a state of insensibility, Allmark observing, 'There, you b——, I told you I would lay you straight.' The colliers in the shop hastened to render assistance to the blacksmith Dunn, and meanwhile Allmark left the shop, and was seen running across some adjoining fields in the direction of Tividale, where he resided. Dunn was lifted from the ground, and the rude restoratives within their reach were used by the colliers. He remained senseless, and was carried to his home at Churchbridge. A surgeon, Mr. Beatty, was sent for, and found that the injured man was suffering from concussion of the brain. Dunn lingered until half-past twelve on Saturday night, when he expired; never having been conscious after receiving the blow, which, in Mr. Beatty's opinion, must have been a very violent one.

The jury, after having consulted together, returned a verdict of Wilful Murder against Joseph Allmark. The accused, we learn, has absconded, but measures have been taken for his apprehension."

[Joseph Allmark was eventually discovered in Stafford prison, waiting to be tried for having thrown a lad down a coal pit near Bilston. He appeared at Worcestershire Summer Assizes 1857, charged with manslaughter. He was found guilty and, although the jury recommended him to mercy on account of his age, was sentenced to 15 years' penal servitude.]

There were eighty-three applications for the renewal of old licenses, and 50 for certificates under the Wine and Beerhouse Act.

Mr. Avery said that all the applications for the renewal of licensed victuallers’ licenses and beer and wine shop licenses would be granted, with two exceptions, viz, those of John Hyland, beerhouse keeper, Church Bridge, and Sophia Jones, the landlady of the HARMONIC INN, Church Street. In the other cases there was no objection on the part of the police and no conviction. Hyland and Jones had been summoned for offences, and their cases were to be heard that morning, after which their applications for renewal would be considered.....

The charge against John Hyland of permitting drunkenness in his house, on the 17th inst, was subsequently heard by the Magistrates, and the offence having been proved, a fine of £2 and costs, was inflicted.

Sophia Jones, of the HARMONIC INN, pleaded guilty to a charge of keeping her house open during prohibited hours, on the 1st inst, and was fined £1 and costs.

Their licenses were renewed, but the defendants were cautioned as to their future conduct.

Yesterday, for the first time, the Licensing Session was held at Oldbury. It had previously been held at Hales Owen, much to the inconvenience of publicans and others interested in the trade of Oldbury.”

Edward Waterhouse and Joseph Sheppard surrendered to their bail, and were indicted for stealing 12 sides of bacon, the property of John Hyland, on the 9th of January, at Oldbury. Mr. Godson prosecuted; Mr. A. Young (specially retained) and Mr. E. H. Selfe appeared for Waterhouse; Mr. J. Underhill (specially retained) and Mr. T. M. Todd appeared for Sheppard.

For the prosecution it was alleged that on the 8th of January Mr. Hyland, who is a provision merchant, residing at Church Bridge, Oldbury, left in his yard two boxes of American bacon. During the night one of the boxes was broken open and 12 sides of bacon, of the value of £7 10s, were abstracted. The police were communicated with, and the prisoner Waterhouse was arrested. It was found that at six o’clock that morning he had been offering the bacon for sale to two men named Attwood and Bate, who had declined to have anything to do with it. The police examined Waterhouse’s cart and found the sides smeared with bacon fat. When charged with the offence, Waterhouse at first denied it, and then said that there was a person named Edwards who had called him up at five o’clock that morning and wanted him to get some bacon away because the bailiffs were in the house. They had offered it for sale to several persons, and had finally disposed of it to the prisoner Sheppard at Tipton. Sheppard had given £1 10s for it, out of which he (Waterhouse) had received 10s. Upon hearing this the police went to Sheppard’s house and found the bacon there.

Mr. Young urged on behalf of Waterhouse that he had not been actuated by guilty motives. He was a man of good character, and obtained his livelihood by jobbing with a horse and cart. It was in the legitimate exercise of his employment that he had undertaken to carry the bacon for Edwards, who had absconded, and who was the real thief.

Mr. Underhill contended that Sheppard had taken the bacon in good faith from Edwards and Waterhouse upon the understanding that if he was satisfied with the manner in which it had been obtained he would complete the transaction. Witnesses were called to substantiate this statement, and to show that Sheppard had attempted no kind of concealment in the matter.

After a hearing extending over nearly seven hours, the jury found both prisoners guilty.

Mr. Hastings said that with regard to Sheppard there was no doubt in the minds of the Bench that he was a man of bad character. He had been indicted for burglary, and had been sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment, with hard labour, for obtaining money by means of false pretences. Of all people in the world, there were none who did so much to keep up the crime of this country as the receivers of stolen property. He would have to undergo a sentence of seven years' penal servitude, and after that be subjected to police supervision for five years. Waterhouse, who had previously borne a good character, would have to go to gaol for twelve months, with hard labour."

John Hyland was also a grocer. [1880]

West Bromwich Weekly News 16/7/1887

“John Evans, NEW INN, Churchbridge, was charged with being drunk in charge of a horse and gig, and Earl Thompson, of Langley, was charged with being drunk with him, on the 7th July.

PC Clarke stated that he saw defendants swaying about in a gig, and in Eel Street they pulled up, when Thompson fell in front of the wheel, and Evans threatened to cut his head off with the whip.

PC Smith confirmed.

Mr. Shakespeare defended and stated that Evans had kept the licensed house for 20 years, and had never been there before. The two defendants were old friends, and neither of them had ever been drunk in their lives.

Mr. Hayward stated that defendants called at their house on the date in question, and left at two o'clock – perfectly sober. Benjamin Thompson said that his father came home at 12.30 on the day in question, and he (witness) opened the door to let him in. He had applied six leeches to his head the day previous, and had been very ill.

Joseph Evans stated that his father came home sober, and the next morning he found that the harness had been put away in a proper manner. He had never seen his father properly drunk in all his life.

Defendant Evans was then placed in the box, and stated that Mr. Thompson's hat blew off, and he pulled up suddenly for him to get out and pick it up. As he did so, two officers flew out from under a wall, and accused them of being drunk. He jumped out of the trap very excitedly, and offered to go to the Police Station with them. The officers told a tissue of untruths, as they were as sober as they were at that time.

The case was dismissed.”

Birmingham Daily Post 2/12/1889

“A well-attended meeting of miners was held at the NEW INN, Church Bridge, Oldbury, on Saturday night, for the purpose of forming a miners' lodge for the district. The meeting was addressed by Mr. B. Winwood, who said there was great discontent existing amongst miners with regard to the prices of coal being raised. The men had not received their fair proportion of the increase. It was unfair to them and the public to charge the purchasers of coal at the pits more than was charged to manufacturers or merchants. He spoke of the necessity of a restriction being put upon the output of coal. It was decided to form a miners' lodge, and a further resolution was passed in favour of a national movement with reference to the wages question.”

County Advertiser 22/8/1896

“On Monday evening an inquest was held at the NEW INN, Church Bridge, near Oldbury, before Mr. E. Docker, respecting the death of Samuel Walters (47), rivetmaker, formerly residing in Tump Road, Blackheath, who was found drowned in the Birmingham Canal, at Newbury Lane, on Sunday morning.

Elizabeth Walters, the widow, stated that deceased left home about half-past seven on Saturday night. She supposed that he was walking from Blackheath to Langley for the purpose of seeing his daughter, who lives there, when he missed his way and fell into the canal.

Job Taylor, hairdresser, of Birmingham Road, Blackheath, said deceased called at his shop on Saturday night about 11-30. He then appeared to be under the influence of drink.

Police-constable Harrison and other witnesses gave evidence as to the finding and recovery of the body.

There were no marks of violence. The officer stated that he had ascertained that deceased was very drunk on Saturday night.

A verdict of Found Drowned was returned.”

AND

“On Tuesday afternoon, Mr. E. Docker (coroner) held an inquest at the NEW INN, Churchbridge, Oldbury, respecting the death of Samuel Harvey (13), whose parents reside in Park Street, Churchbridge, who was killed on Friday evening by the falling of a quantity of earth on a pit-mound near the Park House Brick Works.

Henry Harvey, ironworker, said his son went to the pit-mound to pick coal out of the refuse. Some time afterwards he was informed that deceased had been suffocated through being buried under a large quantity of debris.

The Coroner reminded the witness that it was a dangerous practice to allow children to visit such places.

Witness replied that it was a general practice for children in that locality to pick coal on the mounds.

Louisa Olliver stated that she saw the deceased and a number of other children picking coal on the mound. They were engaged in a hollow, when suddenly about eight tons of earth fell from the top, burying the deceased and four of the children. Witness ran to the spot and extricated two of the children, and also raised an alarm. A number of men came with picks and shovels, and the children were rescued in about ten minutes. Harvey was found to be dead, but the others were restored.

William Vance said the children were trespassing, and a man named James Harris was at work amongst them.

Harris was called, and denied that he was working in the hollow with the children, but said he was engaged by the side of it.

Dr. Buttery said deceased was suffocated; his right arm was broken, and he was also crushed. He complimented Police-constable Harrison upon the successful efforts he made to restore animation by artificial respiration. One of the children was suffering from serious spinal injuries.

The Coroner commented upon the dangerous practice on the part of parents in allowing children to pick coal on the mounds. He hoped the case would serve as a warning to parents in the future.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death, and added an expression of opinion that it was dangerous for parents to allow children to visit the pit mounds for the purpose of getting coal. They also commended the conduct of Police-constable Harrison for having, by his unremitting exertions, restored respiration in the case of a little girl to all appearance dead.”

John Evans died on 30th April 1901.

“West Bromwich, Oldbury, and Smethwick licensees have declared war on innkeepers who provide free drinks and sandwiches for darts and domino players to attract customers.

The Women's Auxiliary of West Bromwich, Oldbury and Smethwick Licensed Victuallers' Association has decided to inquire into the practice, and the National Trade Defence Association will be asked to help.

Mr. L. Dodd, of the RAILWAY INN, West Bromwich, president of West Bromwich branch of the Licensed Victuallers' Association, thinks that this form of enticement amounts to unfair trading.

Mrs. E. Smith, of the NEW INN, Oldbury, vice-president of the Women's Auxiliary, was more outspoken.

‘Star players are enticed away from their regular public house by promises of free drinks and food,’ she said.

‘I am losing customers through this new system, and when I find out exactly which licensees are involved I shall go to see them.’

And Mrs. Dale, of the SANDWELL HOTEL, West Bromwich, president of the Women's Auxiliary, said, ‘If this practice continued, it was an attempt to bribe the public. Already dart and domino players are moving from one public house to another, and some licensees are losing heavily.’

Support for the licensees' fight was promised last night by Mr. R. P. Bray, assistant agent for the Midland's Division of the National Trade Defence Association. ‘My Association regards this as unfair trading,’ he said.”

“The adjourned inquest on the body of an old man, who was found dead in the Birmingham Road, on Monday week, was held last evening at the NEW INN, Birmingham Road, Oldbury, before Mr. Ralph Docker, District Coroner.

It will be remembered that about five o'clock on the morning of the day named a man named Bird found deceased lying across the footpath. Dr. Hayward was immediately sent for, but found life extinct upon his arrival. Some evidence was given on the preceding occasion of his acts on the day and night preceding his death. He went into the NEW INN, and had some refreshment, and stated his intention of going to Dudley. He was afterwards observed for several hours to walk up and down the road, and begged a few coppers to pay for a night's lodging. These coppers were found by the police in his pocket.

Acting under the precept of the Coroner, Dr. Hayward made a post mortem examination of the body, and his evidence removed all suspicion that deceased had been foully dealt with. An outward examination of the body showed that there were no external injuries whatever, and on opening the body, the brain, heart, lungs, and kidneys were found extensively diseased. There was about a quarter of a pint of watery fluid on and in the brain, and in Dr. Hayward's opinion, the deceased died from serous apoplexy resulting from the diseased state of the organs of the body, possibly hastened by his exposure to the cold on the morning of his death. It was a mystery, however, that he had lived so long as he had. He had carefully searched for any bruises or fractures of the skull, but there was not the slightest trace of any.

Mr. Docker summed up, and the Jury returned a verdict of Natural Death, resulting from serous apoplexy. Deceased was about seventy years of age, tall, with white hair, and when found was dressed in a dark suit of clothes, blue shirt, and white front, and is said to have once been a bucklemaker."

"For the purpose of inquiring into the circumstances attending the death of a youth, 16 years of age, named George Toy, who resided in Frazer Street, an inquest was held at the NEW INN, Birmingham Road, Oldbury, on Tuesday, before Mr. Ralph Docker, Coroner.

On Saturday evening last deceased went to bathe in an arm of the Birmingham canal, with several other boys. Deceased got into the water first, but was directly afterwards seen to be struggling. A woman passing at the time, perceiving that he was drowning, endeavoured to rescue him. Several boys about at the time, by catching hold of each other's hands, and arranging themselves in a line, went into the water some distance, but failed to reach deceased, who was soon afterwards seen to sink. A young man named Harris, who subsequently came upon the spot, and who could swim, plunged into the water, and soon brought the unfortunate youth to the side of the canal. He had then been in the water nearly ten minutes, and was quite dead. Mr. Sainsbury, surgeon, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, was sent for, but although he promptly attended, his assistance was of no avail, except to pronounce life extinct. The young man Harris, in reply to the Coroner, said he was not aware of any means to restore life in cases of drowning. Mr. Sainsbury, at the Coroner's request, showed how to apply Marshall's method of artificial respiration. The Jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death."

"The annual Licensing Sessions were held on Tuesday.....

Mr. Shakespeare applied for the renewal of the license of the NEW INN, Birmingham Road, on behalf of John Jordan, brewer, of the British Queen Brewery.

The Superintendent of Police opposed the application on the ground that the house had been closed for a number of years.

Police-sergeant Stanton stated that, to his own knowledge, the house had been closed five years, and, from enquiries, he believed the premises had not been used for public premises for fifteen years.

Mr. Shakespeare said they admitted the house had been closed for eight years.....

The magistrates then retired to consider the various applications Mr. Avery announced that they had decided to allow the application of Walter Cooper, but not that of Mr. John Jordan.”

“Thomas Collins, of the NEW INN, Hales Owen Street, was charged with keeping his licensed premises open during illegal hours on the 15th inst. Mr. Shakespeare defended.

Police-sergeant Stanton stated that at twelve minutes past eleven o’clock on the night of the 9th he visited defendant’s house, and found two men and a female sitting in the front liquor shop, with beer in a cup before them.

Defendant was fined 5s and costs, the Bench considering that it was a case of negligence rather than wilful violation of the law.

Benjamin Morgan, roller, of Wesley Street, and James Morgan, roller, Hales Owen Street, were summoned for being on the above-mentioned premises, and were each ordered to pay the costs.”

Birmingham Daily Post 12/10/1888

“Yesterday Mr. A. H. Hebbert (deputy-coroner) held an inquest at the NEW INN, Hales Owen Street, Oldbury, respecting the death of a child named Thomas Dunwoody, aged three weeks, whose parents reside at No.1 Court, Hales Owen Street.

Mr. Dunwoody stated that on Monday night last she took her child into her mother’s house, and after remaining there a short time she noticed the child’s head fall back, and remarked to her mother that deceased was ill. A neighbour, named Phibbs, took the child from witness, and sent for a medical man, but when he arrived the child was dead.

The Coroner: What made you go into your mother’s house after eleven o’clock?

Witness replied that her husband was intoxicated, and she did not want to quarrel with him.

A Juror: Had your husband previously turned you out? – Witness: No; I have never been exposed to the street.

In reply to further questions, witness admitted having been out on Saturday and Sunday nights, and would have been out on Monday night had not the child died. She did not go to bed on the two former nights. Her husband locked the door about twelve o’clock and retired to bed. The child did not die in her arms in the street, but died in her sister’s arms at her mother’s residence. It was not true that she had been exposed to the cold for hours since the birth of the child.

Rebecca Riley, mother of the last witness, said that her daughter lay upon a sofa on the two nights that she visited her house.

Mary Phibbs said she went to lay the child out at its parents’ residence, when the father said, ‘Take it to the mortuary; I will not have it here.’

Dr. Lyddon said that the child died from convulsions. It had also been improperly fed, which accelerated convulsions.

The jury returned a verdict of Death from Convulsions, and the coroner was requested to reprimand Dunwoody for his brutal conduct.”

“Yesterday afternoon, at Oldbury Police Court – before Messrs. J. E. Wilson and H. Bennett – George Millward, landlord of the NEW INNS, Halesowen Street, was fined 20s and costs for permitting drunkenness on his premises on the 13th inst.

The evidence of Police-sergeant Hill and Police-constable Wagstaff went to show that a man named Ashcroft was led away from the defendant’s premises on the day named in a helpless state of intoxication.

The defence urged by Mr. W. Shakespear was that the man was not supplied with sufficient liquor in the defendant’s house to make him drunk.”

Birmingham Daily Post 10/4/1895

“At West Bromwich County Court, yesterday – before Judge Griffith and a jury – an action was brought by Reuben Bull, watchmaker, Oldbury, against George Millward, NEW INN, Halesowen Street, Oldbury, to recover £50 for personal injuries sustained by the plaintiff, through an assault committed upon him by the defendant, on January 15 last. Mr. J. S. Sharpe appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. J. Clark defended.

Mr. Sharpe explained that some six months ago the plaintiff contracted a small debt of 6d, for brandy supplied by the defendant. The plaintiff had, apparently, forgotten the debt. On January 15 the defendant visited the plaintiff’s shop, and, in an excited manner, asked Mrs. Bull why her husband had not paid the 6d which he owed him. Later on the same day the plaintiff saw defendant at the latter’s house concerning the matter. An altercation ensued, in the course of which it was alleged, the defendant knocked the plaintiff down, the result being that plaintiff sustained a fracture of the ribs. Dr. Marsh attended the plaintiff for five weeks, and during that period he was incapacitated from following his employment.

For the defence, Mr. Clark contended that the plaintiff was the aggressor, and that he and Millward had a struggle, during which plaintiff fell and sustained the injuries referred to.

The jury gave a verdict for the plaintiff for £25 and costs.”

“A case of considerable interest to brewery companies and license holders came before Oldbury Magistrates on Tuesday, when Mr. J. S. Sharpe applied for the transfer of the NEW INN, Halesowen Street, from George Millward to William Shaw. Mr. Sharpe pointed out that Messrs. Hopkins and Carver, trading as John Jordan and Co. held a lease of the premises in question, but under an agreement with Mr. Shaw, the latter would become owner of the premises, and receive the profits. Mr. Hopkins said the only interest his firm had in the business was that of wholesale traders, as Shaw could only sell liquors supplied by them. In reply to the Bench the applicant said the landlord of the house owned the fixtures and he purchased the fittings from Jordan and Co. for £20. Mr. Heaton said the Bench would not accept as owner of the business, a man who was only a monthly tenant and declined to grant the application. They granted a temporary authority to Mrs. Hopkins and Carver.”

“At Oldbury Police Court, on Tuesday, William Shaw, manager of the NEW INN, Halesowen Street, was charged with assaulting William Thomas Whale, who had six pints of ale in Shaw’s house and refused to pay for it until he was sober. Shaw followed him out, and struck him on the nose, knocking him down. The magistrates did not think Shaw should allow his customers to have so much beer. Shaw tersely replied that they could drink a barrel and carry it away. (Laughter.) He was fined 5s and costs.”

Article by Derrick Such

“An agreement had been drawn up on 18th July 1933 between the landlords, Mitchells and Butlers, and the newly installed tenant William Henry Such, a contract that ran into several pages. The firm Jones, Son and Vernon, auctioneers and valuers, based in Church Street, Oldbury, had been employed to complete an inventory that gives us an intriguing glimpse inside the NEW INNS pub, and it’s these two documents which provide us with some of the whys and wherefores of running a pub in the 1930s.

To begin with, and one of the most important issues for licensee William Such and his wife Sophia to consider was the yearly rent of £78 payable by 52 equal payments. It was also determined that either party should give not less than three calendar months to quit the agreement.

William Such had to agree to pay for all the gas lighting and coal in respect of the public house, and do all the necessary to keep the premises scrupulously clean, also glasses and other utensils, and to replace all glass in the windows, doors, and mirrors in the event of them being broken.

In respect of the sale of drinks, the landlord was the sole supplier, and brewing of any description was not permitted at the pub.....

In the entry hall there was a painted and grained half-glazed vestibule door with two electric pendants, one globe and one bulb.

The smoke room contained 14’ of return end wide seating supports on turned supports, with two arm rests, a 6’ deal top drinking table on painted legs, moulded iron curb, a seven radiant gas fire, and a 3’10” x 3’1” mirror in a gilt frame.

The bar had a 11’5” heavy moulded return end top shelf and 9’6” back bar fittings which included two under bottle shelves, a decanter counter, two rows of glass shelves, a three panel mirror back and four mirror panel pillars. There were also five mahogany case nickel pull beer taps with five pipe connections to the cellar, and among other items, a shamrock cork extractor.

The NEW INNS had another smoke room at the back, with a moulded iron curb and a seven radiant gas fire, two bentwood stools, four cast iron spittoons, a 3' mahogany top drinking table on an ornamental iron stand and a 6' rail back bench.

In the snug there was a brass rail fender, and a six radiant gas fire, 6' 6" seating with two elbows and a loose pegamoid cover, a 3' mahogany top table on an ornamental stand, and a shaped 6' 6" draught screen painted and grained.

The kitchen had a 5' rail back bench, one stool, and a cupboard with three shelves which were put in by Mr. Clee.

The club room included a 6' drinking table, a NCR, old pewter measures, six old spirit measures, one stool broken and a seven radiant gas fire.

Down in the cellar the valuers found among other things five brass barrel taps, cellar stove and flex, and two wrenches; and in the scullery there was a cross legged table, two gallon iron buckets and a lettered sign saying 'Gentlemen.'

The value of the stock that William was assuming responsibility for came to £18 7s 4d. This included plenty of jugs and glasses, two dozen large nourishing stout bottles, small export, family ales, Guinness, cider, minerals, grapefruit, three bottles of Martel Brandy, Glan Ivor Whiskey, Red Seal Sherry, Jamaica Rum, London Gin, and 34 packets of Woodbines. In the cellar there were 3.5 gallons of best bitter priced at 7d a pint and various other beers.

The final settlement figure from the valuers came to £178 9s 4d."

William Henry Such married Sophia Baker, daughter of David Baker of the BRICKMAKERS ARMS, Churchbridge, in the 3rd quarter of 1903.

Evening Despatch 21/8/1939

"Despite an adjournment at the inquest nearly a month ago in order for a post mortem examination and an analysis of all the vital organs, doctors have been unable to find any apparent cause for the death of William Henry Such, aged 60, who was licensee of the NEW INN, Halesowen Street, Oldbury.

Reviewing the history of the case at the resumed inquest at West Bromwich today, the Borough Coroner, Mr. Lyon Clark, said that on 20 July, Such was engaged in cleaning the fanlight in the passage at home and for that purpose was using a pair of steps.

While preparing breakfast, his wife heard him call out 'Oh' and upon going to ascertain the cause found him sitting on the floor. He said he had fallen on the bucket he was using and had hurt his side. Later he was able to continue his work, but four days afterwards he was attended by a doctor who put a plaster on the area where the pain was felt. His condition, however, became worse and Such was removed to Hallam Hospital, West Bromwich, where he died on 25 July.

Dr. Power now stated that all the organs of Such were normal for a person of his age, and there was absolutely nothing to indicate the cause of death. There were no signs of any physical injury he might have received in falling on the bucket. Replying to the coroner the doctor said the shock of the fall might have caused heart failure, and that was the only possible explanation which could be offered.

Describing it as a very strange case the Coroner returned a verdict of Death from Natural Causes, adding that the fall coupled with the hurt to his side, must have caused shock which in turn brought about heart failure."

"Yesterday Mr. E. Docker (coroner) held an inquest at the NEW INN, Rounds Green, respecting the death of Herbert Hemmings (36), of Rounds Green, who was found drowned in the Birmingham Canal, on Saturday night last.

Maria Hemmings, wife of the deceased, stated that her husband went to work on Saturday morning and as he did not return at night witness went in search of him, and found him in a neighbouring public house. She requested him to come home, and he followed her up to the house door, but he went back in the direction of the canal, which is fifty yards from the house. When witness discovered he had gone, she followed him, and saw him running in the direction of the canal. Witness seized him, and requested him to return with her, but he escaped and ran into the canal. Assistance was obtained, but when deceased was got out he was quite dead. Deceased had been subject to epileptic fits for some time past.

Dr. Buttery said he attended deceased for the past three years for epilepsy, and he was not responsible for his actions whilst in a fit.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidentally Drowned whilst suffering from the effects of an epileptic fit.”

The Superintendent had given notices to oppose the licenses of also the license of the NEW INN, Summer Row, Rounds Green kept by Jane Philpott, on the ground that the police were unable to exercise proper supervision.....

The Bench retired to consider their decision The renewal of the license of the NEW INN would be held over until the adjourned Licensing Sessions.”

AND

West Bromwich Weekly News 25/8/1900

“The license was objected to on the ground that the police could not exercise proper supervision over the house. Superintendent Chare, however, said the alterations were being carried out, and he asked for the renewal to be adjourned until the adjourned sessions in order that he could see the work was being done satisfactorily. It was in consequence of something that had come to his knowledge that he asked for the alterations to be made.”

[These alterations involved a boundary wall, which was deemed too low.]

The license renewal to Jane Philpotts was refused at the Adjourned Licensing Meeting on 4th September 1900.

West Bromwich Weekly News 8/9/1900

“Mr. J. W. Clulow applied for the Bench to reconsider their decision with regard to this house. Superintendent Chare stated that access could be obtained to the premises over a low wall at the back, and they were extremely difficult for the police to supervise. The house was dilapidated and dirty, and the neighbourhood was declining, there being only about 30 houses in the locality, and there were five licensed houses within 300 yards, so that this house was not necessary.

Mr. Clulow pointed out that the complaint of the Superintendent with regard to the wall at the back was met by the erection of an iron fence of which he had approved. The house was situated in the midst of brick-works, the men from whom came to it, and there was a tip for ashes near it, these causes combining to make it dirtier than could be desired. If the renewal was granted, the owners, Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers Ltd., would put the house in such a condition as would satisfy all the requirements of the police, and Mr. Clulow appealed to the Bench to renew the license.

Mr. Wilson said the Bench had given great attention to all he had urged, but they were unable to take any other course but that which they had already announced.

Mr. Clulow gave notice of appeal against the justices’ decision.”

West Bromwich Weekly News 15/9/1900

“Felix Parker, iron worker of Wood Street, Greets Green, was summoned for being drunk on the licensed premises of the NEW INN, Rounds Green, kept by Mary Jane Philpot, on the 28th August.

PC Shilvock visited the house, and saw the defendant in a drunken condition, lolling at the end of a bench and trying to sing. When he left the house he staggered.

Mr. J. W. Clulow, who defended, contended that the officer was mistaken, and called defendant, the landlady, and two men, who stated that defendant was sober. He was singing ‘Alice, where art thou?’, a man having promised him some whisky if he did it.

The Bench considered the case was proved, and imposed a fine of 5s and costs.”

West Bromwich Weekly News 20/10/1900

“At Worcester Assizes on Tuesday, Jane Philpotts, licensee of the NEW INN, Rounds Green, Oldbury, Messrs. Mitchell and Butler (lessees of the house), and Mary Ann Hadley, owner of the property were the appellants, and the Oldbury magistrates, the respondents, in an appeal against the refusal of the Oldbury Bench to renew the license of the house.

Mr. Cranstoun and Mr. Carmichael (instructed by Mr. J. Walter Clulow, Birmingham) were for the licensees and the owner. Mr. Hickey was for the lessees company, and Mr. Vachell and Mr. Shakespeare (instructed by Mr. Shakespeare) were for the respondent magistrates. Mr. George Heaton, a member of the Oldbury Bench, appeared on his own behalf, objecting to one of the grounds given in the notice of appeal imputing to the justices misconduct by reason of 'unlawfully, irregularly, and without the exercise of proper judicial discretion, refused the license.' This he denied absolutely. There was no irregularity or violation of the law. The Chairman assured Mr. Heaton that no one attributed anything wrong to any individual of the Bench. Mr. Cranstoun added that this was the usual form of the notice. The renewal of the license was objected to at the annual licensing sessions on the ground that the premises were improperly enclosed and were not necessary for the requirements of the neighbourhood.

The case was adjourned for the justices to visit the premises, and upon the adjourned hearing the justices refused to renew the license. They, however, acceded to the request of the applicants' solicitor to allow the witnesses to be recalled and cross-examined, and they then adhered to their decision to refuse the renewal. The neighbourhood, said Mr. Vachell, was a rapidly declining one.

Superintendent Chare spoke to the requirements of the neighbourhood, and said this and other houses could be well dispensed with.

The Bench allowed the appeal, but made no order as to costs."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 9/10/1901

"The Oldbury magistrates were asked yesterday to transfer the license of the NEW INN, Rounds Green, from Jane Philpott to George Thomas Cartwright, but Mr. George Heaton (who presided) objected on the ground that it would be in direct opposition to a resolution which had been passed by the magistrates of the Oldbury division, which was to the effect that the owners of the house or business should be the licensees. Ultimately the license was transferred to Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers."

"At Oldbury Police Court, on Tuesday, before Messrs. G. S. Allbright, E. Danks, and T. Lavender, an important point affecting the licensing of public houses owned by brewery firms was raised. Messrs. Mitchell and Butler, of the Cape Hill Brewery, Smethwick, and owners of the NEW INNS, Rounds Green, Oldbury, were summoned for permitting drunkenness upon their licensed premises, and also with supplying a drunken person on the 8th inst. Mr. J. S. Sharpe prosecuted on behalf of the police, and Mr. A. Caddick defended. Mr. Sharpe explained that defendants were the owners and licensees of the premises, which were under the charge of a man named George Thomas Cartwright. He contended that they were the only persons who could be brought before the Court, and they were responsible for anything wrong that took place upon those premises. On the night in question PS Pegg and PC Haden found a man named John Barnsley on the premises in a drunken condition.

Mr. Caddick said Cartwright was a tenant under the agreement, and Mitchell and Butler had no more control over the management of the house than the magistrates. When the license was granted the agreement was produced, and it was contended that Cartwright was a bona-fide tenant, whilst Superintendent Sherriff also asked for the license to be granted in the name of the tenant in consequence of the difficulty to prove the owners' knowledge of the offence. Notwithstanding this protest, at Mr. Heaton's directions the license was granted to the owners of the house, it being stated that the Bench had passed a resolution to the effect that all licenses should be in the name of the owner. He understood that since the license was transferred the Justices had decided to grant the licenses to all tenants, where they were proved to be bona-fide ones.

The Magistrates' Clerk (Mr. Shakespeare) gave evidence as to the transfer of the license, but in reply to Mr. Caddick, said he declined to give any evidence upon the resolutions, or to produce them without the authority of the Justices.

Mr. Caddick said under the circumstances he should apply for an adjournment to subpoena the Clerk, and also Messrs. G. Heaton, and T. Lavender, who granted the license. He intended to have the resolutions. Mr. Albright said he had not seen any such resolution, and he would like more information upon the matter. The Bench decided to proceed with the case. Mr. Caddick said he would continue his cross-examination of Mr. Shakespeare, who, however, still declined to give any information upon the resolutions. Eventually the case was adjourned for a fortnight. Mr. Caddick explaining that he would put Mr. Heaton and Mr. Lavender, as well as the Clerk, into the witness box."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 5/2/1902

"Considerable interest was manifested in a licensing case at Oldbury yesterday, when Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers, brewers, of Cape Hill, were summoned for permitting drunkenness on the licensed premises of the NEW INN, Rounds Green, on the 8th of January. There were six magistrates on the Bench, and there was a considerable array of legal gentlemen present.....

The magistrates were a considerable time deliberating in private, and Mr. Albright subsequently announced that they considered the charge of permitting drunkenness was proved. They thought, however, that they had acted under a misapprehension, and in the circumstances they would dismiss the case on the payment of costs.

Cartwright was then fined 10s and the costs for being drunk on the licensed premises, and Barnsley 5s and the costs."

Daniel Cockbill was fined £5 and £3 11s 6d costs, on 29th April 1902, for permitting drunkenness on 15th April.

The renewal to him was refused at the Adjourned Licensing Meeting on 4th September 1902, but it was renewed on appeal at the Quarter Sessions.

He was fined £5 and £2 19s 0d costs, on 16th December 1902 for permitting drunkenness on 29th November.

Smethwick Weekly News 13/12/1902

"Samuel Didlock and John Careless, both of Rounds Green, were summoned for being disorderly and refusing to quit the licensed premises of the NEW INNS, Rounds Green, on the 29th ult.

Mr. F. Dawes, who appeared for the complainant, Daniel Cockbill (landlord), said that these summonses had been taken out for the purpose of assisting the landlord in the good management of the house. It appeared that on the evening of the day named the defendants were in the house at about 9.30. Careless was talking loudly with another man, and using bad language. The landlord asked him to go out unless he used better language. This he refused to do, and Mr. Cockbill put him out. His friend Didlock seemed to have got excited at this and scratched the landlord's face, and then he was put out as well. Mr. Dawes explained that Didlock had expressed his regret at his conduct, and in the face of that apology the landlord was prepared to withdraw the charge against Didlock. If Careless would make a similar apology Mr. Cockbill would deal with him in the same manner.

Mr. Heaton said the magistrates thought that after the summonses had been taken out, both cases should go on. If cases were to be withdrawn they should be withdrawn with the consent of both parties. The magistrates wished to assist the publican, and the cases would have to proceed.

The case against Didlock, who did not appear, was adjourned for a week.

The landlord and witnesses gave evidence, but the defendant said on oath that Cockbill punched him without asking him to leave.

Careless was then fined 14s, including costs, or 7 days.”

The license renewal was refused on 3rd February 1903.

“Charity fund raisers in Oldbury have proved a real knockout in helping to provide guide dogs for the blind – with Warley boxer Pat Cowdell on hand to prove it. Kind-hearted regulars at the NEW NAVIGATION pub, in Titford Road, Langley, Oldbury, presented a third £1,000 cheque to the Guide Dogs for the Blind Association and Pat was there to officiate. Each instalment has meant the organisation being able to buy another dog and put it through the intensive training necessary to become a blind person’s invaluable aid. The cheque was accepted on behalf of the association by Mrs. Emily Vane, of Northfield, with her dog Ziggy, aged three.

Pub regular Mr. Royston Reardon, from Swan Crescent, Langley, has organised events for the last three years, getting support from licensee Mrs. Judith Oxley and her husband Brian. The latest £1,000 cheque was raised with the aid of a number of raffles in the pub, customers entering the BRMB Walkathon and another being sponsored to run the Sandwell Marathon. Mrs. Oxley said, 'This is the third guide dog we have raised money for in three years and it was a great effort by everyone.'

“A man who swung a knife around a pub following a row with a punter has been given a suspended jail sentence. Stephen Roe left the NEW NAVIGATION in Oldbury after the argument only to return armed with the blade. But when his rival refused to back down, it was Roe who fled from the pub. The knife-man’s night took a further turn for the worse when he suffered a fractured leg during a scuffle outside. The 48-year-old told police he was ‘bladdered’ after downing ‘eight or nine pints’ earlier in the day on March 23, Wolverhampton Crown Court heard. Words were exchanged with another drinker in the pub and after leaving, delivery driver Roe came back with the knife.

Mr. Gary Cook, prosecuting, told the court, ‘The victim was in the NAVIGATION pub in Oldbury when he became involved in a verbal argument with the defendant. The defendant had been in the public house all day long and had drunk a lot. He was asked to leave the public house but returned 20 to 30 minutes later and had a knife which he swung around in the direction of the victim.’

But the victim remained undeterred despite being faced with the knife, shouting ‘come on then’ at his challenger, the court was told. Then, along with his son, he chased Roe out the pub.

Mr. Cook continued, ‘The defendant fell over. He got up and still had the knife. The son rugby-tackled him to the ground and held him on the ground until he was arrested.’

It was Roe who came off worse, suffering the injury to his leg in the midst of the commotion.

‘He said he had gone back to the public house to scare off the complainant. He has then been pursued from the public house,’ Mr. Cook said. ‘He didn’t complain about his injuries because he said he probably deserved them. It was his account that a little rough justice had been handed out.’

The court heard Roe was diagnosed with a ‘brain disease’ in 2017 which experts said could cause his ‘cognitive thinking’ to be impaired.

Mr. Thomas Griffiths, defending, added, ‘He accepts full responsibility and has always done so. He made a significantly immature mistake.’

Roe, of Titford Road, Oldbury, who pleaded guilty to possession of a bladed article in a public place and using threatening and abusive behaviour with intent to cause fear of violence, was given a 12-month prison sentence, suspended for 18 months. He was also banned from licensed premises for 18 months.”

Smethwick Weekly News 31/8/1901

“Sergeant Cox deposed to serving notice of objection to the renewal of the above license upon the owners of the premises, on the ground that Joseph Lindon, the occupier, was convicted on June 4th for permitting drunkenness; and that there was no necessity for the license, as the requirements of the district were amply provided for; further, that Lindon was not a fit and proper person to hold a license.

Superintendent Sherriff explained that the inn belonged to William Parkes, of Newtown, Greets Green, but the lease was held at present by Sir John Holder. There were eleven licensed houses within a radius of 180 yards of the NOAHS ARK. He had examined the latter premises, and found there was no back door to the house.

Mr. Fritchett, who represented Sir John Holder, urged that the door at the rear of the premises was dispensed with in consequence of the magistrates order, there being some houses adjoining.”

“Oldbury Adjourned Licensing Sessions.....

Mr. Clulow made application for the renewal of the licence of the CROSS GUNS INN, Church Street.....

Superintendent Sheriff urged that the premises were dilapidated, that there were two convictions within a month for permitting drunkenness last October and November, and that there were eleven other licensed houses within a radius of 200 yards, so that the house was altogether unnecessary.

Mr. Clulow said if it was necessary to reduce the number of licences he thought the NOAHS ARK INN, opposite, which the police described as a ‘dog kennel,’ and against which there was a conviction, should have been refused.....

After retiring to consider their decision, Mr. Wilson explained with reference to the NOAHS ARK that it was only a beerhouse, and whatever their views in regard to it might be they would still be in the same position. The justices were agreed they must decline to renew the licence of the CROSS GUNS INN.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 18/2/1903

“The adjourned licensing sessions were held at Oldbury yesterday. The Chairman (Mr. G. Heaton) announced that the magistrates had passed a resolution requiring all license holders to give six months’ notice, and deposit with the clerk to the justices plans of their licensed premises.

It was decided to grant the whole of the music licenses applied for, but the three licenses for dancing were granted on the understanding that no intoxicants were supplied in the rooms where it took place.

Mr. Heaton announced that the magistrates had decided to discontinue granting occasional licenses for football matches, as they were of opinion that there was sufficient provision for obtaining drink. They had also passed a resolution viewing with disfavour the establishment of air-gun clubs at public houses.....

In renewing the license of the NOAHS ARK INN, the magistrates said alterations should not be made without their consent.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 21/10/1949

“An Oldbury public house which the landlord’s wife says is sometimes ‘more like a church than a public house’ is staging a harvest festival a week on Sunday. A poster in the bar calls it ‘a token of thanks to God by the users of this house for a bountiful harvest.’ The public house is the ODDFELLOWS ARMS, Low Town. A chance conversation overheard in the bar by the landlord, Mr. Samuel Bates, himself a keen church and choir man, started the idea.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 31/10/1949

“A half-empty glass of beer stood on the mantelpiece of the clubroom of the ODDFELLOWS ARMS, Low Town, Oldbury, last night. ‘We plough the fields and scatter,’ the regulars sang. One smoked a cigarette. Five minutes before, in the bar, the word had gone round ‘Harvest service’ and customers leaning on the bar quickly drank up and went upstairs. It was the first harvest festival service in an Oldbury public house. Regulars had been asked to bring vegetables, flowers, eggs, sugar – anything they could spare – to be auctioned for the local Darby and Joan and Sons of Rest Club. The landlord’s wife, Mrs. C. Bates, told the Birmingham Gazette she believed every customer had brought something. Then it was decided to hold a harvest festival service, and Pastor Walter Evitts, of the Ebenezer Chapel, Oldbury, agreed to lead. He went to the ODDFELLOWS ARMS straight from his chapel service. Although the landlord, Mr. S. Bates, had told everyone, ‘You can take your pints upstairs,’ only one glass was seen in the room. During the service one or two people left the room for a drink and then returned. Pastor Evitts told the Birmingham Gazette, ‘I believe in mixing with people. If they won’t come to the church, we have to take the church to them.’

“Customers at the ODDFELLOWS ARMS, New Street, Oldbury, left their drinks in the bar last night and went upstairs to sing hymns in connection with a Harvest Festival service, at which Pastor Walter Evitts of the Unitarian Church preached. Customers brought produce which is to be auctioned in aid of the local Darby and Joan Club and Sons of Rest.”

“George Pearson (28), Albert Street, got drunk on Monday night, and visited the OLD BARN INN, Church Street, where he seems to have lost his senses, for he went upstairs and struck a match while the landlady’s mother was in bed. She jumped out, chased him downstairs, and Mr. Newman, the landlord caught hold of him and gave him into custody. When at the Police Station prisoner broke two panes of glass, and as the County Council have to replace them he was charged with this offence also.

Prisoner said he had a bad wife. Four days out of the six he found nothing to eat in the house, and so he got drunk and would not remember anything that happened. He expressed his regret, and was fined 5s and the costs for entering the bed room, 1s damages, and 4s 6d costs for breaking the glass.”

Smethwick Weekly News 9/3/1901

“William Newman, landlord of the OLD BARN INN, Church Street, was charged with serving drink to a drunken person, and permitting drunkenness on his licensed premises on the 23rd February. Mr. Sharpe appeared to prosecute on behalf of the police, and Mr. Dawes (Messrs. Bonser and Dawes) defended.

PC Male, with PCs Bayliss and Chitty, visited the house at 10.35 on the night in question, when they saw a man named George Delhay drunk, with beer before him.

Mr. Dawes said two of the officers had stated the man Delhay was sufficiently sober that if they had met him in the street probably they would not have summoned him. He had a great number of witnesses, and the man was not supplied with anything to drink in the house. A man named Mansfield paid for some ginger wine for a woman, but Delhay had none, although he poured some beer into a glass and gave it to Mansfield. Delhay might have had some but the police were on him too quickly, before he had time, after getting into the house.

A number of witnesses were called, but defendant was fined £3 5s 6d including costs.”

“Isaiah Bell, of the OLD BARN INN, Church Street, was charged with selling drink to a drunken person, and also with permitting drunkenness on the licensed premises. Mr. J. Sharp prosecuted, and Mr. H. Jeffries defended.

It appeared that about ten o’clock on Saturday, the 11th inst, PS Cox visited the house, and went into the tap room. Mrs. Bell and her daughter were behind the bar. In the room was a man named James Russell, who was drunk and pouring out some beer from a jug into a glass. The sergeant asked Mrs. Bell why she allowed the drunken man on the premises, and also how it was he had got some beer. Mrs. Bell replied that it was another man’s beer. Russell then staggered across the room, and asked the officer to have a drink. He then staggered out into the street. The officer also stated that the landlady said that she only served the man with half a pint of beer.

Superintendent Sherriff said he was outside the house when the landlord came across to him, and told him his wife had served the man with only half a pint of beer, for she thought the man was not drunk.

Mrs. Bell said she did not serve the man. He called for half a pint, but was not served. He drank some beer which was offered him by a man named Cole.

Cole corroborated this last statement, and said in his opinion, the man was 'half and half.'

Mr. Allbright said the Bench thought due care had not been exercised in this case, and he would be fined 20s and costs, £3 16s 6d in all, or in default, one month, and the license was not to be endorsed."

Smethwick Telephone 14/6/1902

"On Tuesday, at Oldbury Police Court, before Messrs. J. E. Wilson and E. Danks, Owen Williams, a book-maker, of Broadwell Road, Oldbury, was summoned for street betting on the 29th and 30th of May.

Mr. J. S. Sharpe prosecuted on behalf of the police, and explained that Police-sergeant Cox, who was concealed, saw defendant receive betting packets from persons on the canal side, Flash Road. On the last date defendant was apparently startled by someone, for he ran away, jumped over a wall, and did not return again. Defendant denied betting on the 30th ult. The Bench fined defendant £5 and costs in each case, the total amount being £14 19s.....

[Several people were summoned for aiding and abetting Williams and fined 1s and costs, in all 13s 2d each.]

Lewis Davies, bookmaker, of Lower Hagley, was summoned for frequenting Stone Street, for purposes of betting on the 4th inst. Police-constable Bryan proved the case, and defendant was fined £5 and costs (£2 9s 6d). Albert George Ball, residing at the OLD BARN INN, Church Street, Oldbury, was summoned for a similar offence on the 30th ult. Defendant strongly denied the offence, but was fined £7 10s 6d, including costs.

The total amount paid in fines and costs was over £35."

The license renewal was referred to the Compensation Authority on 21st February 1905.

It was refused by the Compensation Authority on 24th June 1905.

Birmingham Mail 24/6/1905

"The adjourned meeting of the Worcester County Licensing Committee was held today at the Shirehall, Mr. Willis Bund presiding, for the consideration of licenses of houses in Oldbury which had been reported by the local justices as not being necessary for the requirements of the district.....

Mr. Jeffries commended the OLD BARN, Church Street, to the favourable notice of the Committee, because it was overlooked by the police station. John Bailey, licensee, admitted there had been five tenants in five years. It was stated there were two convictions against the house.....

After deliberating half an hour, the justices decided that all the houses brought before them were unnecessary, but not being certain how far compensation money would suffice to meet the claims to be paid, drew up an order of precedence in which houses are to be dealt with, houses not paid for keeping open provisionally till they are dealt with."

Smethwick Telephone 1/7/1905

"The adjourned principal meeting of the Licensing Committee for the County of Worcester was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, on Saturday, Mr. J. Willis Bund presiding. The sixteen houses reported by the Oldbury Justices were considered, and the committee ultimately decided that all the licenses were unnecessary. As they were not aware how far the compensation money would go, the committee arranged the houses in order, and as many of the licenses as possible will be done away with. The order is as follows.....

"An important memorandum has been issued by the inland revenue commissioners affecting the basis of compensation for licensed houses which have been compulsorily closed. It will be remembered that fifteen such houses were refused the renewal of licenses at Oldbury, and the question of compensation was argued by counsel before the Worcestershire Licensing Committee a few weeks ago. That committee intimated that the rent was the basis upon which the compensation should be assessed, but counsel urged that this was preposterous. The claimants preferred to leave the matter to the decision of the inland revenue commissioners. The latter have sent a letter to the committee, upholding its view that the rent should be the basis, allowing nothing for the trade done on the premises or to the brewers for tied houses. The Commissioners say that the computation of the sum to be paid in any case requires the determination of three factors, namely, the value of the licensed premises, the depreciation in value of the trade fixtures, and the value of the premises without the license. They have, as a rule, capitalised the annual value of the licensed premises upon the four per cent basis, or at twenty-five years' purchase, and only exceeded this in cases where there was a distinct prospect of improved annual value, and only fallen below it where there was evidence to suggest that the present value could not be maintained in future. They have employed surveyors of taxes to take estimates of the probable annual value of premises when deprived of their licenses, and of the probable number of years' purchase of such annual value that premises would fetch, an allowance being made for the cost of the alterations necessary to fit the premises for earning the annual value as estimated. Accordingly, although exact figures have not yet been received, the amounts payable for the Oldbury houses above referred to may be given approximately as follows.....

Birmingham Daily Gazette 6/3/1906

“A meeting of the Worcester Licensing Committee was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, yesterday, to consider the awards made by the Commissioner of Inland Revenue, determining the amounts to be paid as compensation to owners, holders, or others interested in the non-renewal of licenses in the Oldbury division..... The licenses refused and the amount of compensation awarded in each case was as follows.....

OLD BARN, Church Street, £325.

The committee made awards as follows.....

OLD BARN, Church Street, £30 to the licensee, John Bailey, £112 to the owner, Augustus Bridgewater, and £183 to the lessees, John Jordan and Co.

Payment of the compensation money was fixed to take place on March 28.”

The license was extinguished on 4th April 1906.

"A meeting of the Worcestershire Licensing Committee was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, yesterday, the principal business being consideration by the committee of licences reported by the preliminary meeting to the compensation authority.....

In the case of the OLD BOAT, Canal Side, Lower Town, Oldbury, an on-beer licence, held by Mary Maria Nightingale Brown, and owned by Messrs. J. A. and A. Thompson. For the applicant it was contended that the house was a great convenience to canal boatmen and workers by the canal side, and bore a good character.

The committee at this point retired, and on their return the Chairman said that having regard to the limited nature of the fund at their disposal, and that there were public houses reported which were in a more congested neighbourhood to which they would prefer to devote the fund, the licences of the OLD BOAT INN would be renewed for this year."

"At the Oldbury Licensing sessions yesterday, the Superintendent's report showed there were 114 licences (69 fully licensed), representing one to every 283 persons. During the year on licensed holder was proceeded against for an infringement, and 17 persons were convicted for drunkenness.

Objection was taken by the Superintendent to the renewal of 16 licenses on the ground of redundancy, and, after private consideration, the Bench reduced these to four, to be referred for compensation. These are: BIRD IN HAND, Rounds Green; FOUNTAIN INN, Stone Street; OLD BOAT, Canal-side; and MANCHESTER STORES, Church Bridge.”

The license renewal was referred to the Compensation Authority on 2nd March 1920.

“Oldbury Licensing Sessions yesterday.....

The licenses of the BIRD IN HAND, Rounds Green; the MANCHESTER STORES, Park Street; and the FOUNTAIN INN, Stone Street, were renewed.

The license of the OLD BOAT INN, Canalside, was referred for compensation.

The Chairman explained that the Bench were influenced by the limited amount of money at the disposal of the Compensation Authority.”

The license was renewed on 19th July 1920.

Birmingham Daily Gazette 20/7/1920

“At a meeting of the Worcestershire Licensing Committee yesterday, opposition was offered to the OLD BOATS INN, alongside Park Lane, Oldbury, being referred for compensation. On behalf of the licensing justices it was contended that the house was redundant.

Mr. Wylie, for the owners, Messrs. Isacke and Clark, 82, New Street, Birmingham, said the house was much used by boatmen on the canal, and being on the towpath, it was more convenient for them than other houses in the neighbourhood.

Mr. Joseph Darby, assistant secretary of the Oldbury branch of the Boatmen’s Union, said that if the licence were taken away it would cause great inconvenience to the boatmen.

The Bench renewed the licence, but considered that some structural alterations should be made on the premises.”

“The Oldbury Licensing Justices granted the application made on Wednesday last by Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers, Ltd. for the removal of the full licence of the CROSS ANCHORS INN, Oldbury, to new premises to be erected near the Smethwick housing site bounded by Thimblemill Road, Pargeter Road, and Norman Road, Warley, subject to the surrender of the licence of the OLD BOAT INN Canal Side, Oldbury, and the off-licence at Katherine Road, Warley, and certain alterations in the plans of the proposed new building.”

Smethwick Telephone 5/6/1926

“Housing developments at Warley were mentioned at a meeting of the Worcestershire Licensing Committee on Monday, when Mr. J. G. Hurst, KC, applied, on behalf of Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers, for confirmation of the removal of the licence of the CROSS ANCHORS, Birmingham Road, Oldbury, to premises proposed to be erected in an area where new houses have been built.

Mr. Hurst said there had been a great movement of the population in Oldbury. The CROSS ANCHORS was in a district where there were 35 fully-licensed houses, and in the new area, where it was proposed to remove the licence, there were only two fully-licensed houses. It would be to the advantage of the Local Authority if the licence was removed as suggested, as it would be made possible, with less expenditure, to carry out road widening.

Mr. Hurst said it was proposed to surrender the licence of the OLD BOAT INN and an off-licence near the new site.

The committee confirmed the removal, the Chairman (Mr. Bund) saying that the surrender of the two licences was part of the bargain.”

The house closed at 10pm on 14th March 1928 and the license was surrendered as part of the arrangement for the licence of the THIMBLEMILL, Smethwick.

By Mr. Joseph S. Parkes, at the CROSS INN, Langley Green, near Oldbury.

Three Horses, Gig, Gearing, Stable Requisites, and Effects.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 25/6/1868

“On Tuesday afternoon last, an adjourned inquest was held before Mr. Ralph Docker, Coroner, at the OLD CROSS INN, Langley Green, respecting the death of Enoch Smith, a collier, 25 years of age, who had worked at the colliery of Messrs. Harper and Moore, Causeway Green, and who met with his death under the following shocking circumstances.

About six o’clock on the morning of the 15th inst the deceased went to work, but previous to his going down the pit the doggy did so, and said it was all right. The deceased in company with other men then descended the shaft, and when they got to the bottom of the pit they noticed in a place where they were about to work the rock moving overhead. They mentioned it to the doggy, and he told them to go and work in another part of the pit. Shortly afterwards about 100 tons of rock gave way, and fell with a deafening crash upon the deceased. Every assistance was at once rendered to rescue the unfortunate man, but when his body was found the head, legs, and arms were cut clean away from the trunk and mangled in a frightful manner.

Mr. Baker, one of her Majesty's Inspectors of Mines, was present at the inquiry, and strongly reprimanded the doggy for allowing men to work in such a dangerous part of the pit, and especially as there was not sufficient wood on the spot to support the roofing.

The Coroner carefully summed up the evidence, and in doing so he said he would leave it entirely to the jury whether or not they would commit the 'doggy' for manslaughter.

The jury, after a short consultation, returned a verdict of Accidental Death."

"Edward Cheshire, licensed victualler, OLD CROSS INN, Langley, was summoned for selling during prohibited hours on the night of the 7th April. Mr. Shakespeare defended and stated that Charles Dawes was manager in charge of the house, and as it was the birthday of his daughter, he had invited the persons to remain behind to drink at his expense, and they became his guests. No beer was paid for after 11 and the manager believed he could do this if he did not sell any. The police stated that the house was a well-conducted one. The bench considered that a serious offence had been committed, and inflicted a fine of £2 and costs, but in consideration of the reputation of the house being good ordered the license not to be endorsed."

The widow stated that deceased had been employed at Ledsam Street, Birmingham. Dr. Sharpe, who had made a post mortem examination, attributed death to apoplexy, caused by the bursting of a blood vessel in the head. “The annual Licensing Sessions for the Oldbury Petty Sessional Division were held yesterday..... The Superintendent had received notices from the following persons of their intentions to apply for new licenses.....

Mitchell and Butler Limited, Cape Hill, Smethwick, for a provisional grant of a license to hold any of the excise licenses that maybe held by a publican to sell by retail under the Intoxicating Liquors Licensing Act, 1828, intoxicating liquor, to be consumed either on or off the premises about to be constructed on land in front of the existing site at the corner of Causeway Green Road, and known as the OLD CROSS.....

The application made by Mitchell and Butler, in respect of the OLD CROSS at Langley Green was withdrawn.”

West Bromwich Weekly News 8/9/1900

“Mr. J. W. Clulow appeared on behalf of Mitchells and Butlers Ltd., the owners of the OLD CROSS, to support an application for a provisional license for a new house, proposed to be built in front of the existing premises. Mr. Clulow explained that the proposed alteration would be a distinct street improvement and public convenience. The owners proposed to abandon their claim – whether substantial or not, they said it was, to 1,850 square yards of land at the rear of the house, and to give 166 square yards fronting Barrs Street and Causeway Green Road to the widening of the street which would be a manifest public improvement. The house was suffering from senile decay, it required restoration, and the alteration would be no detriment to the public morals of the neighbourhood. The house could be better supervised by the police, and the tenant would be better provided for, and better able to look after the house.

Mr. Ward (Ward and Kendrick) then explained the plans.

After retiring for a short time, the justices returned, and Mr. Wilson said they had decided to refuse the application.

Mr. Clulow asked whether the Bench would consider an amended application, and give them an opportunity of making it.

Mr. Wilson said it was a matter for the discretion of the owners whether they would make another application, but it would have to be made at the next Licensing Sessions. They had simply to deal with the application before them.”

At the conclusion of the concert Mr. Jim Walker thanked all who had come forward and given their services so willingly on his behalf, after which Mr. A. “Singular Charge against a Retail Brewer’s Wife of Buying Stolen Pigs.

Mrs. Sarah Weaver [sic], and her mother, Mrs. Mary Kempson, very respectably dressed, were charged as above. Mr. Watson was retained for the owner of the pigs.

On the preceding Thursday, a pig driver, with two fine pigs, called at the house of Mrs. Weaver's husband, who, in addition to his employment at the Tube Works, keeps the GROVE TAVERN, retail house, Cape Lane, Smethwick. The fellow, representing himself as owner of the pigs, finally sold them to Mrs. Weaver for £4 10s, and walked off as soon as he got the money. Mrs. Kempson was merely present, being on a visit to her daughter.

Today, Mr. J. [sic] Jones, landlord of the OLD CROWN INN, Oldbury, stated that on the morning of Thursday he purchased the pigs in question from a pig dealer, Walker, (known as Shady Walker), for a sum of £6, in Birmingham market. As usual, several of the fellows who get a living by driving cattle, proffered their services, and he gave the man who subsequently sold his pigs the job to drive them to his house at Oldbury, for which he was to have 1s 6d and meat and drink.

After hearing Mr. Watson, the Court at once directed the charge to be dismissed. There was not the slightest appearance of a felonious nature, and they consequently had no jurisdiction. Mrs. Weaver and Mrs. Kempson thanked the Magistrates and withdrew. From what we heard subsequently, we infer that the matter must come before the County Court ere it is settled."

"County Court.....

Jones v Wheway. In this curious matter, an action to recover £7, the plaintiff is the landlord of the OLD CROWN, Oldbury, and was represented by Mr. Watson, and the defendant is a publican at Smethwick, and retained Mr. Edmonds.

On the 4th of October instant Mr. Jones purchased two pigs in Birmingham market of a dealer named Shadrach Walker, and gave him £6 for them. He employed a drover to drive home his pigs, and gave to him for his services 1s 6d, promising him a good meal of victuals and ale when he arrived at Oldbury. In passing through Smethwick, however, the drover came in contact with the defendant's wife, who, admiring the swine, consented to purchase them, and a bargain was at once struck between her and the drover, she paying the latter £4 10s. On arriving home, Mr. Jones, the plaintiff, was of course surprised that his pigs had not preceded him, and after waiting awhile he returned to Birmingham, saw Walker, of whom he purchased them, but gleaned no information from him. In returning through Smethwick he made inquiries respecting his lost pigs, and happened to meet with a neighbour of the defendant's, who told the story of the recent purchase by Mrs. Wheway, and the disconsolate plaintiff then found the pigs, bearing the marks he placed on them, safely secured on the defendant's premises. The defendant refused to return the pigs, contending that he purchased them fairly. The plaintiff applied to a policeman, and the matter was taken before the West Bromwich Magistrates on the 6th of October, the defendant's wife and her mother, who were present at the purchase, being charged with buying stolen property. It was, however, dismissed by the Bench, there being no felonious intention proved. The driver has not been heard of since.

Mr. Edmonds contended that the defendant's wife bought the pigs fairly, and considered that the driver was the legitimate owner. He reprehended the act of the plaintiff in intrusting the swine to a driver who was an entire stranger, and whose name he did not know.

The Judge was of opinion that the public should be more cautious in their dealings with such men as drivers, and gave a verdict for the plaintiff for the £7, one pound of which was charged by the plaintiff as expenses."

"Benjamin Malpas of Dudley will fight T. Price of Bilston 10st or catch weight, for £25 or £50 a side. Money ready any night next week, at W. Jones's, the OLD CROWN, Oldbury, Worcestershire."

Birmingham Journal 23/4/1856

"On Monday at the Magistrates' Clerk's office, Oldbury, before James Hunt and W. O. Hunt, Esqrs, the man Henry Reynolds, a miner, about forty-five years of age, having a wife and family, was charged with attempting to poison Margaret Skinner, a girl of questionable character, who, it seems, is married, but living apart from her husband, with intent to murder her, on Sunday, the 13th of April. The case was noticed in last week's Journal.

The prosecutrix, who was unable to give evidence on Tuesday week, attended in apparently good health.

The prisoner's wife was present; a large concourse of people assembled near the Clerk's Office. The prisoner was not defended. He seemed to be an intelligent man.

The first witness called was Margaret Skinner, who said: On Sunday week, the 13th April, between six and seven o'clock in the morning, I was at Mrs. Williams's, in Todd Row, Oldbury. The prisoner was there. He pulled a bottle out of his pocket and showed it to me, and said, 'This is worth a sovereign.' I said, 'Is it?' He said, 'Yes, it is;' he said it was good stuff, but he did not say what it was. He asked to me to have some. I said, 'No; perhaps it's poison;' and he said, 'No, it is not.' Well, I drank some and I felt very giddy, and something came over me that I could not see.

Mr. James Hunt: How much did you drink? – Witness: I drank a good deal of it. A few minutes afterwards I felt very sick and vomited. We sent for Mr. Cooper, and he came about nine o'clock.

The Clerk: Did he say why he wanted you to drink? – No, sir.

Mr. Hayes: Has he ever threatened you in any way? – No, sir.

She identified the bottle and contents produced as similar to those given to her by the prisoner.

George Seymour stated that he was an assistant to Mr. Samuel Roos, chemist, of Oldbury. The prisoner went into their shop at about six or seven o'clock in the evening of Saturday, the 12th inst. The prisoner said he wanted ten grains of corrosive sublimate, threepennyworth of sweet nitre, and the remaining of the bottle was to be filled up with spirits of wine. He (the witness) told him it was poison, and gave him every necessary precaution.

Mr. T. R. Cooper, surgeon, attended the prosecutrix about nine o'clock on Sunday evening. From the symptoms, he concluded that she had taken some active corrosive metallic substance. He prescribed accordingly. The symptoms continued, and up to Wednesday he considered that she was in a dangerous state. In the bottle in question he found, on analysis, the presence of corrosive sublimate in large quantity. There was nearly an ounce gone from the bottle when it was taken to him by Simmonds, the police officer. That must have contained nearly five grains of corrosive sublimate. Five to ten drachms would have been a full and ample dose.

Mr. James Hunt: Should you have prescribed that medicine? – Mr. Cooper: Decidedly not. It is always too violent in its action, and is never to be depended upon.

Police-inspector Simmons apprehended the prisoner on the same night, at the OLD CROWN, in Oldbury.

He charged him with administering poison to Margaret Skinner, with intent to murder her. He said, 'It was not poison; she took it on her own head, and he thought it would do her good.'

Eliza Williams, the landlady of the house referred to, gave evidence as to having heard prisoner say the stuff was poison if too much of it was taken. After Skinner had taken the stuff, he said, 'I have given her something – some of that stuff. It would lay the b—— straight if she had taken enough of it.' I asked him if it was poison. He said he didn't give it her; she took it out of his hand. He only asked her to taste. He said he was very sorry it was poison, if she had taken enough of it.

Caroline Palmer, a lodger with Mrs. Williams, said that the prisoner threatened to give the prosecutrix some of 'the stuff.'

This being the case, Mr. James Hunt read the usual caution, and asked the prisoner if he had anything to say.

Prisoner: I have not anything to say more than what I have said. I am as innocent as a child

Mr. J. Hunt: Upon the evidence that has been taken, it will be my duty to commit you for trial at the Assizes.

The prisoner enquired if they would take bail; but Mr. Hunt said it was a very serious charge, and he did not feel justified in taking bail unless it were to such an amount that he (the prisoner) could not offer. The prisoner was then removed."

[At Worcester Summer Assizes the grand jury ignored the bill against Henry Reynolds and he was discharged.]

Johnson, Esqrs, Isaiah Reeves, landlord of the OLD CROWN INN, Oldbury Green, was charged with refusing to admit the police when requested so to do on the night of Sunday, the 8th instant. Police-sergeant Simmonds deposed that between eleven and twelve o’clock on the night in question he was on duty near the above house, when his attention was called by another officer to the fact that several persons had been seen going in and out of defendant’s house. As witness approached the house he saw a man whom he considered the landlord, go in suddenly and shut the door. NOTES

It opened in February 2017 in a former pharmacy.

“It used to dispense prescriptions – but a former pharmacy in the Black Country will now be serving up a different kind of tonic as it is on the way to being transformed into a microbar and cafe. School friends Simon Dunne and Will Stephenson are aiming to be pulling pints in their new venture, aptly named the OLD DISPENSARY, on Causeway Green Road in Oldbury, by the middle of February. It comes after planning permission was granted for the build in February 2016 after the building had stood empty for more than a year. At the time of approval, residents raised fears about noise and anti-social behaviour. Now plans for its future have been revealed with Mr. Dunne saying he hopes it will be a ‘place for all the community.’ He explained, ‘We got the keys in December after a lot of obstacles were put in our way. When the pharmacy came up for rent we knew it was always something that we wanted to do. There were a lot of rumours circulating about what we would turn it into – it has been a long drawn out process.’ He continued, ‘We have got a lovely sized garden out the back which will have a smoking shelter there. In the day time we will hope to serve croissants and cakes so that families can come in and then from midday onwards we will be serving drinks. Lot of local breweries will be getting involved with craft and real ales and we will serve buffet food too. We won’t be putting up with any anti-social behaviour we want to be a family friendly place for all the community.’

Mr. Dunne and Mr. Stephenson both work in the construction trade and will be undertaking most the building work by themselves. The bar is licensed to take around 100 people. Sandwell Council planning officers recommended approval for the use of the shop to be converted into a licensed bar with beer garden.

“At the Petty Sessions, on Tuesday, before Captain Bennitt and R. W. Johnson, Esq., Mary Ann Custon was brought up on remand, charged with having on the 12th of February stolen one pair of women’s boots, the property of Jonah Jephcott, coal seller and shoe dealer, of Oldbury, who keeps a stall in the Market Place, adjoining Mr. Perrens’ house. The prisoner, it was stated by the wife of the prosecutor, took the boots from the stall between nine and ten o’clock on the night of the 12th ult. Prosecutrix concluded that prisoner had taken them, because she saw her standing close to the stall at the time above mentioned, and when she was gone the boots were missing. Prosecutrix further stated, that from information she received on the 18th ult, she went to the prisoner’s house and accused her of the theft. Prisoner denied it, and said she had bought a pair of a woman at the bottom of the Market Place, for which she had given 4s 9d. Prosecutrix gave information to the police, and Police-sergeant Simmonds apprehended the prisoner at the house of her father. The boots produced were stated by the prosecutrix to be her property, and identical with the pair she saw on the prisoner’s feet. The above is the substance of the evidence taken at the first examination on the 23rd ult. Yesterday, Eli Bell, a miner, residing in Oldbury, swore that he saw the prisoner take the boots from the stall on the night in question, put them under her shawl, and walk off with them. He had been walking with the prisoner that night, and after she had taken the boots he went with her to the RED COW INN, when he left her.

This witness was then cross-examined by the prisoner with the view of showing that after the robbery he went with her to several other public houses the same evening, but he distinctly swore that he never went with her into any house but the RED COW. The prisoner, however, swore that Bell had been with her to the FLOWER POT and the OLD HOUSE AT HOME, and several witnesses were accordingly called by the Bench to ascertain which statement was true. These witnesses corroborated the statement of the prisoner, having seen her in company with Bell at the houses above named. One witness also proved that instead of Bell leaving the prisoner in the RED COW, they both left together.

Under these circumstances the prisoner was dismissed on the charge of felony, and admitted to give evidence against Eli Bell, who was forthwith placed in the dock on the charge of having committed perjury. The various witnesses having been examined, and deposed as above stated, Bell was fully committed to take his trial at the ensuing Worcester Assizes.”

About seven o’clock on the evening of the day in question prisoner called at the FOUNTAIN INN, and asked for a glass of ale. He was served and tendered in payment a florin, which was refused as base. Prisoner said he had had it in his wages, and produced a genuine half-crown, and paid for it out of that. Ten minutes afterwards the prisoner was at another public house – the OLD HOUSE AT HOME – where he had something to drink, and again attempted to pass a bad florin. Its baseness was immediately detected, and prisoner, when asked how he came by it, said he had changed a sovereign at the APPLE TREE, which was untrue. He then paid for the beer he had had with good money. He was subsequently arrested, and repeated the assertion that he had received the bad coin in exchange. Found guilty, and sentenced to nine months’ hard labour.”

The prisoner offered the florin in payment for some beer. He pleaded that he did not know it was a bad florin; but it appeared that he afterwards offered the same coin to another publican, Joseph Parkes, the same night. Parkes bit a piece out of it. Noah Parkes, beer retailer, and colliery proprietor, Broadwell Road. [1884]

"Noah Parkes (the younger), residing and carrying on business at the OLD HOUSE AT HOME, Broadwell Road, Oldbury, and lately trading in copartnership with John Jones and Benjamin Withers, as coalmasters, at the Speedwell Colliery, Titford Road, Oldbury, came up for his adjourned public examination yesterday, at the Oldbury County Court, before Mr. Registrar Watson.

The statement of affairs showed total liabilities £343 14s 5d, there being a deficiency of £325 14s 11d. In April 1884, the bankrupt entered into an arrangement with John Jones to work the Speedwell Colliery, and they traded together until June 1885. In that month Benjamin Withers joined the concern, and introduced a capital of £100. In July 1886, being short of funds, it was arranged that the partnership should be dissolved, it being agreed that Withers was to continue the business, and discharge the liabilities.

After being examined at considerable length by Mr. Woollett, Mr. T. Cooksey, and Mr. W. Shakespeare, the debtor was allowed to pass. Mr. Shakespeare represented the bankrupt."

"Mr. Young, instructed by Mr. Forrest, applied for a full license to be granted to Mr. William Townsend, at the OLD HOUSE AT HOME. He explained that they had held a beer license for a long time, and they were not applying for a new license but simply the removing of the license from the ROYAL OAK, in Talbot Street, to the OLD HOUSE AT HOME. He knew it made a difference whether they were making an additional license in the place, or simply removing one in Oldbury. The ROYAL OAK had been purchased for the purpose of having a Conservative Club, and they would not want the license any longer, and if the Magistrates would transfer the spirit license to Mr. Townsend they would not apply for the renewal of that license. If this was not done, they would apply for the removal of that license to another place. No objection would be made to the character of Mr. Townsend, he being a gentleman who had carried on that house respectably for some time. There was not another full licensed house until they got to the CROSS GUNS, over 300 yards away, and this house being close to the station, where there was no refreshment room, it would be a convenient place where persons coming there on business would be able to take some refreshment and get to the station even after the train was signalled in time to catch it. He then described the accommodation of the premises, and said there were several large works in the immediate neighbourhood, and no other house where spirits were sold. The premises were on a lease at a rent of £46, including the license as a beerhouse. It was let for £30 apart from the license. He presented two petitions in favour of the license, one signed by the members of the Oldbury Conservative Club, the other by a large number of ratepayers and householders in Oldbury.

Mr. W. Townsend was then called, and confirmed the statements made by Mr. Young.

Mr. Shakespeare appeared to oppose the license on behalf of Mr. Joseph Parkes of the RAILWAY INN.

Mr. Shakespeare (to witness) [Mr. Townsend]: How much are you rated at? – Witness: £29.

Mr. Shakespeare: You are underrated are you not? Why have you not gone and asked the Assessment Committee to increase your rates? (Laughter.) It was nothing but an old barn when you took to it, was it not? – Witness: Yes.

Mr. Shakespeare: And they rebuilt it and had the whole work done in a week, beginning at 12 o'clock on the Sunday night, and finishing at the end of the week in time to begin the wake. – Witness: No, sir.

Mr. Shakespeare: How much would you pay for the house if there was no license? – Witness: £20.

Mr. Shakespeare: What, for that hole? – Mr. Young: Oh, don't call it a hole.

Mr. Shakespeare: Now on your solemn oath are you not rated at £19 and not at £29? – Witness: The last rate was £19.

Mr. Shakespeare: Then what do you mean by saying that you was rated at £29? Is this your father's house? – Witness: Yes.

Mr. Shakespeare: Does it not belong to Palmer's Trustees? – Witness: Yes.

And does your father pay more than £20 per year for this very house to Palmer's Trustees? – Witness: I cannot say what he pays.

Mr. Shakespeare: Are there not waiting rooms at the Station, where people can be comfortable without going to a public house and being uncomfortable? Is not the RAILWAY INN nearer to the station than your house? – Witness: Yes.

Mr. Shakespeare: And is not the FOUNTAIN INN within 100 yards, and the BRIDGE INN within another 20, besides ____ on the way? – Witness: They are further than that apart.

Mr. Shakespeare: Then is there another beerhouse 70 yards away, called the ROYAL OAK, and the CROSS GUNS, the HARMONIC INN, and the NOAHS ARK, all within 300 yards? ____ there is the WHITE HORSE.....

John Allen, architect and surveyor, of West Bromwich, gave evidence He thought the house independent of the license was worth 12s per week, and he thought the garden land alone worth £12 per annum out of that.

Mr. Shakespeare, addressing the Bench, said he was quite sure the Magistrates and everybody in Court must have been truly astounded with the statements of the learned council, and he thought that he must have been speaking of some place 100 miles away from Oldbury when he described these handsome premises and the large population, and its being just the place to stop and have a glass extra and get drunk before the train came in. (Laughter.)

He then renewed the evidence in favour of the application, which he considered very vague and misleading, and contended that the requirements of the neighbourhood did not call for a license, and the qualification was not made out.

The Magistrates returned to consider their decision, and after some ten minutes absence returned, when Mr. Avery said the Justices had carefully considered the evidence of all the circumstances in favour of the license to Mr. Townsend, and they had decided to refuse it.

Mr. Forrest said the renewal of the license of the ROYAL OAK would in that case be granted as a matter of course.

Mr. Avery: Yes.”

“At the Public Office, before John Green, Esq, on the 11th instant, two young men, named Charles Taylor and Richard Sanders, were brought up on a charge of breaking into a house, the property of Mr. John Fletcher, with intent to commit a felony, on the night of Saturday week; and also with stealing an iron bucket, the property of Mr. John Hewes, of the FLOWER POT, Oldbury. The house of Mr. Fletcher has been unoccupied for several days, as that individual had just changed his residence. In the cellar there were several hogsheads of ale, and it was doubtless with a view of obtaining some of this that the prisoners broke into the house. They were, however, interrupted in their proceedings by Superintendent Simmons, who, with another officer (the appearance and movements of the prisoners having excited their suspicion) watched them to the house. On finding that their midnight adventure threatened to involve them in very serious difficulty, the prisoners at once precipitated themselves from the house, but were finally captured. They had no ale with them, but about fifteen gallons had been previously missed. The bucket, which was left behind, was found to be the property of Mr. Hewes. Committed to the Sessions on both charges.”

