“On Monday last a man named Garrett Callagan, who said he came from Birmingham, was committed to prison by James Hunt, Esq, for passing bad money, on Saturday, the 14th inst. The prisoner, it seems, went to Mrs. Flavell’s, in Truth Street, Oldbury, and tendered her a shilling in payment for some bread, but she detected that it was not so good as it should be, and ordered the prisoner about his business. At this time the prisoner had a lad with him; however, he left the lad in the street, and went into Mrs. Clifton’s, the ALBION INN, and called for half a pint of beer, for which he again tendered the shilling, which Mrs. Clifton also told him was a bad one, and one of the other customers put the shilling between his teeth and bit it in two. The prisoner was allowed to go away, and in about twenty minutes returned again and called for half a pint of fourpenny, and tendered a sixpence in payment, which was also detected as bad, very bad. The prisoner then tried to make his escape, but was secured and handed over to the care of the police. The boy effected his escape.

“On Monday morning last, a man named Frederick Brown, was apprehended by Inspector Chipp and PC Bullock, in Lowesmoor, in this city, on suspicion of stealing a horse, he having sold a most valuable animal in our fair on Monday se’night, for £6 10s. The prisoner lives in the neighbourhood of Oldbury, and the horse belongs to Mr. Richard Clifton, of the ALBION INN in that place. He came to this city again on the morning of his apprehension with another fine horse which he had stolen from Mr. John Johns, of Oldbury, and which he was offering for sale for £8, when the officers took him into custody. Mr. Johns values his animal at £20. He will be taken to Oldbury this (Wednesday) afternoon, in custody of Inspector Chipp, and no doubt committed for trial at the Assizes.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 24/10/1855

“On Wednesday evening the coroner, R. Docker, Esq, held an adjourned inquest at the house of Mr. Richard Clifton, the ALBION INN, Oldbury, on the body of a man named Thomas Turner, aged 61, who met with his death on Tuesday week, whilst engaged in a pumping pit belonging to Captain Bennitt. It appeared from the evidence that the deceased was employed by Captain Bennitt as managing engineer, and that having with another man been engaged during the night of Monday week in drawing a number of rods out of an engine pit at Rounds Green Colliery, he at the time of the accident was standing upon a scaffold in the pit while a large weight was being lifted, and that the capstan rope broke in the attempt, fell upon him, and crushed him in a fearful manner. The other man escaped. It is supposed to have been a sudden jerk that caused the capstan rope to break. A portion of the rope was examined by the jurymen, who were perfectly satisfied with its condition. It was stated to have been the business of the deceased to see that the tackle was in good working order, as he had the sole management, and could have had a new rope whenever he thought proper. A verdict of Accidental Death was returned.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 14/11/1855

“On Tuesday, at the ALBION INN, Oldbury, before R. Docker, Esq, an inquest was held on the body of a man named Thomas Hughes, who was killed on the 1st instant by a fall of about 30cwt of coal, whilst engaged in a coal pit at Langley Green, belonging to Messrs. Johnson, Probert, and Mason. The inquest was attended by T. Wynne, Esq, who had made an examination of the pit, and who expressed himself as being satisfied that there had been no want of usual precaution in the matter, and a verdict was then returned of Accidental Death.”

AND

“On Tuesday an inquest was held before the Coroner, R. Docker, Esq, at the house of Mr. Richard Clifton, the ALBION INN, Oldbury, on the body of a young lad named John Little, who was killed on the night of the 25th ultimo, in a coal pit belonging to Mr. Joseph Hackett, at Causeway Green. Mr. Wynne, the Government Inspector of Coal Mines, was present.

It will be remembered that one of the two men (William Harris) who were engaged with the deceased at the time of the occurrence was also suffocated, and the other, William Booth (erroneously stated last week to be Gould), had an extraordinary escape by climbing the pit chain.

From the evidence of Booth, who was sufficiently recovered to be able to attend the inquest, and from the evidence of other witnesses, who went to the pit bank on the morning following the occurrence, the additional facts to those before stated appear to be these.

That the deceased, and the witness Booth, were on the night in question engaged in driving a gate road (which was nine feet wide and from two to three feet high) at the bottom of the shaft, which they descended at six pm; that they had driven the rock to a distance of twenty yards from the bottom of the shaft, which was about 180 yards deep; that at 9.35 they came out of the workings to the bottom, to have supper; that the damp came first down the shaft to the candles, there being a heading or air-way fourteen yards above them, which led into another shaft; that their candles were put out by this damp; that the ‘fire stink’ began to rush upon them very heavily; that both the deceased tried to climb the chain, but failed; that Booth then took off his shoes, climbed the chain, and after ‘hard struggling for his life’ as he ascended through the ‘fire stink,’ reached a height of 150 yards, and there remained fastened by his strap and shirt to the chain for the whole of the night, till five next morning. The others remained at the bottom, they having nowhere else to go, and were suffocated.

There was no one allowed to remain on the pit bank during the night; neither was there any arrangement in case of danger, to enable the men at the bottom to communicate to the top. He (Booth) once did 'beg hard' for the whimsey man to be allowed to remain during the night, but this was when they were first engaged in blowing the rock. They had a whimsey man for one night, but he was refused afterwards by the doggy, whose name was William Mogg. Booth had never met with the damp in that pit previous to that night.

In answer to the Inspector, the man said they had commenced the trumpeting from the air-head referred to to the part of the pit where the deceased were engaged, but owing to its being unfinished, it was of no service, and owing to this the smoke of the powder used in blasting was almost overpowering. He and the other men frequently complained of this to the doggy, who said there was not much of the trumpeting to finish, and it should be done. If there had been means of carrying away the fire stink, he did not think the occurrence would have taken place; and he (Booth) was also of opinion that there could not have been sufficient dams in the air-head to keep back the fire stink. The other pit ought to have 'drawn,' but owing to the high winds on that particular night, the shafts 'strove' with each other, as they sometimes would, so that the fire stink went into the bottom of the blowing shaft; nothing was said or done to prevent this, which was not usual. There were no signals in the pit.

The pit was under the superintendence of a ground bailiff (Mr. Charles Bromley), according to whose evidence he visited the pit on the 11th ult, and again of the 30th. On the first occasion he gave instructions to the doggy for the trumpeting to be done, and 'if the shaft was safe to work in, he was to work, and not without.' The fire stink had previously broken out in the other pit. The trumpeting was being finished on the 2nd instant, and consequently had not been done when the men were killed.

Mr. Wynne strictly cross-examined this witness, who candidly admitted that nothing had been done by way of meeting the provisions of the act passed in August, and to come into operation on the 1st of January next, although if its rules had been observed, the accident could not have happened.

In summing up the Coroner said the ground bailiff's orders to the doggy did not appear to have been so peremptory as the nature of the case demanded; it was a great pity in this case that there was no law which went further than the law at present did for the careless manner in which he understood the pits in this district were worked; it ought to be, and would be hoped in a short time be the subject of legislation. Under these circumstances, Mr. Docker concluded, I cannot advise you there is anybody criminally to blame here, but I regret it is not so.

The Jury consulted and returned a verdict of Accidental Death, it being their opinion that the doggy should be reprimanded for not getting the trumpeting done speedily, and there ought to be some one at the top of the pit during the night.

The Inspector: Let me catch a pit after the 1st of January without a signal; or if anybody will give me the information I shall be glad; the penalty is £5 and £1 per day, while the omission is continued.

The Coroner suitably reprimanded Mogg, expressing his belief that if he had properly discharged his duty the lives of two persons might have been saved."

Birmingham Journal 22/12/1855

"On Wednesday, an inquest was held at the house of Mr. Richard Clifton, the ALBION INN, before the Coroner, R. Docker, Esq, on the body of a man, 26 years of age, named William Dearn, who was employed as a carpenter by Mr. Samuel Johnson, and who was killed in one of the water pits, at the Brades, on Thursday, the 13th instant. The evidence showed that the deceased descended the water pit at eight o'clock in the morning, to change one of the pumping buckets, and that at half-past nine he gave a signal to be drawn higher up the shaft. He was then 150 yards down, and when drawn up about 16 yards higher (he intended to have ascended 50 yards), the horse of the gin which was drawing him up was suddenly stopped, and it was supposed the deceased had become entangled in some of the scaffolding. The gin horse was driven backwards, and after waiting for a while for a signal from the deceased, the driver drew up the 'horse' on which the deceased had descended, and found it was empty. John Darbey, an engineer, descended the shaft, and found Dearn on the scaffold in a state of insensibility. He must have fallen 16 yards. There was cut at the back of the deceased's head. He died in half an hour. A verdict of Accidental Death was returned."

“At the ALBION INN, Freeth Street, Oldbury, an inquest was held on Thursday by Mr. R. Docker, coroner, upon the body of William Bastable, 61 years of age, who resided in Inkerman Street, and had been for many years engaged as watchman at the Furnaces. On the evening of Christmas Day deceased was on his way to Rounds Green in search of a man who was wanted at the works, when he was taken suddenly ill, and fell down in the road near Mr. Sadler’s offices. Some men came by shortly afterwards, but, thinking Bastable was helplessly drunk, passed on. The circumstance was afterwards communicated to the deceased’s wife, who went in search of her husband, but upon her arrival at the place indicated, the old man had ceased to breathe. The deceased had been unwell for some time, and the Jury returned a verdict of Died from Natural Causes.”

“Worcestershire Epiphany Quarter Sessions.....

Esther Kiteley, 34, labourer, was indicted for stealing £4 10s from the person of William Hare, at Oldbury, on the 14th of December. The prosecutor, a married man, stated that he met with the prisoner on the evening of the day in question, and whilst he was in her company, he asserted, the robbery was committed. Mr. Godson prosecuted. The prisoner stated that she was with a few friends at a public house on the evening upon which the robbery was committed. The prisoner was found guilty. She had been previously convicted for felony, and had twice been indicted for stealing from the person. Sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment.

The learned vice-chairman said that the Court would mark its sense of the conduct of the prosecutor by disallowing his personal expenses."

"Worcestershire Epiphany Sessions.....

Esther Kiteley (34) was charged with stealing from the person of William Hare on the 14th December, 1874, at Oldbury, £4 10s. Mr. Godson prosecuted, the prisoner being undefended.

It appeared that the woman was not so virtuous as might be desired, and when at the ALBION INN, on the evening in question, she met the prosecutor, she 'relieved' him of the money in question.

After deliberating for nearly an hour without agreeing upon a verdict, the Chairman reminded the Jury that it would be his duty to order them to be locked up if there was any probability of a verdict not being returned shortly, as it was important that the business of the Court should be proceeded with without unnecessary delay. Another consultation ensued amongst the Jury, after which the foreman said they preferred to be 'locked up,' as there was no prospect of them agreeing upon a verdict. They were accordingly taken in charge by the officer of the Court, and imprisoned in a room without fire, food, or water. After being absent about 20 minutes, the Jury returned and recorded a verdict of guilty. Previous convictions were proved against the prisoner, who the Chairman, in sentencing to 12 months' hard labour, characterised as an habitual prostitute thief. The Court disallowed the expenses of the prosecutor."

The Malthouse has until lately been in the occupation of Messrs. J. A. and A. Thompson, and the whole property will let at an annual rental of £50.....”

Birmingham Daily Post 7/11/1889

“Last night a numerously-attended meeting of tradesman and the members of the police force in the Oldbury Division was held at the ALBION INN, Freeth Street, for the purpose of presenting a testimonial to Police-sergeant Stanton, who has been stationed at Oldbury during the last eight years, and who has been recently removed to Ombersley, near Worcester. Mr. Arnold (assistant to the magistrates’ clerk) presided; and on behalf of the subscribers presented Sergeant Stanton with a gold watch of the value of twenty guineas as a mark of their appreciation of the way in which he had discharged his duties during the past eight years. Several tradesmen spoke in eulogistic terms of the way in which Sergeant Stanton had discharged his duties, and Mr. T. Pouter referred to the readiness of the inhabitants to subscribe to the testimonial fund. Police-sergeant Stanton suitably acknowledged the gift, and said he was pleased to know that he had given satisfaction to the people of Oldbury during his stay in the town. Superintendent Speke said he was pleased to hear that the police of Oldbury were on such good terms with the people.”

“At the Police Court, yesterday, Mr. Joseph D. Wood, architect, of Birmingham, applied to the magistrates to approve plans for extensive alterations which it is proposed to carry out at the CHEMICAL INN, Park Lane, and the ALBION INN, Freeth Street, Oldbury. It was explained the both houses belong to Messrs. Showell and Sons (Limited). The application was granted, subject to approval of the licensing justices.”

“On Wednesday evening last Ye No.4 Tent of Jollie Bohemians held their weekly meeting at the house of Mr. Tom Garbett, ALBION HOTEL, Freeth Street, Oldbury.....

The ruling idea in the formation of this club has been to afford to each and every member the advantages of social good fellowship, intellectual advancement, musical entertainment, and the unbiassed consideration of the leading questions of the day, while the arrangements for charitable distributions to deserving institutions without pecuniary calls on the members, should at all times recommend it to the consideration of every well-balanced mind.

The officers chosen, and their duties, are as follows Ye Treasurer, Bro. Tom Garbett, whose duties will be to receive the monies from the Scribe and Major, and pay away as the Committee decide.....

There are three tents in Birmingham, No.4 being at Oldbury, at which our representative was present on Wednesday evening, and a rare jolly night was spent. There are between 40 and 50 members in connection with No.4 tent.”

“Joseph Onions, the ALBION INN, Freeth Street, Oldbury, was summoned for driving to the public danger and further for failing to stop when signalled to do so by a constable. Mr. William Hadgkiss prosecuted on behalf of the Chief Constable, and Mr. Hooper defended.

Mr. Hadgkiss said the offence took place on Friday, August 24th, when defendant drove a motor-cycle and side-car combination along High Street from the direction of Oldbury towards Cape Hill. Near the Law Courts he was seen by a police constable travelling at 30 to 40 miles an hour. There was a great deal of traffic about and he was approaching a very dangerous point at Rolfe Street. However, he did not stop when Police-constable Tomkinson stepped into the roadway and signalled to him. Continuing along the main road Police-constable Cotterell also signalled Onions to stop. The latter’s signal could not easily have been unnoticed because the officer was wearing white gloves. The speed at which defendant was travelling was altogether excessive from the point of view of public safety. Mr. Hadgkiss added that when great efforts were being made to clear the streets of the borough of road-hogs it must be regarded a particularly flagrant case for a man to rush about the streets in this way, especially when two officers signalled to him to stop and he took no notice.

Police-constable Tomkinson estimated the speed of the motor-cycle as it approached the Law Courts at 30 to 40 miles an hour. Witness said he walked into the road and signalled for the man to stop but he took no notice. Witness also saw Police-constable Cotterell signal to the man. Some days later when he saw Onions, he said that he could not remember being signalled to stop. When told the speed which it was estimated the machine was travelling, Onions said that officer must have good eye-sight to have caught his number. In reply to Mr. Hooper, this witness described the rate at which defendant was travelling as 'flying.' Police-constable Cotterell said that he thought Onions must have been under the impression that he was at Brooklands.

Independent witnesses also gave evidence.

One said that there were disabled men giving to the Employment Exchange at the time that Onions drove past; had any of them been crossing the road they would have had a difficulty to escape. One witness said that defendant was travelling three or four times the speed of an ordinary motor-car.

Mr. Hooper said that defendant was going to see his tailor.

The Clerk (Mr. B. Shakespeare): Hurrying to pay his bill, evidently. (Laughter.)

Mr. Hooper: Possibly, being an honest man.

Mr. Hooper pointed to discrepancies in the evidence, the speed having been estimated by witnesses at anything from 30 to 100 miles an hour. He contended that the case had been presented with all the vigour of a police prosecution and also with the utmost prejudice against his client. Further, the defendant had no earthly chance of finding witnesses because of the delay in instituting the proceedings.

Defendant in his evidence regarded himself as one of the most careful drivers on the road. He estimated the speed at 16 miles an hour.

The Magistrates said that they were satisfied that defendant drove to the danger of the public and would be fined £5. For failing to stop when signalled to do so he was fined a further £2. Costs were allowed and the total penalty was £10 2s."

"William Fisher, 20, of Sheldon Road, All Saints, West Bromwich, was at Oldbury, Worcestershire, today remanded in custody until Wednesday, accused of stealing a charity money box containing 28s, and with the unlawful use of a gun for the purpose of evading arrest.

Supt. Bache said that on November 18th William Homer, the licensee of the ALBION INN, Freeth Street, Oldbury, saw Fisher with a charity money box in his possession. Homer challenged him and persuaded him to return to the public house where he put the box back on the counter and then disappeared.

PC Palmer and PC Stafford joined in the chase of Fisher which led to a railway stable yard. There Fisher was cornered and produced a German Luger pistol. He said to the police officers, 'Don't move another step or else I will shoot.'

He then dashed away towards some waste land on the outskirts of the town where he was lost to sight.

Some clothing was found in a recreation ground at Carlton on Saturday, which was identified as that which Fisher was wearing at Oldbury. At about midnight, Fisher walked into the trap which was laid for him and was arrested after another attempt to escape."

“Twenty-nine-year-old Miss Mavis Preece and 30-year-old Mr. Derek Atsbury walked disconsolately to the ALBION INN, Oldbury, on Saturday afternoon to look at the wedding cake they could not cut. Because of a misunderstanding about just who should obtain the licence, the marriage of Mavis, of 268, Oldbury Road, Smethwick, to Derek, of 9, Church Way, Alvanley, Cheshire, could not go on at St. Francis Xavier Church, Oldbury, where Father Ralph was to have married them. Instead, the wedding and the reception for 40 guests, were postponed until next Saturday, ‘when,’ says Derek, ‘I shall make sure the licence is there.’” “Leamington. Singular Hallucination. A Man Supposing Himself to be Jesus Christ.

Yesterday, at the Town Hall, a young man who gave the name of Benjamin Ingram, was brought up as a wandering lunatic, and ordered to be removed to Hatton Asylum. The poor fellow had been found wandering about the streets, representing himself to be the Saviour, and literally ‘overcoming the enemy’ by knocking down persons whom he met, and each of whom he declared to be the devil. Before the bench he was remarkably quiet, although evidently labouring under great mental excitement. His peculiarity was that of making the representation above mentioned, accompanied by stamping his feet and raising one arm in a horizontal and the other in a perpendicular position, with the persistency of a Shaker.

Dr. Brady certified as to his being a lunatic. In reply to the bench, the poor fellow stated that he was born at Brierley Hill, that his father and mother were dead, that he subsequently lived with his uncle, Henry Jones, who lived at the APPLE TREE INN, Oldbury Green, near West Bromwich, and that a short time since he visited his uncle and asked him for sixpence, which he refused him. He had not been long in his present state. He added, ‘It is our Wake before long, and I hope to be there.’

Mr. Superintendent Lund stated that on the previous evening the man knocked down a gentleman in Warwick Street, and said he was the devil.”

“At the Oldbury Police Court, yesterday, an application was made by Mr. Richards, of the APPLE TREE INN, secretary of the Licensed Victuallers’ Association of the town and district, for an extension of the hours of keeping open licensed houses during the three days of the wake, on Saturday, Monday, and Tuesday. The application was opposed by the Local Board of Health, the ministers of religion, the local Good Templars, and by one or two religious societies. The Rev. W. T. Taylor, vicar of Oldbury, presented a petition on behalf of the Come and Welcome Lodge of the I.O.G.T., requesting the magistrates not to grant any lengthening of the hours, or any extra facilities for the sale of intoxicating drinks. He said that although not a Good Templar himself he sympathised with them in their wish to diminish intemperance, and he thought any lengthening of the hours of keeping open would be an evil, for the present hours were quite sufficient for all practical purposes.....

The Bench retired for deliberation, and on their return Mr. Adkins said that hitherto the magistrates had granted every application for an extension of hours on similar occasions. But he reminded the licensed victuallers that previously there had been no opposition to the extension. They had discussed the matter carefully, and had come to the conclusion that they could not grant any extension.”

Worcestershire Chronicle 12/4/1879

“Worcestershire Easter Quarter Sessions.....

James Adams, (49), puddler, was indicted for uttering a false florin to Sarah Jones, of the FOUNTAIN INN, Oldbury, on the 22nd of February. Mr. Streeten prosecuted.

The prisoner offered the florin in payment for some beer. He pleaded that he did not know it was a bad florin; but it appeared that he afterwards offered the same coin to another publican, Joseph Parkes, the same night. Parkes bit a piece out of it. Prisoner said that he got the florin in change for a sovereign at the APPLE TREE INN, but the landlord of that house denied that change was given to the prisoner. Now he said he got the coin among his wages.

Guilty; sentenced to nine months’ hard labour.

Maria Jones (44), charwoman, with whom the last prisoner lived, was indicted for uttering a counterfeit half-crown. She offered it in payment for some bread, &c, and was identified as the person who had twice endeavoured to pass counterfeit florins.

Swindon Advertiser 7/5/1892

“On Tuesday afternoon Mr. E. Docker (coroner) resumed the adjourned inquest at the APPLE TREE INN, Halesowen Street, Oldbury, relative to the death of Alfred Frederick Steventon, aged six months, whose mother, a single woman, resides in Canal Street. Mr. Corrie Grant, of London, appeared for the mother, and Dr. Acland represented the Royal Commission on Vaccination.

Elizabeth Steventon, the mother, stated that the child was healthy up to the time it was vaccinated by Dr. Lyddon. There seemed to be a lot of corruption underneath the scab, and as the corruption worked out the scab sank in. In all four of the marks there were holes in the child’s arms large enough to get her finger in. On the Tuesday after Christmas she went to Dr. Lyddon’s surgery. Up to that date the doctor had not prescribed any treatment for the child's arm. She asked the doctor what was the best thing she could do for the child's arm, and he told her to apply cold spring water. She did so, and in about a fortnight after Dr. Lyddon said the arm was getting well. The running of the sore wholly ceased about five weeks before death, but a blue mark appeared round the circle, and Dr. Lyddon gave her some lotion. About a week afterwards the child's arm appeared to be well. She took him to Dr. Lyddon's surgery a day or two before his death. Mr. Short, the assistant, examined him, and said that deceased would gradually pine away. On Saturday, the 16th inst, deceased had a fit, and he never properly recovered from it. He died about a quarter to five o'clock on the following Sunday morning.

Dr. Lyddon, at this point, presented the vaccination return, which showed that deceased was vaccinated on the 23rd December, 1891.

In answer to Dr. Acland, witness said she weaned the deceased when he was five weeks old, and from that time he was fed on bread and water and brandy. When she first noticed the arm it was not inflamed below the elbow. An abscess formed under the armpit as large as a small nut, and continued to discharge for several weeks. There was also a lump behind the ear, which discharged very badly.

In reply to Mr. Grant, witness stated that sometimes Dr. Lyddon was not at home, and then his wife would mix the medicine.

Amelia Cannon stated that the mother of deceased lived with her on the Saturday previous to the child's death, but witness had previously taken control of the child out of kindness to the mother.

At this point the enquiry, which had lasted three hours, was adjourned until May 5."

Worcester Journal 7/5/1892

"Mr. E. Docker yesterday resumed an inquest at the TALBOT HOTEL, Oldbury, relative to the death of Alfred Frederick Steventon, aged six months. Deceased was alleged to have died from vaccination. Mr. Grant appeared for the mother, and Dr. Acland represented the Royal Commission on Vaccination. Witnesses stated that about a fortnight after vaccination the arm began to swell, and that the child never recovered from the effects of vaccination.

Dr. Cunningham deposed to making a post mortem examination of the body on the 19th ult. Death was in his opinion due to inflammation of the lungs, brought on by improper feeding and neglect. He did not think vaccination had anything to do with the cause of death.

Mr. Grant addressed the jury, and suggested that vaccination was the indirect cause of death. The child, being previously weakened by the effects of vaccination, was ultimately killed by inflammation of the lungs. The Coroner, having summed up at considerable length, the jury returned a verdict to the effect that the child died from inflammation of the lungs. They did not think vaccination was the cause of death, but were of opinion that the vaccination had tended to weaken the system of the child, so that it could not battle with the inflammation.

The enquiry lasted seven hours."

“The adjourned principal meeting of the Licensing Committee for the County of Worcester was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, on Saturday, Mr. J. Willis Bund presiding. The sixteen houses reported by the Oldbury Justices were considered, and the committee ultimately decided that all the licenses were unnecessary. As they were not aware how far the compensation money would go, the committee arranged the houses in order, and as many of the licenses as possible will be done away with. The order is as follows.....

1. APPLE TREE, Halesowen Street.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 10/8/1905

“The Worcestershire Licensing Committee having decided to refuse fifteen Oldbury licenses, as the amount of the compensation fund available allows, sat yesterday at the Shire Hall, Worcester, to decide who are the persons entitled to compensation.....

In the case of the APPLE TREE INN, Mary Griffiths (owner), Messrs. Showells Brewery Company(licensees), Frederick Wright, Cheltenham (first mortgagee), and the trustees under a settlement (second mortgagees) were declared to be the persons interested. Mr. Milward contended that the persons entitled under the settlement should be named, but the court held that those persons must look to the trustees.”

Birmingham Mail 22/12/1905

“An important memorandum has been issued by the inland revenue commissioners affecting the basis of compensation for licensed houses which have been compulsorily closed. It will be remembered that fifteen such houses were refused the renewal of licenses at Oldbury, and the question of compensation was argued by counsel before the Worcestershire Licensing Committee a few weeks ago. That committee intimated that the rent was the basis upon which the compensation should be assessed, but counsel urged that this was preposterous. The claimants preferred to leave the matter to the decision of the inland revenue commissioners. The latter have sent a letter to the committee, upholding its view that the rent should be the basis, allowing nothing for the trade done on the premises or to the brewers for tied houses. The Commissioners say that the computation of the sum to be paid in any case requires the determination of three factors, namely, the value of the licensed premises, the depreciation in value of the trade fixtures, and the value of the premises without the license. They have, as a rule, capitalised the annual value of the licensed premises upon the four per cent basis, or at twenty-five years’ purchase, and only exceeded this in cases where there was a distinct prospect of improved annual value, and only fallen below it where there was evidence to suggest that the present value could not be maintained in future. They have employed surveyors of taxes to take estimates of the probable annual value of premises when deprived of their licenses, and of the probable number of years’ purchase of such annual value that premises would fetch, an allowance being made for the cost of the alterations necessary to fit the premises for earning the annual value as estimated. Accordingly, although exact figures have not yet been received, the amounts payable for the Oldbury houses above referred to may be given approximately as follows.....

APPLE TREE, £550.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 6/3/1906

“A meeting of the Worcester Licensing Committee was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, yesterday, to consider the awards made by the Commissioner of Inland Revenue, determining the amounts to be paid as compensation to owners, holders, or others interested in the non-renewal of licenses in the Oldbury division..... The licenses refused and the amount of compensation awarded in each case was as follows.....

APPLE TREE, Halesowen Street, £1,085.

The committee made awards as follows.....

APPLE TREE, £352 10s to the licensed lessees, Showells’ Brewery Company, and £732 10s to the owner, Mary Griffiths.

Payment of the compensation money was fixed to take place on March 28.”

The license was extinguished on 4th April 1906.

Birmingham Journal 13/3/1858

“On Wednesday afternoon an inquest on the body of James Mullens was held at the house of Mr. G. G. Cardo, the OLD INN, Evehill, before the Coroner, W. Robinson, Esq. and a Jury, of which Mr. John Watson was the foreman.

Timothy Mullens, the brother of the deceased, was the principal witness examined, and he said: I and my brother James worked at Mr. Round’s colliery, at Tividale, as miners. We were at work there on Friday night, the 26th of February, and on leaving work at about seven on Saturday morning, we went to Mr. Pratt’s public house, near the colliery, and remained there drinking till about twelve o’clock. We then left and went to the house of Mr. Timothy Thomas, the ASH TREE, also at Tividale, where we had more ale, and we remained there till between three and four o’clock. We then left, in company with two other men, and a little way along the road we overtook a man with a horse and cart coming towards Dudley. I and another man (not my brother) said something to the carter which led to blows, and I and my brother struck him. The carter, however, drove on, and we thought it was all settled, and we went on; but one of the two men having stayed a little behind I turned back, and observed him running towards us from a crowd of persons in the road who had come up to him. In doing so he fell down, and I and my brother and the other man went back to him. On reaching him, he was surrounded by the crowd of men referred to, who were striking him as he lay on the ground, but I cannot say whether with their fists or with sticks. I believe I commenced striking some of my companion’s assailants in order to rescue him; and after the fight we went to another public house called the GATE, where we remained probably an hour, then came straight to Dudley. I believe my brother took part in both fights; but I did not see anybody strike him at all. He seemed to be in good health on Saturday morning and went to work on the Monday following, but he complained of being stiff and said he was very bad. He finished his days’ work at three o’clock, and then came home. I saw him on Wednesday, and he was then ill, and continued so until he died on Monday night. Neither he nor I was sober when the fighting took place. I do not know the names of the other men engaged in the quarrelling, but I know that the man who drove the cart was employed by Messrs. Hopkins and Bradley.

The evidence of Mr. James Fisher, surgeon, was to the effect that he attended the deceased on Wednesday, the 3rd instant. The latter complained much of pain in the head and side and other parts of his body, and he also vomited very much. His left eye was black, and there were bruises on his cheek, shoulder, and side. The skin was knocked off the whole of the knuckles of the left hand and some off the right, and he was partially delirious. He told him (Mr. Fisher) he was in a row on the Saturday before. Mr. Fisher continued his attendance on each of the five subsequent days. From the post mortem examination which he made on Tuesday he found the left lung very much diseased indeed. There was no fracture of any kind, and the cause of death was clearly inflammation of the left lung, which might have been produced by various causes, such as cold, or a fall, or a blow, or by all combined. The inflammation might have commenced either before or subsequent to the Saturday.

The wife of Timothy Mullens said she saw one of the crowd strike the deceased with a pike-helve several times. The fight originated in her opinion from the row with the carter

The Coroner pointed out to the witness Timothy the senseless folly of sending so much of his time in public houses, and then addressing himself to the Jury said that with such evidence as Mr. Fisher had given it was impossible that any person could be convicted of manslaughter, and therefore that it was not necessary that additional evidence should be obtained to the identity of the men who struck the deceased.

The Jury then gave a verdict of died from inflammation of the lungs, but how or by what means that inflammation was caused does not appear in the evidence.”

By Mr. S. Powell, at the house of Mr. Timothy Thomas, the ASH TREE INN, Tividale, Tomorrow (Tuesday) the 6th of July, at Six o’clock in the evening – Five Freehold Dwelling Houses, situate in Chapel Street, Tividale.”

County Advertiser 5/11/1859

“On Monday, the 17th ult, the attention of the police was directed to certain disturbances at Tividale, caused by the holding of foot races, at which a large number of disorderly characters – extending along the turnpike road upwards of a mile – assembled from the entire district for many miles around. These ‘races,’ which appear to have been the occasion for drinking and its accompanying evils, led to various excesses, which resulted in the interference of the police.....

A charge was also brought against Timothy Thomas, landlord of the ASHTREE public house, Tividale, for allowing drunken conduct in his house on the same day – the occasion of the races. This charge was also proved by Police-constables Denholme and Torr. The Bench, after a patient attention to the evidence, fined the defendant (for whom Mr. Lowe appeared) 5s and costs.”

"The report of the case in which Thomas Bowater, a miner, was examined before the Dudley Bench, on the charge of having caused the death of William Brazenall, in the New Road, on Sunday morning last, was given in the Daily Post of yesterday, on which day Mr. E. Hooper, the Coroner, held an inquest on the body of the deceased, at the house of Mr. T. Thomas, the ASH TREE INN, Chapel Street. Similar testimony to that given was given before the Magistrates having been adduced, the Jury found a verdict of Accidental Death. The accused had been liberated on his own recognisances by the Dudley Magistrates, who heard the case on Monday."

Worcestershire Chronicle 10/2/1864

"On Saturday morning, just before one o'clock, a man named William Brazenall, who resided in Chapel Street, Tividale was knocked down on the Birmingham Road, near to the Dudley railway bridge. It would appear that deceased, on running down the hill, accidentally came against a man named Thomas Bowater, who was coming from Tipton in a state of intoxication. Bowater put his hand forward to save himself, and they both fell. Brazenall was severely hurt by the fall or the collision, and died in a few hours afterwards."

"At the Police Court, Benjamin Wiley, a police-constable stationed at Tividale, was charged with assaulting John Griffiths, a carter, belonging to the same place. Mr. Stokes appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. Shakespeare defended. The case occupied the Court for a considerable time.

The evidence of prosecutor, which was in some respects borne out by a witness, was to the effect that he was going into the ASH TREE public house, Tividale, at a few minutes to twelve o'clock on the night of the 7th inst. Defendant came to him and told him to go home. On his refusing to do so, the defendant pushed him down the steps, and then struck him a blow on the head with a stick. Witness was quite sober.

The witnesses were subjected to a long cross-examination by Mr. Shakespeare, and the answers given by the complainant were not altogether satisfactory.

A summons had been taken out against Griffiths for assaulting Wiley at the same time, and another for alleged disorderly conduct. Three or four of Griffiths's relatives, who took part in the row, were also summoned to answer similar complaints. Before any evidence was called, however, the Bench said that as it was a trifling affair, the case against the policeman would be dismissed, and the charges preferred by the police would be withdrawn."

County Advertiser 26/8/1865

"At the Police Court, on Wednesday, Thomas Smith, landlord of the ASH TREE INN, Tividale, was charged with unlawfully permitting gambling in his house, on the 19th inst. Mr. Shakespeare, who appeared on the part of the prosecution, asked for a heavy fine, as the defendant had himself taken part in the gambling. Police-constable Daulman stated that about nine o'clock in the evening of the day named he visited defendant's house in plain clothes. In one of the rooms he found a party engaged in the game of 'ringing the bull.' He also saw the defendant receive money he had won from one of the players. Police-constable Wiley came in soon after, and the game was at once stopped. After Wiley had left the game was resumed; and witness heard defendant say that if he met Wiley in the dark he would 'make it hot for him.'

In answer to the Bench, the police gave the house a bad character.

The defendant admitted that gambling had taken place, but vehemently protested that he had not taken any part in it.

Fined 40s and costs."

"At the County Court, yesterday, Mr. Watson (Watson and Topham) applied for an order of committal against John Collis Smith, beerhouse keeper, of Wednesbury, for non-obedience to a judgement given against him in the Dudley County Court, at the suit of Isaac Cohen, furniture dealer and jeweller, Birmingham.

The plaintiff's case was that prior to June last he sold a gold watch to the defendant – who, at that time, was keeping the ASH TREE INN, at Tividale – for £20, the arrangement being that the purchase money should be paid at the rate of 10s per fortnight. The arrangement was faithfully adhered to for some time, but at last the payments were discontinued, and the defendant was sued in the Dudley County Court, in the name of Thomas Smith, plaintiff having all along known him by that name. Before the case came on for hearing, defendant consented to judgement being entered against him for payment at the rate agreed upon in the first instance, and actually paid one sovereign, but before the second became due he had removed to Wednesbury with his family. When an execution was issued he stated that his name was John Collis Smith, and that the watch and chain must have been supplied to his son Thomas. Mr. Watson accordingly applied that 'John Collis' should be substituted for 'Thomas' in the judgement, and that the defendant should be committed.

Mr. Dale, who appeared for defendant, objected to his Honour making any alteration in an order from the Dudley Court.

His Honour remarked that it was not necessary for him to send the defendant to prison in any other manner than that in which he had been sued. The order might, therefore, remain as it was.

Witnesses were then called.

The plaintiff positively denied that he had ever had any transactions with the defendant's son Thomas, or that the instalments of the purchase money were ever paid to him by anyone but the defendant's wife (for whom he was told the watch was bought) or the defendant himself. The defendant had, too, always negotiated with him with reference to the suit on his own behalf and not on behalf of his son.

For the defence the defendant swore that the watch and chain were not ordered by him, or intended for his wife, and that, although the instalments due to Mr. Cohen were sometimes paid by himself, sometimes by his daughters, and sometimes by his wife, they were always made for his son Thomas.

In cross-examination he admitted that before he went to live at Tividale he kept the Horse Shoes Inn, at Kings Norton, where he was unfortunate, his furniture being sold under a distress for rent, and he became bankrupt. His son, Thomas, then took the house at Tividale, defendant finding the greater part of the furniture, with money which he obtained from relatives, and with his wife and daughters attending to the business while his son was at work at Smethwick. He also paid three quarters rent for his son. Business fell off after a time, and his son gave up the house, defendant then buying the business, which he still has at Wednesbury, and taking with him some chairs which his son had had from Mr. Cohen.

Defendant's son Thomas corroborated this statement, declaring that he ordered the watch and chain, and wore them until his difficulties induced him to sell them to a man named Thomas, who had gone abroad. He did not wish to dispute the debt, but was anxious to pay if the plaintiff would only take a moderate sum per month until he got work again.

His Honour said his impression was that the whole affair was a juggle between the defendant and his son. He had no more doubt than if had been present of the scheme which was concocted between them, and he should make an order of committal, not to be executed for three months. Order made accordingly. The case occupied the Court between four and five hours."

"Henry Cooke, Denis Clapham, and Thomas Street, three young men, living in the Dudley Road, Tividale, were charged with assaulting Edward Read and William Read, at West Bromwich, on the 25th inst, and stealing from the person of Edward Read the sum of £2 5s, and a watch and chain. Mr. Stokes defended. The prosecutors are father and son, and it appeared from the evidence adduced that on the night of the 25th inst, they were drinking at the ASH TREE INN, Tividale. The three prisoners with others were present, and William Read 'stood in' with Cooke in some tossing that took place. This was succeeded by a conversation between Read and Cooke; and high words ensuing Read challenged Cooke to fight. Subsequently the prisoners left the house, and a few minutes afterwards the prosecutors followed in company with Mr. Attwood, the landlord of the ASH TREE INN, who quitted them after he had walked a short distance. They proceeded on through Tividale tunnel, when on a sudden they came in contact with five men, three of whom were the prisoners. They were set upon, and beaten, and the elder Read was knocked senseless to the ground. His son, who received several blows upon the face, seized Cooke, and drew him to the mouth of the tunnel, whereupon one of the other prisoners cried out to Cooke, 'Don't let him go, settle him.' Read, the younger, believing that his father had been killed, hurried to the police station at Greets Green, West Bromwich, and fetched a policeman. On returning to the tunnel, however, they saw nothing of the prisoners, but met the father who had recovered his senses. He told them that he had missed his watch and purse, which contained £2 10s in gold and silver, and that he knew the men who had taken them.

In cross-examination the prosecutors swore that they were sober when they left the public house.

Samuel Spicer, a labourer, of Tividale, said he was in the ASH TREE INN, on the night in question. Cooke in company with Clapham and Street came to him and asked him 'If he would be one in this mess.' On the witness asking for an explanation, Cooke said he meant to rob Read. Witness told them that he had some money without doing that. He saw Cooke the next morning, and the latter said to him, 'I have done the deed that I was talking to you about last night.'

Thomas Edwards, miner, Tividale, said Cooke had invited him to come and help to rob Read. Three of them had made a bargain, and they wanted him to go.

Benjamin Attwood, landlord of the ASH TREE INN, was called as a witness, and he stated that he accompanied the Reads a part of the way home, because from a rumour afloat he suspected that an attack would be made upon them.

Police-constable Robinson, of West Bromwich, and Police-constable Winfield, of Tividale, gave evidence as to the arrest of the prisoners, and stated that in answer to the charge each of them denied having had anything to do in the matter. A search made upon their persons and in their houses revealed nothing to connect them with the offence.

The prisoners pleaded not guilty, and were committed to take their trial at the Assizes. Bail was allowed."

Staffordshire Sentinel 31/1/1881

"Staffordshire Winter Assizes.....

Harry Cook, Dennis Clapham, and Thomas Street, young men, surrendered to their bail and were now arraigned on an indictment charging them with feloniously assaulting Edward Read, on the 25th of December, at Rowley Regis, and stealing from his person the sum of £2 5s, one watch, and one purse, his property. Mr. Amphlett appeared as counsel for the prosecution; Mr. Darling defended the prisoners Cook and Street; and Mr. Brindley appeared for Clapham.

For the prosecution it was urged that on Christmas Eve the prosecutor and his son were drinking at a public house called the ASH TREE, at Rowley Regis. After having been there about three hours – the prisoners being also in the house – the prosecutor and his son left, and walked down the road, three quarters of a mile, when they came to a tunnel under the railway and canal. The prosecutor, soon after entering the tunnel, was set upon by four or five men – as being among whom he positively swore to the prisoners – who robbed him of his money, to the amount mentioned; his watch and his purse, and brutally ill-used both him and his son. Cook, it was contended, had previously been heard deliberately planning the outrage to the other men.

When the case for the prosecution had closed, and Mr. Darling was about to address the jury for his clients, the learned Judge asked the opinion of the jury as to the strength of the case against the prisoners Street and Clapham. The only evidence against them and that on which they were asked to convict, was the assertion of the elder Read that he could identify them eighteen yards down a dark tunnel on a Christmas night, when there was no moon – not by their voices, which he had heard, he said, in the public house, but by their appearance. He put it to the jury whether, as rational men, they could believe such a statement, and thought it safe to convict upon.

The jury consulted for a few moments after hearing the remarks of the learned Judge, and ultimately coming to the conclusion that the evidence against Clapham and Street was not clear and satisfactory, acquitted them.

Mr. Darling then addressed the jury on behalf of the prisoner Cook, urging that, as in the case of the other prisoners, the evidence evidently was not conclusive against him, and arguing that, apart from the light in the tunnel being insufficient for the purpose of recognition, the elder Read was so drunk that he did not know what he was about, and could not therefore, with any certainty, swear to the prisoner as being one of the men who assaulted him.

The learned Judge summed up to the jury at great length, and finally they acquitted the prisoner."

“On Tuesday Mr. Edwin Hooper (South Staffordshire coroner) held an inquest at the ASH TREE INN, Tividale, Rowley Regis, respecting the death of John Thomas Martin (6), who was found drowned in the Birmingham Canal. When playing with a schoolfellow the deceased accidentally fell into the canal, and was drowned, although efforts were made to rescue him. A verdict of Accidental Death was returned.”

Birmingham Daily Post 12/11/1885

“Three police constables, named Winfield, Mountney, and Smith, were charged at Old Hill Police Court, yesterday, with having committed perjury in a case heard at that court in June last, in which a man named Midian Evans and three others were convicted of being the principals in a cock-fight at Tividale. A number of witnesses were called who swore that Evans was not present at the cock-fight, and that at the time it was taking place he was in the ASH TREE INN, Tividale. After a prolonged hearing the case was adjourned until the 20th inst.”

County Express 21/11/1885

“At the Old Hill Police Court, yesterday, before Messrs. W. Bassano, W. Holcroft, and J. Walker, the three police-constables, Winfield, Mountney, and Smith, were charged on adjourned summonses with having committed wilful and corrupt perjury in connection with some prosecutions for cock fighting in June last. The details of the former hearing were given in our issue of Saturday last. No one appeared yesterday to continue the prosecution, and the magistrates said that there was really no additional evidence to offer, and that the summonses would be dismissed; the prosecution had completely failed to make out cases, and there was nothing whatever to show that the police officers had committed perjury. The magistrates further ordered the depositions to be sent to the Public Prosecutor in order that proceedings may be taken against several of the witnesses for perjury.”

Birmingham Daily Post 30/3/1886

“Mr. E. Hooper (coroner) held an inquest yesterday, at the ASH TREE INN, Dudley Road, Tividale, relative to the death of a female child, not identified, whose body was found in a canal basin at Tividale, on Wednesday last.

A girl named Alice Tunley stated that on the day named, whilst she was playing near the canal, her attention was called to something which was floating near the side. It proved to be the body of a child, and a lad named John Cox pulled it out of the water by a piece of pack cord which was tied loosely round its neck. The police were fetched, and the body was removed to a public house. When the witness saw the body it was quite naked, and there was no cloth or paper near it.

Mr. E. Price stated that he had made a post mortem examination of the body. The child was born alive, and was now in an advanced state of decomposition, having been dead probably between a week and a fortnight. There were no external marks of violence of the body, but he discovered a large swelling on the back of the head, which was not discoloured, and which he found was a large clot of blood. This had been evidently caused by a blow, and could not well be the effect of a fall. There was no evidence of strangulation or suffocation, and the cause of death was shock, resulting from the severe injury to the back of the head.

Police-constable Winfield said he had made enquiries about the child, but had failed to obtain any further evidence. The police officer produced the cord which was round the child's neck, and pointed out that there was a loop in the loose end which might have been made for the purpose of attaching a brick to it.

The Coroner said he did not think the jury could do otherwise than return a verdict of wilful murder against some person or persons unknown on the evidence they had before them. The police could still go on prosecuting their enquiries, and if further action was necessary it might be taken by magistrates.

The jury concurred, and a verdict was accordingly returned of Wilful Murder against some person or persons unknown.”

“Samuel Baker, landlord of the ASH TREE INN, Dudley Road, Tividale, was charged with selling ale during prohibited hours, on the 11th inst.

Police-constable McDermott said that at half-past two on Saturday morning he saw two men come from the back of the defendant’s house with a bottle containing four quarts of beer. One of the men, Samuel Onions said the beer was ordered before eleven o’clock. The other man ran away.

The defendant said the men, who were puddlers, came to his house almost fainting in consequence of the heat, and witness thought he was doing his duty in supplying the beer. Defendant was fined 20s and costs.”

Thomas Hawthorne, father of the deceased, said his son left home about 11am on the 16th of February for the purpose of going with a companion to the Jubilee Colliery, Tividale. He heard no more of him until his body was found.

Ebenezer Morris said he was with the deceased, at the GEORGE AND DRAGON INN at 9pm on the 16th of February, and at that time deceased was drunk.

The jury returned a verdict of Found Dead.”

“Thomas Smith, Providence Street, Great Bridge, and Sampson Boon, Great Bridge Street, West Bromwich, were charged with stealing two pigeons, the property of Samuel Baker, landlord of the ASH TREE, Tividale, on the 13th inst.

Prosecutor said he left his pigeons in the yard safe on the morning in question. At nine o’clock the same night the pigeons were gone.

Isaiah Baker, son of prosecutor, said he saw the defendants in the yard at his father’s house, near to the pigeon pen. He missed the pigeons about an hour after.

Police-constable Winfield arrested the defendants, and found the two pigeons under their shirts.

Boon was fined 20s and costs, and Smith was sentenced to one month’s imprisonment.”

It was stated that deceased had often expressed a desire to learn to swim, and had frequently remarked to his brother-in-law that the pool in which his body was found was a nice place to bathe in.

George Quinton, brother-in-law of the deceased, said he had accompanied Sheldon to the pool previously, and they had sent the dog into the water. He was of opinion that deceased stripped and entered the pool for the purpose of bathing, and, being unable to swim, was drowned.

County Advertiser 5/12/1896

“On Tuesday morning, Mr. A. A. Betham (deputy coroner), held an inquest at the ASH TREE INN, Tivdale, concerning the death of Edwin Butler (48), blacksmith, formerly residing at Chapel Street, Tivdale, who died on the 26th of November from the effects of injuries received whilst following his employment at Messrs. Round’s Furnaces, Tivdale, on the 20th ult.

Clara Butler, wife of deceased, identified the body, and said deceased worked at Messrs. Round’s Furnaces, Tivdale. On the 20th of November, he went to his work as usual in good health. When he returned home at 5-30 witness said she thought he had been working over, but he replied that he had hurt himself. He said he was lifting a plate, when he slipped and fell on his right side. He complained of much pain, but there was no bruise on his side. At 5-30 the next morning deceased endeavoured to get up to go to his work, but he could not do so. Witness suggested that she should call in a doctor, but he said he would wait to see if he got better. On the 21st ult witness took him to Dr. Lyddon’s, at Oldbury.

The Coroner: It was very foolish of you to take the deceased in such a state to the doctor. Why did you not call in a doctor to him? – Witness: It was his wish that he should go to the doctor.

Deceased began to grow worse on Monday night, and complained of the pain in his side. Witness sent for Dr. Lyddon on Tuesday morning, but he came in the afternoon. The doctor examined deceased, and said it was a bad wrench he had sustained. On Wednesday he still continued to grow worse, and as Dr. Lyddon did not come before afternoon, she called in Dr. Price, who immediately came and made an examination of deceased. He said there were no ribs broken, but some bone had been displaced, causing an internal bruise. On Wednesday deceased was very wild, and was raving about his work and the plates, and it took two persons to carefully watch him. He died at 4-30 on Thursday afternoon. Deceased said he asked Mr. Hewitt, in the employ of the firm, to have someone to help him, as he had got a heavy job on. Mr. Hewitt said they must work together, meaning deceased and the other workmen.

Edwin Butler, son of deceased, said he was a striker, and helped his father at Messrs. Round’s works. On the 20th of November deceased was cutting boiler plates. He had been previously engaged on the same kind of work. Witness and deceased were engaged in carrying the plates when one of them suddenly twisted and deceased slipped and fell down. The plate struck deceased on the side, and he said the pain was very severe. Dr. Charles Lyddon said he saw deceased on the 21st of November. Witness examined him carefully, and considered that the deceased was very ill, and was suffering from a sprain of his side, and a severe cold. Witness gave him some medicine for influenza. He was very ill, and suffering from inflammation of the lungs on the 24th ult. He thought that deceased died from pneumonia, following influenza.

William Wall, an employe of Messrs. Round, said he was helping deceased and his son on the 20th of November, but he did not see any accident occur or any plates twist. Deceased did not complain of a bad cough the day before the accident occurred.

Police-constable Robinson said he had made inquiries, and found that deceased had been ill for some time, and complained of pains to his fellow workmen.

The coroner said there was strange conflict of evidence, as two medical men saw deceased before his death, he thought it would be advisable to adjourn the inquest for Dr. Price’s attendance, and in the mean time he would order a post mortem examination of the body to be made.

The inquest was adjourned until Tuesday next.”

County Advertiser 12/12/1896

“On Tuesday afternoon Mr. A. A. Betham (deputy coroner) resumed the adjourned inquest on the body of Edwin Butler (48), blacksmith, formerly residing at Chapel Street, Tividale, who died under strange circumstances, at the ASH TREE INN, Dudley Road, Tividale. Mr. J. Jackson, Her Majesty's Inspector of Factories and Workshops, was present, Mr. J. Round appeared on behalf of Messrs. Round Bros. Mr. S. Hopper, of Dudley, represented the widow of the deceased.

The Coroner said the inquiry was adjourned for a post mortem examination.

Dr. Edwin Price, of Dudley Port, said he made a post mortem examination of the body on the 2nd inst. He found undoubted signs of inflammation of both lungs, and pleurisy of both sides. The heart was also affected. There was no signs of influenza or any internal injury. He considered that deceased died from pleuro-pneumonia.