This was proved to be untrue, and it was also proved that the prisoner drank it. The Bench at that time dismissed the charge upon the understanding that the prisoner should pay all costs incurred, and appear when called upon to answer the charge. “Bankrupts. At Oldbury County Court, on Saturday last.....

Thomas York, of Oldbury, charter master, supported by Mr. Maltby, applied to pass his last examination, and for his discharge. Mr. Jackson and Mr. Shakespeare opposed for creditors.

The bankrupt was subjected to a lengthened examination both by Mr. Shakespeare and Mr. Jackson, in the course of which he stated that he formerly resided at the OLD TALBOT INN, Oldbury. On the 3rd of March he sold the whole of his stock in trade and brewing utensils to a person named Duckhouse for £153, and out of that amount he paid £141 12s 9d to his landlord for rent, although he was not asked for it by his landlord, but paid it voluntarily. On the 23rd of March he sold his household furniture for £50, and paid the proceeds to his father-in-law, and at that time he knew he was unable to meet his engagements. On the 27th of March he filed his petition and his assets were nil. The tools and horses at the pit at which he was employed as charter master were valued to him at the time he took the pit; he had not given any account of them in his schedule, because he had never paid for them, and therefore he did not consider they belonged to him. He had not paid anything for the hire of them, but had paid for the keep of them during the whole time. Upon these facts Mr. Jackson and Mr. Shakespeare submitted that the bankrupt had been guilty of a misdemeanour under the 221st section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, and asked the Court to suspend the order of discharge, and direct that the bankrupt be prosecuted. The learned Judge said he thought it his duty to order a prosecution, and asked the bankrupt if he would be tried by him, and whether he would have a Jury. The bankrupt consented to be tried by his Honour, without a Jury, and the 21st day of June next was appointed for the hearing.”

The polling at Oldbury commenced with great vigour punctually at eight o’clock. The booth, which was a double one, was erected upon some ground opposite to the church in Birmingham Street, and in front of the JUNCTION INN. Every exertion was used to bring the voters to the poll, and as the day advanced, persons interested in the election began to assemble till they numbered several thousands. In case of any disturbance – fears of which were for some days prior to yesterday entertained – a number of special constables were sworn in. In addition to Sergeant Simmonds and the regular police force belonging to the town, thirty constables, under the direction of Superintendent Wollaston, of West Bromwich, and twenty from Hanley, under Superintendent Baker, were also in attendance throughout the day. Beyond plenty of chaffing, nothing worthy of notice occurred until about half-past four o’clock in the afternoon, when a ‘row’ was commenced by some ‘roughs’ – whether they belonged to the town in uncertain, but rather doubtful – who started a song of ‘The Tory House’ meaning the TALBOT HOTEL (Mr. Amphlett’s committee rooms), which was taken up by others, who at once made a rush to the top of Birmingham Street, when they halted in front of the TALBOT. Stones and brick-ends &c, were hurled by the roughs, and a large number of the panes of glass in the windows were broken. The lamp over the front was also smashed and rendered almost useless. For half an hour stones were hurled in all directions, and several persons are alleged to have sustained serious bodily injury. The windows in the OLD TALBOT, kept by a person named Duckhouse (which was also another ‘Tory house’), were also smashed. As things were assuming rather a serious aspect the assistance of the police was procured, and they paraded some of the principal streets, headed by Mr. F. Adkins, JP. A charge was made upon the crowd by them, and during the skirmish a man named Gibbs is known to have received a violent blow upon the forehead. He was taken into Mr. Holland’s surgery, and his wound dressed. Most of the shops during the day were closed.

A collier named Reuben Collins, residing near the Whimsey Bridge was charged with assaulting George Duckhouse, landlord of the OLD TALBOT INN, Birmingham Street, Oldbury. A few days ago the defendant went into the complainant’s house and called for two glasses of rum, and when they were supplied, called for a pint of ale for another person there at the time. He refused to pay for the ale, and when the landlady remonstrated with him he took up the glasses and threw them and their contents at her, thereby severely injuring her hand, which she put up to ward off the blow. The landlord interfered, and the defendant then struck him a violent blow in the face, breaking his nose. Defendant was further charged with wilful damage to the glasses, and upon conviction was fined for the assault 10s and costs, and for the other offence 1s and costs, with the alternative of twenty-one days' imprisonment."

"George Duckhouse, of the OLD TALBOT INN, Oldbury, was charged with being drunk whilst in charge of a horse and trap. The defendant, whilst drunk, drove through Dudley Port at a furious rate, and knocked down a girl named Mary Ann Moore, of Horseley Heath.

A fine of 40s and costs was imposed, and defendant was told that he ought to give the child some compensation.

Inspector Harrison stated that the girl was not yet out of danger."

County Advertiser 17/5/1879

"Dudley County Court.....

Mary Ann Moore, by her next friend, Abraham Moore, her father, sued George Duckhouse, publican, Oldbury, for £50, as damages for permanent injuries. Mr. Stokes was for the plaintiff, and Mr. Wright for the defendant.

Mr. Stokes stated that on the 31st of December the defendant, who was very drunk, ran over the girl as she was crossing the road at Dudley Port. The girl was injured on the neck and back, her eye was disfigured, and she had lost control of the nerves affecting it. Evidence was called in support of this, and it was shown that the defendant had been fined for the drunkenness, and that after he ran over the girl he appeared to have no knowledge of the occurrence.

Defendant's solicitor admitted the legal liability of Duckhouse, and this shortened the case.

Mr. Messiter, surgeon, described the injury to the eye as permanent, and said the twitching movement was likely to continue.

Mr. M. S. Allen agreed with the evidence of the last witness.

Mr. Wright addressed the Court in mitigation of damages, and said that his client threw himself on the Court entirely, and this was shown by his admission and his regret. The girl was one of a number playing in the road, and she was run over before the defendant could pull up.

Dr. A. Underhill was then called, and said the scars would be permanent, but there was no permanent injury to the child's health or eyesight.

After a further examination of the girl by all the surgeons engaged Dr. Underhill modified his opinion a little.

The Judge, in summing up, said the medical evidence was strongly in favour of the permanency of the injury, and he gave a verdict for the full amount – £10 to the father, and the balance to be invested in the name of the girl in the Post Office Savings Bank.

After the case was over, the Judge intimated that if Mr. Stokes and Mr. Wright could agree upon a surgeon, and it was not permanent, it might be made the ground of an application to reduce the damages."

“Benjamin Morris (43), Blackheath, was charged with being drunk and disorderly, and refusing to quit the OLD TALBOT INN, Market Place, on the 31st March last.

Samuel Hartshorne, the landlord of the house, said the defendant was very drunk in his house and made use of obscene language. He refused to leave and had to be ejected.

In defence, the defendant, who admitted being drunk, urged that he was locked up on the night in question, and had already undergone 14 days’ imprisonment for drunkenness.

Fined 10s and costs.”

“On Wednesday night a fire broke out on the premises of Mr. Hartshorne, landlord of the OLD TALBOT INN, Birmingham Street, Oldbury. Police-constable Buggins, who was on duty in Birmingham Street about midnight, noticed that the floor in the front liquor shop was on fire. He immediately raised an alarm, and in a short time the flames were extinguished. It is supposed that the fire originated through a spark igniting some sawdust which was strewn on the floor. Fortunately very little damage was done.”

“A numerously attended meeting of temperance workers was held in Chance’s Schools, Oldbury, last night, to consider what action should be taken to counteract any influence that might have been excited by the deputation from the Licensed Victuallers’ Association at the last meeting of the Local Board, when that body was asked to rescind their decision to adopt Section 4 of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, which provides for the regulation of music and dancing in public houses.

The Rev. H. McKean said the object of the Local Board was to regulate the music in public houses, and not to stop it, and to see that the music in licensed houses was not of evil tendency. As he walked about the town he was horrified to notice cards in the windows of public houses stating that sacred music was supplied on Sundays.....

Last evening at a meeting of the Licensed Victuallers’ Association, held at the OLD TALBOT HOTEL, a discussion arose with reference to the action of the Local Board, and the secretary was authorised to distribute copies of an appeal to join the association amongst the publicans in the district.....”

“An inquest was held on Saturday, before Mr. A. H. Hibbert (deputy coroner), at the OLD TALBOT HO-

TEL, Oldbury, respecting the death of Charlotte Brown, aged fourteen years, whose parents reside in Market Street, Oldbury, who was found drowned in the Birmingham Canal, near Bromford Lane, Oldbury, on Thursday last.

The mother of the deceased stated that the girl had lived with a relation at Swansea, and recently that relation died. She had of late appeared to be rather strange in her manner, and last week she talked a good deal about that relative.

Elizabeth Brown, sister of the deceased, said the latter told her to tell her mother that she would find her body in the Birmingham Canal under the Cross Guns Bridge. She kissed witness and asked her not to be afraid, adding that she should soon be with her uncle in heaven.

William Carter, of Kates Hill, Dudley, said about seven o'clock on Thursday morning a boy informed him that someone was in the canal near the Bromford Lane Bridge. Witness went to the place indicated, and heard a splashing in the water. It was very foggy and dark at the time, but he could hear the struggling in the water. He obtained some piece of wood, with which he tried to reach the object in the water, he being at that time under the impression that it was a dog. At length he heard the scream of a human being, and then all was quiet. The police were informed of the occurrence.

Police-sergeant Higgins deposed to finding the body in the middle of the canal, near the Cross Guns Bridge, and he conveyed it to the mortuary.

The jury returned a verdict to the effect that deceased Committed Suicide whilst in an Unsound State of Mind."

Emma Hirons, the keeper of the lodging house, stated that deceased and her husband, who was a traveling umbrella and chair mender, had lodged with her for the last nine months, and she had known them for twenty years past. "Hector Henry Richards (50), of no fixed abode, was at Oldbury Police Court yesterday charged with being drunk and disorderly and assaulting Richard Beddow, employed at the OLD TALBOT INN, Market Place,

Oldbury, on Friday, January 24.

Sergeant Stanley said that the defendant was ejected from the premises because of his drunken condition. It was alleged that while being put out the defendant struck Beddow.

In reply to Mr. A. M. Chance, chairman, the officer stated that he was informed that the prisoner had not been supplied in the house.

Prisoner, when interrogated, said he had half a pint of ale there.

Mr. Chance said the evidence was not satisfactory. The officer should have definitely ascertained whether or not the man was served there, so that if there was any blame upon the landlord they could deal with him.

There were hundreds of drunken men convicted every year, and they never found out who supplied them.

The Bench wanted the police to use more common-sense, and be sure of their facts and evidence.

Superintendent Hill pointed out that it was very difficult for the police to obtain evidence in such cases.

They could hardly expect publicans to incriminate themselves. They had more difficulty with strangers that came into the town than with their own townsmen.

The Bench imposed a fine of £1 0s 6d, or fourteen days in default.”

Although Jack was never a serving soldier, I should imagine that efforts will be made to accord him a military funeral. Soldiers all over the world sang his famous song – it was their battle anthem. His contribution to the fighting spirit of the boys deserves some recognition.”

Evening Despatch 14/12/1944

“Oldbury appears to have produced another song writing genius in 23-year-old Bert Comley, but the extraordinary thing is that while he composes the most tuneful music and also writes the words for all his songs, he has never had a music lesson in his life. This gifted young man, who is a metallurgist in charge of a laboratory at a Halesowen works, resides at the OLD TALBOT, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, of which his widowed mother is licensee. He has just finished his third show, organised by the YPF, in aid of the funds of Oldbury Parish Church and his song writing achievements have made him one of the most talked-of young men in the town.....

In an endeavour to ascertain if there was any explanation for young Comley's unique gifts, I learned that his father was an accomplished pianist and banjoist, and that his mother came from a family which at one time was well known on the music halls. She and her sister (they were known as Addie and Doris Skipp) were dancers of repute and performed in most of the world's capitals and leading cities. His mother was with the original troupe which included Wee Georgie Wood and Stan Laurel. She told me that one of her ancestors, the Rev. John Skipp, was a Bishop of Hereford, and he was known as a brilliant musician.

It would seem that once Bert Comley can get a 'break' he is likely to make a name for himself in song writing. He paid a tribute to Mr. 'Sam' Johnson, organist of the Regent Cinema, Dudley, who has helped him to get his melodies on to paper, and also to Mr. Herbert Page, the vergier at the Parish Church."

“An inquest was held on Saturday last, before George Hinchliffe, Esq, at the BULLS HEAD, Oldbury, on the body of Charles Godfrey, a barber, who was found lying dead in his bed-room on that morning. From the evidence of John Hadley, a neighbour, who resided next door, it appeared that the deceased was very much addicted to drinking, and had for some days previously complained of illness. Not making his appearance as usual on Friday, Hadley went into his house about one o'clock, and on going up stairs, found him lying on the floor quite dead and cold. He was dressed, but whether he had fallen down dead the night before, or in the morning when he got up, there was no means of ascertaining, as he had no bed, and slept on the floor. He appears to have led a wretched life, muddling in drink from morning till night. He seemed to have had some presentiment of his end, as he told a person at the BULLS HEAD on Thursday, where he went to take his drop, as usual, that ‘he feared he would not get over it.’

Mr. Cooper, surgeon, who had attended the deceased about three months, said the unfortunate man was suffering from determination of blood to the head, and that his habitual drinking accelerated the disease, which terminated in apoplexy.

There being no marks of violence on the body, the jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

“A man named Charles Rogers, of Rounds Green, a collier, about twenty-five years old, is now in custody at the Oldbury Police Station on suspicion of having caused the death of George Rogers, also a collier, who was about forty years of age, and the prisoner’s uncle. It would seem that on Saturday night, the 15th of August last, the parties were drinking at the BULLS HEAD public house, Oldbury, kept by Mr. W. Brooks, and that about eleven o’clock they had a quarrel, which terminated in blows, the deceased fell upon some flagstones near the door, and was taken up insensible, in which state he remained for a short time. He afterwards found it necessary to consult Mr. Beatty, surgeon, who found several injuries on the head. He continued ill until Wednesday last, when he expired, it is presumed, from the effects of the blows. Hearing of what occurred. Police-constable Tilsley apprehended the prisoner on the 16th of August, and the case of assault was heard by the Oldbury Magistrates on Tuesday, the 18th instant, when George Rogers appeared. It was then proved that the deceased was the aggressor, and the case was dismissed. But in consequence of the man’s death Tilsley again apprehended the prisoner on last Wednesday night. A Coroner’s inquest will be held on the body.”

Birmingham Journal 7/10/1857

“An inquest was held on Friday, the 2nd inst, at the house of Mr. Edward Perrins, the WAGGON AND HORSES, before W. Hayes, Esq, Deputy Coroner, on the body of a man named George Rogers, who died a few days previously, as alleged, from the effects of blows he received in a fight with his nephew, Charles Rogers, on a Saturday night in August. Charles Rogers was in custody on the charge of manslaughter. The evidence, however, showed that the prisoner had not acted in such a way as to warrant a verdict of manslaughter; and although it was clear that the deceased died from the effects of injuries he had sustained by a fall, the Jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

"Mr. Edmund Sankey, of the BULLS HEAD INN, Birmingham Street, was charged with keeping his house open during illegal hours on the 7th inst.

Police-sergeant Cope said on the night in question he was passing the defendant's premises about 11.40, when he saw a man coming from the back premises with a jar containing three quarts of ale. In reply to witness, the man said it was paid for before closing time by a Mr. Morgan, who lodged with defendant. Witness spoke to the landlord about it, when he said the ale was paid for at nine o'clock.

Mr. Shakespeare, who appeared for the defence, contended that the sale was effected to Morgan before the closing time, and that the transaction after eleven o'clock was not with the publican (his client), but with the man Morgan, who purchased the ale.

Mr. Avery, presiding magistrate, said the Bench were of opinion that the delivery of the ale after eleven o'clock was an illegal transaction, and quite contrary to the statute.

Defendant was fined 10s and costs."

“The adjourned Licensing Sessions for the Petty Sessional Division of Oldbury, were held on Tuesday..... Mr. J. S. Sharpe applied on behalf of Thomas Bedworth, for permission to make structural alterations to the BULLS HEAD INN, Birmingham Street. Some of the magistrates had visited these premises, and the Bench were prepared to approve the plans subject to one or two alterations. There was another condition which would apply to all the plans the magistrates had sanctioned, which was that their consent to alterations was only to remain in force until the next Licensing Sessions, so that if the alterations were not carried out before that time the approval of the plans would be void and could not be acted upon.”

Worcestershire Chronicle 7/1/1899

“On Tuesday, at Oldbury, before Messrs. G. Heaton, T. Lavender, and E. Danks, Thomas Bedworth, landlord of the BULLS HEAD INN, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, was summoned for selling a quantity of gin not of the nature and quality demanded, it being alleged that it was two degrees under the proof allowed by law. Mr. Tyler (Birmingham) defended.

Mr. Cecil Cooke Duncan, Public Analyst for Worcestershire, said he was unable to give the exact percentages of water and alcohol, with the quantity of added water, as the same was insufficient for that purpose.

Mr. Tyler said his client had come to answer the charge on its merits. He (defendant) had tested the sample with a hydrometer, and also caused the sample to be analysed by Dr. Alfred Bostock Hill, Public Analyst for the county of Warwick. His report was that the gin was 33-45 degrees under proof, and was, therefore, over the minimum standard of proof required by law. He (Mr. Tyler) submitted that Mr. Duncan’s certificate should have given the percentages of water and spirit, and therefore he contended that there was no case, as the certificate did not comply with the requirements.

Mr. Heaton said the Bench had no alternative but to dismiss the case, as they considered the certificate was insufficient, and the evidence in support of it was also insufficient.”

“The annual Licensing Sessions for the Oldbury Division were held at the Court House, Oldbury yesterday.....

Mr. Sharpe supported applications by Thomas Bedworth, of the BULLS HEAD INN, Birmingham Street, for sanction to certain alterations.....

Birmingham Daily Post 6/9/1899

“Yesterday, the adjourned licensing sessions for the Oldbury Division were held at the Court House, the magistrates present being Messrs. G. Heaton, A. M. Chance, T. Lavender, and H. Heaton. A long time was occupied in the consideration of applications for sanction to make alterations in licensed premises.....

After deliberating in private, Mr. Heaton said the license of the WHITE HORSE would be granted and the Bench wished it to be understood that in future alterations of licensed premises should not be made without plans being submitted and proper sanction of the justices being obtained. The other licenses were renewed, and the applications for alterations were approved, with the exception of the case of the WHY NOT INN, which was refused.”

The animal, which belongs to Mr. Growcott, of the BULLS HEAD, Oldbury, was attached to a trap, and was left standing in High Street, Hill Top. In some way the horse was startled, and, taking fright dashed off at full speed in the direction of West Bromwich. It had not proceeded far when the trap swung into collision with a tram-pole in the centre of the road. Both shafts were broken, and the vehicle was considerably damaged. The force of the impact smashed the harness, and the horse continued its career, minus the trap, for another mile and a half, until it reached the middle of High Street, West Bromwich. Here it ran into a horse and wagon belonging to Homes and Co., size manufacturers, of Oldbury, which stopped its further career. Both horses were knocked down, and the runaway was secured. “A drunken man was stopped by police from inflicting a deadly revenge attack on an Oldbury pub which he planned to set on fire, along with the people inside. Kevin Gutteridge was carrying a can of petrol and smoking a lighted cigarette when police saw him approaching the door of the OLD BULLS HEAD pub, Birmingham Street. The 42-year-old told them he was going to set the pub and all those inside it on fire, Wolverhampton Crown Court heard.

Gutteridge said he had been ejected from the premises after an argument and claimed the door staff had given him a ‘good hiding.’ The unemployed construction worker said he was going to burn the pub down out of revenge, said Edward Soulsby, prosecuting. He said it was clear Gutteridge was equipped to carry out the threat and a concerned taxi driver who dropped him off had also contacted police about his threats to burn the pub down.

Gutteridge, now living in Willenhall Road, Wolverhampton, admitted possessing petrol with intent to commit arson.

Sentencing was deferred for six months to give him chance to complete a rehabilitation programme or face being sent to jail.

Jon Roe, defending, said Gutteridge had not been thinking straight at the time after drinking heavily, but was now taking steps to deal with his alcohol problem.”

Mr. Marshall applied for the transfer of the license of the WAGON AND HORSES, Tividale, from Phoebe Smith to Isaac Brayden, and also for the transfer of the PEAR TREE INN, Tividale, from Isaac Brayden to James Frisby.

He explained that at the general licensing sessions the WAGON AND HORSES INN was one of the houses scheduled to be considered on the ground of redundancy. It was deferred, in order that the owners might do something within the next twelve months. Mrs. Smith, the late licensee, succeeded her husband, who died twelve months ago, and though his clients, Messrs. Rolinson and Son, did not desire their houses to be kept by women, under the exceptional circumstances they agreed to allow her to remain in charge of the premises. She had since been conducting herself other than in the way his clients desired, and she had been persuaded to leave.

Under the circumstances he applied for the transfer of the WAGON AND HORSES INN to Brayden, and for the transfer of the PEAR TREE INN to Brayden’s step-son.

Frisby was placed in the witness box, and in reply to Superintendent Johnson admitted that he had been twice convicted for gambling at West Bromwich, and that on the last occasion he went to gaol in default of paying the fine.

Superintendent Johnson contended that a man who had been convicted twice for gambling, and who had been in gaol, was not a suitable person to hold a license.

Mr. Marshall said it was only expected to be of a temporary character, and his clients proposed to submit the PEAR TREE INN to the Bench on the ground of redundancy, instead of the WAGON AND HORSES INN. Ultimately the Bench granted the transfer of the WAGON AND HORSES INN to Brayden, but refused the other application.

Mr. Bassano said the Bench were content to allow Brayden to hold two licenses temporarily.”

County Advertiser 12/5/1906

An application was made by Mr. Marshall for the transfer of the license of the PEAR TREE INN, Tividale, from Isaac Brayden to John Frisby, which was granted.”

County Advertiser 9/2/1907

“The annual licensing sessions for the Rowley Regis Petty Sessional Division were held on Wednesday at the Police Court.....

Three license holders John Frisby, of the PEAR TREE INN, Tividale had been warned to apply personally for the renewal of their licenses, attended before the magistrates, and Mr. Bassano informed them that they had decided to consider these licenses upon the ground of redundancy.”

“The adjourned annual licensing sessions for the Rowley Regis Petty Sessional Division were held on Wednesday at the Police Court.....

Mr. Marshall, of Dudley, applied for the permission of the Bench to rebuild the WAGON AND HORSES INN, Old Hill, and the WAGON AND HORSES INN, Tividale. He mentioned that at the annual sessions he submitted plans for the alteration of the houses, but the consideration of them was deferred until that day. Since his clients had put in amended plans which had received the approval of the police. The owners were Messrs. J. Rolinson and Son, of Netherton, and they proposed to rebuild upon the site of the old houses, and not to increase the drinking area. The alterations would afford better facilities for police supervision, provide improved sanitary accommodation, increase the rateable value, and also the amount to be contributed from the trade for compensation purposes. The PEAR TREE INN, Tividale, another of his client’s houses, was being dealt with on the ground of redundancy, and if the present applications to rebuild were favourably considered they would offer no opposition to the non-renewal of the license of the PEAR TREE INN.

Mr. Bassano said the plans were satisfactory, and subject to agreement for the PEAR TREE INN to be sent for compensation they would be approved.....

The police objected to the license of the PEAR TREE INN, Tividale, on the ground that it was not required. Police-constable Heatherly stated that the premises had been badly damaged by mining operations. Within a distance of 200 yards there were four licenses. Mr. Marshall, representing the owners, offered no opposition, and the Bench decided to refer the house to the compensation authority.”

Staffordshire Advertiser 22/6/1907

“The principal meeting of the County Compensation Authority under the Licensing Act, 1904, was held at the Shire Hall, Stafford on Tuesday.....

In the Rowley Regis division the PEAR TREE, Dudley Road, Tividale (John Frisby) were referred. Mr. Lawrence appeared for the justices, and, there being no opposition, the committee upheld the refusal to renew the licence in each instance.”

Staffordshire Advertiser 27/7/1907

“A supplemental meeting of the County Licensing Compensation Authority was held at the Shire Hall, Stafford, on Wednesday and Thursday, to consider the amount of compensation to be awarded in the case of licenses the renewal of which was refused at the principal meeting.....

In cases where the amount of compensation approved by the committee was not accepted by the parties concerned, these were referred to the Inland Revenue Commissioners to determine the sum to be awarded.....
PEAR TREE, Dudley Road, Tividale, fully licensed (owner, John Robinson and Sons Limited), referred to Inland Revenue Commissioners.”

Lichfield Mercury 8/1/1909

The Licensing Committee presented a report for the year 1908.....

The Commissioners of Inland Revenue gave their decisions in the cases referred to them last year.....

It closed c.1908.

"At the Housewarming at the PARROTT ARMS HOTEL, Oldbury, on Wednesday last, a very numerous and highly respectable company sat down to a most excellent dinner provided for them by Mr. Grayston. On the removal of the cloth, the Chairman gave 'The Queen,' which was most enthusiastically responded to. The National Anthem was then given in superior style. 'Prince Albert and the rest of the Royal, Family,' and other loyal and customary toasts followed, and were duly honoured; after which the Chairman proposed the health of the worthy Host, who in a neat speech returned his best thanks. Many other toasts followed, and were responded to; and the excellent singing of the gentlemen of the Oldbury Glee Club and others, and the fine flavour of the wines, added so much to the pleasures of the evening as to induce the company not to separate until a late hour."

Aris's Birmingham Gazette 6/1/1845

"The Annual Ball at the PARROTT ARMS HOTEL, Oldbury, was held on Monday the 23rd ult, and was very numerously attended by a highly respectable company. Dancing to a full quadrille band commenced at ten o'clock; and at a later hour a cold collation was served up in the best style. On the company returning to the assembly-room dancing was re-commenced with increased animation, and kept up with much spirit until a late hour. Refreshments were served in the ante-room, and the whole passed off to the entire satisfaction of all parties, and much to the credit of the hotel."

Birmingham Journal 26/7/1845

"The members of the Oldbury Bowling Green Club celebrated their anniversary by an excellent dinner, at the house of Mr. Graystone, the PARROTT ARMS, on Wednesday last. The entertainment was on the most sumptuous and liberal scale, and the wines, &c, were of the very best description. The whole entertainment reflected the greatest credit on the worthy host and hostess. A good muster of the members were present, including several friends from Birmingham and other adjoining towns. The usual loyal and convivial toasts were given, and the harmony of the evening was sustained by some excellent songs and recitations. Mr. Graystone has made great improvements in his bowling green, at the rear of his premises; having overcome, by great energy and perseverance, the natural difficulties presented by situation and the inequalities of the ground. The green is now as true and level as a billiard table, and cannot fail in another season to prove a source of great attraction and enjoyment."

When near the chemical works the little boy complained of illness, and lay down in the middle of the road; his sister went on with her father's dinner, and in her absence Mrs. Bradley, the wife of a labourer, came up, and seeing the child, went to its assistance, and found the little fellow in the last agonies of death; she conveyed him to his parents' house, where he expired shortly afterwards. The jury, after hearing the evidence, returned a verdict of Died by the Visitation of God."

“The anniversary dinner of the Benevolent Lodge of Odd Fellows, MU, took place at the house of Host Graystone, PARROTTS ARMS, Oldbury, on Monday last, when the members, numbering upwards of sixty, together with a few friends, sat down to a dinner embracing all the delicacies of the season. The chair was very ably filled by PG Robert Cooper, whose urbanity of manners and attention to the wishes and wants of the party, gained for him 'golden opinions.' After the customary loyal toasts, the chairman, in a clear and eloquent address, gave 'Success and prosperity to the Odd Fellowship of the Manchester Unity;' which was loudly applauded and seconded by the Odd Fellows' fire, and three times three. The health of the surgeon, T. R. Cooper, Esq, was then given, and responded to by him in a neat and effective speech. After the health of 'Mr. Graystone, senior, and his Wife and Family' had been given and responded to, the party broke up, highly satisfied with the celebration.”

“On Wednesday last, an inquest was held on the body of John Chambers, before George Hinchliffe, Esq, at the PARROTT ARMS HOTEL, Oldbury. It appears that the poor little boy was only about twelve years of age, and was at work at one of Mr. Williams's coal pits, situate near Oldbury. He was in the habit of driving the horse on the bank, and the day before he appears to have gone to the mouth of the pit, laid hold of the skip, and missing his grasp, the unfortunate boy fell to the bottom, his body being literally dashed to pieces. When taken up, his remains presented a most frightful appearance. No blame being attributable to any other person, a verdict of Accidental Death was returned.”

“An adjourned inquest was held at the house of Mr. Turner, PARROT ARMS HOTEL, Oldbury, on Wednesday last, before G. Hinchliffe, Esq, and a respectable jury, of which Mr. Samuel Clifton was the foreman, on the body of James Kenny, an Irishman, aged 27. This was the third time the jury had met, in consequence of the owners of the pit not giving proper notice of the accident to the Secretary of State. It appeared that the unfortunate man had only worked in the pit three days, when what is called a ‘black bat,’ or mass of coal, fell upon him, and he died in a few hours after he had been taken home. The pit is worked by Messrs. Haines and Hartland, and their ‘doggy’ proved it was managed properly. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

Booth Money at Oldbury Races. Welch v Turner.

In this matter, plaintiff, a Walsall publican, sued defendant, following a like trade in Birmingham, for one guinea, under the following circumstances. Defendant in September of last year kept the Cross Guns, Lichfield Street, Birmingham, and was, it would appear, himself the great promoter of the Oldbury Races of that period. In this professional capacity he let ground for a booth to plaintiff at the usual charge of two guineas. The spot for the race course was in a field adjoining the PARROT ARMS INN, kept by Mr. Darby. By one of those casualties common in mundane affairs, disagreements arose as to races and race course, and these ended in the desertion of the PARROT ARMS field for a more favoured spot. Mr. Welch acted as others act, deserted the old and took to the new racing arena, and as he said, as a matter of right, demanded back his two guineas from Turner. The latter gave him back one, and told him to be content with that – had Welch built up his booth on the old ground, perhaps the sports would have come off there as usual. Besides there was a practice to forfeit part of the deposit in such cases. Plaintiff said this was not so, as he had been told the opposition party were prepared to return all booth money if the running did not come off on their new course.

Jane Parkes, 38, tailoress, Sarah Jane Parkes, 13, tailoress, Mary Ann Hodgetts, 39, dressmaker, and Eliza Hunt, 39, brickmaker, were indicted for uttering counterfeit coin at Oldbury on the 11th ult. Mr. Streeten prosecuted, and Mr. Richards defended the prisoner Hodgetts.

Mary Ann Basford, wife of the keeper of the BLACK BOY beershop, Oldbury, stated that on the 11th ult, about eight o’clock in the evening, the four prisoners came to her house; Jane Parkes had a pint of ale; Hodgetts and Hunt left about ten minutes afterwards; one of them said they should not be long before they came back. Jane Parkes stayed till after eleven o’clock. Sarah Jane Parkes left the house several times during the evening; on two occasions of her return bringing with her some cakes and flowers; she gave some coppers to Jane Parkes, who put them into her basket. During the evening the latter asked witness to give her three half-crowns for some small change, which she did. Hodgetts and Hunt were strangers, but the Parkeses were known to witness. Hodgetts and Hunt were not in the house during any of the transactions stated.

Mary Deakin was at her daughter’s shop at Oldbury, on the 11th ult, when Sarah Jane Parkes came in and asked for a pennyworth of cakes, tendering a shilling in payment. Witness gave her the change, but before witness could pick up the shilling Parkes decamped, and the shilling was given to PC Simmonds on the following morning, as counterfeit.

On the evening in question the prisoners Hodgetts and Hunt went to another house, the BROWN LION, Oldbury; there was a third person with them, whom the landlady, Sophia Portman, could not identify. In payment for some port and sherry a shilling was tendered, change being given in coppers. The shilling was on the following morning found to be counterfeit, and given to PC Simmonds.

John Smith, landlord of the CROWN AND ANCHOR, Oldbury, stated that on the night of the 11th, the prisoners Hodgetts and Hunt went to his house, and in payment for some sherry, Hunt tendered a shilling, which witness returned to her as bad. She then went to Hodgetts, returned, and gave witness half-a-crown. Witness afterwards went to the PARROT ARMS, and there saw Hodgetts and Hunt, whom he asked if they knew him. They replied ‘Yes.’ On asking them if they recollected trying to pass a bad shilling at his house, Hunt said she did not know it was bad. Witness gave the change for the half-a-crown to Hunt, who he believed passed it to Hodgetts.

At the PARROT ARMS the prisoners had two glasses of sherry, a shilling being tendered in payment by Hunt. Fanny Proctor, waitress, gave the shilling to the landlord.

Sarah Jane Parkes went to the shop of Reuben Green, and in payment for some cakes produced a shilling. Green told her it was bad, when she said she had it from her mother’s. It was returned to her. In consequence of what he had heard, Green went to the BLACK BOY, where he saw the prisoner Parkes.

Daniel Darby, a constable, was at the PARROT ARMS, about half-past ten at night, when the prisoners came in. A person also came in and said the prisoners had been passing a bad shilling at John Smith's. The landlord then produced the shilling he had taken from them, and it was found to be counterfeit. Witness then asked them how many more they had like that; they said none – they did not know it was bad. On asking them if they had been at Smith's, they said they had not, but on Smith being sent for they admitted being at his house. Darby received the shilling, and thereupon took the prisoners into custody.

PC Simmonds went to the BLACK BOY and found the prisoners Parkes there. He charged them with passing counterfeit coin. He said he should search them and told them to get up. When Sarah Jane Parkes got up and walked across the kitchen a handkerchief was dropped, which on being picked up was found to contain nine bad shillings and a crown-piece. Jane Parkes gave Tilsley a small bag containing 11d. Moved her on one side and found in her hand a purse, containing three bad shillings and five good sixpences. There was a basket on the screen, which prisoner said at first was not hers, but subsequently said it was her daughter's (Sarah Jane Parkes). Took them to the station house and there Sarah Jane Parkes said she picked the handkerchief up in a field at Rowley. Hodgetts said that Parkes lodged with her. While in the station Jane Parkes said she came from Dudley, and that Hodgetts gave her the purse to hold for a little while.

Mr. J. M. Skarratt proved the money passed and found in the possession of the prisoners to be counterfeit. Jane Parkes's statement taken before the Magistrates was read, which was to the effect that she received the purse and its contents from her daughter. The statement of the latter was that she picked the handkerchief up in a field, but did not let her mother know anything about it.

A victualler, named Harper, of Dudley, spoke to the excellent character of Hodgetts, whom he had known for 20 years, and she had worked for his family ten years. Hunt also produced two letters as to her character.

The chairman minutely summed up the evidence, and the jury found all the prisoners guilty, but recommended Hodgetts and Hunt to mercy on account of their previous good character.

Hodgetts was sentenced to nine calendar months, Jane Parkes to twelve months, Sarah Jane Parkes to twelve months, and Hunt twelve months' imprisonment, with hard labour, each."

Thomas Darby issued tokens bearing PARROTT ARMS, Ales, Wines and Spirits.

Birmingham Daily Post 27/3/1860

"At the Oldbury County Court on Friday last, before A. M. Skinner, Esq, Judge, the following case was tried.

Darby v Clift. Mr. H. Plunkett, of West Bromwich and Oldbury, was retained for the plaintiff; and Mr. H. Jackson, of West Bromwich, for the defendant.

This was an action brought by the plaintiff, who is the landlord of the PARROTT ARMS INN, Oldbury, against the defendant, to recover the sum of £5 10s, the balance claimed to be due from him upon a promissory note for a larger amount which had been signed by him as a surety, and had been paid to the plaintiff as treasurer of a money club held at his house. By the rules of the society the money due from the members was to be paid by instalments, and on each club night a payment of 6d was to be made by each member, whether present or absent, in return for which a quart of ale was to be supplied by the landlord – this being to remunerate the landlord for the use of his room and for furnishing fire and candles. Whatever the number present, as many quarts of ale were supplied by the landlord as there were members actually on the books of the club, the members present being entitled to consume this as a reward for their punctual attendance. It appeared by the evidence that the defendant had been present on several occasions (he admitted to six) and partaken of the ale, but on each of these occasions he said he had paid 6d for his share. This was admitted, but his account was debited with ale for the full number of nights on which the club had been held, and he was credited with the payments made by him, and he had also been credited with his share of the profits made by the club. In this state of things Mr. Jackson contended that the amount charged for the ale on those nights when the defendant did not attend the club must be deducted from the amount claimed, forming as it did a considerable part of the present claim, as defendant could not legally be charged with of which he had not partaken, and the rules of the club were not binding upon him, it being unenrolled.

Mr. Plunkett, in reply, referred to a case which had been decided in the Court of Exchequer, in which it had been expressly ruled that where, as in the present case, a promissory note had been given to the treasurer of a money club for money advanced to one of its members, and the note was made payable to him in his own name simply, and not such as such treasurer, an action would lie against a surety who joined in such note for the full amount named in it, and that even payments which had been made to the club could not be claimed as deductions. How much less, then, could the present defendant claim any exemption, when only part of the amount secured by the note was sought to be recovered, credit being given for all the payments actually made, but the account being debited with the ale which had been supplied, as above mentioned, to the members of the club? If the defendant had not been present on every club night, he had been there, by his own admission, on several such nights; and on those occasions no doubt he had partaken of the ale supplied on account of the absent members, as well as of that supplied for himself and the other members present; and, therefore, independently of the law of the case, it was fair that he should pay.

After hearing the evidence, his Honour decided that the defendant could not claim a deduction of the amount charged for the ale supplied under the above circumstances, and judgement was therefore given for the plaintiff for the full amount claimed.”

He entered into a detailed description of the nuisance caused by the works of Messrs. Chance, after which other gentlemen having addressed the meeting, it was ultimately proposed by Mr. Pope, seconded by Mr. Savage, that every person desirous of becoming a member of the committee, should subscribe one guinea, and every one, either rented for, or owner of, more than twenty acres, should pay one shilling per acre. The motion was carried unanimously. Mr. L. Pope was elected secretary, and Mr. W. Underhill was appointed treasurer.

The following communication was read from Major-General Studd.

Weymouth, June 10.

Sir. Your letter of the 4th inst has just reached me. I can readily understand the mischief to a great extent is done to the vegetation of Smethwick and its neighbourhood by those pernicious gases exhaling from the different works established there, and I should be glad to co-operate with others who are interested in any measure likely to prevent or put a stop to it.

Perhaps you will be so kind as to let me know more in detail the plans, &c, of the society about to be formed, and the course it is proposed to pursue to remedy the nuisances at present existing.

I should wish, also, to see a list of your subscription.

I am Sir, your obedient servant. Edward Studd.

“At the Police Court, on Tuesday, before Messrs. Chance and Moore, Hannah Skelding, a prostitute, residing in Stone Street, was charged with stealing a pair of women’s boots, value 5s, the property of James Walton, carriage builder, Nelson Street. The prosecutor stated that on Saturday night about half-past eleven, he was in the PARROTT ARMS, with a man named Ward, to whom he was showing the boots. The prisoner came up and asked to look at them, after which Ward gave them to her, and she decamped. He followed her to the racecourse, but she refused to give up the boots. She was subsequently apprehended at her residence by Police-constable Bing, to whom she stated that the prosecutor gave her the boots for an immoral purpose. Mr. Shakespeare, for the defence, urged that such was the case, and that the men were drunk at the time. The Magistrates, after a lengthened consultation, decided to discharge the prisoner.”

Aris’s Birmingham Gazette 27/2/1869

“Yesterday, at the PARROTT ARMS INN, Oldbury Green, before Mr. Ralph Docker, Coroner, an adjourned inquest was held touching the death of Joseph Sale, 63 years of age, who formerly resided in Hall Street, Oldbury, but died on Tuesday, the 16th inst, from injuries received on the 15th June last.

John Wallett stated that he was employed at the Millfield Colliery, Hateley Heath, West Bromwich, belonging to Mr. Thomas Millership. On Friday, the 15th June last, they were engaged together down the pit in a new gate-road, the roof of which was composed of 'cob' and coal. Deceased and himself had occasion to carry a 'bar' about 6 feet long, and very thick, when it accidentally dropped and fell upon deceased's left hand, which was seriously injured thereby. He never worked after.

Sarah Sale, wife of deceased, stated that when her husband came home on the evening in question he complained of having hurt his hand, and she poulticed the same. On the following Sunday it was much worse, and he died on the evening of the 16th inst. In reply to the foreman of the jury, witness said her husband never complained about anyone one having injured him, but said Walleth ought not to have thrown the 'bar' down.

Mr. Sainsbury, surgeon, of Oldbury, stated that he attended the deceased prior to his death. He was very much prostrated. Soon after his first visit inflammatory fever set in, resulting from a contused wound in the palm of the hand. That wound had been lanced by Mr. Sansome, surgeon, of West Bromwich, but the discharge suddenly ceasing the blood became poisoned, and deceased gradually sank and died on the above-mentioned day. It was his (Mr. Sainsbury's) opinion that deceased was in a very low condition before the accident, having been out of work some time. Deceased never complained to him about any one having injured him.

"Two other of the men injured by the explosion at the tar distillery works of Messrs. Demuth and Company, at Oldbury, have succumbed to their injuries, which, in both cases, were of a frightful nature. Henry Forrest, son of the manager of the works, expired about six o'clock yesterday morning, and Simon Rollason died on the preceding evening about seven o'clock.

Forrest, it will be remembered, was the man who swam, or rather waded, across the canal and then ran home. It is said by several people who saw him as he ran towards his home that he presented a sickening spectacle, the flesh hanging from him as he ran. He was thirty-seven years of age, and leaves a widow and six children.

Poor Rollason's is a particularity distressing case. He was only twenty-six years of age. He had given notice and was going to leave the works on Saturday, his intention being to be married on the Sunday, and on the following day he was going into possession of a business at Dudley.

This makes four deaths.

The lad Bastable, who was injured, states that he was blown a considerable distance by the force of the boiler which exploded, but that he closed his eyes and thinking it was safer anywhere than where he was thrown, he ran with all his might, and so escaped with his life, but not without very severe injuries. It is confidently hoped, however, that his injuries will not result fatally. The other persons injured are receiving every attention necessary, and are gradually recovering.

Yesterday afternoon Mr. R. Docker, Coroner, opened the inquest on the bodies of the four men who had been killed, at the PARROTT ARMS, Oldbury. Mr. Martineau, solicitor, Birmingham, appeared to represent Mr. Demuth, who was also present personally.

The Jury went to view the remains of the deceased, and afterwards went over the works of Mr. Demuth, being shown over by that gentleman. On their return, Mr. Martineau expressed the desire of Mr. Demuth, who had such a painful interest in that inquiry, to offer every facility possible to conduct it.

The Coroner said he was glad Mr. Martineau was present, and should be happy to receive any suggestions. He did not propose to do more that day than to take evidence of the identity of the bodies, and he should then adjourn to a future day, in order that scientific evidence might be given as to the cause of the accident. Henry Forrest, foreman of the works, then identified the body of his son, Joseph (37), stiller.

George Ellement identified the charred remains lying at the police station as those of his brother, James Ellement (22), labourer. He knew the remains by the big frame and by the clogs, which were extraordinarily large.

William Pickerill identified the remains lying at the works as those of his son, Samuel Pickerill (22), stiller. He could tell them by a clog. He was satisfied they were the remains of his son.

Phoebe Shaw identified the body of Rollason.

The Coroner then adjourned the inquiry till Friday, the 19th instant, at ten o'clock in the morning, and in the meantime the services of a competent person would be engaged to view the place, and ascertain, if possible, the cause of the accident, and so satisfy the jury, and enabling them to come to a conclusion. This would be done as soon as possible, so that work might be resumed at the works at the earliest moment.

We have been requested to state that Mr. Cooper, surgeon, and Dr. Brown, were on the spot shortly after the catastrophe, and rendered efficient aid to the sufferers.

The amount of damage has not yet been ascertained, nor can an approximate estimate even be given.

Owing principally to the exertions of Mr. A. Chance and Mr. Sainsbury, a fund for the permanent relief of the families of the deceased and for the temporary relief of the injured has been started. Messrs. Chance and Co. have promised to head the subscription list liberally, and no doubt there will be no lack of donations, for the appalling nature of the catastrophe and the horrible deaths of the deceased have produced a profound effect in the neighbourhood. An additional reason for giving, not only liberally, but early, is that the money is required at once, and prompt aid is doubly welcome."

"Yesterday an adjourned inquest was held at the PARROT INN, Oldbury, before Mr. Ralph Docker, one of the coroners for the county of Worcester, respecting the circumstances attending the death of the four unfortunate men, James Ellement (24), Samuel Pickerill (19), Simon Rollason (26), and Joseph Forrester (38), who were killed by the explosion which occurred at the works of Mr. L. Demuth, tar distiller, &c, Oldbury, last week.

The Coroner then proceeded to sum up the facts of the matter. He remarked that in a neighbourhood like that, where, unfortunately, occurrences of a like distressing nature to the one they had under consideration were so frequent, it was necessary to carefully examine the case, in order to ascertain if there was any blame attaching to anyone for negligence, and at the same time to avail themselves of all the assistance they could from scientific men to enable them to prevent, if possible, such disasters arising.

He then reviewed the evidence, and observed every precaution appeared to have been taken, and if blame was to be attached to anybody, it must be to one of the poor fellows who had lost his life. However, they would not say anything upon that point. They had heard the evidence, and it was for the jury to consider as to what verdict should be recorded. He had no doubt that the verdict of so intelligent a jury would satisfy the public mind upon the matter. In conclusion, he said that after all the precautions that were taken it was found that where trades involving dangerous processes were carried on accidents frequently happened, which, although they might have been prevented, they could not but consider in the light of accidents.

After a brief consultation, the jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death, coupling with it the following: 'We unanimously recommend that the owners of such works direct their serious attention to devise some contrivance for indicating the stoppage in the condenser, and the excess of pressure in the still; the jury are also of opinion that the man in charge of the stills should not have too many stills to attend to at one time.' Since the accident an active canvass has been made in Oldbury and the district, which has already resulted in a fund amounting to £250 for the relief of the sufferers. The committee, consisting of the principal promoters of this fund, intend to meet next Tuesday morning to consider the best means of employing it to the greatest advantage."

"Yesterday afternoon an inquiry was opened before Mr. Ralph Docker (coroner) and a respectable jury, at the PARROTT ARMS INN, Oldbury Green, into the circumstances attending the death of Simon Rudge (29), of Portway Road, Oldbury, and Joseph Bowater (22), of Yates Lane, Cakemoor, who were killed whilst working in a pit at the Whiteheath colliery, belonging to Mr. Thomas Price, on Tuesday last, as reported in yesterday's Gazette. The only evidence adduced was that with reference to the identification of the bodies, after which the inquest was adjourned, in order that the inspector of collieries (Mr. Baker) might be communicated with, and an examination of the pit made. Little hope of the recovery of the poor man Birch is entertained."

Birmingham Daily Post 29/7/1869

"Yesterday evening the inquiry into the circumstances attending the death of Simeon Rudge (29), of Oldbury Road, and Joseph Bowater (22), of Yates Lane, Cakemoor, who were killed while working at the Pressure Pits on the 29th June last, was resumed before Mr. Ralph Docker, Coroner, at the PARROTT ARMS INN, Oldbury Green. Mr. Baker, Mines Inspector, and Mr. Price, the proprietor of the pits, were also in attendance.

It will be remembered that the inquiry was adjourned in order that two men, named Burch and Pool, who received injuries by the accident, might attend.

Daniel Pool said that he, with Burch and Bowater, were engaged in filling a skip, when a 'bump' was heard, followed immediately by the fall of nearly a boat-load of coal from the side, by which four of them were smothered. They were got out in the course of fifteen minutes. Timber was fixed at about four yards from where the fall took place.

By Mr. Baker: A short time before the accident he saw Rudge 'knock' the place to see if it was secure. They were about to put up a 'tree' to secure an 'ugly corner,' but the fall took place before they had done so. The doggy always examined the pit before the men proceeded to work, and had upon several occasions ordered the men to leave off work in places which he considered dangerous until the same had been rendered safe. Edward Twigger, doggy, said he examined the pit before the men went to work on the day in question, and considered it quite safe.

Henry Burch, one of the injured men, said he had been a miner for a number of years, and had seen similar accidents in places quite as narrow as the one in question. He cited one which occurred at the Tiger Pits, near Oldbury, some time ago, when three men were killed.

There was no other evidence of importance adduced, and the Jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death."

"Last night Mr. E. Docker (deputy coroner) held an inquest at the PERROTT ARMS INN, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, respecting the death of Martha Farrington, aged 17 months, whose parents reside in Perrott Street. According to the evidence of Eliza Murray and Hannah Hamer, who witnessed the accident, the child on Wednesday night ran down the entry into the street, and was run over by a dray belonging to Messrs. W. Showell and Sons, which happened to be passing. The driver of the cart pulled up immediately, but it was too late, as one wheel of the vehicle had passed over the child's body, and inflicted shocking injuries, from which she died about twenty minutes afterwards. The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death, and exonerated the driver from all blame."

“Several points of importance in connection with the operations of money societies were raised in a case which came before Judge Smith at West Bromwich County Court yesterday. This was an action by George William Spittle and William E. Hunt, trustees of the Oldbury Permanent Money Society, to recover from Robert Holling, master cabinet maker, of Simpson Street, Oldbury, and George Herbert Crabtree, public house manager, of the PERRATT ARMS, Oldbury, the sum of £25 7s, being the balance of a promissory note for £50, of which defendants were joint signatories with two other persons. Mr. H. Jeffries appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. C. H. Darby for the defendants.

The case had been before the court on a previous occasion, when it was stated that the society advanced a sum of £50 to Lizzie Parrock, of Oldbury, the security being a promissory note signed by her father and the two defendants. A portion of the money had been repaid, and the society now sued to recover the balance. Mr. Darby contended that the defendants were not liable because the principal, Lizzie Parrock, was an infant in law, being under twenty-one at the time the loan was obtained, and, therefore, it was not a legal transaction. He also argued that the money was obtained by Lizzie Parrock, on behalf of her father, who signed the promissory note, but who had previously obtained from the society the maximum amount the rules permitted, and that as it was not a recoverable transaction it must be held to be illegal.

Mr. Jeffries now produced a certified copy of the rules of the society, which, he said, was registered under the Friendly Societies Act.

Judge Smith said the case was one of considerable importance to money societies which were not registered under the Companies Act. He wished to know whether the society had power by these rules to lend money to non-members. His Honour said he should like to have further information on the point whether the society could lend money to an infant, and, if so, whether in this case it was a recoverable transaction, and that the money was really advanced to the infant for the purpose of being handed over to the father. If that were so, the society had advanced to one person more than their rules allowed, and in these circumstances the point then arose whether the sureties were liable in respect of what was an illegal transaction. He adjourned the case until January 21 in order that he might hear further argument upon the points raised.” [At the adjourned hearing, the Judge found for the defendants and granted them ordinary costs.]

“Fines totaling £20 were imposed at Oldbury Court yesterday in connection with midnight drinking at a local licensed house. Among the defendants were two men well-known in Midland snooker circles – Alec Mann and Fred Lawrence.

Charles Henry Bradley, licensee of the PERROTT ARMS, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, was summoned on five counts alleging selling of intoxicants during prohibited hours. There were five other summonses against him – alleging aiding and abetting in consumption.

Summonses for alleged consuming were heard against Frederick Lawrence, 9, Langley Road, Small Heath, Birmingham; Alexander Edward Mann, SEVEN STARS HOTEL, Cape Hill, Smethwick; Joseph William Sealey, 781, Bristol Road, Selly Oak, Birmingham; Frank Howard Pearce, 51, Apollo Road, Rood End, Oldbury; and Fred Lewis, 249, Heath Road, Kings Norton, Birmingham.

Mr. J. T. Higgs (prosecuting) explained that at 11.25pm on 22 November, Sergeant Green saw a motor car standing outside the public house, and upon going into the yard at the rear of the premises saw a light in the living room.

There was a space of about 2½in between the blind and the window frame, and upon looking through he saw reflected in a mirror Bradley, Mann and Lewis on a settee. He saw them drink what appeared to be beer from half-pint glasses. The voices of others were heard, some of them belonging to women. One man was heard to say, ‘I’ll pay for drinks round, Harry,’ whereupon Bradley exclaimed ‘Sh__ The police are hot stuff round here,’ but the first voice replied, ‘There’s no one about.’

The sergeant went away and returned about 12.10am, with PG Grubb. Again he saw the men sitting on the settee. About 12.20am a man said, ‘Have a gin and peppermint, May. I’ll pay.’

The sergeant then heard a man say, ‘Bring three gins and peppermints and three halves. How much will that be?’ Bradley answered, ‘3s 6d,’ but a woman interposed with the remark, ‘No. 2s 6d.’

Later the sergeant heard the sound of coins, and then the two officers went round to the Flash Road entrance to the premises and knocked at the door. Four minutes elapsed, however, before it was opened. Asked if he cared to explain why he was selling and supplying intoxicating drinks during non-permitted hours, Bradley said, ‘I haven’t sold and I haven’t supplied.’

When the five men were asked the same question Mann replied that he was not consuming any intoxicants. Lewis said he had been to a snooker match, and had called at the house with them as a friend.

Bradley was fined £4 on each of the summonses for selling to Lawrence, Mann, Sealey, and Lewis, with £5 5s costs.

Lawrence, Mann, Sealey and Lewis were each fined £1 for consuming drinks during non-permitted hours. The summonses alleging aiding and abetting against Bradley were withdrawn, as was the summons against Pearce for alleged consuming.”

“One of the finest finals of the Farcroft floodlight charity bowls tournament for many years was won last night by 34-year-old Charlie Field, licensee of the PERROTT ARMS, Oldbury, who, bowling for the Old Oak House, beat 31-year-old Jim Williams (Old House at Home, Harborne), a member of Fisher and Ludlow’s inspection department, 21-16.

Williams won the jack and immediately took the lead, scoring three singles in the first three ends, but Field levelled the score two ends later.

The bowling was brilliant, and the scores had been equal twice by the twelfth end, when it was seven-all.

From this point, however, Field slowly increased his lead.

The end seemed likely at the 29th end, but Williams fired and removed one of the shot woods, and then added three to his own score, but at the 32nd end Field put one nearer than Williams to win a sporting match 21-16.”

Plans for alterations were approved on 4th October 1961.

“More often than not they play to a background roar of conversation, clinking glasses and shouted orders; they – the public house pianists of the Midlands – came into their own last night, however, when at the White Horse, Congreve Street, Birmingham, the semi-finals were held of a competition to choose the best ivory basher of the saloon bar.

The talk was muted, the orders were discreetly placed and music held the floor. One after another, 14 pianists from public houses from all parts of the Midlands took their places on the music stool and with a variety of styles, depending obviously on the tastes of their local patrons, each hammered out a five-minute non-stop medley of tunes The judges were looking for the best style of presentation, personality, and the type of music that set the customers singing.....

Another strong contingent came from the PERROTT ARMS, Warley, in support of Mr. Ben Plevin, whose stylish maroon dinner jacket put him ahead sartorially, if nothing else. In addition his energetic foot-tapping set the glasses tinkling.....

“The PERROTT ARMS won a fantastic finish in their Sport-Inn Quiz battle against the JOLLY SAILOR last week. With one question remaining they need seven points to draw as the score was 27-34. The dart thrower notched the required number of points and the question was: Who preceded Alan Dicks as the Bristol City manager? Answer: Fred Ford – and they got it right.

With the score 34 each the match went to a tie break. All players had to throw three darts and the team with the highest total were the winners. The JOLLY SAILOR looked home and dry with 147 scored and the PERROTT with a meagre 62 with three throws gone. But then up stepped Wilmot Hancock and he slammed in a sensational winning ton.”

“Angry families will meet tonight to decide what action to take against Sandwell’s £425 a year poll tax. They fear hundreds of council tenants will be evicted because they cannot afford to pay.

Sandwell Labour councillors announced a £425 tax after warning they would have to sack 10 per cent of teachers and close 14 homes for the elderly if the figure had been less. Finance committee chairman Councillor John Edwards (Labour, Greets Green and Lyng) has blamed big Government cuts in subsidies for pushing up the figure.

But Mr. Mike Peckmore, chairman of Sandwell Tenants Steering Committee, a group representing tenants’ associations in the borough, said, ‘Everyone is horrified and devastated by the £425. The prospects are frightening for many families, who fear there will be hundreds of evictions because they cannot afford such a high amount.’

Mr. Peckmore said a steering committee meeting would be held tonight at the PERROTT ARMS pub, Oldbury, and discussions on the poll tax would take place. ‘I cannot say at this stage what the tenants will propose at the meeting,’ he said. ‘But the initial reaction is that they are horrified by the figure.’”

“Thieves wrecked months of fund-raising work when they broke into an Oldbury pub today and stole a charity bottle containing hundreds of pounds. The PERRY HILL TAVERN in Perry Hill Road, Brandhall, had raised around £650 in a gallon whisky bottle which was to have been donated to the Birmingham Childrens’ Hospital appeal. Two men were spotted running away from the pub by licensee Mr. Alan Mitchell after heaving a brick through the large plate glass bar window at 3am. Mr. Mitchell said today, ‘We do a lot of fund-raising work for charity and a great deal of effort had been put in by the regulars in trying to fill this bottle.’ He said that in future they would not be keeping a charity bottle on the bar but would instead be banking the money as it came in.”

“Pubs with the M&B sign have it all – and to prove we feature below three of the brewery’s pubs which can offer drinkers history, comfort, and of course good beer.....

Regulars at the PERRY HILL TAVERN thought the cost of their pint would rocket – after a stunning £140,000 facelift for their favourite local. But beer at the pub in Perry Hill Road, Oldbury, stayed at exactly the same price – already one of the cheapest pints in the West Midlands.

‘The lounge, bar and smoke-room have been refurbished,’ said licensee manager Mr. Alan Mitchell, who’s been running the pub for nine years now. ‘We’ve put in new tables, chairs and carpets to make our rooms very pleasant places to drink in – and the customers love it. They thought that the beer would go up – but we’re still selling bitter in the bar for £1.06 a pint and mild from as little as 94p.

The transformation has been achieved without losing any of the pub’s traditional tavern characteristics.

‘That’s important, said Alan, ‘We wanted to do the place up – but still retain the atmosphere that the regulars love.’”

He said he wanted to do a nine to five job so he can spend more time with his family. The 47-year-old, who lives above the pub and restaurant, in Perry Hill Road, with his wife and two children, said, ‘It’s such a big job, I just want something now that takes up a bit less time. It’s a good business though, it’s a big premises and we get a lot of customers through the door, it’s just too big for us.’ He added, ‘It’s been on the market for three weeks now, we haven’t had any interest at all yet but I feel quite confident, I’m sure it will sell. People still want a good business in the credit crunch.’

Mr. Sangha is a former brewery manager but decided to diversify into more hands-on work behind the bar. He bought the lease of the Tavern in 2008 and says he has full control of the business, which he is now looking to sell on for around £150,000.

He added, ‘It’s got a really big garden and a bar and a lounge area, and a living area upstairs.’

“An inquest was held at Mr. William Dearn’s, PLOUGH INN, Bristnall Fields, Warley Wigorn, on Wednesday, by Mr. Ralph Docker, Coroner, on the body of Elizabeth Read, the wife of William Read, who died on Sunday under the following circumstances. Deceased, who was thirty-nine years of age, was confined a month ago, but had recovered from her illness, and intended to go to chapel on Sunday afternoon. About three o’clock she went upstairs to change her dress, leaving her husband in the kitchen. She had not been gone many minutes before Mr. Read heard a heavy fall and a groan, and on his entering the room he found deceased extended on the floor, with her head lying on a small box. She was quite dead. There was a slight bruise on her head, where she had fallen against the box, but no other marks or bruises. Dr. Davis, of Smethwick, who attended her during her confinement, was sent for, but of course to no purpose, as life was extinct. After the husband and the surgeon had given evidence, the Coroner briefly addressed the Jury, who immediately returned a verdict that the deceased died by the Visitation of God, from apoplexy. The husband, who is a most respectable man, is left with three small children, one only a month old."

County Advertiser 27/1/1872

“William Fox, an elderly man, was charged with cruelly ill-treating and torturing a dog, belonging to William Dearne, of the PLOUGH INN, Bristnall Fields.

Complainant said that on the 18th inst his dog, which was of the spaniel and setter breed, and about fourteen years old, and a bull terrier belonging to defendant, commenced to fight in the road. Defendant held his (complainant’s) dog down quite ten minutes, while defendant’s dog worried it, defendant encouraging it to do so. Complainant eventually carried his dog sway, as it was unable to walk. It, however, went out of the house some few hours afterwards, and he had not since seen it.

A witness gave evidence in keeping with complainant’s statements.

For the defence, Mr. Jackson appeared, and he called two witnesses, relatives of the defendant, who swore that complainant’s dog was over 30lbs weight, while defendant’s was not more than 12lbs. The dogs, they said, commenced fighting, and defendant at once made an attempt to separate them. As he was doing so, the complainant’s dog fastened hold of one of his fingers, and he (defendant) merely held it down in order to make it loose. Defendant’s finger was badly bitten (this was shown to the Bench to be the case), and he did no more, in any way, than was absolutely necessary for his own safety.

The Bench said they believed defendant did hold the dog down in the way described by complainant, and they should impose a fine of 2s 6d and costs, or twenty-one days.

John Fox, son of the last defendant, was then charged with using threatening language towards Dearne, at the same time and place. The Bench recommended that complainant should withdraw the case, and the defendant promise not to interfere with him in any way again. This course was agreed to.”

“A few days ago, a rick of hay, on the farm of Mr. William Dearne, Warley, was discovered to be on fire. The flames were spreading rapidly, when a labourer, named William Price, with remarkable courage climbed up the side of the burning rick, and with a hay knife cut away that portion on fire, thus saving the greater part of it from destruction. Several other ricks were standing close to, and it is believed but for the prompt and energetic action of Price, the whole of the stock, worth about £1,000, must have been destroyed. It is stated that Price is to be rewarded for his conduct.”

Subsequently they called for more, and as the servant was supplying it, defendant upset it, and made use of bad language towards the person who was supplying him with the ale. Complainant, it was stated, ordered defendant to leave, but he refused, threatened the landlord, and had to be put out. It was urged, for the defence, that the ale was tipped up when he was joking, and the threats were denied. The Bench did not consider the evidence sufficient, and dismissed both cases.”

Police-constable Bayliss found the men drinking at Bradley’s house at four o’clock in the afternoon of the day mentioned. "Yesterday a young man, who gave the name of W. H. Smith (22), of Spring Hill, Birmingham, was found in a very strange position in a field leading from Cakemore to Bristnall Fields, Warley.

It appears that a man named John Cliff, of Long Lane, was walking across a path in the field on the Brand Hall Farm when he observed a man lying on his back with his legs in the water of a brook. He was wet all over, as though he had fallen into the brook. Cliff obtained the assistance of three other men, and Smith was conveyed to the PLOUGH INN, Bristnall Fields. Police-constable Nash was then sent for, and an examination of the man was made, when it was found that he had a severe cut on the left jaw, and injuries to both wrists. For a time he could give no account of himself, but was subsequently able to tell where he lived, and he was conveyed home in a cab by Nash. The officer was informed that Smith was a medical student, and his friends thought his strange conduct was owing to the fact that he has of late been studying excessively."

West Bromwich Weekly News 10/12/1887

"An inquest was held by Mr. E. Docker (coroner) on Saturday, at the PLOUGH INN, Bristnall Fields, touching the death of Thomas Rowley (20), who was found dead in bed on Thursday, the 1st.

William Rowley, father of deceased, identified the body, and said his son had been subject to fits for three or four years.

William Dearne stated that deceased had been in his employ for seven months on his Hill Top farm, at Warley, but he was not aware that he had anything the matter with him, or was subject to fits. He went to bed on Wednesday night all right about nine o'clock, and on the following morning he went to his room to call him at 6 o'clock, and found him dead.

Dr. Cunningham deposed to examining the body, and said that from every appearance he had died from an apoplectic seizure.

A verdict was returned of Death from Natural Causes."

For assaulting Guest they were fined 13s 6d each, and for assaulting Moore, Dearne was fined an additional 12s 6d."

Bromsgrove Messenger 24/8/1889

"At an inquest held at the PLOUGH INN, Warley, before Mr. E. Docker, on Friday in last week, relative to the death of Minnie Mullett, aged 17 months, who died on the previous Sunday from alleged neglect and starvation, a verdict of manslaughter was returned against the father and mother of the child, Joseph and Hannah Mullett, and they were committed for trial at the Assizes on the charge.

On Tuesday, at the Oldbury Police Court, before Messrs. Wilson and Bennett, Joseph Mullet (39), carter, and his wife, Hannah Mullett (39), both of Bristnall Fields, Warley, were brought up in custody, on a charge of murdering their child, Minnie Mullett, aged seventeen months.

At 10.30am Church Street was crowded with persons eager to gain access to the court. As the prisoners were being escorted from the railway station to the court a large crowd of people followed, and hissed and jeered them.

Hannah Guest stated that she never saw the child from the time of its birth until after it was dead, because she did not like to go to the house – it was so filthy. The child's body was quite green, and its face was yellow.

Deborah Smith stated that every time she saw the child it appeared to be getting gradually weaker and lower. The child was too weak to cry, and made a noise like a lamb. It was so light that she could not tell that she had got a child in her arms. It was much heavier when it was born than when it was dead.

Eliza Payne said the child was very small for its age, and appeared to her to be greatly neglected. She had not seen the child for six or seven weeks, but she often heard it moaning when the husband was going to work. Witness made some food for the baby and gave it to the little girl who was nursing it, and she threatened to send for Police-constable Nash if the child was not fed with the food. She had never spoken to the father as to the condition of it when it was alive.

Esther Shaw said about seven weeks ago she saw the child, and it was in a filthy condition. Witness saw the child laid out upstairs on a table at Mullett's house. It then had a much cleaner appearance. She was of opinion that the child had been greatly neglected.

Police-constable Nash said that on the 5th July, from information he received, he went to the house of the prisoners, and saw the prisoners' daughter. He enquired for the child, and at his request the sister brought the deceased downstairs, and said, 'We don't clam it, sir.' The child was very dirty. Witness found the parents in a field, and took them to the house. He asked them if they had called a doctor to the child. The female prisoner said, 'No; I owe Dr. Lyddon some money.'

Police-sergeant Stanton said that on the 12th instant he heard that Mullett's child was dead. He visited the house. The mother admitted having received from 17s to 18s per week from her husband. He weighed the body in a pair of scales, and it was exactly 4lb. The female prisoner said, 'On Sunday, when the child was dying, I spoke about sending for Mrs. Smith, but my husband began to curse me; and if ever I spoke about sending for a doctor he would use all sorts of bad language to me.' On the 14th instant he saw the male prisoner. When he asked him for an explanation as to not having sent for a doctor, he replied, 'I did not think the child was so ill.' Prisoner said he was employed at Wheatley's Flour Mill, West Bromwich, and earned 20s per week.

Dr. Lyddon was called, and repeated the evidence he gave at the inquest, expressing the opinion that death was caused by starvation and neglect.

Prisoners were committed to the Worcestershire Assizes on a charge of manslaughter. Both prisoners appeared altogether indifferent to the serious nature of the charge brought against them."

Tiverton Gazette 26/11/1889

"At the Worcestershire Assizes, Joseph Mullett, a carter, of Adbury [sic], and his wife, Hannah, were charged with the manslaughter of their child, 17 months old. The deceased had been neglected from its birth, kept without food and in a filthy condition. After death the body weighed only four pounds, and had a shocking appearance. The prisoners were each sentenced to 18 months' hard labour."

Birmingham Daily Post 4/9/1891

"Last evening Mr. E. Docker (coroner) held an inquest at the PLOUGH INN, Warley, upon the body of a newly-born female child which was found in a ditch near Brand Hall Farm, on Wednesday night.

Job Clifton stated that on Wednesday morning when in Brand Hill Lane he saw the body of a child in the ditch. He fetched Police-constable Nash, who removed the body to the PLOUGH INN.

The Coroner explained that Ann Lawley, a young woman residing at Oldbury, had admitted being the mother of the child, and she was now in custody.

Tabitha Fox said that on the 25th ult, she saw Ann Lawley near the place where the child's body was found, stooping down whilst witness passed.

Walter Humphries stated that a week last Tuesday he saw Lawley in the lane sitting on a bank near the spot where the child's body was found.

In reply to a juror, witness said he did not make any search. The ditch was about eighteen inches deep, and there had been some fresh earth put in.

Police-constable Nash said that on the 22nd ult he went to Brand Hall Lane and saw the body of the child in the ditch. The body appeared as though a dog had rooted it from some other place, and it was covered with dirt. He removed the body to the PLOUGH INN, and found both feet were missing. He and Superintendent Speke visited prisoner's house, and Superintendent Speke told Lawley that a child had been found at Warley, and that there was some suspicion attached to her. Prisoner at first denied all knowledge of it, but afterwards she admitted being the mother of the child, and said that James Philip Griffiths, Dudley, was the father. Griffiths, she said, had given her £3 to say nothing about the matter. Witness conveyed her to the police station, and in answer to a charge of concealing the child's birth she said 'Yes.'

Dr. McMillan deposed that the woman said the child had been born at Bristnall Fields, and that when it was born it was dead. He had made a post-mortem examination of the body that afternoon, and found that it was fully developed. He was not prepared to swear whether the child had had a separate existence or not. The mother's age was twenty-seven years.

The jury returned a verdict to the effect that the child was stillborn.

Last night the prisoner was released on bail."

Worcester Journal 21/11/1891

"Worcestershire Autumn assizes.....

Ann Lawley (27), on bail, was charged with concealment of birth at Warley, on September 2nd. Prisoner pleaded guilty, and the Judge said he should send prisoner home, asking the police constable to take charge of her, binding her over to appear for judgement when called upon. The Judge severely cautioned the prisoner."

Birmingham Daily Post 17/2/1892

"Yesterday, at the Oldbury Police Court, before Messrs. G. Heaton and J. W. Wilson, John Williams (54), Bromsgrove Street, Birmingham, umbrella maker, was charged with stealing a clock of the value of 5s, the property of Thomas Slim, landlord of the PLOUGH INN, Warley, on the 9th inst.

It was alleged that he stole the clock from the public house and pledged it at Mr. Samuel's, Sherlock Street, Birmingham, and Mr. Samuel who produced the clock, said 1s 3d was advanced to the prisoner on it. Having regard to the fact that prisoner had been in custody since Thursday, the Bench discharged him with a caution.

When the case was disposed of a question arose as to whom the clock should be handed over.

Police-constable Nash was about to give it to the prosecutor, when Mr. Samuel interposed, and for a time he and the constable struggled together in front of the dock for possession of it. No little amusement was evoked by this unusual scene, and Police-superintendent Speke called the attention of the Bench to it, remarking that Mr. Samuel declined to hand over the clock to the prosecutor.

Mr. Samuel (still clinging to the clock): I have not been asked to give it up, and I decline to have it snatched out of my hands.

Superintendent Speke replied that he had informed Mr. Samuel that the justices had made an order for the clock to be returned to the prosecutor.

Mr. Samuel said he had not heard the order made.

The Clerk informed Mr. Samuel, who still refused to release the clock, that he would be taken into custody unless he gave up the clock.

Mr. Samuel: This is pretty work in a court of justice.

Addressing the constable, who continued to struggle with him, he added: I shall not be humbugged by a lot of fellows like you.

Ultimately Sergeant Cooper wrested the clock out of Mr. Samuel's hands, and the incident terminated.

It was announced afterwards that prosecutor had given Mr. Samuel 1s 3d, the amount advanced upon the

“Mr. A. H. Hibbert (deputy coroner) held an inquest on Saturday afternoon at the PLOUGH INN, Warley, respecting the death of George Harris (60), farmer, of Bristnall Fields, Warley, who was found in a cowshed on his own farm early on Tuesday morning last in an unconscious condition, death taking place on the following morning. The evidence showed that deceased left home about 8.30am on the 7th inst to go to his farm at Round Hills, Cakemore. He left the latter place about eleven o’clock, and proceeded in the direction of Long Lane. A man named Thomas Hall was with the deceased in a public house in Long Lane from three o’clock until nine o’clock the same day, and Hall said he assisted deceased into the road.

Susannah Adams saw deceased get over a stile in Long Lane about 9.30 on Monday night, and he then walked along a footpath in the direction of his farm. He appeared to be under the influence of drink. Early on Tuesday morning one of the workmen on the farm heard heavy snoring in a cowshed, and upon going there found deceased lying upon his back in an unconscious state. Local doctors were called in, but deceased never regained consciousness, and died on Wednesday morning.

Backhouse was also charged with doing wilful damage to a window. Mr. J. S. Sharpe prosecuted. The defendants visited complainant’s premises, and after drinking some beer caused a disturbance. Backhouse was also ordered to pay 25s damage.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 16/7/1949

“When walking with two small children at Warley, a police constable’s wife, Mrs. Evelyn Rose Clarke, of 47, Brandhall Road, Warley, was attacked by a large Alsatian dog. The dog knocked her 16-months-old baby’s hat off, tore the blazer of a four-year-old child, and bit Mrs. Clarke’s thigh.

Yesterday at Oldbury an order was made against Mrs. Olive May Bright (50), licensee of the PLOUGH INN, Warley, to keep her dog under proper control.

Mrs. Bright, who pleaded ‘not guilty’ to failing to keep a dangerous dog under control, said the dog, which was used for showing, cost her 60 guineas. He had always been very good with children, she said.”

Plans for alterations to the premises were approved on 7th March 1957.

Birmingham Daily Post 22/12/1960

“A 24-year-old man threw beer in another man’s face and then knocked him down into the fireplace of a public house, it was stated at Oldbury yesterday. Donald Andrews, a labourer, of Walton Road, Warley, was sent to prison for six months for causing actual bodily harm to Mr. Arthur Tudgay, of 115, Hilltop Road, Warley. He pleaded not guilty, but told the court he had nothing to say. His brother Raymond (aged 25) also of Walton Road, pleaded not guilty to a similar charge. He was fined £15 and ordered to pay £5 4s costs. Police constable R. H. Berlin said the day after the assault Mr. Tudgay’s face was in ‘a shocking mess.’ His left eye was closed, the left side of his face swollen and he had a bump on the back of his head.