In reply to Mr. Hooper he said he had never attended deceased before. When witness examined deceased he did not say that he had been to a supper the night before the accident, and he was as well as ever. What he did say was that he was fairly well. Deceased did not seem as if he had been neglected.

It then transpired that Dr. Lyddon signed a form from Messrs. Rounds works, and gave it to deceased's son. The Coroner asked for the production of the form, and Mr. Hewitt, clerk at the works, was despatched for it. On the form being produced the Coroner said it was signed by Dr. Lyddon, and showed that deceased was suffering from an injury and was disabled from work.

A juryman asked Dr. Lyddon why he made that declaration.

Dr. Lyddon: The man complained of the injury and I put it on the form. He examined him and gave him some lotion, and as the man was weak he did it in a charitable way, thinking that he would benefit by it.

Questioned by the Coroner as to whether that was the usual course, he replied that it was. He was, however, firmly of opinion that deceased died from pneumonia, and that the accident had nothing whatever to do with the man's death.

Deceased's son brought the note which referred to the employers' liability.

Mr. J. Round said if deceased had met with an accident he would receive 10s per week from the office, and £50 could be claimed by his widow at his death. He saw deceased's son, after the accident was supposed to have occurred, and he said his father was suffering from a severe cold.

The Coroner said the jury had only to consider how deceased came by his death.

After deliberation for some time the jury returned a verdict in accordance with the medical evidence.

At the conclusion of the inquest Dr. Price said there was a great need for a public mortuary at Tividale, especially when doctors had to make post mortem examinations.

The Coroner said he was informed that the only mortuary in Tividale was at the infectious hospital, and that was not a nice place for post mortem examinations to be made.

Dr. Price: The nearest mortuary is at Tipton.

The Coroner said he would forward his recommendation to the proper authorities."

Thomas Bennett, a brother, stated that he was with the deceased on the morning of the 27th ult, and they had four whiskies together, during which deceased remarked, 'We may not meet another Christmas.' The next time he saw him he was dead.

Samuel Bennett said deceased told him to fetch the dog to take to a coursing match, but when he returned with the dog deceased had gone.

Joseph Bunn stated that he met the deceased at 11.30 on the 27th ult, and they walked together to Oakham.

On arriving at the railway bridge deceased said, 'You can go to the coursing meeting yourself; I shall go no further.' In the evening, as the deceased was missing, he went in the direction of Barbers Pool, and found the deceased's hat hanging on a thorn bush, and underneath it was a coat. In a pocket was a paper, on which was written the deceased's name and address. He gave information to the police. Police-constable Robinson said he dragged the pool in consequence of information received, and at a depth of fifteen yards recovered the deceased's body. Dr. Price said death was due to drowning. It was stated that four or five persons had committed suicide in the same pool. The jury returned a verdict of Suicide during Temporary Insanity."

"The circumstances surrounding the tragic death of a pretty twenty-year-old Tividale girl were investigated on Saturday afternoon by the South Staffordshire Coroner (Mr. W. C. The deceased was Lilian Maud Murray, of 307, Dudley Road, Tividale, who was found in a deep pool known locally as 'Barber's Rest Pool,' near Oakham, Rowley Regis, on 18th November.

Mary Ann Murray, wife of William Henry Murray, a labourer, identified the body as that of her daughter. The deceased was 20 years of age and had been employed as a machinist at the Cable Accessories Co. Ltd., Tividale. She had always been a very healthy girl and had always appeared to be cheerful, although of a quiet disposition. She came home to dinner at about 12.40pm on the date in question, and after dinner she left home at 1.25pm with the object of returning to work. She took with her a thermos flask containing tea. She then appeared to be in her usual spirits. Witness expected deceased to be home about 5.40pm, but she did not return. When witness went into deceased's bedroom later in the evening, about 9pm, she saw a handkerchief box on the dressing table, in which she found a note in deceased's handwriting. Alarmed by the contents of the note, witness went to the police station and gave information to the authorities. It has since come to witness's knowledge that the deceased had had some tickets to sell for a dance which was held at the Cable Accessories canteen some time ago, and that she had failed to hand the money for them to the promoter. The name of the man was mentioned in the letter by deceased, but he was not known to witness. She understood that deceased had not been out with the man for the past two years.

Albert E. Fletcher (19), labourer, of 10, Oakham, Dudley, said that about 4.30pm, on November 18th, he was walking on a public footpath at the side of a deep pool of water known as 'Barber's Rest,' situated about 100 yards from the Oakham Road, when he saw a thermos and a lady's hat on the bank about a yard from the edge of the water. Witness looked into the water, but could see no one, and so he took the flask and the hat to the police station.

PC C. T. Hill stated that about 10am on the following day, in company with PC Taylor, he commenced dragging operations at the pool in question. About half an hour later he recovered the deceased from about 20 feet of water. The body was fully clothed with the exception of the hat. Witness examined the bank at the side but could find no signs of a struggle. He removed the body to the mortuary.

In answer to the coroner, witness said he had no doubt that death was due to drowning. There were no signs of injury about the body.

The letter left by the deceased was read by the Coroner. It was as follows:

'Dear Mother. Do not blame me when you read this. It is temptation, mother, and this is the only way out. I know there must be an end of it, and this is the coward's way out. But then, mother, what could you expect from the black sheep of the family? I could not stand it any longer. I know it will wrong you, but I am in debt everywhere. Do not pay it, mother. If they find me after you will grant me my only wish, I hope, and that is to ask Mr. — to follow me at my funeral, because it will be the only one I love. Always remember me as your daughter, mother. I am heart-broken, and there is above one tear on this letter. Please remember me to my friends, if I have any.'

The letter concluded with, 'You were a good mother and dad to me,' the mother and dad being underlined. The letter was signed, 'Your loving daughter, Lil,' and several crosses were appended.

The coroner asked the mother if she could account for her deceased daughter calling herself the 'black sheep of the family.' Mrs. Murray said that she could not. She had always idolised her daughter.

The Coroner: Then that is pure imagination? – Witness: Yes.

With regard to the tickets, the Coroner said he understood that the deceased had had 50s worth. She had not paid the money in to the promoters. He asked witness if there would have been any difficulty in finding the money for the deceased, had she told her of her difficulties.

Witness replied that she could have found the money for her daughter.

The Coroner said that the letter led him to the conclusion that the deceased had allowed something to prey on her mind, and that she had thrown herself into the water in a moment of mental aberration.

A verdict of Suicide whilst of Unsound Mind was recorded."

Dudley Chronicle 22/4/1926

"The South Staffordshire Coroner (Mr. W. C. Checkley) held an inquest on Friday at the ASH TREE INN, Tividale, on the death of William Cole, aged 39, a widower, who resided with his mother at the BARLEY MOW, Oakham.

Joseph Cole, a stone-sett worker, and a brother of the deceased, said the latter left for work with his horse and cart, on April 13th at 7am. At 5.15pm witness was told that his brother had met with an accident in Brades Park.

William Davies, a boy of 13 years, said at 4.20pm, on April 13, he was standing near the canal bridge in Brades Road when he saw a horse and tip-cart coming round the bend of the road. The horse was running away, and the driver was in the cart, holding the reins and trying to pull the horse up. Just before the horse reached witness he saw the driver get over the front of the cart on to the left shaft. He loosed the reins and jumped, and as he did so his feet appeared to get entangled in the reins, which caused him to fall to the ground, and a wheel went over his head. Witness went up to him, and said he was bleeding from the ears and mouth. A postman arrived and picked the deceased up.

A postman named Edward Jones gave similar evidence, and added that when he went to the man he found him unconscious. Witness moved deceased to the side of the road, and feeling his pulse, could discover no movement.

Ernest Wood, a farm labourer, who also saw the accident, said the horse was obviously running away, but what had startled it he could not say.

PC Hill said he was on duty in Dudley Road when he heard a shout and saw the horse galloping towards him and no one in charge. He tried to stop the horse, but could not do so. He saw Cole lying dead on the pavement. He examined the body, and found a fracture at the base of the skull and a fracture of the left jaw bone, and there were marks on the face, as though the wheel had passed over it. He made enquiries, but had found no one who saw the horse start.

The Coroner said that they could not tell what startled the horse. It was a sad case, and that they had to suppose that the driver thought that by keeping the reins in his hands and getting on to the shafts he had a chance of stopping the animal. He recorded a verdict of Accidental Death."

Bilston and Willenhall Times 20/10/1928

"Tipton Man's Tragic Death at Tividale. 'I am pleased that the jury have to find the verdict in this case and not myself.' This was the remark of the Coroner (Mr. Frank Cooper) to a jury at an inquest at Tividale on Monday afternoon, when some difficulty was experienced in ascertaining the true circumstances of a man's death.

The inquest, which was held at the ASH TREE INN, was on George Percival (64), a brick burner, of 36, Wellington Road, Tipton, whose body was recovered from the canal at Tividale on Friday last week.

Lily Selina Percival, the widow, stated that her husband, who had been unemployed since Easter, left home at 9.45 on Friday morning to visit Tipton Employment Exchange. He said he should be back at three o'clock. He had not been depressed, and had not complained of feeling unwell. He was always jovial.

James Brick, a boatman, of 49, Portway Road, Oldbury, who first discovered the body on Friday afternoon, said Percival was in a stooping position in about three feet of water. The water at that spot was not more than four feet deep, and a man could easily walk across the canal.

PC Haynes, who recovered the body, said there was a wound over the man's left eye, but he could not say how it was caused, and there were no marks on the towing path to suggest that Percival had fallen and injured himself. Witness had ascertained that the man received £1 4s unemployment pay from the Employment Exchange, and a sum of £1 4s 9½d was found on the body.

The Coroner said there was no doubt the man died from drowning, but it was difficult to say how he got into the water. The jury might come to the conclusion that Percival stumbled, injured himself and fell in while dazed, but he did not think the man's cap would have remained on his head if that had happened. An open verdict was an unsatisfactory one, and if they thought Percival committed suicide he (Mr. Cooper) believed they would hesitate before expressing the view that the man was of unsound mind.

After a deliberation in private, the jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death."

Dudley Chronicle 23/5/1929

"The tragic death of an Oldbury woman while travelling in a tram car on a Mothers' Union outing, was related to Mr. J. H. S. Addison (Deputy Coroner) at the inquest held at the ASH TREE INN, Tividale, on Wednesday afternoon week. The woman was Mrs. Mary Ann Downes, aged 67, who lived at 100, Broadwell Road, Oldbury. Mrs. Downes was a member of the party participating in the annual outing of the Mothers' Union, in connection with Oldbury Parish Church, which took place to Kinver, on Monday, and shortly after boarding the special tram, which she had to hurry to catch, Mrs. Downes collapsed and died immediately.

William Downes, the husband, told the Deputy Coroner that his wife's general health had not been good for about ten years, during which she had suffered from heart trouble.

Dr. Eric Mence, of Oldbury, said he knew Mrs. Downes had been suffering from heart trouble. He saw her body in the mortuary on Monday, and had since made a post mortem examination, which revealed fatty degeneration of the heart, while the aortic valves showed disease of long standing. Excitement and exertion were probably responsible for the fatal attack on Monday. Death was due to fatty degeneration and valvular disease of the heart.

The Rev. J. R. Harrison (Vicar of Oldbury) said Mrs. Downes was a member of his congregation and intended accompanying the Mothers' Union outing on Monday. It was arranged that they should meet at the Council Buildings at 12 o'clock noon, to board the special car, but Mrs. Downes was one of the late comers. It was about 12.10 when she appeared hurrying round the corner from Church Street into Freeth Street, and suddenly she slipped and fell. The fall was not a violent one, and a young man helped her up. Witness then crossed the road and helped Mrs. Downes to the car. She was short of breath and appeared distressed, though not unduly so. She boarded the car and stood on the platform at the back for time to get all the air she could. When the tramcar started, she appeared to have recovered, and witness followed the party in his motor car.

Mrs. Mary Darby, of 98, Broadwell Road, Oldbury, another member of the party, said that when Mrs. Downes appeared to have recovered from the exertion of hurrying, she asked her to sit next to her. There did not seem to be too much wrong with her, but after witness had applied some eau-de-cologne to her handkerchief she started to vomit, and expired without speaking.

The Deputy Coroner recorded a verdict in accordance with the medial testimony, and remarked that it was a particularly tragic case."

Dudley Chronicle 9/2/1933

"Now that the resignation of Mr. James B. Holden from Rowley Regis District Council is complete, the question of a successor arises. It seems certain that a contest will decide who shall next represent Tividale in his stead. Names already being mentioned as possible, even probable, candidates are those of Mr. George Osell, of Dudley Road, Tividale, and Mr. Marklow, the licensee of the ASH TREE INN, Tividale, and it is whispered that a lady candidate may take the field and that she will be none other than Mrs. J. B. Holden. Arrangements are not yet definite on either side, but these three names bring with them anticipation of keen conflict. Mr. Osell is most popular as a first division football referee, and is well known in the district. Mr. Marklow, it is understood, is to fight under the Labour flag with official support, while Mrs. Holden is probably the widest known of all....."

“At the Police Court yesterday, before Messrs. Adkin, James, and Thornton, May Ann Smith, Rood End, was charged with wilfully breaking the windows at the house of her husband, William Smith, beerhouse keeper, Rood End. A short time ago prosecutor proved his wife, the prisoner, to be an adulteress, and in consequence he turned her out of the house. The prisoner had repeatedly visited the house since, and had broken the windows on several occasions. On the 13th inst she again went to the house, and after creating a great disturbance, smashed several panes of glass in the windows. She was then given into custody. The magistrates inflicted a fine of 20s and costs, or in default, one month’s imprisonment.”

“George Round, landlord of the BARREL INN, Causeway Green, was charged by Superintendent Overend with keeping his house open during prohibited hours, on Sunday, the 19th ult. He was also charged with permitting drunkenness at the same time. Defendant pleaded not guilty to both charges. The case was proved by Police-sergeant Oliver and Police-constable Donnant, who visited the house at about 1am, on the above date, and found four men and a woman in the kitchen with a quart jug nearly full of ale. One of the men was very drunk and noisy. The Bench considered both charges proved, and inflicted a fine of 10s and costs in the first case, and 5s and costs in the other.”

“William Gould was charged that he did, by false pretences, on the 9th of April, obtain from William John Yeomans, the Secretary of a Friendly Society held at the BARREL INN, Cakemore, £1 1s 6d, contrary to the statute.

William John Yeomans deposed: I am secretary of the Friendly Brothers’ Society, held at the BARREL INN, Causeway Green, Cakemore. The prisoner was a member of the society. By the rules of the society he was entitled, on the death of a child, to the sum of sixpence from each member. On the 9th of April he applied to me for the money, stating that a child of his had died, and that he was entitled to his money, and claimed it. I refused at first to pay him, and directed him to go to the trustees, because there was not money left in my hands to pay funerals. Prisoner left me, but came back again in about an hour, and said that Mr. Durne, who is one of the trustees, said I was to pay him. I then paid him £1 1s 6d, due according to the rules. Should not have given him the money had he not stated he had lost a child, and that he was entitled to it. He previously said that if I did not pay him he should put the club into the County Court. In consequence of information received, I asked the prisoner for his certificate of marriage, and he gave me the certificate of marriage now produced, which states his wife’s maiden name to be Sarah Mason. I after found out that Sarah Mason was dead, and also that the mother of the child was living with the prisoner as his wife, and that her name is Hannah Edmonds.

William Durne deposed: I am one of the trustees of the club. On the above date the prisoner came to me and said Mr. Yeomans would not give him the money he was entitled to, and that he had a child dead. He said he must have it, for the child was going black for the want of burying. I told him if the money was due to go to Mr. Yeomans, and get it out of him, and I would see he had it back.

David Deeley deposed: I am clerk at Quinton Church, and know the prisoner and his wife. She has been dead eleven years. The certificate of marriage produced is a true extract from the book. Prisoner’s wife was buried at Northfield.

Hannah Edmunds, who is the daughter of the prisoner’s wife by another man, deposed: I have lived with the prisoner for five years, and have had three children. One is living. The child that died is five years old. The reason I have not been married is because I cannot get the money.

Police-constable Dennant proved apprehending the prisoner, and charged him with the offence.

Prisoner was then cautioned in the usual way, and said: I did not know but what the money was due to me. I have paid into the society for three years, and paid all funerals, and if it not right I am willing to pay the money back, by instalments.

Mr. Yeomans, the secretary was re-called, and said the prisoner was well acquainted with the rules.

Prisoner was then committed to take his trial at the next Worcester Sessions.

Hannah Edmunds was severely censured by the Bench for her conduct, she being step-daughter of the prisoner.”

“William Smart and George Smart were charged with assaulting Jonathan Hadley, on the 5th ult. Mr. Lowe, of Dudley, appeared to prosecute, and Mr. Hayes defended.

Complainant said he lived at Causeway Green, and was at the BARREL INN. Defendants were playing at bowls. He made a bet with the defendants, and won. George Smart refused to pay him, struck him and knocked him down, and he became insensible. He had two black eyes; his cheek was cut, and he was much injured.

Cross-examined: There was a dispute. I bet with the defendant George, and won. He refused to pay. Told him he would have to pay before he went home. Did not lay hold of him. Did not follow defendant to fight him. Defendant wanted to make it up, and offered to pay 5s. I offered to lose the summons money.

David Moreton said he went on the alley. Complainant bet a pint of ale with George Smart, who refused to pay it after he had lost it, and at once struck complainant, and knocked him down insensible among the pigs. They both beat him very badly.

Another witness gave corroborative evidence.

Mr. Hayes addressed the Bench for the defence, and said if his instructions were right there was perjury on one side. It was a drunken row and they all fought, in consequence of a bet George Smart had with complainant, who caught hold of him by the collar, because he refused to pay.

John Jones was called, and said that George Smart and complainant both fought, and that Hadley struck first. William Smart did not strike.

James Thompson and Joshua Wood gave evidence to the effect that complainant struck first, and after fought with George Smart.

The Bench fined each defendant 5s and costs.”

Stourbridge Observer 2/11/1872

“William Deane was charged by David Smith for that he, being formerly trustee of a certain Friendly Society, that he did then and now have in his possession certain money, amounting to £6, belonging to the said society. Mr. Shakespeare appeared for defendant.

David Smith said he was secretary to the Friendly Society held at the BARREL INN, Causeway Green. On the 23rd of January 1871, defendant was a trustee of the society. It was agreed amongst the members that he should hold the money, £6, until they wanted it. The funds being very low, they went to defendant about twelve months ago, and made application to him for the money, and they had applied several times since then, and had also written to him respecting it. Defendant told him he would put it in the bank in his own name. Defendant had been out of the club twelve months, and he did not hold any office whatever, as they had elected a new trustee in his place.

The Bench examined a copy of the rules of the society, which stated that there should be three trustees, a treasurer and a clerk.

Mr. Shakespeare said: I will tell you at once we have the £6 in hand, and we consider we are entitled to hold it. Mr. Deane is really one of the trustees, and he was requested to keep the money by the society. He gave them a memorandum, and the society then passed a resolution that he should hold it.

Mr. Hayes to complainant: You are not prepared with your case, that is certain. You had better try to settle with some amicable arrangement.

The parties consented to do so, and left the Court.”

West Bromwich Weekly News 17/12/1881

“Mr. R. Docker held an inquiry on Tuesday at the BARREL INN, Causeway Green, respecting the deaths of Hannah Maria Goode (65), Cakemore, and Mary Ann Carter (41), Causeway Green.

The former woman it appears, was walking along the canal side with a lantern to meet her husband in company with two grandchildren, when one of them named Rosannah Willetts said, ‘Mind grandmother, here are some bricks.’ The deceased, however, stumbled against them and fell into the canal at Cakemore Wharf. At the inquest the girl referred to said she held the clothes of deceased until she herself was pulled partly into the canal. She then shouted and a man named Charles came to her assistance, and pulled deceased out. She was conveyed home, and it was found that life was not quite extinct. She, however, died in half an hour. The evidence at the latter inquest was to the effect that on Friday deceased went in search of her husband with a lantern. She was met on the canal side by a man named Dyson, who directed her. She was not seen afterwards alive, but her dead body was found in the canal at Cakemore Wharf on Saturday.

Verdicts Accidentally Drowned.

The jury strongly condemned the fencing at the Cakemore Wharf, and expressed a wish that the Canal Company should be censured for their negligence, and the Coroner was instructed to communicate with the Canal Company on the matter.”

Birmingham Daily Post 27/1/1886

“Last night Mr. Miller Corbet (deputy coroner) held an inquest at the BARREL INN, Causeway Green, touching the death of Michael Bailey (40), mechanic, of Back Lane, Causeway Green, who died suddenly on Friday night, under circumstances reported in Monday’s Post.

Agnes Jackson gave evidence to the effect that late on Friday night her husband came home and told her that Mrs. Bailey was lying in the road a short distance from her residence. Witness went to Bailey’s house, and informed deceased of the fact, and told him that his wife wanted him. Deceased got up, and walked out of the house for the purpose of going to the place indicated.

Silas Round, file manufacturer, said he saw deceased hurrying up the lane, and followed him. When he had proceeded a short distance he found deceased lying in the road, and breathing heavily. He was not able to speak. Witness lifted him up and placed him against the bank until assistance arrived. He subsequently went for a doctor, and Mr. Cunningham was quickly in attendance; but deceased expired before he reached the house. Deceased was a man of sober habits generally, and always appeared to be healthy. He thought it would be about seven o'clock the same night when the deceased's wife procured the vermin killer, as she left the house between six and seven o'clock. In reply to a juror, witness stated that he was not aware that Mrs. Bailey had tried to obtain the poison on the previous night, but he knew that she had sent her daughter for it on Thursday afternoon. Deceased had had a great deal of trouble for about a week on account of his wife, which would cause him to be excited.

In reply to the Coroner, Superintendent Hardman stated that the case had been thoroughly investigated, and there was no suspicion that Mrs. Bailey had administered poison to her husband, as she did not return home after purchasing the poison until after the occurrence which resulted in the death of deceased.

Mr. A. Cunningham, surgeon, said he was called in to see deceased shortly after ten o'clock on Friday night, but he was then dead. There was nothing to lead him to suppose that death was due to other than natural causes. He thought the cause of death was heart disease.

The jury returned a verdict of Death from Natural Causes.

Last night Mrs. Bailey was progressing favourably."

"William Dyson, Causeway Green, Warley, was charged with being drunk on the licensed premises of Henry Thomas Wood on the 6th inst, and also with refusing to quit. Police-constable Nash said he visited the BARREL INN, Causeway Green, and saw the defendant there drunk. He was requested by Wood to leave, but he refused. Mr. Wood, the landlord, said he refused to supply defendant who was drunk. He remained in the house three quarters of an hour. Fined 1s and costs in each case."

Bristol Mercury 4/11/1891

"At Hales Owen police court, yesterday, Henry Thomas Wood, BARREL INN, Causeway Green, was charged with permitting drunkenness on his licensed premises on the 15th and 17th September last. Mr. W. Shakespeare defended.

PC Nash deposed that on the 15th of September, about 8.30pm, he was on duty in Causeway Green, when he saw a man named Daniels being ejected from the defendant's house. The man was very drunk, and witness was compelled to lock him up. On September 17th, in company with PC Sherwood, he again visited the BARREL INN, and in the parlour he found defendant's wife helplessly drunk. She had to hold the walls in the passage to keep her from falling down. Mr. Wood was not at home. Witness found the defendant in the VINE INN, Whiteheath, the same night about 9.30, when he said he only supplied Daniels with two glasses of whisky. Defendant also said that his wife was very drunk in the house when he left at three o'clock.

Police Constable Sherwood corroborated.

For the defence, Mr. Shakespeare submitted that defendant had kept the house for eleven years without any complaints against him. There was no evidence to warrant a conviction, as the defendant was away from home, and he was not aware that any drunkenness took place.

Mr. Smith (magistrate) said the bench were of opinion that the defendant was not liable for drunkenness when he was away from home, and dismissed the case.

Esther Wood, wife of the landlord, was fined, including costs, £1 1s for being drunk on licensed premises on the 17th ult."

County Advertiser 7/11/1891

"Mr. Shakespeare applied for a transfer of the license of the BARREL INN, Causeway Green, from Henry Thomas Wood to Henry Bridge. Mr. Shakespeare said the house had been kept by Wood, but it appeared he had been convicted of felony about twenty years ago. His wife, who owned the house, was not aware of this fact when she married him. There was a clause in the Licensing Acts which provided that no man who had been convicted of felony could hold a license. The Legislature, however, thinking this was too severe upon licensed victuallers, passed an Act saying that there could be in these cases application made to carry on the business till the special licensing day. Mrs. Wood was the owner of the house, which was her separate estate, and settled upon her. Bridge was a most respectable man, and there was no objection, he understood, on the part of the police. It had been a licensed house for many years, and Mrs. Wood had kept it for eleven years without a previous conviction. The application was granted.”

“Owen Hadley was fined 5s and costs for being drunk in the BARREL INN, Causeway Green, kept by Samuel Bridge, on the 8th inst.”

County Advertiser 6/10/1894

“Samuel Bridge, landlord of the BARREL INN, Causeway Green, was charged with permitting drunkenness on his licensed premises on the 8th ult. Mr. W. Waldron prosecuted on behalf of the police, and Mr. Shakespeare, of Oldbury, defended.

Mr. Waldron in his opening statement said that the defendant kept the BARREL INN, Causeway Green. On the 8th ult, two police officers visited the house at about 9.10pm, and went into the kitchen. There they saw a man named Owen Hadley sitting with a cup three-quarters full of beer, out of which he was drinking. The man was drunk. The officers called the attention of the defendant to the state of Hadley, and asked him how he accounted for it. Defendant replied, ‘I don’t know; he had only been here twenty minutes, and he is drinking with the other men.’ He (Mr. Waldron) held that if those facts were proved they would be sufficient to warrant a conviction, because, by the ruling of Mr. Justice Cave and others in the case of Hope and Warburton, decided in 1892, it was unnecessary to prove that the man was actually supplied with drink; if he was in the house or on the premises drinking that was sufficient.

Police-constable Walton gave evidence bearing out the opening statement of Mr. Waldron. There were three other men in the room at the time witness entered. The landlord came out of the kitchen when witness entered the house. After witness had called the attention of the landlord to the state of Hadley, the latter went outside, and was so helplessly drunk the he had to be supported home. Hadley had been convicted for the drunkenness.

By Mr. Shakespeare: Witness had heard nothing improper about the previous conduct of the house.

Police-constable Sherwood corroborated, but said he thought the landlord came out of the parlour.

Mr. Shakespeare, for the defence, said defendant had conducted a public house for twelve years, and had never previously had a complaint of the management; and he was very anxious to maintain his good character. The case cited by Mr. Waldron stated that to justify a conviction for permitting drunkenness there must be connivance or wilful neglect on the part of the licensee, and the drunken persons must show signs of their condition which would readily arrest the attention of the licensee. Defendant’s house was used by the football club as a clubhouse. Defendant had been busy all day, and after the footballers had gone went out of the kitchen into the bar parlour, leaving two or three persons in the kitchen. Defendant lay down on the sofa and was talking to his wife and two customers. During defendant’s stay in the bar parlour, Hadley came in. A man named Haley came in shortly afterwards, and asked for some beer, which was supplied by the wife of defendant. When the landlady had gone out, Hadley, without asking permission, took up Haley’s cup and commenced to drink, and he was drinking when the officers went in. The landlord did not know that the man Hadley was there until he was called by the officers; and the officers did not see him come out of the kitchen but out of the parlour. He asked the Bench to say there was no offence on the part of the landlord. The defendant (sworn) said he had kept the BOAT INN for nine or ten years, and then removed to the BARREL INN, which he had kept for two or three years. When his attention was called to Hadley by the officers, Hadley had evidently had some beer, though in his opinion he was not very drunk. Witness did not tell the police that Hadley had been there only 20 minutes; he said ten minutes, because he had been in to serve a man about ten minutes previously, and Hadley was not then in the kitchen.

John Clift, moulder, of Causeway Green, stated that Hadley was not supplied with beer while in the house.

The landlady came to supply Haley, and she then ordered Hadley to go, but she took no means to expel him. Michael Haley said Hadley was in the kitchen when he went in, and after the hostess had supplied witness with a pint of fourpenny, Hadley picked up the cup and drank, and the officers then came in. The Bench considered the case proved. They did not think that defendant was himself aware of Hadley's presence in the house, but considered it proved that the landlady knew; and defendant would be fined 10s and costs, including solicitor's fee, £2 3s in all."

County Advertiser 10/12/1898

"Samuel Bridge, landlord of the BARREL INN, Causeway Green, was summoned at the instance of Mr. Bertwell, supervisor of the Inland Revenue, for having received certain spirits without having entered them in the stock book, and also without having cancelled the certificates. Mr. Birtwell explained that defendant was liable to a penalty of £50 and costs in each case. Mr. Fearnley, officer of the Inland Revenue, said he called at the defendant's house on the 13th of October. He found that the officer's previous visit was on the 11th of August, 1897, this being an interval of fourteen months. He examined the stock book and found several certificates lying in it. There were thirteen certificates, one being cancelled with blue lead, three with lead pencil, and nine of which were not cancelled. None of the certificates were entered in the stock book. The Bench inflicted a fine of £5 in each case, the total £10 18s."

“Benjamin Darby, of the BARREL INN, applied for an occasional license to sell intoxicants on the occasion of a shooting match. Refused.”

Birmingham Daily Post 27/9/1899

“At Halesowen Police Court yesterday, Benjamin Darby, landlord of the BARREL INN, Causeway Green, was summoned for permitting drunkenness on his licensed premises, and supplying drink to a drunken person; and William Bastable, Causeway Green, was summoned for being drunk on the licensed premises. Mr. J. S. Sharpe prosecuted on behalf of the police, Mr. W. Shakespeare, jun., defended Darby, and Mr. W. Waldron Bastable.

Mr. Shakespeare said if any offence had been committed by his client it was purely a technical one, as he had no knowledge of Bastable being on the premises, or of his having been served with drink. He suggested that under the circumstances the case should be withdrawn on payment of costs. Mr. Sharpe agreed to this, and Mr. Waldron, on behalf of Bastable, pleaded guilty.

Formal evidence was given by Police-sergeant Jones, and the Bench fined Bastable 10s including costs. The costs in Darby’s case amounted to £3 7s 6d.”

County Express 3/2/1900

“Henry Mills, Causeway Green, Halesowen, was charged with refusing to quit the licensed premises of the BARREL INN, on the 20th ult; and further with assaulting the landlord, Benjamin Darby.

The landlord said he refused to serve defendant, who said he should not leave until he had had something to drink. The defendant and he fell on to the floor, but a customer pulled defendant off witness. Witness afterwards sent for a policeman.

Defendant, who expressed contrition, was fined 2s 6d and costs on the first charge and costs on the second charge.”

County Advertiser 30/4/1904

"Thomas Lowe, landlord of the BARREL INN, Causeway Green, was charged with permitting drunkenness on his licensed premises, on the 9th inst, and also with supplying a drunken person. Mr. J. W. Clulow prosecuted, and Mr. S. Vernon, of Oldbury, defended.

Mr. Clulow explained that on the night in question Police-sergeant Gould and Police-constable Chamberlain, of the Oldbury police division, visited defendant's house, and in the tap room found a man named Henry Mills, who was in an advanced state of drunkenness.

Mr. Vernon pleaded guilty to the charge of permitting drunkenness, and urged that it was an act of stupid folly on the part of the waiter, who saw the condition of the man immediately he entered the house, and ordered him to leave. He, however, failed to see him safely off the premises, with the result that the police entered and found the man there. As soon as the landlord discovered the man in the house he ordered him to leave. He urged the Bench to deal leniently with his client, inasmuch as defendant was called upon to suffer for the action of his servant.

The Bench fined him 10s and costs for permitting drunkenness, and dismissed the other case on payment of costs. The total amount was £3 4s."

“William Hadley, of Langley, was charged with being drunk on licensed premises. Police-constable Edkins said that on 30th March he saw defendant being assisted out of the BARREL INN, Causeway Green, by the potman. He was helplessly drunk. He afterwards fell down in the urinal, and was taken to the police station in a wheelbarrow. Defendant, who pleaded guilty, was fined 5s and costs.”

Bromsgrove Messenger 20/4/1912

“Thomas Williams, licensee of the BARREL INN, Causeway Green, was summoned for permitting drunkenness upon his licensed premises on the 30th ult.

Mr. Clulow, who prosecuted, explained that about 8 o'clock on the night in question Police-constable Edkins was standing outside the public house when he saw the potman, Harold Lowe, lead a man named William Hadley from the premises in a drunken state and leave him in an outbuilding. The man was in a helpless condition, and Edkins, who arrested him, had to convey him to the police station upon a wheelbarrow. Inspector Pass subsequently visited the public house, and when questioned defendant said, ‘I am very sorry, it would not have happened if I had been at home. If I can get through this I shall stay at home and attend to my business.’ The potman said he had requested Hadley to leave an hour before.

Replying to Mr. Sharpe, who appeared for defendant, Inspector Pass said he knew that defendant was captain of the Cradley Heath St. Luke's football team, and that he was playing in an important match at Willenhall.

Mr. Sharpe admitted that the man was drunk upon the premises, and urged that his client had suffered through placing too much reliance upon the potman. Williams was away at Willenhall playing in a match upon which the Birmingham Combination championship depended, and under ordinary circumstances would have been at home at the time. Unfortunately, the train service was interfered with, and defendant had to come back in the brake, which delayed his arrival at the house. Defendant would retire from the game at the end of the season and devote his time to his business.

The Bench fined defendant £5 and costs, and complimented the police upon the manner in which the case had been brought.

Superintendent Rudnick said he would convey those expressions to the proper quarters.”

Police-constable Jackson corroborated.

Inspector Pass said he received the man in custody at the station. He was too drunk to bail out that night.

Mr. Philip Baker (who defended) said his client was not drunk but sleepy. He had been up with his father, who was seriously ill, all night, and had only one pint of beer that night.

Defendant, his sister, and the landlord bore out this statement.

The Bench after retiring said they considered the case was a fit one to bring forward, but they were divided, and they had decided to dismiss the case.”

Sandwell Evening Mail 17/2/1986

"An Oldbury man who was the victim of an unprovoked knife attack when set on by a gang of eight was allowed home from hospital yesterday. Mr. Neil Pritchett, aged 22, of Apsley Road, Brandhall, was stabbed three times as he went to make a telephone call after drinking with his girlfriend on Friday night at the BARREL pub in Causeway Green, Oldbury. He walked about 100 yards to the box near the HEN AND CHICKENS pub, on Birmingham New Road, when the men, five white and the others black, came out of the premises. They started to punch Mr. Pritchett and when he retaliated one produced a knife and stabbed him in the back, head and chest. Police are looking for a half-caste male, aged 21 years, with short black curly hair and around 5ft 9ins tall, who is believed to have carried out the knife attack."

Sandwell Evening Mail 24/2/1986

"Another 50 Sandwell publicans are campaigning for rate cuts after complaining that beer sales are sinking. The latest applications come after 300 Sandwell pubs last year applied for rate cuts because of dwindling trade. The BARREL in Pound Road, Oldbury, is objecting against a rateable value of £2,284 and the ROWLEY RAG at Throne Road, Rowley Regis, is contesting a rateable value of £3,513 in the latest applications. The COACH AND HORSES at High Street, Princes End, Tipton, the PARK TAVERN at Dudley Road, Smethwick, the COACH MAKERS ARMS at Bridge Street, Wednesbury and the FLOWER POT at Spon Lane, West Bromwich, are also seeking rate cuts.

The applications are due to be heard in March at the West Midlands Valuation Panel offices at Dudley. A Panel spokesman said, 'Rates on pubs are based on sales.'

Some Sandwell publicans have already warned that they will not be able to carry on if rents and rates are increased."

Sandwell Evening Mail 18/3/1986

"Friends at Oldbury gave each other true support on a charity fancy dress pub crawl – by doing it three-legged. A group of 15 friends and workmates, some of them pictured, visited 11 public houses, starting at the BARREL in Pound Road and finishing at the ROWLEY RAG in Whiteheath. Through collections and sponsorship the group, many wearing fancy dress, expect to raise up to £100 for arthritis work at Selly Oak Hospital."

"A cheque for £1,005 raised by a 24-hour sponsored darts and pool evening is to be handed over to the BBC's Children in Need Appeal at a presentation at the BARREL public house, Pound Road, Langley, on Friday."

“Oldbury justices yesterday refused application for.....

The removal of the licence of the WINDSOR CASTLE, Graves Road, Rounds Green, to premises known as the BEECHES, Bristnall Hall Road, Warley.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 4/3/1937

“Rowley Regis licensing justices adjourned meeting at Old Hill yesterday.....

Although 96 per cent of residents in the Bristnall Hall Road district of Warley want a new public house, the Oldbury Justices said ‘No’ to their demand yesterday. Atkinsons Brewery applied for the removal of the licence of the WINDSOR CASTLE, Brades Road, Oldbury, to premises proposed to be erected on a site at Bristnall Hall Road.

Mr. Douglas Jenkins, for the brewery company, said there were 525 houses nearer to the site than to any other licensed premises, and there was land available for the erection of a further 621.

Opposition was made by local clergy, who contended that the proposed building would be near three schools.

The application was refused.”

Provisional Order of Removal of the license of the WINDSOR CASTLE granted on 2nd March 1939.

Birmingham Daily Post 2/3/1939

“Oldbury adjourned Licensing Sessions yesterday.....

Atkinsons Ltd, Aston, applied for a provisional order sanctioning the removal of the full licence of the WINDSOR CASTLE, Brades Road, Oldbury, to premises known at the BEECHES, Bristnall Hall Road, Warley.

Mr. Douglas Jenkins (for the applicants) said that the position had changed since a similar application was made in 1936. More houses had been erected and today there were 644 houses nearer to this site than to any licensed house in the area. The effect of granting the application would be to remove a licence from a somewhat congested area to a district where no facilities exist. The brewery company was prepared to surrender the licences of two further houses that were doing considerable business.

Objection to the application was offered by the Rev. F. A. Payne (Warley Methodist Church) and the Rev. H. C. Hawkins (Oldbury United Ministerial Fellowship), who contended that facilities in the area are adequate.

The application was granted, subject to certain alterations in the plans of the proposed building.”

Supt. T. E. Lewis (prosecuting) said the case arose from an accident at the junction of the Cheltenham and Evesham roads at Broadway, on April 13, the day of Cheltenham races.

The defendant’s car was in collision with a car driven towards Evesham by Mr. Colin Richard Williams, of 30, West Street, Evesham.”

“Two appeals are appointed to be heard at the Quarter Sessions on Tuesday.....

Edwin Field and John Gordon against the refusal of the Oldbury Justices to renew the license of the BEEHIVE INN, Oldbury.”

The renewal of Edwin Field’s license was refused on 17th February 1903, but was renewed on appeal, at the Quarter Sessions on 7th April 1903.

Esther Elizabeth Stackhouse married James Hadley on 1st April 1905.

She was fined £5 and £2 11s 6d costs, on 4th April 1905, for permitting drunkenness on 21st March 1905.

Lichfield Mercury 7/4/1905

“At Oldbury, on Tuesday, Elizabeth Stackhouse, widow, licensee of the BEEHIVE INN, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, was charged with permitting drunkenness on her licensed premises, and also with selling intoxicants to a drunken person.

It was stated that the police found James Hadley, of Tat Bank, drunk in the house. When asked how she accounted for it, the defendant said Hadley had been there all the evening, but he had only had two or three glasses of ale. She further alleged that Hadley had been holding her down whilst a woman named Polly Hughes punched her. When the officers called again at 10-45 the same night they saw that Hughes had both her eyes badly discoloured. The landlady then said that the man Hadley was courting her, and she had ordered him to go, but he had refused. Hadley also said, ‘I am courting the landlady, and I am happy, you see.’ (Laughter.) In the course of further evidence it was stated that the man Hadley married Mrs. Stackhouse last Saturday.

For permitting drunkenness Mrs. Stackhouse was fined £5 and costs, the charge of selling intoxicants to a drunken person being withdrawn on the payment of costs, the total being £7 19s. Hadley was fined 15s 6d, including costs, for being upon the premises, and Polly Hughes was also fined 2s 6d and costs for a similar offence.”

The license renewal was referred to the Compensation Authority on 21st February 1905. It was refused by the Compensation Authority on 24th June 1905.

Birmingham Mail 24/6/1905

“The adjourned meeting of the Worcester County Licensing Committee was held today at the Shirehall, Mr. Willis Bund presiding, for the consideration of licenses of houses in Oldbury which had been reported by the local justices as not being necessary for the requirements of the district.....

In the case of the BEEHIVE, Birmingham Street, Mr. Matthews appeared for the landlord, John Jordan, but offered no evidence, saying he was content to leave the matter in the hands of the Court, believing he would be justly dealt with.

Superintendent Hill said the house had been badly conducted.....

After deliberating half an hour, the justices decided that all the houses brought before them were unnecessary, but not being certain how far compensation money would suffice to meet the claims to be paid, drew up an order of precedence in which houses are to be dealt with, houses not paid for keeping open provisionally till they are dealt with.”

Smethwick Telephone 1/7/1905

“The adjourned principal meeting of the Licensing Committee for the County of Worcester was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, on Saturday, Mr. J. Willis Bund presiding. The sixteen houses reported by the Oldbury Justices were considered, and the committee ultimately decided that all the licenses were unnecessary. As they were not aware how far the compensation money would go, the committee arranged the houses in order, and as many of the licenses as possible will be done away with. The order is as follows.....

6. BEEHIVE, Birmingham Street.”

Birmingham Mail 22/12/1905

“An important memorandum has been issued by the inland revenue commissioners affecting the basis of compensation for licensed houses which have been compulsorily closed. It will be remembered that fifteen such houses were refused the renewal of licenses at Oldbury, and the question of compensation was argued by counsel before the Worcestershire Licensing Committee a few weeks ago. That committee intimated that the rent was the basis upon which the compensation should be assessed, but counsel urged that this was preposterous. The claimants preferred to leave the matter to the decision of the inland revenue commissioners. The latter have sent a letter to the committee, upholding its view that the rent should be the basis, allowing nothing for the trade done on the premises or to the brewers for tied houses. The Commissioners say that the computation of the sum to be paid in any case requires the determination of three factors, namely, the value of the licensed premises, the depreciation in value of the trade fixtures, and the value of the premises without the license. They have, as a rule, capitalised the annual value of the licensed premises upon the four per cent basis, or at twenty-five years’ purchase, and only exceeded this in cases where there was a distinct prospect of improved annual value, and only fallen below it where there was evidence to suggest that the present value could not be maintained in future. They have employed surveyors of taxes to take estimates of the probable annual value of premises when deprived of their licenses, and of the probable number of years’ purchase of such annual value that premises would fetch, an allowance being made for the cost of the alterations necessary to fit the premises for earning the annual value as estimated. Accordingly, although exact figures have not yet been received, the amounts payable for the Oldbury houses above referred to may be given approximately as follows.....

BEEHIVE, Birmingham Street, £25.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 6/3/1906

“A meeting of the Worcester Licensing Committee was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, yesterday, to consider the awards made by the Commissioner of Inland Revenue, determining the amounts to be paid as compensation to owners, holders, or others interested in the non-renewal of licenses in the Oldbury division..... The licenses refused and the amount of compensation awarded in each case was as follows.....

BEEHIVE, Birmingham Street, £480.

The committee made awards as follows.....

BEEHIVE, Birmingham Street, £30 to Esther E. Hadley, licensee, and £450 to John Gordon, registered owner.

Payment of the compensation money was fixed to take place on March 28.”

Birmingham Mail 20/3/1906

“Today, at Oldbury Police Court, there was a sequel to the compensation proceedings under the Licensing Act. Mrs. Esther Elizabeth Hadley, licensee of the BEEHIVE INN, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, was summoned, at the instance of Mr. T. Jones (assistant overseer) for the non-payment of a poor rate amounting to £1 9s 4d. Mr. H. Jeffries appeared for the defendant.

Mr. Jones deposed that at a previous court a distress warrant had been granted, but this was returned marked ‘No effects.’

Mr. Jeffries explained that Mrs. Hadley was not a passive resister, but was unable to pay the rate through poverty. Under those circumstances he asked the Bench not to commit defendant to prison. Mrs. Hadley kept the public house named, but the compensation authority thought it fit to take away the license, and this would expire in a few days. As soon as the Compensation Authority set its mark upon the house, the trade disappeared, and since that time the defendant had lived the best way she could. She was entitled to a small sum for compensation in respect of the house, but, unfortunately, it was due to, and had actually been assigned to, a judgement creditor. It was afterwards assigned to another creditor, and a garnishee summons had been served in respect of the amount to which defendant was entitled, and there was not the slightest chance of Mrs. Hadley receiving a single penny of the money. During the past year defendant had pledged almost all her furniture, and many of her effects were now in the pawnshops, and the money obtained on them had been used to live upon.

In reply to the Bench, Mr. Jeffries said the defendant was a married woman living apart from her husband, who did not contribute anything towards her support, and she had not a penny in the world. He asked the magistrates to exercise the discretion which was vested in them, and not grant a committal order in the case, or, if they did so, let it be for one day only.

In answer to the Clerk, Mr. Jeffries pointed out that the defendant was entitled to about £30 as compensation, but the garnishee summons and the other debts amounted to three or four times that sum.

The Bench committed defendant to prison for one day, which meant that she was immediately discharged.”

Birmingham Mail 17/7/1906

“At the Oldbury Police Court, today, Esther E. Hadley, wife of James Hadley, of Engine Street, Tat Bank, was charged with converting to her own use a piano, the property of E. F. Allen and Sons Limited, of High Street, West Bromwich, whilst under a hire purchase agreement.

Mr. S. R. Rhodes appeared to prosecute, and explained that defendant received the piano in January, 1905, in the name of Stackhouse, having since been married. She obtained possession of a piano of the value of £23 10s, agreeing to pay 10s 6d per month until the whole of the money was paid. The payments were kept up until March 29th, 1906, amounting in all to £3 17s 6d, and enquiries were made and defendant said the piano had been seized to pay for rent. Afterwards she said her step-son, who was working at Liverpool, had the instrument. She had told the complainants that she was not Mrs. Stackhouse nor Mrs. Hadley, and had tried in every way to mislead them as to her identity. They thought the piano had got into the possession of a pawnbroker named Harry Nightingale, for defendant had stated that he had paid her £12 for the piano. She also said Nightingale had given her £10 to pay the fine at the police court and £2 to take the piano away. After some legal argument, Mr. Jeffries, who appeared for the defence, intimated that defendant intended to plead guilty. She had, he said, looked upon the transaction with Nightingale as a pledge. She had expected to receive money from the compensation authority when her former license (the BEEHIVE, Birmingham Street) was taken away, but that money had gone into another channel, and she had not been able to discharge her liability to Nightingale. She, however, never intended to deprive the prosecutors of the permanent possession of the instrument

The Bench considered that the defendant possibly did not fully understand the agreement, but all the same she was liable, and would have to go to prison for one day.”

The license was extinguished on 4th April 1906.

It was converted into a shop.

“Yesterday, at the Police Court, Nathaniel Hadly, of the BEEHIVE INN, Bromford Lane, was summoned for selling intoxicating liquors without having a license on the 24th of December.

Superintendent Speke stated that on Friday, the 23rd ult, defendant called at the police station and intimated that he was going to have a few friends at his house on the following Sunday night. Witness elicited that defendant was keeping the above-named house, and that he had been there since the previous Monday. Defendant admitted that he had not got the transfer of the license, but said Mr. Jordan was attending to it. Witness told defendant that he ought not to be there, that he was selling at his own risk, and recommended him to see Mr. Jordan at once. Defendant promised to do so, and also to come and see witness afterwards; but he failed to do so, and, consequently, the present proceedings were instituted.

The magistrates’ clerk pointed out that there was an application for the transfer by the defendant that day. Superintendent Speke added that since the summons was served Mr. Hopkins, a member of the firm of John Jordan and Co, had seen him and explained that there was a misunderstanding about the matter. He was under the impression that it was not necessary for the owner of a beerhouse to reside on the premises. Mr. Hopkins having given the assurance that it arose purely through a misunderstanding, under these circumstances he asked for the case to be withdrawn on the payment of costs.

Mr. Hopkins corroborated Superintendent Speke’s statement, and added that the previous tenant had not yet left the house, and it was his intention for him to leave before the license was transferred.

The Bench allowed the case to be withdrawn, and afterwards granted the transfer of the license.”

Shepton Mallet Journal 21/7/1893

“At the Birmingham county court, before his Honour Judge Chalmers and a jury, Frederick Woolrick [sic], of the HORSE AND JOCKEY INN, Dudley, publican, sued the London and Manchester Industrial Insurance Company, to recover £72 on a policy of insurance, effected on the life of his sister, Ellen Thomas, deceased. Mr. Vachell (instructed by Mr. Clarke, West Bromwich) appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Hugo Young (instructed by Mr. O’Connor) for the defendants.

Mr. Vachell said the plaintiff sued as administrator of the estate of his late sister, a widow, who lived at Garbett Street, Birmingham. The policy was issued by the defendants on her life on the 13th March, 1891, and the amount insured was £72 payable on her death. The premiums were 5s a week. Mrs. Thomas died on the 16th June, 1892, at the age of 66, and application was made by the plaintiff to the company for the insurance, but they refused to pay, and the defence was that the policy was a speculative one on the part of the plaintiff, in which the deceased had no interest. Mr. Vachell explained that the deceased earned a living by tailoring and taking in lodgers. She was on a visit to her brother in March 1891, at the BEEHIVE INN, Oldbury, his then place of business, when an agent named Carrol called and suggested to plaintiff, his wife, and deceased that they should insure with his company. Mrs. Thomas approved of the suggestion, and it was arranged that Carrol should call on her in Birmingham. Carrol afterwards did call on her, and she signed a proposal form upon which the company insured her. Carrol was agent in the West Bromwich district, and for his convenience in collecting, the premiums were paid through the plaintiff in Bromford Lane. Although Mrs. Thomas was 66 years of age she had not lost all thought of love. At the time the policy was effected she had a love affair with a man whose identity was hidden under the expressive name of Ben, and possibly it was a desire to leave something nice for Ben if anything happened to her that induced her to insure. Ben was a young man, a lodger with the deceased. Unfortunately, Ben was faithless and married another lady. Deceased after being jilted appeared to lose interest in the insurance, and in April 1892, gave the policy to her sister-in-law, plaintiff’s wife, and executed an informal will in her favour. The deceased sent the premiums to Bromford Lane to be paid to Carrol, but the last premium was paid by plaintiff’s wife. Mr. Vachell called evidence to show that deceased had the means of paying the premiums. She had two lodgers, one of whom paid 10s 6d a week for his board and lodgings and the other 12s 6s.