Mr. H. Higgs, prosecuting, said the trouble started when Mr. Tudgay’s wife, a barmaid at the PLOUGH, Warley, refused to serve beer to Raymond Andrews after time.”

“A Black Country fireman has warned people of the dangers of electric blankets now that cold winter nights are drawing in. Electric blankets should be properly serviced before being placed on beds to prevent dangers of fires breaking out, said station officer Bryan Baker, of Oldbury fire station. Mr. Baker said that problems with electric blankets often arose because they are not properly stored in cupboards during the summer months.....

A business deal by Warley licensee Paul Machin has saved his career and made him the first of a new breed of pub operator. Mr. Machin, aged 56, has signed a 10-year lease on the PLOUGH, in George Road, Oldbury. He ran the nearby OLD CHAPEL INN as self-employed pub tenant. Then Bass had to re-shape its vast estate and the OLD CHAPEL was put into the hands of a brewery-employed manager. Mr. Machin, a licensee for 21 years, said, ‘A 10-year lease will give me long-term security and also keep me in the area where I have always enjoyed running a pub’.”

“Paul Machin plays down the fact that he has worked in some of the world’s top hotels and dining spots. Exotic locations in the Caribbean and swish leisure havens in London’s West End seem far removed from life behind the bar of a pub in Oldbury. But don’t bother suggesting that Paul came off worse leaving the sandy shores of Nassau and jobs in other plush settings to serve up pints as a Midland landlord. ‘I must be the nearest thing to a vocation publican,’ he says, looking the part and clearly enjoying his role as guv’nor of the PLOUGH after furrowing some rough ground. He lost a thriving business, the OLD CHAPEL, in Smethwick, when his brewery installed its own manager as part of enforced moves to restructure pub estates. The good news was the chance to move just a mile to the PLOUGH, a pub similar to the one he had to give up. ‘When I became a hotel manager I felt I was driving a desk,’ he says, ‘in a small pub like the PLOUGH, a good atmosphere is created by people you get to know and who mix well, regardless of age and background.’

Paul, a Mitchells and Butler licensee for 22 years, reckons that teamwork pays off. While he’s the frontman, pulling pints and engaging in lively banter with the regulars, his wife Ros plays the key role preparing food served at lunchtime and early evenings.

The couple retained the loyalty of many customers and staff when they moved to the PLOUGH 11 months ago. ‘It’s very much like a village pub, the sort I believe will always survive,’ says the genial host. ‘There are no flashing lights or fancy promotions. We just like people who enjoy each other’s company and feel at home in the pub.’

George Salter, 87, is one of the PLOUGH’s contented flock and says he was never troubled by the sighting of spirits other than those in the bottle – according to George, the pub has a friendly ghost! There are plenty of spirited real-life characters too. There’s Fred Hadlington, a regular for 50 years, and dapper Jack Hutchinson, who takes a bit of stick from younger lads in the bar but reckons he gets a daily tonic from just being with a happy bunch.

The pub does well on the sporting front. A football team is bidding for promotion and there are some nifty darts players on hand.

NOTES

Birmingham Journal 2/2/1856

A youth, eighteen, named George Bellinger, was proved to have robbed his master, Mr. J. Allen, of the PLOUGH INN, Newberry Lane, of a sum of £10.

The short facts are that the prisoner (only a very short time in prosecutor’s employ) was sent on the preceding Monday to the residence of Mr. J. Watson, agent, and licensed victualler, West Bromwich, with £10, as part payment of money due. Mr. Watson was from home when the messenger arrived, and expecting a larger sum, for which a receipt had been left with Miss Watson, Bellinger was directed to take back the sum brought and acquaint his master with the circumstances. In place of doing so, however, the young rogue absconded, went to Evesham, and was found there by the local police, with new clothes, in a brothel, and only a portion of the stolen money left.

The evidence went fully to establish this serious charge, and the prisoner was committed for trial.

It is now ascertained that being taken into Mr. Allen’s service without a character, Bellinger was a notorious young thief, being wanted for a watch robbery at Cheltenham.

After removal to his cell, on Saturday, he tried to strangle himself, but was prevented by the vigilance of the officers on duty at the station.”

Staffordshire Advertiser 8/3/1856

George Ballinger, 18, labourer, pleaded guilty to an indictment for stealing a £10 note, the moneys of John Allen, and was sentenced to six months’ imprisonment, the Chairman remarking that he had been previously in Gloucester gaol.”

Birmingham Daily Post 4/12/1857

“Two charges of forgery against an insurance agent were preferred against Mr. John Allen, an agent and publican, of Newbury Lane, Oldbury, by Mr. Richard Goold, the Secretary of the Agricultural and Cattle Insurance Company, of London. The first charge was for having forged the name of Mr. Ezekiah Mason, a coal master, &c, of Sedgley, to a receipt for the sum of £10 14s; and the second, for having forged the name of Mr. John Woodhouse, a farmer, of Watsons Green, Dudley, to a receipt for £22 14s. From the few circumstances which transpired, it would appear that the defendant, who seemed to be between forty and fifty years of age, has been for some time past the agent for this district for the society named above, and that Mr. Mason and Mr. Woodhouse became insurers of cattle. From some cause one of Mr. Mason's horses died, and he claimed the sum of £10 14s in consequence. The claim was duly forwarded to the company by the defendant, as secretary, and the sum named was allowed, and a cheque for the amount sent to the defendant, who returned a receipt purporting to bear the signature of Mr. Mason, and this was the alleged forgery. The same circumstances attended the other forgery, both Mr. Mason and Mr. Woodhouse being prepared to swear that their names were forged, and that they never received the money Adjourned."

"At Dudley Police Court, yesterday, Mr. John Allen, an insurance agent and publican, of Newbury Lane, Oldbury, appeared to answer two charges of forgery preferred against him by the Agricultural Cattle Insurance Company of London. The case has twice previously been before the public, the charge having been twice adjourned. Reserving a longer report for Saturday's paper, we may now simply state that Mr. Pattison, of London, the solicitor to the Company, attended yesterday and explained to the Magistrates the peculiar circumstances which had influenced the Company in abandoning the prosecution. He said it arose from the defendant having been mixed up with trade transactions with Mr. Mason and Mr. Woodhouse, whose names he was alleged to have forged to the Company's cheques, in such a way as in fact to have become as much their agent in the matter as he was the agent of the Company. Mr. John Smith, who appeared for the defendant, also made some remarks exculpatory of his client, and the Magistrates, in dismissing the charge, said Mr. Allen left the Court without the slightest stain of guilt upon his character – a remark which was fully assented to by Mr. Pattison on behalf of the Company."

John Allen issued tokens from here.

Birmingham Daily Post 18/9/1889

“Last evening Mr. A. H. Hebbert (deputy coroner) resumed the adjourned inquest at the PRINCE OF WALES INN, Rounds Green, Oldbury, respecting the death of Isaiah Short (54), colliery manager, formerly residing in Dingle Street, Rounds Green, and employed at the Samson Colliery, who died on the 7th instant, from the effects of injuries alleged to have been sustained whilst at work on May 27 last. Mr. W. B. Scott, Government inspector of mines, and Mr. W. H. Pickering, assistant inspector, were present. Mr. Davis, proprietor, and Mr. Price, certified manager, represented the colliery; and Mr. S. H. Forrest, solicitor, appeared on behalf of the widow of the deceased.

Mrs. Short stated that on the 27th of May, when her husband returned from work at the Samson Colliery, he told her that he had fallen down an incline in the workings. He complained of great pain in the bowels. Dr. Torbitt was called in to attend him on the following day. Deceased told witness that he had been examining the pit, when he fell down and sustained the injuries.

Isaac Harley, a miner, employed at the Samson Colliery, said he saw the deceased fall down on Rowley Hills, whilst he was returning from work with witness, about eighteen months ago. On May 27 deceased told witness that he had slipped off one of the sleepers in the pit whilst going down the incline.

In reply to a juror, witness denied that he had told a Mr. Darby that he could either 'throw' Mrs. Short or do her good. Mr. Darby did not ask him to do the widow any harm.

Dr. Torbitt said death was due to exhaustion, following on stricture of the bowels, which in his opinion was caused by the fall.

In reply to Mr. Scott, witness said there was no doubt that death was the result of an accident.

The jury returned a verdict to the effect that death was caused by stricture of the bowels, caused by an accident at the Samson Colliery on the 27th of May last."

Smethwick Weekly News 8/6/1901

"A painful and terrible accident occurred at Rounds Green about one o'clock on Thursday, when two children (sisters) were killed by a runaway horse. Their names are Lily May Webb, aged nine years, and Ann Elizabeth Webb, aged two years, the children of Mr. and Mrs. Webb, of Bath Row, Rounds Green. It appears that a man named Thomas Reed, of Great Bridge, in the employ of the Midland Railway Company, was delivering goods at the PRINCE OF WALES INN, at the foot of Bury Hill. Suddenly the horse attached to the waggon was startled by something, and bolted down Bath Row at a furious rate, although one of the wheels was locked. Bath Row is narrow and dangerous – there being no footpath on either side, while a number of children were innocently playing about. The elder of the two appears to have seen the horse approaching, and rushed to save the life of her little sister, when both were knocked down, the wheels of the waggon passing over them. The elder child's head was crushed in a shocking manner, and she was killed instantaneously. The younger one sustained serious internal injuries, and although Dr. Buttery, who was summoned, rendered all assistance in his power, she died about three quarters of an hour after being conveyed to her home. The affrighted horse, after running over the children, continued its course, and others had a narrow escape, as there were several other children playing about at the time. After knocking down a wall in Bath Row, the horse ultimately dashed into the window of a house occupied by Mrs. Green, in Brades Road. Needless to say the occurrence caused a painful sensation in the district, and the greatest possible sympathy is felt for the parents of the two children who were killed.”

AND

“Mr. Edwin Docker (Coroner) held the inquest yesterday at the PRINCE OF WALES INN, Rounds Green. Inspector Bailey and Mr. J. H. Hipkiss represented the Railway Company.

Evidence of identity was given by Henry Webb, the father.

Ann Taylor, wife of Joseph Taylor, a miner, living in Bath Row, Rounds Green, said owing to her child screaming she ran out of the house into the street, on Thursday, when she saw a horse and dray travelling very furiously down the street. Lily May Webb was in the road with the other child Annie Elizabeth in her arms, and she endeavoured to run out of the way, but before she could do so the horse knocked her down with the baby in her arms. Lily May Webb appeared to be seriously injured about the head and expired almost immediately after. Witness did not notice whether the wheel of the dray was locked, but there was no driver with the horse.

Thomas Reed, a drayman in the employ of the Midland Railway Company, and living in Moseley Street, Tipton, stated that he delivered some goods at the PRINCE OF WALES INN, Rounds Green, about noon on Thursday, and he left the horse and dray outside the house, first locking the wheel, while he went inside to get a receipt. While he was in the house the horse suddenly bolted off down Bath Row and ran over the deceased children. It was not unusual for witness to leave the horse unattended outside houses where he delivered goods. The horse had never previously run away since witness had known it, now about five weeks. PC Haden deposed to hearing of the occurrence shortly before one o'clock on Thursday. On going to the spot he found the girl Lily Webb lying dead in the street. Her head was smashed, and the brains were scattered about the road. Witness removed the body to the PRINCE OF WALES INN. The other child, Annie Elizabeth, was carried into its home, and Dr. Buttery was immediately sent for. The child died shortly afterwards.

Dr. Buttery said when he arrived on the scene about one o'clock he found Annie Elizabeth Webb very badly injured, and in great agony. She died soon afterwards. In witness's opinion the girl Lily May Webb died instantaneously, and the other child died as the result of the shock from the internal injuries she received. In summing up, the Coroner said it was a painfully sad one.

The jury, of which Councillor J. J. Hollyhead was the foreman, spent a quarter of an hour considering their verdict. They ultimately returned a verdict of Accidental Death, and added a rider to the effect that in future the Railway Company should provide two persons to take charge of each of their vehicles when out on the streets. They exonerated the driver of the horse and dray (Thomas Reed) from any blame in the matter. They also expressed their sympathy with the parents of the deceased children in their sad bereavement. The Coroner said no doubt the representatives of the Railway Company present would communicate the jury's rider to the Company, and that it would resolve due consideration.”

Staffordshire Advertiser 12/11/1853 - Deaths

Wolverhampton Chronicle 25/10/1854

“On Friday last, an inquest was held before R. Docker, Esq, coroner, at the RAILWAY TAVERN, Bromford Lane, on the body of Ann Hughes, aged 68, who was killed by the 7-40pm train from Birmingham, on Wednesday, at the Oldbury Station, on the Stour Valley Railway.

The deceased, the wife of Thomas Hughes, hinge maker, Great Bridge, left Wolverhampton for home by the Shropshire Union train, at 7-15pm, to return home. She should have got out at Dudley Port, but for some cause or other went on to Oldbury. John Turner, the ticket collector there, warned her to keep off the line, as a train was expected every moment, and told her he would send her back by the next train. At that time the express train which leaves Birmingham at 7-40pm, was due, and Turner crossed the line to push two persons away who were in a dangerous position, when deceased followed him; but just as she was stepping off the line on to the opposite platform she was caught by the express train, and thrown down with great violence. Turner, who ran a great risk of his own life in saving that of the two parties already mentioned – the express train brushing the tails of his coat as it passed – on turning round found her lying on the platform; and blood trickling from over her left eye. She was not then dead; and, sending for medical aid, he carried her into the station, where she died in ten minutes, from the severe injuries which she received.

Mr. Beswick, the station master at Oldbury, in answer to questions put to him by the foreman of the jury, Mr. Cooper, surgeon, said that sometimes owing to the late arrival of passengers at the station, and sometimes owing to the delay in booking them, passengers were frequently obliged to run down the line, and cross behind the train by which they were going. By having booking stations on both sides of the line, the necessity for and the danger of this practice could be altogether avoided, and would be a great benefit to the passengers.

Mr. Johnson, superintendent of police on the London and North Western Railway, pointed out that at Stafford and at Wolverhampton, where facilities were provided for passing at all times, without danger from one side of the line to the other, people were continually crossing on the level, and it was with great difficulty the police and porters could keep them off.

The foreman of the jury pointed out that the remedy which he, at the suggestion of a large number of the respectable inhabitants of Oldbury, proposed, was that booking stations should be provided at each side of the railway, so as to do away with the necessity of crossing the line at all. At present passengers were compelled to do so at the risk of their lives.

Mr. Beswick, in reply to further questions on the subject, said he thought that the alteration proposed could be done at a very trifling expense; and had no doubt that if the suggestion were made in the proper quarter, it would meet with every attention. After some consultation the jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death; accompanying it with the following recommendations: This jury requests the coroner to draw the attention of the company to the want of security to passengers at Oldbury Station, and to recommend that a ticket station be immediately opened on the up side so as prevent the crossing of the line under any circumstances. The jury also beg most earnestly to express their warmest approbation of the conduct of John Turner, the ticket collector, in his courageous and successful attempt to save the lives of two parties who attempted to cross the line at the same time as the deceased. Ann Hughes met her death through not regarding his admonitions, and beg to recommend him to the favourable notice of the company.”

Leicester Mercury 1/10/1859

Samuel Hedges, a prisoner in the County Gaol, was opposed by Mr. Ellers, barrister, of Birmingham on behalf of Mr. Jennings and Mr. Cooper, two of the largest creditors.

Mr. Cape supported the insolvent, whose debts amounted to £530, and his assets to £4.

In answer to Mr. Ellers, insolvent stated he had known Mr. Vyse, a publican, of Birmingham, about 14 years. Did not carry on business as a publican on his own account at the RAILWAY INN, Oldbury, or at the Grapes Inn, in Birmingham. In November last, Vyse made an assignment of those public houses to him. The business was carried on by Mrs. Vyse, and another person whose name he did not know. Vyse assigned these houses over to him in order to extricate himself from his difficulties. They were securities in insolvent's hands for the bills which he had accepted for Vyse. He only received £2 from the proceeds of anything that was sold at the public houses. Gave some bills to Mr. Jennings, one of which became due on the 10th of February. Ordered everything to be sold at Oldbury, after the assignment. The things realised £50 4s 7d by the sale at Oldbury, and the fixtures amounted to £40 more. About the 10th of February, he received £40 out of the £90, after deducting the expenses of sale, &c. Having lost his home by accepting these bills, he went to live at Duffield, and afterwards at Castle Donington. At the latter place he went by the name of Booth, to prevent his creditors finding him. Vyse's name was over the houses at Oldbury and Birmingham, after they were assigned over to him. He was assured there was property enough to meet the bills. When he found Vyse was pocketing the money, he did not inform his creditors, nor attempt to make any terms with them. Did not pay any of the £40 he received to his creditors. He was assistant to his father, a grocer, at the time he accepted these bills. He accepted a bill for £100 for a man named Wilson, a gentleman's servant, whom he had only known a few days. Wilson was out of employment at the time, and he accepted the bills for his accommodation, as he had friends in Leicestershire. The bills were never cashed. Did not tell Mr. Jennings when he came about Vyse's account, that he should have £1000 in March last. Mr. Jennings knew his position at the time he accepted the bills. Vyse had been an old servant of his father's, before these transactions. By Mr. Cape: Had never had a pennyworth of goods of Mr. Jennings. Wilson had contracted debts in his name.

Mrs. Masters, of Castle Donington, also opposed the insolvent. She said, insolvent and Wilson came to her house, and wanted lodgings. She could not accommodate them, and they left their luggage while they went to another public house. A short time after, insolvent asked her husband to cash a bill for £10, but he refused. On Good Friday Wilson and insolvent borrowed £3 of her husband, stating that he should receive £100 from London the next morning, and he would then return it. He also procured a large quantity of beer, and several bottles of gin and brandy, under the same pretence. The bill produced was left as security for the £3. Insolvent had never paid either the money or for the liquors.

Insolvent, in reply to Mr. Cape, denied having the liquors, and said the £3 was borrowed by Wilson without his knowledge.

Mr. Ellers addressed the Court, submitting that from the conduct of insolvent in accepting the bills to the amount of several hundred pounds, without any means of paying them, he was not entitled to the protection of the court.

Mr. Cape contended that insolvent had been beguiled and begulled into his present position by the misrepresentations of Vyse, who led him to believe that there was property enough to meet all the bills. Mr. Jennings was perfectly cognisant of the position of insolvent at the time he accepted the bills of his friend Vyse. When he found that Vyse was pocketing the money, the proceeds of the public houses, he very naturally, having been put to great expense, took care of himself, and did not pay any part of the £40 to his creditors. With reference to the debt contracted at Castle Donington, that was done by Wilson without his knowledge or consent. Under these circumstances he trusted his Honour would grant prisoner his discharge.

His Honour summed up the evidence, censuring in strong terms the conduct of insolvent with regard to that assignment of the public houses, and his reckless career after receiving the £40 from the proceeds of the sale. With reference to the transaction at Castle Donington, it seemed that insolvent and Wilson were going about endeavouring to cash these bills, which were worthless, for the sole purpose of enjoying themselves at public houses, in the most extravagant manner. They ultimately succeed, by false statements, in extracting from Mr. Masters the sum of £3, besides credit for drink; and though the amount was small, it was a most fraudulent transaction. It was said that it was done by Wilson without insolvent's knowledge. He did not believe a word of it; it was quite clear that they were both acting in concert; that the money was obtained by them both in the most false and fraudulent manner. Under these circumstances, he conceived that insolvent was not entitled to the benefit of the Act, which was framed for honest debtors, until he should have been imprisoned for some considerable time, at the suit of his opposing creditors. He would thus show to others who might be inclined to adopt the same swindling practices, that if they would not pay in any other way, they should be made to pay in their persons. His judgement was that insolvent should not be entitled to the benefit of the Act until he had been imprisoned for the period of twelve months from the filing of the petition."

Wolverhampton Chronicle 26/8/1868

“On Monday evening last an inquest was held at the RAILWAY INN, Bromford Lane, before Ralph Docker, Esq, (coroner), and a respectable Jury, touching the death of John Ryan, 40, a coach painter, who had resided in Pinfold Street, but who was killed on the previous Saturday evening, under circumstances detailed below. Only a fortnight ago deceased and a companion, named Robert Berwick, came from Belfast and succeeded in obtaining employment at the carriage works as coach painters. They worked until half-past five o'clock on Saturday, and afterwards spent part of the evening with some friends, and then went to the railway station to see their friends off to Birmingham. The train by which they were going did not arrive until 8.30, and just as it was leaving the platform, the deceased and his companion commenced to cross the line to the other side. The booking clerk (Walter Woodcroft), perceiving a goods train approaching in the opposite direction from Birmingham, called out to them to stand still. It would appear, however, that they could not see their danger on account of the passenger train which was leaving the platform. The deceased, it appears, was unfortunately a little deaf, and failed to hear the warning, and still made way for the other side, when immediately the goods train, at a speed of from 10 to 15 miles an hour, came up, and the buffer of the engine striking the deceased upon the head before he could get out of the way, knocked or carried him a distance of 14 yards. All the trucks passed over him. The poor fellow was picked up quite dead. The only external injury was apparently to his right hand, which was partly cut off. He was removed to the waiting room, and afterwards to the RAILWAY INN.

The Jury, after hearing the evidence, returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

Joseph Harper (27), alias Hanson, gunlock maker, was charged with attempting to steal a watch from the person of Thomas Parkes, of the RAILWAY INN, Oldbury. On Thursday night, shortly after nine o'clock, the prosecutor was at New Street Railway Station, when the prisoner and two others 'made a rush' at him. He (prosecutor) felt his watch going, and at once caught hold of prisoner, in whose hand he found the watch. He called out, 'Police!' and a constable was 'there in a moment.' Fortunately, Mr. Parkes had a strong chain to his watch, or the latter would in all probability have been stolen.

Detective-sergeant Cooper said the prisoner had been previously convicted of theft.

The accused was sentenced to three months' hard labour.”

“On Sunday night Harriet Young (20), domestic servant, in the employ of Mr. Smalley, at the RAILWAY INN, Oldbury, left home as usual for the purpose of paying a visit to her grand-mother at the Albion. On leaving the house of the latter she left a note saying that she was going 'to make away with herself.' The girl has not been seen or heard of since, and although the canals in the neighbourhood have been dragged, no trace of the girl has been found.”

“Harriet Young (20), domestic servant, in the employ of Mr. Smalley, RAILWAY INN, Oldbury, was brought up in custody charged with attempting to commit suicide. The facts of the girl’s disappearance and supposed suicide – from which, however, she was saved – will be found recorded in another part of our issue. She was apprehended last night.

A boy named Davies stated that on Sunday evening he saw the prisoner throw her hat into the canal at Dudley Port. He got the hat out and gave it to her, but she would not have it. He then went and spoke to a boy a short distance away, and while he did so he saw the girl jump into the water. Two men came up to the spot, and witness helped them to get her out.

The girl’s father said he could assign no reason for the prisoner’s attempt on her life excepting that she had met with a love disappointment.

Mr. Corser admonished the girl against such conduct in future, and on her promising that she would not again be guilty of such a rash act he allowed her to be given up to her father and mother.”

“At the Oldbury Police Court, yesterday afternoon, before Messrs. G. C. Adkins and E. B. Phillips, magistrates, Charles Granville Williams (23), of Birmingham Street, Oldbury, cabman, was charged on remand with stealing £80 in bank notes from the person of David Taylor, puddler, residing in Salop Street, Bradley, near Bilston, on the 26th ult. Mr. W. Shakespeare appeared for the defence.

Prosecutor stated that on the day mentioned he came over to Lloyds Bank at Oldbury, where he received £82 11s 7d, including sixteen £5 notes. He engaged the prisoner to drive him to West Bromwich, and when they got there he and the prisoner went into the GREAT WESTERN INN and had some drink together. Upon returning to Oldbury they went into the RAILWAY INN, Bromford Lane, where they remained drinking together for some time. Whilst in this house prisoner said he would take charge of the notes and keep them safely for him until the following morning. In answer to Mr. Shakespeare, prosecutor admitted that he gave the notes to the prisoner quite willingly, and added that he was very much obliged to him for taking care of them, as he (prosecutor) was under the influence of beer at the time. He did not give the prisoner into custody.

Eli Bradley, of Garrison Lane, Birmingham, said he saw prosecutor offer the notes to the landlady, who however refused to have anything to do with them. Cross-examined: Prosecutor went to put them into his pocket again, but he (witness) could not say whether he gave them to the prisoner or not to take care of them. The affair took place openly, but as he was the only stranger in the room at the time he called attention of the landlord to the matter, and subsequently the police were called in and prisoner was arrested. The Bench considered the evidence was not sufficient to justify them in sending the case for trial, and accordingly the prisoner was discharged.”

It was stated that deceased had been in the employ of the London and North Western Railway Company for about fifty years, and on Thursday, the 20th inst, he received a fortnight's notice to leave their service, and this troubled him a great deal. The jury returned a verdict of Death from Apoplexy."

Mr. Forest, who represented the defendant, said that his client did all he could to get his house cleared by the stipulated time, and that no one was served within five minutes of that time. Two witnesses were called in support of this statement, and the Bench dismissed the case."

Birmingham Mail 9/2/1886

"At Oldbury Police Court today, Alfred Onions (13), of West Bromwich Street, Oldbury, was charged with stealing 12s, the money of Jonathan Wooten, of Unity Place, Oldbury, on the 6th inst.

Prosecutor was playing at football in a field at the back of the RAILWAY INN, and whilst doing so he left his ordinary clothes in a shed. Defendant then rifled his pockets and stole the money, some of which he spent.

Prisoner was sentenced to ten days imprisonment, and afterwards to go to a reformatory for five years."

Liverpool Weekly Courier 25/9/1886

"At Oldbury Alfred Wall, 23, striker, of Smethwick, was charged with stealing a silver mounted jug and a glass, of the value of 3s, the property of Joseph Parkes, of the RAILWAY INN, Oldbury.

On Saturday a football match took place in a field at the rear of the RAILWAY INN and after the match concluded prisoner and a number of companions adjourned to the public house, where they remained for a short time. Immediately after they left the jug and glass were missed. Prosecutor gave information to Police-sergeant Stanton, and he and Mr. Parkes hired a cab and went in pursuit of the party. Proceeding in the direction of Smethwick they overtook four of them, whom they searched, and failed to find the missing property. They subsequently returned to the VICTORIA STORES, Birmingham Street, where they found the remainder of the team. They were called into a private room and searched. Prisoner, it was alleged, was observed to stoop down in a suspicious manner, and soon afterwards Mr. Parkes found the jug under the seat where he had been sitting.

Prisoner denied all knowledge of the robbery.

Police-sergeant Stanton later on found the glass on a bench in the room where the prisoner and his companions had been drinking. The officer took seven of them to the police station, where the prisoner pleaded guilty to the charge of stealing the jug. He expressed himself sorry for what he had done, and pleaded that he was under the influence of beer.

The bench took a lenient view of the case, and allowed prisoner to go on the payment of the costs, 26s 6d."

"A quarterly meeting of the Oldbury Licensed Victuallers' Association was held on Tuesday at the RAILWAY INN, Bromford Lane. Mr. T. Hyde occupied the chair.

Mr. J. G. Dexter (secretary) presented the quarterly report, which showed that there were forty members on the books, eight having been enrolled during the past quarter. The balance in hand was £35 10s 2d. The accounts had been audited by Messrs. White and Hyde."

Birmingham Daily Post 2/8/1887

"Mr. E. Docker (coroner) opened an inquest, yesterday afternoon, at the RAILWAY INN, Bromford Lane, Oldbury, relative to the death of a child named Alfred Taylor, aged two years, whose parents reside in Broadwell Road, Oldbury, who was killed on the Birmingham District Steam Tramway on Sunday.

Mr. T. Taylor, father of the deceased, identified the body, and stated that the child ran out of the house on Sunday afternoon to see a band, and a few minutes afterwards witness was informed that he had been run over by the steam tram.

Dr. Lyddon gave evidence to the effect that the body of the child was shockingly mutilated, and death must have been instantaneous.

The Coroner said he had received communications from the driver of the engine and the solicitor to the Tramway Company, and he only proposed taking formal evidence on that occasion.

The enquiry was then adjourned until Friday next."

Birmingham Daily Post 8/8/1887

"On Friday, Mr. E. Docker (deputy coroner) resumed the adjourned inquest at the RAILWAY INN, Bromford Lane, respecting the death of Alfred Taylor, aged two years and ten months, of Broadwell Road, Oldbury, who was killed by a tram-engine, on the 31st ult.

George Parker, engine-driver, stated that, on the date mentioned, he was driving and when near the Oldbury Railway Station the deceased ran on the line, and, before he had time to pull up, the engine passed over his body. At the time the accident occurred he was driving at the rate of three or four miles an hour.

"On Tuesday evening an alarming gun accident occurred in the RAILWAY INN, Oldbury, which resulted in one man being injured and several others narrowly escaping death.

It appears that Alfred Hudson, Chas. Alfred Dunrose, and Josiah Showell were in the bar of the public house named, the parties having returned from a shooting match. After being in the room for a short time Dunrose said he could blow out the gas with a gun, and he immediately took hold of Showell's gun for the purpose of trying the experiment. He placed a cap upon the nipple, and being unaware that the gun was loaded, he raised it and pointed it at the gaslight. The muzzle was very near Alfred Hudson's head, and the latter put his hand up to push the gun on one side. At the same moment Dunrose pulled the trigger of the gun, which went off with a loud report, blowing away a portion of Hudson's left hand and the gas pendant. The contents of the gun also struck a large earthenware spirit barrel which stood upon a shelf near the ceiling. The charge also passed very close to the heads of several customers who were standing in the room."

"The Brightest Light in the World.

A London Electrician exhibited the other day a new form of arc lamp which gives a light, beside which the most brilliant electric light ever previously seen looks like a smoky lantern. This extraordinary light is produced by electrifying the vapours of Mercury. Without the aid of a particle of Mercury a still Brighter Light has, by Dr. Williams' pink pills for pale people, been brought into thousands of homes. All over the country they have restored the light of health to tired eyes, the rose-pink of beauty into pale cheeks.

Miss Beasley, the landlord's daughter at the RAILWAY INN, Oldbury, Birmingham, said these pills, three years ago, brought light into her life which she feared had gone for ever. 'I was in such a terrible state,' said she, 'through that ever-prevalent malady, anaemia, that I could not even dress my hair. I was just like death; people turned round to look at me. I used to fall down fainting in the road. I could not digest food – in fact, I had no appetite for it. Dr Williams' pink pills quite cured me, and I have remained well, eating freely and working with ease. Undoubtedly these pills saved my life.'"

“In the course of an interview which a Mail representative had with Wheldon, the left wing inside player of the Aston Villa team, this afternoon, it was elicited that Wheldon had finally decided to take to the RAILWAY TAVERN at Langley Green, and he will enter upon the tenancy on Tuesday next, so that if the Villa directors adhere to their decision with regard to footballers occupying public houses, the matter is settled, and Wheldon will not be seen in the Villa ranks again. He did not, he said, which to leave the Villa club, and also mentioned that he was offered the same terms as last season, but he had fully made up his mind to embark in a public house business, and as the RAILWAY TAVERN was in his own neighbourhood he considered it a good opportunity, as he had to look to the future. With regard to the rumour about his joining the Albion club, he stated that no steps had yet been taken in that direction, and before anything could be done the transfer fee question would be raised and have to be dealt with. It transpired that there is no other point of disagreement between Wheldon and the directors of his old club. At present Wheldon is not able to say anything with regard to his intentions, as his course of action will have to be guided by circumstances which may arise hereafter."

Leeds Mercury 4/5/1900

"The directors of Aston Villa have taken a firm stand on the question of players conducting public houses. The matter has been brought to a head in consequence of Fred Wheldon, the old international inside left, for whose transfer the Villa paid an unprecedented sum a few years ago, declaring his intention to become a licensee. The directors have refused to re-engage him under these circumstances, and as he persists in his resolve his severance from the club seems inevitable. He is mentioned as a probable recruit for West Bromwich, but he states that no steps have been taken in this direction."

Lancashire Evening Post 9/5/1900

Mr. A. M. Chance presided at Oldbury. The report of Superintendent Hill stated that there were 126 licences in the district, a reduction of seven on the previous year, which compared with the estimated population, gave a ratio of one on-licence to every 354 of the inhabitants. One licence-holder only was convicted during the year, while eighty-eight persons were convicted for drunkenness, a decrease of forty-three on the previous year.....

The police objected to the renewal of the following twelve licences which will be considered at the adjourned sessions, to be held on March 2.....

RAILWAY TAVERN.”

“The adjourned licensing sessions for Oldbury were held yesterday, Mr. G. S. Albright presiding in the absence, through illness, of Mr. A. M. Chance. The magistrates were sitting for several hours, chiefly in hearing evidence regarding the following licensed houses, to the renewal of which the police objected on the grounds of redundancy, the magistrates proposing to refer them for compensation.....

RAILWAY TAVERN, beerhouse, Langley Green Road, owner Messrs. Holders Limited.....

Evidence was given in each case by Superintendent Hill and Mr. F. H. Jones, auctioneer and valuer, as to the nature of the houses, and the proximity of other licensed premises. The magistrates afterwards retired to consider the cases, and upon resuming Mr. Albright said they had decided to refer the following six houses to Worcester to be dealt with under compensation: CRYSTAL PALACE, NAVIGATION INN, HOPE AND ANCHOR, FOUNTAIN, CROSS KEYS, and BIRD IN HAND. All the other licences would be renewed, and the licences of these six would be provisionally renewed pending the county committee’s investigations.....”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 7/4/1909

“Mr. A. M. Chance presided at the special Licensing Sessions at Oldbury yesterday, when Mr. J. S. Sharpe, on behalf of Holders Brewery Ltd, applied for permission to rebuild the following houses: SYCAMORE INN (L. V.), Clay Lane; SPREAD EAGLE (full licence), Park Lane; and the ROYAL OAK (beerhouse), corner of Langley Green Road and Causeway Green Road.

Mr. Sharpe said the police had objected to the renewal of the licence of the SYCAMORE, because the premises were structurally unsuitable. The plans provided for the rebuilding of the premises, which were old-fashioned and dilapidated. The domestic accommodation would be greatly improved, and in consideration of a slight increase in the drinking area they would surrender the licence of the RAILWAY INN, Langley Green Road, an ante-69 beerhouse. With regard to the other two applications there would be no increase in the drinking area, but the domestic quarters would be much improved in each case. The ROYAL OAK would be set back some distance, and 150 square yards of land would be given up for improving the corner. Mr. A. Edwards, architect, of Birmingham, submitted plans, and said the cost would be about £1,000 in each case. The alterations would be completed in the licensing year.

Mr. Chance asked that the RAILWAY INN should be closed at Midsummer, and the applications were then granted, subject to the surrender being satisfactory.”

The license was surrendered and the house closed on 30th September 1910.

“William Langford was charged under the following circumstances. PC Hawkins deposed that about half past eight o’clock on the evening of Monday last he was on duty at Oldbury, when he saw the defendant lying in the streets, very drunk, and quite incapable of getting up. There were a great many people standing round him. With the assistance of another person witness succeeded in getting him to the station house. In reply to the Bench, defendant stated that he lived at Hill Top, near Wednesbury, and was in the employ of Mr. Blackwell, the Atlas Works. He had never been charged with any offence before, and he was very sorry that he had committed one then; but his young master asked him to go to a pigeon shooting match, which was to take place on the above-named day, at the RED COW INN, Oldbury. He accordingly went, and having had nothing to eat during the day, the drink he partook of so overcame him that when he went into the open air he fell down and could not get up again. Upon his promising not to repeat the offence, he was dismissed on payment of costs, 10s.”

“At the Petty Sessions, on Tuesday, before Captain Bennitt and R. W. Johnson, Esq., Mary Ann Custon was brought up on remand, charged with having on the 12th of February stolen one pair of women’s boots, the property of Jonah Jephcott, coal seller and shoe dealer, of Oldbury, who keeps a stall in the Market Place, adjoining Mr. Perrens’ house. The prisoner, it was stated by the wife of the prosecutor, took the boots from the stall between nine and ten o’clock on the night of the 12th ult. Prosecutrix concluded that prisoner had taken them, because she saw her standing close to the stall at the time above mentioned, and when she was gone the boots were missing. Prosecutrix further stated, that from information she received on the 18th ult, she went to the prisoner’s house and accused her of the theft. Prisoner denied it, and said she had bought a pair of a woman at the bottom of the Market Place, for which she had given 4s 9d. Prosecutrix gave information to the police, and Police-sergeant Simmonds apprehended the prisoner at the house of her father. The boots produced were stated by the prosecutrix to be her property, and identical with the pair she saw on the prisoner’s feet. The above is the substance of the evidence taken at the first examination on the 23rd ult. Yesterday, Eli Bell, a miner, residing in Oldbury, swore that he saw the prisoner take the boots from the stall on the night in question, put them under her shawl, and walk off with them. He had been walking with the prisoner that night, and after she had taken the boots he went with her to the RED COW INN, when he left her.

This witness was then cross-examined by the prisoner with the view of showing that after the robbery he went with her to several other public houses the same evening, but he distinctly swore that he never went with her into any house but the RED COW. The prisoner, however, swore that Bell had been with her to the FLOWER POT and the OLD HOUSE AT HOME, and several witnesses were accordingly called by the Bench to ascertain which statement was true. These witnesses corroborated the statement of the prisoner, having seen her in company with Bell at the houses above named. One witness also proved that instead of Bell leaving the prisoner in the RED COW, they both left together.

Under these circumstances the prisoner was dismissed on the charge of felony, and admitted to give evidence against Eli Bell, who was forthwith placed in the dock on the charge of having committed perjury. The various witnesses having been examined, and deposed as above stated, Bell was fully committed to take his trial at the ensuing Worcester Assizes.”

All the applications for renewals of licenses were granted, the following being cautioned in consequence of complaints having been made by the police John Ballard, RED COW INN, Oldbury.”

Birmingham Daily Post 22/9/1864 - Letter

Sir, it is made to appear, in your impression of Wednesday, the 14th instant, that at the annual meeting for granting and renewing of licenses for Oldbury and Hales Owen districts, the following persons were cautioned, in consequence of complaints having been made by the police. Thomas Welch, BLACK HORSE INN; Benjamin Garner, HARMONIC INN; George Minchin, BELL INN, Rounds Green; also John Ballard, RED COW INN, all of Oldbury. Now, in fairness and justice to the police, we wish it to be understood that not in regard to any of the above persons charged was a single complaint made by the police, neither was any intimation given in any way, until actually confronted by the Magistrates themselves, which quite astounded all the accused. The matter of fact is, that the Magistrates had been furnished with a private note by some person, who, knowing the truth was absent, had not the manliness to make the charge in person; excepting in the case of Thomas Welch, who was informed against by a neighbour. Thus the accused were not afforded an opportunity to be legally represented, to have those accusations rebuffed. By inserting the above, you will oblige, your obedient servants.

Thomas Welch, Benjamin Garner, George Minchin, John Ballard.

“At the Oldbury Police Court, on Tuesday, before Mr. H. Chance and Mr. J. Everitt, a theatrical singer of this place, named Thomas Villiers, was charged with attempting to commit a criminal assault on the 22nd January, upon the person of Jane Jackson, a Concert Hall singer. Mr. Jackson appeared for complainant, and Mr. Shakespeare for the defence.

It appeared from complainant’s statement that during the month of January, she was engaged at the RED COW, Oldbury, as a professional singer, and defendant was at the same time employed in a similar capacity, at the WAGON AND HORSES, which is only a few doors off. She (complainant) was a married woman, and on the night in question was going home about ten o’clock, in company with her little girl, when she met defendant, who asked her where Mr. Jackson was. She told him he was gone to Jarth, and that she did not know him (defendant). He asked her if it would be possible for him to get lodgings at Mrs. Parkes’s, where she was then living, and ultimately it was agreed that he should go to the house and see if he could obtain lodgings. They went home together, and shortly after she was compelled to go to the RED COW to fulfil her engagement. Defendant went with her to the WAGON AND HORSES, and asked her to have something to drink, but she refused and left him. Between eleven and twelve the same night defendant met her and accompanied her home, she thinking at the time that he had got lodgings at the house. She lighted a candle, and as she was going to the kitchen door to get some supper he pulled her on his knee. He released her, but as she was turning round he caught her again, and threw her on the floor, where he attempted to effect his purpose. He tore her dress, and badly bruised her arms. She then went to bed, and defendant remained in the kitchen all night. Defendant left the house in the morning, and stayed in town several days, but he had gone when she had the warrant issued for his apprehension. He had only been recently apprehended.

Mrs. Parkes and Mr. Parkes were called for complainant.

Mr. Shakespeare, in defence, said complainant was a willing party to the assault, and had only raised the report to clear herself.

Mr. Moore and Mr. Peacock were called for the defence, and the Bench dismissed the case on the ground of insufficient evidence.”

Birmingham Daily Post 7/11/1878

“Last night an important meeting of miners took place at the RED COW INN, Oldbury. Mr. William Hughes presided, and several of the miners' delegates of the district were also present.

Mr. Thomas Griffiths, miners' agent, after laying before the meeting the result of the conference with the coalmasters at Dudley on Tuesday last, urged the men, as a means of preventing any reduction in wages or an increase in working hours, to be firmly united. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Barnes, secretary to the local union of miners, set forth that it would be to the advantage of the men to endeavour to obtain the co-operation of the miners of the neighbouring districts in the struggle which might ensue.

Mr. Jones said it would be necessary for them to hold fast to the union. If they stood aloof from the union they would have to bear additional hardships. They were oppressed now; but if they were not united in their opposition to things which were detrimental to their interests they would have to suffer still more oppression. They were working at a low rate now; but it would be still worse for them if they had to work for 2s 6d per day. They should be combined in their determination to resist any further reduction. If they could get the co-operation of the men in the other local districts they would be better able to prevent the masters bringing forward any reduction. (Hear, hear.)

The Chairman said they would work for nothing rather than consent to work an extra hour. (Applause.)

A miner then proposed that they should not consent to work longer than eight hours per day. This was duly seconded and carried unanimously.

Mr. Griffiths said the masters had expressed their opinion that the agents had not brought their proposals before the men, but instead of doing so had given their (the agents') own opinion of the intentions of the masters; but he thought they would be able to prove that such was not the case, and that the matter had been put clearly before them as it had been communicated to them (the agents) by the masters at Dudley. (Hear, hear.)

Adverting to the proposition which the employers had made, and the apprehension as to what the masters intended to do, Mr. Griffiths said it would not pay them to reduce the price of coal, as if they did so they would have to reduce the wages of the men to the extent of 6d per day and the coal to the extent of 2s per ton, according to the Birmingham Agreement, and the latter would certainly not pay them. (Applause.) He believed they would prefer the reduction in wages to the increase in working time? (Loud cried of 'Yes.') He thought they were also determined to abide by the Birmingham Agreement? (Cries of 'Yes.') On the establishment of that agreement it was not received favourably by the miners of the district generally, and they were not pleased with him (the speaker) for having consented to it on their behalf; but he thought they were satisfied with it now. (Applause.) The masters wanted to get out of it, but they (the men) must be determined to compel them to comply with its terms. They were glad of the agreement and they respected the gentleman – Mr. Chamberlain, MP, who assisted in making it. (Loud cheers.)

In conclusion, Mr. Griffiths said he thought they would not consent to work an extra hour per day, and if it were pressed it would be nothing less than an everlasting stain upon the characters of the coalmasters of South Staffordshire. (Applause.)

A miner said they had had to fight for the eight hours system, and ought now to keep it; it would be an everlasting shame upon them as miners if they were to accept an increase in the hours of labour.

Mr. Thomas Kimberley thought that if they consented to work the extra hour, which had been proposed, they would soon have to work still longer hours, and would probably also have to suffer a reduction of wages in addition thereto.

The meeting then concluded with a vote of thanks to the delegates for attending."

Walsall Observer 9/10/1886

“On Monday night a meeting of miners and ironworkers was held at the RED COW INN, Church Street, Oldbury; Mr. S. Pigot presiding.

The Chairman remarked that he was pleased to see the efforts which were being put forth to amalgamate ironworkers and miners, so as they might support each other.

Mr. H. Rust pointed out that they were not aiming at the organisation of operatives in the various trades for the purpose of bringing about strikes, but in order that more reasonable methods of protecting their interests might be devised. He referred at length to the advantages which had been conferred upon working men generally as the result of the action taken by the various trades unions in the country, and mentioned the several useful Acts of Parliament had been passed. He understood that a conference would be called shortly to consider the question of federating the miners of the Forest of Dean, Warwickshire, and the Midland Counties, and he hoped that the time would soon come when the ironworkers and miners would be thoroughly united. Mr. Baldwin (secretary to the Millmens' Association) said he thought the sooner the ironworkers and miners of the district felt that their interests were identical the better would it be for both. He considered it was a reflection upon Englishmen that America should have to send apostles to this country to teach them the principles of unionism.

Mr. S. H. Whitehouse regretted to say there had been antagonism between the two staple industries in the country, but he was of opinion that the men engaged in both trades would find that their interests would be protected best if they were combined.

On the proposition of an ironworker, seconded by a miner, a resolution was passed in favour of organisation as the best means of elevating the working classes in the social scale."

Birmingham Daily Post 19/4/1889

"Last night a meeting of miners was held at the RED COW INN, Church Street, Oldbury, for the purpose of discussing the wages question, and what action should be taken with reference to the Wages Board.

A Miner (who presided) said the men considered that the basis was too high, and that if they could restrict the employment to four days per week, and eight hours per day, it would be a good thing for the trade.

Mr. H. Rust, referring to the Wages Board, said it had made fair progress during the time it had been in existence; but they were not satisfied with the basis, which is now fixed at 5s. The representatives of the men had done their best to lower the basis, and their suggestion to the employers was that the basis should be 4s 7½d, but after a great deal of discussion they advanced a little higher. The employers said they thought 5s or 5s 2d would be a fair basis to regulate miners' wages, and they could not under any circumstances reduce it below 5s. (A Voice: 'Then away with the Wages Board.')

It was thought that it would be wise to try the basis of 5s, and see whether it would give the men an advance or not. But the average of the accountants did not give the men an increase upon the present rate of wages. The adjourned meeting would be held next Tuesday at Dudley, and the adjournment took place in order that the whole question might be laid before the men. He should be very sorry if the Wages Board should be abolished, thus placing the men in the awkward position they had occupied for so many years. After the protracted strike the leaders of the miners in the district had experienced the greatest difficulty in obtaining interviews with the masters with regard to the wages question or any other matters. The masters consented to the establishment of the Board after great consideration, and now they showed the representatives of the men the greatest possible respect, and if the question of the basis could be settled he believed the miners would not regret the formation of the board for the regulation of wages.

Mr. H. Barnes also addressed the meeting, speaking in favour of the union.

A resolution was proposed, declaring that 5s as a basis was too high, and urging the representatives of the men to do all in their power to bring it down to 4s 9d per ton. The resolution expressed approval of the Wages Board, and pledged those present to support it.

A Workman moved an amendment that the basis be 4s 9d per ton or nothing, and that the operatives' section should ask for an advance of 10 per cent, and inform the employers that they meant to have it. He said the masters could do what they liked with the basis.

Mr. Rust pointed out that if the amendment was carried it would have the effect of breaking the board up. Ultimately the resolution was carried, and it was also decided to request that the accountants should examine the books again at the end of April, whether the basis was altered or not."

"Last night a meeting of miners was held at the RED COW INN, Church Street, Oldbury.

Mr. H. Rust spoke of the benefit to be derived from the Wages Board. The Board governed the wages of 12,000 men who had received the advance of 5 per cent five weeks before any other miners in the United Kingdom. He was sorry that the Old Hill miners held aloof from the Board, and hoped they would soon see their way clear to rejoin the Board and assist them in securing their rights. He gave an account of the business done at the Manchester Conference, and said they believed that the best means of restricting the output was by every county drawing eight hours only per day, and if this was adopted throughout the country the restriction of the output would be very considerable.

Mr. H. Barnes also spoke, and resolutions were passed in favour of the Wages Board and of the men's union."

Birmingham Daily Post 9/11/1889

"Last night a meeting of miners was held at the RED COW INN, Church Street, Oldbury, for the purpose of considering the wages, hours, and other questions.

Mr. H. Rust said that since the formation of the Wages Board a national movement had been brought before the mining population. Some of the men were inclined to break the Board up and go in with the national movement. He had not got a word to say against a national movement, which was a very good thing; but there were certain matters connected with that district which a national movement would not deal with. It would not deal with the percentage of the thin-coal men, which had been secured by the Board since its formation. He hoped they would carefully consider the matter, and remember that the minimum rate of wages under the Board was 3s 4d, which was perfectly safe. When the employers' books were again audited he was of opinion that they would be entitled to a substantial advance in wages. He urged the men to continue to support the Board.

Resolutions were passed in favour of the Wages Board, and disapproving of notice being given to terminate contracts in December; also in favour of organisation."

"The annual meeting of the Licensed Victuallers' Association was held last night at the RED COW INN, Church Street, Oldbury. Mr. H. Hinchley presided, and Mr. J. Parkes occupied the vice-chair.

The Secretary (Mr. J. G. Dexter) presented the annual report, which showed that there were in the association at the close of the year under review thirty-six members, the total income derived from members' subscriptions being £21 17s. The financial statement showed that after meeting the expenditure during the year there was a balance of £36 8s 8d in hand....."

"During the prevailing distress at Oldbury, a soup kitchen was opened at the RED COW INN, Church Street. The landlord (Mr. Hammond), Mr. Jerrams and other gentlemen evinced great interest in the relief of the poor folk, and three days during the past week many hundreds of starving poor received a good bowl of first-class soup, together with bread. The eagerness with which the recipients partook of the food, and the thankful looks was in itself a sufficient reward to those who had contributed to the funds. The balance sheet appears in our advertising columns."

“Last night the annual meeting of miners in the Oldbury district was held last night at the RED COW INN, Church Street, Oldbury.

Mr. S. Hartill, of Dudley, delivered an address, dealing with the work of the Wages Board and the eight hours proposal.

Mr. H. Rust was unanimously re-elected as the representative for Oldbury on the Board.

Mr. Rust thanked the meeting for re-electing him, and proceeded to refer to the eight-hours movement amongst miners. He remarked that as conciliation had failed they were now endeavouring to secure an eight-hours working day from bank to bank by an Act of Parliament. It was gratifying to find that several of the local members of Parliament had promised to support the measure. He was pleased to see that efforts were being made to induce the Government to appoint a special day for consideration of the Eight Hours Bill. He pointed out that the West Bromwich district intended to send a representative to the international conference to be held in Paris next week; but, speaking of the proposal to declare an international strike, he strongly recommended that before they took such a step the matter should be well considered, and he advised the men generally to exercise patience in advocating their claim to an eight-hours day. If Parliament rejected the bill when it was presented to them a month hence he would rather wait for a time and continue the agitation than embark on a gigantic strike. If they persevered in the movement he believed they would ultimately succeed, and with that prospect in view they could afford to wait patiently. (Hear, hear.)

Resolutions were passed in favour of continuing the agitation for an eight-hours working day from bank to bank, and expressing confidence in Mr. Rust as the local representative.”

At these old-established grounds on Boxing Day from an early hour sports of all kinds were in full swing. The programme, which comprised no less than eight events, consisting of dog racing, pedestrianism, rabbit coursing, &c, was long enough to satisfy the greatest glutton.....

Rabbit coursing Mr. R. Hammond’s Clarence, of Oldbury, and Mr. C. Withers’s Peter, of Causeway Green, whose owners had articted their dogs to course the best of twenty-one courses, the rabbits receiving forty yards law, five minutes elapsing between each course, for £10 a side.....

“A man said to be serving three months’ imprisonment for theft and obtaining money by false pretences, appeared before Oldbury magistrates yesterday to answer two further charges of false pretences.

He was James Hayward (aged 29), of 93, Sydenham Road, Smethwick, who was said to have obtained money from a friend, Phillip Wolfe, licensee of the RED COW TAVERN, Church Street, Oldbury, on July 2 and July 4.

Wolfe, it was stated, gave him £5 on July 2 towards a 'deal' whereby Hayward said he could get some metal from Nottingham for £10 which they could sell for twice that amount. On July 4 Hayward said he had the metal but the clutch of his lorry, which was at Nottingham, had broken. Mr. Wolfe gave him a further £2. Hayward told the court, 'In the last few weeks I have had a sharp lesson. I have been a stupid fool and because of this have lost my wife and home.'

He said he sold a suit and a watch and posted the money to Mr. Wolfe, who stated he had not received it.

Hayward added that he obtained the money to make a home so that he could win back his wife.

He was sentenced to three months' imprisonment, to commence on the expiration of his present sentence."

"A lorry and trailer carrying a 52ft-long load – a boiler – blocked the main Oldbury to West Bromwich road for two hours yesterday and caused traffic chaos in Oldbury town centre. Part of the lorry, turning into Church Street, mounted the pavement and sank through the wooden trap doors over a public house cellar entrance.

The boiler, weighing 20 tons, was on its way from the Oldbury firm of Edwin Danks & Co. Ltd. to Nottingham.

While police diverted traffic, which converges on the town centre from four directions, a crane lifted the lorry trailer and load back on to the road, a steel sheet being slid under the wheels.

Mr. Philip Wolfe, licensee of the RED COW INN, Church Street, said, 'I shall have to send for the carpenter again to make another trap door for the cellar – the third in six weeks.'

The lorry was being driven by Mr. R. Bondfield, of Pontnuwyd, Newport, Montgomery, who said, 'I hit the kerb and slid into the cellar.'"

“An inquest was held on Saturday last, before G. H. Hinchliffe, Esq, at the RED LION, Tividale, on the body of William Nicholls, aged 33. Deceased was employed at Tividale, and on the previous day he was being drawn up a well, when he fell out of the bucket. It is supposed that when being drawn up he was so overcome with foul air as to become insensible and fall to the bottom of the well. By this fall he dislocated a shoulder, fractured several ribs, and sustained a severe wound on the head. The injuries were such that he died in an hour and half. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

Brierley Hill Advertiser 14/11/1857

“George Newton, licensed victualler, of the RED LION INN, Tividale, was indicted for allowing his house to be open at half past eleven on Sunday forenoon, the 1st inst. The policeman who brought the case stated that on the forenoon in question he went into defendant's house, and saw him in the bar drawing a pint of ale, which he afterwards took towards one of the rooms in the house. He had also some money in his hand at the time, which appeared to be the sum he had received for the ale. The constable looked round the house, but he could not, however, discover any person within. Another police officer corroborated this statement. In reply to the charge, defendant stated that it was correct that he had a pint of ale in his hand at the time; but it was for himself. He had no money in his hands, as mentioned; neither was there anyone in the house drinking or going to drink.

The Bench thought that, though it was not directly proved that he was guilty of the offence, there appeared to be something suspicious about the matter and, on that account, he must pay the costs.”

“On Tuesday an inquest was held at the RED LION INN, Tividale, on the body of Mary Timmins, a girl eleven years of age, the daughter of James Timmins, a labourer. It appeared that the death of deceased was caused by burning. On Saturday evening she was in her father’s house upstairs, and, whilst taking a roasted potato from the fire, her dress was caught by the flames. She screamed out as soon as she noticed that she was on fire, and her father rushed up and speedily extinguished the flames. She was, however, so severely burnt that she expired at ten o’clock on Sunday morning. The Jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

“An inquest was held at James Stevens’s, the RED LION INN, by Edwin Hooper, Esq, on the body of James Pritchard, age forty-five, a waggoner in the employ of Mr. Gilbert, Tividale. The first witness deposed that about half-past four in the afternoon of the 6th inst, he was coming along the side of the canal when he saw something floating on the water, and with assistance he got it out, when it proved to be the body of the deceased, who was last seen alive on the night previous at the BURNT TREE INN, Tipton, about eleven o’clock, where he called for some ale, the landlord refusing to serve him, as he was intoxicated. The deceased then turned down by the canal side as his nearest way home, and there being a bend in the canal he must have walked in. The body was searched by the police, who found a tobacco box and 3d in coppers upon him. The jury returned a verdict of Accidentally Drowned.”

“On Monday Mr. E. Hooper, District Coroner, held an inquest at the RED LION INN, Tividale, on the body of a youth, of seventeen years of age, named James Forster, a horse driver at the Hall Bridge Colliery, belonging to Messrs. Haines and Jackson. Mr. J. P. Baker, Government Inspector of Mines, was also present. Henry Franks, a loader at the above colliery, said that deceased had been in the proprietors’ employment since Friday week, and on Friday morning last, at half past seven o’clock, he was assisting witness to load a skip in the gate-road, and while doing so a large quantity of rock fell on deceased from above and buried him, and the same rock knocked off witness’s cap. There were four ‘trees’ distant from each other about five yards. There was no doggy, and the butties, Joseph Bailey and Joseph Wilkinson, went down with the first band, and did not see anyone examine the pit. Knew nothing about the rules; could not read them; and did not know there was any penalty attached to the infringement of the rules.

The coroner recommended the witness to apply for information on the subject.

Joseph Bailey, one of the butties, admitted in reply to the coroner that he was not particularly acquainted with the rules only so far as they related to his own duties, as he could not read. Always examined those portions of the pit, which he thought dangerous. Did not think the spot where the accident occurred was dangerous, as the rock was solid to the pike. Thought the spot was sufficiently timbered.

Mr. Baker said it was desirable that works should be timbered, even where they were apparently, sound, and until this was done accidents would constantly occur.

The body was identified by Daniel Street, father-in-law of the deceased. The latter was badly injured about the face and neck, and was brought home dead on the morning of the accident.

Jacob Smith said he and another collier were working at the place indicated. First went to work there on Tuesday last. The rules were not read over or explained to him when he was engaged, and he could not read himself.

The coroner, in summing up, said that the desire of the proprietors was to ensure the safety of the men as much as possible, and from the evidence of one of the butties it appeared that the pit had not been examined with that amount of care which was necessary. He had no doubt that his remarks would be conveyed to Messrs. Haines and Jackson by the person who represented the firm (Mr. Thomas Batshuts), and that it would be seen to in future.

Within the last few years the defendant has been five times convicted of assaults, and on the last occasion he was fined £20 for an assault on the police. He was fined 5s and costs; in default, twenty-one days.”

“An inquest was held yesterday by Mr. E. Hooper, district coroner, at the RED LION INN, Tividale, touching the death of David Thomas Sheldon, aged five, who was found drowned on Friday in the marl pool at Messrs. Gilberts’ works. The deceased was missed on Friday night, and was found by a man named Alfred Harris on Saturday last.

“On Saturday afternoon last, Mr. Edwin Hooper (Coroner) held an inquest at the RED LION INN, Tividale, Rowley Regis, to inquire into the circumstances connected with the deaths of Jemima Boylin, aged 23, and Henry Boylin, aged two years and six months, her child, who had resided at Hill Top, West Bromwich, and who were found drowned in a canal in the neighbourhood of Tividale, under the following circumstances.

Jon Pearson, miner, residing in Union Street, Tipton, said on Friday morning last he was walking along the canal in company with his brother and two other men, near the ‘Old Smokey’ pit, and as two boats passed each other in the canal, he saw a child’s head rise above the surface of the water. He then drew a boatman’s attention to it, and he got the child (which proved to be the deceased Henry Boylin) out of the water, and placed it upon the bank. A policeman was then sent for, and one came and took possession of it. As the policeman was about to take it to Dudley Port Police Station a cry was raised that its mother had been found in the canal about a quarter of a mile further up. When the deceased Henry Boylin was taken out of the water he was covered with mud, and appeared to witness as if he had been in the canal about nine days. Witness did not notice any marks of violence upon the body.

Samuel Taylor was examined, and proved getting the body of the deceased Jemima Boylin out of the canal. It had no bonnet or shawl on, and the flesh was very black. The only thing about the deceased that attracted witness’s attention was that the eyes were swollen.

John Boylin, the husband of deceased Jemima Boylin, said he was a puddler, and resided at Hill Top, West Bromwich. On the 17th of October last, in consequence of his having no work to do, he asked his wife to take the child and go into the Union, and she did so. Witness then went down to the Potteries to seek employment, and after remaining there a fortnight returned. He then sent to the West Bromwich Union for his wife, and heard that she had left. He was not aware where she had been since.

The Coroner: Had you no suspicion that she had been living with another man? – Witness: No, sir, I had not.

The Coroner: Were you and your wife living on good terms at the time you parted? – Witness: Yes, sir, we were.

By a juror: Witness had never seen his wife take any drink.

The Coroner (to witness): How do you suppose she got into the water? – Witness: I cannot tell.

The Coroner: Do you think she has destroyed herself? – Witness: I think so myself.

Richard Boylin, miner, residing at Horsley Heath, Tipton, said he knew the deceased Jemima Boylin. He last saw her alive last Monday week. She came to his house and asked him for her husband. Witness said he was not there, and she went away. A short time afterwards she returned and said he (witness) knew where her husband was. On his saying he did not the deceased went away, and witness saw nothing more of her. By the Coroner: Witness knew that the husband of the deceased Jemima Boylin had gone to the Potteries. When she was at his house she had a little child with her. He knew she had two children, but did not ask where the other one was.

The Coroner: Did you, being the uncle of the children, not make some inquiry? – Witness: No, sir; I did not aske her any question at all.

The Coroner: I think it very strange you did not. Did she not say something more; did she not say where she was going? – Witness: No, sir.

The Coroner: Was she not excited when you told her you did not know where her husband was? – Witness: No, sir.

The Coroner: Did not some words pass between you? – Witness: No, sir.

The Coroner: You allowed her to go, and did not know where she was going? – Witness: I did not know where she was going.

By a juror: Witness did not know anything about the trouble of the deceased. He and she were not good friends, because when her husband was destitute she came to his house ‘fresh,’ and broke all the things. He then told her that she must not come there again.

By the Coroner: When the deceased, Jemima Boylin, asked him to let her in his house he replied, ‘No, you must go and get lodgings.’ He had no words with her.

The Coroner: You swear that? – Witness: Yes.

Police-constable J. Taylor said he received information that a woman and child had been taken out of the canal, and he then went and examined the bodies. There were some bruises on the face and head of the woman, and on the same parts of the child. Witness did not find anything in the woman’s pockets. He thought the deceased had been in the water nine or ten days from their appearance. He had made every inquiry, and as far as he had been able to ascertain there was no suspicion connected with the case.

This being the whole of the evidence, the Coroner proceeded to sum up. After stating that he considered Richard Boylin a very unwilling witness, he said the matter was for the consideration of the jury. If they liked to have the bodies examined by a surgeon he would adjourn the inquest for that purpose. The matter was entirely for their consideration. There was not the slightest evidence to show how the deceased got into the water, and the only verdict they could return was an open one; but if they thought there was any suspicion the inquiry must be adjourned.

A juror: I think the poor woman was destitute, and did not know what to do with herself.

The jury then consulted together, and returned a verdict that the deceased were Found Drowned in the canal, but how they got into the water there was no evidence to show.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 5/12/1866

“An inquest was held on Monday, at the RED LION INN, Tividale, by Mr. Harper, on the body of Richard Humphries, aged fifty-eight, miner, who was injured by a fall of coal in a pit belonging to Mr. S. Bradley, on the 12th ult, and died on Thursday last. He was attended by Dr. Horton, of Dudley, during his illness, but succumbed to the injuries he had received. A verdict of Accidental Death was returned Mr. Baker, Inspector of Mines, was present at each inquest.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 30/5/1870

“On Saturday morning, two boys named Arthur and Dan Street, were engaged in gathering gleeds from the embankment of a marl hole connected with Gilbert’s Brick Manufactory, at Tividale, when the younger one Dan (10), fell into the water, which is upwards of 20 feet deep. He screamed for help, and Arthur (13) made an attempt to rescue him. The effort proved fatal to the elder brother, who was pulled into the water, and both were drowned. An alarm was raised, drags were obtained, and the bodies were drawn out as speedily as possible, but life was extinct. On the evening of the same day an inquest was held at the RED LION INN, Tividale, before Mr. Hooper, and a verdict of Accidental Death was returned.”

County Advertiser 20/5/1871

“Aaron Maydew, Tividale, was charged with using threatening language towards Sarah Woodhall. On the 5th inst complainant was coming out of the RED LION public house, Tividale, where she had been to fetch some beer for her husband’s supper, when the defendant went to her and made use of most disgusting language, and threatened to thrash her. Mr. Hingley told the defendant if he would pay the costs they would let him off. He, however, not being able to do so, was fined 1s and costs, with the alternative of fourteen days’ imprisonment.”

Birmingham Daily Post 14/9/1872

“Yesterday afternoon, Mr. Edwin Hooper resumed an inquest, at the RED LION INN, New Road, Tividale, on the bodies of Joseph Durant, aged twenty-eight, and Joseph Troman, aged fifteen years. In reply to the Coroner, Mr. Bradley, in whose pit the deaths occurred, said the third man who had been killed by the gunpowder explosion had been buried, and that the Dudley Coroner had left the investigation in the hands of Mr. Hooper.

Most of the particulars of the occurrence have appeared.

John Trotman, a pikeman, said he was in the air-head on the 16th of August last, about twenty yards from the deceased. Heard an explosion of gunpowder, and ran to the spot. Met the boy Troman, who was crying bitterly, and saying that Durant had fired the powder after punching a hole for a ‘shot.’ The powder had fallen out of the ‘tot’ upon the candle.

Mr. Baker advised that the men should be supplied with powder in vessels which would not expose a large surface. Cartridges would be better. Mr. Bradley said he perfectly agreed.

Mr. Evans, the manager, said he was called to the bottom, and the boy Troman made a statement to him. Durant also made a statement, saying that he was throwing some powder in the hole, and the first lot he threw fired, but he could not tell how. He had a naked candle directly under the hole he was filling.

By Mr. Baker: Had since recommended the use of cartridges.

Mr. Baker: Nothing but carelessness could have brought about such an accident, but the law did not compel miners to use cartridges, and so the deaths were attributable to throwing gunpowder about whilst a naked candle was in use.

The Coroner asked the manager whether he was making arrangements to act on the new law which comes into force on the 1st of January next. The manager said he was.

The Coroner was glad to hear this, because so far as he was concerned, he should put the law into full force. The Jury then returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

“Mr. E. Hooper, coroner, held an inquest on Tuesday at the RED LION INN, Tividale, upon the body of Edward Nunnerley (31), boatman, formerly residing at Broad Lane, Bilston, who was found in the canal near the Tividale Tunnel on Saturday morning last. It appears deceased left Bilston on Friday morning for the purpose of going to Tividale for a boatload of coal for Messrs. Hickman, his employers. When he came out of the tunnel he found it impossible to proceed owing to the fog. He tied the boat to the side of the canal, and leaving a boy in charge of it went to stable the horse. He was last seen alive about eleven o’clock on Friday night, when he left the BRICKLAYERS ARMS, Tividale.

Dudley and District News 30/9/1882

“This being the Old Hill adjourned licensing sessions the Bench granted a renewal of the licenses which were suspended at the last annual general sessions. The Chairman stated that the magistrates had very carefully considered each case, and they had decided to renew the licenses on the understanding that some assurance was given on the part of each defaulter, that their respective houses should be better conducted in the future. The Bench were determined that the law should be enforced, and if the defendants were guilty of any further offence against the Licensing Laws they would be severely punished and their licenses forfeited. The Chairman added that Henry Heath, who was convicted for selling ale during prohibited hours on Sunday, was now taking out a six days’ license instead of a seven days’, and his license was renewed on that condition; and if any of the others wished to have six days’ licenses the Bench would be pleased to grant them.”

James Stevens died in the 3rd quarter of 1883.

Dudley and District News 19/4/1884

“Lucilla [sic] Stevens, of the RED LION, New Road, Tividale, was charged with not making a true entry in her brewing book on the 9th January. Mr. T. J. Squires appeared for the Inland Revenue, and the defendant was undefended.

Mr. Squire, in opening the case, said the defendant was liable to a fine of £100 under the Act of Parliament 43 and 44 Vic, chapter 20. The defendant had had supplied to her a brewing book as prescribed in that Act, into which she was bound to make entries as to the quantity of wort she was going to brew, and the time and day she was going to brew it. She made an entry in the brewing book that she was going to brew seven bushels of malt on the 9th January at six o'clock in the morning, but she made no entry that she was going to make use of any sugar in the brewing. It was analysed and it was found that 9lbs of sugar had been used, but there was no entry made in the book to that effect, and under these circumstances the defendant had thrown herself liable to a fine of £100. He then showed how the Inland Revenue was cheated from materials not being correctly entered in the book. Each bushel was laid down to produce 36 gallons of ale, but if the brewer did not get the 36 gallons out of a bushel of malt, then the excise officer had to go by the materials, but by skilled management the brewer was able to get more than the 36 gallons, then the officer had to charge according to the quantity produced.

Arthur Aston, Inland Revenue officer for the Dudley district, said he knew the defendant, and visited her premises on the 9th Jan. He found that an entry was made in her brewing book, which was to the effect that she would brew at six o'clock on the morning of the 9th of January. There was the quantity of malt entered in the book, but there was no entry made as to the quantity of sugar. He visited the defendant's brewery on the 9th between four and five in the afternoon. He examined the brewing book, but there was no entry made for the use of any sugar. He then went into the brewhouse, and while there smelt sugar. Mrs. Stevens came into the brewhouse, and he told her that he smelt sugar, and asked her if she was using it, and she said she was not. He then left, but again visited the defendant's premises the next morning between ten and eleven, and the wort had not been collected then. He waited until it had been collected. Mrs. Stevens then gauged the wort, and so did he. There were 66 gallons in one vessel, 29 in another, and 30 in another. Witness's gauging corresponded with the defendant's. He told her he intended to have it analysed, and he then took samples from the vessels, and asked the defendant to supply him with bottles, which she did, and after they had been washed with hot water, and pronounced clean by the defendant, he put the samples into the bottles, and in her presence corked, sealed, and labelled the bottles. When he told defendant that he was going to have it analysed, she said she did not fear.

George Stokes said he was analyst at Somerset House, London. He received the bottles (produced) on the 11th of January. He proceeded to examine and analyse the contents. Malt alone could not produce what was contained in those bottles.

This was the case for the prosecution.

The defendant denied the charge, and said that there was no sugar used in the brewing of the ale, and called Elizabeth Reed, who said she was servant to the defendant. She assisted the defendant, on the morning of the 9th of January, to brew. She was in the brewhouse from six in the morning until four in the afternoon, and to the best of her knowledge there was no sugar used. The defendant always used the crushed malt.

There were 132 gallons produced from seven bushels of malt.

The Bench said the case was clearly proved, and fined the defendant £10 and costs."

Dudley and District News 6/12/1884

"At the Old Hill Police Court, on Wednesday morning, Samuel Preece and Joseph Reed, of Tividale, were charged with violently assaulting Joseph Thompson and Edward Wills, of the same place.

On the night of the 22nd of November the prisoners were drinking at the RED LION INN, Tividale, and left the house shortly before eleven o'clock. As they proceeded along the road they met the prosecutors, whom they commenced to hustle. Prosecutors remonstrated, and the prisoners then knocked them down and kicked them in a savage manner about the head and body. The Bench fined each defendant 30s and costs, of six weeks' hard labour in default."

“At the Rowley Regis Police Court yesterday, during the hearing of a charge against Mr. Thomas Whale, landlord of the RED LION INN, Tividale, of permitting drunkenness on his licensed premises, Mr. Ward, solicitor for the defence, raised the point that as the police had admitted they could not tell for certain whether the person was drunk until they saw him stand up, when he staggered, the magistrates could not hold the defendant to be guilty of wilfully permitting drunkenness. The chairman (Mr. Bassano) said it was a very ingenious defence, and one which the magistrates were bound to accept, although they fully believed that the man was drunk. When he was sitting down he probably did not appear to the defendant to be drunk, and they would, therefore, dismiss the case.”

“On Thursday morning Mr. F. W. Topham (deputy coroner) held an inquest at the RED LION INN, Tipton Road, Tividale, respecting the death of Matthew Henry Kelly Millington (18), labourer, Gilbert Street, Tividale, who hanged himself at his father’s residence on Tuesday morning.

John Millington, father of the deceased, stated that his son had been employed at the galvanising works, but for about eight months he had been out of employment. He, however, had been well maintained, but had complained of his clothes becoming shabby. He was always of a cheerful disposition, and had never threatened to destroy himself. His appetite was good, and he was generally satisfied. Witness was at work on Monday night, and left home at 10-30, and bade deceased ‘Good night.’ He was then in the best of spirits. On returning home on Tuesday morning witness had breakfast, deceased being then in bed. Witness, after having his breakfast, went to a public house to have a pint of ale. Whilst drinking his beer he was fetched home, and found deceased hanging by a boat line, suspended from a hook in the ceiling. He lifted him up and a man Allmark cut him down. He was quite dead. He could assign no reason for deceased committing suicide.

John Thomas Millington, a brother of the deceased, said he slept with deceased on the previous night, and for an hour he was singing, and appeared to be very happy. At 5-30 on Tuesday morning deceased called witness up to get his father’s breakfast. He did so, and afterwards shouted for deceased to come down and have his breakfast. Deceased came down, and witness left the house after breakfast to pick a bit of coal. Whilst so doing he received information that his brother was hanging in the house. He returned, and found that deceased had not touched his breakfast, which consisted of bacon and new bread. He was properly clothed with the exception of his boots and stockings, which were under the table.

Kate Millington, deceased’s sister, said she slept at her sister’s house, and on Tuesday morning she came home to have her breakfast. She opened the door and saw deceased hanging by a rope from the ceiling, with his face towards her. She raised an alarm, and a man named Allmark went in and cut him down.

William Henry Allmark said, in consequence of hearing women screaming, he went into the house in which deceased resided, and found deceased hanging. He immediately cut him down, and he breathed once. Witness did not think the neck was broken.

The Coroner said there was no doubt that deceased committed suicide, but they had no evidence as to the state of his mind.

The jury returned a verdict that deceased committed Suicide by Hanging, but there was no evidence to show the state of his mind at the time.”

County Advertiser 15/8/1896

“Mr. E. Hooper (coroner) held an inquest at the RED LION INN, Tividale, on Tuesday afternoon, concerning the death of May Harris, six weeks old, whose parents reside in Gilbert Street, Tividale, and who was found dead in bed on Tuesday morning.

Hannah Harris, mother, stated that deceased had been very healthy since her birth. She last saw her alive at 4.15am, when witness awoke. Witness went to, sleep again, and when she awoke at 6.15 she found deceased dead in bed. Deceased’s face was discoloured, and witness shook her, but received no answer. Witness then sent for the police.