The defence was that the policy was never sought for by the deceased at all, who was too poor to pay premiums of 5s a week. She was so poor that the week before she died she was in receipt of parish medical relief. Carrol, the agent who effected the insurance, left the company, and his accounts were in a confused condition. The agent who succeeded Carrol stated that all the premiums were paid by the plaintiff's wife, not in postal orders, but cash. Other witnesses proved that Ben was married long before the policy was entered into, and the deceased therefore had no object to pinch herself to insure her life. Documents purporting to be signed by the deceased were not in her handwriting. The company had offered to return the premiums paid. Mr. Young submitted that the policy was a pure speculation on the part of the plaintiff and his wife. The jury, without calling upon Mr. Vachell, gave a verdict for the plaintiff for the amount claimed."

"Joseph Buttery, licensee of the BEEHIVE beerhouse, Bromford Lane, was summoned for permitting drunkenness on his licensed premises on the 8th inst. Mr. J. S. Sharpe prosecuted on behalf of the police, and Mr. H. Jeffries defended.

Mr. Sharpe explained that on the night of the 8th inst PS Cox and PC Shilvock visited the defendant's premises, and they saw a man named James Hobley sitting in the tap-room drunk. Defendant was in the room, but was taking no steps to get the man from the house.

Mr. Jeffries contended that defendant had not supplied Hobley, and that he was taking steps to remove him when the man's wife came and interfered."

"The adjourned licensing sessions were held at Oldbury yesterday.....

The police objected to the renewal of the licenses of the nine houses on the 'black list,' against which there had been convictions.

The magistrates refused to renew the licenses of the BEEHIVE INN, Bromford Lane, and also of the BEEHIVE INN, Birmingham Street."

The license renewal was referred to the Compensation Authority on 21st February 1905.

It was refused by the Compensation Authority on 24th June 1905.

"The adjourned meeting of the Worcester County Licensing Committee was held today at the Shirehall, Mr. Willis Bund presiding, for the consideration of licenses of houses in Oldbury which had been reported by the local justices as not being necessary for the requirements of the district.....

No evidence was given for the BEEHIVE, Bromford Road, but frequent transfers and convictions were recorded.....

After deliberating half an hour, the justices decided that all the houses brought before them were unnecessary, but not being certain how far compensation money would suffice to meet the claims to be paid, drew up an order of precedence in which houses are to be dealt with, houses not paid for keeping open provisionally till they are dealt with."

"The adjourned principal meeting of the Licensing Committee for the County of Worcester was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, on Saturday, Mr. J. Willis Bund presiding. The sixteen houses reported by the Old-

bury Justices were considered, and the committee ultimately decided that all the licenses were unnecessary. As they were not aware how far the compensation money would go, the committee arranged the houses in order, and as many of the licenses as possible will be done away with. The order is as follows.....

9. BEEHIVE Bromford Road.”

Birmingham Mail 22/12/1905

“An important memorandum has been issued by the inland revenue commissioners affecting the basis of compensation for licensed houses which have been compulsorily closed. It will be remembered that fifteen such houses were refused the renewal of licenses at Oldbury, and the question of compensation was argued by counsel before the Worcestershire Licensing Committee a few weeks ago. That committee intimated that the rent was the basis upon which the compensation should be assessed, but counsel urged that this was preposterous. The claimants preferred to leave the matter to the decision of the inland revenue commissioners. The latter have sent a letter to the committee, upholding its view that the rent should be the basis, allowing nothing for the trade done on the premises or to the brewers for tied houses. The Commissioners say that the computation of the sum to be paid in any case requires the determination of three factors, namely, the value of the licensed premises, the depreciation in value of the trade fixtures, and the value of the premises without the license. They have, as a rule, capitalised the annual value of the licensed premises upon the four per cent basis, or at twenty-five years’ purchase, and only exceeded this in cases where there was a distinct prospect of improved annual value, and only fallen below it where there was evidence to suggest that the present value could not be maintained in future. They have employed surveyors of taxes to take estimates of the probable annual value of premises when deprived of their licenses, and of the probable number of years’ purchase of such annual value that premises would fetch, an allowance being made for the cost of the alterations necessary to fit the premises for earning the annual value as estimated. Accordingly, although exact figures have not yet been received, the amounts payable for the Oldbury houses above referred to may be given approximately as follows.....

BEEHIVE, Bromford Road, £132.”

“A meeting of the Worcester Licensing Committee was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, yesterday, to consider the awards made by the Commissioner of Inland Revenue, determining the amounts to be paid as compensation to owners, holders, or others interested in the non-renewal of licenses in the Oldbury division..... The licenses refused and the amount of compensation awarded in each case was as follows.....

BEEHIVE, Bromford Road, £410.

The committee made awards as follows.....

BEEHIVE, Bromford Road, £10 to Samuel Foxhall, licensee, and £400 to John Jordon and Co, registered owners.

Payment of the compensation money was fixed to take place on March 28.”

The license was extinguished on 4th April 1906.

“Thomas Underhill, BEEHIVE INN, Langley, was charged with keeping his house open for the sale of intoxicants during prohibited hours, on the morning of the 20th September. Mr. Shakespeare defended.

PC Bayliss said he went into defendant’s house at 12.20am on the day in question, and saw a man in the kitchen. Defendant was filling a jar with beer, and asked witness to have a glass. Witness went into the road, but did not see anyone leave.

Cross-examined: The man in the house was a relative of defendant’s named Fantom. He knew there had been a tea-party at the house the previous evening.

For the defence, it was contended that on the previous night there had been a tea-party at the house. Not all the company had cleared away by eleven o’clock, except some relatives of defendant’s named West, who were assisting to clear away some barrels.

Two witnesses were called in support of this statement, and the case was dismissed.”

“Navigation Grounds, Smethwick. John Griffiths and Fred Lea, for £20.

These well-constructed grounds, which at one time played a prominent part in Midland pedestrianism, but of late have lain idle for various reasons, were on Saturday afternoon set apart for the long-impending foot race between Fred Lee and John Griffiths, both hailing from Langley, near Oldbury, Worcestershire, who had signed articles to run 120 yards, Lee receiving 2 yards start inside, for a stake of £10 a-side, the Sporting Life being appointed stakeholder, and appointing pistol-firer and referee. Wretched weather prevailed, rain and fog making things decidedly unpleasant, but far too much interest was centered in the match to deter the Langley and district sports from assembling in large numbers. The competitors can scarcely be termed flyers, nor are they widely known at the business. Lee, however, is very well known as an exponent of the manly art of self-defence, and has taken part in many contests with the mittens, while he has also been seen to advantage as a ped in the amateur ranks. He is a well-built young fellow of twenty-three years of age, stands 5ft 9in in height, and scales 11st 11lb. He was trained by that well-known Brummagen ped, Lou Goodman, and took the fore part of his training just outside Rubery, but finished at host Granger’s, the RED LION INN, Halesowen.

Griffiths is twenty-six years of age, stands 5ft 7in in height, and weighed about 11st. He had up to the present match accomplished very little on the cinder-path. He followed his employment till a week ago, when he was trained by F. Lowe from the BEEHIVE INN, Langley, and was in excellent fettle, all things considered. Four o’clock was the specified time on the articles, but it was twenty minutes later ere the competitors made their appearance. In the meantime Lee had been all the rage among the betting fraternity, and ‘a ton of money’ was behind him. Griffiths’ party were not so sanguine, consequently odds rapidly rose to 7 to 4, and in some instances 2 to 1 on Lee. Nevertheless, a good round sum was invested.

Griffiths won the toss, and chose the side nearest the spectators. It was a bit hazy when starter Lewis despatched the men to a splendid start, and then commenced a most exciting race. Amid cries of ‘Lee wins!’ Griffiths gradually crept up, but still thirty yards from the worsted it looked odds on the favourite, but Griffiths, finishing in a most game and determined manner, got on terms, and finally won one of the most exciting and splendidly contested races ever seen here by a foot.

Mr. W. Lewis, of Birmingham, fired the pistol, and Mr. Thos. Pike (both appointed by the Sporting Life) officiated as referee.

(We shall forward a cheque, less expenses, to the winner’s address given our representative.)”

The renewal was refused on 10th July 1922.

Evesham Standard 14/10/1922

“The Worcestershire Licensing Committee sat on Tuesday at the Shirehall to assess compensation for the nine licenses which in July they decided to extinguish. They were all North Worcestershire cases. The total claims by owners and occupiers of the nine houses amounted to about £26,821, representing an average of £2,980. The total amounts claimed were.....

BEE HIVE, Henry Street, Langley, £2,645 18s.....

The Committee took in respect of each house evidence of the capitalised loss of trade profits, the capitalised loss in reduction of rental value, and the loss on the sale of fixtures.....

BEEHIVE, Henry Street, Langley, beerhouse (ante 1869), licensee Henry Billington, owner Showell's Brewery Co Ltd. Trade profits £2,275, rent £560, trade fixtures £82 5s, net claim £2,645 8s less £250 being estimated value of the premises unlicensed.

Mr. W. Hodgkiss, Newport, appeared for the claimants and he immediately informed the Chairman that he could not give the figures for the past five years as they were not available.....

After a private consultation the Chairman announced that the Justices had decided to award compensation as follows BEEHIVE £1,616.

Notice was given that the awards given in the case of BEEHIVE could not be accepted by the interested parties who would appeal to the Inland Revenue.”

Evesham Standard 5/5/1923

“The Worcestershire County Licensing Committee had to consider eight awards made by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue determining the sums to be paid as compensation to the persons interested on the non-renewal of eight licensed premises in the County. The Committee had finally to settle the division of the compensation money between the interested parties in each case.....

The amount awarded by the Commissioners in respect of the BEE HIVE, Henry Street, Langley, was £2,000 compared with £1,616 awarded by the Committee. For the registered owners, Showells Brewery Company, it was stated by Mr. Jeffery (Birmingham) that it had been agreed with the licensee, William Henry Billington, who was a £3 10s a week manager, that he should have £25, and the Company £1,975.

The Chairman remarked that this seemed rather one-sided, and asked Billington whether he was satisfied. He replied that he was if the Company found him another house. They had offered him one in West Bromwich, but he had refused it.

The Chairman: This man had no independent advice before he signed this agreement?

Mr. Billington: No, sir. I had none whatever.

For the Company, Mr. Jeffery urged that the man was a free agent, and that the sum of £25 was adequate compensation, especially having regard to the fact that on his salary, he would only receive £14 on a month's notice.

The Committee gave the licensee £100, and the Company £1,900. The Chairman said that the Committee took very great objection to the sort of procedure which had taken place in this case."

Compensation was paid on 23rd May 1923.

The license was extinguished on 30th May 1923.

Job Taylor was fined 20s and £2 15s 6d costs, on 22nd September 1903, for keeping open during prohibited hours.

Birmingham Mail 31/5/1904

"Today, at Oldbury Police Court, William Henry Such, of the BEEHIVE INN, Whimsey Bridge, Hales Owen Street, Oldbury, was summoned for selling beer upon the premises named, without a license, on the 25th inst. Police-sergeant Price stated that although the defendant was in possession of the BEEHIVE INN on May 25th, a man named Job Taylor was the licensee. Taylor left the business on the 9th of May, and then defendant came into possession, but he had neglected to obtain a temporary transfer.

Defendant pleaded that there was a misunderstanding. He explained that Taylor, the former licensee, had slept on the premises, and he had only managed the business for Taylor.

Mr. Shakespeare said a proper notice had not even yet been given for the transfer of the license from Taylor to Such, inasmuch as the notice which had been handed in was not signed.

Defendant said his agent had had charge of the matter.

Job Taylor, the licensee of the house, said he kept it up till May 13th.

In cross-examination by Superintendent Sheriff, Taylor admitted that the defendant went into the house on the 9th of May. Witness removed his wife and furniture from the house on May 13th, but he had slept upon the premises each night since.

Mr. Shakespeare: That was to evade the law.

Superintendent Sheriff contended that the BEEHIVE INN was turned over to Such about six weeks ago.

The police had taken the proceedings in this case because of the irregularities, and for the purpose of showing public house agents that they could not do transfer business without consulting the magistrates. Agents were in the habit of disposing of businesses and placing persons in public houses before applications were made to the Bench for the transfer of licenses.

Defendant was fined £1 0s 6d, including costs.

On the advice of the Clerk, the Justices allowed the irregularity on the notice to be rectified, and a temporary transfer of the license was granted from Job Taylor to William Henry Such."

William Henry Such married Sophia Baker, daughter of David Baker of the BRICKMAKERS ARMS, Churchbridge, in the 3rd quarter of 1903.

The license renewal was referred to the Compensation Authority on 21st February 1905.
It was refused by the Compensation Authority on 24th June 1905.

Birmingham Mail 24/6/1905

“The adjourned meeting of the Worcester County Licensing Committee was held today at the Shirehall, Mr. Willis Bund presiding, for the consideration of licenses of houses in Oldbury which had been reported by the local justices as not being necessary for the requirements of the district.....

In the cases of the SPADEMAKERS ARMS and the BEEHIVE the counsel concerned were Messrs. Morton and Brown for the justices and Matthews and Lawrence for the parties concerned. The evidence related to the value of the property, the sales, requirements of the district, etc.....

After deliberating half an hour, the justices decided that all the houses brought before them were unnecessary, but not being certain how far compensation money would suffice to meet the claims to be paid, drew up an order of precedence in which houses are to be dealt with, houses not paid for keeping open provisionally till they are dealt with.”

Smethwick Telephone 1/7/1905

“The adjourned principal meeting of the Licensing Committee for the County of Worcester was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, on Saturday, Mr. J. Willis Bund presiding. The sixteen houses reported by the Oldbury Justices were considered, and the committee ultimately decided that all the licenses were unnecessary. As they were not aware how far the compensation money would go, the committee arranged the houses in order, and as many of the licenses as possible will be done away with. The order is as follows.....

5. BEEHIVE, Birchfield Lane.”

Birmingham Mail 22/12/1905

“An important memorandum has been issued by the inland revenue commissioners affecting the basis of compensation for licensed houses which have been compulsorily closed. It will be remembered that fifteen such houses were refused the renewal of licenses at Oldbury, and the question of compensation was argued by counsel before the Worcestershire Licensing Committee a few weeks ago. That committee intimated that the rent was the basis upon which the compensation should be assessed, but counsel urged that this was preposterous. The claimants preferred to leave the matter to the decision of the inland revenue commissioners. The latter have sent a letter to the committee, upholding its view that the rent should be the basis, allowing nothing for the trade done on the premises or to the brewers for tied houses. The Commissioners say that the computation of the sum to be paid in any case requires the determination of three factors, namely, the value of the licensed premises, the depreciation in value of the trade fixtures, and the value of the premises without the license. They have, as a rule, capitalised the annual value of the licensed premises upon the four per cent basis, or at twenty-five years’ purchase, and only exceeded this in cases where there was a distinct prospect of improved annual value, and only fallen below it where there was evidence to suggest that the present value could not be maintained in future. They have employed surveyors of taxes to take estimates of the probable annual value of premises when deprived of their licenses, and of the probable number of years’ purchase of such annual value that premises would fetch, an allowance being made for the cost of the alterations necessary to fit the premises for earning the annual value as estimated. Accordingly, although exact figures have not yet been received, the amounts payable for the Oldbury houses above referred to may be given approximately as follows.....

BEEHIVE, Birchfield Lane, £150.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 6/3/1906

“A meeting of the Worcester Licensing Committee was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, yesterday, to consider the awards made by the Commissioner of Inland Revenue, determining the amounts to be paid as com-

compensation to owners, holders, or others interested in the non-renewal of licenses in the Oldbury division.....
The licenses refused and the amount of compensation awarded in each case was as follows.....

BEEHIVE, Birchfield Lane, £365.

The committee made awards as follows.....

BEEHIVE, Birchfield Lane, £315 to the registered owners, Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers, £50 to the lessee, Charles F. Woodbridge.

Payment of the compensation money was fixed to take place on March 28.”

[The registered licensee, Mr. W. H. Such, made no claim.]

The license was extinguished on 4th April 1906.

“The Chemical Nuisance.

A meeting was held at the BELL INN, Rood End, on Monday evening last, of the landowners and occupiers of ground in the neighbourhood of Messrs. Chance’s works. There were present Messrs. J. Parks (chairman), J. Underhill, S. Underhill, W. Underhill, D. Downing, T. Darby, C. Thompson, J. Collins, &c, &c. The Chairman read the notice calling the meeting, and also letters from Mr. F. Badger, Dudley; and Rev. J. Evans, of Hereford, promising their assistance and support. He said the meeting, which was only a preliminary one, was convened by the landowners and tenants in the vicinity of Messrs. Chance’s chemical works, Oldbury, whose property and crops are yearly injured by the escaping of noxious gases from the said works; and to petition Parliament in support of Lord Derby’s intended measure for a compulsory law in respect of such nuisances.

The meeting was addressed by Mr. Collins, and other gentlemen, who all spoke to the great loss they had from years to year sustained from the nuisance complained of.

A subscription was entered into for the purpose of engaging the services to two practical chemists to examine and report upon the escape of the obnoxious vapour.

A committee was formed to carry out such measures as might be deemed necessary; and it was proposed by G. W. Pope, and seconded by Mr. Underhill, that the reports of the committee should be published in the Birmingham Daily Gazette. The meeting then adjourned.”

“At the Oldbury Magistrates’ Office on Tuesday, William Bennett, professional singer, of Oldbury, and John Rowley, carter, of West Bromwich, were charged with stealing a horse, the property of David Thomson, coal dealer, of the same place. Mr. Dicken appeared for the prisoner Bennett.

The evidence showed that the prisoner Rowley was sent by the prosecutor on the previous Tuesday with a load of coal to deliver at Oldbury, at the house of Mr. Gould, Bristnall Fields. Instead of taking the coals there he sold them to a Mrs. Smith, BELL INN, Rood End, for 7s 6d. He stayed there with the prisoner Bennett and spent some of the money. He afterwards went down to Oldbury and went to the WAGON AND HORSES, in company with the other prisoner, and there he sold the animal to a Mr. Peasland, horse dealer, of Oldbury, for 46s. The bargain was effected through the recommendation of Bennett, who said ‘it was all right,’ and the prisoner Rowley’s own horse.

The magistrates discharged the prisoner Bennett with a caution, and committed Rowley to take his trial at the Assizes for stealing the horse, and also on the second charge of stealing the coal.”

Birmingham Daily Post 20/7/1869 - Letter

“BELL INN, Rood End.

To the Editor of the Daily Post.

Sir, In connection with the above Inn are spacious, beautiful, and ornamental Pleasure Grounds, which I was induced by a party of professional travellers to let for the purpose of holding a gala, on Monday the 12th instant, who promised to strictly to carry out the conditions of a large programme, which they duly announced, comprising singing, dancing, and other attractive amusements, balloon ascents and various other fetes, to be performed, the whole to conclude with a grand display of fireworks. The very beautiful grounds and very flattering programme did not fail to attract from 1,200 to 1,500 persons, some of whom I have heard have since expressed great disapprobation and disappointment, as the programme was shorn of its principal and attractive features, for which cause some have attempted to blame me.

But for the information of those who very kindly patronised me on that occasion, I beg to say, after I had very incautiously let the grounds to what turned out to be a very unprincipled party, the carrying out of the programme was, I am very sorry to say, a part over which I had no control. But I may here say that I used all my endeavours and influence by remonstrating with the party in question to do all they had pledged themselves to do. I beg to say I did not receive a penny of the admission money, and was at half of the expense of the printing. I feel sure those to whom I am known will exonerate me from all blame, and from participating in practicing any deception upon such a large circle of my Customers, Friends, and a generous Public.

I remain, yours most respectfully, John Smith, Proprietor.”

“An inquest was opened yesterday, by Mr. R. Docker, at the BELL INN, Rood End, near Oldbury, on the body of George Hodgetts (21), labourer, of that locality, whose death, on Saturday last, was alleged to have resulted from injuries received in a fight on the morning after Christmas Day.

On the morning of the 26th December the deceased was returning home with a number of companions, with whom he had been drinking on the previous evening. Among them was a fellow-labourer named Elijah Chance. Hodgetts and Chance were intoxicated and quarrelsome, and when near the house of a witness named Martin Smith, Chance challenged Hodgetts to fight. A ring was formed, and the two men fought for about half an hour, each round ending with one or the other being knocked down. Smith, who was in bed when the fight commenced, got up and watched it through the window. At length, witness said, Chance struck Hodgetts on the eye, and he fell with great force to the ground, where he lay with his arms extended, in a state of insensibility. He remained for ten minutes without signs of life, and Smith thought that he was dead. The bystanders eventually gave him some water, and he revived soon afterwards, and walked home with assistance. On the following Monday, Hodgetts was attended by Mr. Sainsbury, surgeon, who stated that he found him in an unconscious state. There was a superficial bruise over the left eye, as if from a recent blow. He was suffering from concussion of the brain. He gradually recovered consciousness, but never became quite coherent in his conversation. About a fortnight after the occurrence deceased had a succession of epileptic fits; paralysis supervened, and he gradually fell into a low typhoid state, in which he remained till he died. Mr. Sainsbury considered that death was undoubtedly due to typhoid fever, which might have been incited by the injury. The injury would have rendered him liable to imbibe the infection. Mr. Sainsbury added that typhoid fever was prevalent in the locality where the deceased had lived, and there was a great absence of sanitary regulations. The sewage refuse was actually running down the gutters. The Coroner remarked that it would be necessary to adjourn the enquiry for a post mortem examination to be made, to ascertain the exact cause of death. If it were proved that death had been caused by the blow, the Jury would have to record a verdict of manslaughter against Chance.

The inquest was then adjourned.

Chance was apprehended a few days after the fight, and remains in custody.”

[At the adjourned inquest the jury returned a verdict of Manslaughter against Elijah Chance but recommended him for mercy on the ground that no foul play had been resorted to. Bail was allowed. At the Worcestershire Lent Assizes Elijah Chance was found not guilty.]

“Worcester Lent Sessions.....

John Webb, alias Carter, aged 25, gun-screw, was charged with stealing a silver watch from the person of Joseph Henry Stamps, on the 15th ult, and Samuel Falconbridge was charged with having feloniously received the same knowing it to be stolen. Mr. Godson prosecuted; Mr. R. H. Amphlett appeared for Webb, and Mr. Motteram defended Falconbridge.

Prosecutor stated that he was at the BELL INN, Rood End, on the afternoon of the date mentioned. There were some races going on, and great number of persons were present. Prosecutor felt a tug at his watch, and immediately noticed the chain hanging loosely down, the watch being gone. He then saw the prisoner trying to get away. He caught hold of prisoner and charged him with stealing his watch, and prisoner, after a struggle, escaped from him. At eight o'clock the same evening he saw Falconbridge opposite his (prosecutor's) own house at Smethwick. He said, 'Joe, you have lost your watch; I think I can get it back.' Prosecutor went with him to the TALBOT, where prisoner lived. Prosecutor there saw his watch lying on the table in the smoke-room and he took possession of it.

John Wilkes, squeezer, employed at the Vulcan Ironworks, Smethwick, stated that he saw the prisoner Webb snatch the watch from Stamps and pass it to someone else.

His Lordship found there was no evidence against Falconbridge, and he was acquitted. Webb was found guilty, and having been previously convicted, was sentenced to seven years' penal servitude.”

“On Monday night, a somewhat serious riot occurred at Rood End, near Oldbury. A great number of men assembled at the BELL Grounds in the afternoon to witness a bicycle match and other sports. Later in the day a crowd of roughs armed with stones and lead slings made their appearance, and commenced a violent attack with these weapons upon those present without distinction. Many men were rendered insensible by the blows they received, but three or four were most seriously injured – one, it is feared, fatally The mob were eventually driven off by the whole of the Oldbury police force, under the direction of Police-sergeant Simmonds, who came to supplement the Rood End force.

It is stated that the mob came from Birmingham, and that the object of the attack was to get at a man with whom some of them had had a dispute.....”

“On Monday, the Annual Licensing Sessions for the Oldbury division was held.....

There was a communication from the Oldbury Local Board of Health calling the attention of the magistrates to the rioting and the disorderly proceedings which took place at the running grounds in connection with the BELL INN, at Rood End, on Monday, 21st June. The licenses of the proprietor of the BELL HOTEL and Grounds would be withheld until the adjourned licensing sessions. In the meantime the police would make enquiries.”

Dudley and District News 2/10/1880

“The adjourned Licensing Sessions for Oldbury and district were held on Monday, before Alderman Avery, and Messrs. G. Heaton, H. Chance, and Wilson (magistrates).....

Mr. J. B. Barker, proprietor of the BELL HOTEL and Running Grounds, Rood End, applied for a renewal of his license. Addressing the applicant, Mr. Avery said: In this case some three months ago very disorderly and violent proceedings took place, not actually in your house, but outside, by a number of persons assembled there. According to the information the disturbance amounted almost to a local riot, and it was so serious that a representation was made by the Local Board of Health, who requested the justices to direct the police to exercise greater supervision on this house. Now, we are glad to be informed by the Superintendent of Police that there has been a remarkable improvement in the manner in which the house has been conducted; therefore, a renewal of the license will be granted. But we wish to observe that it becomes a very serious affair, and if there had been no substantial alteration in the conduct of the house, the magistrates might have taken a more serious view of the matter, and adopted a different course. On this occasion the license will be renewed, but we hope you will be exceedingly careful in future to conduct this house properly.

Mr. Forrest, on behalf of the applicant, said his client regretted that disturbances had occurred and desired to keep the house respectable. So far as he was concerned he would take care to conduct his house properly in future.”

“Mr. R. Docker, Coroner, held an inquest this afternoon at the BELL INN, Rood End, respecting the death of Charles Isaac Lunn (14), of Bustnall Terrace, Rood End, who died on Sunday last from the effects of injuries received on the previous Friday, caused by a stone striking him on the head, thrown by a boy named Octavius Cotterell (13), residing in the same locality.