William Harris, father, in the course of his evidence, stated that a child was born five years ago, at West Bromwich. It was dead, and was buried as still-born. A certificate was given by Dr. Sansome. Witness further stated that he paid 2s for the certificate.

The Coroner said it was an illegal thing. The doctor had no more right to give a certificate than he had. However, inquiries would have to be made into the matter.

The mother (recalled) stated that no doctor attended her during her confinement at West Bromwich, but a certificate was given by Dr. Sansome, who came and examined the child the morning after its birth.

Police-constable Robinson said he had made inquiries, and found that no suspicious circumstances were connected with the case.

The jury returned a verdict of Death from Natural Causes.”

County Advertiser 25/8/1900

“Mr. C. H. Darby applied for a full license for Mrs. Emma Southall, landlady of the ROYAL EXCHANGE INN, Tipton Road, Tividale. The house had always been carried on satisfactorily. The grounds on which she made the application were that sometimes accidents happened and people were brought into the house for spirits, and in a case of that sort she had had to send for some from other places. Travellers often called for spirits, and she had to send them away.

Mr. J. W. Clulow opposed the application on behalf of Mr. Whale, of the RED LION INN, and said that these two houses were only about fifty yards apart, and there were only seventy-nine cottages round about. The Bench refused the application.”

“On Saturday afternoon Mr. A. A. Betham (deputy coroner) held an inquest at the RED LION INN, Tipton Road, Tividale, concerning the death of a youth named William Victor Moss (14), formerly residing at Tipton Road, Tividale, who was drowned whilst bathing in the Birmingham Canal on Friday morning. The evidence showed that the deceased was seized with cramp and sank, his dead body being recovered immediately afterwards by a carrier named William Price.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death, and the foreman complimented Price upon the bravery he displayed in his attempt to rescue the deceased.

The coroner and jury also complained of the dirty and dilapidated state of the house in which the deceased's parents lived, and the coroner intimated his intention of calling the attention of the local authority to its insanitary condition.”

Leominster News 26/5/1905

“On Wednesday Mr. A. A. Betham held an inquest at the RED LION INN, Tividale, respecting the death of Harriet Fisher (38), wife of Charles Henry Fisher, stock-taker, of Tipton Road, Tividale, who committed suicide by hanging herself on the 23rd inst.

The husband stated that when he returned home from work on the morning of the 23rd inst, he found his wife was dead. For the past two years deceased had given way to excessive drinking, but why she had done so he did not know.

John Saunders, father of the deceased, who lived with them, stated that his daughter was very peculiar in her manner on the night prior to her death. She told them that a police-constable was after her and would lock her up that night. Deceased's mother informed her daughter that she had done nothing to be locked up for, but deceased repeated her statement, and before retiring to bed pulled up the blind and appeared to be very nervous. Early the following morning witness got up and when descending the stairs stumbled over the body of his daughter, which was upon the steps. He then discovered deceased was hanging from a hook in the ceiling of the stairs, and his eldest granddaughter, who was thirteen years of age, quickly cut the body down, but life was found to be extinct.

Police-constable Heatherley stated that deceased had been an excessive drinker during the last few years, and had associated herself with a relative who was on the black list and another woman who had been in an inebriates' home. There were great facilities for drinking in the locality, as, for a population of 342, there were three public houses.

The Deputy-Coroner said he could take no action respecting that, but it appeared to him that there were too many public houses in the neighbourhood.

The jury returned a verdict of Suicide whilst of Unsound Mind, and the deputy-coroner and the jury commended the deceased woman's daughter for the presence of mind she displayed in cutting down the body of her mother.”

“There were some important comments made in reference to the granting of three off licenses for the Lightwoods district by the Oldbury justices, at a meeting of the County Licensing Committee, at which application was made for the confirmation of the concessions. At the outset, Mr. Willis Bund (the chairman) said that in reference to these three applications he understood there was some agreement or understanding between the Oldbury justices and the applicants. They had no particulars of that understanding. The brewers were willing, if the licenses were granted, to surrender certain licenses in Oldbury. The question was whether the committee ought not to have before them very full information concerning those houses which were going to be surrendered.

The first applicant was James Swain, Katherine Road, Warley, grocer, on whose behalf Mr. J. J. Parfitt, KC, appeared. The offer made on behalf of the brewers, through the applicant, was to surrender three licenses in Oldbury, viz, the JOLLY COLLIER, Albert Street; BOAT INN, Birchfield Lane (both fully-licensed houses); and the RISING SUN, Queen Street, a beer ‘on’ license. The district (observed Mr. Parfitt) for which the new license was asked was a growing one, and many houses were springing up on all sides. The shop for which the off license was requested was at the corner of two streets, and in those streets and three others adjoining there were 278 houses, and something like 1,390 inhabitants, so that the need was real.

The Chairman said his point was that they ought to have further information as to the value of the houses which were to be surrendered. They might be valuable, and they might not, but it was very important for the Court to know what value the brewers put upon the houses.

Mr. Parfitt said information could be given, and handed in a statement, expressing the hope that with this information it would be possible for the committee to come to the conclusion that the site for the new license was an admirable one. and confirm the granting of the license.

The Chairman said that the site of the house was only fifty yards from the Staffordshire border.

Evidence was given showing that 280 people petitioned in favour of the license being granted.....

The Chairman said an attempt had been made – rightly or wrongly he would not say – to cover the district with off licenses, which would pay no monopoly value and contribute nothing to the compensation fund, and for which certain licenses were offered in order to get over any objections. The licenses it was proposed to surrender were not those it was most desired to take away, because they were not included in the twenty reported by the Oldbury justices. In the discharge of their duty to the ratepayers were the committee justified in covering the district with off licenses? Another point was whether the committee ought to grant the licenses applied for. They were offered valuable terms, but he was loth to tie the hands of the committee by asking them to accept them in view of the pending legislation. The applications would be granted, but it must be distinctly understood that the terms agreed upon between the justices of Oldbury and the applicants did not fetter the committee in any way if they were called upon to deal with the licenses in the near future.”

The license was surrendered on 13th July 1908.

“George Harper (24), of Manchester, was brought up in custody, on remand, charged with passing counterfeit coin at Oldbury, on the 2nd inst.

Annie Curley, barmaid, at the WAGGON AND HORSES, Church Street, said on the evening in question, prisoner went into the house and called for some wine and tendered in payment what she believed to be a base shilling. She refused to take it; he then gave her twopence instead. Prisoner then went away and returned in about 10 minutes and called for some beer, tendering again in payment what afterwards proved to be a base shilling. She received it and handed it to Mr. Perrins, who on examining it found it to be counterfeit.

PC Clarke said he heard that a man had been passing counterfeit coin at several public houses in Oldbury, and from the description he received of him he apprehended prisoner at 9.30 the same evening whilst on his way to the station. Witness asked him where he came from when prisoner said Wolverhampton. He saw the prisoner put his hand in his trouser pocket and drop something. At the Police Station he searched him and found in his possession in good money 21 sixpences, 1 fourpenny piece, 2 threepenny pieces, and four and sixpence halfpenny in coppers. Prisoner, in answer to the charge, said he expected it.

PC Nash said when prisoner was being taken to the Police Station he saw him drop from his trouser pocket the purse produced, which was found to contain 18 base shillings wrapped in tissue paper. Superintendent Hardman said he took the coins to Mr. Edward Dutton, watchmaker, Birmingham Street, who pronounced them to be base.

Edward Dutton said the last witness brought the coins to him on the 5th inst. He tested them and found them to be counterfeit. They withstood the acid well on account of them being coated with silver, but they were very deficient in weight.

Sophia Lloyd, of the ROLLERS ARMS, Halesowen Street, said on the evening of the 2nd inst the prisoner went into that house and in payment for some beer tendered a counterfeit shilling. She gave him the change and put the shilling on one side in consequence of some remark made by another person in the tap room. Prisoner was remanded in order that the case might be brought before the Mint Authorities.”

“The adjourned principal meeting of the Licensing Committee for the County of Worcester was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, on Saturday, Mr. J. Willis Bund presiding. The sixteen houses reported by the Oldbury Justices were considered, and the committee ultimately decided that all the licenses were unnecessary. As they were not aware how far the compensation money would go, the committee arranged the houses in order, and as many of the licenses as possible will be done away with. The order is as follows.....

2. ROLLERS ARMS, Halesowen Street.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 10/8/1905

“The Worcestershire Licensing Committee having decided to refuse fifteen Oldbury licenses, as the amount of the compensation fund available allows, sat yesterday at the Shire Hall, Worcester, to decide who are the persons entitled to compensation.....

Messrs. Mitchell and Butler (lessees) and Thomas Dennis (licensee) were declared to be interested in the ROLLERS ARMS, and the question of the claim of the freeholders was deferred for production of probate of a will.”

“An important memorandum has been issued by the inland revenue commissioners affecting the basis of compensation for licensed houses which have been compulsorily closed. It will be remembered that fifteen such houses were refused the renewal of licenses at Oldbury, and the question of compensation was argued by counsel before the Worcestershire Licensing Committee a few weeks ago. That committee intimated that the rent was the basis upon which the compensation should be assessed, but counsel urged that this was preposterous. The claimants preferred to leave the matter to the decision of the inland revenue commissioners. The latter have sent a letter to the committee, upholding its view that the rent should be the basis, allowing nothing for the trade done on the premises or to the brewers for tied houses. The Commissioners say that the computation of the sum to be paid in any case requires the determination of three factors, namely, the value of the licensed premises, the depreciation in value of the trade fixtures, and the value of the premises without the license. They have, as a rule, capitalised the annual value of the licensed premises upon the four per cent basis, or at twenty-five years’ purchase, and only exceeded this in cases where there was a distinct prospect of improved annual value, and only fallen below it where there was evidence to suggest that the present value could not be maintained in future. They have employed surveyors of taxes to take estimates of the probable annual value of premises when deprived of their licenses, and of the probable number of years’ purchase of such annual value that premises would fetch, an allowance being made for the cost of the alterations necessary to fit the premises for earning the annual value as estimated. Accordingly, although exact figures have not yet been received, the amounts payable for the Oldbury houses above referred to may be given approximately as follows.....

ROLLERS ARMS, £192.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 6/3/1906

“A meeting of the Worcester Licensing Committee was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, yesterday, to consider the awards made by the Commissioner of Inland Revenue, determining the amounts to be paid as compensation to owners, holders, or others interested in the non-renewal of licenses in the Oldbury division.....

The licenses refused and the amount of compensation awarded in each case was as follows.....

ROLLERS ARMS, Halesowen Street, £310.

The committee made awards as follows.....

ROLLERS ARMS, £10 to the lessees, Messrs. Mitchell and Butler, £45 to the tenant, Thomas Dennis, and the balance to the freeholders.

Payment of the compensation money was fixed to take place on March 28.”

The license was extinguished on 4th April 1906.

“Three colliers, named John Shaw, Joseph Bird, and Samuel Taylor, were summoned for violently assaulting Daniel McCormack, employed at Messrs. Chance’s Chemical Works. Mr. Shakespeare appeared for the defence.

The statements of numerous witnesses were to the effect that on Monday night week McCormack, the three defendants, and others were drinking at the ROSE AND CROWN Beerhouse, Oldbury. Most of them had imbibed enough liquor to render them contentious, and in this mood a discussion arose upon religious topics. The defendants professed to be Protestants, while the complainant acknowledged himself to be a Roman Catholic. Attacks were made upon the views of Roman Catholics, and were replied to warmly by McCormack. At length a man named Skelding, a cousin of the complainant, asserted that ‘the Roman Catholics worshipped images.’ Upon this insult to his church McCormack could no longer restrain himself, and he dealt his cousin a back-handed blow on the cheek, and told him ‘to hold his noise.’ Skelding instantly returned the blow, and made the complainant's mouth bleed. A struggle ensued, but was stopped by the landlord. At this moment Mrs. McCormack rushed excitedly into the bar, and enquired who had struck her husband. McCormack said that it was her cousin, Skelding. The woman immediately seized a pint cup from the table and flung it at Skelding. The missile struck him on the forehead, and inflicted a severe wound, from which much blood flowed. This renewed the disturbance. Skelding turned upon Mrs. McCormack and threw her down. Her husband came to her assistance, and the landlord was indefatigable in seeking to expel the combatants. Mrs. McCormack, however, made matters worse. On regaining her feet she seized a quart jug, and hurled it at Skelding. He avoided the blow, and the missile was smashed to pieces upon the forehead of the defendant Bird. The defendants then interfered, and helped the landlord to eject the infuriated McCormacks. When a policeman arrived a few minutes afterwards the disturbance was over, and the landlord was bathing the wounded head of the man Skelding. The defendants were dismissed, and the Magistrates admonished McCormack for having originated the disturbance.

Mrs. McCormack was summoned for breaking the jugs, and was fined 1s and costs, and 3d damage."

Mr. A. J. Long, for the prosecution, alleged that the prisoners watched the licensee’s wife leave the house, and then, by climbing a wall and breaking open a door, entered the premises and proceeded to rob the till.

They were surprised by a barmaid, but she was unable to detain them, and she gave information which led to their arrest.

Each prisoner was sentenced to four months’ imprisonment.”

Mr. Rolason, surveyor and valuer, of West Bromwich, attended in pursuance of an order to certify as to the value of the houses, and from his report it appeared that two of the houses were below the qualification.

The Magistrates intimated that they had not the power to adjourn the meeting further, and they thought that ample time had been given the applicants if they had chosen to avail themselves of the opportunity.

Mrs. Maria Round, beer retailer, 17, Tat Bank Road. [1912]

West Bromwich Weekly News 15/3/1913

"A case of interest to licensed victuallers came before the Bench, when Maria Round, licensee of the ROYAL EXCHANGE, Tat Bank, was summoned for selling beer in a bottle not properly labeled, to a child under 14 years of age, contrary to the Licensing Act, 1904.

Mr. Frank Dawes (Messrs. Bonser and Dawes) appeared for the defence.

PS Dainty gave evidence that on February 25th he was on duty near the above-named licensed premises, when he noticed a boy leave with a bottle, which contained no cork. He stopped him and upon examining the bottle found that it had not been corked, but the label required by the Act had been put across the top of the bottle, which witness produced. Witness took the bottle containing the beer to the house and saw defendant's niece, who admitted serving the beer, and said she was short of corks. He subsequently saw the defendant, who stated that she had been in business all her life, and would never have served the beer without being properly sealed.

In reply to Superintendent Davis, witness said he had received instructions to watch licensed houses in connection with the longpull, and it was whilst watching the house in question that he noticed this. There was no question of the longpull at this particular house.

Mr. Dawes, for the defence, said the Act required that children under 14 should be supplied in corked and sealed bottles, and the evidence of the police officer was that this beer was supplied in a sealed vessel, but not corked. On behalf of the defendant he pleaded guilty, but he would like to explain that on the night in question Mrs. Round was away from home, and the house was in charge of her niece, a young lady aged 23, who had lived with her 19 years, and understood the business. It seemed that they had been short of corks, and had ordered a fresh supply from the brewery, and when the boy came in for the beer there were a number left, but there was not one which would fit the bottle. The young lady, therefore, foolishly allowed the bottle to go sealed but not corked. Nobody else had been supplied in similar circumstances, and the boy only lived about 100 yards away, so he had not to take the beer far. The defendant was well known in the town as the keeper of this house, which she and her husband had kept for 19 years, and as it was in a poor quarter of the town, it spoke volumes for the conduct of the house during the 19 years that there had never been a conviction nor even a complaint against the management of the house until the present summons, and even in this poor district of Tat Bank defendant had never had to ask for the services of the police in the conduct of that house. It was very rare that she was away, but it just unfortunately happened that on that particular night she went to Birmingham, otherwise this would not have occurred. She had asked him to express to the Bench her great regret that this had happened, as she had been very zealous for the upkeep of her house and license, and having regard to her 19 years good character he asked the Bench whether, under the circumstances, the justice of the case would not be met by the payment of costs. He submitted that it was not a serious offence, and defendant was very anxious that her character should be without a conviction. Superintendent Davis said there had been no complaints, and the house had been conducted very satisfactorily indeed, but in regard to what Mr. Dawes said, it was a question for the Bench to decide. If there had been an accident or oversight the case could have been withdrawn, but there was no accident or oversight. It was a deliberate action in not having corked the bottle.

The Bench having considered the case, the Chairman said the label only covered the neck of the bottle, and it was a case in which there had been a distinct breach of the law. However, they did not regard it as a serious case, and defendant would be fined 5s and costs."

"John Horton, aged 28, and John William Hickman, aged 20, labourers, were at Worcester Assizes yesterday charged with having robbed Frederick James Payne with violence at Oldbury on 15 March. Hickman pleaded guilty, and Horton not guilty.

It was stated by the prosecution that Payne, a hawker from Langley, foolishly displayed £35 in notes in the ROYAL EXCHANGE INN, Oldbury. Defendants were standing near, and when Payne left, made signals to each other and followed him out. Horton got into conversation with Payne, and they both went along the towing-path of the canal, where, it was added, Horton suddenly turned on Payne and savagely assaulted him. Before he fell Hickman appeared on the scene. When Payne came to himself all his money had been taken. Horton swore that when he left the inn he went straight home – only two doors away – and he denied having any understanding with Hickman,

The hearing was adjourned till today."

'Robbery with violence has become prevalent of late, and we must stamp it out,' said Mr. Justice Horridge. Supt. Mobbs described Hickman as a brutal, idle and pugnacious fellow, stupid but cunning. Horton, he said, was a keen and persistent thief, and undoubtedly the leader of the two men."

The Chairman stated that the magistrates had very carefully considered each case, and they had decided to renew the licenses on the understanding that some assurance was given on the part of each defaulter, that their respective houses should be better conducted in the future. The Bench were determined that the law should be enforced, and if the defendants were guilty of any further offence against the Licensing Laws they would be severely punished and their licenses forfeited. The Chairman added that Henry Heath, who was convicted for selling ale during prohibited hours on Sunday, was now taking out a six days’ license instead of a seven days’, and his license was renewed on that condition; and if any of the others wished to have six days’ licenses the Bench would be pleased to grant them.”

Attention had been called to the state of the house No.105, Tipton Road, Tividale, belonging to Emma Southall. It is used as a beerhouse. Both cellars were damp from the leakage of either a closet or a disused drain. The ceiling and roof were in a ruinous condition, and the house generally dilapidated. He did not consider it fit for human habitation, and asked that an order might be made for it to be closed. It was without any water supply. He trusted the delayed order for the supply of water at Tipton Road and Gilbert Street, Tividale, would be enforced this month. The Water Works Company are laying a main down the Tipton Road at the present time.....

With regard to the two cases of defective closet accommodation mentioned in the report, the Chairman thought that proper notices should at once be served for two additional closets to be erected. He had spoken to the Chairman of the Water Works Company on the question of the supply of water to Tividale, and that gentleman had repudiated the idea that the company were at all dilatory in the carrying out of orders.”

During the same period 14 houses had been limewashed, 83 houses had been disinfected, and the clothing of 183 persons disinfected. These were chiefly from children with measles.....

“Emma Deakin, of Tipton Road, Tividale, was charged with being drunk and disorderly on the 7th inst. She was also charged with damaging a window, value 2s 6d, the property of Emma Southall, landlady of the ROYAL OAK [sic] INN, Tividale.

Police-constable Robinson proved the case of drunkenness, and the landlady stated that defendant deliberately smashed the window.

Defendant was fined £1 2s, including costs.”

County Advertiser 25/6/1898

“Emma Southall, landlady of the ROYAL EXCHANGE INN, Tipton Road, Tividale, was summoned for permitting drunkenness on her licensed premises, and also for supplying ale to a drunken person on the 28th May. Mr. Clulow, of Brierley Hill, prosecuted on behalf of the Chief Constable, and Mr. H. Tinsley, of Dudley, defended.

Mr. Clulow explained that at five minutes past nine on the night in question, Police-constable Nichol was on duty in Tipton Road, Tividale, when he saw a man named Pugh, who lived near, going in the direction of the public house. He was staggering about from side to side, and in a very drunken condition. The officer saw him enter the house, and a short time after followed him in. In the tap room there were a number of men drinking, and amongst them he saw Pugh sitting down near the table drinking from a jug. It was evident to everyone that the man was drunk, and the officer pointed out his condition to the landlady, and he asked her how she came to supply him. She replied, ‘I did not notice he was drunk, he came in and called for a pint of ale and my son served him.’ The officer left, but shortly returned in company with Police-constable Robinson, and just as they were entering Pugh came out assisted by the landlady, who was keeping him from falling down. Robinson questioned the landlady as to who served Pugh with beer, and she replied, ‘Yes, I know he is drunk, but I did not think he was so bad. My son supplied him, and he has only had one pint.’ When Robinson served the summons defendant said Pugh came in the afternoon, and she served him with a pint of ale. He came in again in the evening when he was quiet. She further said that she should say Pugh was drunk before the magistrates. When he served Pugh with the summons he denied the offence, but when the landlady told him that he was in the house on the date in question he admitted it.

Police-constables Nichol and Robinson gave evidence in support of this statement.

For the defence, Mr. Tinsley submitted that in the conduct and manner of Pugh whilst he was in the house there was nothing to show that he was drunk.

Mrs. Southall was called, and she denied that Pugh was drunk. She also denied that she made any admissions to the police officers.

Defendant’s son, John Southall, and a man named Joseph Kinsey also gave evidence.

The Bench dismissed the first case on payment of costs, and in the second case inflicted a fine of £5 and costs. The total costs and fines amounted to £8 11s.

William Pugh, of Gilbert Street, Tividale, was charged with being drunk on the licensed premises named on the same date. Police-constable Nichol proved the case, and defendant was fined 1s and costs.”

Dudley Herald 30/7/1898

“Emma Deakin, of Gilbert Street, Tividale, was charged with being drunk and disorderly on the 11th inst, with using threats to Emma Southall, and with damaging two panes of glass valued at 5s, the property of Emma Southall, and also with being drunk and disorderly on the 25th inst.

PCs Nichol and Robinson and Emma Southall gave evidence.

In the case of threats she was bound over to keep the peace for three months, and in the other cases the fines and costs defendant was ordered to pay amounted to £3 2s 6d.”

County Advertiser 17/9/1898

“Emma Deakin, a well-known character, residing at Tividale, was charged with using threats towards Emma Southall, landlady of the ROYAL EXCHANGE INN, Tividale, on the 6th inst. Defendant did not appear.

Complainant alleged that on the date named defendant came to her house in a drunken condition, and threw a brick at the window, breaking it. Defendant said she would dash her brains out, and made use of very foul language. Witness thought she was bound over the last time she was summoned.

Inspector Given: She went to jail in default of finding sureties.

Complainant said she was afraid to sit in the house. Defendant was again bound over to keep the peace for three months.”

To the Overseers of the Poor of the Parish of Rowley Regis, in the County of Stafford, and to the Superintendent of Police of the District in which the House and Premises hereinafter mentioned are situate, and to all others whom it may concern.

I, Emma Southall, of ROYAL EXCHANGE INN, Tipton Road, Tividale, in the County of Stafford, Beer-house-keeper, do Hereby Give Notice that it is my intention to apply at the next General Annual Licensing Meeting for the Old Hill Division of the County of Stafford, to be holden at the Police Court, Old Hill, aforesaid, on Wednesday, the 22nd day of August, 1900, for a Certificate authorising the grant to me of an Excise License to Sell by Retail Intoxicating Liquor, to be consumed on the said Premises thereunto belonging, situate and being the ROYAL EXCHANGE INN, Tipton Road, Tividale, in pursuance of the Intoxicating Liquor Licensing Act, 1828, and Acts amending the same, of which house and premises I am now the owner and occupier.

Given under my hand this 24th day of July, 1900.

Emma Southall.

Sharpe and Darby, Solicitors, West Bromwich.”

County Express 25/8/1900

“The annual licensing sessions for the petty sessional division of Rowley Regis were held on Wednesday..... Emma Southall, landlady of the ROYAL EXCHANGE INN, Tividale, applied, through Mr. C. H. Darby, for a full license for that house. Mr. T. W. Clulow, from the office of Mr. J. W. Clulow, opposed the application on behalf of the RED LION. Mrs. Southall said she had kept the house for some time and it was her own property. There was a large population round, and she had a numerously signed testimonial to support the application. She was frequently asked for whiskey and brandy etc by travellers and was unable to supply them. A short time ago there was an accident at a marl hole near, and they came for some spirits and she could not supply them. Cross-examined, there was a full licensed house a short distance away. Asked as to why so many of the names on the memorial were evidently written by the same person, she said the names of those people who could not write, but who had been present when the names were written, and some had put their crosses by them.

The application was refused.”

County Advertiser 25/8/1900

“Mr. C. H. Darby applied for a full license for Mrs. Emma Southall, landlady of the ROYAL EXCHANGE INN, Tipton Road, Tividale. The house had always been carried on satisfactorily. The grounds on which she made the application were that sometimes accidents happened and people were brought into the house for spirits, and in a case of that sort she had had to send for some from other places. Travellers often called for spirits, and she had to send them away.

Mr. J. W. Clulow opposed the application on behalf of Mr. Whale, of the RED LION INN, and said that these two houses were only about fifty yards apart, and there were only seventy-nine cottages round about. The Bench refused the application.”

Mr. J. W. Clulow prosecuted for the chief constable, and Mr. W. A. Foster defended.

The case for the prosecution was that on the date named Police-constables Heatherley and Walton saw a man named Jabez Bassett leaving the house in a drunken state.

“Charles Essex, ROYAL OAK INN, was charged with having his house open for the sale of liquors after eleven o’clock on the night of the 18th inst.

Police-constable Jones said he was on duty on the Tuesday night last near defendant’s beerhouse, and seeing it open at a quarter to twelve, went in, and saw defendant hand a man a pint of ale. When he charged him defendant said he would not be bounced over by any policeman. After the officer had left, having threatened to take out a summons against him, as he was going up the street, defendant called out that he could have him up if he liked, he wasn’t going to be insulted by him in that way, he did not care for him. Defendant had been at the house fourteen or fifteen years. There had been a tea party at his house that evening. There were forty or fifty in the house.

“Mr. A. M. Chance presided at the special Licensing Sessions at Oldbury yesterday, when Mr. J. S. Sharpe, on behalf of Holders Brewery Ltd, applied for permission to rebuild the following houses: SYCAMORE INN (L. V.), Clay Lane; SPREAD EAGLE (full licence), Park Lane; and the ROYAL OAK (beerhouse), corner of Langley Green Road and Causeway Green Road.

Mr. Sharpe said the police had objected to the renewal of the licence of the SYCAMORE, because the premises were structurally unsuitable. The plans provided for the rebuilding of the premises, which were old-fashioned and dilapidated. The domestic accommodation would be greatly improved, and in consideration of a slight increase in the drinking area they would surrender the licence of the RAILWAY INN, Langley Green Road, an ante-69 beerhouse. With regard to the other two applications there would be no increase in the drinking area, but the domestic quarters would be much improved in each case. The ROYAL OAK would be set back some distance, and 150 square yards of land would be given up for improving the corner. Mr. A. Edwards, architect, of Birmingham, submitted plans, and said the cost would be about £1,000 in each case. The alterations would be completed in the licensing year.

Mr. Chance asked that the RAILWAY INN should be closed at Midsummer, and the applications were then granted, subject to the surrender being satisfactory.”

“A fire-damaged former Oldbury pub will be converted into a huge 21 bed HMO, if plans get the go-ahead. A proposal to convert the former ROYAL OAK INN on Causeway Green Road into a house of multiple occupation has gone in to Sandwell Council. The application, from Lichfield-based Neil Boddison Associates, includes the building of a third floor as well as the installation of loft dormer windows and a new boundary wall with railings. Plans show five bedrooms with en-suites on the ground floor and a communal kitchen and six bedrooms with en-suites and a communal kitchen on the first and second floors. On the third floor there's four bedrooms with en-suites and a landlord's store. There are four car parking spaces. The building has been ravaged by fire, with part of it having collapsed. House of Multiple Occupancy (HMO) living involves sharing part of the accommodation. It applies to both bedsit-style housing and shared housing where a group of people who are not related share a house or flat.”

“A former Oldbury pub will be converted into a huge 22 bed HMO after planners gave the scheme the thumbs up. A proposal to convert the former ROYAL OAK INN on Causeway Green Road into a house of multiple occupation has been approved by Sandwell Council. The huge HMO will have three floors, with an extra floor added onto the former pub. There will be just four parking spaces with access from Langley Green Road. A report commissioned by the developer states this is 'ample' as many households do not have cars. The application, from Lichfield-based Neil Boddison Associates, shows five bedrooms with en-suites and a communal kitchen on the ground floor and seven bedrooms with en-suites and a communal kitchen on the first and second floors. On the third floor there's three bedrooms with en-suites and a communal kitchen as well as a landlord's store. The proposal features a new boundary wall with railings. The decision was registered on November 12.”

“On Monday an inquest was held at the ROYAL OAK INN, Rounds Green, touching the death of Mary Jones (63), widow, of New Street, Oldbury, who died on the 5th inst. It appeared that on the 6th of May deceased fell and cut her head badly, and from that time she had suffered from pains in the head. Mr. Charles Lyddon, surgeon, said he had attended the deceased, and was of opinion that death resulted from softening of the brain and the membranes covering the brain. A verdict of Death from Natural Causes was returned. At the same place an enquiry was held respecting the death of Simeon Harvey, aged eighteen months, son of John Harvey, labourer, of Back Lane, Titford, whose dead body was found in a pool of water in his father’s garden on Sunday afternoon. It was stated that the child had been playing in the garden, and it is supposed that he accidentally fell into the water. The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.

Mr. R. Docker, coroner, held an enquiry at the ROYAL OAK INN, Rounds Green, respecting the death of Jane Milward (23), wife of John Milward, labourer, of Dingley Street, Rounds Green, who died in childbed. As the enquiry was likely to be protracted, it was adjourned for a week.”

S. Watson (registrar). The statement of affairs showed total liabilities £301 3s 6d, and assets nil.

Mr. C. Woollett (deputy official receiver) applied for the examination to be adjourned, on the ground that the deficiency account supplied by the bankrupt did not contain any details, it being simply a blank sheet of paper. The only reason assigned was that he was unable to supply any information. A question as to a bill of sale would also have to be gone into.

The examination was adjourned until the 3rd of August.

Mr. Forrest appeared for the bankrupt, and Mr. W. Podbury (from the office of Mr. Shakespeare) represented the creditors.”

At the County Court on Monday, the public examination was fixed of Samuel Dabbs [sic], lately trading as licensed victualler, at the ROYAL OAK INN, Dingle Street, and now residing at Dock Row, Rounds Green, near Oldbury, and following the employment of an edge-tool cutter. The debtor’s statement of affairs showed a deficiency of £301 3s 6d. He commenced business at the ROYAL OAK, Rounds Green, in November, 1881, with a capital of £90. He arranged to pay £250 for the fixtures, good will, stock, &c; paid £90 on account, and gave a bill of sale as a security for the balance. The business appeared to have been unsuccessful, and the present position of affairs was attributed to that fact. On the 24th June a distress was levied for arrears of rent, amounting to £12 10s. He then consulted the bill of sale holders and an arrangement was made with them, and the landlord gave up possession on the following day. There were no assets.

Mr. Woollett applied for an adjournment on the ground that the deficiency account was not satisfactory, but was in fact a blank sheet. The application was granted, and the examination accordingly adjourned.”

Dudley Mercury 12/5/1888

“On Thursday night, Mr. E. Docker (coroner) held an inquest at the ROYAL OAK INN, Rounds Green, respecting the death of Joseph Evans (38), miner, Rounds Green, who was killed by a fall of coals whilst employed in the Lye Cross Colliery. The inquiry was adjourned to enable the Government Inspector of Mines to attend.”

County Advertiser 30/6/1888

“On Thursday evening Mr. E. Docker (coroner) resumed the adjourned inquiry at the ROYAL OAK INN, Rounds Green, Oldbury, into the circumstances attending the death of Josiah Evans, miner, Dingle Street, who met with his death of the 9th of May, whilst employed in the Lye Cross Conygre Colliery, Oakham, near Rowley. Mr. W. B. Scott, Government Inspector of Mines, was present, and Mr. Latham (manager) represented the colliery.

John Hyde, pikeman, stated that he and deceased descended the pit to examine the workings on the day of the accident. Witness left deceased in the place where the accident occurred whilst he went to another part of the mines. Upon returning he found that a quantity of coal had fallen, burying the deceased. Witness called for assistance and deceased was speedily extricated. He had previously examined the pit and found it safe.

In answer to Mr. Scott, witness said it was the duty of Joseph Smith, the deputy, to examine the pit, and he met Smith at the ‘station’ on the morning in question, and he said that everything was safe. If he had not met Smith he would not have entered the mines, as Smith was the responsible person, and had to make the report. There was plenty of timber in the stall where the accident occurred. Witness believed the accident was the result of a ‘slip.’ He thought the loose coal would have been detected if the working had been examined previous to Evans’s examination. He could not say that the doggy had told him that the workings were safe. He had not read the new rules.

Mr. Scott reminded witness that the new rules were more stringent than the old ones, and should be read by all miners.

Thomas Bunn said he saw the deputy in the stall where deceased was killed, but he did not sound the coal with a pike to see if it was safe.

John Smith, deputy, said he descended the pit at 5.30am, and examined it before meeting the men at the ‘station.’ He had not tested the coal with a pike. He was the ‘responsible person,’ and signed the report book.

Mr. Scott: You did not knock the side and roof, but merely looked at it? – Witness: Yes.

Mr. Scott: Do you know that you were not carrying out the new Act of Parliament? The fourth section of the Act requires that the responsible person shall make an examination of all sides and roofs. – Witness: I always endeavour to carry it out the Act.

Mr. Scott: And this is the way you carry it out at the Earl of Dudley’s pits?

Witness added that he had not read the new rules.

Mr. Scott: They are passed to reduce the number of deaths caused by falls of coals.

Dr. Lydden also gave evidence as to the injuries sustained.

The Coroner said that it was evident that there had been a certain amount of neglect, and that the Act of Parliament had not been carried out.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death, and requested the Coroner to caution the deputy to be more careful in the future.”

“Yesterday, at the Police Court, Caroline Smith, of the ROYAL OAK INN, Rounds Green, was charged with selling ale on the 11th inst, without a license. Mr. J. S. Sharpe defended.

Mr. G. Smith, caretaker at the Oldbury Public Buildings, proved with being supplied with half a pint of beer in defendant's house on the day named.

Police-constable Hobson stated that in consequence of the Bench having declined on the previous Tuesday to grant a transfer of the house in question to Mrs. Smith the premises were closed until the following Wednesday evening, when they were reopened, and witness upon going there found several men in the house and intoxicating drinks being sold.

Mr. Sharpe, for the defence, explained that Mrs. Smith reopened the premises on the advice of an Excise officer, and that she proposed to renew her application for a transfer; but the Bench, considering that an offence had been unintentionally committed, fined the defendant 14s including costs.

Mr. Sharpe then applied for the transfer of the license to Mrs. Smith.

Superintendent Chare objected on the ground that the applicant, whilst keeping the Dewdrop Inn, Broad Heath, in 1888, was fined 20s and costs for permitting drunkenness.

The magistrates declined to grant the transfer."

Birmingham Daily Post 22/2/1882

“A meeting of miners was held last night, at the ROYAL OAK INN, Oldbury. Mr. H. Rust, who presided, said he was sorry to say that the rules relating to the Permanent Provident Society, which had been sent round to the collieries in the district, had been kept in the offices instead of being distributed amongst the men. This action on the part of the employers forced them to the conclusion that some of them were opposed to the establishment of the society. If that were so, it would be the duty of the men who felt an interest in the scheme to adopt some measures to ascertain why the masters were opposed to it.

Mr. H. Barnes said at some of the collieries in the Walsall district the advance of ½d per day, conceded recently to thin coal miners, had not yet been paid.

A resolution was adopted, approving of the Provident Society; and it was also decided to appoint a deputation to wait upon the masters on the subject.”

Birmingham Daily Post 7/10/1882

“A crowded meeting of miners was held last night, at the ROYAL OAK, Talbot Street, Oldbury, at which the following resolution was adopted unanimously: That we tender our thanks to Mr. E. Fisher Smith, for his promptness in giving a reply to the secretary of the Federation of Miners who waited upon him this morning. Also, we hereby agree to resume work at once at an advance, viz, 4d per day on thick coal, and 2d per day on thin coal.”

West Bromwich Weekly News 24/9/1887

“Mr. Young, instructed by Mr. Forrest, applied for a full license to be granted to Mr. William Townsend, at the OLD HOUSE AT HOME. He explained that they had held a beer license for a long time, and they were not applying for a new license but simply the removing of the license from the ROYAL OAK, in Talbot Street, to the OLD HOUSE AT HOME. He knew it made a difference whether they were making an additional license in the place, or simply removing one in Oldbury. The ROYAL OAK had been purchased for the purpose of having a Conservative Club, and they would not want the license any longer, and if the Magistrates would transfer the spirit license to Mr. Townsend they would not apply for the renewal of that license. If this was not done, they would apply for the removal of that license to another place. No objection would be made to the character of Mr. Townsend, he being a gentleman who had carried on that house respectably for some time. There was not another full licensed house until they got to the CROSS GUNS, over 300 yards away, and this house being close to the station, where there was no refreshment room, it would be a convenient place where persons coming there on business would be able to take some refreshment and get to the station even after the train was signalled in time to catch it. He then described the accommodation of the premises, and said there were several large works in the immediate neighbourhood, and no other house where spirits were sold. The premises were on a lease at a rent of £46, including the license as a beerhouse. It was let for £30 apart from the license. He presented two petitions in favour of the license, one signed by the members of the Oldbury Conservative Club, the other by a large number of ratepayers and householders in Oldbury.

Mr. W. Townsend was then called, and confirmed the statements made by Mr. Young.

Mr. Shakespeare appeared to oppose the license on behalf of Mr. Joseph Parkes of the RAILWAY INN.

Mr. Shakespeare (to witness) [Mr. Townsend]: How much are you rated at? – Witness: £29.

Mr. Shakespeare: You are underrated are you not? Why have you not gone and asked the Assessment Committee to increase your rates? (Laughter.) It was nothing but an old barn when you took to it, was it not? – Witness: Yes.

Mr. Shakespeare: And they rebuilt it and had the whole work done in a week, beginning at 12 o'clock on the Sunday night, and finishing at the end of the week in time to begin the wake. – Witness: No, sir.

Mr. Shakespeare: How much would you pay for the house if there was no license? – Witness: £20.

Mr. Shakespeare: What, for that hole? – Mr. Young: Oh, don't call it a hole.

Mr. Shakespeare: Now on your solemn oath are you not rated at £19 and not at £29? – Witness: The last rate was £19.

Mr. Shakespeare: Then what do you mean by saying that you was rated at £29? Is this your father's house? – Witness: Yes.

Mr. Shakespeare: Does it not belong to Palmer's Trustees? – Witness: Yes.

And does your father pay more than £20 per year for this very house to Palmer's Trustees? – Witness: I cannot say what he pays.

Mr. Shakespeare: Are there not waiting rooms at the Station, where people can be comfortable without going to a public house and being uncomfortable? Is not the RAILWAY INN nearer to the station than your house? – Witness: Yes.

Mr. Shakespeare: And is not the FOUNTAIN INN within 100 yards, and the BRIDGE INN within another 20, besides ___ on the way? – Witness: They are further than that apart.

Mr. Shakespeare: Then is there another beerhouse 70 yards away, called the ROYAL OAK, and the CROSS GUNS, the HARMONIC INN, and the NOAHS ARK, all within 300 yards? ___ there is the WHITE HORSE.....

John Allen, architect and surveyor, of West Bromwich, gave evidence He thought the house independent of the license was worth 12s per week, and he thought the garden land alone worth £12 per annum out of that.

Mr. Shakespeare, addressing the Bench, said he was quite sure the Magistrates and everybody in Court must have been truly astounded with the statements of the learned council, and he thought that he must have been speaking of some place 100 miles away from Oldbury when he described these handsome premises and the large population, and its being just the place to stop and have a glass extra and get drunk before the train came in. (Laughter.)

He then renewed the evidence in favour of the application, which he considered very vague and misleading, and contended that the requirements of the neighbourhood did not call for a license, and the qualification was not made out.

The Magistrates returned to consider their decision, and after some ten minutes absence returned, when Mr. Avery said the Justices had carefully considered the evidence of all the circumstances in favour of the license to Mr. Townsend, and they had decided to refuse it.

Mr. Forrest said the renewal of the license of the ROYAL OAK would in that case be granted as a matter of course.

Mr. Avery: Yes.”

There was no application to renew the license on 21st August 1888.

“Benjamin Davis, of Causeway Green, was charged with being upon the premises of a publican named David Bastable, also of Causeway Green, and drinking during prohibited hours on the 4th inst.

A policeman gave evidence to the effect that he saw the defendant leaving the publican's house with a pint of beer, and that he saw him try to hide it.

Mr. Shakespeare appeared for the defence, and contended that as the offence occurred on the 4th August, and the summons was not issued till the 21st, the defendant could not be convicted because the old Act of Parliament was not in force at the time the summons was taken out, and the new Licensing Act did not come into force until the 10th instant. The Magistrates concurred, and the summons was dismissed.”

James Arthur Burton – see also SPRING COTTAGE, and JUNCTION, Queens Cross, Dudley.

Dudley Chronicle 31/10/1914

There were nineteen temporary licenses brought for confirmation, and only in one did the police make any objection. This was the case of J. A. Burton, formerly of Oldbury, to whom a temporary license of the JUNCTION INN, has been granted.

Mr. J. T. Higgs appeared for the applicant, who, in reply to his solicitor, said he had had 20 years' experience in the trade, as his mother had held a license for that period without any complaint. From 1904 till 1908 he was the licensee of the SPRING COTTAGE, Oldbury, without conviction or complaint. After that he kept the SAVING HAND, at Oldbury without any conviction, although there was a complaint that he was drunken, which was not true, as he was suffering from sciatica at the time. The license of the JUNCTION was granted to him on the 4th of September, and there had been no complaints. He left the SAVING HAND owing to it being closed through redundancy. He received compensation, and had invested the money in acquiring the tenancy of the JUNCTION which was a tenants license and not an application from the brewers, and if he lost that money he would be ruined.

In reply to the Bench, the Chief Superintendent said applicant had conducted the JUNCTION properly, but the police at Oldbury alleged that applicant suffered from delirium tremens, and that his wife was addicted to drink.

Applicant: It was no use me saying I was not on the drink, I was; but it was because I was put about owing to the house being closed. Sometimes my wife is very funny in the head, but it is not a matter of drink, she suffers from illness.

The Chief Superintendent: It is only fair to say that this man kept a house from 1908 to 1914 without any complaints, and that the police officer who alleges the drunkenness is now away at the front.

The Magistrates' Clerk: There was no complaint about this man as a license holder? – No, sir.

The Clerk: The complaint is that after the house was closed he drank? – Yes, sir.

Mr. Edward Smith: How has he gone on since he has had this temporary license? – The Chief Superintendent: There have been no complaints. It is a quiet house as rule.

After consultation with his colleagues (one of whom strongly objected to the granting of the license) Alderman Hughes said to the applicant, 'If you will promise us that there shall be no complaint and that you will not touch the drink, we will grant the license. If you suffer from delirium tremens you may injure yourself and others, and would be unfit to have a license.'

The Applicant: I don't think there is any need to be afraid of that no. I only took the drink because of the trouble.

It became a private dwelling in 1930s.

"On Thursday, a very painful accident occurred to a child, named Elijah Stevens, whose parents reside in Oldbury. He was playing about a railway, used for carrying coals from one of the collieries to the canal, when a train of waggons came along, and one of them passed over his body, killing him on the spot. The inquest was held yesterday, at the SEVEN STARS INN, when a verdict of Accidental Death was returned."

“At the Halesowen Petty Sessions, last week, there were heard no fewer than ten informations against brickmakers of that locality for wholesale evasion of the excise duties. Dr. Bateman, the excise solicitor, appeared in support of the informations, and Mr. Thomas Harding, of Birmingham, was specially engaged to defend each case.....

Mr. Joseph Whitehouse and Mr. Stephen Whitehouse, of Oldbury, were fined £60, and condemnation of 33,693 bricks.....

It appeared that the whole of the parties had been detected through the vigilance of Mr. Coomber, Supervisor of Excise, Wednesbury. Mr. Harding urged in each of the cases different mitigatory circumstances, and the penalties, which were more than £3,000, were ultimately reduced to about £300. We are informed that the large brickmakers of Birmingham and other towns have for some time past found it impossible to compete with those of this neighbourhood, and the above proceedings may possibly afford an explanation of the principal cause of this fact, as it has really for some time past been suspected to be.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 8/12/1858

“A special sitting of the Magistrates was held on Friday last, in the Big House, Church Street, Oldbury, to inquire into the truth of the statement of Joseph Baker, a steel worker, at Langley Green, near that town, to the effect that he was acquainted with the circumstances attending the death of a woman, named Catherine Moore, aged thirty-six, a hawker of drapery goods, who was found drowned in the canal near the Seven Stars Bridge, on the Oldbury and Birmingham turnpike-road, on the 24th of February, 1854.

An inquest was held upon the body of the woman Moore at the time, and a verdict of Found Drowned was returned.

During last week the man Baker, whilst intoxicated in a public house, avowed that he knew the two men who murdered her. The police were informed of this statement, and Serjeant Simmonds went to the house of Baker's parents, with whom he lived, and who said that he had made similar assertions to them.

A search was made for Henry Webb, one of Baker's companions, and he was brought up as a witness, at the private offices of the Clerks to the Justices.

Mr. James Ballard, licensed victualler, of the LOCOMOTIVE INN, Oldbury, the only accused person now living, attended to defend himself from the aspersions cast upon his character by Baker.

Henry Webb, the person who overheard the prisoner's observations in the SEVEN STARS, was examined. He stated that her was in the room of the public house when Baker, who was sitting as if in a reflective mood, said, ‘Yes; I saw it all with my own eyes; they are the murderers.’ One of the company present, astonished by this remark, said, ‘What did you see?’ and Baker replied, ‘Oh, I saw the body in the water; I wanted to pull it out, but Ballard got hold of me and wouldn't let me, whilst Markwick stood watching on the bridge.’ On being asked how it was that he saw the men, Baker said he encountered them on his road home.

Serjeant Simmonds stated that Baker had made similar statements when he was sober as well as when he was intoxicated. Baker had also said that he intended never to ‘spilt,’ but that he could not keep the secret, for his conscience would not let him be quiet.

Mr. Ballard stated that he was altogether innocent of the extraordinary charge now brought against him. He could prove an alibi, as he was in business in London at the time named by Baker.

In reply to the Magistrates, Baker said, ‘I have no remembrance of having made such statements; and if I have, I must have been out of my senses.’

The Magistrates expressed their astonishment at Baker’s conduct, and severely reprimanded him. They also expressed a hope that, for the sake of surviving family and friends of Mr. Markwick, and in justice to Mr. Ballard, full publicity would be given to the issue of the inquiry. Mr. Ballard left the Court without a stain on his character. They did not believe a sentence of what Baker had said; they thought he was insane.”

“Samuel Lowe, a respectable-looking young man, was charged with breaking open a dovecote and stealing eight pigeons.

The prosecutrix, Sarah Harris, deposed that on the evening of February 2nd, about eight or nine in the evening, she fastened up her pigeons (eight in number) securely, but the next morning she found the dovecote broken open, and the pigeons gone. Since then two had returned. She had obtained the pigeon now produced (which was one of those lost by her) from a Mr. Green, a pigeon dealer, in Oldbury, who had purchased it from Mr. Markwick.

Edwin Fisher Markwick deposed that the prisoner had given him a pigeon, which he sold to the Mr. Green mentioned by the last witness; but upon cross-examination, he said that he did not sell it till the 2nd of February, and that the prisoner had given it to him two days before – which was actually before the pigeons were stolen from the prosecutrix. He declined, moreover, to pledge his oath as to the identity of the pigeon produced with the one given him by the prisoner.

After hearing Mr. H. Plunkett, who defended the prisoner, and who said the prisoner ought never to have been taken into custody, the Bench at once dismissed the case.”

John Dunn, 22, miner, was indicted for maliciously inflicting grievous bodily harm upon Edwin Fisher Markwick, at Oldbury, on the 1st December. Mr. Best prosecuted; the prisoner was undefended.

The prosecutor is an innkeeper, at Oldbury, and at closing time on the night in question the prisoner remained in the passage after the other customers were gone. Prosecutor asked him why he did not leave with the rest, when he replied, 'Thee doesn't want to kick up a row, dost Ned?' Prosecutor said he only wished him to leave the house. A man named Frayne then came from the back of the house, seized prosecutor by the throat, and held him against the wall while prisoner struck him several times on the forehead, and stabbed him on the hand with a knife.

Mr. Beety, surgeon, was of opinion that the wounds were inflicted by a small knife.

The jury found the prisoner guilty, and he was sentenced to four years' penal servitude."

Very few persons visited these grounds this afternoon, and the only event decided was a match at rabbits, for £10 a side, between R. Smith's Bess of Westbromwich and *E. F. “At Oldbury Petty Sessions, yesterday, before Mr. W. H. Dawes and Mr. H. Chance, a ‘dog trainer,’ named Edward Wilkinson, was charged with assaulting Edwin Markwick, a beerhouse keeper, residing near the Seven Stars Bridge. Mr. W. Shakespeare appeared for the complainant.

On the evening of the 8th inst, the complainant met the defendant in the BIRD SHOW, Church Street, when the latter charged the former with having been the originator of various reports reflecting upon his character, which were untrue. Complainant expressed his desire not to have anything to say to him, when the defendant struck him thrice upon the nose, which caused him to have two black eyes for nearly a week.

A witness, named John Shakespeare, said he saw the defendant ‘loose out three good blows, and no mistake,’ upon the complainant.

Defendant had been several times previously convicted, and was now fined £1 and costs, in all 33s, or in default fourteen days’ hard labour.”

“Mount Pleasant Grounds, Coseley. Mr. Hampton’s enclosure received a fair share of patronage yesterday, a 200 yards Dog Handicap Sweepstakes, for 20 guineas, being the fixture; and as the performers were supposed to be the three cracks of the district, the interest evinced was of the keenest description. The competitors were Mr. Markwick’s Fan, and Mr. Turner’s Nelson, of Oldbury, and Mr. R. Burrill’s Orange Girl, of Londonderry, near Smethwick, matched to run the above distance on handicap terms, give or take 2½ yards to the pound. The trio of canine celebrities should have run punctually at one o’clock, but ordinary sporting events are proverbially subject to delay, and the scaling of the dogs, which ceremony was performed at Mr. Markwick’s SEVEN STARS INN, Oldbury, was not over till long after the appointed hour, the consequence being that they did not show on the grounds till after two pm, Markwick’s Fan placed on scratch, Turner’s Nelson 5yds 7in start, Burrill’s Orange Girl 13yds 7in start. Mr. Plant, of Tansey Green, was appointed to despatch them by report of pistol, and, after retiring some ten yards, the report was heard, the trio bounding off without hitch or delay, a magnificent race ensuing all the way, Fan catching Orange Girl a ‘score’ from home, and Nelson (who had just passed the ‘Girl’) a dozen yards therefrom, and winning by a short length; Nelson defeating Orange Girl for second place by a foot.....”

“E. F. Markwick, landlord of the SEVEN STARS, Park Lane, Oldbury, was charged with allowing drunkenness in his house on the 21st November, also with being drunk himself in his own house, and fighting. Police-constables Raybould and Burley were called into the defendant's house to quell a disturbance; they found two men fighting in the kitchen, and the landlord quietly looking on. While they were turning the two men out who were fighting, the landlord struck one of the customers, named Hyland, and endeavoured to turn him out. The constables had to forcibly lead the landlord into the bar, and detain him there for some time.

The defence was that the landlord had sent for the constables to turn men out who had come in drunk and quarrelsome, and that one of the men returned, and began to quarrel with the defendant, who endeavoured to put him out.

The defendant was fined £10 and costs, and his license was endorsed.”

Dudley Herald 30/9/1876

“The adjourned annual licensing sessions for the Oldbury division were held on Monday, at the Police Court.....

The cases of James Downing, BRICKMAKERS ARMS, and Edward Fisher Markwick, SEVEN STARS, on the Black List, which had been adjourned from the General Licensing Sessions, were then considered.....

Mr. Avery said with reference to Markwick that he had been convicted of a grave case of permitting drunkenness, for which he had been fined £10 and costs and his license endorsed. It also appeared that on two previous occasions he had been convicted and fined for offences against his license, although one was about ten years ago. The magistrates had grave doubts as to whether he was a proper person to whom they could grant a renewal of the license; but, having regard to the fact that the house had subsequently been respectably and orderly conducted, they had ultimately decided to grant the license, and to warn him that if he was again convicted he would place his license in great peril.”

“David Sewell, licensed victualler, SEVEN STARS INN, Tividale, was charged with selling ale on Sunday, the 30th ult, between half-past two and six o’clock. Mr. Jackson, of Westbromwich, defended.

Police-constable Sylvestre said he was on duty on the day named, near the defendant’s house. At about five o’clock in the afternoon he saw a man named Thomas Watts, a lodger at defendant’s house, leave it with a large bottle under his arm. He followed him, and on examining the bottle found it to be full of ale. The man said it was his own property, and he ‘told the Missis to fill it before he went out.’ He questioned Mrs. Sewell about it, and she said she supplied the ale to the man before two o’clock to take to some men, and he took it with him at five o’clock.

Mr. Jackson, in defence, said the defendant had kept the public house which he now occupied for thirty years without any complaint being made, and therefore would not be likely to endanger his reputation by any wilful disobedience of the law.

Mrs. Sewell, wife of the defendant, said Watts had lodged at her house for six years. On the day in question he had his dinner at her house, and she supplied him with the ale between one and two o’clock, to take to some men with whom he worked. He left the house but did not take the ale, and returned again about five o'clock to fetch it. It was paid for on the next day.

Thomas Watts said he was a boat unloader and lodged at the house of the defendant. He had the ale supplied him between one and two o'clock, and put it by, intending to take it with him to work. He, however, forgot it, and came back about five o'clock for it.

The Bench considered the offence proved, and fined defendant 20s and costs, but did not endorse the license."

County Advertiser 2/3/1878

"Joseph Eveson, boiler-maker, and Benjamin Baker, an employee at the Brades Steel Works, both of Brades Road, Tividale, were brought up on the charge of stealing two live ducks, belonging to David Sewell, proprietor of the SEVEN STARS INN, Tividale.

A little boy, named Isaac Hill, of Brades Village, said that on the Sunday afternoon previous he was going along Gipsy Lane, Brades Village, near the canal, two other boys being in his company. On the other side of the canal he saw the two accused along with another person named Merrick (not in custody), and heard the report of a gun. Merrick ran away, carrying the gun, and witness noticed that two ducks which had been swimming on the water of the canal just before were shot, and appeared to be dead, while another one was 'kicking.' Baker went down to a bridge and broke a branch off a tree, with which he got the two dead ducks out of the water. He put them under his jacket, and then went to Eveson, who was on the bridge. The prisoner Baker came up to him and his companions, and told them not to say anything, 'and they'd catch the one that shot them,' after which the prisoners walked away, each with one of the ducks in his possession. He went to Mr. Sewell, the prosecutor, and told him what had taken place.

Another boy, named Hadley, who saw Merrick fire the gun at the ducks, gave evidence similar to Hill's, and a third boy was also called.

The prosecutor, Mr. Sewell, spoke to receiving information of his ducks being shot, and to finding one of the three (produced) in the hedge at the side of the canal near the place where the boys said they saw the ducks. Police-constable Hicklin deposed that he arrested the prisoners, after which the prisoner Eveson made a statement that he was innocent; the other prisoner reserving his defence.

Mr. Bassano then committed both of them to the Sessions for trial, refusing to allow bail."

[At Staffordshire Sessions Joseph Eveson and Benjamin Baker were found guilty and each sentenced to three months' hard labour.]

Dudley and District News 18/2/1882

“Elisha Waring, landlord of the SEVEN STARS INN, Dudley Road, Tividale, was charged with keeping his house open during prohibited hours on the night of Saturday the 4th inst.

While on duty in the Dudley Road about 11.20 on the night in question PC Winfield observed a light in the defendant's house and on looking through the window saw the defendant sell a quantity of ale to a woman named Hadley, he himself being drunk. About 12.30 Hadley came out with a bottle of ale under her shawl and when the witness went into the house the defendant was making use of most filthy language in the presence of his wife, who remonstrated with him several times. Defendant's excuse was that Hadley had been called in to assist in clearing out the house, and the ale found in her possession had been given to her, along with some food in lieu of wages. She, however, had been allowed to remain on the premises about an hour after she had finished her work.

This evidence was corroborated by Fanny Hadley, who was afterwards charged with being on the premises during prohibited hours.

Mr. Cooksey appeared for the defence.

Waring was fined 10s and costs, his license not to be endorsed. Hadley being fined 1s and costs or 14 days. The magistrates said that it was a very peculiar thing that when publicans were summoned for such offences it was always alleged that the beer was given, which if true, would make them about the most benevolent people in the world.”

Dudley and District News 30/9/1882

“This being the Old Hill adjourned licensing sessions the Bench granted a renewal of the licenses which were suspended at the last annual general sessions. The Chairman stated that the magistrates had very carefully considered each case, and they had decided to renew the licenses on the understanding that some assurance was given on the part of each defaulter, that their respective houses should be better conducted in the future. The Bench were determined that the law should be enforced, and if the defendants were guilty of any further offence against the Licensing Laws they would be severely punished and their licenses forfeited. The Chairman added that Henry Heath, who was convicted for selling ale during prohibited hours on Sunday, was now taking out a six days' license instead of a seven days', and his license was renewed on that condition; and if any of the others wished to have six days' licenses the Bench would be pleased to grant them.”

Dudley and District News 29/3/1884

“Francis Shelley, Tividale, was charged with being drunk on the licensed premises of Elijah Waring, on the 15th inst, at Dudley Road, Tividale. PC Winfield proved finding the defendant there in the tap-room drunk. Later on he visited the house again, and the defendant was still there. Fined 10s and costs.”

Dudley and District News 5/4/1884

“Elijah Waring, of the SEVEN STARS INN, Dudley Road, Tividale, was charged with permitting drunkenness on his licensed premises on the 15th ult. Mr. Hooper appeared for the defendant.

PC Wingfield said that about 9-30 on Saturday night, the 15th ult, he, in company with PC Mountney, visited the SEVEN STARS beerhouse. In the tap-room they found a man named Francis Shelly, who was very drunk. He had a pint cup of ale before him. Witness then said to defendant, who was present in the tap-room, ‘Are you giving this man ale, and he in such a state as this?’ Defendant replied, ‘There is a club meeting here, and they have got him drunk in the club-room.’ They then left the house, but visited it again about 10-30 the same night. They went into the tap-room and there found the man Shelly sitting in a corner with a pint cup before him, which was nearly full. Shelly was making use of very bad language. When the defendant saw them he said to him, ‘Come Frank, you are drunk and you must go.’ Shelly got up and attempted to go out. He staggered about and as he was going out he fell against witness. The constable then called the landlord's attention to his condition, and told him he should report the matter. Defendant followed them out of the house into the road, and said he hoped they would say nothing about it that time and he would watch that it did not occur again; but they had given him the ale in the club-room.

PC Mountney gave corroborative evidence.

Mr. Hooper, for the defence, said that a similar case to that had recently been decided at a Court of Quarter Sessions, where it was held that a publican could not be convicted for permitting drunkenness when a man entered his house in a state of intoxication. He hoped the construction that the Bench would now put upon the case would be in accordance with that decision. He admitted that the man was drunk, for that was shown beyond dispute by the two officers, but that was not his point. He could prove by an independent witness that the man was drunk before he went on the premises, and that the man was not in the house an hour before the officers saw him. He could also prove that the man had the ale in the club-room. He would now ask them if they could convict the defendant for permitting drunkenness when he was drunk before he went into the house. He held that on face of the decision he had referred to his client could not be convicted, for he had not permitted drunkenness.

The Bench decided to take their own course, and not conform to the decision of the Court of Quarter Sessions.

Defendant was fined 40s and costs, or one month.

Mr. Hooper said he should give notice of appeal."

“At Old Hill Police Court on Wednesday, John Gordon, alias Douglas, who declined to disclose his address; John Bourton, Adderley Street, Bordesley Green; John Henry Green, Mill Street, Aston Road, Birmingham, were brought up on remand, charged with being in possession and attempting to pass base coin at Tividale on Saturday, the 4th inst. Mr. F. Hooper, Birmingham, defended Bourton and Green.....

Thomas Cox, landlord of the SEVEN STARS INN, Tividale, was the next witness called. He stated that about ten minutes past two on Saturday two men came into his house. He did not know them at the time, but now identified them as Gordon and Bourton. They called for gin and bitters. Witness told them he did not sell it, whereupon Gordon called for two glasses of ale. He then tendered a 5s piece. Witness took it from him and examined it, and not being satisfied with it asked Gordon if he had any smaller change. To this Gordon said, ‘Wait till my mate comes in. He’s gone outside.’ When Bourton arrived he gave him 1s. Gordon said there was nothing wrong with the 5s and rung it on the floor. Witness told Gordon he was not satisfied with it and he should not take it. He next saw the men in Court the following Monday morning. There were five other men, making in all seven. He identified the two who came into his house the previous Saturday. He had not the slightest doubt about them. When they came into his house one was dressed in a dark grey suit, and the other a blue serge suit. In answer to questions by Mr. Hooper witness said his house was about 150 yards from the previous witness’s. When the prisoners came in they stood in the passage. He had never seen any of the men before, to his knowledge.

Mr. Hooper: What made you notice them? – Witness: I had word that they were passing base coin in the district from a man in the tap room.

Mr. Hooper: So you thought it best to make a mental photograph of these men? – Witness: Yes.

And this made you suspicious? – Yes. Someone had, I believe, gone for the policeman then.

You lost nothing by the transaction? – No.

In answer to further questions, witness said he identified the prisoners at the police station the following Monday. They were there amongst five other men, ill dressed in respectable clothes. He picked the prisoners out, and had not the slightest hesitation about either of them.

Mr. Hooper: If I tell you that Bourton was miles away at the time, would you hold the same opinion? – Witness: I would. I have not the slightest doubt.....

A remand was granted for a week.

Mr. Hooper: Then I have to apply for bail.

This was refused.”

County Advertiser 18/7/1903

“On Wednesday, at Rowley Regis Police Court – before Messrs. A. H. Bassano, C. W. Bassano, J. W. Tilley, and G. H. Holcroft – John Gorton (21), alias Walter Douglas, labourer, who refused to give his address, but belongs to Birmingham; John Henry Green (24), alias John Turst, glassworker, of Mill Street, Aston, Birmingham; and John Bourton (21), horse dealer, of Adderley Street, Bordewsley, Birmingham, were charged in custody on remand with uttering base coin at Tividale on the 4th inst, and also with having base coin in their possession on the same date. Mr. F. Hooper, of Birmingham, appeared to defend Green and Bourton. Mary Hill, sister of the landlord of the BROWN LION INN, Tividale, stated that on the afternoon of the date named, the prisoners Gorton and Bourton visited the public house, and were supplied with some drink and cigarettes. Gorton tendered a five shilling piece, which witness examined and refused to accept, as she did not care to take it. Gorton said, ‘It is all right; I wish I had a thousand of them.’ Witness, however, told him that she should not take it, and Bourton then paid for the drink. In reply to Mr. Hooper, witness said she still adhered to her statement made on the previous Wednesday that Bourton was the man who came into the house with Gorton.

Thomas Cox, landlord of the SEVEN STARS INN, Tividale, said that the prisoners Gorton and Bourton visited the house on the date named and purchased two glasses of ale. A five shilling piece was handed to witness in payment of the ale, but this he refused to take as it did not seem to be satisfactory to him, and he had also received an intimation, whilst the prisoners were in the house, that bad money was being passed in the district.

James Griffiths, of High Street, Tipton, stated that on the afternoon of the date named, he saw Police-constable Heatherley searching for three men who were running away in the direction of Dudley Port. The officer asked witness to follow them and he did so upon his bicycle. They crossed over the London and North Western Railway and witness caught them up. He rode alongside the prisoners for about forty yards and called upon three young men to assist him to capture them, but they all refused. Witness then caught Gorton and held him until Police-constable Heatherley arrived upon the scene. The other two prisoners ran away across the fields.

Police-constable Heatherley stated that whilst he was chasing the prisoners he noticed Gorton put his hand in his left hand pocket, pull out something, and throw it away. Upon arriving at the spot witness found sixteen base crown pieces (produced). Witness conveyed Gorton to Old Hill Police Station, and the other two prisoners, when charged with the offence, said they did not know where Tividale was.

Mary Salter, wife of Charles Salter, of the VILLAGE TAVERN, Brades Village, Oldbury, stated that on the 4th inst the prisoners Gorton and Bourton visited her house and were supplied with some drink. Gorton gave her a five shilling piece and witness handed him 4s 6d change. She could not say whether the coin was a base one as she had since disposed of it.

Police-sergeant Evans, of the Birmingham police, deposed to seeing the three prisoners leaving a public house in Steelhouse Lane, Birmingham, on the morning of the 4th inst. They separated, but witness subsequently saw them together again at the Snow Hill Station. The same evening, upon receipt of a telephonic message from Old Hill, he arrested Bourton, who in reply to the charge, said he did not know where Tividale was, and he had been in the city all that day.

Detective Harris deposed to arresting Green, who also denied being at Tividale.

Police-constables Lawson and Foulkes described a conversations they heard between the three prisoners at Handsworth Station on the 6th inst, after they had been remanded and were being escorted to Winson Green Gaol. Gorton said, 'I wish I had never seen — Tividale,' to which Green replied, 'I have never been there before, and I will watch I don't go again.' Bourton said, 'Nor me, I don't know where Tividale is.' Harry Arthur Griffiths, jeweller, of High Street, Cradley Heath, deposed to examining the sixteen five shilling pieces found by Police-constable Heatherley; they were all counterfeit.

When charged with the offences by the magistrates' clerk (Mr. T. Cooksey), Gorton said, 'I plead guilty to attempting to pass one base coin not knowing it to be bad. These two fellows (pointing to the other prisoners) were not with me on the afternoon, although they were with me on the morning when seen by Sergeant Evans.'

The other prisoners pleaded not guilty, and Mr. Hooper, on their behalf, urged that there was no evidence whatever against Green, and that the witnesses were mistaken as to Bourton. Both men were in Birmingham during the day in question. A number of witnesses were called to prove this, but eventually the Bench committed the prisoners for trial at the Assizes, bail being refused.

Mr. A. H. Bassano (the presiding magistrate) complimented James Griffiths, the cyclist, for the pluck he displayed to secure the arrest of the three prisoners. Superintendent Pilliner said the police much appreciated the valuable assistance they received from Griffiths, through whose efforts the prisoners had been brought to justice.

Detective Harris gave Superintendent Pilliner particulars of the prisoners' antecedents, which raised the ire of Bourton, who attempted to assault Harris, and declared his intention of killing him for giving the Staffordshire police particulars, which he characterised as an injustice. Owing to his violence it was necessary for a policeman to stand near to him in the dock."

Gorton was sentenced to six months' imprisonment, Green was discharged, and Bourton was sentenced to five months' imprisonment."

“At the Oldbury Police Court, yesterday – before Messrs. G. Heaton and E. B. Phillips – Alexander Nock (45), puddler, of Hales Owen Street, was charged, on remand, with unlawfully wounding Giles Hill, iron-worker, of Causeway Green, on the 1st inst. Mr. W. Shakespeare defended.

Complainant said that on the day named he and the defendant quarrelled and fought while together in the SPADEMAKERS ARMS, Hunt Street. Witness went to the GOLDEN LION INN, Hales Owen Street, but was followed by the defendant. When he left that public house the defendant followed him about a quarter of a mile, and struck him a violent blow on the back of the neck. He (prosecutor) could see that he had either to fight or be killed, so he fought. They had about four rounds, and during the fight defendant kicked him on the ankle and knocked him down. Whilst he was upon the ground defendant had a running kick at his right arm and broke it. He had been under the care of a surgeon since.

Alice Wood deposed that she saw the prosecutor and defendant fighting in the street, and during the last round defendant kicked prosecutor twice. Defendant also kicked the prosecutor whilst he was on the ground.

Mr. C. Torbitt, surgeon, said the prosecutor's left leg was badly bruised and swollen, and his right arm was broken. He considered that the injuries were caused by kicks.

Police-constable Clarke stated that when he arrested defendant the latter replied that complainant fetched him out of two or three public houses and would make him fight.

At the close of the case for the prosecution a consultation took place between the parties, and subsequently Mr. Shakespeare made an application for the case to be adjourned. He pointed out that in the meantime the defendant was willing to pay 5s per week to the prosecutor for two months.

The Bench decided to adjourn the case for a month to see whether this arrangement would be carried out."

"William Brant, of the SPADEMAKERS ARMS, Hunt Street, was charged with selling during prohibited hours on Sunday morning, the 13th inst. Mr. Shakespeare defended.

Police-sergeant Stanton said at 11.20 on the morning in question he saw a woman named Caddick in the defendant's house, with some beer in a jug. Upon seeing witness the woman tried to hide the jug under her shawl. The landlady declared that it had not been paid for, but that she had given it to Caddick out of sympathy, owing to the woman being in trouble. This statement was now repeated, but Caddick denied that she tried to conceal the beer.

“The adjourned meeting of the Worcester County Licensing Committee was held today at the Shirehall, Mr. Willis Bund presiding, for the consideration of licenses of houses in Oldbury which had been reported by the local justices as not being necessary for the requirements of the district.....

In the cases of the SPADEMAKERS ARMS and the BEEHIVE the counsel concerned were Messrs. Morton and Brown for the justices and Matthews and Lawrence for the parties concerned. The evidence related to the value of the property, the sales, requirements of the district, etc.....

After deliberating half an hour, the justices decided that all the houses brought before them were unnecessary, but not being certain how far compensation money would suffice to meet the claims to be paid, drew up an order of precedence in which houses are to be dealt with, houses not paid for keeping open provisionally till they are dealt with.”

Smethwick Telephone 1/7/1905

“The adjourned principal meeting of the Licensing Committee for the County of Worcester was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, on Saturday, Mr. J. Willis Bund presiding. The sixteen houses reported by the Oldbury Justices were considered, and the committee ultimately decided that all the licenses were unnecessary. As they were not aware how far the compensation money would go, the committee arranged the houses in order, and as many of the licenses as possible will be done away with. The order is as follows.....

Birmingham Mail 22/12/1905

“An important memorandum has been issued by the inland revenue commissioners affecting the basis of compensation for licensed houses which have been compulsorily closed. It will be remembered that fifteen such houses were refused the renewal of licenses at Oldbury, and the question of compensation was argued by counsel before the Worcestershire Licensing Committee a few weeks ago. That committee intimated that the rent was the basis upon which the compensation should be assessed, but counsel urged that this was preposterous. The claimants preferred to leave the matter to the decision of the inland revenue commissioners. The latter have sent a letter to the committee, upholding its view that the rent should be the basis, allowing nothing for the trade done on the premises or to the brewers for tied houses. The Commissioners say that the computation of the sum to be paid in any case requires the determination of three factors, namely, the value of the licensed premises, the depreciation in value of the trade fixtures, and the value of the premises without the license. They have, as a rule, capitalised the annual value of the licensed premises upon the four per cent basis, or at twenty-five years’ purchase, and only exceeded this in cases where there was a distinct prospect of improved annual value, and only fallen below it where there was evidence to suggest that the present value could not be maintained in future. They have employed surveyors of taxes to take estimates of the probable annual value of premises when deprived of their licenses, and of the probable number of years’ purchase of such annual value that premises would fetch, an allowance being made for the cost of the alterations necessary to fit the premises for earning the annual value as estimated. Accordingly, although exact figures have not yet been received, the amounts payable for the Oldbury houses above referred to may be given approximately as follows.....

Birmingham Daily Gazette 6/3/1906

“A meeting of the Worcester Licensing Committee was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, yesterday, to consider the awards made by the Commissioner of Inland Revenue, determining the amounts to be paid as compensation to owners, holders, or others interested in the non-renewal of licenses in the Oldbury division.....

The licenses refused and the amount of compensation awarded in each case was as follows.....

SPADE MAKERS ARMS, Hunt Street, £485.

The committee made awards as follows.....

SPADE MAKERS ARMS, Hunt Street, £10 to Thomas Evitts, licensee, and £475 to Atkinson’s Brewery, registered owners.

Payment of the compensation money was fixed to take place on March 28.”

Evesham Standard 5/1/1907

The Chairman called attention to the report of the Licensing Committee, which, he said, set out what had been done in the county in 1905. Sixteen cases were sent up to the committee from Oldbury. The compensation in these cases amounted to £7,146. All the cases had been dealt with, except the SPADEMAKERS ARMS.

The SPADEMAKERS ARMS and the GREYHOUND, Oldbury, appealed to the Inland Revenue, who awarded the sums of £425 and £420 respectively, but on appeal to the High Court the Inland Revenue consented to have the figures altered to £1,250 and £850. The Inland Revenue asked the committee to go into the matter for them, but the committee required evidence as to the accuracy of the figures. The committee were right in requiring that evidence, having regard to the fact that the claims made in respect of houses amounted to £40,278. In one case the claim was over £5,000, and the claimants agreed to accept £1,385. He mentioned that to show that the figures were much in excess of what the Inland Revenue thought ought to have been given, and should be closely examined. But in this case the Inland Revenue thought fit to adopt the figures without any examination beyond the statutory declaration and gave the full amount. The money had been paid in all cases except that of the SPADEMAKERS ARMS, and in that case no agreement was submitted to the Committee, and they resolved to let it stand over until the agreement arrived.”

Mr. Graham Milward applied on behalf of the Atkinson Brewery Company, owners of the SPADEMAKERS ARMS, Hunt Street, Oldbury, for approval of an order to divide the compensation of £1,250, as to £10 to the licensee, Thomas Evitts, and the balance to themselves, as owners. It appeared that the Inland Revenue Commissioners fixed the amount at £425, and Evitts signed an agreement to accept £10 as his proportion of the compensation moneys, although he was told that there would be an appeal to the High Court, and an increased amount awarded. The High Court awarded £1,250, and Evitts renewed his agreement to accept £10, but the committee at their last sitting were not satisfied that Evitts had been fairly treated. Mr. Milward said Evitts was merely the manager, who had occupied that position only eight months.

The Chairman suggested that Evitts was in such a position that he knew, unless he accepted the amount offered, there might be consequences. It was really taking away the discretionary power given to the committee by the Act of Parliament.

Mr. R. H. Amphlett admitted that there might be a difficulty if the licensee declined to take more than the agreed £10, whatever the order of the committee.

The Chairman announced that the committee awarded the licensee £20, and the balance, with the exception of £1 3s 6d costs, to the owners.

Mr. Milward expressed a desire to appeal if there were power, and the Chairman promised that the committee would afford every facility, but ultimately Mr. Milward accepted the order.”

The license was extinguished on 29th May 1907.

West Bromwich Weekly News 11/6/1887

“A melancholy accident occurred to a Rounds Green man, named William Bannister (24), of Summer Row, on Tuesday morning.

It appears deceased, who was a miner, went to work for the first time at the Station Colliery, Rowley. He commenced to remove some trees which supported the earth, and removing the first one, a lad, who was near, noticed the light go out and heard a noise and a groan. He ran for assistance, but deceased was quite dead before he was uncovered, not having been in the pit more than 10 minutes.

An inquest was held on the body, on Thursday morning, at the SPREAD EAGLE INN, Rounds Green, before Mr. E. Docker (deputy coroner).

Mary Ann Bannister, wife of deceased, stated that her husband left home at six o’clock on the Tuesday morning to go to work, and was brought home dead about nine o’clock. Her husband had worked for many years previously for Mr. Withers at a colliery at Langley.

Dr. Lyddon gave evidence to the effect that he examined the body of deceased, and found injuries about the forehead and back. No bones were broken, and his opinion was that death was caused by suffocation. The Coroner remarked that he had communicated with the Government Inspector of Mines, who would inquire into the matter, but he was unable to be present that day, and he recommended an adjournment. This was agreed to, and the inquest adjourned sine die.”

West Bromwich Weekly News 18/6/1887

Mr. W. E. Clarke represented the Colliery Company, and Mr. W. H. Pickering, assistant inspector of mines, was also present.

William Lewis, of Old Hill, under-deputy, stated that deceased was engaged to do odd work on the morning of the 7th inst. Whilst employed in an old road drawing timber a quantity of coal and earth fell upon him, and before he could be got out he was suffocated.

Edwin Simpson, underground overman, gave evidence to the effect that he employed deceased because he knew him to be an experienced miner.

Mr. Pickering said Mr. Scott, who had examined the pit, considered it was a pure accident, and there had been no breach of the Act.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

Birmingham Daily Post 13/3/1889

“Yesterday afternoon, Mr. A. H. Hebbert (deputy coroner) held an inquest, at the SPREAD EAGLE INN, Rounds Green, respecting the death of David Reed (24), formerly of Summer Row, Rounds Green, who was found drowned in the Birmingham Canal, near to Mr. Sheldon’s brickworks, Whimsey Bridge, on the night of the 9th inst.

Some men passing along the canal found deceased in the water, and having rescued him they sought to restore animation, but without effect.

Dr. Lyddon said there was a large wound on the side of the head, and the skull was fractured. He was of opinion that deceased in falling into the water caught his head against the side of a boat, which caused concussion of the brain.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

Birmingham Daily Post 23/10/1889

“Last night Mr. E. Docker (coroner) held an inquest at the SPREAD EAGLE INN, Rounds Green, relative to the death of William Smith (26), of Chapel Street, who died on the 21st inst from the effects of injuries received whilst employed at Messrs. Round Brothers’ Hainge Colliery, Tividale, on the 2nd inst. Mr. Dainty represented the colliery proprietors.

Selefeanea Reeves said that on the afternoon of the 2nd inst deceased returned home from work, when he told witness that whilst in the workings of the mine he slipped down and caught his head against a tub.

The inquest was then adjourned until Monday next, in order that the Government inspector might be present.”

[At the adjourned inquest the jury returned a verdict to the effect that deceased died from the effects of injuries sustained whilst employed at the colliery, but how the injuries were caused there was no evidence to show.]

Birmingham Daily Post 24/9/1890

“Last evening Mr. E. Docker (coroner) held an inquest at the SPREAD EAGLE INN, Rounds Green, respecting the death of Alfred Hinton, aged four months, whose parents reside in Summer Row, who was found dead in bed on Monday morning. Dr. Lyddon was of opinion that the child was suffocated by being overlain. The jury returned a verdict of Accidentally Suffocated.”

“Superintendent Chare also objected to the license being renewed, but said since the conviction there had been no cause of complaint. The owners of the house were J. Jordan and Co.

Mr. C. H. Darby represented Harriet Hartland, the licensee, and explained that her matrimonial experience had been unfortunate. She was living separate from her husband, who contributed nothing to her support, and she was endeavouring to bring up her children in a respectable manner.”

West Bromwich Weekly News 19/1/1901

“The folly of people leaving large sums of money in drawers and other insecure places in the house was strikingly illustrated at Rounds Green on Sunday morning last. Mrs. Hartland, who keeps the SPREAD EAGLE INN, Brades Road, retired with her family to rest about 11.30 on Saturday night. She had £164 in gold and silver in a drawer, but at 8.15 the next morning when the family arose, they found that all the money had been taken from the drawer. A back window was found slightly open, and it was supposed that an entrance was affected by this means. The inmates of the house were not disturbed in any way, and the thief or thieves got clear away with the money without leaving the slightest clue. While sympathising with the family in their loss, we cannot but think it a very foolish thing to keep so much money in the house without a safe to put it into. When Superintendent Sherriff made an examination of the premises he found that neither the curtain nor blind of the window had been interfered with, and there were no marks of any chisel being used to force open the drawer. The affair, therefore, remains a complete mystery.”

Smethwick Weekly News 9/3/1901

“John Jordan and Co, licensees of the SPREAD EAGLE INN, Brades Road, Rounds Green, were summoned for permitting drunkenness, and serving drink to a drunken person on the 13th February. Mr. J. S. Sharpe, who appeared to prosecute on behalf of the police, said PC Haden visited the house at 10.15 at night, and found Benjamin Horton drunk, with a glass of whisky before him. Mrs. Hartland was present, and she was asked by the constable how she accounted for it. She said she did not think he was so bad, and told him to go.

Mr. E. T. Hopkins, who represented the Brewery Company, elicited the fact that the man Horton was suffering from sciatica, and that the whisky was served openly, when they knew Mr. Haden's brother was present. Addressing the Bench, Mr. Hopkins said the tenant in this case was a bona-fide one, and not a manager, so that the Brewery Company were summoned for an offence for which they were not legally or morally responsible, directly or indirectly.

Mr. Wilson said Mr. Hopkins' remarks had influenced the Bench with regard to their decision, and the question of the ownership of the license would have to be considered at their next meeting. There had been some misunderstanding on the point. If costs were paid they would dismiss it.

The costs were £2 18s 6d.

Benjamin Horton was then charged with being drunk on the licensed premises, but he denied being drunk, and called witnesses named Baker and Rudford, but a fine of 2s 6d and costs was imposed."

Mr. A. M. Chance presided at Oldbury. The report of Superintendent Hill stated that there were 126 licences in the district, a reduction of seven on the previous year, which compared with the estimated population, gave a ratio of one on-licence to every 354 of the inhabitants. One licence-holder only was convicted during the year, while eighty-eight persons were convicted for drunkenness, a decrease of forty-three on the previous year.....

The police objected to the renewal of the following twelve licences which will be considered at the adjourned sessions, to be held on March 2.....

"The adjourned licensing sessions for Oldbury were held yesterday, Mr. G. S. Albright presiding in the absence, through illness, of Mr. A. M. Chance. The magistrates were sitting for several hours, chiefly in hearing evidence regarding the following licensed houses, to the renewal of which the police objected on the grounds of redundancy, the magistrates proposing to refer them for compensation.....

SPREAD EAGLE, beerhouse, Rounds Green Road, owner Messrs. Jordan and Co.....

Evidence was given in each case by Superintendent Hill and Mr. F. H. Jones, auctioneer and valuer, as to the nature of the houses, and the proximity of other licensed premises. The magistrates afterwards retired to consider the cases, and upon resuming Mr. Albright said they had decided to refer the following six houses to Worcester to be dealt with under compensation: CRYSTAL PALACE, NAVIGATION INN, HOPE AND ANCHOR, FOUNTAIN, CROSS KEYS, and BIRD IN HAND. All the other licences would be renewed, and the licences of these six would be provisionally renewed pending the county committee's investigations....."

For some time past an arbitration has been proceeding at the TALBOT HOTEL, in the case of Smith v Parkes, and the decision of the arbitrator was made known at the close of last week.

An action had been brought by Ferdinando Dudley Lea Smith, a magistrate for Worcestershire and a local colliery proprietor, against Noah and Job Parkes, of the New Grange Colliery, to recover £3,000, damage for alleged encroachments upon the thick coal and other minerals upon the estate of the former. The action stood for trial at the last Worcestershire Assizes, and was referred to the arbitration of Mr. John Field, mining engineer, of Hill Top, West Bromwich, with the consent of Baron Amphlett. The Court of Exchequer of Pleas made the decision of the arbitrator binding upon both parties.

The evidence on behalf of the plaintiff was supported by Messrs. Elihu Smallman, Thomas Latham, Silas Bowkley, A. Bowkley, and John Hill, all mining engineers; and the defendants called, on their behalf, Messrs. Henry Johnson, David Peacock, Richard Mason, and Thomas Cooksey, mining engineers.

The arbitrator decided in favour of the plaintiff on all the points in the dispute, and awarded him £719, and ordered the defendants to pay the costs of the case.

In the case of Hunt v Parkes, arising out of the same action, Mr. Field ordered both sides to pay their own costs.”

On Sunday night the body of a young woman named Hannah Southall, aged 17, domestic servant, was discovered in an unused arm of the Birmingham Canal, near the Railway Station, under circumstances which seem to point to the conclusion that a foul murder has been perpetrated. The deceased, whose parents reside at Dudley Park, lived in service with Mr. Noah Parkes, of SPRING COTTAGE, West Bromwich Street.

About half-past ten o’clock information reached the Oldbury Police Station that screams had been heard proceeding from the canal side, and that two young men had seen something like a human being struggling in the water, but before it could be got out it had disappeared. Sergeant Simmons procured drags, and commenced dragging the canal, which resulted in the recovery of the body.

The deceased, who is said to have been of a merry disposition, went out on Sunday afternoon for her usual holiday, and returned home in the evening, where she remained until after ten o’clock. She then left the house, as was thought, for the purpose of having a short walk, but as she did not return her master became alarmed and went in search of her, and subsequently found that her lifeless body had been dragged from the canal a short distance from the house. The deceased was not missed beyond about half an hour.

A man named Richard Stanley, a moulder, residing in West Bromwich Street, Oldbury, was arrested late on Sunday night on suspicion. A man answering to the description of the prisoner was seen hurrying away from the spot where the body was afterwards found by two men who were approaching from the opposite direction. The prisoner had been courting the deceased for some time, and when charged with the murder of the girl on Sunday night by Sergeant Simmonds he made no reply.

On Monday afternoon the prisoner Stanley was charged, before Mr. Bassano, at Rowley, with murdering Hannah Southall, by drowning. Prisoner pleaded not guilty, but admitted that he saw the deceased about ten minutes past ten o'clock at night, when he was talking to another girl, close to the house where she (deceased) lived. No words passed between them. Prisoner was remanded for eight days.

The adjourned enquiry touching the death of the young woman, Hannah Southall, at Oldbury, resulted on Wednesday night in a verdict of Suicide whilst in a State of Temporary Insanity, and the girl's sweetheart, Stanley, who had been arrested on suspicion of being concerned in her death, was released from custody, there being no evidence to implicate him. It was shown that the girl herself had been heard to express her intention to commit suicide."

"Yesterday afternoon, at the Police Court – before Messrs. S Bennett and J. W. Wilson – Isaiah Baker, miner, of Brades Village, was charged with committing perjury in the course of evidence given by him at the court on the 17th of October. Mr. J. Clark appeared to prosecute, and Mr. J. S. Sharpe defended.

Mr. Clark explained on the date named the defendant was charged by the prosecutor, Mr. David Baker, landlord of the SPRING COTTAGE INN, West Bromwich Street, with being drunk upon his licensed premises, and refusing to quit the same. In his evidence on that day, the defendant swore that when he entered prosecutor's house he was sober, and also denied that he was requested to leave by the prosecutor's wife.

David Baker stated that on the 7th of October defendant visited his house and called for a quart of ale, but his (prosecutor's) wife refused to serve him and requested him to leave the premises. As he refused to do so, his wife pushed defendant out through a side door. Shortly afterwards defendant re-entered the house through the front door.

Sophia Baker, wife of prosecutor, corroborated this statement, and six other witnesses were called for the prosecution.

The Bench, without hearing the defence, considered the evidence was not sufficient to warrant them in sending the defendant for trial, and accordingly dismissed the case.”

Re David Baker, Oldbury.

The first meeting of the creditors of this debtor, of the COTTAGE SPRING INN, West Bromwich Street, Oldbury, licensed victualler, and carrying on business as a coalmaster at the Clifton Colliery, Titford Road, Oldbury, and lately trading in co-partnership with John Baker and Thomas Whitehouse, under the style of Baker and Whitehouse, at the Grange Colliery, West Bromwich Street, Oldbury, as coalmasters, was held yesterday afternoon at West Bromwich County Court, before Mr. C. Woollett, assistant official receiver. The statement of affairs showed liabilities of £437 16s 7d, the deficiency being £323 5s 10d. The insolvency was attributed to the losses at the colliery and bad trade.

Subsequently the debtor came up for his public examination before Mr. Registrar Watson, at the same court. Mr. W. Podbury (from Mr. Shakespeare’s office) appeared for the bankrupt, and Mr. R. A Tench (from Mr. Clark’s office) represented the holder of a bill of sale (Mr. Horton).

The examination was adjourned until May 9.”

Bromsgrove Messenger 8/2/1896

“Joseph Hanson and Maria Hanson, both of Hurst Green, were charged with selling ale without a license. Mr. J. S. Sharpe prosecuted on behalf of the police, Mr. W. Waldron defended, and Mr. J. W. Clulow watched the proceedings on behalf of Messrs. H. Mitchell and Co., the lessees of the house.

Mr. Sharpe explained that the real occupier of the premises was Mrs. Rebecca Walton, who was the mother of the defendant, Maria Hanson. Rebecca Walton resided with her son at the COTTAGE SPRING INN, Oldbury, where she had been conducting his business. He urged that it was necessary for the license of a beerhouse to be the real resident occupier, and, therefore the person who undertook that responsibility was not justified in remaining away from the business and allowing someone else to conduct it. The case was made more serious by the fact that the defendant, Joseph Hanson, was formerly the landlord of the FRENCH HORN INN, Rounds Green, where he was convicted for offences under the Licensing Act, and finally compelled to give up the house. He had since applied for a license at Dudley, but had been refused, and they now found him shielding himself under the license of his mother-in-law and carrying on her business.

Mr. Clulow produced an agreement showing that Rebecca Walton was the occupier of the beerhouse in question. Mr. Waldron admitted that Mrs. Walton was the proper tenant of the house, but said she had been compelled to conduct the business of her son at Oldbury, who had recently been in ill-health.

Mr. Sharpe said the police did not wish to press the case, but they desired to put the occupation of the house upon a proper footing. His friend, Mr. Waldron, had promised to pay the costs, and had also agreed that the business in future should be conducted by the proper person.

Ultimately the Bench allowed the case to be withdrawn on defendants paying the costs – 10s 9d each – and two guineas, the solicitor’s fee.”

“Mr. C. H. Darby applied on behalf of Hunt Brothers, of the Griffin Foundry, for permission to transfer the license of the COTTAGE SPRING, West Bromwich Street, to premises proposed to be constructed in the same street. He explained that at present the house was surrounded by the works of which Hunt Bros. were the owners, an arrangement which was most inconvenient, for despite the most careful supervision, the men were continually slipping out of the works into the public house the moment the foreman’s or master’s backs are turned. Hunt Bros. desired to remove the house 230 yards away from their works and the absence of any opposition should be weighed in the merits of the application. Mr. Elijah Hunt and Mr. Wood (Wood and Kendrick) gave evidence, it being stated that £1,200 would be spent on the new premises.”

“On behalf of Mr. Thomas Hunt, the owner of this house, Mr. J. S. Sharpe applied for sanction to transfer the license to a more convenient place in West Bromwich Street. The application was opposed by Mr. Jeffries (instructed by Rev. J. Tollady and Mr. G. E. Simonds).

Mr. Jeffries pointed out that the law required that notice of an application of that kind should be posted on the land on which it was proposed to erect the building, which had not been done in this case.

Mr. Sharpe said the objection was a very frivolous one, but he urged that notice had been posted on the site for the new premises.

Mr. A. A. Millichip, solicitor’s clerk, swore to having posted a copy of the notice of the application on a board on the land, and which he had pulled down that morning. He saw the notice there on the 11th and 18th insts.

The Bench were satisfied that the requirements had been carried out and allowed Mr. Sharpe to proceed with the application.

Mr. Sharpe went on to say that the SPRING COTTAGE was situated in close proximity to Hunts Foundry. The premises were old and dilapidated and most inconvenient, both to the public and the police. The occupier only had one room for domestic use, and the premises were undoubtedly insanitary. It was now proposed to build a new house on a site higher up the street to which they desired the license of the SPRING COTTAGE transferred, and the old house would be pulled down. The proposed new buildings would have a quiet and substantial look about them. They did not wish to make the buildings much larger than the present house.

Thomas Hunt, the applicant, gave evidence confirming Mr. Sharpe’s statements.

In reply to Mr. Jeffries, he said some one in addition to himself was interested in the scheme, but he could not say who it was. He had signed an agreement, but he could not then say what the terms contained in it were.

Mr. Jeffries asked if the applicant knew the difference between an agreement and a notice, whereupon Mr. Hunt sharply retorted, ‘Don’t you think I am such a fool?’ (Laughter.)

Replying to Mr. Sharpe, the applicant said he had sold the land on which it was proposed to erect the new buildings to the Oldbury Railway Wagon and Carriage Co, but he had entered into a contract with them for the repurchase of the site for the proposed new house.

Mr. Enoch Wood, architect, of West Bromwich, produced plans of the new house, which he indicated would cost about £2,000. The place where it was proposed to build the house was in a growing neighbourhood.

The rental would be about £50 a year.

Mr. Jeffries said a similar application had been made and refused on a former occasion. The only fresh argument for the applicant was that five new houses had been built since he made the last application.”

James Arthur Burton – see also SAVING HAND, and JUNCTION, Queens Cross, Dudley.

The license was surrendered on 13th July 1908.

Dudley Chronicle 31/10/1914

There were nineteen temporary licenses brought for confirmation, and only in one did the police make any objection. This was the case of J. A. Burton, formerly of Oldbury, to whom a temporary license of the JUNCTION INN, has been granted.

Mr. J. T. Higgs appeared for the applicant, who, in reply to his solicitor, said he had had 20 years' experience in the trade, as his mother had held a license for that period without any complaint. From 1904 till 1908 he was the licensee of the SPRING COTTAGE, Oldbury, without conviction or complaint. After that he kept the SAVING HAND, at Oldbury without any conviction, although there was a complaint that he was drunken, which was not true, as he was suffering from sciatica at the time. The license of the JUNCTION was granted to him on the 4th of September, and there had been no complaints. He left the SAVING HAND owing to it being closed through redundancy. He received compensation, and had invested the money in acquiring the tenancy of the JUNCTION which was a tenants license and not an application from the brewers, and if he lost that money he would be ruined.

In reply to the Bench, the Chief Superintendent said applicant had conducted the JUNCTION properly, but the police at Oldbury alleged that applicant suffered from delirium tremens, and that his wife was addicted to drink.

Applicant: It was no use me saying I was not on the drink, I was; but it was because I was put about owing to the house being closed. Sometimes my wife is very funny in the head, but it is not a matter of drink, she suffers from illness.

The Chief Superintendent: It is only fair to say that this man kept a house from 1908 to 1914 without any complaints, and that the police officer who alleges the drunkenness is now away at the front.

The Magistrates' Clerk: There was no complaint about this man as a license holder? – No, sir.

The Clerk: The complaint is that after the house was closed he drank? – Yes, sir.

Mr. Edward Smith: How has he gone on since he has had this temporary license? – The Chief Superintendent: There have been no complaints. It is a quiet house as rule.

After consultation with his colleagues (one of whom strongly objected to the granting of the license) Alderman Hughes said to the applicant, 'If you will promise us that there shall be no complaint and that you will not touch the drink, we will grant the license. If you suffer from delirium tremens you may injure yourself and others, and would be unfit to have a license.'

The Applicant: I don't think there is any need to be afraid of that no. I only took the drink because of the trouble.

The application was granted.”

Defendant went to the STORES, Birmingham Street, kept by Charles Roberts, and offered the coin in payment for some liquor. It turned out, however, that defendant had been down to the BROWN LION INN, and changed half a sovereign, and received the bad coin amongst his change.

As it was thus shown that the defendant was not aware the florin was a counterfeit one, the case was dismissed.”

“William Podman, aged 50, of Rounds Green, was brought up charged with having committed an indecent assault upon three girls, named Mary Rogers (11), Mary Jane Judge (10), and Phoebe Hodgkiss (10), all of Oldbury, on Saturday afternoon, the 24th instant.

Mary Rogers stated that she was selling matches on the day in question in a public house, known as Showell’s Top Shop, with the other girls, when the prisoner followed them out of the house into the yard, where he committed the offence. He gave her and another girl a half-penny each, and promised them two shillings. Ephraim Cartright stated that he was present in the public house at the time, on Saturday afternoon, when the barman called his attention to prisoner’s behaviour towards the little girls. Witness was sitting against the table, and heard prisoner say something about meeting the girls again at 8 o’clock.

Henry Felton, barman at the Top Shop, said he served the prisoner on Saturday afternoon, with two pints of fourpenny, and afterwards saw him offer the little girls to drink. They asked him to buy some matches and he replied that he would not then, but if they would meet him again at 8 o’clock he would buy some and give them some coppers besides. He called Cartright’s attention to the matter. Some one came to him later on in the afternoon and informed him that prisoner had the girls at the bottom of the yard at the back of the premises. He went out and found the eldest girl standing outside one of the outbuildings, the door of which was partly open. He saw the other girls and prisoner inside, and believed Podman had his left arm round the girl Rogers. On hearing him approach, the door was opened and the girls ran out. Going up the yard he met Sergeant Stanton, and informed him of what had occurred.

PS Stanton stated that from the information he received from the last witness he at once proceeded to where the prisoner was. He asked him what he had been doing to the girls. He appeared confused, but denied any knowledge of them. He took him to the police station and charged him with the offence.

Mary Jane Judge stated that she was in the public house in company with the other girls. She was selling fish and asked prisoner if he would buy. He ordered a half-penny worth, and she placed it upon a plate on the table. He requested her to bring the plate round the table and to come closer, but she refused to do this, and he then said he would not have the fish but eventually took the same. The other two girls went out into the yard, and prisoner followed them. She also followed him, and asked for the half-penny for the fish. She saw him follow the other girls into the closet. Seeing the barman coming down she cried out, ‘Here’s the waiter coming,’ and the girls ran out. Prisoner promised her two shillings.

The evidence in the third charge was not taken.

Prisoner pleaded ‘Not guilty,’ and was committed to the next Worcester Quarter Sessions to take his trial.”

“There were some important comments made in reference to the granting of three off licenses for the Lightwoods district by the Oldbury justices, at a meeting of the County Licensing Committee, at which application was made for the confirmation of the concessions. At the outset, Mr. Willis Bund (the chairman) said that in reference to these three applications he understood there was some agreement or understanding between the Oldbury justices and the applicants. They had no particulars of that understanding. The brewers were willing, if the licenses were granted, to surrender certain licenses in Oldbury. The question was whether the committee ought not to have before them very full information concerning those houses which were going to be surrendered.....

The Hon. R. Coventry applied, on behalf of Joseph Barnsley, 62, Abbey Road, Warley, for a beer off license. Mr. Graham Milward opposed on behalf of Mr. Haywood, the holder of another license in the neighbourhood.

The Hon. R. Coventry said that the house was in the centre of a new district which had sprung up since 1903. They were prepared to surrender, if the grant of the license was confirmed, Showell’s ‘Top Shop,’ at Langley, for which they paid £3,009, and upon which they had spent £4,000; an off beer license at the corner of Whiley Street and Spring Street, valued at £600; and off beerhouses in Perrot Street and Fastnet Street, valued at £300 each, making a total surrender value, according to the books of the company, of £8,209.

Applicant said that 380 residents petitioned in favour of the license.

Mr. Graham Milward, examining the petition, said some of the signatories lived nearer to another licensed house than to the one for which the applicant asked a license.

The Chairman: A change of tap, Mr. Milward. (Laughter.) I don’t think you need trouble about the petition; we don’t pay much attention to those things.....

The Chairman said an attempt had been made – rightly or wrongly he would not say – to cover the district with off licenses, which would pay no monopoly value and contribute nothing to the compensation fund, and for which certain licenses were offered in order to get over any objections. The licenses it was proposed to surrender were not those it was most desired to take away, because they were not included in the twenty reported by the Oldbury justices. In the discharge of their duty to the ratepayers were the committee justified in covering the district with off licenses? Another point was whether the committee ought to grant the licenses applied for. They were offered valuable terms, but he was loth to tie the hands of the committee by asking them to accept them in view of the pending legislation. The applications would be granted, but it must be distinctly understood that the terms agreed upon between the justices of Oldbury and the applicants did not fetter the committee in any way if they were called upon to deal with the licenses in the near future.”

The license was surrendered on 4th June 1908.

William Slim, a dealer in old iron, was indicted for wounding Enoch Cooper, with intent to murder him.

The circumstances of the case were most brutal and revolting. It appeared that the prisoner entered the SWAN public house at Titford, in the parish of Oldbury, on the 5th of July last, and called for liquor, saying he had no money, whereupon prosecutor Cooper offered to give him a shilling. In return for this kindness he challenged the prosecutor to fight, and on his refusing to fight prisoner said he would make him do so; and as the prosecutor sat peaceably in his chair, he seized hold of a leathern apron which prosecutor wore, and attempted to strangle him with it. He then struck him a violent blow on the temple, knocking him down senseless. He then seized him by the hair of the head (prosecutor being all the time quite unconscious), and struck him two violent blows on the jaw, causing a compound fracture, part of the jaw and several of the teeth being forced under the tongue. Not satisfied with this, he proceeded to further violence. The landlady attempted to interfere, whereupon he seized her by the neck, half-strangled her, and forced her out of the room.

The surgeon's evidence showed the wounds to be of a most dangerous description, and was despaired of for some time. The prisoner was the terror of the neighbourhood in which he lived, and had been previously convicted of violent assaults.

The learned Judge characterised the case as one of the most savage, brutal, and unmanly that ever came before him.

Sentence of death was recorded against the prisoner.”

Mr. Baron Wilde said the prisoner had been convicted of the most ferocious and unmanly assault he had ever heard of in his life, and it was his duty to direct that sentence of death should be recorded against him. It would be for her Majesty, in the exercise of her prerogative, to commute the prisoner's sentence, but he (Mr. Baron Wilde) should recommend that the sentence should only be commuted to penal servitude for life or for 20 years.”

“Lost, on Friday last, from the SWAN INN, Tividale, a small white French Dog, with black spot on side of nose. Answers to the name of ‘Sam.’

Anyone returning the same to the above will be rewarded.”

County Advertiser 3/3/1877

“Thomas Murray was charged with assaulting Phoebe Hodgkiss, on the 13th May, 1876, and also with being disorderly, at the SWAN INN, Tividale, which he refused to leave when ordered to do so. The first case was not pressed, and in the latter defendant paid costs.”

County Express 15/12/1883

“Benjamin Rowley, landlord of the SWAN INN, Tividale, was charged with feloniously assaulting Alice Humphreys (13), on the 5th inst. Mr. Shakespeare defended.

Complainant said on the above date, about half-past seven in the morning, she went to defendant’s house for a bucket of water. She met defendant in the passage, and he asked her to go into the bar, adding that he would give her sixpence. He caught hold of her hand and forced her to go. Witness shouted for Mrs. Rowley, and struggled to get away from him, but he prevented her, and committed the assault with which he was charged. In about five minutes her mother came after her, and he let her go on hearing her coming.

By Mr. Shakespeare: Her mother told her to say she was thirteen, saying that it would be more serious for the defendant.

For the defence Mr. Shakespeare contended that the prosecutrix was a consenting party, and eventually the Bench decided to dismiss the charge.”

County Express 5/1/1884

“Benjamin Rowley, landlord of the SWAN INN, Oldbury Road, Tividale, was summoned for permitting gaming. Mr. Waldron appeared to prosecute on behalf of the Authorities. Mr. T. Wright applied for an adjournment on behalf of Mr. Shakespeare. The Bench decided to adjourn the case for fourteen days.

A charge of indecent assault against Rowley was adjourned for a like period.”

“Benjamin Rowley, landlord of the SWAN INN, Tividale, was summoned for permitting gaming. Mr. Waldron prosecuted, and Mr. Hooper (Stokes and Hooper) defended.

Mr. Waldron said he appeared, instructed by the chief of police, to prefer this charge of permitting gaming against the defendant. Some proceedings occurred in that court and during the progress certain conversation and certain hints were thrown out, and the result was that Superintendent Woollaston caused two police-constables, in plain clothes, to visit the defendant’s house on the same evening. They were there from 6.30 until 10.15. During that time, filthy language – and that language was most abominable – was indulged in. No gambling, however, commenced until 8.45, when one of the men, who was in one of the rooms, whispered something to the landlady. The man and the landlady left the room, and they shortly returned with a pack of cards. Gambling then took place. The landlord’s son was there, and the man said to him, ‘What are we going to play for?’ The defendant’s son, replied, ‘Half-a-pint, the same as usual. It will bring a drop of drink in.’ The men commenced playing at cards at ‘All fours, seven up,’ and a man named Dennis won the first game, and ale was brought into the room. At nine o’clock, whilst these men were still playing at cards, the landlady came in and said, ‘Mind what you are doing; there are two bobbies outside.’ The men continued to play until 9.30, when another pint of ale was brought in. The men went on playing until 10.15 when

PS Hand came in, and then there was a scuffle to hide the cards, but PC Whiston, who had been sitting in the place the whole of the time, caught hold of the cards and said to the landlord, 'You cannot say there has been no card playing.' Defendant replied, 'But not for drink.' He (Mr. Waldron) asked for such a penalty to be inflicted as would deter gambling of that description in public houses.

PC Whiston gave evidence in support of Mr. Waldron's opening statement.

Mr. Hooper said he was afraid, after the evidence that had been given by PC Whiston, and which was going to be corroborated by three other police-constables, that it would be folly on his part to attempt to shake the minds of the court on the facts, but he contended that there were two or three facts which would detract from the seriousness of the offence as pointed out by Mr. Waldron.

The Bench inflicted a fine of £5 and costs, and endorsed defendant's license."

AND

"Benjamin Rowley (55), landlord of the SWAN INN, Tividale, was charged with indecently assaulting Mary Ann Humphries, an old woman, on the 25th ult. Mr. Hooper defended.

Prosecutrix alleged that at the request of the defendant she went to his house to fetch a jug of beer, and while there he indecently assaulted her.

There was no corroborative evidence, and the case was dismissed."

County Advertiser 30/8/1884

"The annual brewster sessions for the Parish of Rowley Regis were held at the Police Court, Old Hill, on Wednesday.....

Benjamin Rowley, SWAN INN, Tividale, applied for the renewal of his license. Inspector Walters objected to the renewal of the license on the ground that in addition to a conviction for permitting gaming against Rowley, it was shown in evidence in a case against him of assaulting a female that he conducted the house in a disgraceful manner. The Bench refused to renew the license."

County Advertiser 27/9/1884

"The adjourned licensing sessions for the Old Hill Petty Sessional Division was held at Old Hill Police Court on Wednesday.....

Mr. Shakespeare made an application for the renewal of a license on behalf of Benjamin Rowley, landlord of the SWAN INN, Tividale, whose name appeared on the black list. After deliberating for some time, the Bench determined to give the applicant another chance, and granted the renewal of the license."

Wolverhampton Express and Star 18/3/1885

"At the Oldbury Police Court, today (Wednesday), before Mr. B. T. Sadler, Benjamin Rowley, a beerhouse keeper, of the SWAN, Tividale, was fined 5s and costs, with the alternative of 14 days' imprisonment, for being drunk in Freeth Street on the 17th."

County Express 5/9/1891

"Benjamin Rowley, landlord of the SWAN INN, Dudley Road, Tividale, was summoned for permitting drunkenness on his licensed premises, on the 15th ult. Mr. Waldron appeared to prosecute, and Mr. Shakespeare defended.

On the night in question, shortly after ten o'clock, Police-constables Winfield and McDermott visited the defendant's house, and found a man named Higgins drunk in the passage, and upon going into the taproom they found fifteen or sixteen men, two of whom, Richard Amos and Emanuel Stevens, were drunk, and had drink before them. Winfield called the attention of the defendant to the condition of the three men, and defendant replied, 'I can't help him drinking other people's drink. He has not been supplied with any here.' Upon Winfield saying that he should report the matter, defendant said, 'I hope not; it shall not occur again.'

In reply to Mr. Shakespeare, Winfield said the defendant's house was situated in a rough neighbourhood, and the defendant managed it fairly well.

Police-constable McDermott said two hours before visiting the defendant's house he saw Amos and Stevens in a drunken state on Tipton Road.

Mr. Shakespeare, for the defendant, urged that although the house was in a very rough neighbourhood, it had for seven years been well managed. There was no doubt two of the men were drunk, but they were not supplied with drink by the defendant or his servants. The defendant had not wilfully permitted drunkenness, and under the circumstances he trusted the magistrates would give him the benefit of the doubt.

Mr. Bassano said the magistrates sitting at that Court had no desire to deal harshly with the publicans, knowing full well that it was a difficult trade to manage. In the present case the magistrates thought there had been an infraction of the law by permitting three drunken men to remain on his licensed premises. They deemed it to be their duty to inflict a fine of £5, and £2 11s 6d costs."

AND

"Harry Higgins and Emanuel Stevens, both of Tividale, were charged with being drunk on the licensed premises of the SWAN INN, Tividale, on the 15th ult, and on the evidence of Police-constables Winfield and McDermott were fined 2s 6d and costs."

County Express 12/9/1891

"Richard Amos, Tividale, was charged with being drunk on the licensed premises of Benjamin Rowley, the SWAN INN, Tividale, and was fined 2s and costs."

County Advertiser 27/8/1892

"The annual Brewster Sessions for the Rowley Regis Petty Sessional Division, were held at Old Hill Police Court on Wednesday.....

Inspector Bishop presented his report Appended is a list of publicans who had been convicted during the year....

Benjamin Rowley, the SWAN, Tividale, permitting drunkenness on September 2nd, 1891, fined £5 and costs.....

Mr. W. Shakespeare now appeared for Benjamin Rowley. Inspector Bishop said there was also a conviction against Rowley in 1884 for permitting gaming and he was fined £5 and costs. Police-sergeant Salt said there was a public house next door to Rowley's, and another 50 yards distant. The Bench refused the license. Mr. Shakespeare asked the Bench to give Rowley another chance. Applicant had paid £130 goodwill to go into the house. The Bench said they could not grant the renewal of the license."

“Yesterday, at Rowley Regis, John Aston, landlord of the SWAN INN, Dudley Road, Tividale, was charged with permitting drunkenness on his licensed premises on the 7th inst.

On the day in question Police-constables Heatherley and Edwards saw two men named James Humphries and John Careless leave the defendant’s house staggering from the effects of drink. They asked the defendant if there were any more drunken men on the premises, and defendant replied, ‘I have for an hour and a half been begging of Humphries and Careless to leave, but they would not.’

Mr. Clulow, who represented the Chief-Constable, said under the new Licensing Act it devolved upon the defendant to convince the magistrates that he had taken reasonable steps to comply with the law.

The defence was that in consequence of Humphries and Careless having been dismissed from their situations they resorted to high words, and defendant, in consequence, requested then to leave. There was no indication that they had had too much to drink.

The Bench held that the defendant had not taken reasonable steps to prevent drunken persons remaining on his premises, and inflicted a fine of £5 and £2 15s 6d costs.”

County Advertiser 13/2/1904

“The annual licensing sessions for the Old Hill Petty Sessional Division were held on Wednesday, at the Police Court.....

The Black List. Superintendent Johnson stated that he had given notice to oppose the renewal of the following licenses, on the ground of conviction against the house.....

WHITE SWAN, Dudley Road, Tividale, kept by Frederick Markham.....

Mr. H. Jefferies applied for the renewal of the WHITE STAR [sic] INN, Tividale, to Frederick Markham.

The Bench decided to adjourn the consideration of this matter until the 11th of March in order to make an inspection of the premises, and it was intimated that structural alterations would be required.”

County Advertiser 12/3/1904

“On Wednesday, the adjourned annual licensing sessions for the Old Hill Petty Sessional Division were held at the Police Court.....

The license of the SWAN INN, Tividale, was next considered, Superintendent Johnson explained that the house since the annual general licensing sessions had been renovated. His only objection to renewal was on the ground of the disorderly character of the house, owing to previous convictions against it. The present tenant Frederick Markham was son-in-law of the late licensee John Aston, who was fined £5 and costs for permitting drunkenness in December last. Mr. H. Jeffries addressed the Bench on behalf of the landlord, and the renewal of the license was granted.”

County Advertiser 6/10/1906

“Frederick Markman [sic], of the SWAN INN, Tividale, applied for a certificate from the magistrates as they had lost the original licenses. Granted.”

County Advertiser 9/2/1907

“The annual licensing sessions for the Rowley Regis Petty Sessional Division were held on Wednesday at the Police Court.....

Three license holders Frederick Markham, of the SWAN INN, Tividale had been warned to apply personally for the renewal of their licenses, attended before the magistrates, and Mr. Bassano informed them that they had decided to consider these licenses upon the ground of redundancy.”

County Advertiser 9/3/1907

“The adjourned annual licensing sessions for the Rowley Regis Petty Sessional Division were held on Wednesday at the Police Court.....

Mr. H. Jefferies appeared for Fredrick Markham, the licensee of the SWAN INN, Tividale, and also the owners, Messrs. Holders Brewery Co.

Police-constable Heatherly stated that the house was in very bad repair and was not required. A full licensed house was next door, which had every convenience. During the last six years there had been two blast furnaces, three ironworks, and two brickyards shut down in Tividale district, and as a result the population had greatly decreased. He estimated that there were 1,000 fewer in Tividale than there were five years ago. Mr. Jefferies pointed out that it was the oldest licensed in Tividale. There was a steady trade at the house, and the takings were about £10 to £15 per week. He contended the houses less profitable should be sent to the authorities for compensation.

The Bench decided to refer this license for compensation.”

“Notice is Hereby Given, that the Principal Meeting to be held pursuant to the Licensing Rules, 1904, by the Compensation Authority for the County of Stafford, will be held at the Shire Hall, Stafford, at 10.30 o’clock am, on Tuesday, the 18th day of June, 1907.

And Notice is Hereby also Given, that the Compensation Authority will at the Meeting be prepared to hear, with reference to the Renewal of the Licences of the several Premises specified in the subjoined list.....

SWAN, Dudley Road, Tividale. Beerhouse ‘on’. Licensee, Frederick Markham.”

“The principal meeting of the County Compensation Authority under the Licensing Act, 1904, was held at the Shire Hall, Stafford on Tuesday.....

In the Rowley Regis division the SWAN beerhouse on, Dudley Road, Tividale (Frederick Markham) were referred. Mr. Lawrence appeared for the justices, and, there being no opposition, the committee upheld the refusal to renew the licence in each instance.”

Worcestershire Chronicle 18/11/1857

“An inquest was held at the SYCAMORE INN, near Oldbury, on Saturday last, by R. Docker, Esq, coroner, on the body of Samuel Dunn, wheelwright. The deceased left home, at Oldbury, on the 7th of November, in the afternoon, to go to Wolverhampton on business, and remained at that place with his relatives till Sunday afternoon, when he took the train for Oldbury at half past three o'clock, parting with his brother-in-law in the station yard. He was not seen again or heard of till Saturday morning last, when his body was seen by two men in a bason by the side of the canal, about a quarter of a mile from the Oldbury station of the Stour Valley Railway. His head was at the top of the water, and his body stood in a perpendicular position though the water was about twelve inches deeper than he was tall. Where he was from the time he got off the train till he got into the water remains a mystery, and what brought him near the canal, as it lay in a contrary direction to his way home from the station.

The jury returned an open verdict that he was Found Dead in the canal.

The deceased was about 38 years of age, and was apprenticed to Mr. Joseph Cund, wheelwright, of Tutnal and Copley, near Bromsgrove. After concluding his apprenticeship he worked at several railway carriage works in this country and in France. Of late he worked at Messrs. Johnson and Co.'s carriage works, Oldbury. He has left a widow and one child about six years old. The deceased was generally respected by his employers and his fellow workmen."

"Hubert Insley, Clay Lane, Langley, was charged with being drunk and disorderly at Langley, on Sunday night the 12th inst, and also with having assaulted PC Bayliss on the same date.

The officer stated that in consequence of having heard some talking at the SYCAMORE INN on the night in question, he went and found the defendant at the door. As it was after 10 o'clock he asked for an explanation as to why he was there. The defendant replied that he had come for half a gallon of ale. On being informed that it was after hours he said, 'Then fetch the other people out.' Witness told defendant to leave the premises, and on going into the house he found a person named Smith and his wife. Mrs. Smith, however, it appeared, assisted the landlady and her husband was waiting to take her home. On witness coming out of the house the defendant became very disorderly, and committed the assault.

Jacob Lewis, the landlord of the house, stated that the defendant came for ale after the time for closing, and he was refused a supply. He was not drunk.

The defendant also denied being drunk or having committed the assault, and alleged that the officer had ill-used him.

The charge of drunkenness was dismissed, and a fine of 5s and costs was inflicted for the assault."

“Yesterday an inquest was held at the SYCAMORE INN, Langley, by Mr. E. Docker (coroner), touching the death of Charles Insacker (10), whose parents reside in Clay Lane, Langley, who was drowned on Saturday. Mr. J. S. Sharpe appeared on behalf of Mr. William Comley, the owner of the boat.

Ralph Insacker, father of deceased, stated that he heard his son had got into the canal on Saturday, and as he was going after him he met a man named Hackwood bearing his dead body.

Samuel Insacker, brother of deceased, deposed that on Saturday he was playing with a number of lads on the arm of the canal, near Titford. They saw a boat belonging to Mr. Comley tied up, and a lad named Brinton untied it for the purpose of fetching some bats to make a bonfire. They had fetched one load and gone off for another, the bats being placed all in one end of the boat. In the boat were William White, Samuel Field, Joseph Brinton, deceased, and witness, and after the lad Hackwood had pushed off the boat, he jumped on to the bats, and it began to sink, all of them being thrown into the water. A man named Johnson pulled him out, but he remembered nothing after catching hold of the boat shaft. No one authorised them to use the boat, and they were doing wrong by fetching the bats.

Police-sergeant Stanton deposed to visiting the place, and finding the boat with one end standing out of the water, and the other at the bottom of the canal. It was got out of the water and found to contain about 2cwt of bats. The boat was perfectly safe, but it had been overloaded.

William Hackwood stated that his lad went home on Saturday evening and told him of the accident. He asked him to go to the canal, as there was another boy still in the water. He saw two hats floating in the canal, and commenced to drag, when he pulled the body of deceased out. He afterwards sent for Dr. Sharpe and the police as several of the lads were in an unconscious condition.

The Coroner remarked that the lads were evidently trespassing, and had no authority to use the boat. There was no blame whatever attached to Mr. Comley, the owner.

Mr. Sharpe said he was glad to hear the Coroner say that, as a report had been circulated that the boys had hired the boat, which was totally untrue.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

“Oldbury Local Board.....

It was reported that Mr. J. S. Sharpe, solicitor to Mr. Frederick Mann, of the SYCAMORE INN, Clay Lane, Langley, had given notice of his intention to commence an action against the Board, claiming £50, damages sustained in consequence of the servants of the Board covering over a ditch in Clay Lane, which caused Mr. Mann’s cellar to be flooded.”

Birmingham Daily Post 17/12/1891

“Yesterday, at the West Bromwich County Court – before Mr. Amphlett (deputy judge) and a jury – an action was brought by Frederick Manus [sic], landlord of the SYCAMORE INN, Clay Lane, Langley, against the Oldbury Local Board of Health, to recover £24 15s damages, alleged to have been sustained in consequence of the negligence of the servants of the Board in filling up a watercourse in front of plaintiff’s house, the result being that his house and premises were flooded with surface water. Mr. J. S. Sharpe appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. W. Shakespeare defended.

The case for the plaintiff was that in April last the servants of the Local Board, whilst doing certain work in the locality of his house, filled up a watercourse, and thus turned the surface water into his cellar, and his house was flooded to such an extent that the business was stopped for some days. It was stated that twelve barrels of beer which were in the cellar were knocked about so badly that the beer was not fit to drink and was rendered useless.

The defence was that the damage was the result of a severe storm, and that the defendants were therefore not responsible for it.

The jury gave a verdict for the plaintiff for £20, and costs upon the higher scale.”

Dudley Herald 20/8/1898

“On Thursday afternoon, at the NEWMARKET HOTEL, Wolverhampton, Mr. W. H. Phillips (coroner) held an inquest relative to the death of Ambrose Smith, 58, late of the SYCAMORE INN, Clay Lane, Langley Green, who died in the Wolverhampton General Hospital on Tuesday, from injuries received the same day. Elizabeth Smith, widow of deceased, said she and her husband went to Wolverhampton on Tuesday with the intention of going to Dunstall Park races. After leaving the train they got into a wagonette, but before arriving at Dunstall Park her husband left it to get a glass of ale. Subsequently she heard a shout, and next saw her husband insensible.

Joseph Lissiman, Mitre Fold, said he was walking down the Stafford road when he heard a shout, and on going up he saw deceased under a horse's feet. The cab was then quite still, but it had passed him at a steady pace 50 yards away. He helped to get the man to the hospital. In his opinion there was no one to blame. PC Smith said he saw Smith knocked down by what he thought was one of the shafts of the cab. The driver was going steadily and there was a wagonette in front of him. He had seen the same driver going to and fro, and had not occasion to speak to him for reckless driving. When deceased was shouted at he appeared to take no notice; but the driver pulled up at once.

PC Clews said that the cab was pulled up sufficiently soon to prevent the wheels going over the deceased.

Richard Armitage, house surgeon, said deceased died from a fracture of the base of the skull.

Charles Etheridge, of Titford Road, Langley, spoke to seeing the shaft of the cab strike deceased on the head. Deceased and a friend had previously had two pints of ale in the BRIDGE INN.

Birmingham Mail 30/7/1901

"Today, at Oldbury Police Court, before Messrs. T. Lavender and E. Danks, Elizabeth Smith, licensee of the SYCAMORE INN, Clay Lane, Langley, was summoned for permitting drunkenness on her licensed premises on Sunday, the 14th inst, also for selling intoxicants to a drunken person on the same date.

Mr. J. S. Sharpe, who appeared to prosecute, explained that the prosecution was a sequel to a drinking bout, a death, and an inquest. On Sunday night, the 14th inst, a man named Joseph Sheldon – who, unfortunately, was drowned that night – went to the SYCAMORE INN about nine o'clock in company with another man named Lewis. Sheldon had had drink before he went there, and he remained at the SYCAMORE INN until closing time. Evidence would be given to show that Sheldon was not sober when he entered defendant's house, and exhibited signs of being drunk during the time he remained there. At ten o'clock deceased left the SYCAMORE INN with several other men, and there was no doubt he was then very much the worse for drink. As they passed the Birmingham Canal at Titford two or three of the deceased man's companions suggested a bathe, and one or two of them got into the water. As soon as Sheldon got into the water he was observed struggling, and a man named Bastable got him out. The poor fellow was, however, so much the worse for drink that he did not understand the danger he was incurring, and persisted in getting in the water again. Twice he was rescued, but the third time was too much for him, and he sank under the water, and the next time he was fished out he was dead.

For the defence it was contended that defendant was not aware that the man Sheldon was drunk when he was in her house.

Mr. Lavender said the Bench considered there was a good deal of suspicion about the case, but the evidence was not sufficient to warrant a conviction. The case was then dismissed."

Elizabeth Smith was fined 20s and 54s 6d costs, on 10th November 1901, for permitting drunkenness.

Smethwick Weekly News 31/5/1902

"James Williams (28), High Street, Langley, was fined 10s and costs, 15s 6d in all, for being drunk on the licensed premises of the SYCAMORE INN, Clay Lane, on the 12th inst.

Birmingham Daily Gazette 18/2/1903

"The adjourned licensing sessions were held at Oldbury yesterday. The Chairman (Mr. G. Heaton) announced that the magistrates had passed a resolution requiring all license holders to give six months' notice, and deposit with the clerk to the justices plans of their licensed premises.

It was decided to grant the whole of the music licenses applied for, but the three licenses for dancing were granted on the understanding that no intoxicants were supplied in the rooms where it took place. Mr. Heaton announced that the magistrates had decided to discontinue granting occasional licenses for football matches, as they were of opinion that there was sufficient provision for obtaining drink. They had also passed a resolution viewing with disfavour the establishment of air-gun clubs at public houses..... They renewed the license of the SYCAMORE INN, but would not sanction the suggested alterations.”

Mr. A. M. Chance presided at Oldbury. The report of Superintendent Hill stated that there were 126 licences in the district, a reduction of seven on the previous year, which compared with the estimated population, gave a ratio of one on-licence to every 354 of the inhabitants. One licence-holder only was convicted during the year, while eighty-eight persons were convicted for drunkenness, a decrease of forty-three on the previous year.....

The police objected to the renewal of the following twelve licences which will be considered at the adjourned sessions, to be held on March 2.....

SYCAMORE INN.”

“The adjourned licensing sessions for Oldbury were held yesterday, Mr. G. S. Albright presiding in the absence, through illness, of Mr. A. M. Chance. The magistrates were sitting for several hours, chiefly in hearing evidence regarding the following licensed houses, to the renewal of which the police objected on the grounds of redundancy, the magistrates proposing to refer them for compensation.....

Evidence was given in each case by Superintendent Hill and Mr. F. H. Jones, auctioneer and valuer, as to the nature of the houses, and the proximity of other licensed premises. The magistrates afterwards retired to consider the cases, and upon resuming Mr. Albright said they had decided to refer the following six houses to Worcester to be dealt with under compensation: CRYSTAL PALACE, NAVIGATION INN, HOPE AND ANCHOR, FOUNTAIN, CROSS KEYS, and BIRD IN HAND. All the other licences would be renewed, and the licences of these six would be provisionally renewed pending the county committee’s investigations.....”

“Mr. A. M. Chance presided at the special Licensing Sessions at Oldbury yesterday, when Mr. J. S. Sharpe, on behalf of Holders Brewery Ltd, applied for permission to rebuild the following houses: SYCAMORE INN (L. V.), Clay Lane; SPREAD EAGLE (full licence), Park Lane; and the ROYAL OAK (beerhouse), corner of Langley Green Road and Causeway Green Road.

Mr. Sharpe said the police had objected to the renewal of the licence of the SYCAMORE, because the premises were structurally unsuitable. The plans provided for the rebuilding of the premises, which were old-fashioned and dilapidated. The domestic accommodation would be greatly improved, and in consideration of a slight increase in the drinking area they would surrender the licence of the RAILWAY INN, Langley Green Road, an ante-69 beerhouse. With regard to the other two applications there would be no increase in the drinking area, but the domestic quarters would be much improved in each case. The ROYAL OAK would be set back some distance, and 150 square yards of land would be given up for improving the corner. Mr. A. Edwards, architect, of Birmingham, submitted plans, and said the cost would be about £1,000 in each case. The alterations would be completed in the licensing year.

Mr. Chance asked that the RAILWAY INN should be closed at Midsummer, and the applications were then granted, subject to the surrender being satisfactory.”

“George Drew, aged 35, stamper, and Hugh Starrs, aged 29, labourer, committed from Oldbury, were indicted at Worcester Assizes yesterday for breaking into the house of Arthur Fellows, 146, Titford Road, Langley, and stealing a wireless set and other articles on the night of 2 April. Starrs pleaded guilty and Drew not guilty.

Mr. J. F. Bourke, prosecuting, said that on the date named the two men were drinking in the SYCAMORE INN, Langley. They left at 10pm, having had quite enough, and took with them seven bottles of beer and stout. They then went to a ‘sing-song’ at a friend’s house and did justice to the bottles they had purchased. About 11.15 Drew and Starrs left the party, the latter’s behaviour having become peculiar. He had taken off both his shoes and insisted on leaving the house in the rain without them. About 20 minutes later Mr. and Mrs. Fellows, who were asleep, were awakened by noises in the house. They were just in time to see the front door closing. The living room had been ransacked, and the wireless set and other articles were missing.

The police said that the house had been entered by raising the latch of the front door through a hole smashed in the glass. There was some blood about inside the house, and one of Starr’s shoes was found there.

When Drew was arrested it was seen he had two cuts on his wrist. He said, ‘I have not seen any wireless set, I had been drinking.’

Inspector Birch, fingerprint department, Scotland Yard, said the only fingerprint found in the house was Starr’s.

Drew, in the box, said that once the front door of Drury’s was shut witness handed Starrs his shoes, parted from him, and went home in the opposite direction from Fellows’ house. He knew nothing of the burglary. Drew was sentenced to 12 months’ hard labour and Starrs to eight months’ hard labour.”

It closed at 10pm on 15th December 1938.

"Unless an Oldbury woman was granted permission to build a piggery her business would suffer to such an extent that she might not be able to continue business at all. This was stated at an Oldbury enquiry yesterday into an appeal by Mrs. S. G. Davies, of the SYCAMORE INN, Langley, against refusal by Oldbury Borough Council to allow her to build a piggery in Clay Lane, Oldbury.

Mr. Parker, for Mrs. Davies, said the piggery would be completely enclosed, and there would be nothing to see, smell, or hear. Mrs. Davies, who kept the SYCAMORE INN as a transport café, was in danger of losing a lot of business as a nearby transport depot was likely to close down in the near future. 'It might well be impossible for Mrs. Davies to conduct her business in the way in which it was intended,' Mr. Parker added, 'and she has thought out some means by which she may live there and make her living.'

For the Council, Mr. W. Wilkes (Deputy Town Clerk) claimed that the piggery should not be set up in Clay Lane because it was partly a residential area.

After the hearing Mr. J. R. Sailer, Inspector for the Ministry of Housing and Local Government, visited the Clay Lane site. His decision will be made known later."

It became a hostel. [1956]

Tipton Herald 19/6/1965

"The old SYCAMORE INN on the banks of the Titford Canal in Clay Lane, Langley, is about to change owners and use for the third time in ten years.

Until 1955 it was a public house. But Allbright and Wilson, who imported 100 Italian labourers at about that time, bought it and used it as an hostel. Over the years, the Italians have married into the community and eventually bought their own houses. Now there is no longer any use for the 33-bedroomed residential hostel.

A London firm of industrial caterers continues to run the hostel for the company and other Oldbury firms, but the demand has dwindled and Allbright and Wilson have decided to sell."

"We stated in our last that a man named John Hadley, in the employment of Messrs. Dawes and Sons, Oldbury, had died on the preceding Tuesday morning of injuries he received in a quarrel with a young man named Waterhouse, who was apprehended, and awaited a coroner's inquest, which was held on the Friday following, and, by adjournment, on Tuesday, the 27th ult, before George Hinchliffe, Esq, coroner, and a most respectable jury.

The greatest interest was excited in the town and neighbourhood, and the large concert room of the TALBOT HOTEL, in which the inquest was held, was densely crowded by persons anxious to witness the proceedings.

The evidence went to prove that Waterhouse and deceased had been drinking till one o'clock on the morning of the 19th ult, at the FOUNTAIN INN, Oldbury, with several other persons. When the party left, Waterhouse was sober, but the deceased was very fresh, and insisted on following Waterhouse into the house of a man named Pigott, one of the party. Waterhouse, seeing him behind, turned round, and after some angry words had passed between the two, he struck the deceased three or four times. The deceased kept retreating backwards all the time, saying he would not fight, until he was knocked down. On witness going to assist him to rise up, he found him quite insensible. He died shortly afterwards.

The jury returned a verdict of Manslaughter against Waterhouse, who has been committed to take his trial for the offence."

[At Worcestershire Summer Assizes a verdict of Not Guilty was returned – for full report see under FOUNTAIN.]

Worcester Journal 7/8/1845

"During the week two fatal accidents have occurred in pits in the neighbourhood of Oldbury, the cause of death being in both cases precisely similar. The sufferers were Richard Hall, forty-four, and George Baker, twenty-one years of age, the former being employed in the pits of Messrs. Houghton, and the latter in Messrs. Williams and Parker's. Both accidents occurred nearly at the same time. The men were engaged at their usual occupations, when, in the course of their excavations, a sudden fall of coal took place, burying both underneath, in the presence of their fellow-workmen, who were engaged in similar operations close by. At the inquests held at the TALBOT INN, Oldbury, before George Hinchliffe, Esq, the Coroner was particular in his enquiries as to whether any blame rested with the managers, but such did not appear to have been the case. The mine was considered perfectly safe, and, under these circumstances, verdicts of Accidental Death were returned.”

Birmingham Journal 13/9/1845

“On Wednesday, a meeting was held at the TALBOT INN, Oldbury, for the purpose of considering the propriety of supporting the Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Stour Valley Railway.

Lucas Chance, Esq, having been called to the chair, observed that as yet the inhabitants of the districts in which they were assembled had not derived any advantage from the railway system, owing to the want of a direct line of communication with the main lines of the kingdom. At present nearly all the manufactured goods in that locality were conveyed by canals, and other slow means, so that it was almost impossible for them to compete successfully with the mine owners and manufacturers of other parts of the kingdom.

Philip Williams, Esq, then entered into an explanation of the nature of the undertaking, and was followed by Mr. Wainwright, who also pointed out the advantages to the district which would result from the construction of the Birmingham and Wolverhampton, and Stour Valley Line.

Mr. James Chance then moved the first resolution, and in doing so observed that unless they could obtain the benefit of a useful line of railway through that district, they would be much better without any line at all. At present they were placed in a disadvantageous position with regard to other manufacturers, and he thought they were fully entitled to a good connecting line.

The resolution approving of the line having been seconded, it was carried unanimously, after which Mr. Brahmah was called to the chair, and thanks having been given to Mr. Chance, the meeting separated.”

“On Tuesday an inquest was held at the house of Mr. Parrish, the TALBOT INN, Oldbury, to inquire into the death of a male infant, whose body had been found the week previous, in a water closet attached to the house of Mr. Nock. It appeared from the evidence of Mr. Cooper, surgeon, that for several weeks past he had been attending a girl named Maria Jeffs, who was in the service of Mr. Nock's mother, and, suspecting that she was pregnant, he had treated her accordingly. On the afternoon of the Friday week previous, the girl came into the house of Mrs. Nock, jun, and sat down. She appeared to be very unwell, and on Mrs. Nock making inquiry as to the cause, she said she had been poorly all night. Mrs. Nock advised her to go home and tell her mistress the state she was in, and she accordingly (as Mrs. Nock supposed) left the house. It appears, however, that before leaving she went into the water closet, and there gave birth to the infant, which was found the day following by Mary Morteboy, Mrs. Nock's servant, while engaged cleaning out the place. Information of the circumstance having been given to the police, the body was taken to Mr. Cooper, by whom it was examined, and that gentleman ascertained from the state of the lungs that the child had breathed, that it was about seven months old; but he could not say that it had been perfectly born alive. Mr. Cooper added that the mother might, under the circumstances, have given birth to the child without being aware of it. On Mr. Cooper charging her with giving birth to the child, she said, 'Not that I am aware of.' On a review of all the facts of the case, the Jury were of opinion that no criminal concealment of birth had been attempted, and a verdict in accordance with the evidence was therefore returned., thus freeing the unfortunate girl from all ulterior proceedings."

“A little more than a fortnight ago the bodies of two newly-born illegitimate male infants were discovered in the Old Cross Quarry, on the hills of Rowley. They were laid one on top of the other, and covered with stones and soil, the topmost child being found alive, although it expired in a few minutes after it was found. The evidence taken at the previous Coroner’s inquiries on the subject went to show that both children had been born alive, and both had died from syncope, brought on by congestion of the lungs, which was originated by the covering of the bodies with earth and exposure to cold. The mother of the deceased is a young unmarried female named Mary Smith, and the inquest was adjourned for the police to make further inquiry. Yesterday the inquest was resumed at the TALBOT HOTEL, Oldbury, before Mr. R. Docker, the District Coroner. Superintendent Overend of Hales Owen, and Superintendent Mills, of the Brierly Hill Police were present. Mr. H. Jackson attended on behalf of the mother of the deceased.

Several witnesses were examined, inclusive of a man named Vaughan, the reputed father of the children. He admitted having visited Mary Smith on the 14th inst at the BARLEY MOW INN, Rowley. She told him she had been confined on the Rowley Hills, but did not tell him more. He refused to relieve her, and left the house. He had given her money on several occasions. Did not know who was the father of the children. The inquest was adjourned till Monday week, for the police to make further inquiry into the matter, and to enable the mother of the deceased, who had not yet recovered from her confinement to be brought up in the Coroner’s Court.”

“On Monday afternoon at the TALBOT HOTEL, Oldbury, the enquiry which had been adjourned from the 29th ult, touching the death of the twin male infants discovered in the margin of a quarry on the Rowley Hills, near Rounds Green, on Tuesday, the 14th of March, was resumed before R. Docker, Esq, Coroner. The particulars of the occurrence have already appeared in full in the Observer. Mr. Overend, Superintendent of Police, of Halesowen, and Mr. Mills, Superintendent of Police, of Brierley Hill, were present. Mr. Jackson, solicitor, West Bromwich, appeared on behalf of the woman Smith, to watch the case.

Having been duly cautioned by the learned Coroner, and the depositions having been fully read over to her, she made the following statement. ‘On the day the children were born, I was coming from Dudley, and as I was coming across the hills I was suddenly taken by the pains of labour, near the place where the children were found. The children were born shortly after. As soon as I could I got to the first place I could find to get some one who might fetch the children away. I was quite alone at the time of their birth. After they were born I staid with them till I had almost endangered my own life. I was in that state that I did not know where I was or what I was doing. I made sure the two children were dead before I left them.’

The learned Coroner then summed up analysing the evidence carefully, and the Jury, after nearly two hours deliberation, returned the following special verdict, two gentlemen out of the fourteen dissenting. That Mary Smith is the mother of the children; that death was produced by suffocation; that suffocation was produced by the act of Mary Smith through labour coming on at a time and place when she did not expect it.”

[At Worcestershire Summer Assizes Mary Smith was indicted for the murder of her two children. She was found not guilty and acquitted. Aaron Vaughan, the father of the children, was severely reprimanded for his inhuman conduct to her.

An account of the Assizes appears under the BARLEY MOW, Oakham, Rowley Regis.]

“On Thursday, a fatal accident occurred in the Blue Fly Colliery, near Oldbury. When the men went down the pit in the morning, a piece of coal was seen to project over one of the 'settings,' and, it being considered dangerous, one of the men, named Shakspeare, was instructed to get it away. As he was giving what he considered the final blow with his pick, the settings gave way, and the immense quantity of coal and rock fell, burying Shakspeare and killing him on the spot. Another man named Franks was caught by the falling rock, and trapped, but he was got out without suffering seriously. It was some time before Shakspeare's body could be recovered."

The first was on the body of John Shakespeare, miner, who was killed in the Blue Fly Pit by a fall of earth, as already reported in this paper. The verdict was Accidental Death.

The second inquest was on the body of Hannah Humphreys, aged three years, daughter of a miner, whose death was caused by her brother, scarcely two years old, thrusting a stick in the fire, through the guard, and then holding it while burning against his sister's clothes, thus setting her dress on fire. She died from the effects of the burns. Verdict, Accidental Death."

"East Worcestershire Election.....

The polling at Oldbury commenced with great vigour punctually at eight o'clock. The booth, which was a double one, was erected upon some ground opposite to the church in Birmingham Street, and in front of the JUNCTION INN. Every exertion was used to bring the voters to the poll, and as the day advanced, persons interested in the election began to assemble till they numbered several thousands. In case of any disturbance – fears of which were for some days prior to yesterday entertained – a number of special constables were sworn in. In addition to Sergeant Simmonds and the regular police force belonging to the town, thirty constables, under the direction of Superintendent Wollaston, of West Bromwich, and twenty from Hanley, under Superintendent Baker, were also in attendance throughout the day. Beyond plenty of chaffing, nothing worthy of notice occurred until about half-past four o'clock in the afternoon, when a 'row' was commenced by some 'roughs' – whether they belonged to the town in uncertain, but rather doubtful – who started a song of 'The Tory House' meaning the TALBOT HOTEL (Mr. Amphlett's committee rooms), which was taken up by others, who at once made a rush to the top of Birmingham Street, when they halted in front of the TAL-

BOT. Stones and brick-ends &c, were hurled by the roughs, and a large number of the panes of glass in the windows were broken. The lamp over the front was also smashed and rendered almost useless. For half an hour stones were hurled in all directions, and several persons are alleged to have sustained serious bodily injury. The windows in the OLD TALBOT, kept by a person named Duckhouse (which was also another 'Tory house'), were also smashed. As things were assuming rather a serious aspect the assistance of the police was procured, and they paraded some of the principal streets, headed by Mr. F. Adkins, JP. A charge was made upon the crowd by them, and during the skirmish a man named Gibbs is known to have received a violent blow upon the forehead. He was taken into Mr. Holland's surgery, and his wound dressed. Most of the shops during the day were closed.

"Elizabeth Ann Edwards, aged 20, was charged with robbing her master, Mr. J. Reed, proprietor of the TALBOT HOTEL, Oldbury. The prisoner, who had only been in the service of prosecutor for twelve days, was, on the 30th of April, found to be wearing a petticoat, the property of prosecutor's daughter. She was ordered to take it off, and on her box being searched a number of other articles were found, all of which belonged to prosecutor. Prisoner was taken into the prosecutor's service with a good character. On inquiry being made by Police-constable Simmons, it was found that prisoner had been previously convicted for a similar offence. She was now committed to the house of correction for four months, with hard labour."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 10/3/1871

"Yesterday afternoon, an inquest was held at the TALBOT HOTEL, Oldbury, before Mr. R. Docker (District Coroner), touching the death of James Waterhouse, of Brades Village, one of the colliers who was injured at the fatal pit accident at Messrs. Howell and Mason's Buffery Colliery, Dudley, on the 10th February. Mr. Baker, the Government Inspector, was in attendance at the inquiry.

Peter Shaw, manager of the pit (No.3) in which the accident occurred, stated that on the morning in question, deceased was set by him to work in the 'waste cog,' which was not above 4 feet high, and was about 3 yards beyond the air. Witness instructed a man under him to try the air before the work commenced, when there appeared to be no danger. Was down the pit several times himself, but did not try the place where deceased was at work, nor did he see any sulphur. The explosion occurred at about twelve o'clock, and witness was there at the time it happened. He was showing deceased what to do Could not say whether, if there had been a proper current of air, it would have driven out the noxious gas.....

William Jones, Langley Green, deposed to the injuries received by deceased; and Dr. Pemberton testified to the serious nature of the burns and the shock to the system, which resulted in the death of the deceased.

The Coroner, in summing up, after detailing the particulars of the accident, referred to that part of the evidence touching the ventilation of the pit, and said it might enter into their (the jury's) consideration how far the manager or other person, responsible for the air going into the particular working, was legally liable for the fatal consequences of that calamity. But such a consideration as that seemed to him (Mr. Docker) rather remote, because even if there had been adequate ventilation he could not see how the rapid and constant generation of dangerous gases could be avoided. Although it was contrary to one of the special rules to have these 'blind sides,' still in that particular instance the proprietors thought it safe; there was no doubt about that. Whether the jury thought that the non-observance of one of the regulations led to the accident he would still remind them that such non-observance would not bring the offending party within the reach of the criminal law, although it would lay him open to a charge before the magistrates of a minor degree.

The jury, having consulted for about half an hour, returned with the following verdict. We are of opinion that the deceased met with his death by accident, but that the proprietors are to blame in consequence of not having better ventilation in that part of the work where the accident occurred."

“John Allsopp, landlord of the TALBOT HOTEL, Oldbury, was summoned for keeping his house open, at an illegal hour, on the 4th of December. Mr. Shakespeare appeared for the defendant.

Police-constables George Firth and Joseph Parks stated that they went to the TALBOT HOTEL about twenty minutes past eleven o’clock on the night mentioned, and finding the front door open they went into the smoke room, where there were three gentlemen; two of them were drinking liquor, and the third ale. In the passage the policemen saw four other gentlemen and two ladies leaving the house. They spoke to the landlord, who admitted that it was after time, and immediately requested the customers to retire. The policemen then left the house. The landlord followed them to the door, and invited Firth to come back, for the landlady wished to speak to him. He returned, and Mrs. Allsopp asked him if he would have something ‘short’ or some ale to drink. He refused, and went away.

For the defence, Mr. Shakespeare stated that the TALBOT was the principal hotel in Oldbury, that it was the oldest-established licensed house in the town, and that there had been no complaints against it for fifty years. Police-constable Firth, however, contradicted the statement of the solicitor, and declared that there had recently been numerous complaints against the house, and that he had frequently seen bad characters congregated there. Mr. Shakespeare said that he was surprised at the announcement. He was unaware of any improprieties, and he warmly admonished the constable for not having mentioned the circumstance to the Magistrates.

Mr. Shakespeare denied that any offence had been committed. Mr. Allsopp usually kept his clock ten minutes in advance of the correct time, and the constables were thereby deceived. The gentlemen in the smoke room were three of the oldest inhabitants of Oldbury. They had previously left the house, five minutes before closing time, but had returned for a walking-stick that one of them had forgotten. While there they remained to drink the liquor and ale that they had left in their glasses. The ladies and gentlemen observed by the police in the passage had attended a dancing class at the TALBOT, and one of them was Ensign Kean, of the Oldbury Company of Rifle Volunteers. No refreshments had been supplied after the hour of closing. Adverting to the law upon the question, Mr. Shakespeare quoted the case of Coates v South, published in the Law Times reports, wherein it was decided that the Justices were not warranted in convicting an innkeeper for opening his house for the sale of spirits merely because it was shown that the front door of the inn was open after twelve o’clock, although persons were there, and one glass contained spirits. Further, Chief Justice Cockburn ruled that a landlord was not bound to turn his customers out when the clock struck twelve, and the Court considered that the charge must be established by direct evidence of a sale after twelve o'clock at night – a distinct opening after that hour, or some act on the part of the landlord which would show that the house was wilfully kept open for the purpose of inviting customers in. Mr. Shakespeare held that the law was precisely the same under the new Act. The solicitor's statements were supported by evidence.

The Magistrates' Clerk pointed out that it did not necessarily follow that, although persons were found in the house, they had been drinking there.

Eventually the Justices dismissed the case, remarking that they gave the landlord the benefit of the doubt."

Birmingham Daily Post 13/2/1873

"At the Petty Sessions, on Tuesday, Mr. Shakespeare, solicitor, made an application on behalf of John Allsopp, TALBOT HOTEL, for an extension of hours until 4am on the 14th March on the occasion of an annual ball, and also for a temporary license to sell refreshments in the People's Hall, opposite his house, where the ball would be held. In reply to the Bench, Mr. Shakespeare explained that the supper would be given in the applicant's house. The extension was granted until two o'clock. Mr. Avery cautioned the applicant that the supply of refreshments must be restricted to the visitors at the ball after closing hours."

Birmingham Daily Post 22/7/1873

"A fatal accident, resulting from a fall downstairs, occurred on Saturday morning, to a brewer and hostler, named Edward Simms, in the employ of Mr. Allsopp, of the TALBOT HOTEL, Oldbury. During the absence of Mr. Allsopp and family on a holiday tour, Simms remained at the hotel, and slept in the malt-room. About six o'clock on Saturday morning, Mr. Joseph Allsopp, brother of the landlord, found the deceased sitting in a chair in the kitchen, apparently in a stupor. Mr. Allsopp shook him, and endeavoured to arouse him, but was unsuccessful. He then sent for a surgeon, and Mr. Hayward attended, and, upon examination, stated that his skull was fractured. It appeared that the deceased had accidentally fallen down the stairs leading from the malt-room. He died three hours after he was discovered, and at a Coroner's enquiry, yesterday, the Jury returned a verdict in accordance with the above facts."

“On Tuesday night an extraordinary accident, attended with fatal results, occurred at the Blakeley Hall Colliery, near West Bromwich. It appears that two men – one named Francis John Woodward, and the other Debney, who were employed sinking – placed their tools in a bowk, which they hooked to a chain in order that it might be drawn up the pit shaft. When the bowk was about half-way up the chain broke, and the bowk fell to the bottom, cutting the top of Woodward’s head clean off, and crushing an arm and leg, death, of course, being instantaneous. Debney was seriously injured. An inquest was formally opened at the TALBOT HOTEL, Oldbury, on Wednesday night, and adjourned. The deceased, Woodward, who was married, was formerly a resident in Dudley Street, Brierley Hill.”

“On Friday, Mr. R. Docker, district coroner, held an enquiry at the TALBOT HOTEL, Oldbury, touching the death of Francis John Woodward, sinker, who was killed by the fall of a bowk at the Blakeley Hall Colliery, on the 16th inst.

Jonah Debney, a man who was injured by the same accident, said that he, with the deceased, was working at the bottom of the shaft.....

Charles Sperrings, contractor, said he was upon the pit bank when the accident happened, and he shortly afterwards descended the workings and made an external examination of the bowk and chain. The only reason he could assign for the accident was that the bowk and hook at the end of the chain had not been properly connected before the signal was given to the engineman to wind up.

The jury at this point returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

“At the Oldbury County Court yesterday, before Mr. W. D. Griffiths, judge, an interpleader case was heard, the claimant being Mrs. Jane Keen, wife of Mr. W. J. Keen, formerly landlord of the TALBOT HOTEL, Oldbury. It appeared that the husband of the claimant owed Messrs. Hyam and Co. an account for goods supplied to the amount of something like £18. Not being able to obtain payment, they brought an action against him in the County Court, and obtained judgement for the amount claimed. Under that judgment they put an execution in the defendant’s house and seized his goods. Then the wife, the present claimant, by an interpleader summons, claimed these goods on the ground that they were bought with a gift of £100 presented to her by Mr. Walter Showell for her sole and separate use. The letter from Mr. Showell, in which he enclosed a cheque to Mrs. Keen for £100, was read. It appeared that Mr. Showell had sold the goods belonging to claimant’s husband under a bill of sale, but out of sympathy with Mrs. Keen made her a present of £100, specifying that it was to be devoted to her sole and separate use; that her husband was not to handle it, neither was it to be used in paying his debts.