William Smallwood, glass flattener, Cemetery Road, repeated the evidence given by him at the Police Court, which was reported in the Mail on Monday. It was to the effect that on Friday last, about four o'clock in the afternoon, he saw the deceased and Octavius Cotterell throwing stones at each other. After several stones had been thrown, which all missed their aim, Octavius Cotterell threw a stone which struck deceased on the left side of the head between the temple and ear. The deceased after he had received the blow staggered for a few seconds, but afterwards picked up other stones to throw at Cotterell, and ran after him, but finding that his opponent had gone into the house, he threw the stones at the entry door.

Mary Ann Lunn, mother of the deceased, said when the deceased became unconscious she sent a note to Dr. Pitt's surgery, stating that her son was unconscious, and asking that either Dr. Pitt or his assistant would attend at once. It was about a quarter to five o'clock when she first sent to the surgery, and it was about a quarter past nine o'clock when Mr. Burgess came. In reply to a juror witness said she believed there had been a dispute between the two boys respecting a dog which deceased kept.

William Pitt, surgeon, said when he saw the deceased he appeared to be suffering from great compression of the brain.

The Coroner commented upon the dangerous practice of stone throwing, which he regretted was too common amongst boys, but at the same time he pointed out that if the jury considered that the stone thrown at the deceased was the cause of death, then it would be their duty to find a verdict of manslaughter against the boy who threw the stone.

The jury, after a brief consultation, returned a verdict of Manslaughter against Octavius Cotterell, who was then committed on the coroner's warrant, to take his trial at the Worcestershire Assizes. Bail was accepted."

Worcester Journal 14/7/1883

"Worcestershire Midsummer Assizes.....

Octavius Cotterill, a little lad, surrendered to his bail and pleaded guilty to the manslaughter of Charles Isaac Lunn, on the 29th April last, at Oldbury, by having struck him on the head with a stone which caused his death. Mr. Godson, on the part of the prosecution, stated that no doubt technically a manslaughter was committed. The prisoner seemed to have thrown two or three stones at the deceased before the one which struck him and caused his death. The fatal blow was between the ear and the temple. There did not seem to have been any malice.

James Cotterill, foreman in a glass works, of Cemetery Road, Oldbury, was then called, and expressed his willingness to be bound for his son's good behaviour.

His Lordship said this was a result of the wicked and foolish habit of boys throwing stones. He trusted this would be a warning to the prisoner and all other boys like him. He would not be sent to goal, but his father must enter into a surety in the sum of £50 for his appearance to come up for judgement at any time if called upon."

Mr. Shakespeare appeared to support an application for a transfer of the license of the BELL INN, Rood End, to Charles Morton. Morton, it was explained, was a well-known balloonist and possessed of a very good character. His real name was Worley, but for reasons of his own – which were good ones – he had gone by the name of Morton, and he believed an objection had been taken to the application on this ground. He put in a letter from Mr. Superintendent Burton, of Dudley, to the effect that the applicant was well known by the name of Morton, which it was understood he had assumed. The application was eventually granted, Mr. Hardman (superintendent) withdrawing his objection.”

“On Monday evening Captain Morton, accompanied by his assistant, Mr. Westley, made an ascent from the Rood End Grounds, Oldbury, in his balloon the ‘Countess of Dudley.’ Owing to an insufficiency of gas, whilst travelling over Birmingham, the balloon commenced to descend very rapidly, and fell into some trees in the grounds of Edgbaston Hall. Both the occupants of the car were terribly shaken, and Captain Morton received a very severe blow upon the head, which rendered him unconscious. Mr. Heathfield, his family, and servants rendered the unfortunate balloonists prompt assistance, and Captain Morton was removed to the hall and put to bed. Westley was also severely bruised, and the balloon was badly damaged.”

The programme embraced the names of twenty, these being arranged into four heats. Independent of the handicap, air balloon ascents by Captain Holden, singing, dancing, &c, took place, a fair company assembling to witness the affair.....”

“Captain John Morton, the well-known aeronaut, who is also the landlord of the BELL HOTEL, Rood End, was charged with selling after hours on the 14th inst. Mr. Shakespeare defended.

Police-sergeant Stanton said that at 11.45 on the night in question he stood near the window of the defendant’s house, and heard talking within. He heard some one say, ‘Let’s see about settling up for these glasses,’ but another voice, which he recognised as that of the landlady, replied, ‘Never mind paying tonight; you can pay tomorrow; I know that will be right.’ He heard the chinking of glasses and the pouring of something, and on going round the corner in a few minutes he saw four men named Edward Watts, Thomas Savage, Thomas Barrett, and Thomas Ashley come out of the front door.

Corroborative evidence was given by Police-constables Bull and Bayliss.

Mr. Shakespeare having addressed the Bench, Morton was put into the box, and swore that the men paid for nothing, and that the statement Stanton alleged to have been made as to payment was a pure invention.

A fine of £2 and costs was imposed, but Mr. Shakespeare gave notice of appeal.

The four men seen issuing from the premises were all dismissed.”

“The Divorce Court..... Worley v Worley.

This was a petition presented by the wife for a judicial separation on the ground of the husband’s cruelty and adultery. Mr. Jones appeared for the petitioner.

The parties were married at All Saints Church, Haggerston, London, on the 6th of August, 1869, and there were seven children of the marriage, the eldest one being 17. While living together, according to the statement of the petitioner, she suffered in consequence of her husband’s misconduct, and they separated in March, 1884. Respondent promised to make her an allowance, but never kept up the payments. Subsequently Mrs. Worley ascertained her husband was keeping the BELL HOTEL, at Oldbury, Birmingham, under the name of Captain Morton. On going there she found a barmaid named Maggie Pluck, with whom she charged the respondent with having committed adultery in June, July, and August, 1885. Petitioner stayed at the hotel several days, and was then told by her husband that she would have to go. She then left and took lodging close by, and lodged a petition for judicial separation.

Evidence having been given by Augustus Henry Worley, a lad of 14, who lived with his father at the BELL HOTEL, as to the adultery of the respondent with Maggie Pluck, his lordship granted a decree of judicial separation, giving to the wife the custody of the children.”

“Another balloon voyage across the Channel was made successfully at the end of last week. Mr. Morton crossed from Dover to Dunkirk in five hours, travelling in a small balloon made of quite a new material – fine cambric, coated thinly with india-rubber. This material proved far superior to the ordinary silk covering in retaining the gas, which generally permeates through. Thus, when the aeronaut came down to earth he found that very little gas had escaped, and that he might have gone much further without exhausting the carrying-power of his balloon. Moreover, he took up little ballast, and only threw out one small bag.”

“Birmingham Summer Assizes..... Alleged Fraudulent Sale of a Public House.

Mills v Waite. This was an action brought by Charles Mills, publican, Rood End, near Oldbury, against Clara Waite, publican, to recover damages for fraudulent misrepresentation. Mr. Alfred Young and Mr. Stubbins (instructed by Messrs. Buller, Bickley and Cross) appeared for plaintiff; and Mr., Hugo Young (instructed by Mr. M. A Fitter) for the defendant.

The defendant counterclaimed for goods sold and delivered.

Mr. Alfred Young, in opening the case, said that the plaintiff claimed damages for fraudulent misrepresentation on the sale of a public house, and also for the value of certain articles which were agreed by the defendant to be delivered to the plaintiff as 'part and parcel' of his purchase. After hearing the case he thought the jury would not be surprised that the defendant pleaded many alternatives in the counter claim. The plaintiff had been accustomed to the management of public houses for thirty years, and the defendant was what he called a public house monger – dealing in public houses in various places – and was owner at the present time of several public houses. In December last an advertisement appeared in the local papers that the BELL HOTEL, Rood End, near Oldbury, with the goodwill, license, fixtures, fittings, and furniture, was for sale. On the 15th December the plaintiff waited on Mr. Mordant, an auctioneer, in Birmingham, who was acting for Clara Waite, the owner of the house. The reason given why Mr. Mordant's name appeared in the advertisement was that Clara Waite was mixed up with some illicit whisky case – she had been buying or receiving from the Stephensons – and was apprehensive of an excise prosecution against her for penalties in reference to that prosecution. After the interview the plaintiff and his wife went to Rood End and viewed the house. Plaintiff and his wife, the defendant, Mr. Mordant, and his clerk, met for the purpose of negotiating, and upon that occasion Clara Waite repeated the statement that she was desirous of leaving in consequence of the Stephenson business. She said that the takings were £23, or thereabouts per week in the winter, and they ought to be £35 in the summer time. She said she was going to retire to a small house with a little furniture, so that if the Excise authorities proceeded against her they would get nothing. The defendant herself bought the house in the previous October, and they had discovered since that she bought the whole 'lock, stock, and barrel' from Messrs. Butler and Co, brewers, Wolverhampton, for the sum of £80. She agreed to sell the goodwill, possession, fixtures, and furniture to plaintiff for £740. When defendant bought the house an inventory was prepared by Mr. Barnett, of Wolverhampton, and accepted by Messrs. Gray, Son, and Walker, who were acting as agents for Miss. Waite. It was agreed that the sale to plaintiff should be made on the inventory of Mr. Barnett. The inventory prepared by Mr. Barnett was contained in a book. The book was handed to plaintiff but the only part of it which was ever part of Mr. Barnett's inventory was the cover, the first leaf and the last leaf. The whole of the intervening leaves had been substituted for Mr. Barnett's, and an attempt had been made to carry out a fraud in a clever manner. The plaintiff after he got into the house found that the takings did not reach £20 a week and that the inventory he accepted was not Barnett's at all.

Thomas Jackson Barnett, auctioneer, Wolverhampton, said the cover, the first leaf, and the last leaf of the inventory were the same as prepared by him. The intervening leaves were of an entirely different kind of paper.

Mr. Hugo Young: We admit that this is not Mr. Barnett's inventory, and therefore my friend need not labour that part.

Mr. Alfred Young: We are not going to put up with the admission that it is not the inventory. We are going to prove this fraud.

The witness, continuing, detailed the differences in the inventory produced and the one prepared by himself.

Cross-examined: The lease of the hotel had expired when it was sold to the defendant. A house with a lease would be worth more than one without, providing the rent was reasonably in proportion. He did not know whether the defendant sold a lease to the plaintiff or not.

The case at this point was adjourned."

“At Oldbury Petty Sessions, yesterday – before Messrs. W. E. Chance and S. Bennett – Geoffrey Shakespeare, of the BELL HOTEL, Rood End, Oldbury, applied for the transfer of the license of the above-named hotel from Charles Mills to himself.

An objection was raised to the transfer on the ground that a fortnight ago the applicant was fined 20s and costs for permitting drink to be consumed on the premises during illegal hours. Mr. Chance said that under the circumstances the Bench felt they could not consistently grant the transfer, as it was a serious matter for the applicant to be fined whilst holding a temporary authority.

Mr. W. Shakespeare, solicitor, urged that it was not the applicant who permitted the drinking, but a relative who was left in charge of the premises. If the defendant had allowed it the magistrates might then have taken a serious view of the case, but it was unfortunate for the applicant that the breach of the Licensing Act was permitted by another person.

Mr. Chance replied that Mr. Shakespeare was the responsible person.

Mr. Shakespeare (solicitor) urged that the applicant’s money had been invested in the hotel, and it would ruin him if the Bench declined to grant the transfer.

Mr. Chance: We must deal with the question on its merits, apart from such considerations.

Mr. Shakespeare again urged the Bench to alter their decision, but they declined to do so, and the transfer was accordingly refused.”

Nottingham Evening Post 26/8/1892

"Inhuman Treatment of a Dying Child.

Yesterday Mr. E. Docker, Coroner, held an inquest at the BELL HOTEL, Rood End, Oldbury, respecting the death of Annie Lissamore, six, whose parents, Enoch and Hannah Lissamore, reside at Rood End, who died suddenly on the 22nd inst.

Hannah Lissamore, mother of the deceased, having identified the body, the Coroner said he did not intend to ask the witness any more questions, as it might result in a very serious charge against the mother.

Patience Fenton, a neighbour, stated that about seven o'clock on Monday night she saw the mother nursing the child, and thinking the girl was suffering from croup, she advised the mother to put a linseed meal poultice on it, which she refused to do. Shortly afterwards the mother went out. Later witness tried to give deceased some brandy, but it was too far gone to drink any. Deceased was clothed badly, and had no shoes or stockings on, and was in a very neglected condition. The mother returned about 10.15 the same night in a drunken state, and when she saw the dying child lying on the sofa she snatched it up, and the poultices fell off. She considered the child was neglected through the mother drinking so excessively.

Another witness said the mother struck her husband three times whilst the child was dying without any provocation.

Police-constable Bayliss stated that about 10pm he found the child nearly dead lying on a dirty screen, and the mother sitting by it drunk. The dirt was completely caked on the child's body, and the house was also dirty. There was a crowd of people outside the house trying to get at the mother to lynch her.

Dr. Lyddon, who made a post mortem examination of the body, said death resulted from inflammation of the lungs. He believed if a medical man had been called in, and the child had received proper treatment, it would have been alive now.

The Coroner said there was no doubt that the child had been subjected to great neglect by the mother, and at a time when it most needed a mother's care.

The jury returned a verdict of Death from Natural Causes, but added a rider to the effect that death was accelerated by want of proper treatment on the part of the mother, and expressed opinion that she was deserving of a severe censure. The Coroner reprimanded the mother, and disallowed her expenses."

One of the stark facts about the Midland coalfields at the moment is that thousands of children come down to bare tables in the morning and have to wait for their first meal of the day until the group feeding stations open at noon or thereabouts. The wonderful shifts they are making with inadequate means to cope with all the demands made upon them constitute one of the most gallant stories of the coal stoppage. Evening Despatch 5/4/1939

"When Benjamin Harvey, aged 24, of the BELL HOTEL, Rood End, Oldbury, was stopped while driving a motor-car in Dudley Road, Tividale, at 9pm on 18 February, and told he was exceeding the speed limit, he told the policeman, 'I am in a hurry to meet my girl at 9.15.'

When Harvey was summoned at Oldbury today for exceeding 30mph his solicitor, Mr. Vincent Matthews, said the offence was admitted, but reminded the Bench that it was spring-time, a period of the year when a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love. Perhaps when his client got a bit older and the romance came to fruition, he might not be in such a hurry to keep such an appointment.

It was alleged that Harvey's speed was between 40mph and 50mph. He was fined £2."

Birmingham Mail 22/5/1939

"Five occupants of the BELL HOTEL, Rood End, Langley, the licensee of which is Mr. Benjamin Harvey, had lucky escapes during a fire on the premises early yesterday. At about 5am Mr. Harvey, who with his wife was in a bedroom over the bar, awoke and found the room full of smoke. He aroused the other inmates of the house – his son and two barmaids. Their exit by the stairs was made impossible by dense smoke rising from the bar. Windows were flung open, and cries for help were heard by Mr. E. A. Savage, who lives in adjoining premises. He roused other neighbours, ladders were brought from the premises of Mr. S. Smith, slater, and all the occupants descended the ladders. Mrs. Harvey, who is in ill-health, had to be assisted from the premises.

Oldbury Fire Brigade was engaged for two hours. Damage estimated at about £300 was done to the premises and furniture and many spirits were destroyed. The cause of the fire is believed to be the overheating of a slow combustion stove in the bar."

Evening Despatch 24/8/1945

"Alleged to have called at the public house and behaved in a truculent manner, and created a disturbance, Thomas Poole, of the Pioneer Corps, 3, Bell Fold, Rood End, Oldbury, home on leave from Holland, was at Oldbury today fined 20s on each of three summonses for assaulting Benjamin Harvey licensee of the BELL INN, Rood End, and his wife, and also for damaging two windows at the inn to the extent of £7, which he was also ordered to pay."

“In an intensive and very informal visit to Birmingham yesterday, the Duke of Edinburgh met hundreds of people, ranging from industrial designers to pastry cooks.....

But for most of the day, the tone of the tour was lighthearted and never more so than during his one-hour visit to the College of Food. He was greeted by hundreds of students and staff and shown the many aspects of the college's life. Two of the first students he spoke to were Mrs. Ida Jenking, of the Hydraulic Inn, Lodge Road, Hockley, and Mrs. Kay Bolter, of the BELL, Rood End, Oldbury. Both licensee's wives, they were asked by the Duke if they 'specialised in those sandwiches which turn up at the end.' Mrs. Jenking replied that she did not and that the Duke would have to pay a visit to their public houses, adding, 'We have some nice sausage rolls as well.' The Duke replied, 'That's good. No one seems to know how to make good sausage rolls any more'.”

“When you have to wait to turn on TV.

Miss Jean Wright, of the BELL INN, Rood End Road, Warley, Worcs, writes.

Yes, I can well appreciate the point of view of the reader who objected to the late screening of some good programmes on ITV and BBC. May I therefore respectfully suggest that he try to see my side of the story, which applies to hundreds of other people in my position?

I have lived in a public house all my life and besides working behind the bar every night, I do a full-time office job as well. So it is a real pleasure on a Saturday night to finish cleaning up and then go into the living room for a bite of supper with the family and watch the Midnight Movie. The same applies on Sunday night when we can watch 'Danger Man' after 'time.'

We used to enjoy watching the Saturday afternoon film on BBC2 but, since it now starts at 2pm, it is almost over by the time we manage to sit down. However, we do appreciate the fact that the programmes are periodically shown at different times to enable all viewers to see them at the time most suitable to themselves. So you see, we are just one of the many families who enjoy watching the Late Shows, especially after serving the public their nightly sustenance.

As long as the programmes are eventually changed back to our times we are quite prepared to wait our turn. When the problem is looked at logically it is quite easy to see that both ITV and BBC do a pretty good job of trying to please everyone.”

“A landmark Oldbury pub 'at the heart of the local community' is up for sale for £90k. The BELL INN business is for sale on a leasehold basis, with the rent £2,500 a month. The current owner, who has run the pub for 19 years, is retiring and there is a chance for a new owner to take the reins. Sales notes state, 'This is a superb opportunity to take on a popular and well used local business in an area teeming with customers. There has been a public house at this site for many years and the current owner has run it for the last 19 years during which time it has accrued an impressive number of regular customers along with a fantastic reputation. The business can truly be said to be at the heart of the local community and has been a real labour of love for the owner. The business is now being sold, albeit reluctantly and with heavy heart, only due to the vendor's wish to take a well-earned retirement; he is keen to see his beloved public house pass to an ambitious and entrepreneurial new owner who can take this already thriving business to the next level.' It states that the pub is popular with locals but also has customers that travel from some way away, such is its popularity and it enjoys some lovely reviews....”

Birmingham Daily Post 22/9/1864 - Letter

“To the Editor of the Birmingham Daily Post.

Sir, it is made to appear, in your impression of Wednesday, the 14th instant, that at the annual meeting for granting and renewing of licenses for Oldbury and Hales Owen districts, the following persons were cautioned, in consequence of complaints having been made by the police. Thomas Welch, BLACK HORSE INN; Benjamin Garner, HARMONIC INN; George Minchin, BELL INN, Rounds Green; also John Ballard, RED COW INN, all of Oldbury. Now, in fairness and justice to the police, we wish it to be understood that not in regard to any of the above persons charged was a single complaint made by the police, neither was any intimation given in any way, until actually confronted by the Magistrates themselves, which quite astounded all the accused. The matter of fact is, that the Magistrates had been furnished with a private note by some person, who, knowing the truth was absent, had not the manliness to make the charge in person; excepting in the case of Thomas Welch, who was informed against by a neighbour. Thus the accused were not afforded an opportunity to be legally represented, to have those accusations rebuffed. By inserting the above, you will oblige, your obedient servants.

Thomas Welch, Benjamin Garner, George Minchin, John Ballard.

“Mr. Shakespeare appeared on behalf of Thomas Knight, of the BELL INN, Rounds Green, and asked for a renewal of the license, which was adjourned from the annual meeting in consequence of the license being endorsed for permitting drunkenness. Mr. Shakespeare said his client regretted very much the circumstances which caused the Justices to come to that decision, and through him promised to conduct his house as well as possible in the future. He had kept the house upwards of nine years, and during that time no complaint had been made against the house. He put in a memorial from the inhabitants of the place, stating that he was a respectable man, and always conducted his house in an exemplary manner.

Mr. Avery said he remembered the case against Knight. Mr. Chance, Mr. Wilson, and himself heard the case, and the reason they did not impose a greater fine was the good character Knight had previously borne. They recollected Knight's good character then and they recollected it now, and, therefore would grant a renewal of the license; but it should be understood that while they supported all respectable publicans it was their duty, in the interests of order, that these lapses of duty should be corrected.”

“Today, Mr. E. Docker (Coroner) held an inquest at the BELL INN, Rounds Green, respecting the death of Herbert Henry Brookes (23), fitter, formerly residing in Brades Road, who died on Monday last, from the effects of bruises [sic] sustained on the 22nd inst whilst employed at an iron foundry belonging to Messrs. J. W. Brookes and Co. Limited. Mr. T. Dawes represented the widow of the deceased, Mr. V. G. Milward (instructed by Messrs. Thomas, Guest and Pearson) appeared for the firm, and Mr. H. Jackson (Inspector of Factories) also attended.

James William Brookes, father of the deceased, and managing director of the company, stated that the deceased was employed as a foreman fitter at the works. In reply to Mr. Milward, witness said there was no defect in the machinery used for moving the molten metal, so far as he knew, and no complaints had been received from the workmen of any defects. Deceased was a practical man, and had served his apprenticeship to the trade, being well acquainted with the methods in use in a foundry. At the time of the accident the men were engaged in an ordinary operation for casting. In reply to Mr. Dawes, witness stated that he had examined the blocks and crane used since the accident, but had failed to discover any defects in any portion of them. He could not account for the accident unless the men engaged in pouring the molten metal lost their presence of mind temporarily. Such an accident ought not to have occurred.

Samuel Chapman, also a director of the company and manager of the foundry department, and who was present at the time of the accident, said the deceased and a number of other men were about to cast a large bed plate. One ladle containing about four tons of molten metal was at one end of the mould, whilst at the other end was another ladle containing about 27cwt of the metal. The deceased and two other men were near the smaller ladle, which in order to make it safe was being hooked to a small crane when from some unexplained cause the ladle tipped over on a stand upon which it had been placed, and the molten metal began to flow over the floor of the foundry on the side where deceased was standing. The deceased jumped to get out of the way, and in doing so fell down in the metal. He, however, managed to escape through the door, and in his agony leaped into a pool of water in the yard. He was pulled out of the water and conveyed to his father's house on the premises, where he remained until his death. In reply to the Coroner, witness said he did not see the accident happen, and his idea was that it was caused through the three men in charge of the ladle failing to see that it was safely hooked to the smaller crane. Both cranes and hooks were in perfect order. He did not consider that blame attached to anyone.

The father of the deceased, in reply to further question by the Coroner, said he could not understand how the accident happened, and he did not know how the large crane came to be disconnected before the smaller one was connected.

In answer to Mr. Milward, Mr. Chapman said the ladle which slipped over would have been safe on the stand without the crane, which is connected to it as a double safeguard.

Dr. Harper, who attended the deceased, described the terrible injuries which he had sustained to the hands, arms, face right side, and legs, and Mr. Jackson said he had no complaint to make of any infringement of the Factory Acts.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death, no blame being attached to any one. They also expressed sympathy with the parents and widow of the deceased man.

Today, upon enquiry at West Bromwich Hospital, our representative was informed that the other two injured men are making satisfactory progress towards recovery.”

“Most Desirable Properties in Oldbury.

To be Sold by Auction, by Thomas Pitt Stokes, at the TALBOT INN, in the town of Oldbury, this present Monday the 25th of November, at five o’clock in the afternoon, in such lots as will be specified in printed particulars as may be then determined – the following important and valuable Properties, in the centre of the flourishing and increasing town of Oldbury, commanding obvious advantages, and occupying a range of frontages in the best situation, thus rendering them admirably well calculated for the various branches of business which are now so extensively and lucratively pursued in that thriving place.

The Butcher’s Shop and Premises in the occupation of Benjamin Elwell.

The Saddler’s Shop lately occupied by Thomas Lancaster.

That well-known, long-established, and first-rate Inn, called the TALBOT, in the occupation of Mr. Samuel Parish, with its Brewery, Stabling, Coach-house, large Yard, Garden, and other suitable conveniences for carrying on the business of an Innkeeper to a large and profitable extent.

The Draper’s Shop and Premises in the occupation of Mr. George Purser.

The Dwelling House and Premises in the occupation of John Green, Fruiterer.

The Dwelling House, Outbuildings, and Premises in the occupation of Thomas Nock.

The Dwelling House, Shop, Stabling, and other Premises in the occupation of William Hinds, Baker.

A capital old licensed Public House, called the RED COW, with a large Club-room, &c and Stabling, Slaughter-house, and other Premises in the occupation of Joseph Bate.

A Dwelling House and Premises in the occupation of Sarah Jewkes.

A Butcher’s Shop and Premises in the occupation of Henry Bate.

All the above properties adjoin together and are Freehold.

An excellent Dwelling House, Stable, Piggery, Garden, Land, and Premises, in the centre of the town of Oldbury, in the occupation of Benjamin Elwell.

Three Dwelling Houses, Gardens and Premises at the back, in the occupation Joseph Booton, Thomas Gibbs, and William Hall.

The last-described Properties are Copyhold.

A well-accustomed Freehold Public House, called the BIRD IN HAND, at Rounds Green, within a short distance of the town of Oldbury, and surrounded by Collieries and Ironworks, with the new Club-room, Stabling, Garden, and Premises in the occupation of Thomas Hadley.