Mr. Daly contended that such condition, made by a mere letter, could not be binding upon the husband. His Honour held that such a letter as that read to the Court, making a gift under such circumstances, was perfectly valid and conclusive. Mr. Daly pointed out that it was a novel point to raise, and might in the future lead to difficulty in these matters. He should like a case for a superior court. His Honour, in reply, said he was sorry to say he could not grant Mr. Daly a case, as he had not the power in an interpleader. He wished he had, because he felt that the point was a novel and important one, and he should like to have taken the opinion of the superior court upon it. He then gave judgement for the claimant, with costs against the execution creditor.”

“On Tuesday, Mr. R. Docker held two inquests at the TALBOT HOTEL, respecting the deaths of Thomas Harper (20), labourer, formerly residing in Eel Street, and Levi Moss (11), of No.4, Stone Street. Lucy Harper, mother of deceased, said on Friday night her son left home about a quarter to five o’clock to go to the chemical works. She did not hear of him again until his body was found in the canal. Josiah Fox, of Portway Road, deposed to finding the body at the bottom of the Churchbridge Arm. In reply to the Coroner it was stated that along the canal side was the nearest way from deceased’s house to the chemical works. Dr. Lyddon was called to see the body, but death had taken place several hours previous. The appearance of the body was consistent with death from drowning. The Coroner said it appeared to be one of those unfortunate accidents due to the fog on Friday night, and it was nothing to be wondered at that people should walk into the canal looking at the night. The jury found a verdict of Accidental Death. In the case of Levi Moss, Mrs. Moss said she returned home from taking dinner to Spon Lane, about five minutes to two o’clock. Deceased then left home to go to school, but as he did not return in the evening a search was made. Josiah Fox found the body in the Churchbridge Arm, on Saturday. Verdict Accidental Death.”

“It is with regret we record the sudden death of Mr. John Morgan, and old and respected townsman of Oldbury, which occurred early on Wednesday morning at his residence in Birmingham Street. It appears he went to bed as usual about 11.30 o’clock, nothing having occurred to give the slightest warning of the sad catastrophe that soon befell him. At 12 he was seized with a fit of coughing, which caused him to burst a blood vessel, and although everything was done for him that possibly could be, he died in about half an hour afterwards, Dr. Lester arriving a few minutes before he expired.

Deceased was for many years engaged at the Brades Steel Works, and about nine months ago took to a stationers shop in Birmingham Street. He was a Forrester, and was admitted an Oddfellow in 1847, and for 25 years secretary to the Loyal Benevolent Lodge of Oddfellows held at the TALBOT HOTEL. When the case was called on, prosecutor intimated that he wished to withdraw the charge, as the affair turned out to be a practical joke. At the request of the Bench, prosecutor narrated the facts of the case, and explained that the leg of pork was hanging on a rod in his premises on the day in question, and during the evening it was taken away. Afterwards he visited the defendant’s house, thinking perhaps it might be the result of practical joking, and that he should find it. When he saw the defendant he asked him to bring the pork back, and added, ‘Is it a joke?’ to which the defendant replied in the affirmative, and said he should have sent it back on the following morning. The next day defendant saw him concerning the matter, and apologised.

The Clerk: Is this the first thing defendant has taken? – Witness: Yes.

The Clerk: What about the hare? – Witness: He did not take it; it was between him and another gentleman.

Mr. Chance (magistrate): It seems, then, that you considered it a practical joke all through? – Witness: Yes.

Mr. Chance: Then you were rather in a hurry to take out the summons.

The defendant was discharged.”

“Mr. E. Docker yesterday resumed an inquest at the TALBOT HOTEL, Oldbury, relative to the death of Alfred Frederick Steventon, aged six months. Deceased was alleged to have died from vaccination. Mr. Grant appeared for the mother, and Dr. Acland represented the Royal Commission on Vaccination. Witnesses stated that about a fortnight after vaccination the arm began to swell, and that the child never recovered from the effects of vaccination.

Dr. Cunningham deposed to making a post mortem examination of the body on the 19th ult. Death was in his opinion due to inflammation of the lungs, brought on by improper feeding and neglect. He did not think vaccination had anything to do with the cause of death.

Mr. Grant addressed the jury, and suggested that vaccination was the indirect cause of death. The child, being previously weakened by the effects of vaccination, was ultimately killed by inflammation of the lungs. The Coroner, having summed up at considerable length, the jury returned a verdict to the effect that the child died from inflammation of the lungs. They did not think vaccination was the cause of death, but were of opinion that the vaccination had tended to weaken the system of the child, so that it could not battle with the inflammation.

The enquiry lasted seven hours.”

“Today, at Oldbury Police Court, Thomas Mead (64), musician, of no fixed abode, was charged with begging.

Police-constable Shelvock deposed to seeing defendant begging in Birmingham Street last night, and in consequence of his conduct he locked him up.

Prisoner emphatically denied that he was begging, and said he was playing a concertina and singing for his living. He further added that he was tried 16 years ago for singing in front of the TALBOT HOTEL, Oldbury, but the case was dismissed, and he entered an action against the superintendent of police for false imprisonment. (Laughter.)

Mr. A. M. Chance (presiding magistrate): What do you sing?

Prisoner: ‘Tom Bowling.’ (Renewed laughter.) I had barely sung two words when the officer caught hold of me.

Mr. Chance expressed a desire to hear prisoner sing, and the latter, amidst roars of laughter in Court, commenced to render ‘Tom Bowling’ in a loud tenor voice.

Prisoner had almost completed the first verse when Mr. Chance stopped him with the remark that he was satisfied that he had got a voice. Under the circumstances the case would be dismissed, but he advised Mead to make his singing a matter of business and not begging next time.”

“Disappearance of a Relieving Officer. A sensation has been created in Oldbury by the sudden disappearance of Mr. J. H. Withers from his home at Langley. About seven o’clock on Friday night Mr. Withers was giving some information to our representative, and since nine o’clock the same night he has not been seen. There is not the slightest suggestion that there is anything wrong with his accounts. They were audited only a few days ago and found to be in perfect order. He left his keys at the TALBOT HOTEL, Oldbury, on Friday night, cashed a cheque for £2 and borrowed 5s from a local gentleman. He seems to have gone to Liverpool, as his wife, it is said, received a telegram handed in there which stated he should be back in a few days. A letter was also received from him by one of the Union officials, and in consequence of this the Guardians in committee on Monday appointed Mr. D. Sykes, the West Bromwich relieving officer. Mrs. Withers has been to Liverpool with some friends to try to discover her husband, but without success.”

Evening Despatch 11/12/1942

“.....Birmingham’s Book Drive has resulted in only 100,000 books being handed in So far, the sorting has shown that about 70 per cent of the books go to pulping, 24 per cent to the Forces, and 6 per cent to bombed libraries.

‘No books, no lunch’ is the slogan at the TALBOT HOTEL, Oldbury. It is part of the Oldbury effort to collect 50,000 books during a fortnight’s campaign. So far this week about 15,000 have been received, 10,000 from the schools.

The idea of bringing a book as a ‘coupon’ for lunch was suggested by Mr. S F. Digby, the local organiser of the Ministry of Supply, and Mr. H. J. King, licensee of the hotel, at once fell in with it. Diners have gladly accepted this ‘condition’ and today there was another queue of customers, some of them with half-a-dozen or more books, which were collected as they entered the hotel. Up to last night the hotel had received in this way over 800 books.”

“How did Catherine Davies, 63-year-old charwoman, of the TALBOT HOTEL, Oldbury, come to be found lying in Harborne Road, Edgbaston, on Saturday night, suffering from head wounds from which she has since died?

The Birmingham Coroner adjourned the inquest until 11 March, today appealed for information to help throw light on her mysterious death. It is thought that Davies was on her way from Oldbury to some house in Edgbaston.”

Evening Despatch 11/3/1943

“Verdict of Accidental Death was returned at a Birmingham inquest today on Catherine Davies, aged 63, charwoman, of the TALBOT HOTEL, Oldbury, who was found lying in the roadway at Harborne Road, Edgbaston, on Saturday evening, 27 February. There was insufficient evidence to show how she came by her injuries.....”

“William Wilson, landlord of the THREE HORSE SHOES INN, Freeth Street, Oldbury, was summoned for keeping his house open during prohibited hours on Sunday, the 2nd inst. Mr. Shakespeare defended.

PS Stanton stated that he was passing the defendant's house a few minutes after twelve o'clock on the Sunday morning named, and saw a man coming down the entry with something in his pocket. Witness followed the man some distance, and then asked him what he had in his pocket, and he replied that it was beer that had been given to him for filling the furnace. They went back together to Wilson, who confirmed the man's statement, adding, 'I did not think I was doing wrong.'

Mr. Shakespeare, for the defence, said that the beer was a free gift to the man, and was not a part of his pay for the work done.

The defendant also confirmed this statement.

After consultation with his colleagues Mr. Avery said the magistrates were of opinion that an offence had been committed within the meaning of the Act, but there were extenuating circumstances, and the defendant would therefore be let off with a fine of 5s and costs, the license not to be endorsed.”

In the case of those persons who had been summoned and convicted, their houses having been well conducted since, and no further complaints being made against them, the licenses were all renewed except in the cases of David Bates and Edward Waterhouse, which were refused.”

Birmingham Daily Post 23/1/1889

“Yesterday, at the Police Court, George Edward Pearson, landlord of the THREE HORSE SHOES INN, Freeth Street, was charged with assaulting his wife, on December 25. Mr. Hinds prosecuted, and Mr. B. Shakespeare defended.

It was alleged by the complainant that because she did not get her husband’s breakfast ready he struck her several times on the left eye with his closed fist, destroying the sight, and necessitating her treatment at the Birmingham Eye Infirmary.

Mr. Torbitt, surgeon, who was examined, expressed the opinion that the injury to the eye was caused by a sharp instrument. In cross-examination, he admitted that most likely the injury was caused by complainant defending herself with a knife in her hand.

For the defence it was contended that complainant in defending herself ran the knife into her eye.

The Bench said that the case was a very serious one, although the aspect was altered by the medical evidence. The offence would be reduced to one of common assault, and defendant would be fined 20s and costs, or in default of payment twenty-eight days’ hard labour.”

Birmingham Daily Post 2/9/1890

“On Sunday night Mr. George Pearson, landlord of the THREE HORSE SHOES INN, Freeth Street, Oldbury, met with a serious accident whilst driving a horse and trap at Brades Village. Pearson was returning home from Tipton, being accompanied in the trap by another man and a woman. Upon reaching Brades Village the wheel of the vehicle caught in the tram-line, which caused the trap to swerve round, and Pearson was thrown out. In falling his head struck against the hub of the wheel, causing a serious scalp-wound. The horse took fright and bolted, but was stopped before it had proceeded far. The injured man was conveyed to his home, and attended by Dr. MacMillan.”

Guilty of receiving the goods, knowing them to have been stolen.

Birmingham Daily Gazette 16/12/1868

“An adjourned inquest into the circumstances attending the death of William Holden, which took place on the 27th of November last from a fall of coal at the Lamb Pits, which belong to Messrs. Dawes, was held before Mr. Ralph Docker (Coroner), yesterday, at the TIGER INN, Eel Street, Oldbury. Mr. P. Baker (one of her Majesty’s Inspectors of Mines) was in attendance during the inquiry.

William Matthews said he resided at Blackheath, and was a miner employed at the above-named colliery.

He was in the pit at the time deceased met with his death. They were in the act of taking out some timber in a gate-road, when they heard a ‘bump,’ which was followed by a fall of about nine feet of coal, which smothered them both. He (witness) was first got out, and escaped with but a slight injury to one ankle.

Deceased was got out in the course of ten minutes, but only lived a few seconds. He attributed the accident entirely to a ‘bump.’

John Whinsper, who was also employed in the pit at the time of the accident, likewise stated that in his opinion the pit was ‘safe,’ and that had it not been for the ‘bump’ the accident would not have happened.

A plan of the working in the colliery was presented, and the arrangements considered satisfactory.

No blame was attached to any person, and the jury therefore returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

“Yesterday morning Mary Ann Allott, aged twenty-one years, landlady of the TIGER INN, Eel Street, Oldbury, committed suicide in a most determined manner.

She resided at the public house named with her aunt, Emma Mann, and her brother. Between six and seven o'clock yesterday morning the deceased, who has been strange in her manner for some weeks past, inflicted a terrible wound in her throat with a large carving-knife whilst she was standing in front of a looking-glass in her bedroom. Afterwards she walked into her aunt's bedroom adjoining, and, as well as she could, said she hoped God would bless her aunt. The latter called for assistance, and the deceased was subsequently found at the top of the stairs bleeding profusely from the wound she had inflicted. Dr. Buttery was called in, but his services were of no avail. The despondent state of the deceased's mind is accounted for by the fact that about three months ago her father and mother died, both deaths taking place within about three months, and this preyed upon her mind.”

Charles Reid said deceased had been living alone for some time, his wife and family having left him in consequence of his violent conduct. On Saturday afternoon witness visited his father and found him dead in bed.

Dr. Marsh, who made a post mortem examination of the body, attributed death to apoplexy.

The jury returned a verdict of Natural Causes.”

Despite the many football attractions in this district on Saturday afternoon last, there was a good assemblage of gun followers at these grounds, when the attraction comprised a couple of matches, the chief one undoubtedly being between Mr. Geo. Hall, of Greets Green, and Mr. Jonah Debney, of the TIGER INN, Oldbury, who were billed to shoot at eleven sparrows each, 21 yards rise, 40 yards fall, 1¼oz of shot, from three traps, five yards apart, for £20.....

Then came the chief event, and considerable interest was manifested over the result, both men being considered expert with the deadly tube, and some very spirited wagering ensued for the match outright and on each bird. Debney, however, had the call for the match, odds of 5 to 4 on him being laid.

Debney was first to the mark. He brought his first three birds down in clinking fashion, his fourth he missed, but he grassed his fifth and sixth, thus scoring five out of six birds – not a bad performance considering the light. Hall now followed, but started disastrously, for he placed no cartridge in his gun, with the result that the dicky bird escaped, Hall paying the penalty, the bird being counted. His second attempt was as bad, for his cartridge failed to explode, but, according to rules, no bird was allowed. His third attempt saw Hall more fortunate, for he grassed a good bird. His next was a miss, but he killed his fifth, missed his sixth, but managed to bring his seventh down, making his score three. Debney again went to shoot at his last five birds; shooting in splendid fashion, his first two birds came to grief, but the next he missed. However, he killed another, bringing his total to eight kills, which left Hall with the difficult task of killing all his birds to make a tie. He scored at his first attempt, but, missing the next, was out-shot. Going on at his remaining birds he succeeded in killing two out of his last three.....

The pair shot again at three birds each, for a couple of sovereigns. Debney was again successful.....”

‘Lost Landscape. Portway Road, Oldbury. A Black Country Street.’ by Alan Dodson

“There were three pubs in my day in the Eel Street, Churchbridge and Portway Road ‘square’ although there had been as many as eight over the years. The BUILDERS ARMS stood at the corner of Little Eel Street and Portway Road. It was a large pub and even as a boy I remember it well, a solid cube of a building wrapping round the corner, with double bay windows, an imposing entrance facing Portway Road and large upstairs windows overlooking both streets. Adding to the impression, the road which formed a shallow depression from the bridge began to rise into the lane quite sharply at the Little Eel Street corner. One can imagine the BUILDERS ARMS was built to be more than just a watering hole for canal labourers and had the air of the establishments which later became known as 'commercial hotels.' The large function room on the first floor was much in favour for twenty-first birthday celebrations and the like. The BRICKMAKERS ARMS was at the corner of the other end of Eel Street and Churchbridge, smaller but in many ways similar. They were simply known as 'The Top' and 'The Bottom' although my father always referred to 'The Top' as 'Beasley's' after the family whose members were licensees from 1913 until 1945. The TRAVELLERS REST, known to all as 'Sherwood's' or 'Sammy Sherwood's' after the licensee from 1893 until 1945, which might be some sort of record, was a small pub in Churchbridge next door to 'The Bottom,' with rooms not much bigger than those of the neighbouring houses but distinguished by its own double bay windows and arched doorway."

It had a beerhouse license.

“Bridgnorth Petty Sessions.....

Prize Fight at Shipley Common. The court was crowded to hear this case brought forward on the information and complaint of Mr. Henry Baxter, superintendent of the Shropshire constabulary force, the defendants being Richard Male, Joseph Male, Richard Whitehead, Joseph Hale, and William Jones, of Dudley, victualler, for aiding and abetting a prize fight on the 24th day of October last, on Shipley Common, between Bridgnorth and Wolverhampton, in which Richard Male and Thomas Sheppard were the combatants, and were matched to fight for £5 a side.

Bells Life of October 30, produced in court, noticed the transaction as follows. ‘Richard Male and Thomas Sheppard, both of Oldbury, met on Monday last, at Shipley Common, six miles beyond Wolverhampton, at catch weight for £5 a side. Male was seconded by Young Rock, of Birmingham, and Joe Hale; and Sheppard was attended by Malpas and Whitehead. Male got first blood and knock down blow, the first in the eight, the latter in the eleventh round, and in fact had the fight after the first quarter of an hour all in his favour, without a scratch, with the exception of the left eye being discoloured; whilst Sheppard caught it heavily on the nob and frontispiece. In the sixty-third round Male led off with his left on the nob of Sheppard, who in return rushed to close fighting, and after an exchange Male got down. To the surprise of all the referee cried ‘foul.’ Immediately the ring was broken in, Sheppard was carried off, and the referee disappeared, without assigning any cause to Male or Rock why he cried ‘foul.’ Male immediately proceeded to Mr. Kimberley, the stakeholder (keeper of the TRAVELLERS REST, Oldbury), and gave him notice not to give up the stakes. The stakeholder should hold the stakes to ascertain if any appeal was made to the referee by the umpires. The affair seems to us of a very suspicious character.’

To support the charge, Superintendent Baxter called William Hill, of the New Inn, Claverley parish, who deposed that he saw the fight on Shipley Common, on the 24th of October last; there were stakes and a roped ring, &c.....

[Defendants had to provide bail to keep the peace for a period.]

Mr. Jeffries opposed the renewal of the license of the KINGS ARMS INN, Birmingham Street, kept by the Manchester Brewery Company Limited; the TRAVELLERS REST INN, Hales Owen Street, kept by Samuel Sherwood; the JOLLY COLLIER INN; Albert Street, kept by Alice Baker, on the ground that they continued to give the long pull. The objection set forth that it was an unfair system of trading, that it was opposed to the wishes of the licensed trade generally, that it was contrary to public order and morality and calculated to increase drunkenness, that the license in each case was not necessary, and that the holder was not a fit and proper person to hold such license.

Mr. R. J. Lawrence appeared on behalf of the Manchester Brewery Company, and Mr. J. Clark represented the other two.

Mr. Jefferies, who opposed the licenses on behalf of the Oldbury Licensed Trade Association, gave evidence to the effect that the three publicans in question were giving more than 25% over measure agreed upon by resolution of the trade. Witness was subjected to a severe cross-examination by Mr. Lawrence, in the course of which he acknowledged that trade combinations did sometimes fail, and that in the event of this particular one failing all the publicans would go back to the old plan of giving excessive over-measure.

The Bench retired to consider their decision, after which the chairman remarked that the justices did not consider there was any reasonable ground of objection in the arguments laid before them why the licenses should not be renewed. The licenses would therefore be renewed."

William Tonks was convicted of having, on the 3rd August, 1856, at Oldbury, feloniously stolen 3s 6d and a piece of leather, the property of John Walleth. Mr. Byrne prosecuted.

Prosecutor, an elderly man, on the afternoon of the 3rd August went into the WHITE HORSE INN, Oldbury, where he remained drinking about three-quarters of an hour. He afterwards left the inn, and, having to wait for his brother, sat down on the step of an adjoining public house, the UNION, where he went to sleep.

Whilst asleep, the articles named in the indictment were taken from his pocket.

Mrs. Ball, landlady of the UNION, and a young man named Wise, who was there at the time, both deposed to having seen prisoner put his hand into prosecutor's pocket, and Wise observed him take the money out. He remarked to him upon the impropriety of his conduct.

The same night prisoner was given into custody, and committed for trial at the October sessions. Prosecutor, however, was absent when the case was called on at the sessions, and his recognisances were estreated.

Prisoner was admitted to bail to appear at the Epiphany sessions, but did not attend, and hence the lengthened term between the committal and trial of the accused. He had previously been convicted of felony.

Eighteen months' hard labour.”

“Yesterday, James Green, labourer, was charged with uttering a counterfeit shilling. On the 8th he went into the house of Richard Pace, a publican, of Oldbury, and called for some ale, for which he put down half-a-crown. Mr. Pace told him he had smaller change than that, and prisoner immediately picked up the half-crown and put down a shilling, which Mr. Pace took. It was afterwards found to be bad, and upon searching the prisoner the half-crown was found to be also bad. A few days previously prisoner changed half-a-crown for some rum at another publican's, but it was discovered, and he gave Mr. Knight, the publican, a good one instead. The wife of prisoner was brought up a few weeks ago upon the same charge, having uttered three counterfeit pieces of money; but as the presiding magistrate thought there was some doubt about the identity of the woman, he gave her the benefit of it and discharged her. The male prisoner was yesterday remanded for a fortnight, in order that the Mint authorities might be communicated with."

"Worcestershire Adjourned Quarter Sessions.....

James Green, labourer, was indicted for having, on the 22nd of December last, attempted to pass a base half-crown and two base shillings, to Mr. Pace, publican, Oldbury. A verdict of guilty was returned, and the prisoner was sentenced to twelve months' hard labour."

“Yesterday Mr. Ralph Docker, Coroner, held inquests at the UNION INN, Tabernacle Lane, upon the bodies of Michael Laughton (61), night watchman, of the same locality, and Thomas Wane (48), collier, Brades Village, who both died very suddenly.

In the case of Laughton it appeared that he returned from his work about midday on Monday and went to bed. Soon afterwards the woman at whose house he lodged heard him make a peculiar noise, and on going to his room saw that he was gasping for breath and bleeding at the mouth. She ran for a doctor, but before the latter arrived the deceased expired.

With regard to Wane, it transpired that he went to bed with his son about 11 o’clock on Wednesday night. The next morning the son arose about half-past five and went to work, leaving the deceased, who was then apparently in good health, in bed. The deceased did not get up, and at 12 o’clock his landlady called to him to go down to dinner. She received no answer, and on going upstairs found that he was dead.

In both cases a verdict of Died from Natural Causes was returned.”

“Last evening an inquest was held at the UNION INN, Tabernacle Street, Oldbury, before Mr. E. Docker (coroner), on the body of a male child, whose parents, William and Eliza Green, reside in Inkerman Street, Oldbury.

From the evidence given it appeared that the mother gave birth to a still-born child on Saturday, a woman named Eliza Crumpton attending to her. Nothing further was done until Wednesday, the 15th inst, when an application was made to Dr. Cunningham for a certificate for burial of the body. This was refused, and information was given to the police. The mother of deceased was in a wretched condition, and lay on an old mattress on the floor of the bedroom, with only a blanket to cover her. The house contained only one bedroom, and in this the husband, wife, and four children slept, the eldest child being about eight years of age. It was shown that no provision was made for the baby.

Mrs. Crumpton stated that the child was still-born.

Mr. McMillan, assistant to Dr. Cunningham, stated that he could not tell whether the child had had a separate existence unless a post mortem examination was made.

The father of the deceased, who is a forehand puddler, was called, and gave his evidence in such a way that the Coroner expressed strong disapprobation at his conduct, and remarked that if he treated his wife and family in accordance with the way he gave his evidence he could only describe him as a worthless fellow.

The jury concurred in the views expressed by the coroner. They returned a verdict to the effect that the child was still-born, and added to it a recommendation that the coroner should censure the father of the child, and also that the police should be requested to call the attention of the sanitary inspector to the condition of the home.

The father was called into the room and severely reprimanded by the Coroner, who said he considered he had behaved in a brutal manner towards his wife in neglecting to provide her with the necessaries at her confinement.

Sergeant Clarke was directed to call the attention of the sanitary inspector to the state of Green's home.”

“On Tuesday evening a soiree and presentation took place in the People’s Hall, Oldbury. There was a good attendance, and the hall was tastefully decorated with evergreens, banners, &c. The proceedings commenced with the performance of a selection of vocal music, after which refreshments were supplied in the hall, by Mr. Montague Taylor. Mr. Bowlby having referred to the great good Mr. Johnson had done in establishing musical performances in the town, Mr. Marsh presented Mr. Johnson with a purse containing one hundred guineas, after which Mr. Sadler, on behalf of the ladies, presented the same gentleman with a handsomely-bound copy of the ‘Elijah.’ Mr. Johnson, who was much affected, thanked the donors for the testimonial which they had been so kind to present to him.

Several other songs were afterwards given, and the performance concluded by the singing of the National Anthem.”

Stourbridge Observer 15/9/1866

“On Tuesday, the annual licensing meeting was held in the Magistrates’ Room. The magistrates present were E. Moore, S. Hanbury, and F. Adkins, Esqrs. There were three applications for old licenses.....

Mr. Montague Alfred Taylor, the STORES, Oldbury.

Mr. Shakespeare opposed on behalf of the licensed victuallers in the neighbourhood. In answer to Mr. Shakespeare applicant said he had lived in the house three years. He had a refreshment house connected with the public house. He carried on the confectionery business. He applied last year. He had six rooms on the ground floor, three of which were used for drinking purposes. He had four bed-rooms, three of which only are used by the family, having a bedroom always vacant. Mr. Shakespeare had nothing whatever to say against the character of Mr. Taylor. His objection to the license being granted was that where there were ten licensed victuallers within 200 yards there could be no necessity for another. The magistrates, however, thought differently and granted the license.”

An attractive programme was produced, in which Mr. G. W. The entertainments were enlivened with songs from Mr. Oliver Johnson and Mr. Montague A. Taylor, accompanied by Messrs. Hayward and Howl. Solos on the cornet were given by Mr. William Yates, and on the piano-forte by Dr. Hayward, Miss Weston, and Miss Nash, and altogether a very pleasant evening was spent.”

"Mr. Jackson made a renewed application for the transfer of the license of the BRIDGE INN, Stone Street, from a man named Yeomans, to George Bonser.

It appears that Mr. Bonser formerly kept the VICTORIA STORES, in Birmingham Street, and left that place to go to the BRIDGE INN. An application was made for the transfer at the time, but as he had just previously been summoned for two infringements of his license at the STORES, the Bench refused the application, but agreed to grant a temporary authority till 10th March, in order to facilitate Mr. Bonser's getting another tenant. The premises at the BRIDGE INN are owned by Messrs. Butler and Co., Wolverhampton.

The Bench now refused to grant the application on the ground that no new facts were stated, but agreed to grant a further temporary authority to one of the employés of Messrs. Butler and Co. until transfer day."

"At Oldbury Alfred Wall, 23, striker, of Smethwick, was charged with stealing a silver mounted jug and a glass, of the value of 3s, the property of Joseph Parkes, of the RAILWAY INN, Oldbury.

On Saturday a football match took place in a field at the rear of the RAILWAY INN and after the match concluded prisoner and a number of companions adjourned to the public house, where they remained for a short time. Immediately after they left the jug and glass were missed. Prosecutor gave information to Police-sergeant Stanton, and he and Mr. Parkes hired a cab and went in pursuit of the party. Proceeding in the direction of Smethwick they overtook four of them, whom they searched, and failed to find the missing property. They subsequently returned to the VICTORIA STORES, Birmingham Street, where they found the remainder of the team. They were called into a private room and searched. Prisoner, it was alleged, was observed to stoop down in a suspicious manner, and soon afterwards Mr. Parkes found the jug under the seat where he had been sitting.

Prisoner denied all knowledge of the robbery.

Police-sergeant Stanton later on found the glass on a bench in the room where the prisoner and his companions had been drinking. The officer took seven of them to the police station, where the prisoner pleaded guilty to the charge of stealing the jug. He expressed himself sorry for what he had done, and pleaded that he was under the influence of beer.

The bench took a lenient view of the case, and allowed prisoner to go on the payment of the costs, 26s 6d."

County Advertiser 18/7/1903

“On Wednesday, at Rowley Regis Police Court – before Messrs. A. H. Bassano, C. W. Bassano, J. W. Tilley, and G. H. Holcroft – John Gorton (21), alias Walter Douglas, labourer, who refused to give his address, but belongs to Birmingham; John Henry Green (24), alias John Turst, glassworker, of Mill Street, Aston, Birmingham; and John Bourton (21), horse dealer, of Adderley Street, Bordewsley, Birmingham, were charged in custody on remand with uttering base coin at Tividale on the 4th inst, and also with having base coin in their possession on the same date. Mr. F. Hooper, of Birmingham, appeared to defend Green and Bourton. Mary Hill, sister of the landlord of the BROWN LION INN, Tividale, stated that on the afternoon of the date named, the prisoners Gorton and Bourton visited the public house, and were supplied with some drink and cigarettes. Gorton tendered a five shilling piece, which witness examined and refused to accept, as she did not care to take it. Gorton said, ‘It is all right; I wish I had a thousand of them.’ Witness, however, told him that she should not take it, and Bourton then paid for the drink. In reply to Mr. Hooper, witness said she still adhered to her statement made on the previous Wednesday that Bourton was the man who came into the house with Gorton.

Thomas Cox, landlord of the SEVEN STARS INN, Tividale, said that the prisoners Gorton and Bourton visited the house on the date named and purchased two glasses of ale. A five shilling piece was handed to witness in payment of the ale, but this he refused to take as it did not seem to be satisfactory to him, and he had also received an intimation, whilst the prisoners were in the house, that bad money was being passed in the district.

James Griffiths, of High Street, Tipton, stated that on the afternoon of the date named, he saw Police-constable Heatherley searching for three men who were running away in the direction of Dudley Port. The officer asked witness to follow them and he did so upon his bicycle. They crossed over the London and North Western Railway and witness caught them up. He rode alongside the prisoners for about forty yards and called upon three young men to assist him to capture them, but they all refused. Witness then caught Gorton and held him until Police-constable Heatherley arrived upon the scene. The other two prisoners ran away across the fields.

Police-constable Heatherley stated that whilst he was chasing the prisoners he noticed Gorton put his hand in his left hand pocket, pull out something, and throw it away. Upon arriving at the spot witness found sixteen base crown pieces (produced). Witness conveyed Gorton to Old Hill Police Station, and the other two prisoners, when charged with the offence, said they did not know where Tividale was.

Mary Salter, wife of Charles Salter, of the VILLAGE TAVERN, Brades Village, Oldbury, stated that on the 4th inst the prisoners Gorton and Bourton visited her house and were supplied with some drink. Gorton gave her a five shilling piece and witness handed him 4s 6d change. She could not say whether the coin was a base one as she had since disposed of it.

Police-sergeant Evans, of the Birmingham police, deposed to seeing the three prisoners leaving a public house in Steelhouse Lane, Birmingham, on the morning of the 4th inst. They separated, but witness subsequently saw them together again at the Snow Hill Station. The same evening, upon receipt of a telephonic message from Old Hill, he arrested Bourton, who in reply to the charge, said he did not know where Tividale was, and he had been in the city all that day.

Detective Harris deposed to arresting Green, who also denied being at Tividale.

Police-constables Lawson and Foulkes described a conversations they heard between the three prisoners at Handsworth Station on the 6th inst, after they had been remanded and were being escorted to Winson Green Gaol. Gorton said, 'I wish I had never seen — Tividale,' to which Green replied, 'I have never been there before, and I will watch I don't go again.' Bourton said, 'Nor me, I don't know where Tividale is.'

Harry Arthur Griffiths, jeweller, of High Street, Cradley Heath, deposed to examining the sixteen five shilling pieces found by Police-constable Heatherley; they were all counterfeit.

When charged with the offences by the magistrates' clerk (Mr. T. Cooksey), Gorton said, 'I plead guilty to attempting to pass one base coin not knowing it to be bad. These two fellows (pointing to the other prisoners) were not with me on the afternoon, although they were with me on the morning when seen by Sergeant Evans.'

The other prisoners pleaded not guilty, and Mr. Hooper, on their behalf, urged that there was no evidence whatever against Green, and that the witnesses were mistaken as to Bourton. Both men were in Birmingham during the day in question. A number of witnesses were called to prove this, but eventually the Bench committed the prisoners for trial at the Assizes, bail being refused.

Mr. A. H. Bassano (the presiding magistrate) complimented James Griffiths, the cyclist, for the pluck he displayed to secure the arrest of the three prisoners. Superintendent Pilliner said the police much appreciated the valuable assistance they received from Griffiths, through whose efforts the prisoners had been brought to justice.

Detective Harris gave Superintendent Pilliner particulars of the prisoners' antecedents, which raised the ire of Bourton, who attempted to assault Harris, and declared his intention of killing him for giving the Staffordshire police particulars, which he characterised as an injustice. Owing to his violence it was necessary for a policeman to stand near to him in the dock."

"The County Assizes.....

John Gorton, 21, clerk, and John Henry Green, 24, glass blower, and John Bourton, 21, horse dealer, were charged with uttering to Thomas Cox, on July 4th, at Tividale, Rowley Regis, a piece of counterfeit coin resembling a 5s piece, well knowing it to be false and counterfeit. Gorton was sentenced to six months' imprisonment, Green was discharged, and Bourton was sentenced to five months' imprisonment."

"The Great Tornado.....

Considerable damage was done at Oldbury, chiefly in the Brades Village district. Here there was one fatal case, a widow named Elizabeth Lane (38) being killed through a chimney crashing through the roof of the one-storey house in Dudley Road where she lived with her five children. There are four rooms to the house. The dining room and the kitchen form that side of the house nearest to the VILLAGE TAVERN. Three out of the four chimneys on the tavern were blown down, two of them crashing through the roof of the inn, and the other falling about a distance of twenty feet on to the roof of Mrs. Lane's house."

"Bowling..... The outstanding feature of the match, VILLAGE TAVERN (Oldbury) v GRAND TURK (Kingswinford), was the fine bowling of W. Guy and C. Nicholls for the TURK, and L. Carrol and J. Crump for the VILLAGE TAVERN. I notice W. Handley defeated his man. Although the home team were beaten their performance for a new team was fairly good, and the visit of the GRAND TURK to Oldbury has given quite an impetus to the game in the district."

This was an action for seduction of the plaintiff’s daughter, whereby he was deprived of her services.....

Mary Turner, a good-looking girl, was put into the box.....

I am the plaintiff’s daughter. It is now three years ago since I first became acquainted with James Edwards. I shall be 18 in October. The defendant paid me visits at my father’s house. He often came, sometimes as often as five or six times a week. He was received as my suitor, and he made profession of visiting at the house in that character. He often uttered to me the most honourable protestations. One Thursday night he came, and, with a particular warmth of manner, told me he had given the parish-clerk money to pay for our marriage. He gave me reason to think that it would take place in three weeks. We went to Birmingham to buy the ring. He paid for it in a shop in my presence. We then walked about a little way, when he said it was too late to be married that day, but that he would take me to church with him next Sunday. We went home together that time to my mother’s house. After being here a short time, he proposed to me to accompany him to the WAGGON AND HORSES, where we stayed together. He had told me that he would marry me on the Sunday following, and repeated what he had before said at Birmingham – that it was his full intention to have married me that day, if it had not been too late when we came there. I was deceived so much by these assurances, that I yielded to his pressing solicitations of remaining with him till morning. In the morning I reproached him and called upon him to accomplish his promise of marrying me. It was not long until the consequences of my misconduct left me no longer capable of concealing my shame. The defendant not only refused to redeem his pledges, but has since married another. I gave birth to a child on the 10th of February last, the fruit of our criminal intercourse.....

Jane Taylor, examined by Mr. Sergeant Vaughan – I keep the WAGGON AND HORSES at Oldbury. I remember the night that Mary Turner and the defendant stopped at my house. They asked for a bed. I asked defendant whether he had married her; and he said he just had that day at Birmingham. I have since heard him say he had married another woman.

Cross-examined: The mother of Mary Turner came to my house that night. She asked me where the girl was, and I told her she had gone up stairs with Edwards. She said no more, but went home. We thought the parties were married. It was Mary Turner, and not Edwards, who asked for the bed.

Chief Justice (to witness): Did you think this was the conduct of a modest woman? Do you think a proper woman would come in this way with a young man, to a public house, and ask for a bed?

Witness: My Lord, I saw nothing improper in her conduct.....

Lord Chief Justice Best, in his charge to the jury, said he was of opinion that if they did find a verdict for the plaintiff, the very smallest sum of damages would satisfy the justice of this case.....

The Jury deliberated some very short time, and then found for the plaintiff – damages, one shilling.”

William Pattison, a collier, was indicted for stealing a sovereign from John Griffiths, at Oldbury. The prosecutor stated that, having been drunk on the night of the 11th February, he went next morning (Sunday) to the WAGGON AND HORSES, Oldbury, to quench the spark in his throat, and meeting with the prisoner, he treated him with some ale, and continued drinking until he again became tipsy, and fell asleep; during his drunken slumber, the prisoner, by way of showing his gratitude, picked his pocket of a sovereign, and then went off; this was seen by another witness, who gave information and the prisoner was apprehended, with 19s 6d in his possession. The Jury returned a verdict of guilty, and he was sentenced to 6 months' hard labour. The Chairman then called up the prosecutor, and after lecturing him on his profligate and drunken conduct on the Sabbath-day, ordered that he should pay his own expenses.”

In Re Green (Oldbury).

Mr. R. Benton, solicitor, attended for the assignees, and Mr. Allen, barrister, for the bankrupt.

In answer to questions put by Mr. Benton to the bankrupt, he said, ‘I was not aware that I was in insolvent circumstances until Mr. Benton served me with a notice of bankruptcy. I knew that I owed a considerable sum, but not that I had £700 of debts which I could not pay. I had an action with Messrs. Williams, of Worcester I was aware that I owed more than I could pay at that time, but I had no expectation that my creditors or my mother would press me. The warrant of attorney which my mother put in execution against me was dated the 28th of February, three days after the notice was served upon me. My mother pressed me for security as she was about to leave me.....’

Between the 7th and 10th of March a customer was found to purchase the effects of the bankrupt, and £212 of the amount received paid over to the bankrupt’s mother, under the warrant of attorney.

Mr. Benton: It was a mere trick to obtain time. The mother received £212 from the sale of the property, and the creditors get nothing.

The examination of the bankrupt resumed: I do not know where my mother is. Her name is Sarah Green.

The £90 I owe to Messrs. Williams is for spirits, &c.

Mr. Benton applied to the court to adjourn the bankrupt’s last examination, which was agreed to, in order to obtain further disclosure of his estate and effects.”

“The Colliers Strike.

In the district round Wednesbury the men have been at work during the week. At Oldbury and its vicinity the thin coal miners have returned to their employment at an advance of sixpence per diem.; but it is confidently reported that, in consequence of the masters having given them notice of withdrawing the advance, they purpose joining the movement this day (Saturday). On Tuesday, the thick coal miners – who still hold out – had an open air meeting in the yard at the rear of the WAGGON AND HORSES INN. A resolution was passed, offering to resume work at an advance of sixpence per day, and the allowance of half an hour’s time for breakfast, instead of a shilling and two hours’ diminution. A deputation of three men was appointed to wait on Captain Bennitt, one of the most influential masters in the district, and communicate this determination on the part of the pitmen. The deputation accordingly proceeded to the colliery, but not finding that gentleman there, they addressed letters to several of the masters, stating the result of their meeting. To these communications they received no reply. It will be recollected that the advance originally required by the thick coal men was one shilling per diem. On Thursday another meeting was convened by the workmen at the yard of the WAGGON AND HORSES, Oldbury, when several persons addressed the assemblage. The utmost order and decorum prevailed throughout the proceedings. The various speakers strongly inculcated peace and conciliation, and recommended an adjournment to Saturday (this day), at two o’clock in the afternoon. This was unanimously carried, and after singing a portion of a hymn, the meeting separated in the most orderly manner. The effects of the strike are already visible in the district. One or two large iron works are nearly, if not quite, at a stand.”

Birmingham Journal 22/10/1853

“The colliers in Oldbury and its vicinity have, with a few exceptions, during the past week resumed work on the old terms. It will be remembered that at a meeting held in the yard adjoining the WAGGON AND HORSES, Oldbury, on Thursday week, a resolution was passed to the effect that they would return to their work at an advance of 6d per day, and a diminution of half an hour (at breakfast time) in the period of labour. Three men were then instructed to wait upon their employers with copies of the resolution, but no reply has been returned.

A number of miners from Bilston, Wolverhampton, and Shut End, were seen in the neighbourhood in the early part of the week, with the expressed intention of commencing operations at Oldbury, if the Oldbury colliers themselves were determined still to hold out. This fact, combined with the promise of one of the large masters, that they should have the desired allowance of half an hour’s rest, has doubtless been the means of bringing about this resumption of work. Notwithstanding the present aspect of matters, it is still expected by the major part of both the thick and thin coal miners that their employers will concede to them the advance of 6d per diem. Several of the large iron works had during the last two days of last week to entirely suspend operations on account of the strike, but we are glad to say are now in full work.”

“A very important meeting was held on Monday, June the 10th, at the WAGGON AND HORSES INN, Oldbury, half-way between Birmingham and Wolverhampton, of the different branches of the Edge-tool Makers of the district.....”

Edward Perrins was a member of Oldbury’s first Local Board of Health in 1855.

Staffordshire Sentinel 13/10/1855

“On Thursday-week, the coroner, R. Docker, Esq, held an inquest at the house of Mr. Edward Perrins, the WAGGON AND HORSES INN, Oldbury, on the body of a youth named Samuel Millard, fourteen years of age, who was killed on the 28th ult, by being drawn over the pulley of one of the shafts of a coal pit belonging to Captain Bennitt, and situated near the blast furnaces in Oldbury. T. Wynne, Esq, Government Inspector of Coal Mines, attended the inquiry; Mr. Harding, solicitor, of Birmingham, being present to watch the proceedings on behalf of the engineer, Edward Turner, a youth aged about twenty, to whose negligence the accident was alleged to be attributable, and who attended the inquiry in custody of Superintendent Overend. The evidence of several witnesses presented the following facts.

On the night of Thursday, the 27th ult, the deceased, with three men named Phineas Lewis, Richard Wychard, and Francis Hartshorn, were employed in a coal pit called 'The Puff and Dart,' belonging to Captain Bennitt, and having at seven o'clock on Friday morning completed their work, the four got into a skip, and ascended the shaft in the ordinary manner. The men duly came to the top of the shaft, but the speed did not slacken, and perceiving that the skip must ascend higher than usual, the doggy, Mr. Clueley, shouted to the persons in the skip, 'Jump for your lives.' The skip continued to ascend, but before it reached the pulley, Hartshorn and Lewis jumped from it, the former falling upon the plates near the edge of the pit, and the latter upon the wagon which covered the pit's mouth, and which the banksman, Bennitt, had the presence of mind to place over the shaft immediately the skip came to the surface. Wychard laid hold of the frame-work, and by that means saved himself. The unfortunate lad (Millard), however, was taken over the pulley with the skip, and fell partially beneath it upon the bank. He was taken up in an insensible condition, conveyed home, and died in a few minutes afterwards. It was shown that just previously to the accident the engineer was shouted to to 'mind the top,' he was then on the boiler side, six or eight yards from the engine, where he had been standing looking at his father repairing a steam-cock, and he then immediately ran towards the whimsey. The steam was blowing hard, and the witness was of opinion that the prisoner did not hear the shouts. In the course of the hearing the prisoner said nobody hooted to him until the skip was over the pulley; and that 'he would have been in the engine in time if it hadn't been for the board which crossed from the boiler side to the engine house.'

The coroner briefly summed up the evidence. The jury consulted five minutes, and then returned a verdict of Manslaughter against Edward Turner, who will consequently have to take his trial at Worcester. Mr. Wynne cautioned the prisoner that if he ever had the charge of an engine again, never to leave it on any account whilst men were ascending."

"Worcester City and County Lent Assizes.

Edward Turner was indicted for the manslaughter of Samuel Millard, at Halesowen, on the 28th September last. Mr. Cook, for the prosecution, stated the facts of the case, which were that the prisoner, who had the charge of an engine used for drawing up the skips from a coal pit, had caused the deceased's death by not being at his post when the signal-bell rang announcing that a skip was coming up. The consequence was that the skip was drawn over the roller at the pit's mouth, and the deceased killed; the men escaped. He was proceeding to comment on the fact of the prisoner's absence as being a sufficient ground on which to maintain an indictment for manslaughter, when he was stopped by the judge, who, having read the depositions, thought it could not be proved that prisoner heard the customary signal, or that his absence was avoidable. The charge, therefore, must fall to the ground.

A verdict of acquittal was, in consequence, taken."

"An inquest was held on Friday, the 2nd inst, at the house of Mr. Edward Perrins, the WAGGON AND HORSES, before W. Hayes, Esq, Deputy Coroner, on the body of a man named George Rogers, who died a few days previously, as alleged, from the effects of blows he received in a fight with his nephew, Charles Rogers, on a Saturday night in August. Charles Rogers was in custody on the charge of manslaughter. The evidence, however, showed that the prisoner had not acted in such a way as to warrant a verdict of manslaughter; and although it was clear that the deceased died from the effects of injuries he had sustained by a fall, the Jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

Birmingham Daily Post 9/12/1857

“A good deal of dissatisfaction was recently created among a large section of the shopkeepers and inhabitants of Oldbury, by a resolution adopted by the Local Board of Health, to the effect that henceforth no stalls would be allowed to be erected in the centre of the town. Meetings of the inhabitants took place, and a deputation appointed to wait upon the Commissioners, in order to represent the inadvisability of the order and to request them to rescind it. It was then replied that the stalls were removable under the common Highway Act, and that it was therefore of no use for the Board to rescind the resolution. No stalls in consequence were for several weeks erected in the town, and with a view to provide other accommodation, the Board advertised for sites for a Market Hall, but those which were tendered being deemed unsuitable, the matter was suspended for a while. Meantime Mr. Edward Perrins, the landlord of the WAGGON AND HORSES public house, having been satisfied by the Board that they would throw no obstacle in the way of his erecting a Market Place, but on the other hand would encourage a private speculation, he had recently commenced a building on a site of land at the back of the WAGGON AND HORSES. We understand it will be a commodious brick building, covered with slate. Its length will be 190 feet, its breadth 22 feet, and its height to the wall plates 12 feet; and there will be a row of stalls on either side. It will be erected by Mr. Joseph Read, and from Mr. Perrins’s own plans. The cost will be between £300 and £400, and the building it is expected will be finished early in January; meantime we believe stalls are permitted.”

Benjamin Riley, 23, miner, was indicted for having maliciously wounded Thomas Hunt, at Oldbury, on the 3rd December. Mr. Richards prosecuted; the prisoner was undefended.

Prosecutor and a companion were at the WAGGON AND HORSES, Oldbury, on the night in question.

The prisoner came in, and in a few minutes struck Hunt’s companion. After also striking prosecutor with his fists, he took up a quart jug and struck him on the head. He bled very much, became insensible, and remained so till next morning. He was drunk at the time. The surgeon stated that the loss of blood was so great that had he not been up at the time, the prosecutor must have died.

The jury found the prisoner guilty, but recommended him to mercy as he was in drink. Six months’ hard labour.”

"At the West Bromwich Police Court, on Saturday, Samuel Densley and Harriett, his wife, were charged with stealing a quantity of wearing apparel, including two shawls, two skirts, a pair of stockings, one white muffler, &c, the property of James Curtis, of White Heath, Rowley Regis. Mr. Ebsworth, of Wednesbury, defended the prisoners.

Elizabeth Curtis, wife of the prosecutor, stated that on the 5th of July last, she packed up the articles produced into a bundle, and left them at Mr. Peacock's, the WAGON AND HORSES INN, Oldbury, in order that Robert Ashton, the carrier, might take them to her daughter, who lives at Yoxall. From information she received she went on Thursday week to the house of the prisoners' daughter at Bloxwich, near Walsall, and there received the shawl produced. She afterwards accompanied police-sergeant Lester to the house of the prisoners at Greets Green, and found the remaining articles. Before being apprehended, the husband admitted his guilt.

There being no evidence that the woman was implicated in the theft she was discharged, and the man was sentenced to two months' imprisonment."

“At the Oldbury Police Court, on Tuesday, before Mr. H. Chance and Mr. J. Everitt, a theatrical singer of this place, named Thomas Villiers, was charged with attempting to commit a criminal assault on the 22nd January, upon the person of Jane Jackson, a Concert Hall singer. Mr. Jackson appeared for complainant, and Mr. Shakespeare for the defence.

It appeared from complainant’s statement that during the month of January, she was engaged at the RED COW, Oldbury, as a professional singer, and defendant was at the same time employed in a similar capacity, at the WAGON AND HORSES, which is only a few doors off. She (complainant) was a married woman, and on the night in question was going home about ten o’clock, in company with her little girl, when she met defendant, who asked her where Mr. Jackson was. She told him he was gone to Jarth, and that she did not know him (defendant). He asked her if it would be possible for him to get lodgings at Mrs. Parkes’s, where she was then living, and ultimately it was agreed that he should go to the house and see if he could obtain lodgings. They went home together, and shortly after she was compelled to go to the RED COW to fulfil her engagement. Defendant went with her to the WAGON AND HORSES, and asked her to have something to drink, but she refused and left him. Between eleven and twelve the same night defendant met her and accompanied her home, she thinking at the time that he had got lodgings at the house. She lighted a candle, and as she was going to the kitchen door to get some supper he pulled her on his knee. He released her, but as she was turning round he caught her again, and threw her on the floor, where he attempted to effect his purpose. He tore her dress, and badly bruised her arms. She then went to bed, and defendant remained in the kitchen all night. Defendant left the house in the morning, and stayed in town several days, but he had gone when she had the warrant issued for his apprehension. He had only been recently apprehended.

Mrs. Parkes and Mr. Parkes were called for complainant.

Mr. Shakespeare, in defence, said complainant was a willing party to the assault, and had only raised the report to clear herself.

Mr. Moore and Mr. Peacock were called for the defence, and the Bench dismissed the case on the ground of insufficient evidence.”

“At the Oldbury Magistrates’ Office on Tuesday, William Bennett, professional singer, of Oldbury, and John Rowley, carter, of West Bromwich, were charged with stealing a horse, the property of David Thomson, coal dealer, of the same place. Mr. Dicken appeared for the prisoner Bennett.

The evidence showed that the prisoner Rowley was sent by the prosecutor on the previous Tuesday with a load of coal to deliver at Oldbury, at the house of Mr. Gould, Bristnall Fields. Instead of taking the coals there he sold them to a Mrs. Smith, BELL INN, Rood End, for 7s 6d. He stayed there with the prisoner Bennett and spent some of the money. He afterwards went down to Oldbury and went to the WAGON AND HORSES, in company with the other prisoner, and there he sold the animal to a Mr. Peasland, horse dealer, of Oldbury, for 46s. The bargain was effected through the recommendation of Bennett, who said ‘it was all right,’ and the prisoner Rowley’s own horse.

The magistrates discharged the prisoner Bennett with a caution, and committed Rowley to take his trial at the Assizes for stealing the horse, and also on the second charge of stealing the coal.”

[At Worcestershire Summer Sessions John Rowley pleaded guilty to stealing a horse and a load of coals and was sentenced to six months’ imprisonment.]

“On Saturday morning a shocking accident occurred at the Old Fly Colliery, Old Hill, worked by the British Iron Company. Two men named Thomas Debney and Benjamin Nickless, sinkers, were engaged in repairing the pit-shaft, when ‘a running in’ took place, and they were precipitated to the bottom, and covered with a large quantity of earth, bricks, and timber. When the bodies were recovered, Debney, who was 57 years old, and lived in Hill Street, Oldbury, was found to be dead, and Nickless, of Littlefields, Oldbury, had one of his thighs broken in two places.

The inquest on Debney was opened on Monday last by Mr. Docker, at the WAGGON AND HORSES INN, Oldbury, and adjourned, so that Mr. J. P. Baker, Government Inspector of Mines, might attend. Debney leaves a wife and eight children. Nickless is slowly recovering.”

Morning Advertiser 20/9/1871

“An inquest was held on Monday, before Mr. Docker, coroner for Worcestershire, at the WAGGON AND HORSES, Oldbury, touching the death of Thomas Debney. Deceased was a sinker, 57 years old, and lived at Oldbury. He was employed by Mr. Wainwright, contractor.

On Saturday morning, the 26th of August, he and other men were engaged widening an old pit shaft, which had come into the possession of the Old Hill Drainage Association. They were instructed by Mr. Wainwright not to take out too much ground before bricking it up. The ground was so hard that it spoiled several picks, and the men had to use steel wedges. At twelve o’clock deceased and his mate, Benjamin Nickles, had to go down about 120 yards to relieve the previous shift, who had made up the ground quite safely. Debney and Nickles had taken out the ground for two kerbs instead of one. They called the engineman for two lengths of kerb pieces, and immediately afterwards the pit sides collapsed, and the men were partially buried. The ‘bowk,’ however, was with some difficulty pulled up, filled with bricks and dust, in the midst of which were the two unfortunate men, Debney being quite dead. The other man was much injured, but he was alive, and hopes are entertained of his recovery.

The Government inspector was present and questioned the witnesses, but it seemed the accident occurred entirely from the fault of the deceased and his mate.

Verdict, Accidental Death.”

Birmingham Mail 29/9/1871

“Yesterday, Mr. Ralph Docker, the district Coroner, held an inquest at the WAGON AND HORSES INN, Church Street, Oldbury, on the body of a middle-aged woman, name at present unknown, who died in a lodging-house, in Birmingham Street, under circumstances of a very distressing nature, on Monday night last. The old woman shortly before her death, stated that she had been in the Dudley Union, and that on the morning following the night she went in, as she was unwell, she went to the doctor, who told her that she was not in a fit state to come out, and that she must go back to the Governor of the Union. She did go back and stayed there a week. She came out last Friday morning, and went to the relieving officer at Oldbury, and upon inquiry was told that the Union was a mile and a half away. She replied that she was not able to go so far, and went away.

The Coroner: How was it she left the Dudley Workhouse? – Why, they turned her out. She came out because she would not lie in the body of the house. She said she had lain a week in the tramp ward.

By a Juror: The woman who keeps the lodging-house said deceased had died from starvation, and there are rumours about that she has been neglected.

The Coroner thought it was absolutely necessary that some of the authorities of the Dudley Union should be required to attend, in order that they might have an opportunity of explaining their conduct in the matter. The inquiry was accordingly adjourned till next week.”

Birmingham Daily Post 6/10/1871

“Yesterday afternoon, at the WAGON AND HORSES, Church Street, before Mr. Ralph Docker, Coroner, an adjourned enquiry was held into the circumstances attending the death of a woman unknown, who, it was alleged, died at a lodging-house in Birmingham Street from starvation. Before coming to Oldbury she had been an inmate of the Dudley Workhouse, and the inquest was adjourned from the previous Thursday in order that further evidence might be obtained.

Mr. Stillard, master of the Dudley Union, attended yesterday, and made a lengthy statement as to the circumstances under which the woman, as a tramp, obtained relief at the Dudley Union. Whilst in the Union, she was treated as an ordinary tramp, and did not complain of illness. Mr. Stillard said he was very anxious to clear himself and the workhouse authorities of any blame which the statements at the previous enquiry had imputed; but the Coroner said there was no further explanation needed.

Mr. Bentley, surgeon, stated that, on Sunday, the 24th ult, he attended the deceased at the lodging-house. She was in a very exhausted state, and was suffering from diarrhoea. He gave her some medicine, and saw her again on Monday, but she was then unconscious, and died in the evening. In his opinion the cause of death was exhaustion, probably through long fasting and diarrhoea.

The Coroner said the deceased had undoubtedly been in a very destitute condition, but she appeared to have been kindly and properly treated at Dudley. Her treatment certainly was not what was suggested.

The Jury returned a verdict of Died from Natural Causes.”

Birmingham Daily Post 7/10/1871

“On Saturday, Jane Webb, a child eight years of age, who resided with her parents at Brades Village, was amusing herself upon a plank over a strong stream of water running into the ‘swag’ near her home, when she accidentally fell over and was carried by the force of the water into the middle of the pool, and was drowned before the requisite aid could be rendered. An inquest upon the body was held yesterday afternoon, at the WAGON AND HORSES, Church Street, Oldbury, before Mr. Docker (Coroner), and the verdict returned was Accidentally Drowned.”

County Advertiser 6/1/1872

“A distressing accident occurred on Wednesday evening, at the WAGON AND HORSES, Church Street, Oldbury, resulting in the death of a young woman named Agnes Burnell. Mr. Tilsley, the landlord, had been out shooting during the day, and upon returning in the evening placed his gun, under the impression that it was not loaded, upon a table in one of the back rooms of the house. About twenty minutes to eight o’clock, Mr. John Hirons, who was sitting in an adjoining room, heard the report of a gun, and running into the room from which the sound proceeded, found Burnell lying on the floor bleeding, and in a state of insensibility. Mr. Sainsbury, surgeon, happened to be present professionally with the landlord, and immediately rendered all the assistance in his power. A large portion of the front of the skull was blown off, and the young woman was suffering from violent hemorrhage. She was quite unconscious, and only survived about forty minutes. The deceased was twenty-three years of age, had been a domestic servant at the house about seven years, and was highly respected by her master and mistress. It is supposed that deceased, not thinking the gun was loaded, was in the act of removing it, when it unexpectedly went off. At the time of the accident, a number of people were in the house, and, as the occurrence soon became known throughout the town, a large crowd collected around the house. Mr. and Mrs. Tilsley were naturally very much affected by the melancholy accident.”

“At the Oldbury Petty Sessions, on Tuesday, Mr. Shakespeare, solicitor, made an application on behalf of R. Tildesley, WAGON AND HORSES, for an extension of hours on the occasion of a ball to be held on the 26th. Granted.”

Bicester Herald 21/3/1873

“A case, which occasioned much amusement alike to judge, attorneys, and spectators, was heard in the Oldbury County Court, before Mr. A. Martineau, judge. A claim was made by two travelling actresses, calling themselves Fanny Pedley and Rachel Stanley, but who were sisters of the name of Hammond, to recover £1 15s from R. S. Tildesley, landlord of the WAGGON AND HORSES, Church Street, Oldbury, for wages due. Mr. Shakespeare, solicitor, appeared for the defendant.

The plaintiffs stated that the defendant had engaged them to give a musical and dancing performance in the concert-room attached to his public house. The engagement was for a week, and they were to be paid £1 each for these services. On the 9th March they commenced their performances, but after the second evening the defendant paid them their wages for the two nights, and told them he should require their services no longer.

The plaintiff ‘Rachel’ was cross-examined by Mr. Shakespeare, and rendered the following evidence..... On the first night there were about 400 people there, and we were encored several times. On the next night we went through the performance without breaking down. My sister went to do a song, and Mr. Cross played. He played in the wrong key, in B or C, I don’t know which (laughter). At all events, the pitch was too high.

Mr. Shakespeare: Can you tell the difference between a note played in C and a note in B?

Witness: I had ought to do (laughter).

Mr. Shakespeare: Can you distinguish flats from sharps?

Witness: I don’t know anything about that (roars of laughter).

His Honour here observed that plenty of persons sang beautifully without knowing a note of music.....

Mr. Shakespeare remarked that it was perfectly clear that the young ladies were incompetent. They did not understand music, which was a subject upon which the Oldbury people were very fastidious (much laughter).

The Judge: Were you there, Mr. Shakespeare? I should like to have your opinion (loud laughter).

Mr. Shakespeare, continuing: The plaintiffs were engaged because it was thought that such good-looking young ladies would attract an audience. But they conducted themselves so indecently that they were hissed off the stage. He should be able to call a witness who, after staying a few minutes, had left the room, saying, ‘This is too much.’

Mr. Tildesley, the defendant, was then called, and said that he had been telling the people through the town that he had got two such wonderful girls, but when the people came to his house and saw them, they called them ‘duffers,’ (laughter). The girls broke down altogether, he believed, owing to nervousness.

Mr. Cross was the next witness. In reply to a question put by Mr. Shakespeare as to whether he knew anything of music, he said: Why, bless yer, I should think I do.

Mr. Shakespeare: You recollect the young ladies coming?

Witness: I should rather think I do. While they were doing a double turn in ‘Blue-eyed Nelly’ they broke down. I could defy either of them to sing a song.

Plaintiff: We can do so now if it is required. We have not been accustomed to such playing as yours.

Mr. Cross: Absurd! Why, bless yer, I have played before the best professionals of the day (prolonged laughter).

Mr. Peacock, another witness, said that he was very fond of a song. He went to the concert-room, but he was so disgusted with what he saw that he drank his glass and left the room.

The judge decided in favour of the defendant, on the ground that the plaintiffs had improperly conducted themselves. The sum of 7s 4d, which had been paid into court by the defendant for the second day's performance, was allowed to the plaintiffs."

"An inquest was held on Saturday, at the WAGON AND HORSES INN, Church Street, Oldbury, on the body of John Franks, shingler, aged 47, who was killed on Wednesday night by falling from a canal bridge into a boat at the Brades Steel Works. The evidence showed that the deceased was wheeling a load of hammer cinder from the forge, and that he fell from the bridge into a boat underneath, a distance of 7ft. He was found dead a short time afterwards. The verdict was Accidental Death."

"Mr. R. Docker, district coroner, resumed the enquiry yesterday, at the WAGON AND HORSES INN, Oldbury, into the cause of the death of five miners, who were killed several weeks ago, by an explosion at the Titford Long Meadow colliery, near Oldbury, belonging to Mr. Joseph Hackett. The proprietor of the colliery stated that the pit is not yet free from fire, and that it was impossible to make a descent.

The Coroner stated that he had been informed that the Government Mines Inspector had been unable to make an examination of the pit, and without his evidence it would not be advisable to proceed with the enquiry. He should therefore adjourn the inquest for a month."

Midland Counties Evening Express 28/11/1874

"Yesterday, an inquest was held at the WAGGON AND HORSES, Oldbury, before Mr. R. Docker, touching the death of the five miners who were killed by an explosion at the White Heath Gate Colliery. It was shown that the unfortunate men were trying to extinguish a fire in the upper workings, when a blast of hot air was released and scorched seven of them, five of them dying from the burns they received. The pit could not be examined, as it was still on fire; but the jury, being satisfied that the occurrence was accidental, returned a verdict to that effect."

"Worcestershire Epiphany Quarter Sessions.....

George Smith, 27, hawker, was indicted for stealing a German silver watch, on the 30th of November, at Oldbury, the property of Morris Rawlisher, a travelling jeweller. Mr. Griffiths prosecuted, and Mr. Benson defended.

The prosecutor was showing a German watch, with a view of selling it, to a person at Oldbury station, on the afternoon of the day in question, and, he stated, the prisoner came up to him and said he would buy the watch, but took it out of his hands and ran away. The prisoner was afterwards apprehended at the WAGON AND HORSES INN, Church Street, Oldbury.

The defence was that the prisoner took the watch as a joke.

The jury found the prisoner guilty, and he was sentenced to six calendar months' imprisonment."

Birmingham Daily Post 6/2/1875

"On Thursday night, Mr. Thomas Hinds, butcher, of Oldbury, met with his death under the following singular circumstances. Mr. Hinds was returning from Birmingham in a trap, accompanied by his wife, son, and servant girl. As they were driving through Smethwick, another vehicle, containing Messrs. Crowther and Hamblet, brush manufacturers, of Oldbury, followed about a quarter of a mile in their tear. When near the Smethwick turnpike, Messrs. Crowther and Hamblet pulled up on the embankment on the side of the road to allow a cart and wagon to pass in the opposite direction. The rising ground overturned the trap and both gentlemen fell out, Mr. Hamblet sustaining an injury to his hip. The horse became released from the shafts, and dashing along the thoroughfare at an affrighted speed, came in contact with the rear of the trap in which Mr. Hinds and family were riding with so much force as to upset the vehicle, and its occupants were pitched into the road. Mr. Hinds fell upon his head, and sustained a concussion of the brain; the servant girl received severe contusions, while Mrs. Hinds and their son escaped with slight abrasions. Mr. Hinds was removed to the offices of Mr. Shakespeare, solicitor, where he was attended by Mr. Jackson, surgeon, and also by Dr. Brown, of Coventry, who was telegraphed for. He, however, succumbed to his injuries early yesterday morning. The servant girl was conveyed to the West Bromwich Hospital, and yesterday was doing well. The inquest upon the body of Mr. Hinds was held yesterday, at the WAGON AND HORSES, Oldbury, by Mr. R. Docker, district coroner, but was adjourned till Monday, in order that additional evidence might be obtained."

[The verdict was Accidental Death.]

"An adjourned inquest was held yesterday afternoon, at the WAGGON AND HORSES INN, Oldbury, before Mr. Ralph Docker, coroner, on the body of Benjamin Aldridge (41), Rounds Green, a collier, who had died from injuries received at an explosion in No.2 pit, Ramrod Hall Colliery, on Tuesday, the 5th inst. The enquiry, which commenced on Friday last, was adjourned until yesterday, in order to allow of the attendance of Mr. Baker, Government Inspector of Mines. Mr. Scott, assistant inspector, was also present. Mr. Stokes (Dudley) watched the examination on behalf of the friends of the deceased; and Mr. Shakespeare appeared for Thomas Woodhall, doggy, whom the deceased accused of having been the cause of the explosion. Mr. Griffiths, (Miners' Union) was also present.

Moses Allen, collier, deposed that the pit belonged to the Earl of Dudley, the certificated manager being Mr. William North. Witness and the deceased went down into the pit at six o'clock; the explosion had taken place about an hour afterwards. Witness was about fifty yards distant from where the explosion had taken place. He saw Aldridge crawling along on his knees. In reply to Mr. Baker, he stated that he was not present when Aldridge was set on at work. Naked lamps were hung along the side of the main road. He did not see a safety lamp on a tub near the third parting. He saw a naked lamp in Tom Woodhall's hands. When Woodhall came up to witness and deceased, the latter said, 'It is your fault I have been nearly roasted to death.' Woodhall denied it, and said that he did not tell him to go in. A man named Wood had previously told witness and others that they were not to go into that road where the explosion had occurred until such time as the lamps had been tried. He admitted having disobeyed the order, and gone in the direction of the explosion.

William Wood, collier, stated that Woodhall told witness to remain at the corner of the boat-hole while he examined the various parts. On his return witness went to work, his place being pronounced safe. In reply to Mr. Baker, he said there was no particular station where the men were stopped from proceeding any further before ascertaining that everything was safe. By Mr. Shakespeare: Woodhall told witness to remain at the boat-hole, and stop any other men whilst an examination of the pit was made. They took it for granted that when the lights were up it was all right.

Thomas Woodhall, after having been duly cautioned by the coroner, said that he was overman or doggy at the pit. It was his duty to examine that part where the explosion had occurred. He tried it on the morning of the explosion, and found that it contained sulphur. It was about three feet thick and thirteen yards in length, the average width being about two and a half yards. He directed Wood to prevent any of the men going up that road whilst he examined the other roads. On his return Aldridge was waiting with Wood. Witness and the deceased then went towards the spot where the gas had been found. They stopped at the parting, deceased then undressed himself. A safety lamp was standing close by on a tub where witness had placed it after finding the gas. He told deceased to go in and start in brushing out the gas. When witness had got about fourteen yards along another road he heard the explosion. He then found that the safety lamp was still on the tub. He had told the deceased to take the lamp. Aldridge said, 'This is your fault, you sent me in.' By Mr. Baker: He had sent the deceased to brush out the gas. There had never been any great quantity there before. The men generally brushed it out themselves. He did not know whether it was in accordance with the rules of that and other collieries. He did not know anything about a competent person being required by the Act of Parliament to make an inspection after the pit had been pronounced dangerous.

Mr. Baker then read the 32nd rule, where it stated that the workmen were to be withdrawn from the mine when dangers were discovered, and that a competent person was to make an examination at once.

Witness, continuing, said he had not time to see any competent man. He intended to have helped the deceased to brush out the gas, as he had done so on previous occasions. He admitted being ignorant of many of the duties contained in the rules.

Mr. Baker: I am sorry to hear you say so; it is a very sad thing.

Witness said he had made Reeves acquainted with the gas being in the pit. Reeves was the man above witness. Since the accident pipes had been laid on. If they had been placed there before there would have been no sulphur in the part where the explosion took place. The men had complained of there not being any pipes; they had done so on several occasions. They grumbled chiefly about the powder smoke. There was no particular place for the men to stop at until the pit was pronounced safe; they generally stopped where the air was cut off.

Mr. Baker: This is a most deplorable state of things for this man not to understand the rules. It is, indeed, a sad result.

Witness said he had never made any report of his examination; no book had ever been shown to him for that purpose until last Monday. He had never been asked for his report. He reported things to Reeves, and Reeves reported them to someone else. Witness was one of the examiners. There were two others. There were four doggies in the pit.

By Mr. Shakespeare: If Aldridge had taken the lamp the explosion would not have occurred. He must have taken his candle with him, as one had been picked up near to the spot.

By Mr. Baker: He did not know whether, in making his rounds, a safety lamp should be locked. His was not locked. It would lock, but he never locked it. He had no key with him.

Mr. Baker: I am sorry you do not know anything about what the law requires you to know.

The inquiry was then adjourned."

Wolverhampton Express and Star 11/11/1875

"The inquiry into the death of Benjamin Aldridge, which occurred at the Ramrod Colliery, Rowley Hills, from an explosion of gas, terminated yesterday, a verdict of Accidental Death being returned, accompanied by the following statement from the jury: That in the directions given to Aldridge on going into the work, where it was stated all was safe, it had not been shown in the evidence there was any ill-feeling between the two parties, and we look upon the statement that there was ill-feeling as an entire misunderstanding. We think that Aldridge was in some measure contributory to his death. We would also recommend that in future better attention be paid to the ventilation of these pits, and would suggest that all the safety-lamps be locked."

West Bromwich Weekly News 10/9/1881

“At the Magistrates’ Clerk’s Offices, on Monday, before Mr. G. Heaton (magistrate), a young man named George Harper, giving his address as Manchester, was brought up in custody on remand, charged with passing base coins in Oldbury. The barmaid at the WAGGON AND HORSES said on Friday night, prisoner went into that house and asked for something to drink, tendering in payment what she thought was a base shilling. She refused to take it, and the man gave her some coppers instead. He again called for some drink tendering again what proved to be a base shilling, she accepted it and handed it to the landlord. It was subsequently found to be counterfeit.

PC Clarke apprehended the prisoner in West Bromwich Street, the same evening, at 10.30. Prisoner first said he came from Wolverhampton, but afterwards gave the above address. Eighteen bad shillings were found in his possession.

Prisoner was remanded.”

“George Harper (24), of Manchester, was brought up in custody, on remand, charged with passing counterfeit coin at Oldbury, on the 2nd inst.

Annie Curley, barmaid, at the WAGGON AND HORSES, Church Street, said on the evening in question, prisoner went into the house and called for some wine and tendered in payment what she believed to be a base shilling. She refused to take it; he then gave her twopence instead. Prisoner then went away and returned in about 10 minutes and called for some beer, tendering again in payment what afterwards proved to be a base shilling. She received it and handed it to Mr. Perrins, who on examining it found it to be counterfeit.

PC Clarke said he heard that a man had been passing counterfeit coin at several public houses in Oldbury, and from the description he received of him he apprehended prisoner at 9.30 the same evening whilst on his way to the station. Witness asked him where he came from when prisoner said Wolverhampton. He saw the prisoner put his hand in his trouser pocket and drop something. At the Police Station he searched him and found in his possession in good money 21 sixpences, 1 fourpenny piece, 2 threepenny pieces, and four and sixpence halfpenny in coppers. Prisoner, in answer to the charge, said he expected it.

PC Nash said when prisoner was being taken to the Police Station he saw him drop from his trouser pocket the purse produced, which was found to contain 18 base shillings wrapped in tissue paper. Superintendent Hardman said he took the coins to Mr. Edward Dutton, watchmaker, Birmingham Street, who pronounced them to be base.

Edward Dutton said the last witness brought the coins to him on the 5th inst. He tested them and found them to be counterfeit. They withstood the acid well on account of them being coated with silver, but they were very deficient in weight.

Sophia Lloyd, of the ROLLERS ARMS, Halesowen Street, said on the evening of the 2nd inst the prisoner went into that house and in payment for some beer tendered a counterfeit shilling. She gave him the change and put the shilling on one side in consequence of some remark made by another person in the tap room. Prisoner was remanded in order that the case might be brought before the Mint Authorities.”

“On Saturday morning an alarming accident occurred on a pit mound near Izons Pool, which has resulted in the death of three persons. It appears that a number of young people were picking coal on the mound, when three of the party got too near a portion of the bank which is burning, and all three – two female and one boy – sank into the midst of the fire. They were extricated as speedily as possible, but all of them were burnt in a most frightful manner about the head, arms, and upper parts of the body.

Benjamin Hadley (10), residing at Brades Village, and Cecilia Evans (14), of Canal Side, Oldbury, were removed to the West Bromwich District Hospital, and the girl died there on Sunday. Matilda Ellen Hadley (18), of Albert Street, Oldbury, was removed to her home, where she died on Sunday morning from the effects of the burns. The boy, Hadley died on Tuesday night.

On Tuesday an inquest was held before Mr. Hooper on the bodies of the two former at the West Bromwich District Hospital.

The jury censured a workman named Harris, who saw the accident, for his inhuman conduct in not assisting the children.

On Thursday Mr. M. Docker held an enquiry at the WAGON INN, Church Street, Oldbury, on the body of Matilda Ellen Hadley.

In both cases a verdict of Accidental Death was returned.”

Birmingham Daily Post 26/8/1891

"The annual licensing session for Oldbury petty sessional division was held yesterday at the Court-house. Superintendent Speke presented his annual report, which showed there were now in the division 4,340 inhabited houses, compared with 3,930 in the year 1881, being an increase of 410 during the last ten years, and there was one house for the sale of intoxicants to about each 154 inhabitants. The Sunday evening services of sacred music and song held at various licensed houses in the division, and to which he called their attention at the last licensing meeting, were now entirely suppressed.....

Superintendent Speke opposed the transfer of the license of the WAGON AND HORSES HOTEL, Oldbury, from Ellen Taylor to Henry Filton, on the ground that the latter was convicted for permitting drunkenness on the 11th of August last. Having heard Mr. Shakespeare, who represented the applicant, the Bench granted the transfer."

Midland Sun 29/4/1893

"At the Oldbury Police Court on Tuesday, Joseph Udall, landlord of the WAGGON AND HORSES, Church Street, Oldbury, was summoned for permitting drunkenness on his licensed premises on the 25th March. Mr. Shakespeare defended.

Sergeant Cooper visited the house about 9.45 on Saturday night, the 25th ult. In the taproom he saw two men drunk. One of them, Alfred Kinchen, was standing in a leaning position over the counter. He could not stand still, but was continually staggering. He also saw a man named Hill, who was sitting down quite drunk. He called Mr. Udall's attention to the condition of the two men, and he replied that he could not help it if they were drunk. Witness said, they were drunk and that Mr. Udall should request them to leave. He did not, however, make any attempt to get them off the premises. The officer spoke to Hill, who got up at once and staggered across the room falling against the door, which led to the street. Kinchin was led out of the house by a friend and was conveyed home in a cab. For being drunk Kinchin had already been summoned, and fined, but on the summons being issued he absconded and a warrant had to be issued for his arrest.

By Mr. Shakespeare: He had given evidence some hundreds of times. He was not aware of having done anything wrong in mentioning the fact of Kinchin having absconded. He did not make a memorandum of his conversation with Udall. Was not aware that defendant had been employed for 30 years at Chance's. When he entered the room there would be about 30 people in the house. He entered in the ordinary course of his duty, and not through having received outside information. He stood about two minutes glancing around the room; and on seeing Hill and Kinchin at once concluding they were drunk. The landlord did not tell him Hill had only been in the house only ten minutes, nor did defendant deny either of the men were drunk. Hill said that if he was drunk, it was for the want of it. Kinchin had a jug before him. For the defence Mr. Shakespeare pointed out that publicans had a great deal of prejudice created against them by the way in which some houses were conducted, and by the cry against drunkenness, which was being raised throughout the country at the present time. He would like the Bench to bear in mind the respectability of defendant who had worked for a period of 30 years for Messrs. Chance. Granting that the statements of the officer were true, he commented that the conduct of the two men was not such as to give the landlord any impression that they were intoxicated.

A fine of 5s and costs, £1 3s 6d in all, was inflicted.

Hill was fined 2s 6d and costs, 18s 6d in all, for being drunk on licensed premises on the same day."

Joseph Udall was convicted of permitting drunkenness on 10th April 1894.

"At the Police Court, yesterday, Benjamin Bowers, haulier, was charged with stealing a quantity of coal, of the value of 16s, belonging to the Holt Brewery Company, Birmingham, on the 9th inst. Mr. J. S. Sharpe defended.

Arthur Griffin, manager of the WAGON AND HORSES INN, Church Street, Oldbury, said that on the date named he engaged defendant to draw the coal from the Great Western Railway station at Oldbury to his house. As the coal did not arrive he saw defendant, who said a mistake had been made, and the coal had been taken to another person. Defendant offered to pay for the coal or fetch another load, but witness demanded his own coal, which was subsequently returned.

For the defence, Mr. Sharpe denied the offence, and urged that the charge was brought in consequence of a mistake.

The magistrates fined defendant £2 4s, including costs, or, in default, fourteen days' hard labour."

“At the Oldbury Police Court, on Tuesday, Fanny Thompson, a servant in the employ of Mrs. W. H. Brookes, of the WAGGON AND HORSES INN, Church Street, was charged with stealing 17s, the money of her employer.

Polly Brookes said the prisoner was engaged with her, as a general servant, on August 11th. On August 12th she placed £11, in various coins, in a drawer in her bedroom, and on Sunday night she counted the money again and found 17s missing. She told the prisoner on the following day she had lost some money, but she replied that she had not been in the bedroom. She had also missed twelve handkerchiefs, a pair of drawers, and three yards of silk ribbon, a metal chain, knife, pencil case, and a silver brooch, from the same drawer. She discharged the prisoner and gave information to the police.

Heber Hingley, milliner and draper, of Church Street, said on August 13th the prisoner went to his shop and purchased a lady’s hat at 4s 11½d, and the next day a pair of corsets at 2s 11½d, and stockings and a skirt, tendering half a sovereign in payment.

Inspector Male deposed to visiting the house of Mrs. Bowen, in West Bromwich Street, a married sister of the prisoner, when he received from her a number of articles which the prisoner had purchased, and he asked her how she accounted for them, but she made no reply. He then charged her with stealing 17s, the property of Mrs. Brookes. At the Police Station she was searched by a female searcher, who found a metal chain, a silver brooch, a knife, and pencil case belonging to Mrs. Brookes.

Prisoner was bound over under the First Offenders Act to come up for Judgement when called upon.”

Sandwell Evening Mail 12/10/1991

"Property agents almost despaired of ever finding a buyer for the WAGON AND HORSES in Oldbury town centre. Who would want a pub that had stood empty for about four years after being closed by the brewer-landlord because it wasn't paying its way?

Peter Rawson stepped in where others were unwilling to tread and his brave rescue act has been well rewarded. Today, he owns a busy thriving pub, fully restored to the social life of Oldbury's business and local community. 'It's a Grade II listed building with many of its original features intact, and I liked the character of the place,' said Peter, explaining why he took the plunge. 'Besides which, the price was right.'

Having hitched his career hopes to a rickety-looking WAGON AND HORSES, Peter prescribed an entirely new trading policy based on a rich diet of cask ales from some of the country's best brewhouses and fine food to tickle up the taste buds. To a pub that could easily have disappeared without trace, he brought beers previously only sampled by Oldbury drinkers in bars on their away trips. The day I called, beers from Liverpool and Mansfield were being delivered. 'We are always trying out different guest ales to give customers plenty of variety and choice,' said the licensee, who has long championed one of the Black Country's favourite brews, Batham's Best Bitter. Given the free trader's rein that enables him to take the pick of the pints, Peter's cellar has been stocked with such diverse beers as Greene King's Abbot Ale, Pendle Witches Brew from Burnley, and Timothy Taylor's award-winning Landlord Bitter, Yorkshire's pride and joy.

There is nothing fussy about the pub's bars and eating areas. Yet that is clearly part of the appeal for businessmen who use Peter's well-preserved Victorian pub, which is next to the library and opposite the new Civic Centre. He has opened an upstairs dining room to meet extra demand. If office managers are still taking policy decisions in their lunchtime break at the WAGON AND HORSES, it is only to make their choice of beers or select one of the many homemade dishes served up by Peter's partner, Sue Burton. You don't find Frogs Legs and snails on many pub menus, but if they don't go with a lunchtime pint, there are always pies, steaks, omelettes, vegetarian melas, and other treats. I enjoyed a tasty hot beef sandwich.

Pick of the pints: Batham's, Marston's Pedigree, Draught Bass.

Food: Lunches throughout the week, and evening meals Monday-Saturday.

Upstairs room available for private functions.

Average price of a pint: Mild £1.08, Bitter £1.30.

Opening times: 12 noon to 2.30pm, Monday-Thursday; 12 noon to 3pm, Friday and Saturday; 5pm to 11pm Monday to Saturday; Sundays, 12 noon to 2.30pm, 7pm to 10.30pm."

Sandwell Evening Mail 14/5/1993

"Pete Rawson was sitting comfortably having a trim in a Black Country barber's chair when he overheard a conversation by two locals to the effect that a pub taken over by a Brummie would never take off. Now, nearly 10 years and two pubs later, Pete has proved them wrong. It all started when Pete gave up his job as an insurance company life inspector. Born within striking distance of St. Andrew's football ground – he still supports the Blues – and then living in Solihull, he moved to Lye, where he bought the SHOVEL in Pedmore Road. After about two years, he moved to Oldbury and bought the WAGGON AND HORSES in Church Street – the best move he ever made, he reckons. It's pretty good for the Black Country too. For Pete pioneered the growing trend of free houses with a wide range of beers.....

Like many other pubs, it does its bit for charity and licensee Pete recently raised about £800 for a Rotary Club of Oldbury by running in the London marathon.

Price of a pint: Everard's Old Original £1.59; Boddington's £1.34; Marston's Pedigree £1.40; Wadsworth's 6X £1.44; Bass £1.43; Batham's £1.40; Hanson's mild £1.20; Guinness £1.60; Murphy's £1.60.

Guest beers this week: Holden's Special Brew, Farmer's Glory and Bishop's Finger, all at £1.58....."

Andrew Gale was the pub's manager until 2006, when he became the lessee.

On Monday week, at the WAGGON AND HORSES INN, Tividale, near Rowley Regis, on Thomas Montgomery. The deceased was one of the unfortunate men who were burnt by the explosion in Messrs. Wagstaffe and Skidmore's coal pit. After a long investigation, the jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

Birmingham Journal 3/7/1847

“On Saturday last, an inquest was held at the WAGGON AND HORSES, Tividale, before George Hincliffe, Esq, coroner, on the body of a boy named Samuel Pickering, eleven years of age, who came by his death under the following circumstances.

He was employed at a coal-pit at Tividale, belonging to Messrs. Bagnall. On Thursday last, there was an empty skip coming along a railway on the pit bank, and there being two railways diverging from the place where deceased was, he moved the ‘points,’ as he thought, in the right direction; but instead of this, they had been moved in such a way as to allow the skip to go towards the mouth of the pit. Seeing the mistake he had made, the deceased got before and attempted to stop it, with his back towards the pit; but he was forced before the moving skip until he was hanging over the shaft with nothing betwixt him and eternity but the help of a piece of iron encircling the skip, the sharp edges of which rendered it impossible for him to hold on long. This chance of being saved, however, was not even afforded him, for the iron gave way, and the unfortunate deceased fell to the bottom of the shaft, a depth of about seventy yards. A person who was at work a few feet from the bottom, ran immediately to see what had come down the shaft, and found the deceased a lifeless corpse.

Evidence was given to show that no blame was to be attributed to any person except the deceased himself, and a verdict of Accidental Death was returned.

It was not explained, however, at the inquest, how a person who was on the pit bank at the moment, who saw the whole occurrence so as to describe it in the above minute way, and who must have been aware of the dangerous situation of the deceased, how that person could not afford any assistance, although at least two minutes must have elapsed during which the poor lad clung to the frail support which interposed between life and eternity.”

Birmingham Journal 6/11/1847

“On Monday, a decent looking man, named James Scholefield, appeared before the sitting Magistrates, to answer a charge of feloniously stealing from the person of a married woman, named Maria Bolton, a half-crown and a shilling, on the morning of Saturday last.

From the statement of the prosecutrix, it appears that she, in company with her husband and two men named John and William Bold, were on the morning in question at the house of Mr. Benjamin Jewkes, the WAGON AND HORSES, Tividale, where they had something to eat and drink, and while there the prisoner, with others, challenged the prosecutrix’s party to fight. A row, as might have been anticipated, ensued, in which it appears the prosecutrix, by her statement, was knocked down, and while on the floor was robbed of the money in question by the prisoner. She deposed to feeling his hand in her pocket, and complained of her loss before leaving the house.

There was another witness examined, but his evidence was not very material.

Mr. Johnson appeared on behalf of the prisoner, and after submitting the witnesses to a long cross-examination, produced several witnesses for the defence, among whom was Mr. Jewkes, the landlord of the WAGON AND HORSES, and also his daughter, who proved that the prosecutrix never was knocked down, and that she did not complain of being robbed at all.

Mr. Johnson also called Superintendent Jewkes, to whom it appears the prosecutrix first made a complaint about the robbery, and who deposed to a conversation between them by which it seemed the prosecutrix could not say whether she had lost the money in or out of the house, or at least that she did not miss it till after she had left the house.

Upon this the Magistrates decided upon dismissing the charge.

There was a second charge of felony against the same prisoner, for robbing William Bold, one of the prosecutrix’s party, of 5s, but which, for want of sufficient evidence, was also dismissed, and the prisoner was set at liberty, to the gratification of his friends.”

“Between the hours of twelve and one o’clock on Friday morning, some house-breakers attempted to enter the residence of the Rev. E. F. Whitehouse of the Trindle. They forced open the gate by breaking the chain, and commenced operations on the back door with a centre-bit, by which they made two circles. Mr. Whitehouse being aroused by a dog, and showing a light, the rogues decamped. Between two and three o’clock the same morning, the house of Mr. Benjamin Jewkes, the WAGGON AND HORSES INN, Tividale, was entered by two men, who sprang the bar of the front parlour window, and forced the shutters. There was carried away £2 in silver and 5s in coppers, a dozen silver tea spoons, a writing desk containing a few papers (which, however, was left broken open near to the house); an empty wine bottle and some cakes were also taken. During the time the burglars were in the house they disturbed a man who had been sleeping on a sofa, and whom they searched, taking his tobacco box. He endeavoured to secure them; but they escaped, leaving an iron 'jemmy' behind them."

Wolverhampton Chronicle 3/10/1860

"On Tuesday an inquest was held before Edwin Hooper, Esq, coroner, at Mr. B. Jukes's, WAGGON AND HORSES INN, Tividale, on the body of a married woman named Mary Pugh, 50 years of age, and mother of a family.

It appeared from the evidence that on the preceding morning about six o'clock deceased got up for the purpose of making some varnish or French polish, and, while thus engaged, by some inadvertence she let the liquid boil over. By this means she set her clothes on fire, causing her body, neck, arms, and face to be so fearfully burnt that, after lingering in great agony for some time, she died from the effects of the accident. Her son-in-law, who heard her screams, rushed to her assistance, as did also her husband and daughter, and medical aid was procured and every care taken.

The Jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death."

“At the Dudley Police Court, yesterday, before Mr. T. Fereday and Mr. F. Smith, William Mander, a youth about sixteen years of age, was charged with having stolen a horse and cart, the property of George Stokes, cask maker, of Howe Street, Birmingham. The prosecutor stated that the prisoner had been some months employed by him, and that, on the 29th ult, he sent him in charge of a horse and cart and nine casks to Smethwick, telling him to leave the whole lot at Mr. Gordon’s, of that place, and to walk back to Birmingham. Prisoner did not return; but on the following day he offered the horse and cart for sale to a man named Isaac Rollason, at the WAGON AND HORSES, Tividale, asking £2 for the lot. Rollason tendered him 25s for them, but the prisoner declined at first, yet afterwards agreed to accept the offer conditionally, that Rollason should pay for half-a-gallon of ale. The bargain was then struck, the money was paid, and the prisoner gave a form of receipt for it, but did not sign it. Rollason, in giving evidence, stated that he was doubtful as to whether the prisoner had come by the property honestly, and closely questioned him about it. When the prisoner got the money he went on to Dudley Port, and got into a Wolverhampton train, and Rollason, not being quite satisfied, followed him, pulled him out of the carriage, and took him to the Dudley Police Station. The horse and cart were taken to the same place, and the prisoner was taken by Police-constable Minchin to the prosecutor’s place, in Birmingham. When charged with the robbery at the Birmingham Police Station, prisoner said, ‘I know I stole them, and I suppose I shall have to suffer.’ He was committed for trial at the next Staffordshire Sessions.”

William Mander pleaded guilty to having, while in the service of George Stokes, on the 30th of November, stolen, at Rowley Regis, one mare and one wagon, the property of his master. The Assistant-Chairman said it appeared that prisoner had been drunk at the time of the offence, and therefore the sentence of the court would be that he be imprisoned for six calendar months.”

The chairman was a Mr. Thomas Griffiths, a tinsmith worker, and after a speech, in which he advocated the claims of the men on strike upon the sympathy of other workmen, laid his head upon the table and died almost instantly, the perceptible struggle being a slight gurgling in the throat. Death is said to have resulted from apoplexy, and it is also stated that deceased was by no means of a strong constitution.”

“Forester’s Funeral.

The remains of Brother Hercules Hazlehurst, of Court Welcome Stranger (4736), WAGGON AND HORSES INN, Tividale, were consigned to the grave in Quarry Bank churchyard on Sunday afternoon last, in the presence of a large number of spectators. The deceased brother held the important office of Court treasurer, and through his influence the order received a large acquisition of members. The poor and the suffering always found in him a friend, and his sudden death has cast a sad gloom over a large circle of friends and relatives.

Kind was his end, but no sad pains oppress

He passed from slumber to his heavenly rest.

The mournful cortege left the Court house shortly after two o’clock, followed by a good muster of the brethren, suitably clad. The beautiful burial service was most impressively read by the officiating clergyman. When all was over several lingered to take a last look of the shell that contained the body and to read the inscription thereon.

Hercules Hazlehurst, of Tividale, died March 11th, 1869, aged 32 years.”

“William Higgs was charged with stealing 1½ yards of ‘Devon’ cloth, the property of Philip Rice, cloth hawker, on the 5th inst.

Prosecutor said that on the day in question he went to the WAGON INN, Tividale, and called for some ale. There were about nine or ten men in the room, and he asked them if they would buy anything from him.

They requested him to let them see what he had, and he accordingly did so. The defendant was one of the men. Some of them took out of his bundle three pieces of cloth, one of which was the one produced, and refused to return them to him. The piece produced was 2s 9d in value. As they would not give him back the cloth he went to the police station for an officer, but could not find one. He then returned to the inn, and found that all the men were gone except three, one of whom was prisoner.

Police-constable Govan said in consequence of information which he had received he went to the house of a man named Woodall, at Kates Hill, Dudley, where he found the piece of cloth produced. Woodall stated that he had bought it from prisoner for 1s 3d and a quart of ale.

Prisoner admitted selling the cloth to Woodall, and said he found it on the seat after the packman (meaning prosecutor) had left to fetch the police. When prosecutor returned to the house he 'did not like' to tell him that he had found the cloth.

In answer to the Bench: Woodall pressed him to sell the cloth to him, or he should not have done so.

The Bench committed him to goal for two months, with hard labour."

“On Tuesday morning, the 30th ult, no little alarm was occasioned to the inhabitants who reside between the COACH AND HORSES and the WONDER INN, in the Tividale Road, when it appeared that the road between the above-mentioned houses had subsided and caved into some depth, through mining operations. The fountains of the deep seemed to have broken up, for the hollow formed by the subsidence was soon filled with water, owing to the bursting of a large main belonging to the South Staffordshire Waterworks Company, which flooded the road, and rendered it quite impassable to pedestrians and vehicles, the water lodging in the entries, and rising nearly to the doorsteps of the houses.

On Wednesday the stable and coach-house of the COACH AND HORSES fell in with a crash, suddenly and unexpectedly, one part falling into the road, and the other inside, causing a perfect wreck.....”

County Advertiser 11/2/1905

“The annual licensing sessions for the Rowley Regis Petty Sessional Division were held on Wednesday..... Superintendent Johnson presented his annual report.....

During the twelve months ended January last, three licensed victuallers and two beerhouse keepers had been proceeded against and convicted for offences against the Licensing Acts. One beerhouse keeper had also been convicted for using obscene language in his own house. The whole of the licenses (except the one for using bad language) have since been transferred. Since the transfer each house has been conducted satisfactorily.....

The following is a list of the licenses objected to by Superintendent Johnson.....

Joseph Smith, WAGON AND HORSES INN, Tividale, fined £3, and costs on the 30th March, 1904, for permitting gaming.....

The justices then proceeded to hear the objections to the renewal of the licenses on the ‘black list’. These were all granted, the chairman administering a caution to each applicant.”

[The offence relates to the previous licensee.]

Birmingham Daily Gazette 8/2/1906

The Chairman said in addition to the licenses mentioned by Superintendent Johnson, the magistrates had decided that notices of objection be served upon the holders of the licenses of.....

WAGGON AND HORSES INN, Tividale, on the ground of redundancy, and the objections would be dealt with at the adjourned licensing sessions.”

County Advertiser 10/3/1906

“The adjourned annual licensing sessions for the Rowley Regis Sessional Division were held yesterday.....

Mr. Bassano said the bench had under consideration the nine houses, five of which were objected to on the ground of conviction and four others on the ground of redundancy. It had raised a very large question, and the magistrates had before them the consideration of the parish as a whole. He threw out the suggestion to the trade and owners that the matter should be considered from their point of view during the next twelve months. The magistrates would be prepared to consider any counter proposition that might come from the brewers which could be laid before them next year. In order to simplify the proceedings that day the following licenses would be renewed.....

WAGON AND HORSES, Tividale.”

County Advertiser 12/5/1906

Mr. Marshall applied for the transfer of the license of the WAGON AND HORSES, Tividale, from Phoebe Smith to Isaac Brayden, and also for the transfer of the PEAR TREE INN, Tividale, from Isaac Brayden to James Frisby.

He explained that at the general licensing sessions the WAGON AND HORSES INN was one of the houses scheduled to be considered on the ground of redundancy. It was deferred, in order that the owners might do something within the next twelve months. Mrs. Smith, the late licensee, succeeded her husband, who died twelve months ago, and though his clients, Messrs. Rolinson and Son, did not desire their houses to be kept by women, under the exceptional circumstances they agreed to allow her to remain in charge of the premises. She had since been conducting herself other than in the way his clients desired, and she had been persuaded to leave.

Under the circumstances he applied for the transfer of the WAGON AND HORSES INN to Brayden, and for the transfer of the PEAR TREE INN to Brayden’s step-son.

Frisby was placed in the witness box, and in reply to Superintendent Johnson admitted that he had been twice convicted for gambling at West Bromwich, and that on the last occasion he went to gaol in default of paying the fine.

Superintendent Johnson contended that a man who had been convicted twice for gambling, and who had been in gaol, was not a suitable person to hold a license.

Mr. Marshall said it was only expected to be of a temporary character, and his clients proposed to submit the PEAR TREE INN to the Bench on the ground of redundancy, instead of the WAGON AND HORSES INN. Ultimately the Bench granted the transfer of the WAGON AND HORSES INN to Brayden, but refused the other application.

Mr. Bassano said the Bench were content to allow Brayden to hold two licenses temporarily."

County Advertiser 19/5/1906

"Phoebe Smith, licensee of the WAGON AND HORSES INN, Dudley Road, Tividale, was charged with, permitting drunkenness upon her licensed premises and also with supplying drunken persons on the 1st of May. Mr. J. W. Clulow prosecuted, and Mr. Marshall, of Dudley, defended.

Mr. Clulow explained that on the afternoon of the date named Police-constables Heatherley and Walton visited the house. They went in at the back of the premises, and saw two men, named Abraham Corbett and Thomas Danks, drinking from a supply of ale on the table. Both men were in a drunken condition, and when Heatherley spoke to Mrs. Smith she said she had asked them to go. The same evening the officers paid another visit to the house, and then they found two other men, Joseph Tilley and James Young, in a drunken state. Mrs. Smith was not upon the premises, which had been left in charge of her son, aged fourteen years. Subsequently Mrs. Smith arrived, and when witness spoke to her she expressed her regret and asked the officers to overlook it.

Mr. Marshall pleaded guilty, and explained that defendant was a widow with three young children. She was without a penny, and any fine imposed upon her would have to be paid by someone else.

Mr. Bassano said it was a bad case, and a fine of £5, including costs, was imposed.

Thomas Danks, Abraham Corbett, Joseph Tilley, and James Young, all residing at Tividale, were each fined 10s, including costs, for being drunk upon the licensed premises."

County Advertiser 3/11/1906

"James Homer, of Park Lane, Tipton, was charged with torturing a cat on the 21st ult.

Inspector Argue, NSPCA, prosecuted, and the said the defendant with other men were drinking in the tap room of the WAGON AND HORSES INN, Tividale. The defendant had a ten weeks old kitten upon his knee, and was playing with it, when for some unaccountable reason defendant threw the kitten upon the fire. A man named Rushton pulled the kitten off the fire, burning his fingers in doing so. It was burnt so badly that it had to be destroyed.

A witness named Roberts said the defendant told him that he was trying to throw the kitten at Payton's head for fun.

Mr. G. T. S. Plant (Dudley) who defended, said defendant did not throw the kitten on the fire wilfully.

Fined 20s including costs."

County Advertiser 26/1/1907

"George Prince, a miner, of High Street, Kates Hill, Dudley, was charged with being disorderly and refusing to quit the licensed premises of the WAGON AND HORSES INN, Tividale, kept by Isaac Brayden, and also with assaulting Joseph William Blakemore, chartermaster of the Tividale Hall Colliery, on the 12th inst. It was alleged that defendant neglected his work, and when spoken to by Blakemore he violently assaulted him. Defendant then went to the public house, and owing to his disorderly conduct was ordered to leave by the landlord. He refused to go, and the police were called in.

Defendant was fined 10s, including costs, for refusing to quit, and 10s and costs for the assault."

County Advertiser 9/2/1907

"The annual licensing session for the Rowley Regis Petty Sessional Division were held on Wednesday at the Police Court.....

Mr. Marshall applied for the renewal of the WAGON AND HORSES INN, Tividale, to Isaac Brayden. He pointed out that the police objection was against the previous tenant, and since Brayden went into the house it had been properly conducted. He also asked for permission to rebuild the house, and submitted plans for the proposed alterations.

Mr. Bassano said the Bench had decided to defer the renewal of the license and also the consideration of the proposed improvements until the adjourned licensing day.”

County Advertiser 9/3/1907

“The adjourned annual licensing sessions for the Rowley Regis Petty Sessional Division were held on Wednesday at the Police Court.....

The Bench renewed the license of the WAGON AND HORSES, Tividale, to Isaac Brayden.....

Mr. Marshall, of Dudley, applied for the permission of the Bench to rebuild the WAGON AND HORSES INN, Old Hill, and the WAGON AND HORSES INN, Tividale. He mentioned that at the annual sessions he submitted plans for the alteration of the houses, but the consideration of them was deferred until that day. Since his clients had put in amended plans which had received the approval of the police. The owners were Messrs. J. Rolinson and Son, of Netherton, and they proposed to rebuild upon the site of the old houses, and not to increase the drinking area. The alterations would afford better facilities for police supervision, provide improved sanitary accommodation, increase the rateable value, and also the amount to be contributed from the trade for compensation purposes. The PEAR TREE INN, Tividale, another of his client’s houses, was being dealt with on the ground of redundancy, and if the present applications to rebuild were favourably considered they would offer no opposition to the non-renewal of the license of the PEAR TREE INN.

Mr. Bassano said the plans were satisfactory, and subject to an agreement for the PEAR TREE INN to be sent for compensation they would be approved.”

Isaac Brayden issued tokens from here.

“Henry Cook, Tividale, was charged with assaulting Samuel Spicer, of the same place, on the 28th ult. Mr. Sharpe (Messrs. Jackson and Sharpe, Westbromwich) prosecuted, and Mr. Stokes defended.

In opening the case, Mr. Sharpe said that at the last Staffordshire Assizes defendant was indicted for assault and highway robbery. The complainant was a witness for the prosecution, and this appeared to have caused some ill-feeling between him and the defendant.

Complainant was called, and gave evidence that on the night in question he was at the DUKE OF WELLINGTON INN, Tividale. Defendant and a number of other men were also there. A dispute arose over some card playing, and defendant struck complainant two blows, one on the nose and the other on the shoulder, knocking him into a corner. Defendant said he would make him remember that Stafford job.

Cross-examined: Was perfectly sober. Did not charge Cook with stealing his watch. Cook was acquitted at Stafford.

A witness named Wall was called, and gave evidence that he saw defendant strike complainant.

Mr. Stokes said the dispute did not arise about card playing, but arose out of Spicer having charged Cook with stealing his watch, which Cook had previously handed over to some one, and had forgotten with whom he had left it.

Several witnesses were then called, and gave evidence that Spicer was drunk and had to be put out of the house.

The Bench considered the assault a brutal one, and fined defendant £5 and costs; in default of payment three months.”

County Advertiser 19/3/1881

“Samuel Paskin, landlord of the WELLINGTON INN, Tividale, was charged with permitting gambling on his licensed premises on the 28th ult. Mr. T. Cooksey (Old Hill) prosecuted, and Mr. Stokes (Messrs. Stokes and Harper, Dudley) defended.

Evidence was given by a witness named Samuel Spicer that he was at defendant’s house on the night in question. There were eight or nine persons there, amongst them being three persons named Wall, Crochon, and Cook. Wall and Crochon were playing at cards – ‘all fours’ – for drink, and Cook was scoring. As witness went into the taproom Wall paid the defendant’s son, who was sitting in the room at the time the card playing was going on, for a quart of ale that had been lost. Defendant’s son was near the taproom door, and could see the card playing. Three more games were played after this.

Wall was called and stated that he played with Crochon for ale, and said that the card playing continued for more than half an hour.

Mr. Stokes said defendant had kept the house for twelve years without a complaint being made against him. He proceeded to call a number of witnesses to show that Spicer was drunk and had to be turned out of the public house.

A number of witnesses called said there was no card playing going on, and Samuel Crochon, on being called denied that that he was card playing with Wall as the witnesses for the prosecution had sworn. The Bench retired, and on returning into Court, Mr. Bassano said they considered the case proved. They had decided not to endorse the license, but they should inflict a severe fine. Defendant was fined £5 and costs.”

His liabilities were £335 9s, assets £139 15s, and deficiency £195 14s. The alleged causes of failure were want of capital, keen competition, and the heavy expenses necessary to work up a connection.

In reply to the Official Receiver (Mr. Jobson), debtor said he commenced business as a licensed victualler in 1899, and had a capital of £75, which he obtained in an action for wrongful dismissal. He first had the STATION INN at Great Bridge, and the landlords gave him the option to purchase their interest in the lease for £450. He subsequently purchased their interest for £450, and afterwards resold it, together with the lease of the WELLINGTON INN, Tividale, which he had also taken, for £1,375. After this sale in November, 1901, he was out of employment till March this year, when he began business as a brewer in Long Lane, Blackheath. If he could have had time, and sold the brewery as a going concern, he should have been able to pay everyone 20s in the pound.

“After a hearing lasting the whole day, Oldbury licensing magistrates yesterday refused an application by Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers for the removal of the license of the CROSS KEYS, Tat Bank, to premises to be erected at the junction of Albert Road, and the new road at Warley.”

Smethwick Telephone 7/3/1931

“Matters of great importance were under consideration with the application of Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers for permission to erect a hotel on the Birmingham-Wolverhampton Road at a point near the Smethwick and Oldbury housing schemes.....

Mr. Hurst said he had the honour to apply to the Bench on behalf of Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers for a provisional order sanctioning the removal of the CROSS KEYS, Tat Bank, a fully licensed public house, to a site at Warley, on the new main Wolverhampton Road, at the corner of Albert Road The application was in respect to a removal of a licence to a district which was a new centre of population and the house would be in a teeming and busy district.....

The Bench considered the matter in private for a long time. Eventually the Chairman said that the application would be granted subject to the surrender of two full licences in the centre of Oldbury – the BROWN LION, Birmingham Street, and the ENGINEERS ARMS, Stone Street – and also subject to certain minor alterations to the plans.”

“Worcester Licensing Committee on Monday confirmed the provisional order granted to Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers, sanctioning the removal of the publican’s licence from the CROSS KEYS, Tat Bank, Oldbury, to premises to be erected at the corner of the Wolverhampton-Birmingham arterial road and Albert Road at Warley, in the Oldbury division.

Mr. J. G. Hurst, KC, who appeared with Mr. M. Holdsworth to make the application said that since the construction of the arterial road there had been remarkable building development at the site of the proposed licence. In addition to closing the CROSS KEYS, his clients would surrender two more full licences in the district of Oldbury. It was mentioned that these licenses would be the BROWN LION in Birmingham Street, and the ENGINEERS ARMS in Stone Street. Hayes, who was chairman of the Oldbury Baths and Public Halls Committee, had been invited to present the shield to the winners of the final between the GATE INN and the WERNLEY HOTEL, held at the PHEASANT INN, Warley. The GATE INN was successful. A few minutes before he died Coun. Hayes had been talking and joking with some of the 150 spectators. He was a Socialist and was first elected to Oldbury Council in 1945, representing the Broadwell Ward. In 1946 he was elected to the Worcestershire County Council. "The WERNLEY Bowling Club's most successful achievement of the season was winning the Jeffrey Annual Trophy. They won the award by beating the Three Horse Shoes, Sheldon. Both teams compete for the trophy annually and in recent years the Sheldon club have always won. But on Friday the cup was presented to the captain of the WERNLEY team, Mr. Jack Wright, at the club's 35th annual dinner and prize distribution night at the WERNLEY HOTEL.
Club president, Mr. P. Goodby, said, 'Now we have got the award the Three Horse Shoes are going to have a hard job getting it back.' He added, 'Last year they beat us handsomely when they ran us to 28 on our own green.....'"

"Drinkers at an Oldbury pub have spent the last year raising money for sick children. They have now presented £1,200 to the Birmingham Children's Hospital. Licensee of the WERNLEY pub in Wolverhampton Road, Mr. David Jones, decided to hold raffles for the hospital after his daughter, Katie, aged seven, underwent an eye operation just over a year ago. Then barmaid Mrs. Lillian Aston started a sponsored slim to help boost proceeds. She lost a stone in just two months, reducing her weight to 11 stone. The raffles were held each fortnight, with prizes donated by Mr. Jones and his customers. 'I was delighted by the way Katie was treated and the staff were very helpful as well, so I decided to raise money for the hospital,' said Mr.

Instead of the barrel loads of beer they would normally have on board, their 17-ton Mitchells & Butlers wagon will be carrying emergency relief supplies on what could be a hazardous 1,300 mile journey Mr. Boden, a brewery drayman said, ‘I don’t mind giving up part of my Christmas for such a project. I have got my wife’s full backing.’ But he has got one well deserved surprise Christmas present. His married daughter, Louise Hays, turned up unexpectedly from America in time to see Keith and other workers collect the first batch of supplies from the WERNLEY pub, on Wolverhampton Road, Warley.”

“Beer at the prices of 60 years ago will be on tap at a Warley pub on Monday. But before regulars can enjoy their bargain pints at the WERNLEY, Wolverhampton Road, they’ll need the right money – in old pence. Landlord John Garbett who has organised entertainment for the celebrations throughout the day, said, ‘We’ll be selling a limited amount of beer at the sort of prices charged in 1933, the year the pub was built. It’s a special treat for my regulars. They’ll be offered mild ale at threepence a pint and bitter at fourpence. A number of customers say they are glad they kept some of the old money. It will be a good way to spend it.’ Mr. John York, an operations manager with M&B, said, ‘The WERNLEY remains a good community pub after 60 years and customers deserve something special as an anniversary treat.’”

“A Halesowen band is set to rock until they drop in a mammoth fundraising event for Children in Need. Funky Wrench will be gigging at four pubs across Oldbury in one night, playing for 30 minutes before quickly packing up their instruments and equipment before dashing to the next venue. The band will be kicking off the event tomorrow (Friday) at the Amber Tavern, Hagley Road, at 7.30pm before moving onto the WERNLEY, Wolverhampton Road for 8.30pm. The third performance will be at the BEAR in Bearwood Road for 9.45pm before they finish at the ABBEY in Abbey Road at 11pm.

Band member Andy Hill said, ‘We wanted to do something out of the ordinary for Children in Need which would make us stand out from the crowd and hopefully raise more money than just going round with buckets. It will be a real challenge, really hard work. It has taken quite a bit of organisation but we are all really excited although we are nervous because we are aware if one thing goes wrong it will have a knock-on effect for the whole night.’”

“A pub regular who has been attending his Warley watering hole for the past 60 years was asked to cut the ribbon as it reopened following extensive refurbishment. The WERNLEY, in Wolverhampton Road, honoured 92-year-old local man Joe Davies by making him guest of honour at a ceremonial ribbon cutting ceremony. Following a significant investment, which has seen five new jobs created, the pub recently reopened with its new look after a two-week refurbishment project.

General manager Julie Colbourne said, ‘We’re so pleased at how brilliant the WERNLEY looks following the refurbishment, and we were thrilled to have Joe here cut the ceremonial ribbon for us. At 92-years-young, Joe has been regularly visiting the WERNLEY for an incredible 60 years, making him our longest standing loyal guest. Joe is a well-respected pillar of the local community and a lifetime member of the WERNLEY Bowling Club, it’s fitting for him to be chosen as our Local Hero and here to officially reopen the pub as it begins a new phase in its history.’ The pub and its staff are already planning a host of fundraising events and activities as they look to support the local community throughout the year. Julie added, ‘We can’t wait to welcome back all our regulars and the people of the Oldbury to see what the new look WERNLEY is all about.’”

“A man was beaten up and his sister was dragged by her hair during a brawl at a Black Country pub. The man, aged in his 20s, was punched and kicked in the face during the fight at the WERNLEY in Oldbury and needed hospital treatment for his face and mouth. His sister, who tried to break up the violence, was dragged by her hair across the large pub on Wolverhampton Road. A group of three men are believed to have attacked the brother at around 10pm on Sunday. West Midlands Police is now investigating the incident and has urged anyone with information to get in touch.

Jacqui Thacker was in the pub when the violence broke out and called on the community to ‘flush out’ the men responsible in a widely-shared post on Facebook. She wrote, ‘Three ‘men’ in the WERNLEY tonight whilst spoiling for a fight decided to pick on the shortest lad they could find, who is placid and kind. Not only punched him but then decided when he was on the floor to kick him repeatedly in his head. As a community let’s flush them out – I’d be ashamed if they were my son/partner or ‘friend.’ They also felt it appropriate to swing his sister, who was trying to protect him, across the room by her hair. Those ‘men’ need to do time for this and to realise the gravitas of their deed.’”

“On Saturday, an inquest was held at the WHEAT SHEAF INN, Tat Bank, Oldbury, before R. Docker, Esq, coroner, upon the body of Ellen Shaw (41), who formerly resided at 75, Tat Bank Road, and who died suddenly. The deceased had been ailing for some time, because she had been deprived of the necessities of life, her husband being out of work. On Tuesday last she was found in her home lying on the floor, with her head against the grate, in an unconscious state, and she died the same day. On Tuesday previous deceased went to the relieving officer, Mr. Wattis, respecting the remission of school fees for her children, when Mr. Wattis noticing her famished appearance, asked her if she was in want, and without any application from the deceased gave her five loaves and some grocery goods. The food of the deceased and children had for some time been supplied principally by the neighbours. The Coroner said the case certainly had the appearance that death was hastened from want of proper nourishment; but from the evidence adduced he did not think they could blame anyone except the husband in not trying to get his family food. A verdict of Death from Natural Causes was returned.”

“Yesterday, at the Police Court, an application was made by Mr. S. H. Forrest for the transfer of the license attached to the WHEAT SHEAF INN, Tat Bank, from Mary Ward to Richard Ward.

Police-sergeant Stanton objected to the transfer being granted on the ground that the applicant had been twice summoned to appear before the Court – on the 5th of December, 1881, for threats, when he was ordered to pay the costs; and on the 9th of August, 1887, for a breach of the peace, on which occasion he was ordered to find sureties and pay the costs.

Mr. Forrest produced a character for the applicant, extending over a period of twenty-five years.

The magistrates' clerk said he did not think the charges mentioned by the police were sufficient to justify the Bench in refusing to transfer the license.

The application was granted.”

Aris's Birmingham Gazette 7/4/1828

“On Monday evening an officer of the Court of Requests at Oldbury, named John Horton, was stabbed by William Stevenson, a collier, against whom he had an execution. It is stated that the parties met at the WHIMSEY public house at Oldbury, and that without provocation, except of giving him notice of the execution, Stevenson suddenly rose, and striking deceased with his left hand, with his right plunged a concealed weapon into his body. On raising the unfortunate man from the ground, the injury he had received was fully ascertained, and he was conveyed home, where he died on Wednesday. Stevenson made his escape from the house during the confusion of the moment. An inquest has been held upon the body, and a verdict of Wilful Murder returned against Stevenson, for whose apprehension a reward of £30 is offered.”

Aris's Birmingham Gazette 7/4/1828 - Advert

Whereas William Steventon, alias William Stevenson, alias William Stevens, commonly called Billy Sugar, stands charged upon the Coroner's Inquest with the Wilful Murder of John Horton, at Oldbury, in the parish of Hales Owen, in the county of Salop, on Monday night the 31st of March last. He is a native of Oldbury, and is by trade a Collier, but has occasionally worked as a Brickmaker and Boatman; about thirty years of age, five feet ten inches high, rather splay-footed, has a crooked nose, large front teeth, hazel eyes, and long neck.

Whoever will apprehend and deliver him to me, shall forthwith receive the above reward.
Samuel Marsh, Constable of Oldbury.”

‘Murder At The Whimsey Inn, Oldbury’ by W. Ellery Jephcott

“On the evening of March 31st, 1828, the inhabitants of the township of Oldbury, which then had a population of about 5,000, were startled by the news that a Sergeant of the Court of Requests had been stabbed at the WHIMSEY INN in Halesowen Street. His assailant had made his escape. A few hours later the injured man died and a hue-and-cry was raised for his murderer. It was not until Wednesday, April 23rd that he was apprehended at a village near Pontypool in Monmouthshire, then conveyed to Oldbury and committed to Salop County Gaol on the Coroner's warrant for wilful murder.

..... the Court of Requests was the predecessor of the County Courts and used for the recovery of all debts not exceeding £5. A local Court was established at Oldbury in 1807 and this functioned until it was superseded by a County Court under an Act of 1846. The accused man was committed to Salop Gaol because at that period Oldbury formed part of the parish of Halesowen, which was in Shropshire.

An account of the circumstances of the murder, which appeared in Bell's Life In London and Sporting Chronicle on Sunday, April 13th 1828, said that a collier named William Steventon, known by the nickname of ‘Billy Sugar’, had against him several executions for debt issued by the Court of Requests. He was described as ‘a large powerful man of a ferocious disposition’, and it was generally known that he carried about with him a knife Therefore, said the paper, a great reluctance to take him was evinced by the officers of the Court. On the day of the tragedy, however, one of them, named John Horton, ‘who was somewhat inebriated’, hearing that Steventon was at the WHIMSEY public house, proceeded thither. He found him drinking among a large company in the kitchen. Horton told him he must consider himself his prisoner. To this Steventon offered no resistance, but asked to be allowed to go home before being taken to prison.

They were proceeding there together when a woman they met advised Horton not to go, and he returned to the public house. In a short time Steventon made his appearance, and after sitting in the kitchen a few minutes, suddenly arose. With his left hand he struck the unsuspecting officer, who was standing with his back towards the fireplace, and with his other hand ‘plunged the concealed weapon into his body.’

Horton fell immediately, but the company, considering it merely the effect of the blow, allowed Steventon to make his escape. Upon picking Horton up, he said he had been stabbed, and was put to bed, where he died a few hours later. A reward of £30 was offered for the arrest of Steventon

It was stated Horton left a wife and five children, and that Steventon had a wife and six children.....”

‘Oldbury Man's Public Execution’ by W. Ellery Jephcott

“The scene was set at Shrewsbury Assizes, before Mr. Justice Gazelee, where William Steventon (31) stood in the dock on August 1st 1828 indicted for the wilful murder of John Horton. Samuel Holland, the licensee of the WHIMSEY INN told the Court how on reaching home on the night of March 31st he found several persons sitting in the kitchen Among them were the prisoner and John Horton The latter appeared to be intoxicated, but Steventon was perfectly sober. The two men were talking quite amicably Steventon returned about 15 minutes later and in the interval his demeanour had undergone a change. Entering the kitchen again, he pulled from under his coat a weapon about 20 inches long, apparently an old broken sword, keen and bright, and with an oath he asserted that 'the first man who interfered with him should have it.' The landlord advised him to put the weapon away.....

There was a club supper in the house that night and the landlord then went into the parlour to serve the meat for the members. Soon after he heard a noise in the passage, and running out found Horton being supported by his wife and a man named Parish.....

The Judge having summed up, the jury, without hesitation, returned a verdict of guilty. In passing sentence of death, Mr. Justice Gazelee told Steventon he had been convicted of wilful and deliberate murder he was executed on the following Monday in the presence of a crowd estimated at 5,000....."

"Birmingham Insolvent Debtors' Court.....

Samuel Holland, formerly of Dudley, in the county of Worcester, publican, afterwards of Oldbury, in the county of Salop, publican, and late of Oldbury, aforesaid, butcher, was opposed by Mr. Collis, solicitor, of Wolverhampton, on behalf of W. and C. Collis, spirit-dealers, for a debt of upwards of £11. The insolvent was served with a copy of a writ, and put in a plea to the action. The trial came on at the last Worcester Assizes, but was undefended. The ground of opposition was the insolvent's having put the plaintiffs to the expense of £32 in law; when he had no real defence to the action. The insolvent admitted that the debt was just and due, and attributed the prosecution of the defence to his attorney. The commissioner held that in order to prove a vexatious defence to the action, the record ought to have been produced. The insolvent was remanded for two months from the filing of his petition."

"At the Halesowen Petty Sessions, last week, there were heard no fewer than ten informations against brickmakers of that locality for wholesale evasion of the excise duties. Dr. Bateman, the excise solicitor, appeared in support of the informations, and Mr. Thomas Harding, of Birmingham, was specially engaged to defend each case.....

Mr. Thomas Whitehouse, of Oldfield [sic], was fined £150, and condemnation of 84,782 bricks.....

It appeared that the whole of the parties had been detected through the vigilance of Mr. Coomber, Supervisor of Excise, Wednesbury. Mr. Harding urged in each of the cases different mitigatory circumstances, and the penalties, which were more than £3,000, were ultimately reduced to about £300. We are informed that the large brickmakers of Birmingham and other towns have for some time past found it impossible to compete with those of this neighbourhood, and the above proceedings may possibly afford an explanation of the principal cause of this fact, as it has really for some time past been suspected to be."

"Captain Bennitt, of the Dudley Troop of Yeomanry, having just taken to the blast furnaces and collieries which for a number of years have been carried on under the firm of John Dawes and Sons, visited the works on Monday week, and left a sum of money sufficient for every man and boy who were employed at the furnaces and in the collieries to enjoy a supply of roast beef and ale at his expense. On the same evening the men who work at No.4 colliery availed themselves of the kindness of their worthy employer, at the house of Mr. William Clift, the WHIMSEY, Oldbury, where an excellent supper was provided by the host and hostess of the inn. After the cloth was drawn, Charles Crossley proposed the health of Captain Bennitt, his lady, and their family, and expressed a hope, in which all joined, that the present undertaking would prove beneficial, and that Captain Bennitt would long live to enjoy the fruits of his enterprise and capital. The toast was drunk with much applause, and the rest of the evening was spent in great harmony."

“On Wednesday last an inquest was held at the house of Mr. Thomas Whitehouse, the WHIMSEY INN, Oldbury, before Ralph Docker, Esq, coroner, on a boy named Thomas Castles, residing at Oldbury Green, who met with his death on the previous Monday in the following distressing manner. Whilst playing alone upon a boat loaded with coal, and lying under the wooden bridge upon the canal which runs through this place, another boat laden with iron came up, and in passing accidentally came in contact with the first-mentioned boat, when the force of the collision overbalanced the deceased, and he fell from the stern, where he was standing at the moment, into the water. A woman who was passing at the time screamed out to a man in the second boat to help the poor boy, but the inhuman fellow, although he had a shaft in his hand and was within two yards of the place where the unfortunate lad was struggling, made no effort to save him; and when, after the lapse of about a quarter of an hour, the deceased was recovered, he was quite dead. A verdict in accordance with the evidence was returned.”

“On Thursday evening, the 25th instant, an inquest was held at the house of Mr. James Griffiths, the WHIMSEY INN, Oldbury, before R. Docker, Esq, coroner, on the body of a youth eighteen years old, named George Parrish, who died on Wednesday evening of injuries sustained at Mr. Page’s Ironworks, a few hours previously. It would appear that the deceased was employed as an under-hand puddler, and that just before eight o’clock on Wednesday night he was endeavouring to procure a quantity of the refuse grease from the boxes underneath the rolls, which he intended to use in greasing the wheels of the wagon with which he conveyed away the cinder from the furnace. While doing this it is supposed a portion of his shirt got entangled in one of the bands attached to the rolls, and his body was then drawn between the boxes and the pinions several times. A fellow workman, named Mason, first saw the deceased in this position, and raising an alarm, the engine was quickly stopped. The deceased was then found lying upon the plates adjoining the rolls; he was in a state of insensibility, but on the way home (whither he was conveyed on a chair), he recovered his consciousness, but he died in three hours afterwards. He was attended by Mr. Beatty, surgeon. One of his thighs was broken, as were also several of his ribs. He had also sustained a large gash in the forehead. It was thought by the jury that the occurrence was purely accidental, and a verdict to that effect was returned.”

“Isaac Downston, Benjamin Edwards, and David Carless, were charged with stealing £27, the property of Joseph Sheldon, in the WHIMSEY INN, Halesowen Street, Oldbury, on the 29th ult.

The prosecutor stated that on the night mentioned he was in the WHIMSEY INN, about ten o’clock, and a dispute arose between him and a man named Moore in reference to a betting transaction on a dog race. Prosecutor pulled off his coat to fight, and handed it to Downston, along with his watch. The landlord interposed, to prevent a breach of the peace, and Moore was ejected. The prosecutor then received back his coat from the prisoner, but obtained his watch with difficulty. On feeling in the side pocket of his coat for his money, he missed the £27.

A witness proved having seen the prosecutor with a handful of gold, and other witnesses proved that they had heard Carless say that he knew who had had the money, and they were going to divide it, and to receive £7 each, and have a supper.

On being apprehended, the prisoners denied the charge, and Carless said he should not have made the statement attributed to him if he had not been drunk.

The prisoners were committed for trial.”

“At a special Court on Wednesday morning, before W. E. Chance, Esq, Samuel Sillitoe (16), barman, of Perrott Street, Oldbury, was charged under the Criminal Law Amendment Act, with criminally assaulting Mary Sirtter (13), residing with her parents in Green Street, Oldbury, on July 28. Mr. S. H. Forrest appeared for the defence.

Prosecutrix stated that she lived in Green Street. At about 2.30 on Wednesday, July 28, she went into the WHIMSEY INN, near the Whimsey Bridge, to fetch a pair of trousers belonging to the landlord of the house for her mother to wash. There was only the prisoner in charge of the premises. He asked her to go into the smoke room, and there committed the assault, which he repeated several times. He then left her in the room, telling her to stop there. She could have followed him out if she desired to do so. She stayed till six o'clock. No one came into the smoke room with her but the prisoner. When she left he told her to call on Thursday night, but she accidentally met him on Wednesday evening, when he gave her four-pence, and she also saw him on the following Sunday, when he gave her two-pence.

In reply to Mr. Forrest, prosecutor stated that her father went about to the horse markets to drive cattle. Her father and mother had been before the magistrates the previous Tuesday, and her mother had been sent to prison. When the prisoner assaulted her she did not try to prevent him. She only screamed a little. She did not willingly consent. She thought she did not do what was right. Prisoner left the bar door open, and she could have gone out, but she did not want to do so. She went to meet the prisoner the next night because he told her to go, and would have gone every night had he asked her to do so.

Dr. Cunningham, who examined the girl six days after the occurrence, could give no positive evidence, but considered the appearances inconsistent with the girl's story of this being the first time she had been interfered with. It was possible it might be correct, but most improbable.

The mother of the prosecutrix stated that she noticed her daughter was ill on Sunday. She looked pale and could not eat. Upon questioning her as to the cause she informed her of what had occurred. She then went to see the prisoner, in company with a neighbour, who said he knew nothing whatever about the matter. He admitted having given the girl 4d and 2d to buy some cherries.

In reply to Mr. Forrest, witness stated that she had, in company with her husband and a neighbour, visited the prisoner's parents with a view to settling the case.

Mr. Forrest: And was anything said about settling? – Yes, sir.

Mr. Forrest: And if he had given you money the warrant would not have been issued? – Witness: No, sir, I did not want to hurt the young man if he would come to terms.

Mr. Forrest: What do you mean about term. Is this an attempt to get money out of Sillitoe's pocket? – Witness hesitated.

Mr. Chance: You must answer the question, yes or no. – Witness (hesitatingly): It is sir.

A woman named Hemmings, living next door to the prosecutrix, also gave evidence. She stated that the prosecutrix's parents asked to go down and see the prisoner's parents and ascertain if they would settle the case, and the girl's father stated that he should not take less than £5.

Police-sergeant Stanton proved arresting the prisoner.

Mr. S. H. Forrest then addressed the Bench in defence, urging the incredibility of the girl's story, and that the evidence given for the prosecution was inconsistent with the facts in the doctor's evidence, and, further, that the mother of the girl herself admitted that the case was an attempt to extort money from the prisoner's parents.

Mr. Chance said he had carefully considered the evidence, and was of the distinct opinion that the prisoner ought to be discharged, the evidence not being strong enough for his committal."

"Yesterday afternoon Mr. E. Docker (coroner) held an inquest at the WHIMSEY INN, Halesowen Street, concerning the death of Samuel James (5), son of Sarah James, a widow, residing in Halesowen Street, who was drowned in the Birmingham canal on Tuesday last.

Arthur Brant, a boy, said he saw deceased fall into the canal, but he did not tell anyone immediately, because he was afraid they would say he had pushed deceased into the water. He, however, told some other boys, who raised an alarm, and William Durrant, who happened to be near, recovered the body with a boat shaft.

In reply to a juror, Durrant said the canal at the place where deceased fell in was altogether unprotected, and he thought it ought to be fenced for the safety of the public.

Police-sergeant Hill said large numbers of children were in the habit of playing in that locality, which was a yard in close proximity to the canal.

The jury returned a verdict of Found Drowned, and recommended the coroner to communicate with the owners of the property in question, calling their attention to the necessity of fencing off the road adjoining the canal."

"Joseph Jenkins of Tabernacle Street, Oldbury, was charged with being drunk and refusing to quit the licensed premises of the WHIMSEY INN, Halesowen Street, on the 6th inst, and also with assaulting Harriet Benson, the landlady. Mr. J. S. Sharpe appeared to prosecute, and explained that defendant visited the house named about 5 o'clock on the day in question, and he was then under the influence of drink.

Mrs. Benson's attention was called to the defendant on account of the bad language he was using. She requested him to leave the house, but he refused to go. Complainant then put her hand on the defendant's shoulder, whereupon the latter struck her several blows upon the face, knocking her down, and he afterwards kicked her in a brutal manner. Her face was badly bruised and discoloured, and defendant was prevented from repeating the assault by a man named Robert Turner. Complainant and her husband corroborated this statement.

Defendant, who pleaded that complainant scratched his face, was fined 14s 6d, including costs for the assault, the other charge being dismissed."

"The usual notice of objection to the renewal of this license had been served upon Messrs. Showells Brewery Co. Limited, the owners of the house, in consequence of a conviction against the occupier for permitting drunkenness.

Superintendent Sheriff in this case also urged that there was no necessity for the existence of the license, as there were three other houses within a radius of 100 yards, two of which were almost opposite.

In reply to Mr. J. S. Sharpe, who represented the owners of the house, Superintendent Sheriff said he understood that the WHIMSEY had been licensed about 70 years, and the conviction referred to was the only black mark against it.”

Morris was ordered to pay £2, or in default thirteen days’ imprisonment, and Brown £1 or nine days.

Brown was further charged with assaulting Benjamin Darby, a boatman, Portway Road, Oldbury, on September 4. Prosecutor said he was passing the WHYMSEY INN about 9.30pm when he saw the licensee with whom he was acquainted. The latter said he was going for the police because two men had refused to leave his premises. Brown came upon the scene, and witness advised him to go home or there would be trouble. Brown struck him a blow in the face which knocked him to the ground. He was again knocked down upon attempting to rise. Brown, who denied the charge, was fined 10s.”

"Worcestershire Easter Quarter Sessions.....

William Tonks was convicted of having, on the 3rd August, 1856, at Oldbury, feloniously stolen 3s 6d and a piece of leather, the property of John Walleth. Mr. Byrne prosecuted.

Prosecutor, an elderly man, on the afternoon of the 3rd August went into the WHITE HORSE INN, Oldbury, where he remained drinking about three-quarters of an hour. He afterwards left the inn, and, having to wait for his brother, sat down on the step of an adjoining public house, the UNION, where he went to sleep.

Whilst asleep, the articles named in the indictment were taken from his pocket.

Mrs. Ball, landlady of the UNION, and a young man named Wise, who was there at the time, both deposed to having seen prisoner put his hand into prosecutor's pocket, and Wise observed him take the money out.

He remarked to him upon the impropriety of his conduct.

The same night prisoner was given into custody, and committed for trial at the October sessions. Prosecutor, however, was absent when the case was called on at the sessions, and his recognisances were estreated. Prisoner was admitted to bail to appear at the Epiphany sessions, but did not attend, and hence the lengthened term between the committal and trial of the accused. He had previously been convicted of felony. Eighteen months' hard labour."

James Ruddy, 23, striker, and Thomas Duggan, 26, labourer, were charged with stealing a silver watch, at Oldbury, the property of John Judge, stocktaker. Mr. Cooke prosecuted; Mr. Self appeared for Duggan.

The prosecutor said he was at the WHITE HORSE beerhouse on the day in question, and the prisoners were present. He had occasion to look at his watch, and Ruddy asked him to allow him to see it. He held it out for Ruddy to inspect, and the prisoner snatched it out of his hand, and said he was going to pawn it. A short time afterwards the prisoners returned to the house, and told the prosecutor they had pawned it, and sent the pawn ticket to his lodgings, where he afterwards found it.

In cross-examination the prosecutor admitted that he was in the habit of drinking with the prisoners.

The vice-chairman said that he did not think there was a case of felony made out, and that the prisoners perpetrated a practical joke.

The jury acquitted the prisoners.”

Birmingham Daily Post 23/8/1899

"The annual Licensing Sessions for the Oldbury Division were held at the Court House, Oldbury yesterday.....

Superintendent Chare submitted his annual report He had given notice to the following persons of his intention to oppose the renewal of their licenses on various grounds.....

Messrs. J. A. and A. Thompson, WHITE HORSE INN, Church Street, Oldbury, for having made a communication from licensed premises with unlicensed premises, and for having made alterations without first submitting a plan and obtaining the consent of the magistrates to the same, also on the ground that the house is quite unnecessary, the wants of the neighbourhood being fully supplied by other houses.....

Mr. J. S. Sharpe appeared for Messrs. Thompson, who submitted plans of the alterations at the WHITE HORSE INN, which were necessary on sanitary grounds. There was no intention to extend the licensed area; the communication was made for the use of the workpeople, but it had since been blocked up.....

Several other applications for alteration of premises were made the whole of the applications for approval of alterations were postponed until the adjourned licensing meeting, to enable the magistrates to inspect the houses."

"Yesterday, the adjourned licensing sessions for the Oldbury Division were held at the Court House, the magistrates present being Messrs. G. Heaton, A. M. Chance, T. Lavender, and H. Heaton. A long time was occupied in the consideration of applications for sanction to make alterations in licensed premises.....

Mr. J. S. Sharpe appeared on behalf of Messrs. J. A. and A. Thompson, the owners and licensees of the WHITE HORSE INN and the MALT SHOVEL INN, and explained that the alterations in progress were absolutely necessary on sanitary grounds and for the convenience of the inmates.

Mr. G. Heaton (chairman) pointed out that many alterations were being made, and he wished to know whether any sanction had been applied for and obtained for the alterations which were now going on.

Mr. Sharpe: The application is now before you.

Mr. Heaton: But the alterations are now in progress. That, he added, was what Superintendent Chare complained of, and to prove this he read extracts from the superintendent's annual report. Mr. Sharpe said a doorway communicating with other premises, of which Mr. Chare complained, was necessary for the convenience of workmen employed on the premises.

Mr. A. Thompson, one of the licensees of the house, admitted, in reply to Mr. Heaton, that the result of the alteration would be to more than double the licensed area, but the primary object was to improve the sanitary arrangements of the house.....

After deliberating in private, Mr. Heaton said the license of the WHITE HORSE would be granted, but only to the premises previously licensed, and not for the additions. There must be no communication with Orchard Street, and the Bench wished it to be understood that in future alterations of licensed premises should not be made without plans being submitted and proper sanction of the justices being obtained.”

An application to make alterations was refused in August 1900.

“Yesterday an inquest was held by Mr. Docker at the WHITE HORSE, Newbury Lane, on the body of William Snow, who worked at Rowley's brickyard as a getter of clay. The inquest was an adjourned one, and the evidence given at the two inquiries showed that on Sunday, the 3rd inst, the deceased and three men, named Gallier, Pearsall, and Parkes (labourers) had been drinking considerably at the HOPE AND ANCHOR, a public house kept by Joseph Rowley. Just before leaving they asked him to pay for a quart of ale, but they had to leave the house without him doing so. They went home along the canal side, and when near the Jim Crow bridge, over the canal at Titford, Cooper, alias Gallier, stated that he heard a splash in the water, and Pearsall said, ‘He is in the cut. For God's sake let us get him out.’ Parkes took no notice, but walked on. The other men tried to get Snow out, but could not, and went to an old man, who lives near, for a rope, but they could not reach him with this, though they ultimately succeeded in getting the body out with a boat shaft.

William Wood, miner, Whiteheath, said he saw the four men going along the canal side on the Sunday, and heard Parkes say, ‘Go on, old —; we will pretty well have you into it when we get you there.’ The men appeared under the influence of drink, and were going down towards the place where the man was drowned. About 20 minutes afterwards he went to the spot, hearing that a man had been got out of the canal. He saw two men there – Gallier and Pearsall – the man Parkes having left. He asked them where the other man was, and they said, ‘Oh! He is gone.’ He then said to the men, ‘Chaps, I am sadly afraid you will get in for this job,’ and he also alluded to the remarks which he had heard Parkes make. When he got to the place he found the body of deceased on the canal bank.

Mr. W. H. Hayward, surgeon, stated that he had examined the body, but there were no marks of violence upon it.

The Coroner said the case was a grave one against Parkes, but he thought that as the evidence was so conflicting, it would not be wise to return a verdict of manslaughter.

The public retired, and, after a few minutes' consideration, the jury returned a verdict that deceased was Found Drowned, but there was not sufficient evidence to show how he came by his death. Several of the jurymen said they considered the case one of grave suspicion, and one of them remarked that the three men with whom deceased had last been seen were ‘three beautiful ones.’”

“At the Oldbury Police Court, yesterday, before Messrs. J. Cartland, J. H. Nettlefold, J. T. Chance, and F. Adkins, a miner, named David Morgan, was charged with maliciously wounding George Wilden, saddler and harness maker, of Rounds Green.

On Friday night Wilden, whilst returning from Rowley, where he had been at work, went into the WHITE HORSE public house, Newbury Lane, on the way to Oldbury. The prisoner was in the house, and commenced to quarrel with the complainant. They ultimately began to fight, but the fight was stopped by the landlord. The complainant left the house soon afterwards, and he had only gone a few yards when the prisoner rushed from behind some old buildings, and before the complainant could defend himself struck him on the head with a stone bottle, and knocked him down. While he was on the ground complainant felt something like the blade of a knife pierce his neck. He lost a good deal of blood, and had subsequently been under medical treatment.

Dr. Pemberton stated that the wound in the neck could not have been caused by the blow from the bottle, as it was a clear incised cut. The wounds were dangerous from their position.

The prisoner was committed for trial to the Assizes.”

David Morgan (36), miner, was charged with maliciously wounding George Wilden, at Oldbury, on the 4th February. He pleaded not guilty. Mr. Godson prosecuted, prisoner being undefended.

The two men had been in the WHITE HORSE INN, Oldbury, on the night of the 4th February, when a dispute arose regarding their lads. Prosecutor left to go home after this, but had only walked 300 yards from the public house when prisoner came up, struck him with a bottle, knocked him to the ground, jumped on him, and stabbed him in the neck with something, at the same time remarking ‘I have done for you now,’ and then ran away. When apprehended, prisoner denied having seen prosecutor after he left the public house on the previous night. This was also his defence to the Jury, who, after hearing His Lordship’s summing up, returned a verdict of guilty, with a recommendation to mercy on account of the provocation he had received in the public house. A sentence of 18 months’ hard labour was passed upon prisoner.”

A witness named Job Bown said he saw deceased coming up Portway Road, on horseback, on the 23rd inst. The horse was galloping, but seemed to be under the control of the rider, until a stirrup strap became detached from the saddle, when deceased fell under the hoofs of the horse and was very badly hurt, blood running from his ears and mouth. Witness stopped the horse, and deceased, who was conscious but not able to get up, said, ‘Oh, my poor head.’ Deceased was then conveyed home.

Richard Whitehead stated that his brother did not live more than five minutes after being brought in.

“‘Truth does not always lie at the bottom of a well, but sometimes at the bottom of a very muddy pond,’ was the significant remark with which Judge Roberts prefaced his judgement in a case at West Bromwich County Court yesterday.

It arose out of a horse deal. William Brookes, of Queen Street, West Bromwich, a horse dealer, had a mare which he allowed to be taken to Oldbury by Joseph Baugh and Benjamin Bowers, two horse dealers of that town, as they said they could sell it. Brookes stipulated that the animal should be returned within a certain time, and as this was not done, went to obtain it. He then met Bowers leading the animal in the direction of West Bromwich, and gave him two shillings for his trouble telling him where to put the mare. On arriving home he was surprised to find that the mare was not there, and the following day discovered it in the possession of Herbert Hadley, licensee of the WHITE HORSE INN, Newbury Lane, Oldbury. Brookes now sought to recover the mare or its value – £15– from Hadley and Baugh. The defence was that the animal did not belong to Brookes at all. Baugh denied that he was responsible for it, and Hadley urged the transaction with Bowers was bona fide. His Honour gave judgement for Baugh, but deprived him of costs, and made an order against Hadley for the delivery of the animal or £8 2s 9d, its value, with costs on the higher scale.”

“A claim for damages arising out of a fracas in a public house came before Judge Smith and a jury at West Bromwich County Court yesterday, when John Barnsley, a boat unloader, of Rounds Green, Oldbury, claimed £50 damages from Herbert Hadley, licensee of the WHITE HORSE INN, Newbury Lane, Oldbury, for personal injury. Mr. Waldron (Brierley Hill) appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. F. Dawes defended. The plaintiff’s case, as outlined by Mr. Waldron, was that on Sunday, 22 December, the plaintiff, with two friends, one of whom was named Willis, went to the defendant’s public house. They had six pints of beer, for which the plaintiff paid, he being the only one of the party who had any money. Willis began ‘coddling’ Barnsley about who was going to pay for the next pint, and Barnsley told him to sit down and be quiet. The men were apparently quite friendly, and it was curious to understand why Willis should have acted as he did, but what happened was that he struck Barnsley on the nose, and the latter retaliated by hitting Willis in the eye.

The landlord then put Willis out of the house, and returned just as Barnsley was going towards the door. Without any justification the defendant seized Barnsley at the back of the neck, and in trying to throw him out of the house knocked his head through a glass panel in the door. Plaintiff sustained a serious wound on the top of the head, and was a patient at the West Bromwich District Hospital for about five weeks. For the defence it was contended that the landlord only ordered Barnsley out of the house, and the latter went through the door, but then turned and said he should come back. He was struggling to get back into the house, and in doing so pushed his head through the glass in the door. The landlord was not touching him when that happened.

After hearing evidence in support of both sides, the jury found for the defendant, and added an expression that they considered there should be nothing against the landlord for the way he acted on that occasion. Judgement was given for the defendant with costs.”

Permission was given in 1914 “to remove the present staircase on the left of the vestibule and place it between the kitchen and tap room and to make a door leading out of the tap room into the kitchen” by Oldbury Licensing Justices.

Elizabeth Hipkiss (45), charwoman, Newbury Lane, was charged with stealing one and a half pints of sherry, half a pint of whisky and a number of glasses and bottles, the property of William Taylor, of the WHITE LION INN, Birmingham Street, where the defendant was employed as a charwoman.”
[She was fined 10s and costs or 14 days hard labour.]

Birmingham Mail 16/12/1884

“At the Oldbury Police Court today, before Messrs. H. Chance and H. Heaton, magistrates, John Grigg Taylor, licensed victualler, of Birmingham Street, Oldbury, and Clinton Hill Bailey, traveller, Smethwick, were charged with being on licensed premises of George Bonser, of the BRIDGE INN, Stone Street, on the 1st inst; and George Bonser was charged with keeping his house open during prohibited hours, and permitting gambling on his licensed premises on the same date. Mr. Wm Shakespeare was for the defendant.

Police-constable Rivers stated that on the night named he and Police-constable Peart were on duty near the BRIDGE INN, and they heard a conversation going on inside and saw the defendants and a man named Hadley through a glass door ‘toss’ for beer and cigars. When he went into the house Bonser said, ‘Come in and have a glass of beer. I know you are all right, and will not say anything about this,’ and Mrs. Bonser asked her husband to give him one of the cigars they had been tossing for.

Mr. Shakespeare urged for the defendant that Bailey was a representative of a firm of brewers who supplied the house with beer, and that he and Taylor were there for the purpose of taking stock, as Bonser had only recently taken to the premises. Bonser was fined 38s 6d, and the other defendants were fined 13s each.”

A Grand Fete, Gala and Sports will be held on the above Ground on Monday, July 1st, 1889.

The following Artistes and Special Attractions have been engaged at Great Expense, and it is intended to make this Fete the most attractive ever held in Oldbury.....

Spaces to let for Tea Tents, Shows, Roundabouts, Shooting Galleries, Swings, Cocoa Nut Sheets, &c. Apply to T. Keogh, WHITE LION HOTEL, Oldbury, for all information and entrance to sports."

Smethwick Telephone 6/7/1889

"Last Monday Oldbury was en fete in earnest, judging from the multitude that flocked to the Oldbury Town Football Ground where most attractive sports ever held in the town were witnessed. No expense had been spared to obtain the best possible talent, the Committee also making every accommodation for the expected crowd of visitors, who came in their thousands. The programme provided was given in admirable style, the whole of it being entrusted to the care of Mr. T. Keogh, of the WHITE LION HOTEL, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, this gentleman working well in the superintendence of the arrangements. Mr. White, of the BROWN LION HOTEL, Oldbury, also rendered valuable assistance.

Amongst those engaged were Jose Parker (the champion back and trick jumper of the world), who did some marvellous feats. It transpired that one of Darby's novices was on the ground in company with an ex-prizefighter, who was attired in the ante-deluvian order of dress. This individual disputed the distance of one of Parker's jumps, and he was challenged to measure it himself. After doing so, Parker repeated the jump, and cleared five inches over the line. The ex-prizefighter was humiliated by admitting that he was in the wrong. He was further compelled to praise Parker, and pat him on the back for accomplishing the feat a second time for his benefit.

Nimrod, the Royal Court entertainer, was a brilliant success in all his performances.

Henrich, the king of negro comedians and patterers, was very good, and some of his jokes were very witty, though he rather over-did it.

The Brothers Vorandos in their trapeze and aerobatic feats were very clever indeed, and received much applause.

The 120 yards flat-race did not bring in so many entries as was expected, but some good contests took place, Lines, of the Oldbury Town Football Club, obtaining the gold medal for first prize, and Danks the silver medal for second.

The donkey race was rather hampered, as there appeared to be a great number of asses on the field who were not eligible to enter this race, having only two legs instead of four, and who impeded the progress of the four-legged mokes, causing a little dissatisfaction.

Balloons were sent up at intervals; dancing was commenced quite early in the evening, and kept up well until the close.

A grand display of fireworks by Messrs. W. and J. Wilder, of Birmingham, was really an exhibition of skill in architecture, some of the designs being as follows: the jewelled tree, the forest of jets and fiery fountains, the double scrolls, the changeable star, finishing up with a grand representation of the Eiffel Tower.

The whole of the proceedings were a decided success. The ground was studded here and there with stalls of different kinds; the other attractions including shooting galleries, cocoanut throwing, aunt sally, and 'kicking the lost-ball down Sambo's throat.' Three bands were in attendance. The greatest credit is due to Mr. Keogh and the Committee for the great success they have made in their first attempt in this direction."

"At Oldbury Police Court, yesterday, Thomas Keogh, landlord of the WHITE LION INN, Birmingham Street, was charged with stealing pork, of the value of 5s, the property of William Herbert Perrott, of the TALBOT HOTEL, on the 20th inst.

When the case was called on, prosecutor intimated that he wished to withdraw the charge, as the affair turned out to be a practical joke. At the request of the Bench, prosecutor narrated the facts of the case, and explained that the leg of pork was hanging on a rod in his premises on the day in question, and during the evening it was taken away. Afterwards he visited the defendant's house, thinking perhaps it might be the result of practical joking, and that he should find it. When he saw the defendant he asked him to bring the pork back, and added, 'Is it a joke?' to which the defendant replied in the affirmative, and said he should have sent it back on the following morning. The next day defendant saw him concerning the matter, and apologised.

The Clerk: Is this the first thing defendant has taken? – Witness: Yes.

The Clerk: What about the hare? – Witness: He did not take it; it was between him and another gentleman.

Mr. Chance (magistrate): It seems, then, that you considered it a practical joke all through? – Witness: Yes.

Mr. Chance: Then you were rather in a hurry to take out the summons.

The defendant was discharged.”

Birmingham Journal 24/10/1846

“On Friday last, an accident of a very dreadful nature occurred in the coal mine of Messrs. Phillips Williams and Co, situated between West Bromwich and Oldbury, near the Union Furnaces, which instantaneously hurried four persons into eternity, and narrowly periled the lives of several others.

In the pit, busily engaged at work, were four men named John Harvey, Thomas Harpwood, Benjamin Cashmore, and Daniel Moss, the two former residing at Oldbury, and the two latter at West Bromwich. The men were laughing and joking with John Pearson, another of the miners, who had charge of a horse which drew the skip, when filled, to the bottom of the shaft. He happened to leave them for a moment to alter the ‘tongue’ of the railway, leaving the horse standing beside them. It being about one o’clock, they were about sitting down to dinner, when in a moment, Pearson heard a great noise and a fearful shriek, and turning round, observed the place where the four men stood an instant before, filled by an immense mass of solid coal Moss was but partly covered by the huge mass; and in about a quarter of an hour, after incessant labour, was relieved of the superincumbent pressure. He exhibited some slight signs of life and was conveyed to his residence in Oldbury but he never rallied; he was fortunately quite unconscious of his sufferings, and the faint flickerings of life he exhibited when found soon after ceased. In about three hours the other three men were dug from the bed in which they had been entombed. They were fearfully mutilated, mangled, and crushed, and must have died instantaneously. Their bodies, which presented a most fearful and shocking spectacle, were conveyed to their respective residences. The poor horse was crushed almost to atoms. The place where the mass fell was about fourteen feet high, and had been worked for about two months. The accident well illustrates the dangerous, uncertain, and precarious nature of a miner's employment, as not the slightest indication had been given, by flaw or crack in the roof, of the impending and fatal occurrence; on the contrary, it was considered one of the safest parts of the pit. . . .