Another Freehold Dwelling House and Premises, at Rounds Green, in the occupation of Joseph Drewry.

An adjoining Dwelling House, Stable, and Premises in the occupation of Samuel Turvey.

Printed particulars and all further information may be obtained from Mr. W. Fellowes, Solicitor, Dudley.”

“Oldbury. Board of Health.

The first meeting after the election of the members of this Board was held on Friday morning last, at the Clerk's office, Church Street. Mr. William Underhill was unanimously appointed chairman. Attention was called by Mr. Showell to the recent election, and to several cases of tampering with the voting papers. Mr. James Sadler made a statement to the effect that a number of voting papers were filled up by a person named Stamps, at the BIRD IN HAND, Rounds Green, in a very irregular and improper manner, names being forged and crosses affixed without the authority of the voters. It was much to be regretted that the Board could not take the matter up and punish the offenders, instead of the prosecution being left to the person aggrieved.”

Dudley and District News 24/9/1881

“An inquest was held at the BIRD IN HAND public house, Rounds Green, Oldbury, on Monday afternoon, on the bodies of Zachariah Mason (7), and Albert Mason (5), the sons of Benjamin Mason, a collier, residing in Newbury Lane, Rounds Green, and who met with a shocking death on the tramway used for the purpose of conveying coal from the Blue Fly Colliery to the wharf at the side of the Birmingham Canal at Rounds Green, on Saturday afternoon. Mr. Docker was the coroner.

The children were playing on the tramway and being scared, they took to their heels, running up the tramway in the direction of the colliery. They were met by a ‘journey’ of wagons, and the space being only of sufficient width to admit the passage of the wagons the bodies of the two children were crushed.

A verdict of Accidental Death was returned.”

Birmingham Daily Post 28/5/1884

“At Oldbury Police Court, yesterday.....

Mary Ann Hadley, of the BIRD IN HAND, Rounds Green, was summoned for permitting drunkenness on her licensed premises, on the 17 inst. Police-constable Smith said he visited defendant’s house twice on the day named, and on each occasion found four men there drunk. The Bench imposed a fine of 20s, and the costs 11s.

Joseph Price, Joseph Stone, Richard Crump, and Joseph Harrold were charged with being drunk on the premises, and were each fined 2s 6d and costs.”

Birmingham Daily Post 12/6/1884

“Mary Ann Hadley, of the BIRD IN HAND INN, Rounds Green, was summoned for selling intoxicating drinks in an unauthorised place, on the 2nd inst.

Police-constable Smith deposed that on the day named he saw a number of people congregated on a piece of ground adjoining defendant’s back premises. A walking match was going on, and he saw drink being sold there.

Mr. Shakespeare, who appeared for the defence, admitted the facts, but contended that the piece of land in question was formerly used as a peg alley, and formed part of the licensed premises. The Bench adjourned the case for the production of further evidence upon this point.”

Birmingham Daily Post 6/8/1884

“At Oldbury Police Court, yesterday.....

Mary Ann Hadley, of the BIRD IN HAND, Rounds Green, appeared in answer to an adjourned summons charging her with selling on unlicensed premises. Mr. Shakespeare, who appeared to defend, said the case was adjourned two months ago in order that it might be ascertained whether the piece of land on which the sale took place and the public house were under one assessment.

Mr. E. Wright, assistant overseer and poor rate collector, stated that the land in question and the public house were assessed together, and had always been one property. The case was dismissed.”

Birmingham Daily Post 26/8/1884

“The annual licensing session for Oldbury Petty Sessional division was held yesterday.....

The whole of the licenses were renewed with the exception of those held by.....

Mary Ann Hadley, BIRD IN HAND, Rounds Green all of which were deferred until the adjourned licensing day.”

Smethwick Telephone 27/9/1884

“The adjourned licensing session for the division of Oldbury was held at the Police Court on Tuesday.....

Mary Ann Hadley whose licenses had been adjourned at the annual meeting, were called before the Bench, and after being cautioned as to their future conduct the applicants’ licenses were all renewed.”

Smethwick Telephone 29/8/1885

“Mary Ann Hadley, of the BIRD IN HAND, Rounds Green, was charged with permitting drunkenness on her licensed premises, on the 18th inst. Mr. Shakespeare defended.

Police-constable Smith deposed to visiting the house on the night named at 8.30, and to finding a man named Charles Westwood in a drunken sleep. A jug containing ale stood before him on the table.

Mr. Shakespeare for the defence denied that the man had anything supplied to him on these premises, and said so careful was the landlady that she refused to supply another man who was with Westwood, and who was perfectly sober, lest Westwood should thereby get some. Several witnesses were called to confirm this, and the case was dismissed.

Westwood was fined 5s and costs for being drunk on the premises.”

Wolverhampton Express and Star 22/9/1885

“At Oldbury Court, today, John Lowe and George Perry, both of Churchbridge, were charged with being drunk and disorderly, and refusing to quit the licensed premises of the MANCHESTER STORES, in the same locality, on the 12th inst. The two men went into the house the worse for beer, and on being requested to leave they refused. Perry became violent and picked up a poker, which was taken from him by Police-constable Clarke. Perry was ordered to pay £1 and Lowe 15s, including costs.

Smethwick Telephone 28/8/1886

“The annual Licensing Sessions were held on Tuesday.....

The following persons had been summoned for offences against the licensing laws, and dealt with as follows Licensed Victuallers.....

Birmingham Mail 28/1/1901

“This morning the body of Phoebe Nickless (25), who had been missing from her home at the BIRD IN HAND INN, Rounds Green, since December 17th, was found in the Birmingham Canal near Titford Pool. It was in an advanced state of decomposition, and it had apparently been hidden behind some stationary boats in the locality, and the storm which raged last night brought it to the surface. The body was conveyed to the Oldbury Mortuary, where it was identified by deceased’s brother. It is supposed that deceased committed suicide on the date named in consequence of disappointment in a love affair.”

“Superintendent Sheriff explained that he had served notice of objection upon the owners of the BIRD IN HAND INN, Rounds Green, to the renewal of the license in consequence of alterations being made to the premises without plans having been first submitted to the Licensing Justices for approval. The inside of the house had been remodelled entirely. There were three other licensed houses within a radius of 150 yards of this house.

In reply to Mr. F. W. Green, of Dudley, who appeared for the owners of the house, Superintendent Sheriff said he did not think the drinking facilities of the house had been increased very materially.

Mr. Green explained that his clients only took over the house about two months ago, and they had simply renovated the interior of the premises.”

[The license was renewed.]

Smethwick Weekly News 26/10/1901

“Enoch Mason, of Chapel Street, Rounds Green, was charged with being drunk on the licensed premises of the BIRD IN HAND INN, Rounds Green, on 15th inst.

PC Haden proved the offence, and a fine of 2s 6d, and costs was imposed.”

Smethwick Weekly News 22/2/1902

“Joseph Jenkins (33), Tabernacle Street, Oldbury, was charged with doing wilful damage to a plate-glass window belonging to Joseph Plant, landlord of the BIRD IN HAND, Rounds Green.

Mr. J. S. Sharpe who prosecuted, said the damage amounted to £4. It appeared that defendant was sitting in the bar, and began to quarrel with a man named Skidmore, and in his temper he picked up his jug, and ‘threw it through the window.’ When at the station, he said he had done it, and supposed he would have to pay for it.

Defendant now said they picked up their jugs to throw at each other, and he threw his first.

Mr. Chance said it was rather an expensive way of losing his temper, and he would have to pay 1s and costs, 11s in all, and the damage to the window, £4, or in default, one month’s hard labour.

Defendant was only a collier, but managed to get enough money to pay on the spot.”

Birmingham Mail 8/4/1904

“At West Bromwich County Court, today, before Judge Howland Roberts, an action was brought by Lewis

Skelding, of BIRD IN HAND INN, Rounds Green, Oldbury, to recover £10 from Elijah Debney, puddler, of Eel Street, Oldbury.

Mr. Darby explained that the plaintiff placed £10 in the hands of the defendant as a stake in connection with a race which, it was argued, should be flown between pigeons belonging to the parties. The race, which was to be on a course a mile in length, was arranged to take place about last Christmas. The pigeons were not to fly over the same course. Each pigeon flew from a certain point to its home, and the distance was measured in each case. Before the race took place some dispute arose with regard to a discrepancy as to the length of one of the courses, the plaintiff alleging that it was thirty or forty yards short. It did not seem a great matter, but it made all the difference between winning and losing. The measurements were ultimately disallowed, and the plaintiff thereupon requested the defendant to return his stake. It transpired that the match was cried off on December 22nd.

For the defence it was contended that the defendant was not the proper person to sue.

The Judge gave a verdict for the plaintiff for the full amount claimed.”

Plant's Brewery Ltd were fined 20s and £2 12s 6d costs, on 7th June 1904, for permitting drunkenness.

A team from here took part in the Oldbury and District Air-Gun League. [1905]

“A Nimble Landlady.

Mary Ann Birch was summoned at Oldbury yesterday for refusing to quit the BIRD IN HAND INN at Rounds Green. Mrs. Birch abused the landlady and struck at her, and afterwards threw two jugs at her. The landlady dodged the missiles, which smashed some glasses and gas burners. Mrs. Birch pleaded that she was first attacked, and the magistrates merely imposed a fine of 5s, including costs.”

“Licensing Sessions.....

Mr. A. M. Chance presided at Oldbury. The report of Superintendent Hill stated that there were 126 licences in the district, a reduction of seven on the previous year, which compared with the estimated population, gave a ratio of one on-licence to every 354 of the inhabitants. One licence-holder only was convicted during the year, while eighty-eight persons were convicted for drunkenness, a decrease of forty-three on the previous year.....

The police objected to the renewal of the following twelve licences which will be considered at the adjourned sessions, to be held on March 2.....

BIRD IN HAND.”

The license renewal was referred to the Compensation Authority on 2nd March 1909.

Birmingham Daily Gazette 3/3/1909

“The adjourned licensing sessions for Oldbury were held yesterday, Mr. G. S. Albright presiding in the absence, through illness, of Mr. A. M. Chance. The magistrates were sitting for several hours, chiefly in hearing evidence regarding the following licensed houses, to the renewal of which the police objected on the grounds of redundancy, the magistrates proposing to refer them for compensation.....

BIRD IN HAND, alehouse, Rounds Green, owner Messrs. Plant and Co.....

Evidence was given in each case by Superintendent Hill and Mr. F. H. Jones, auctioneer and valuer, as to the nature of the houses, and the proximity of other licensed premises. The magistrates afterwards retired to consider the cases, and upon resuming Mr. Albright said they had decided to refer the following six houses to Worcester to be dealt with under compensation: CRYSTAL PALACE, NAVIGATION INN, HOPE AND ANCHOR, FOUNTAIN, CROSS KEYS, and BIRD IN HAND. All the other licences would be renewed, and the licences of these six would be provisionally renewed pending the county committee's investigations.....”

The license was renewed on 3rd July 1909.

Evesham Standard 10/7/1909

“The Worcestershire Licensing Committee sat on Saturday to continue consideration of the 25 licenses which had been referred to them as the compensation authority by the local justices.....

Mr. Coventry (instructed by Messrs. Thompson and Warmington) appeared for all parties concerned in the BIRD IN HAND, Rounds Green, Oldbury, the renewal of which was opposed by Mr. Shakespeare, for the Oldbury justices. Evidence was given in support of the license to the effect that it was a good-paying house, and that since 1906 the brewers' bill had increased from £500 to £700.

The Committee renewed the licenses of the BIRD IN HAND.”

“At the Oldbury Licensing sessions yesterday, the Superintendent's report showed there were 114 licences (69 fully licensed), representing one to every 283 persons. During the year on licensed holder was proceeded against for an infringement, and 17 persons were convicted for drunkenness.

Objection was taken by the Superintendent to the renewal of 16 licenses on the ground of redundancy, and, after private consideration, the Bench reduced these to four, to be referred for compensation. These are: BIRD IN HAND, Rounds Green; FOUNTAIN INN, Stone Street; OLD BOAT, Canal-side: and MANCHESTER STORES, Church Bridge.”

“Alleged to have defrauded an Oldbury licensee by means of a cheque which was dishonoured, and to have obtained £50 by the sale of a motor-van which was never his property, Frank Thompson Martin, aged 33, a motor engineer, of 44, Forest Road, Warley, was, at Oldbury yesterday, committed to the Quarter Sessions, bail being allowed.

Martin was alleged to have obtained £10 by false pretences from Thomas Henry Ward, licensee of the BIRD IN HAND, Rounds Green, on 26 February, and to have obtained a valuable security, namely, a cheque for £51 18s 6d, by false pretences, from Midland Motor Development Ltd, Redditch, on 18, January.

In the first case it was alleged that along with a friend, who was known to the licensee, Martin called upon Ward, who agreed to cash Martin a cheque for £12. He gave him £10 and told him to call for the other £2 later. Martin explained that he had been to the bank, but had arrived there too late.

Subsequently Ward handed the cheque from Martin to a tradesman, but it was returned, marked ‘Refer to drawer.’

In the second case it was alleged that Martin went to Birmingham Garages Ltd, Navigation Street, and made arrangements for the purchase of a motor-van for £30. He paid £5 deposit, but the balance was still owing, and the van had therefore never been his own property. Subsequently he went to Neath Bros, removal contractors, Bromsgrove, and persuaded them to buy the van from him. The price was agreed at £72 10s and a deposit was paid. The firm wanted to carry out the transaction by hire purchase, and Martin went to Midland Motor Development Ltd, a firm of hire purchase financiers, and arranged with them to complete the transaction on behalf of Neath Bros. He signed a declaration that the vehicle was his sole property, and received from them a cheque for £51 18s 6d. Martin cashed the cheque, but the van was never delivered.”

“Worcestershire Quarter Sessions.....

Martin Frank Thompson, aged 30, a motor mechanic, committed from Oldbury, charged with having obtained £51 18s 6d by false pretences from the Midland Motor Development Co, Redditch, and £10 by false pretences from Thomas Henry Ward, of Oldbury, did not surrender to his bail and a warrant for his arrest was issued.”

“A. Bayliss, of the Trade Union Hall and Institute, Oldbury, is the individual champion of the Oldbury and District Darts League which comprises between 300 and 400 players. He won the honour – which carries with it the Councillor Vickers Cup – by defeating G. Price, the BIRD IN HAND, Rounds Green, thrower, in the final at the WAGON AND HORSES, Oldbury, last night.

The final was decided over one straight ‘leg’ of 501, and Bayliss, after streaking ahead confidently, eventually had a hard task to win. At one time he was throwing for his final double when Price was 200 behind. At length Bayliss needed double one and Price double five. Then Bayliss planted an arrow in the objective.”

"An inquest was held before Mr. Ralph Docker, Coroner, on Monday last, at the BIRD IN HAND, Simpson Street, Oldbury, on the body of Sarah Lamster, aged sixty-three, the wife of Daniel Lamster, employed at the carriage works. It transpired in evidence that, on Thursday last, the deceased, who resided in Simpson Street, was in her usual state of health, and nothing peculiar was observed about her manner. At about six o'clock a neighbour, named Ann Cook, went into the house of the unfortunate woman, and found her in front of the fire-grate, in a kneeling posture, and quite dead. Mr. Hayward, surgeon, was of opinion that death was occasioned by disease of the heart. After hearing the evidence, the Jury returned a verdict of Died from Natural Causes."

BIRD IN HAND INN, from the Executors of Humphrey Parkes to Mary Parkes."

Birmingham Daily Post 22/1/1869

"Yesterday, an inquest was held at the BIRD IN HAND, Simpson Street, Oldbury, before Mr. R. Docker (Coroner), respecting the death of a young woman, whose body was found in a branch of the Old Birmingham Canal, near the old Wesleyan Cemetery, on Tuesday morning last.

Joseph Rice proved discovering the body.

Ann Davies identified the body as that of Sarah Davies, eighteen years of age. Deceased was her husband's niece, and was a servant in the employ of Mrs. Wilson, of 117, Bloomsbury, Birmingham. On Sunday, the 27th ult, she obtained leave to pay a visit to witness's house. Witness last saw her alive on Monday, the 28th ult, when she went to the railway station at Oldbury with her cousin, who was going to the Potteries. She (witness) gave her 6d to pay her fare to Birmingham, understanding that she was to return to service after seeing her cousin off. She appeared to be in very good spirits, and had expressed no dissatisfaction with her situation. She received a letter from deceased's mistress on Wednesday, the 30th ult, asking why deceased had not returned according to promise. Witness replied that she understood she had returned. She heard nothing more of her until the day she was found in the canal.

Hannah Parkes said she was in service at the TALBOT INN, Birmingham Street, Oldbury. She had known the deceased for several years. On the evening of the 28th ult she came to the TALBOT, and stayed gossiping with her until about nine o'clock. She then left, saying that she was going back to Birmingham. She seemed in very good spirits. She had nothing to drink during her stay. In the course of a conversation they had, deceased said she was not satisfied with her situation. In reply to the Jury, witness said deceased would have to cross a bridge over the canal in which she was drowned, and not far from the place where she was found.

Mr. Henry Sainsbury stated that he had examined the body, which was very much swollen, and partially decomposed. There were some recent bruises upon the face, which he thought, however, were made in getting her from the canal. There were no bones broken, and no other external marks of violence upon the body. The clothes were not at all disordered.

Phoebe Willetts said she resided in a house about forty yards distant from the place where the deceased's body was found. On Wednesday, the 30th ult, her attention was called to a bonnet lying in an empty stationary boat; she caused it to be taken out. She now produced it. It was nearly new, and was identified by Mrs. Davies as that deceased wore when she last saw her alive.

This was all the evidence adduced, and the Jury returned a verdict of Found Drowned."

Mary Ann Parkes had to pay costs for permitting gaming in September 1870.

“John Jones, landlord of the BIRD IN HAND INN, Simpson Street, was charged with refusing to admit the police into his licensed premises on the 1st inst.

Police-constable Rivers stated that on passing defendant’s house at 2 o’clock am he heard several persons talking in the smoke room; he listened for some time and distinctly heard the words ‘That’s four games; that is 1½d each.’ He knocked at the door, and in about five minutes afterwards the landlord came to the bed room window and asked who was there. Witness replied that it was the police, whereupon the landlord told him he should not admit the police or any one else, and closed the window.

Mr. Shakespeare, who defended, said that there was no doubt there had been a technical offence committed in not allowing the police admittance, but defendant, who had only been in business a short time, was under the impression that as there had been no gambling he had a right to refuse to admit the police at that hour in the night.

Defendant was ordered to pay a fine of 10s and costs.”

County Express 7/1/1888

“On Wednesday afternoon Mr. F. W. Topham (deputy coroner for the South Staffordshire district) resumed an enquiry at the ROYAL OAK INN, Blackheath, on the body of Sarah Debney (22), a single woman, whose parents reside at Halesowen Street, Oldbury.

The Coroner said that when the enquiry was opened he took the evidence of the father of the deceased, which went beyond the mere identity of the body. It went into particulars as to where the deceased had been and what she had been doing some little time before her death, and he thought it would be well to read over that evidence.

John Debney, a general dealer, of Halesowen Street, Oldbury, said that in his opinion his daughter died from miscarriage, or from catching cold. His wife had told him that the deceased was pregnant. On the 23rd of November he was told that his daughter had gone to see Buffalo Bill. As she did not return that night he sent to the house of Herbert Hadley, with whom she had been keeping company, and he (Hadley) said that when they went to see Buffalo Bill the deceased was taken ill in the crowd, and was taken to his aunt’s house in a cab, but that she was all right. Deceased returned home on the Saturday night. On Tuesday she was very ill, but said, ‘There is not that the matter with me of which I am accused.’ On the Monday she went to the house of her sister at Blackheath and died there.

John Debney, re-called, said Hadley did not give witness any address when he said deceased was at his aunt’s house.

The Coroner: You rested contented with the assurance that she was in Birmingham and was all right?

Witness: Yes. I hope this case will be thoroughly understood, and the truth got at, and the guilty parties exposed and punished. That is all I wish.

The Coroner: I hope so.

Mr. James Griffin Beasley, surgeon, Rowley, said that last Monday week he received a precept from the coroner to make a post mortem examination of the body of the deceased. He accordingly made an examination on the following day. He found that she had been delivered of a foetus about three weeks before, of some considerable age. He considered that she must have been over six months advanced. He found no signs of internal violence. In his opinion blood poisoning was the cause of death, caused probably by recent confinement. This was probably caused by inflammation in the womb. There was nothing to indicate that she had been improperly treated in her confinement; but sufficient time had elapsed to remove in a great measure any traces of violence. She was suffering from pleurisy when she died; but this was not sufficient to account for death. The kidneys and lungs were more or less inflamed.

Hebert Hadley, corn dealer, Whimsey Bridge, Oldbury, said he was courting the deceased, and had been engaged to her nearly two years. He knew she was pregnant; but he did not know when she expected to be confined. She told that she was pregnant five or six months back, and he asked her to get married, but she refused. He did not know why she objected to marry; but she kept putting it off. About six weeks ago the deceased stayed out all night, and as her parents enquired at his house where she was he went to their house and told them that they had been to see Buffalo Bill on the previous night, that deceased had been taken ill in the crowd, that he had taken her to his aunt's house in a cab, and that she was all right. This was altogether false and untrue, but he said this at the request of the deceased. As a matter of fact the deceased was staying at Mary Jones's, the BIRD IN HAND, Simpson Street, Oldbury, where she went on the afternoon of Wednesday, the 23rd November. He took there on that day, and saw Mrs. Jones and the servant. Before taking her there she told him that she was in pain, and witness wanted to her to have a doctor; but she objected, and said she would not stay at home, but would rather die in the road. She told him that when she had left home at night her mother had said, 'You can go anywhere and drown yourself if you like.' Witness asked Mrs. Jones if she would object to the deceased staying there a bit, and she replied that she had no objection. He knew that deceased was going to Mrs. Jones's to be confined; he preferred that it should take place there, as she complained of the way she had been treated. Witness proposed that they should send for a doctor, but deceased objected to this, and witness asked Mrs. Jones if she knew any one whom they could send for, to which she replied that she knew an old woman and would send for her. Witness left the house, and when he returned about half an hour later the deceased was in bed. He was told that the old woman spoken of by Mrs. Jones had come. When the woman came downstairs witness gave her 10s for the support of the deceased; he was willing to do anything for the deceased. The woman told witness that the deceased was very bad. Witness returned to the house about nine o'clock on the same night, and was told that the deceased had had a miscarriage, but was better and would soon be all right. He told the servant to see that the deceased was properly supported, as he did not care what it cost so that she was taken care of. On the following morning he went again to the house, and saw the deceased, who was in bed. She then told him what to tell her parents about going to see Buffalo Bill. She also told him that she had had a miscarriage. She had not taken anything as far as he knew, but two or three months ago she told him she had had a drink of herb tea. That (Wednesday) morning an old woman named Jerry told witness that she gave deceased the herb tea. On the Saturday following the day deceased went to Mrs. Jones's witness took her home. He noticed a change in her appearance when she left Mrs. Jones. When she got home he fetched her some sherry, some brandy, and a couple of eggs. As she was waiting in the shop on the same night he told her to keep out of the shop; and that if her parents complained he would take her to his home. He saw her again on the following night when she told him that she had been cleaning the floor with cold water that morning and was not so well. He then fetched half-a-pint of brandy for her, and took her something every day until she went to Blackheath. She worked the machine in the shop each day. When he visited her there was scarcely any fire in the room.

The father of deceased said that if there was not sufficient fire it was deceased's own fault.

Witness, continuing, said that on Monday he took deceased to her sister's house at Blackheath in her father's covered cart. While at her sister's house deceased slept on a sofa downstairs, and witness sat up with her two nights. In reply to Mr. Debney, witness said the deceased always said he was a good father, but she had a bad mother.

By a Juryman: Mrs. Jones was no relation to witness or the deceased.

Mary Ann Jones, BIRD IN HAND INN, Oldbury, said that on the 23rd of November the deceased and Hadley came to her house, and deceased asked to be allowed to lie down, as she did not feel well. Witness asked her what was the matter with her, and she replied that her mother had accused her of being pregnant, and she had taken a bottle of stuff, and she thought this had caused her illness. Witness asked if she should send for a doctor; but she said, 'No.' The servant said her grandmother, Mrs. Hale, was a midwife, and as deceased had said she was pregnant witness sent for her. Witness left home about half-past six, and when she returned five hours later she was surprised to find that the girl was still there, and in bed. Mrs. Hale complained that she had been fetched 'on a fool's errand,' and only remained in the house a few minutes. When witness returned home deceased was too ill to be sent home. Witness did not hear that there had been a miscarriage. When deceased first came to her house she only asked to be allowed to lie down; and out of kindness to the girl witness allowed her to lie down, believing that she would leave almost immediately. The servant never told witness that she was in the room when a child was born; deceased was never delivered of a child at her house. When asked if the servant told her the child had light hair, the witness laughed.

The Coroner: It is no laughing matter; and I am surprise at you treating it in such a trivial manner.

Witness: But she didn't have a child at my house.

The Coroner: I am not so sure about that.

By the Jury: She did not tell deceased's parents that the girl was at her house, because she understood that Hadley had told them. She did not know that there was a miscarriage. Deceased did not come to witness on the morning of the 23rd November and ask if she could remain in the house. Witness had never had a similar case in her house. She had never received any money for keeping the girl, nor had she made any agreement. Deceased would not tell her from whom she had the bottle of stuff. She told her that she had had words with her mother and would rather lie down in the gutter and die than go home.

The Coroner: I don't know what the jury think; but my opinion is that you know a great deal more than you choose to tell us.

Witness: No, I don't. I have told you all I known.

Mary Jane Fisher said he lived with the last witness as a domestic servant. She had known the deceased by sight about three weeks before her death. On the 23rd November deceased and Hadley came to the house and said she had been taking stuff and was very ill. Witness asked her why she had been taking stuff, to which she replied that she had caught cold. She lay on the sofa some time and afterwards went upstairs and lay on the bed. Soon after deceased came to the house witness fetched Mrs. Hale, who said there was nothing the matter with her, and complained that she had ben fetched 'on a fool's errand.' At the deceased's request, witness lent her some clothes. She had never told anyone that there was a child, and that it had light hair. She never saw a child put into a basket, and that she said, 'Don't put it into the basket; you will break its legs.' When Police-sergeant Salt and an Oldbury sergeant called at Mr. Jones's house to make enquiries, witness went to her grandmother's in a cab to tell her that enquiries were being made.

The Coroner: I am going to ask you a very straight question, and you must remember that you are on your oath. Don't you know as a matter of fact that Sarah Debney had a miscarriage or was confined at Mrs. Jones's house?

Witness: No. In further evidence witness said deceased told her she would rather die in the street than go home.

The Coroner: You all seem to have got that very pat. Mrs. Jones said that.

Jane Hale, midwife, Greets Green, said she saw the deceased at Mrs. Jones's house. She did not see a baby. She never received 10s from Hadley, but she knew that he left that sum, and witness received 5s of that amount. She remembered the last witness coming to her house in a cab to pay her and to tell her that the police were making enquiries. When witness examined deceased she was not pregnant; but she appeared to have been confined or to have had a miscarriage in the previous night.

By a juryman: She had been a midwife forty-five years, and had had plenty of experience. The last witness had only come to her house once in a cab.

Herbert Hadley, re-called, said he paid the 10s to Mrs. Hale.

Police-sergeant Salt, in reply to the coroner, said he had not been able to recover the body of the child.

The Coroner, in summing up, said he was sorry the enquiry would have to end in such an unsatisfactory manner. He was sure Police-sergeant Salt had spared no pains to sift the matter. There was not the slightest doubt, from the evidence of Dr. Beasley, that the deceased was delivered of a foetus, and that she died from blood poisoning arising from inflammation of the womb. Therefore this seemed to be a verdict which they were compelled to return. With regard to the evidence of Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Hale, and Miss Fisher, he did not believe a word they said. He believed that the whole of the mischief connected with this girl's death occurred in Mrs. Jones's house; but unfortunately could not be proved. It was only a matter of conjecture. A verdict must be returned upon the evidence, and he advised the jury to return a verdict that this girl died from blood poisoning, caused by inflammation of the womb.

Mr. B. Hadley (foreman) thought a rider should be added to the verdict. The result of the enquiry was very unsatisfactory. It was evident the witnesses concocted a story to bring to the jury.

The Coroner said he believed the three women who had given evidence were telling lies, and that the mischief took place at Mrs. Jones's house. But this was not proved, and the jury could not do impossibilities. They had examined the witnesses to the best of their ability; and the verdict would have its effect. Police-sergeant Salt and the other officers could take the women before the magistrates if they got sufficient evidence to warrant such a course; but that enquiry could be carried no further.

Mr. Hadley thought the jury should say they believed unlawful means had been used to procure abortion.

The Coroner: I quite agree with you.

Mr. Hadley suggested that the costs of the witnesses should not be allowed, to mark the disapproval of the jury of the manner in which they had given their evidence.

The Coroner at this stage had the three female witnesses called into the room and informed them that the jury were very dissatisfied with their evidence, and did not believe a word that they said. They believed that the deceased had met with some ill treatment in Mrs. Jones's house, and in consequence died. The only way in which the jury could mark their disapproval of the conduct of the witnesses before then was to disallow their expenses.

Mrs. Hill: That's a very good thing to come here for.

The jury returned a verdict in accordance with the medical evidence."

AND

"The death of the young woman, Sarah Debney, at Blackheath, under extraordinary circumstances, points its own moral. It is to be hoped the case is not a fair index to Black Country morals. The Court severely censured the female witnesses for the manner in which they gave their evidence. It is a recognised maxim of our law courts that a woman can tell a lie much better than a man. It is the same across the Atlantic. Many of the American Insurance offices decline to issue policies to women on the ground that a female 'insuree' either cannot, or will not, tell the truth about her age, her state of health, mode of life, and other particulars of actuarial importance."

Birmingham Daily Post 16/12/1891

"Last night Mr. E. Docker (coroner) held an inquest at the BIRD IN HAND INN, Simpson Street, touching the death of Selina Frewin (30), wife of Walter Frewin, of Simpson Street, who died suddenly on the 12th inst.

It appeared that deceased was seized with a sudden illness, and Dr. Buttery was called in, but upon going into the bedroom he found she was dead.

Dr. Buttery deposed that he had made a post mortem examination of the body, and found that death was due to heart disease.

The jury returned a verdict of Death from Natural Causes."

Birmingham Daily Post 23/4/1892

“Yesterday afternoon a funeral which was about to take place at Oldbury was stopped by the police. Mrs. Matilda Baker (73), widow, had been residing for some time past at the BIRD IN HAND, Simpson Street, Oldbury, with her sons, Samuel and Joseph Baker. On the 9th inst, she visited the COTTAGE SPRING public house in West Bromwich Street, which is kept by another son. Upon returning home she retired to bed, apparently in her usual health. Early on the following morning she was seized with sudden illness, and vomited a great deal. A doctor was called in, but she gradually became worse, and died on Sunday last. Owing to information given to Superintendent Speke yesterday he made enquiries, with the result that he took possession of the death certificate, which had been obtained. Arrangements had been made for the interment to take place yesterday afternoon, and the mourners and relatives of the deceased assembled at the residence of the deceased for that purpose, but the ceremony had to be postponed. The facts of the case have been reported to the coroner, Mr. E. Docker.”

“Joseph James (24), a collier, and son of the caretaker of the Abbey Road Schools, Warley, was committed for trial to the Worcester Assizes at a special court at Oldbury yesterday on charges of larceny and attempted larceny.

From the evidence it appeared that the prisoner entered the BIRD IN HAND INN, Simpson Street, Oldbury, on January 31, and called for some ale. He was afterwards left alone for a minute or two, and then went to the KINGS ARMS INN, Birmingham Street, where he said that he had had some money from the other public house, and proceeded to treat all the customers, spending 4s 6d. Subsequently he went to the DOG AND PHEASANT INN, Flash Road, and while there was seen by a servant from the scullery window to lean over the counter and interfere with the till. When the landlady spoke to him he said he was choking, and went away. It was ascertained later that 6s 5d had been taken from a glass at the back of the bar in the BIRD IN HAND public house.”

“Worcestershire Assizes.....

Joseph James (24), miner, was charged with stealing some money belonging to Emmanuel Love, licensee of the BIRD IN HAND, Simpson Street, Oldbury.

Prosecutor said he put 7s 4d in a jug on a shelf at 9.30. Later he missed 6s 5d.

Other witnesses stated that prisoner was at the inn, and afterwards spent 4s 6d at another house.

Prisoner now said he had never drank any beer in his life and he was not in Oldbury that night.

The jury found the prisoner guilty. Superintendent Hill said prisoner had respectable parents, who tried to keep him from a life of crime, which he commenced in 1903. Prisoner had been charged at Oldbury Police Court several times for offences similar to this, whilst he had also been convicted for burglary.

Prisoner said that if the Commissioner gave him three years it would be the making of him.

The Commissioner: Very well, I will. Three years' penal servitude.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 2/3/1910

“The adjourned Licensing Sessions for the Oldbury division were held yesterday, Mr. G. S. Albright presiding over the magistrates. The principal business was the consideration of six licences which the magistrates proposed to refer to the Quarter Sessions for compensation on the ground of redundancy. The houses in question were the CART AND HORSES, West Bromwich Street; BIRD IN HAND, Simpson Street; ROYAL OAK, Park Lane; NAGS HEAD, Flash Road; HOPE AND ANCHOR, Halesowen Street; and BOAT INN, Tat Bank.....

Mr. Albright then announced that the magistrates had decided to refer only four licenses to the Quarter Sessions at Worcester this year instead of six as originally proposed. They would therefore renew the licenses of the BIRD IN HAND and ROYAL OAK.”

Worcester Journal 5/7/1856

“Worcestershire Midsummer Sessions.....

Jane Parkes, 38, tailoress, Sarah Jane Parkes, 13, tailoress, Mary Ann Hodgetts, 39, dressmaker, and Eliza Hunt, 39, brickmaker, were indicted for uttering counterfeit coin at Oldbury on the 11th ult. Mr. Streeten prosecuted, and Mr. Richards defended the prisoner Hodgetts.

Mary Ann Bassford, wife of the keeper of the BLACK BOY beershop, Oldbury, stated that on the 11th ult, about eight o’clock in the evening, the four prisoners came to her house; Jane Parkes had a pint of ale; Hodgetts and Hunt left about ten minutes afterwards; one of them said they should not be long before they came back. Jane Parkes stayed till after eleven o’clock. Sarah Jane Parkes left the house several times during the evening; on two occasions of her return bringing with her some cakes and flowers; she gave some coppers to Jane Parkes, who put them into her basket. During the evening the latter asked witness to give her three half-crowns for some small change, which she did. Hodgetts and Hunt were strangers, but the Parkeses were known to witness. Hodgetts and Hunt were not in the house during any of the transactions stated.

Mary Deakin was at her daughter’s shop at Oldbury, on the 11th ult, when Sarah Jane Parkes came in and asked for a pennyworth of cakes, tendering a shilling in payment. Witness gave her the change, but before witness could pick up the shilling Parkes decamped, and the shilling was given to PC Simmonds on the following morning, as counterfeit.

On the evening in question the prisoners Hodgetts and Hunt went to another house, the BROWN LION, Oldbury; there was a third person with them, whom the landlady, Sophia Portman, could not identify. In payment for some port and sherry a shilling was tendered, change being given in coppers. The shilling was on the following morning found to be counterfeit, and given to PC Simmonds.

John Smith, landlord of the CROWN AND ANCHOR, Oldbury, stated that on the night of the 11th, the prisoners Hodgetts and Hunt went to his house, and in payment for some sherry, Hunt tendered a shilling, which witness returned to her as bad. She then went to Hodgetts, returned, and gave witness half-a-crown. Witness afterwards went to the PARROT ARMS, and there saw Hodgetts and Hunt, whom he asked if they knew him. They replied ‘Yes.’ On asking them if they recollected trying to pass a bad shilling at his house, Hunt said she did not know it was bad. Witness gave the change for the half-a-crown to Hunt, who he believed passed it to Hodgetts.

At the PARROT ARMS the prisoners had two glasses of sherry, a shilling being tendered in payment by Hunt. Fanny Proctor, waitress, gave the shilling to the landlord. Sarah Jane Parkes went to the shop of Reuben Green, and in payment for some cakes produced a shilling. Green told her it was bad, when she said she had it from her mother's. It was returned to her. In consequence of what he had heard, Green went to the BLACK BOY, where he saw the prisoner Parkes. Daniel Darby, a constable, was at the PARROT ARMS, about half-past ten at night, when the prisoners came in. A person also came in and said the prisoners had been passing a bad shilling at John Smith's. The landlord then produced the shilling he had taken from them, and it was found to be counterfeit. Witness then asked them how many more they had like that; they said none – they did not know it was bad. On asking them if they had been at Smith's, they said they had not, but on Smith being sent for they admitted being at his house. Darby received the shilling, and thereupon took the prisoners into custody. PC Simmonds went to the BLACK BOY and found the prisoners Parkes there. He charged them with passing counterfeit coin. He said he should search them and told them to get up. When Sarah Jane Parkes got up and walked across the kitchen a handkerchief was dropped, which on being picked up was found to contain nine bad shillings and a crown-piece. Jane Parkes gave Tilsley a small bag containing 11d. Moved her on one side and found in her hand a purse, containing three bad shillings and five good sixpences. There was a basket on the screen, which prisoner said at first was not hers, but subsequently said it was her daughter's (Sarah Jane Parkes). Took them to the station house and there Sarah Jane Parkes said she picked the handkerchief up in a field at Rowley. Hodgetts said that Parkes lodged with her. While in the station Jane Parkes said she came from Dudley, and that Hodgetts gave her the purse to hold for a little while. Mr. J. M. Skarratt proved the money passed and found in the possession of the prisoners to be counterfeit. Jane Parkes's statement taken before the Magistrates was read, which was to the effect that she received the purse and its contents from her daughter. The statement of the latter was that she picked the handkerchief up in a field, but did not let her mother know anything about it. A victualler, named Harper, of Dudley, spoke to the excellent character of Hodgetts, whom he had known for 20 years, and she had worked for his family ten years. Hunt also produced two letters as to her character. The chairman minutely summed up the evidence, and the jury found all the prisoners guilty, but recommended Hodgetts and Hunt to mercy on account of their previous good character. Hodgetts was sentenced to nine calendar months, Jane Parkes to twelve months, Sarah Jane Parkes to twelve months, and Hunt twelve months' imprisonment, with hard labour, each."

"Charge of Rape. Stephen Basford, a publican, keeping the sign of the BLACK BOY, Oldbury Green, was charged, on Saturday, before R. W. Johnson and E. Chance, Esqrs, with a criminal assault upon a girl fifteen years old, named Elizabeth Perren, on the night of Tuesday week. Mr. Plunkett was for the defence. The girl was servant at Basford's, and it was alleged that he threw her upon the bed in her own room, on Tuesday afternoon, and committed the assault. On cross-examination she said she did not mention it to any one till eight in the evening, when she went home and told her mother. T. R. Cooper, Esq, surgeon, was called as a witness, and his evidence led the Magistrates to believe that nothing criminal had taken place, as alleged, between her and the defendant. They also thought the girl's evidence was not to be relied upon, and dismissed the case."

“Wolverhampton and District. Victoria Grounds, Rough Hills.

A pedestrian match, 100 yards level, for £10 a-side, was set down for decision at these grounds on Saturday evening last, the contestants being W. Stewart and J. Green, both hailing from Wolverhampton. As the weather was magnificently fine a tolerably large number assembled. Notwithstanding the small stake at issue both lads were placed in clever and experienced hands. Stewart (who is a nephew of Mark Stewart) took his walks from that well-known trainer’s, Billy Bates, of the BLACK BOY INN, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, who brought his charge to the mark in tip-top fettle, whilst Green took his breathings in the company of Sam Oxley, of the Black Horse Inn, Bolton, Lancashire, and, like Stewart, looked in good condition. Green had for his attendant Ben Shaw, of the QUEENS ARMS INN, Albert Place, Wolverhampton. The track, owing to the heavy rains of Friday, was rather holding. Betting commenced at evens (Green for choice), and at the close 10 to 8 on Green was ruling the price. Green won the toss, and selected the side next the rails. Stewart got well away with the report, but Green remained at his mark, Stewart running the ground over, and breaking the worsted. On the referee appealing to the starter, the latter declared the start a fair one. The referee, Mr. S. Ward, of the COTTAGE INN, Wolverhampton, who was also stakeholder, then gave his decision in favour of Stewart. The manager, B. Morris (alias Flesh), was starter.”

“Alexander Grounds, Rood End, Oldbury.

On Monday last the entertainment consisted of what should have been the first round of heats in Mr. W. E. Sankey's 200 Yards £6 10s Dog Handicap and a 440 yards match between Hood of Birmingham and Onions of Rood End, and a 100 yards spin between T. Richards of Wolverhampton, and C. Banks of Smethwick, for £10 a-side, the Wolverhampton representative allowing one yard start. Both men are well known in the Midlands, and have earned a good reputation at the pedestrian business. A vast crowd assembled, inside and outside also presented a lively appearance with cabs, brakes, &c. Both men had had a special preparation, Richards by his old mentor Billy Bates, from the BLACK BOY HOTEL, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, whilst Banks had been trained by that well-known Birmingham supporter of boxers Mat Bowers. Betting opened at 5 to 4 on Richards, which was readily accepted by the followers of Banks, who, prior to the men going to their marks, laid as much as 6 to 4 on Banks. The proprietor (Mr. W. E. Sankey) appointed Billy Lewis, of Birmingham, to fire the pistol. At the first attempt Richards was too anxious to start, and got over, and was penalised one yard. This caused odds of 2 to 1 to be laid on Banks. At the second attempt Banks got away before the report of the pistol, and Richards, with the intention of catching Banks napping, followed suit, and a magnificent race ensued, Banks winning by about three-quarters of a yard. All was now confusion, and the starter, on being appealed to, declared it no start, and the proprietor (Mr. W. E. Sankey), who officiated as referee, declared it no race, and all bets off. Darkness was fast coming on, and consequently the 440 yards race between Hood and Onions was postponed sine die, whilst the opening heats of the dog handicap were postponed until Monday next."

George William Lea = George William Lee

Birmingham Daily Post 7/12/1893

"At West Bromwich County Court, yesterday afternoon – before his Honour Judge Griffiths – George William Lee, of the BLACK BOY INN, Birmingham Road, Oldbury, brought an action against William Hackett, auctioneer and valuer, Birmingham, to recover £52 8s 10d, which plaintiff alleged had been obtained from him by the defendant by misrepresentation in connection with the sale of the business attached to the house named. Mr. Kettle appeared for plaintiff, and Mr. W. Shakespeare defended.

Mr. Kettle explained that plaintiff, prior to becoming the tenant of the BLACK BOY INN at Oldbury, assisted his father, who was a lodging-house keeper at Leicester. His father was desirous of placing plaintiff in a public house. About the end of June or the beginning of July the father saw an advertisement in the Birmingham Daily Post of a beerhouse, and application was to be made to William Hackett, auctioneer, of Oldbury. The elder Lee replied to the advertisement, and asked to be supplied with particulars of the public house. Negotiations followed between the parties, and plaintiff alleged that defendant represented that the BLACK BOY INN was a good little house, which he (Mr. Kettle) contended was meant to convey that a good business was being done, and that it was, in fact, doing from £6 to £7 per week. Eventually plaintiff agreed to purchase the house, and the amount claimed was the sum he paid for taking possession with expenses.

The plaintiff and his father were called to show that there was very little business attached to the house. The elder Lee said he sat in the house on the previous night for six hours and only sold one half-pint of fourpenny, for which he received 1d. (Laughter.)

Mr. W. Shakespeare cross-examined both these witnesses at length with the view to show that the defendant had not misrepresented the character of the business, and that its subsequent decline was attributable to the way in which the house was conducted by the plaintiff.

At this point the Judge rose, and the case had to be adjourned to a date to be fixed by the parties."

Birmingham Daily Post 25/1/1894

"At West Bromwich County Court, yesterday afternoon, before Judge Griffith, the adjourned action, in which George William Lea, of Leicester, claimed £49 19s from Mr. William Hackett, auctioneer and valuer, of Oldbury, for damages alleged to have been sustained in consequence of misrepresentation respecting the sale of a public house at Oldbury, in August last, came on. Mr. Kettle (instructed by Mr. Waldron) appeared for plaintiff, and Mr. W. Shakespeare defended.

At the previous hearing of the case, the plaintiff's evidence only was given, and then it was alleged that the defendant sold the stock, goodwill, and licenses of the BLACK BOY INN, Birmingham Road, Oldbury, to the plaintiff for the sum claimed, and that he represented it as a good little house, and that the takings amounted to £6 or £7 per week, whereas, when the plaintiff entered into possession, he discovered that only a small amount of business was done at the house.

Several witnesses were called yesterday in support of this, and they were cross-examined by Mr. Shakespeare to show that the house was not conducted by the plaintiff properly and in a way likely to induce customers to visit it, and it was further elicited that some times as much as £10, and £11 was taken in one week, and that the average taking was from £6 to £7 per week. Mr. Shakespeare contended that plaintiff was put out of Court by his own witnesses, one of whom admitted that they took as much as £10 or £11 per week, whilst another said the average takings amounted to between £6 and £7 per week.

After hearing Mr. Kettle, the Judge nonsuited the plaintiff without hearing the evidence for the defence."

County Advertiser 17/10/1896

"At the Dudley County Court, on Tuesday, Thomas Charles, recently landlord of the OLD CROSS GUNS INN, Cradley Heath, was publicly examined in bankruptcy before Mr. Registrar Kettle.

Debtor, who is charged with being an absconding bankrupt, attended in custody with two of the warders from Worcester gaol. Mr. Tinsley represented the bankrupt, and Mr. W. H. Thompson appeared on behalf of the petitioning creditors.

In reply to Mr. Jobson (Official Receiver) debtor stated that he had been a miner, and about six years ago he borrowed £200 and took the RED LION INN, Five Ways, Cradley Heath, where he remained for about three years. He repaid part of the money, and whilst at the public house he ran up an account with a firm of brewers. He was paid a sum to leave the RED LION in December, 1893, but could not remember the amount.

Mr. Jobson: Have you from that date up to the present time been able to pay your creditors in full? – I think I have been; sometimes I have been level, and sometimes I have been behind.

He took the OLD CROSS GUNS in December, 1893, and remained there until last August. The in-going valuation was £140. Of this sum he only paid £80, some of which he borrowed, and the remainder being the money he had received in respect of the valuation of the other public house.

Mr. Jobson: Do you suggest that you were robbed whilst at the CROSS GUNS? – Debtor: I do. There was £65 10s in cash taken away at once. We tried to discover who took the money, but we could not find it.

You have suggested that it was members of your own family? – Well, I could never find it out.

How many sons have you? – Four or five.

Has there been a prosecution against you? – Yes.

When was that? – About two months ago.

What did it cost you? – About £30.

Where did you get the money from? – From my mother.

Did your creditors come down upon you when they saw that you had been convicted? – They did not interfere with me.

Do you want the Court to understand that at that time you could not pay 20s in the pound, but that if you had sold the lease of the house you would have had sufficient to have done so? – Yes.

What was the amount of the lease? – £170.

He believed this sum would have paid them all. He had the BLACK BOY, at Oldbury, which he carried on at the same time he was landlord of the RED LION. He took the BLACK BOY on behalf of his son Thomas, who went to India, taking with him some of the money. About nine months ago he took the OLD ENGINE HOUSE, Wagon Street, Old Hill, for his son John. He paid part of the money for the license and his son the remainder, the amount being £50. His son had repaid the money, with the exception of about £7.

Mr. Jobson: Where did you get the money from? – Debtor: From a club conducted by teachers and scholars.

Why did you leave the neighbourhood? – I went out for my health.

And whilst out for your health did you spend any of the takings from the house? – I did not see a penny.

Replying to Mr. Tinsley, debtor stated that he had about £19 or £20 when he went away.

Mr. Jobson said that certain proceedings were yet to be taken against the debtor.

The Registrar said that he did not think the bankrupt would have to appear in that court again, but he would adjourn the case sine die.”

“The adjourned meeting of the Worcester County Licensing Committee was held today at the Shirehall, Mr. Willis Bund presiding, for the consideration of licenses of houses in Oldbury which had been reported by the local justices as not being necessary for the requirements of the district.....

In the case of the BLACK BOY, Birmingham Street, Superintendent Hill said there was no complaint. The licensee, Mrs. Fox, said she put all her saving in the house, which gave her a comfortable living.....

After deliberating half an hour, the justices decided that all the houses brought before them were unnecessary, but not being certain how far compensation money would suffice to meet the claims to be paid, drew up an order of precedence in which houses are to be dealt with, houses not paid for keeping open provisionally till they are dealt with.”

Smethwick Telephone 1/7/1905

“The adjourned principal meeting of the Licensing Committee for the County of Worcester was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, on Saturday, Mr. J. Willis Bund presiding. The sixteen houses reported by the Oldbury Justices were considered, and the committee ultimately decided that all the licenses were unnecessary. As they were not aware how far the compensation money would go, the committee arranged the houses in order, and as many of the licenses as possible will be done away with. The order is as follows.....

10. BLACK BOY, Birmingham Street.”

Birmingham Mail 22/12/1905

“An important memorandum has been issued by the inland revenue commissioners affecting the basis of compensation for licensed houses which have been compulsorily closed. It will be remembered that fifteen such houses were refused the renewal of licenses at Oldbury, and the question of compensation was argued by counsel before the Worcestershire Licensing Committee a few weeks ago. That committee intimated that the rent was the basis upon which the compensation should be assessed, but counsel urged that this was preposterous. The claimants preferred to leave the matter to the decision of the inland revenue commissioners. The latter have sent a letter to the committee, upholding its view that the rent should be the basis, allowing nothing for the trade done on the premises or to the brewers for tied houses. The Commissioners say that the computation of the sum to be paid in any case requires the determination of three factors, namely, the value of the licensed premises, the depreciation in value of the trade fixtures, and the value of the premises without the license. They have, as a rule, capitalised the annual value of the licensed premises upon the four per cent basis, or at twenty-five years’ purchase, and only exceeded this in cases where there was a distinct prospect of improved annual value, and only fallen below it where there was evidence to suggest that the present value could not be maintained in future. They have employed surveyors of taxes to take estimates of the probable annual value of premises when deprived of their licenses, and of the probable number of years’ purchase of such annual value that premises would fetch, an allowance being made for the cost of the alterations necessary to fit the premises for earning the annual value as estimated. Accordingly, although exact figures have not yet been received, the amounts payable for the Oldbury houses above referred to may be given approximately as follows.....

BLACK BOY, £100.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 6/3/1906

“A meeting of the Worcester Licensing Committee was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, yesterday, to consider the awards made by the Commissioner of