Inquests were held on the bodies before G. Hinchliffe, Esq, at the SWAN INN, Oldbury; the UNION CROSS INN, and the CROSS KEYS, West Bromwich, on Saturday and Monday last; when it appearing that the pits were most carefully worked, and that the occurrence was purely the result of an accident which no human foresight could have foreseen or prevented, a verdict of Accidental Death was recorded."

John Duffield, victualler, OLD SWAN, Church Street. [1855]

Worcester Journal 10/2/1855

"Oldbury Petty Sessions. . . .

A banksman, named John Pearsall, was charged with having stolen two German silver tea spoons, the property of Mr. John Duffield, of the SWAN INN, about six weeks ago.

The prisoner and another man went there, and had some rum and water, and after they had departed the two spoons they had been using were missing. The servant had seen the prisoner put them in his pocket. Pearsall was not apprehended until the 22nd ult, when PC Smith took him in custody, the prosecutor saying that he did not know his name.

In defence Pearsall said he saw the prosecutor many times, and he never said anything about the missing spoons until one night when he went into Duffield's house in company with his brother, and Duffield having quarrelled with the latter, immediately sent for a policeman and gave him into custody on the above charge. Complainant also owed him for half a day's work, which he had asked to be paid.

The Magistrates having elicited from the complainant that he was actuated by the improper motives ascribed to him by defendant, indignantly dismissed the case, ordering Duffield to pay the costs."

Wolverhampton Chronicle 14/3/1855

"Mr. William Johnson Sanders, collector of assessed taxes for Oldbury, appeared before Captain Bennett, at the police office, on Monday last, to support a summons issued against John Duffield, a publican, of that town, for threatening him whilst in the execution of his duty. It appeared from the statement of the complainant that about a month ago he went to the defendant's house and demanded his income and property tax. The defendant paid the latter, but requested the complainant to allow the former, 12s 6d, to stand over. He did so, and in about a month afterwards went again and demanded payment of it, when defendant said, 'You are always coming for money here,' and took up the poker from the grate and lifted it up to him, saying that he would buy a pistol and shoot him (complainant). The defendant's conduct was very violent. The defendant, in answer to the complaint, said the complainant had threatened to put the bailiffs into his house, and take everything he had for a person named Wilkes's taxes. This the complainant denied, saying he demanded the defendant's taxes only. The Magistrates ordered the defendant to find one surety in £20, and enter into his own recognizance in a similar amount to keep the peace, in default twenty-one days' imprisonment."

“Benjamin Thomas Sadler became the licensee of the WINDSOR CASTLE INN. Here he formed a collection of stuffed beasts and birds which included curiosities and freaks, such as cats with eight legs and lambs with two heads.....

The fact seems to be that Benjamin Thomas Sadler purchased the SWAN and the adjoining building which he converted into a concert hall. In this he displayed his remarkable collection, removed from the WINDSOR CASTLE INN. This is borne out by the fact that in 1892 the latter house was described as ‘formerly BIRD SHOW’ He took a deep interest in the charitable institutions of the locality and was a prominent figure in the Friendly Society movement. For a short time he served on the Local Board of Health. He was a leading member of the Licensed Victuallers’ Association for about 25 years, during much of which time he acted as its treasurer. In 1896 he sold the ‘Bird Show’ to a brewery company and went to live in retirement in Warley, where he died in April 1897 at the age of 66.”

“Yesterday a Miners’ Conference was held at the BIRD SHOW, Church Street, Oldbury. Mr. Breakwell was appointed president, Mr. Hickman vice-president, and Mr. Watts, secretary. The subjects appointed for discussion were: 1. The necessity of lessening the hours of labour in the mines. 2. The pernicious evils now existing among the miners. 3. The necessity of the miners’ children being educated. 4. The utility of an universal amalgamation of miners in Great Britain. All miners, whether unionists or otherwise, were invited, and the attendance was numerous. There were delegates present from most of the collieries in South Staffordshire and East Worcestershire.....”

“Yesterday evening a meeting of colliers was held at the BIRD SHOW, Church Street, Oldbury, in furtherance of the agitation on behalf of pikemen for a reduction of the hours of labour.

The Chairman said pikemen wished to begin work at seven o’clock in the morning, and to leave at five in the evening. The bandsmen had succeeded in getting a reduction in their hours, and he hoped they would stand by the pikemen, and support them until they had also gained their demands.. They asked for a fair reduction of their ‘stint,’ and believed that they were entitled to that reduction.

Mr. Griffiths, the miners’ agent, spoke in favour of unity with the Amalgamated Association of Miners. He had heard that day that some of the masters had said that, had the colliers been more united the matters now in dispute would have long since settled. He very much regretted that colliers were not more united. What a pity it was that the thousands on miners in Staffordshire were not all connected with the Union. Unity would enable them to demand more efficient inspection of their mines, to secure better ventilation, and catastrophes like that at Black Lake would not be heard of.....”

County Advertiser 16/3/1872

“On Thursday night a meeting of East Worcestershire miners was held at the WHITE SWAN INN, Church Street, Oldbury, in reference to the nine hours’ movement. There was a crowded attendance. The Chairman said the news they would hear would be of a gratifying nature.

Mr. Thomas Griffiths said he was very glad to be able to say that from what he had heard, on good authority, he believe the nine hours would be conceded to the men after next Monday, and that they would now have the pleasure of going to work at six in the morning, and ceasing at four in the afternoon. They had used legitimate means to gain this really great concession; but he could assure them that unionism had in no small degree contributed to the bringing about of this result.....”

Birmingham Daily Post 5/6/1872

“Last evening, a well-attended meeting of miners was held at the WHITE SWAN Museum, Church Street. Mr. Griffiths, the miners’ agent for the district, stated, in the course of his address, that the union was being strengthened by the addition of 400 members monthly, and he urged upon the miners the advisability of not leaving their work over trifles. A resolution was passed, condemning certain clauses of the Truck Bill as amended by the Select Committee, and the meeting decided to resist the passing of the bill in its present form.”

West Bromwich Weekly News 14/5/1881

“The inquest on the body of Mary Pugh (47), who committed suicide under circumstances reported in the Weekly News on Saturday last was held at the WHITE SWAN INN, Church Street.

John Attwood, a bailiff at the Oldbury County Court, said on Friday, the 6th inst, he went to the house of Joseph Pugh, tobacconist, Church Street, Oldbury, to lay an authority for £12 8s 9d. He saw Mrs. Pugh, the deceased, and produced to her a copy of the warrant. She asked witness where it came from, and he told her. He (witness) then asked deceased if she would be able to pay the money, and she replied that she should. Deceased then asked him to go into the back kitchen, and she went about her work in the house for a few minutes. She subsequently proceeded upstairs, and shortly afterwards he heard deceased cry out in a loud voice, ‘The Lord have mercy on me, and forgive me for what I have done.’ She then went quiet, and fearing that all was not right, he went to Mrs. Hazlewood, living next door, and asked her to go up and see if anything was the matter. Mrs. Hazlewood went upstairs and found Mrs. Pugh dead.

Mr. Pugh returned home between four and five o'clock in the afternoon.

Dr. Lyddon said he was called to see the deceased about one o'clock on Friday, the 6th inst. He examined the body, but failed to find any marks of violence, or any unusual appearances. He then proceeded to give a description of the post mortem examination, and described all the organs as healthy, except the heart, which was slightly degenerated, but not sufficient to cause death. In the stomach he found strychnine, and to this he attributed death. He remarked that strychnine was contained in vermin killer, so that it was a very easy thing for people to get it.

A Juror called the attention of the Coroner to the conduct of the husband of the deceased, who was present. The Juror said he was conducting himself so strangely that the attention of the jurymen was being diverted. The Coroner (addressing Mr. Pugh): Are you sober? – Mr. Pugh: I hope so.

The Coroner: Because your conduct makes me think otherwise.

Mr. Pugh continued to interrupt at intervals, and persisted in reminding the Coroner that he courted enquiry.

Mrs. E. Hazlewood deposed to finding the body of the deceased as previously stated. Deceased had complained to witness, and said she had never felt comfortable since she had been at Oldbury. She generally began to cry when talking on this subject. Deceased always seemed to be in trouble.

In reply to the Coroner as to whether he wished to say anything, Mr. Pugh said he only wished to say that all their married life had been happy, but ever since they came to Oldbury, his wife had been despondent.

The police then handed in the letter which was published last week.

The husband said it was in the handwriting of his wife.

The Jury returned a verdict that deceased committed Suicide whilst in an Unsound State of Mind."

"Frederic Brown (37), navvy, residing at Oldbury, was charged with stealing from John Jay, Brades Village, £1 5s 9d. It appeared that on Saturday night the two men met at a public house at Greets Green and walked from there to the WHITE SWAN, Oldbury. On the way prisoner pleaded that he was hard up, and asked prosecutor to give him sixpence. This prosecutor refused to do, saying he could not afford it, but paid for three-pennyworth of bread and cheese for him. They remained in the WHITE SWAN for some time, and consumed the bread and cheese and two pints of ale, for which prosecutor paid. When the latter got up to leave the public house he missed his money, and as prisoner was the only person who had been sitting by him he suspected that he had robbed him. He communicated with the police, and on prisoner being arrested, a sovereign which corresponded with the one prosecutor had lost, and 7s were found in his pocket. The Bench sentenced prisoner to six weeks' hard labour."

Mrs. Thomas explained that the child would be eight years old in April next, and she had been performing for two years. She desired authority under the new Act of Parliament for her daughter to appear for 14 nights at the concert hall named. In reply to the magistrates’ clerk, applicant explained that the child, in company with her elder sister, a child eleven years of age, danced between 8 and 9.30. “An action brought by Thomas Keogh, of the WHITE SWAN, Oldbury, against Jose Parker, a trick rider and jumper, to recover £21 3s, for commission for acting as defendant’s professional agent, was referred to arbitration. Mr. A. Young appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Stubbins for defendant.”

AND

Birmingham Daily Post 4/2/1890

“An action was brought by Thomas Keogh, publican, the WHITE SWAN, Oldbury, against Jose Parker, described as ‘the renowned trick back and forward jumper – Darby’s only rival,’ to recover £21 3s (less a certain slight deduction), for commission for acting as defendant’s professional agent.

There was a counter-claim for a sum considerably in excess of the claim.

Mr. A. Young (instructed by Messrs. Watts and Jobson, of Dudley) appeared for plaintiff, and Mr. Stubbins (instructed by Messrs. Robinson and Sons, of Birmingham) for the defendant.

Mr. Young, in opening the case, said that early in 1889 defendant, who called himself the champion jumper of the world, but who, though then aware of his talent, had not yet appeared in public, decided to come out as a professional jumper. With that view he applied to Mr. Keogh, who had been very successful in bringing out another celebrated jumper, and it was decided that if Mr. Keogh undertook the agency his commission should be 30 percent on the defendant's earnings. After Mr. Keogh had been favoured with a private view of defendant's performances in March last, an agreement was signed under which Mr. Keogh was to receive 30 per cent on all defendant's earnings for a certain period, including the sums received for engagements which Parker might get for himself. The defendant was successfully brought out by the plaintiff, and had a long list of engagements. There was a counter-claim.

At this point Mr. Stubbins intervened, and said that the counter-claim involved a complicated question of accounts, and negotiations had been going on to get the whole matter referred. As the result of a consultation, the parties agreed to refer the matter to Mr. Fitzgerald, and the case was adjourned pending the reference."

The officer said he visited the WHITE SWAN INN, Church Street, on Monday night, and found the defendant there drunk. The proprietor declined to allow him to enter the concert hall, and as he used bad language he was ultimately ejected. As he continued his disorderly conduct in the street, witness asked defendant for his name and address. He then tripped witness, and whilst he was on the ground kicked him on the head.

“John Duffill Clitheroe Tweedie (45), printer, pleaded not guilty to two charges of false pretences, at Oldbury. Mr. Shakespeare was for the prosecution.

The case for the prosecution in the first case was that the prisoner went to Harry Bowerman, who keeps a concert hall at Oldbury, and invited him to advertise in the ‘Oldbury and Halesowen fixture card.’ He represented that he had been sent by a Mr. Harry Wright, of the WREXHAM INN. It was on the faith of that statement that Mr. Bowerman ordered an advertisement and paid 7s 6d for it. The prisoner gave a receipt for the amount in the name of ‘D. Clitheroe,’ but the card was never published. Mr. Wright denied that he sent the prisoner to the prosecutor.....

The prisoner said that he had intended bringing the cards out but was prevented by circumstances over which he had no control. The circumstances were the bad weather. If he had the chance now he would get the cards out to the satisfaction of everyone. He attributed the prosecution to a rival printer who was bringing a similar card out. The jury found the prisoner not guilty, and he was discharged.”

Weekly News 3/4/1897

“We regret to have to announce the death of Mr. Benjamin Thomas Sadler, which took place at his residence, Wood View, Warley, on Saturday last, aged 66 years. The deceased had been ailing for the last two or three months, and had consulted a physician owing to an affliction of the heart. He took to his bed a fortnight ago, but died very suddenly at last. Mr. Sadler was born at Rounds Green and for many years kept the WINDSOR CASTLE INN, which was noted for the large museum of stuffed birds and curious animals.

About thirty years ago he built the WHITE SWAN in Church Street, Oldbury, and the music hall attached to it, where he conducted his business until last June, when he disposed of the premises to North Worcestershire Breweries Ltd. He then retired to his own house in Warley, with the prospect of reaching a ripe old age. For about a quarter of a century he was a prominent member of the Oldbury Local Board of Health, about the time they took over the gas undertaking, and he took a deep interest in the charitable institutions in the district. He was an honorary member of the Ancient Order of Foresters, both in the Miners Glory and Court Englands Glory, and took great interest in friendly societies generally. He was universally respected, and one of the best known men in Oldbury.

The funeral took place at the Oldbury Cemetery on Wednesday last, amidst manifestations of sorrow on every hand. The mourners were Mr. N. Sadler, Mr. A. J. Sadler and Mr. S. Sadler (sons), Mr. F. E. Sadler (son-in-law), Mr. J. Sadler (uncle), Mr. J. Nash (brother-in-law), Mr. G. Good and Mr. T. A. Sadler (grandsons). The bearers were Mr. W. Jordan, Mr. J. Sadler (Broadwell Road), Mr. D. G. County Advertiser 16/10/1897

“Vernom v North Worcestershire Brewery Company.

Victor Vernom, comedian, Ashton-under-Lyne, sued the defendant company for £6 wages for a fortnight as a comic singer. Mr. J. Hinds appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. J. Parfitt represented the defendants.

Plaintiff stated that on the 3rd May last, he was engaged as singer at the Museum Concert Hall, Oldbury, by the manager, Harry Bowerman. On the 10th he entered into a repeat engagement for a fortnight, to commence on August 9th. On that date he went to the hall to carry out his engagement, and he then saw Mr. Cartwright and Mr. Creuse, who told him that his services were not required. Bowerman was not there, but was at another establishment at Oldbury. When Mr. Creuse dismissed him, he said he was acting on instructions, but did not say whose instructions. Plaintiff had always been ready to fulfil his part of the agreement that had been entered into. Three days previous to the 9th August he received a letter from Mr. Creuse stating that it would be advisable for him to get another engagement, and he would give plaintiff a later date. He immediately sent off four telegrams, but was unable to secure an engagement.

Harry Bowerman stated that in May, 1897, he, as manager for the North Worcestershire Brewery Company, entered into an engagement as stated by plaintiff. He had been in the habit of making such engagements in the name of the company, and he paid the artistes, and showed that in his weekly accounts. He did not know that after his dismissal there was a notice in the Era cancelling Mr. Vernom's engagement.

For the defence, Mr. John Richard Downs, general manager of the Company, said that in February last he told Bowerman that he must not send out any more contracts for artistes, and he replied that it did not matter, he could always cancel them in the Era, a theatrical paper. He, however, undertook to give no more contracts, but he seemed to have wanted to get popular before he went away, and he had been giving contracts out right and left. A notice was put into the Era cancelling the contracts of the artistes that Bowerman had engaged, and plaintiff wrote a postcard in answer to the advertisement, stating that he was coming to the hall on the 9th of August.

His Honour gave judgement for the defendants, with costs, on the ground that the manager had no authority to make the contract.”

“At West Bromwich County Court yesterday Auguste Creamer, an actor, of Bristol Street, Birmingham, sued Tom Pritchard, of the Palace Theatre, Oldbury, to recover £4 as balance of wages.

Mr. C. H. Darby, for the plaintiff, explained that defendant engaged Creamer to perform at his theatre at Oldbury for a month at a salary of £2 10s a week. The first week complainant was at the top of the bill, but the second week he was lower down, and for the third week his name was omitted altogether. The defendant then informed him, through his manager, that he wished the engagement to terminate, and offered plaintiff £1, which he accepted on account, and now sued for the balance.

For the defence it was stated that an intimation was received by defendant that it was illegal to perform sketches at his hall, and thereupon defendant wished the complainant to appear as an elocutionist. The latter, however, declined to agree on the grounds that he was not engaged in that particular line, but as a sketch actor.

Judge Smith held that complainant was engaged as a sketch actor, and could not be called upon to take any other part during the term of his contract. He gave a verdict for the complainant, with costs.”

“Tom Pritchard, of the Palace Theatre, Oldbury, was sued in the West Bromwich County Court yesterday by Madam Ida Collard, a music-hall artist now performing at Newcastle, for the recovery of £2 balance of salary, and 5s, the cost of bills. Madam Collard failed to appear, but Mr. Millichip, who represented her, proceeded with the case. He explained that Pritchard engaged Madam Collard in April, 1906, at a salary of £10 a week. She understood she was to perform at Oldbury, but it was arranged that she should appear at Bilston. At the latter place, however, Pritchard offered her only £6 a week. This she declined, but agreed to accept £8 a week. At the close of the week, however, she was only paid £6, and now claimed the balance. Pritchard told the judge that he met Madam Collard in Birmingham, and as she was out of an engagement she agreed to perform at Bilston for £6 a week, and at the end of her engagement he paid her £6 5s in full settlement.

The Judge gave a verdict for Pritchard, with costs.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 17/7/1907

“Application was made at the Oldbury licensing sessions yesterday for the transfer of the MUSEUM INN, Church Street, Oldbury, to which is attached the Palace Theatre, from Thomas Pritchard to James Tyrer, and sanction was also sought to make certain structural alterations. The Bench raised various objections to the sanitation and antiquity of the buildings, and also elicited the fact that there was no fireproof curtain, and that various staircases and exits were insufficient. After considering the matter in private, Mr. Chance said as that was the only music-hall in the town, the Bench thought the best possible advice should be obtained to bring the buildings thoroughly up-to-date. They refused the present application, but suggested that fresh plans on a more extensive and elaborate scale should be prepared so as to bring it up to a first-class music-hall.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 29/1/1908

“The quarterly licensing meeting of the Oldbury magistrates was held yesterday, and in considering the number of applications for the transfer of licenses, Mr. A. M. Chance, who presided, mentioned that no music licenses would be granted that day. They would be considered at the annual Licensing Sessions next Tuesday, when they intended to reduce the number of music licenses.....

Mr. Thompson, of Dudley, applied on behalf of James Tyrer, for permission to rebuild the MUSEUM INN, Church Street, Oldbury, to which is attached the Palace Theatre of Varieties. Mr. Chance said they intended to discuss the plans in private with the architect and then adjourn the application until next Tuesday, when there would be a full bench of magistrates. They wanted to diminish the number of music licenses in the town, and if this music-hall was to continue the entertainment should be of the best possible description.”

The question of the rebuilding of the MUSEUM INN and Palace Theatre of Varieties, Church Street, Oldbury, was first considered. Mr. Chance said the magistrates were gratified at the way in which the owners had received the suggestions of the Bench and were endeavouring to provide for the town one of the finest music-halls in the Midland counties. The approved plans would provide wider gangways for exit, which necessitated a reduction in the seating accommodation in the pit and orchestra stalls. The building would meet all the requirements of the local authorities and the magistrates, and they were prepared to renew the licences for a period of eighteen months to allow the improvements to be carried out.”

The Bioscope 18/9/1908

Birmingham Daily Gazette 3/2/1909

Mr. A. M. Chance presided at Oldbury. The report of Superintendent Hill stated that there were 126 licences in the district, a reduction of seven on the previous year, which compared with the estimated population, gave a ratio of one on-licence to every 354 of the inhabitants. One licence-holder only was convicted during the year, while eighty-eight persons were convicted for drunkenness, a decrease of forty-three on the previous year.....

With regard to the MUSEUM INN, Church Street, to which was attached the Palace Variety Theatre, new plans had been passed for re-construction of the premises, but a start had not yet been made, although temporary alterations had been carried out.

Mr. Thompson, of Dudley, appeared on behalf of the tenant of the MUSEUM INN, and said they had not commenced the re-construction because the past year had been a trying time for brewers.

Mr. Chance said the owners must understand that the plans must be carried out, as the Bench would not allow the house to continue as it was.”

Mr. Graham Milward, on behalf of the Wolverhampton and Dudley Breweries, applied for permission to effect certain alterations at the WHITE SWAN INN, known as the MUSEUM, in Church Street. He explained that formerly part of the house was used as a music house, and the proposal was to cut this off from the licensed area, and that if the application was granted they would apply later for a cinematograph license for the hall.

People have a habit of returning to their roots – and that is exactly what well-travelled Chris Williams has done. After working in various parts of the country, he has come home to run a pub – just 400 yards from where he was born. ‘When I left the area all those years ago, I never thought for a minute that I’d ever return,’ said Chris, landlord of this popular town centre pub. ‘Funny how things work out, isn’t it?’

Chris was area manager for Bass Charrington when he fulfilled his ambition of entering the pub trade back in 1981. Formerly landlord at the GEORGE in Oldbury, he will have been mine host at the SWAN three years next week. The pub was only built in 1991 at a cost of £500,000 to replace a pub of the same name demolished across the road.....”

“An Oldbury pub has been put on the market with potential new landlords sought. The WHITE SWAN on Church Street is up for rent. Admiral Taverns is seeking a new landlord to take on the pub, with the rent priced at £16k a year. The listing states, ‘The pub is currently drinks focused and predominantly is driven by consumers looking for value during the day coupled with a solid Friday and Saturday night trade of karaoke and disco. There is no cask ale although there is the potential to re-launch and appeal to the cask ale enthusiasts. The pub operates a strong rhythm of the week alongside a strong football following which serves both the local team and the Sky fixture list. Whilst it is a town centre pub it does have the support of local sports teams.’

The pub boasts three bedrooms, a kitchen, office, bathroom and sitting room. The listing goes on, ‘This is a fantastic opportunity for the right operator to develop this chameleon operation, by day there is an opportunity to offer a place to rest after a hard day shopping, by evening this is a vibrant circuit pub offering a strong music / DJ led venue, not forgetting a strong focus on all sporting events.’ It adds, ‘Whilst there is not an operational kitchen, there is an opportunity to offer a small ‘back bar’ food offering.”

“A pub which has undergone a £230,000 makeover will be welcoming customers again next month. The WHITE SWAN in Church Street, Oldbury, which is part of Proper Pubs – the community wet-led operator division of Admiral Taverns – is set to reopen on September 8. Behind the bar is Adam Riese, who has managed the WHITE SWAN for three years and has 23 years of experience within the hospitality industry. Inside, the pub has undergone a complete transformation to create a brand-new look and feel with fresh décor. With a complete interior redecoration, the pub will feature a brand-new bar, flooring, and furniture throughout. Outside, the beer garden has been redeveloped, which includes new heating and seating to ensure use all year round. The pub will be celebrating the reopening with an action-packed weekend of live music, karaoke, and a DJ as well as plenty of live sports for customers to enjoy. The WHITE SWAN will be offering a wide range of drinks offers, including Wine Wednesday, where customers can get £2 off a bottle, Fizz Friday, offering customers a bottle of fizz for £10, along with cocktails, bottle and shot deals throughout the week.

Mr. Riese said, ‘The pub looks fantastic, and I can’t believe the transformation. I’m really excited to get behind the bar, meet all our customers and support our local community. We’ll be starting off by collecting food for a local food bank, and donations to get a defibrillator installed. Pubs are the hub of their community, and we can’t wait to be the hub of Oldbury.’ The WHITE SWAN will also host regular pool and darts team league evenings. Customers can also expect to enjoy regular weekend entertainment, such as karaoke and DJ nights as the pub hosts a late-night licence that allows it to operate until 2am....”

It re-opened on 8th September 2023.

INN, Birmingham Road, NEW INNS, Langley, and to refuse those of the WHY NOT INN, Talbot Street, and the HOPE AND ANCHOR INN, Halesowen Street.”

West Bromwich Weekly News 15/9/1900

“At Oldbury Police Court on Tuesday – before Messrs. T. Lavender and H. Heaton – Mr. J. S. Sharpe, at the conclusion of the ordinary business at the Court, brought up a special point. He said that Henry George Peers, the licensee of the WHY NOT INN, Talbot Street, had his license renewed at the Licensing Sessions, but on the new license was written ‘The club room at these premises does not form part of these licensed premises.’ That room had formed part of the licensed premises since 1868, and had always been licensed year after year as part of the drinking area. Without the slightest notice, without the opportunity of any argument before the Court, without any intimation being given to the licensee, they got their license with that rider attached to it. They would be bound according to that note to close that room, which formed the larger portion and most convenient part of the house, and do no more business in it.

That arose out of a simple application at the Licensing Sessions with regard to the alteration of a window, which was refused without any comment being made, and that was the first intimation they had had of the matter. His client must really do something, for he could not allow, without any argument, the greater part of the premises to be taken away in that manner.

Mr. Lavender said the investigation of the case showed that that room was connected with the licensed premises without any authority to use it.

Mr. Sharpe replied that he was informed it was taken in, at the instance of the Excise authorities, some 32 years ago, because the rateable value of the premises without it was not sufficient for them. Ever since that time, the whole of the premises, including the club room, had been licensed, and the renewal had been granted without any question.

Mr. Shakespeare (Magistrates’ Clerk) pointed out that neither of the magistrates who inspected the property were sitting that day.

Mr. Lavender said Mr. Heaton and Mr. Danks inspected the premises, and Mr. Sharpe had better make his application when they were present to hear it.

Mr. Shakespeare pointed out that Mr. Sharpe could obtain from the Excise books what rooms were licensed, as that information was always contained in them.

Mr. Sharpe remarked that he thought it his duty to come to the earliest Court.

It was mentioned that the old license did not expire until October 10th, and Mr. Sharpe said he would bring the matter before the Court again before the license terminated.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 18/2/1903

“The adjourned licensing sessions were held at Oldbury yesterday. The Chairman (Mr. G. Heaton) announced that the magistrates had passed a resolution requiring all license holders to give six months’ notice, and deposit with the clerk to the justices plans of their licensed premises.

It was decided to grant the whole of the music licenses applied for, but the three licenses for dancing were granted on the understanding that no intoxicants were supplied in the rooms where it took place.

Mr. Heaton announced that the magistrates had decided to discontinue granting occasional licenses for football matches, as they were of opinion that there was sufficient provision for obtaining drink. They had also passed a resolution viewing with disfavour the establishment of air-gun clubs at public houses.....

They renewed the license of the WHY NOT INN, but would not include the club room as part of the premises.”

Birmingham Mail 19/1/1904

“At the Oldbury Police Court, today, a case of considerable interest to the licensed trade, and affecting particularly ante-1869 public house licenses, was heard. Henry George Peers, landlord of the WHY NOT INN, Talbot Street, Oldbury, was summoned for having, on the 7th of November last, sold intoxicating liquors in a club room at his house – adjoining his licensed premises, which was not authorised by his license for such sale. Mr. J. W. Clulow appeared to prosecute, and Mr. A. J. O’Connor (instructed by the Free License Holders’ Association) defended.

Mr. Clulow said the case would turn more upon a question of law than one of fact. It appeared that attached to the defendant’s house was a club room, which had a separate entrance. Some years ago that club room was used by a religious denomination for the purpose of holding services in, and it was subsequently used for trading purposes in connection with a printing business. That went on to about the year 1872, when a communication was made between the room in question and the old licensed part of the defendant’s premises. It appeared, however, that when the defendant or his predecessor came up for renewal of his license in the year 1900, the Justices, exercising a power which they had in common law, and which was subsequently conferred upon them by statute, endorsed, or, at any rate, put a memorandum upon the license to the effect that the club room did not form part of the licensed premises. He (Mr. Clulow) contended that the Justices were perfectly competent and legally entitled to do that. It would, he presumed, be argued that because this was an ante-1869 licensed beerhouse the Justices were restricted in their powers, and were limited to the grounds of the Act. But when the defendant chose to cut off that room and let it for any other purpose whatever, whether to a religious denomination or for the purpose of trade, that room forfeited its ante-1869 privileges, and it became a post-1869 license. Therefore, when in 1872 the licensee converted this room back into its ante-1869 state, to form part of his premises, he did what he had no right to do, as he had sacrificed the protection which the License Act gave to him, and he could not reinstate that room with its pre-1869 privileges. The fact that the house or room had been continuously licensed by the Excise did not affect the question, as they could not grant a license except in pursuance of the justices’ certificate. The Excise might license part of a church, but it would not be a licensed building because it was only upon the foundation of the justices’ certificate that the Excise could license any premises. The last justices’ certificate issued in the early part of last year showed that the club room in question did not form any part of the licensed premises, and was not included in that certificate.

Superintendent Sheriff was called to prove that the club room was attached to the licensed premises. Between the licensing day in 1901 and the licensing day in 1903, the old entrance to the public house was abolished, and another doorway, which formed the entrance to the old house and the club room, was introduced. The proposed alterations were not assented to at the adjourned licensing sessions in the year 1900, when the application was made.

For the defence Mr. O’Connor called a witness named Powell, who said he sold intoxicants in the club room in question about 34 years ago. He left about 32 years ago.

Mary Ann Philpot caused a great deal of amusement in court by stating that over 30 years ago she used to serve beer in the room before and after the time the services were held there.

Mr. J. W. Wilson, MP, at this point said it appeared to the Bench that the evidence adduced should be considered at the Licensing Sessions. Without making any pronouncement in the case, it seemed to him and his colleague (Mr. Wheeler) that the point they had to decide was whether the sale which took place on the 7th of November was on premises which at the time were licensed or not licensed. It seemed to them perfectly clear that they were not licensed. It did not matter to them whether the magistrates were right or not in making the endorsement. They had to judge simply by that certificate.

Mr. O'Connor suggested that the case should be withdrawn, and he would then fight out the point at the Licensing Sessions. This Mr. Clulow declined to accept.

Mr. O'Connor contended that the endorsement by the magistrates upon the defendant's license was absolutely inoperative.

Mr. Shakespeare said the case would have to be adjourned, as one of the justices had to leave.

The further hearing was then adjourned until next Tuesday."

Birmingham Mail 26/1/1904

"Today, at the Oldbury Police Court, the case in which Henry George Peers, landlord of the WHY NOT INN, Talbot Street, Oldbury, was summoned for selling upon premises which were not licensed for the sale of intoxicants, and which was adjourned from last Tuesday, had to be further adjourned until the 16th of February, in consequence of the illness of Mr. J. W. Wilson, MP, who was one of the sitting magistrates. The point at issue was as to a club room, which had at one time been used as a chapel."

"Today, at the annual licensing session at Oldbury Police Court, the case of the WHY NOT INN, of Talbot Street, Oldbury, came up for consideration upon the application of the landlord, Henry George Peers, for a renewal of his license.

Mr. W. Shakespeare (clerk to the justices) explained that his license would be renewed as before, but it would apply only to the licensed area, and that they did not regard the club room, concerning which a contention had been raised, as part of the licensed premises. They again placed upon the certificate an endorsement similar to those which had been made in previous years to the effect that the club room which adjoined the house did not form any part of the licensed premises and was not included in the certificate. The same endorsement, he was informed, would be placed upon his music license."

"Worcester Quarter Sessions.....

Henry George Peers appealed against the refusal of the Oldbury justices to renew the license of the club room adjoining the WHY NOT INN, Talbot Street. Mr. Vachell and the Hon. R. Coventry were for the appellant, and Mr. Matthews and Mr. Milward for the respondents.

Mr. Matthews, in explaining the case for the respondents, said the room in question formed no part of the licensed premises. It was formerly used by the Wesleyan body as a chapel and school, and was then let to a printer. No qualification appeared upon the license until 1900, when an endorsement was placed upon it notifying that the club room formed no part of the licensed premises. All renewals since then were subject to that, and counsel contended that even if the appellant had grounds for appeal in 1901, he was now too late. Edward Wheeler, horse-keeper, Eel Street, Oldbury, who acted as secretary to the Wesleyans, said the room was rented by them between 1871 and 1874. It was over some shops, and the entrance to it was separate from the public house, the doors leading into which upstairs were nailed up. Cross-examined by Mr. Vachell, witness indignantly denied that any members of the flock had drink in the room in question.

William Jones, Park Lane, corroborated.

Frederick Roden proved the use of the room by his father as a printer before the Wesleyans had it, and by himself after they gave it up.

Superintendent Sheriff gave evidence as to the use of the club room by the appellant since the endorsement of the license. He admitted that no formal notice was given to the appellant in the last three years. A prosecution was instituted against him in November last, and the decision adjourned pending this appeal.

Mr. E. J. Fisher, excise officer, produced a book to show that the club room had been included as part of the licensed premises, and to be used for storage since 1894.

Mr. Vachell contended that the license being granted before 1869, even though this room had been used for the purposes described, it might still be legally regarded as part of the licensed premises, and that the justices had exceeded their powers by making the endorsement they did.

Appellant gave evidence in support of the contention that the room had been used for club purposes since his tenancy commenced in 1896, and since the endorsement in 1900.

Mr. Thomas Powell, of Handsworth, a former tenant, said the club room was part of his licensed premises, though he occasionally let it to other people.

William Cosgrave and Joseph Shutt supported the appellant's case as to the constant use of the club room, and Mr. Jones, architect, said that the club room and the inn were structurally identical without a break of the brickwork.

Mr. Vachell contended that the appellant could not be judicially deprived of the use of the room, and Mr. Matthews argued that it was not proved that the room was part of the licensed premises before 1869.

The appeal was dismissed with costs, the Justices being of the opinion that the club room was not part of the premises licensed before 1869."

AND

Birmingham Daily Gazette 7/4/1904

"Worcester Sessions.....

Harry George Peers appealed against the refusal of the Oldbury justices to renew the license of the clubroom adjoining the WHY NOT INN, Talbot Street, Oldbury.

Counsel explained that the justices first became aware that the clubroom was over some shops adjoining the inn when a photograph was produced to them. Thereupon the justices endorsed the license. The clubroom was not part of the inn.

Mr. Matthews, replying, said the appellant, not having taken the first opportunity of appealing against the magistrates' limitation of the licensed premises, had now no right to do so.

The appeal was dismissed."

Birmingham Mail 11/6/1904

"Worcestershire Licensing Appeals.....

Mr. Willis Bund presided at a special sitting of the Worcestershire Court of Quarter Sessions, today, to consider the question of costs in two licensing appeals, which were heard at Easter. The Court then dismissed, with costs, an appeal by Henry George Peers against the refusal of the Oldbury justices to renew the license of the WHY NOT INN, Talbot Street, and the Court now allowed costs against the appellant at £44 6s 5d."

Birmingham Mail 21/6/1904

"Today at Oldbury Police Court, Henry George Peers, landlord of the WHY NOT INN, Talbot Street, Oldbury, appeared upon an adjourned summons charging him with selling beer upon unlicensed premises connected with his house on the 7th November last.

Superintendent Sheriff explained that the case had been adjourned in consequence of an appeal which had been made by the defendant to Quarter Sessions against an endorsement made by the justices at the last licensing session to the effect that the portion of the premises in question, which was used as a club room, formed no part of the licensed area. That appeal had been dismissed; but as the defendant apparently did not think he was doing wrong in using the room, the superintendent asked to be allowed to withdraw the summons on the payment of costs.

The Bench allowed this to be done, and the defendant paid £1 13s costs."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 29/1/1908

"The quarterly licensing meeting of the Oldbury magistrates was held yesterday, and in considering the number of applications for the transfer of licenses, Mr. A. M. Chance, who presided, mentioned that no music licenses would be granted that day. They would be considered at the annual Licensing Sessions next Tuesday, when they intended to reduce the number of music licenses.....

Mr. J. S. Sharpe applied on behalf of George Henry Peers, the licensee of the WHY NOT, Talbot Street, Oldbury, for permission to make several alterations. It was proposed to take away a staircase which connected the licensed premises with a club-room used as a Liberal Club, so that the rooms would be wholly disconnected with the licensed premises. A new staircase would be provided for the Liberal Club. The Bench granted the application."

An inquest was held at Mr. John Faulkner’s, the NAVIGATION INN, on Wednesday last, before G. Hinchliffe, Esq, on the body of Samuel Howe, who had been found in the canal near Titford, the same morning, by one of the Canal Company’s men, named John Warwick. It appeared that the unfortunate man was drinking at the WINDSOR CASTLE, on Saturday night, and while asleep, some meat was taken from his basket, and two pounds of candles, the property of the landlord, substituted in its place. The candles being missed in about two hours after he left the house, the police traced them to deceased’s house, and they were found on Sunday morning. He was quite tipsy when he left the house, and knew nothing about the candles, but having been employed at the Brades Works for many years, Messrs. Hunt discharged him, as soon as they heard of what had occurred. This seemed to prey upon his mind, and for several days he was under such depression of spirits that no doubt existed but he had committed self-destruction. However, an open verdict of Found Drowned was returned. He had hitherto born an excellent character; a wife and five children are left unprovided for.”

The fact seems to be that Benjamin Thomas Sadler purchased the SWAN and the adjoining building which he converted into a concert hall. In this he displayed his remarkable collection, removed from the WINDSOR CASTLE INN. This is borne out by the fact that in 1892 the latter house was described as ‘formerly BIRD SHOW’ He took a deep interest in the charitable institutions of the locality and was a prominent figure in the Friendly Society movement. For a short time he served on the Local Board of Health. He was a leading member of the Licensed Victuallers’ Association for about 25 years, during much of which time he acted as its treasurer. Griffiths, then alternated between the following toasts: ‘The Prince and Princess of Wales; and may peace reign all over the world,’ ‘The Ancient Order of Foresters; and may none of us ever regret having joined it,’ ‘The West Bromwich Miners District of the Order.’ Brother S. D. Holyoake, in responding to this toast, gave a very encouraging report of the financial state of the district. Then followed ‘The Health of Brother J. Beatty, surgeon;’ ‘The Host, his wife and family;’ ‘Prosperity to the Court Miners Glory,’ ‘The Chairman,’ ‘The Press,’ &c, all of which were duly responded to; and after enjoying a very pleasant evening, the company broke up at an early hour.”

“At Oldbury Petty Sessions, yesterday, before Mr. W. H. Dawes and Mr. H. Chance, a ‘dog trainer,’ named Edward Wilkinson, was charged with assaulting Edwin Marwick, a beerhouse keeper, residing near the Seven Stars Bridge. Mr. W. Shakespeare appeared for the complainant.

On the evening of the 8th inst, the complainant met the defendant in the BIRD SHOW, Church Street, when the latter charged the former with having been the originator of various reports reflecting upon his character, which were untrue. Complainant expressed his desire not to have anything to say to him, when the defendant struck him thrice upon the nose, which caused him to have two black eyes for nearly a week.

A witness, named John Shakespeare, said he saw the defendant ‘loose out three good blows, and no mistake,’ upon the complainant.

Defendant had been several times previously convicted, and was now fined £1 and costs, in all 33s, or in default fourteen days’ hard labour.”

“At the Police Court yesterday, before the Rev. W. Ker and Mr. Barrows, a forgerman, of Brades Village, named William Careless, was charged with an assault, at the instance of Edward Kelly, a puddler, residing at Toll End. Mr. Sheldon appeared to prosecute, and Mr. Travis defended.

The evidence showed that on Sunday evening, the 26th ult, complainant met defendant at the BIRD SHOW INN, Oldbury. A quarrel took place, and the latter and his friends were turned out of the house. In consequence of a threat, complainant was afraid for some time to leave. The landlord at length let him out at the back-door, and he proceeded home with his friends, and when they arrived mid-way between the BLUE BALL INN, and the Tivdale Gate, a lonely spot on the road, Careless and his party came from under the hedge and waylaid them. Some words ensued, and the defendant struck Kelly very violently in the mouth with a formidable weapon. Seven of complainant’s teeth were knocked out, his lips severely cut, and his jaw much injured.

The evidence for the defence was that Kelly offered to fight defendant, struck at him and missed, and then Careless hit complainant in the face with his fist, but not with a weapon. In cross-examination, however, the witnesses were proved to be perfectly unreliable, and the Bench characterised them as the most disgraceful that ever entered a court.

Defendant was fined £5, with the alternative of two months’ imprisonment with hard labour.”

Birmingham Daily Post 1/3/1889

“Last night a meeting of miners was held at the WINDSOR CASTLE INN, Rounds Green, Oldbury, under the presidency of Mr. Hollyhead. The Chairman advised the men to abolish strikes and strengthen the association, and pointed out that if they would only induce the men to join the association it would prove a benefit to the public and also to the masters. Mr. H. Rust and Mr. H. Barnes addressed the meeting, and a resolution was passed that the meeting was of opinion that it was of the greatest importance that all men should pay to the Wages Board already established; also that all men should unite to improve their condition.”

Birmingham Daily Post 19/4/1894

“Last night a meeting, under the auspices of the West Bromwich Amalgamated Association of Miners, was held at the WINDSOR CASTLE INN, Rounds Green, Oldbury, for the purpose of considering the sliding scale, and also to appoint a representative on the Wages Board. A miner presided.

Mr. John Richards, in the course of an address, said they found the sliding scale was not what they required, and they wanted the men to take united action with the view of improving it. He pointed out that in 1893 they had the books audited, but they showed a large reduction in prices. When they asked for an advance in wages the employers threw that in their faces, and said they had only just righted themselves. The books were again audited for September, October and November, and resulted in the wages remaining at 7s 5d per ton. The representatives then considered that an alteration to the scale might prove beneficial to the miners, and accordingly steps were taken to obtain alterations which it was hoped would be equal to 10 per cent increase in their wages, and would also reduce the basis of coal ruling the wages from 7s 5d to 6s 9d.

The employers, whilst speaking in favour of the alteration, were of opinion that it should be worked on the automatic principle. The representatives of the men could not grant the employers their wish without having the opinion of the men. He himself was opposed to such a principle being introduced into the scale, and he advised them not to accept it, as he considered it would be detrimental to them. (Applause.)

Mr. H. Rust (agent) also addressed the meeting, and explained that hitherto they had secured the 40 per cent increase, and he had no doubt but what they would continue to maintain it. (Hear, hear.) They were all sorry to see the result up to the present of the Conciliation Board. He knew the miners of the Black Country would remember the remarks by one of the leading coal-owners against Lord Shand at the first meeting of the Board.

The following resolution was passed: 'That this meeting does not accept the automatic arrangement in the revised scale, seeing the cost it would incur, but insists on having the revised scale on the principle now existing.

Mr. H. Rust was appointed as the representative on the Wages Board for the ensuing year.

A resolution in favour of sending a delegate to London with regard to the Eight-hours Bill was passed."

Benjamin Thomas Sadler died on 27th March 1897.

Weekly News 3/4/1897

"We regret to have to announce the death of Mr. Benjamin Thomas Sadler, which took place at his residence, Wood View, Warley, on Saturday last, aged 66 years. The deceased had been ailing for the last two or three months, and had consulted a physician owing to an affliction of the heart. He took to his bed a fortnight ago, but died very suddenly at last. Mr. Sadler was born at Rounds Green and for many years kept the WINDSOR CASTLE INN, which was noted for the large museum of stuffed birds and curious animals.

About thirty years ago he built the WHITE SWAN in Church Street, Oldbury, and the music hall attached to it, where he conducted his business until last June, when he disposed of the premises to North Worcestershire Breweries Ltd. He then retired to his own house in Warley, with the prospect of reaching a ripe old age. For about a quarter of a century he was a prominent member of the Oldbury Local Board of Health, about the time they took over the gas undertaking, and he took a deep interest in the charitable institutions in the district. He was an honorary member of the Ancient Order of Foresters, both in the Miners Glory and Court Englands Glory, and took great interest in friendly societies generally. He was universally respected, and one of the best known men in Oldbury.

The funeral took place at the Oldbury Cemetery on Wednesday last, amidst manifestations of sorrow on every hand. The mourners were Mr. N. Sadler, Mr. A. J. Sadler and Mr. S. Sadler (sons), Mr. F. E. Sadler (son-in-law), Mr. J. Sadler (uncle), Mr. J. Nash (brother-in-law), Mr. G. Good and Mr. T. A. Sadler (grandsons). The bearers were Mr. W. Jordan, Mr. J. Sadler (Broadwell Road), Mr. D. G. Harroway, councilor S. J. Sadler, Mr. T. Orange and superintendent Speke (Dudley). Dr. Rees and Mr. T. Bonser followed in private carriages. The coffin was covered with beautiful wreaths, among them being one from his widow (Mrs. Sadler), separate ones from each of his sons, and from Mr. W. Jordan, Mr. J. Morgan, Mr. T. R. Bonser, Mr. H. Harper, Mrs. Orange, Mrs. S. Round, Mrs. Bowerman, Mrs. Southall, Mr. R. Jones and family. The officiating minister was the Rev. J. Jones of Quinton."

The removal of the licence of the WINDSOR CASTLE, Graves Road, Rounds Green, to premises known as the BEECHES, Bristnall Hall Road, Warley.”

Although 96 per cent of residents in the Bristnall Hall Road district of Warley want a new public house, the Oldbury Justices said ‘No’ to their demand yesterday. Atkinsons Brewery applied for the removal of the licence of the WINDSOR CASTLE, Brades Road, Oldbury, to premises proposed to be erected on a site at Bristnall Hall Road.

Mr. Douglas Jenkins, for the brewery company, said there were 525 houses nearer to the site than to any other licensed premises, and there was land available for the erection of a further 621.

Opposition was made by local clergy, who contended that the proposed building would be near three schools.

The application was refused.”

“Oldbury adjourned Licensing Sessions yesterday.....

Atkinsons Ltd, Aston, applied for a provisional order sanctioning the removal of the full licence of the WINDSOR CASTLE, Brades Road, Oldbury, to premises known at the BEECHES, Bristnall Hall Road, Warley.

Mr. Douglas Jenkins (for the applicants) said that the position had changed since a similar application was made in 1936. More houses had been erected and today there were 644 houses nearer to this site than to any licensed house in the area. The effect of granting the application would be to remove a licence from a somewhat congested area to a district where no facilities exist. The brewery company was prepared to surrender the licences of two further houses that were doing considerable business.

Objection to the application was offered by the Rev. F. A. Payne (Warley Methodist Church) and the Rev. H. C. Hawkins (Oldbury United Ministerial Fellowship), who contended that facilities in the area are adequate. The application was granted, subject to certain alterations in the plans of the proposed building.”

NEW WONDER [1862]

The WONDER and the WONDER HOTEL was one long building, front to back, with the hotel to the rear of the pub.

Originally separate licences were held.

Wolverhampton Chronicle 21/2/1849

“On Saturday last an inquest was held at the WONDER INN, Tividale, before G. Hinchliffe, Esq, coroner, on the bodies of Sampson Bate, his son, Joseph Bate, and his nephew Joseph Bate. They were employed in Mr. Round’s pit at Tividale, and on Friday morning last descended the pit at six o’clock in the morning. They were the only three men working in the pit and were employed to drain a headway. About nine o’clock the overlooker of the pit heard an explosion when he was on the bank, he immediately went to the pit and got into a skip for the purpose of descending the shaft, but when he had been lowered a short distance the sulphur was so strong, that he was compelled to ascend again, and it was two hours before any person could go down; he then descended and found the bodies of the deceased, who had been killed by the explosion. The overlooker had tried the lamp the previous morning, and, the deceased, Sampson Bate, who was an experienced miner, took the lamp down the morning the explosion occurred for the purpose of trying it himself, he being the doggy of the pit. It was proved by the testimony of two witnesses, that there were pipes on the bank to be used for the purpose of conveying air into the pit and the manager had several times requested Sampson Bate to use them, but he refused to do so, as he always said there was sufficient air in the pit. The explosion forced a plank off the top of the shaft, and was heard a mile although the pit is 200 yards in depth. There was no blame to be attributed to any person, unless it was the deceased, Sampson Bate, and the Jury, after hearing the evidence, returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

Defendant stated that he had certainly forgotten to fasten his door exactly at eleven o'clock, but the persons in his house were members of his own family who had been on a visit to him. Aris's Birmingham Gazette 19/11/1864

"On Wednesday evening an accident of a shocking and fatal character, attended with an awful sacrifice of human life, eight human beings being suddenly launched into eternity, occurred at the Counterfield Colliery, situated in the parish of Dudley, and belonging to Messrs. Nock. The pit, it appears, had been at work all day, and the chain to which the skip was suspended had worked in the usual manner. The skip was sent down the shaft the last time before the accident at about a quarter-past six o'clock, with a boy in it, and a number of pikes which were required for use by the miners on the night turn. The 'hanger on,' a man named John Slater, noticed that when the skip was about to be drawn up the shaft, eight persons were in, and by his direction one man named Thomas Bateman got off, as there was a sufficient number of men in already. As the skip was ascending, one of the boys jumped on. The skip, with its living human freight, had ascended more than eighty yards up the shaft when a voice was heard to exclaim, 'O, Lord,' followed by a piercing scream, and immediately after the skip went crashing to the bottom. All the men were dead when Slater saw them at the bottom of the pit. The first body he recognised was that of his unfortunate brother (William Slater), a youth of 17 years, whose head was cut off by the chain. About 85 yards of the chain fell to the bottom of the pit on to the deceased. The chain had broken when the skip was about half way up the pit. The engineer, Francis Downing, seeing the chain drawn up to the pulley, and suspecting something wrong, at once shut off the steam. On examination he found that the chain had broken, and that a yard of it had gone over the horn and was hanging over the shaft of the drum. The bodies of the unfortunate men at the bottom of the shaft were conveyed to their respective homes to await the Coroner's investigation into the circumstances connected with their untimely fate.

The inquest on the body of William Slater was opened yesterday by Mr. Edwin Hooper, District Coroner, at the SPRING HOUSE INN, Rowley Regis. Mr. J. P. Baker, the Government Inspector of Mines, attended the inquest. At the commencement of the inquiry the Coroner dismissed four jurors because they were connected slightly with the proprietors of the Counterfield Colliery by business transactions, and the jury was made up by others entirely disinterested in the matter.

The jury, having viewed the body and examined the machinery, John Slater, a miner, living at Springfield, and brother to the deceased, was called, and deposed to the identity of the body, after which the Coroner said he thought that possibly greater justice would be done to the public, the deceased, and other men employed at the pit by having an adjournment. The jury had had the opportunity of seeing the machinery inclusive of the pit frames and the chain. He had taken upon himself to order a part of the chain to be cut off and placed in the hands of a practical person to be tested by hydraulic pressure, that they might be satisfied that there was no fault in connection with it. A report had been spread to the effect that it had been an old chain; he did not know himself personally, but he had, as he had before informed them, taken the proper means to ascertain. If he found that scientific evidence was necessary, he should get such evidence as would satisfy them. He thought it much better that they should see the machinery themselves than hear a description of the same from the mouths of witnesses, so that they might form their own opinion on the subject. The inquest was then formally adjourned until Friday, December the 2nd.

The second inquest was held at the WONDER INN, Tividale, in the parish of Rowley, on the body of Thomas Bowater, who met his death at the same colliery. The Coroner explained what had transpired at the previous inquest, and intimated his intention of adjourning the investigation touching the death of Thomas Bowater until after the first inquiry had been held, as the same witnesses would be required at all the inquiries, though the verdict of one jury would not necessarily affect that of the other. The father of the deceased was then called, and gave evidence of the identity of the body, and the inquest was then adjourned till Tuesday, the 6th proximo.

The Coroner desired the jury to inspect the machinery, as the previous jury had done, and place a police-officer at their disposal who would show them over the works, Messrs. Nock having promised to afford them every facility, and courting a complete and searching investigation. As far as can be ascertained, the catastrophe appears to have been occasioned by the framework having by some means become disarranged, the chain in working over the 'horn' got thrown out of its horizontal position and inclined to one side of the horn, instead of working equally over the whole, and the chain would of necessity become worn and thinner in those parts where the friction took place. When the men were ascending the pit on Wednesday night the chain would appear to have been working out of its proper adjustment in the manner described, to have been caught in the horn and swagged over on to the drum, where it snapped in two, as clearly as if it had been cut by a machine.

The inquest on the bodies of the other six unfortunate deceased was opened yesterday afternoon by Mr. B. Robinson, coroner for Dudley, at the DUDLEY ARMS HOTEL, but no further evidence was taken beyond that of establishing the identity of the bodies, and the inquiry was then adjourned for a week for reasons previously enumerated."

London Evening Standard 7/12/1864

"Yesterday morning the inquest was resumed at Dudley on the body of Thomas Bowater, who was, with seven other men, killed as they were ascending the shaft of the Counterfield Pit, on the colliery of Messrs. Nock, at Withymore, near Dudley. Mr. Edwin Nock, Zachariah Mason, and James Leadham had previously been committed to take their trial at the assizes for manslaughter. The jury in the present case found a verdict of manslaughter against Francis Downing; but they entirely exonerated Messrs. Nock, Mason, and Leadham from any blame whatever in the matter. Downing was fully committed for trial, but was admitted to bail in two sureties of £25 each, and himself in £50."

[At Staffordshire Lent Assizes Thomas Downing, the engineman, was acquitted.]

Birmingham Daily Post 8/12/1864

"Mr. Hooper held an inquest on Tuesday, at the WONDER INN, Tividale, on the body of Emma Paskin, aged twenty-seven years, whose death resulted from severe burning. The deceased, it appeared, fell upon the fire while in a fit several days ago, and received such severe injuries that she expired on the 2nd inst. A verdict of Accidental Death was returned."

County Advertiser 11/3/1865

"William Guest was charged with assaulting James Jones, on the night of the 25th ult, in the WONDER public house, Tividale. Fined 6d and costs, or twenty-one days."

Stourbridge Observer 26/8/1865

"At the Petty Sessions on Wednesday, Stephen Joyns and James Cook, both of Tividale, were charged with refusing to leave the WONDER HOTEL, Tividale, when requested.

Police-constable Wyley said that he was passing by the above hotel on the 15th inst, at 10.45pm, and he heard a disturbance within. He entered into the house and found the two defendants drunk, and in the act of fighting. The landlady requested them to leave but they refused, and she then requested witness to put them out. He accordingly did so, and they became very abusive whilst in the street.

They were fined 1s each and costs; in default 7 days' hard labour."

County Advertiser 7/10/1865

"On Wednesday, at the Police Court, before Messrs. F. W. G. Barrs and J. Pursey, James Thomas, a tramp, was charged with stealing a jacket, the property of James Hughes. It appeared that between nine and ten o'clock on Tuesday morning the prisoner went to the WONDER INN, Tividale, kept by Mrs. Hughes, and called for some drink. Having been served with what he wanted he sat down in the taproom. The servant girl had occasion to leave the room for a short time, and on her return the prisoner was putting on a jacket belonging to Mrs. Hughes's son James, and which had been hanging just above where the prisoner was seated. The girl told her mistress, who went to the room where the prisoner was, but he instantly decamped. After running some distance he was stopped by a young man named Long and brought back. The jacket was on him, under his own, and he was at once handed over to the custody of Police-constable Wiley. The prisoner pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to two months' hard labour."

"Samuel Bushell and William Skidmore, two boys aged between ten and eleven years of age, were placed at the bar, charged with stealing a purse containing £16 in gold, the property of Sarah Hughes, of the WONDER INN, Tividale. Mrs. Hughes is Bushell's grand-mother, and she had employed him for the last fortnight or so running errands. About eleven o'clock on Saturday morning, she brought her money down stairs, and placed it in the desk in the bar. There was £16 in gold. It was in a purse, and she laid it beside some silver in the bottom of the desk. She did not know how much silver there would be; she would not miss any if taken. She left the keys in the desk while she went about the bar. About three o'clock, she had occasion to give change last. On going to the desk, she found the purse gone. Bushell was out at the time, but she called her son, who went in search of, and found him on the turnpike road. He brought Bushell back to the house, and asked him where the little bag was he had taken out of the desk. He said he had not taken it. The son then put his hand in one trouser's pocket, and brought out a supply of peppermints, &c; from the other he brought forth £14 in gold, and 9s 6d in silver. When asked what he had done with the purse, he said he had given it to Billy Skidmore, and that was either a sovereign or half-sovereign in it. The boy Skidmore is a very respectable-looking lad. On his being taken into custody, the sum of £1 6s 6d in silver was found upon him, which he readily admitted as having received, accompanied by some cock-and-bull story, plausible enough to a boy of ten.

Mr. Addison appeared for the boy Skidmore, and argued on his client's respectability, and contended that he had just (as any boy of his age might) fallen into the dangerous company of a bad boy.

The Bench gave consideration to this view, and dismissed Skidmore with an admonition. Bushell was sentenced to receive twelve lashes, and be imprisoned for one month."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 27/9/1869

"On Saturday afternoon the proprietor of Hall Bridge Colliery, Tividale, and one of his men, met with death in an awfully sudden manner. The colliery, which belonged to Mr. F. W. Hipkins, required to be closed about a week ago in consequence of the occurrence of a fire. In order to shut out the air, and thus deprive combustion of support, a scaffold was fixed in the shaft, and the mouth of the pit was also carefully covered. Between two and three o'clock on Saturday afternoon the pit mouth was opened, and one of the miners, a young man named John Briscoe (21) descended the shaft to the scaffolding, which was placed about thirty yards from the surface. He went down to ascertain how far the water had risen, and whether the fire was becoming extinguished. A few minutes after he had left the bank those who remained there became greatly concerned, for no sound was heard below, and response was not given to repeated calls. Fearing that the man had succumbed to the deadly influence of 'choke damp,' Mr. Hipkins resolved to make an immediate attempt to rescue him. He was cautioned as to the danger of the undertaking, and his brother, who happened to be present, urged him to wait until he obtained a rope with which to secure him to the 'bowk.' He repudiated, however, all idea of fear, and being anxious to save the poor fellow in the shaft, he went down at once. Those upon the bank listened anxiously, and Mr. Hipkins had only been lowered a few yards when they were appalled to hear him fall. He had become the second victim of the poisonous gas, and had lost his life in an act which was praiseworthy, but too self-forgetful.

Half an hour elapsed before any further attempt dare be made to descend the shaft. A large quantity of water was thrown down in order to dilute and disperse the dreaded gas. When it was thought this had been sufficiently effected, a man named Evans volunteered to fetch up the unfortunate men who had been so suddenly deprived of life. The descent was this time made in safety, and the dead bodies of the colliery owner and miner were soon brought to the pit mouth. They were afterwards taken to their late residences – that of Mr. Hipkins being at Kates Hill, Dudley; and John Briscoe's at Tividale.”

“On Monday, Edwin Hooper, Esq, coroner, held an inquest at the WONDER HOTEL, Tividale, near Rowley, touching the death of Daniel Hughes (46) who had lately resided with his mother at the WONDER INN. The evidence showed that deceased had been a traveller in the employ of Mr. Matthew Smith, brewer, Dudley, and lately he had given way to drink. In consequence of his being a long time away a search was made for him, and on the pig sty were found his coat and hat, and in a disused well was found his body, his feet only being out of the water. Mary Ann Aston, servant, stated that deceased went out of the house, after having his supper, at ten pm on the day in question. As he did not return witness went in search of him, and found his jacket and hat on a stone near a well ten feet deep. On looking down the well she saw his body in the water head downwards. She called for aid, and with the assistance of William Hensman and Attwood Parsons, had the body conveyed to the house. Witness had observed the deceased had been subject to fits of abstraction for some time. “Mr. J. Stokes (Stokes and Hooper) applied for the transfer of the license of the WONDER INN, Tividale, from Sarah Hughes to Henry Bishop. Superintendent Wollaston opposed the application on the ground that the applicant has not conducted himself in such a manner as to entitle him to hold the license. In reply to Superintendent Wollaston’s remarks, Mr. Stokes said that if Bishop was taken into custody at Tamworth he was released the next morning, there being no charge against him. It was a case between Bishop and his creditors. As to the time he was committed for trial the charge was withdrawn, and it was preposterous to bring such allegations against his client when there was nothing in the charges which could criminate him. Bishop was a very respectable man, and highly connected, and during the whole time he had been a licensed victualler there had not been a single complaint against him. In 1858 he received a spirit license for the MITRE INN, at Tettenhall, from there he went to Birmingham to the Excelsior Tavern and held a license for that house; from there he went to the Leopard Inn at Coventry, and from thence to the Kings Head at Birmingham, and afterwards to the Red Lion, and next to the STATION HOTEL at Wednesbury. From these facts he accounted for his client from the year 1857 to 1876, and during the whole of that time he had conducted those houses in an exemplary manner without a single complaint or conviction being recorded against him, and that proved that as a licensed victualler he had conducted himself well. Since the year 1876 he had been a commercial traveller, and the case at Birmingham that had been mentioned in an attempt to damage his character, was that when he was abroad he spent a great deal of money on his employers and they attempted to prosecute him, but now his employers were about to be prosecuted for maliciously prosecuting him, and they wanted to make the matter up with him.

The Bench granted the application.”

Mr. Stokes said the applicant had been a licensed victualler from 1858 until 1876, and had never had a complaint brought against him. He had since been a commercial traveller, and the alleged frauds had been committed under the advice of a solicitor. All charges against him had fallen to the ground, and there was now an action pending against his former employers for malicious prosecution. The Bench granted the application.”

The fountains of the deep seemed to have broken up, for the hollow formed by the subsidence was soon filled with water, owing to the bursting of a large main belonging to the South Staffordshire Waterworks Company, which flooded the road, and rendered it quite impassable to pedestrians and vehicles, the water lodging in the entries, and rising nearly to the doorsteps of the houses.

"On Thursday morning, Mr. H. A. Pearson (coroner) held an inquest at the WONDER HOTEL, Tividale, concerning the death of George Nuttall (59), formerly residing in Dudley Road, Tividale, who committed suicide on Tuesday last.

Ernest Thomas Nuttall, gardener, of Edgbaston, identified the body, and said his father, about 13 years ago, was a colliery proprietor, but of late years he had been doing nothing except carrying on a bit of an agency for a colliery proprietor named Marsh. He had never noticed any change in his manner until this week when he visited his house, and seemed to be peculiar in manner. He had never heard deceased threaten to take his life, and he could assign no reason for the act. He received notice of his father's death on Tuesday evening. In reply to a juryman, witness said his father resided with a woman named Whale where he was well cared for.

Catherine Ann Whale, a widow, stated that she had known deceased for about 19 years. Her husband when he died allowed deceased to live rent free, and also gave him 10s a week. Deceased appeared to be very depressed of late and complained of pains in his head. He had never threatened to take his life. On Tuesday morning she last saw him alive when he seemed very low spirited. He said he could not sit down as his head pained him so much. He expressed his intention of taking some of witness's children to a Catholic re-union at Dudley, but went home to lie down. He made no mention of any attempt to take his life, but in the morning, he said, 'I wish I was with my old friend,' referring to witness's husband.

Sarah Shenton stated that on Tuesday afternoon she went to call deceased up when she saw him sitting in the arm chair with his throat cut, his head being almost severed from his body. There was a large quantity of blood about the floor, and a pocket knife lay near.

Evidence was also given by William Hensman, a neighbour, and Police-constable Robinson.

The jury returned a verdict of Suicide whilst of Unsound Mind."

"The annual dinner in connection with the Tividale Gardeners' Protection Association was held at the WONDER HOTEL, Tividale, on Monday night.....

After full justice had been done to an excellent repast served in the host's best style, the business part of the proceedings was proceeded with.

The association then had 22 members and he believed there was a slight profit on the first show. In the next year, 1895, they thought fit to take the show from the WONDER HOTEL, and held a public one on the Tividale Cricket Ground.....

The committee was re-elected, and Messrs. Walton, Hensman, and S. Evans were elected trustees. Mr.

Hensman was re-elected hon. treasurer.....

During the evening songs were rendered by Messrs. Plant, Wilkes and others. An enjoyable evening was spent."

"Daniel Whale, Tividale Cottage, Tividale, was charged with being disorderly on the licensed premises of the WONDER HOTEL, Tividale, and refusing to quit the same when requested; and also assaulting the landlord, Hensman, on 20th January.

William Hensman, the landlord, said the defendant was in his house, and about seven o'clock he became objectionable, and witness requested him four or five times to leave. The defendant did not leave, and witness requested the servant to go for the police just before eight. Defendant could hear what was said, and he walked out. As he passed out, witness was standing in the doorway, and defendant caught him by the throat. Witness got away from him and went into the bar, and as witness passed a small window the defendant spat in witness's face.

Susan White, servant, said she heard her master order the defendant out four times, because he was disorderly.

The defence was that the case for the prosecution on the charge of refusing to quit must fall through on the landlord's own evidence, as the defendant offered to go out if the landlord would give him the money which he stated was due to him. When the 1½d was given him he left. They denied that the defendant caught hold of the landlord's throat; he merely pushed him as he was going out the house. The landlord's story was absolutely without corroboration.

The defendant, Joseph Spicer, and Edward Shenton gave evidence in reply to the charge.

The case was dismissed."

Witness ordered him to leave, but he refused to go.

Defendant was fined 10s in each case.”

“Mr. A. A. Betham (Deputy Coroner for South Staffordshire) held an inquest at the WONDER HOTEL, Tividale, yesterday, on Charlotte Walford, the infant child of James Edward and Drusilla Walford, of Groveland Road, who had been found dead in bed on the morning of the 24th inst.

A few weeks ago a woman residing at Bloxwich visited the residence of the Walfords when suffering from itch, with the result that nine persons contracted the disease, including the deceased, who was only ten weeks old, and the irritation was so great as to cause her death.

The Coroner said the Walfords occupied a very insanitary dwelling, totally unfit for habitation.

Police-constable Heatherley said the whole family had suffered very intensely from the itch.

The jury returned a verdict of Died from Convulsions, accelerated by the itch, and directed the police to report the case to the Rowley Regis sanitary authorities.”

County Advertiser 18/2/1905

“John William Deakin, of Canal Street, Tipton, was charged with stealing 4d, belonging to John Thomas Jones, landlord of the WONDER HOTEL, Tividale, on the 9th inst.

It appeared that money had been thrown to the ceiling at prosecutor’s house in aid of a fund for feeding the poor school children. On the date named defendant went into the house, and it was alleged that during the landlord’s absence he took four-pence from the ceiling.

The Bench described it as a mean theft, and fined defendant £1 5s, including costs, or fourteen days’ imprisonment.”

County Advertiser 1/4/1905

“Edward Smith, galvaniser, of Dudley Road, Tividale, was charged with being disorderly and refusing to quit the licensed premises of the WONDER HOTEL, Tividale, kept by John Thomas Jones, on the 18th inst [sic]. A cross-summons was issued charging Jones with assaulting Smith on the same date.

The landlord stated that defendant used bad language and became disorderly. Witness requested him to leave the premises, but he refused to go, and had to be ejected.

Smith denied that he was requested to leave and alleged that the landlord said he had killed many ‘Boers’ and could strangle him. He then rushed at him, and, after committing a violent assault upon him, ejected him from the house. He (Smith) sustained severe injuries as a result of the landlord’s violence. Jones, however, contended that Smith received his injuries in the struggle.

The Bench fined Smith 5s and costs for refusing to quit, and dismissed the case against the publican.”

John William Beck = John William Bick

County Advertiser 6/1/1906

“John William Bick, landlord of the WONDER HOTEL, Tividale, was charged with assaulting James Edward Walford, of the same locality, on Boxing Day. There was a charge preferred against Walford of refusing to quit the licensed premises. Mr. W. Waldron represented Bick, and Mr. F. Dawes appeared for Walford. The latter alleged that during a dispute over a debt Bick struck him on the left side of the neck. He also dealt him another blow upon the face, and threw him down the steps, dislocating his shoulder, and causing injuries of such a serious character as to necessitate his removal to the hospital.

The assault was denied, and it was alleged that Walford refused to leave the premises and received his injuries by falling upon a jar whilst being ejected.

Eventually the Bench fined Walford 20s for refusing to quit and dismissed the case of assault.”

County Advertiser 5/5/1906

“Samuel Rogers, of Greenaway Street, Small Heath, and John Coghill, of St. John’s Place, Birmingham, were charged under the Highways Act with failing to have control over their horses on the 18th ult. “The sequel to some lively scenes at Tividale were heard at Old Hill Police Court on Wednesday, when a number of men were summoned for disorderly conduct and refusing to quit the licensed premises of the WONDER HOTEL, Tividale, on the 12th January.

Mr. J. T. Higgs (Brierley Hill) appeared to prosecute, and stated that the public house had recently changed hands, and on the 12th January a fresh licensee came into the premises. At eight o’clock on the Sunday evening these men arrived at the WONDER INN. They began shouting and quarrelling, and challenged other customers in the house to fight. In consequence of their conduct the manager requested them to leave the house. They did not appear to take any notice, but continued to act in a disorderly manner, practically taking possession of the whole of the licensed premises. They turned the house inside out and created a general riot. The manager sent for the police, the windows of the house having been broken. PC Heatherley arrived and arrested the defendants. John George Smith, the licensee, admitted that he had told his wife to fetch his rifle to clear the house.

As a result Henry Woodcock (Smethwick), John and George Henney (Smethwick), Jesse Smith (Dudley Port), Joseph Dudley (Dudley Port), and Thomas York (Smethwick) were fined sums of 10s and 5s.”

Dudley Chronicle 5/4/1913

“At Old Hill on Wednesday, John George Smith, of the WONDER HOTEL, Tividale, was summoned for permitting gaming on licensed premises. Mr. J. W. Clulow (Brierley Hill) stated that the offence took place on Friday and Saturday, the 7th and 8th March, when PC Rowbotham and another person visited the WONDER HOTEL and there saw a number of working men playing a game known as ‘pyramids pool.’ A penny each was placed in the pool, which was collected by a man who acted as marker. On the conclusion of the game, the money was paid out and drinks brought to the winners. The landlord came in during the progress of one of the games. On the following day a game was played, which consisted of knocking down a match placed between three billiard balls, on which bets were exchanged. The landlord came in, and evidently suspecting that the police were present, said, ‘No more gambling tonight.’

Mr. J. T. Higgs, for the defence, said knowing the extremely fair way in which the police gave their evidence, his client would be advised to place the case at the mercy of the Court. He submitted the offence was not a serious one. It was one of those trifling games which working men would play, and would have their pennies or two-pence on. The landlord admittedly ought to have been a little more careful. A fine of 10s and costs was imposed in the first case, and the second case was dismissed.”

Dudley Chronicle 2/8/1913

“Thomas Smith, James Bromwell, and Job Gardener, all of Birmingham, who had all left their waggons and horses unattended outside the WONDER INN, Tividale, were fined 10s inclusive. PC Heathly and PC Simkins gave evidence, it being stated that the road was completely blocked, and the tram had to pull up.”

Dudley Chronicle 8/11/1913

“George Richard Aston was granted interim authority to sell at the WONDER HOTEL, Tividale. Superintendent Johnson stated that the license had been transferred nine times in recent years; he had no objection to the applicant.”

Birmingham Daily Post 5/2/1914

“The licensing sessions for the Old Hill Petty Sessional Division were held yesterday.....

Superintendent Johnson objected to the renewal of the licenses of the WONDER HOTEL, Tividale, on the ground of previous convictions.

The Bench decided to renew both licenses, but cautioned the license holders as to the future conduct of the houses.”

Birmingham Mail 10/6/1914

“At Old Hill Police Court today, in connection with an application for the transfer of the license of the WONDER HOTEL, Tividale, from George Richard Aston to Alfred Sheldon, the Dudley footballer, Superintendent Johnson said there was no opposition to the character of the applicant, but he thought it necessary to point out that the license had been transferred ten times in eleven years, the last one being in December last. The Bench granted the application.”

Dudley Chronicle 27/3/1915

“John Morris, of Rounds Green, was summoned for assaulting Alfred Sheldon, of the WONDER HOTEL. Complainant alleged that the defendant came to the hotel and accused him of taking his job from him at Brades Steel Works. He finished up by striking him in the face.

A fine of 5s and costs was imposed.”

Dudley Chronicle 1/5/1915

“At Old Hill Police Court on Wednesday William Wheale applied for the transfer of the license of the WONDER INN, Tividale. Supt. Johnson stated that there had been a large number of transfers of this license, there being four prior to 1911 and seven previous to that date. The Bench granted the application. The late tenant, Alfred Sheldon, who is engaged on Government work, was excused from attendance.”

Dudley Chronicle 4/12/1920

“To defray the cost of making good the depredations in the fencing and seats at the Tividale Recreation Ground – provided for the village by the generosity of Councillor W. Barnett, JP – a couple of cricket matches were recently held. In celebration of the win a dinner was given at the WONDER INN on Saturday night. Mr. Ellis presided, and in the speeches made Councillor Barnett was warmly thanked for his generosity in providing the field as a recreation ground, and regret was expressed that the youngsters and the ‘oldsters’ had destroyed what was intended solely for the public good in the way of seats and fencing. Councillor Barnett said all would be put right in the early part of the new year, and a committee of vigilance would see that all was kept right. Councillor Barnett was warmly congratulated on his recent appointment as a Justice of the Peace.”

“A fishing contest took place on Saturday in the waters of the sewage outfall works at Tividale, Rowley Regis. Mr. Hughes, the foreman at the farm, which is part of the system belonging to the Upper Stour Valley Main Sewerage Board, is an ardent fisherman, and in May last he conceived the idea of stocking with fish what is known as a humus tank. The tank, into which water goes after passing through the various processes connected with its purification, is 18ft deep and contains some 600 fish. The farm is probably the only one of its kind in existence where fish are accommodated, and the fact that they have thrived so well is evidence of the purity of the water as it leaves the farm.

Local anglers have occasionally fished in the tank, and when Mr. Hughes suggested to the officials of the WONDER Angling Society, Tividale, that a contest at the farm, apart from its uniqueness, would provide an afternoon’s sport, the idea was immediately taken up.....”
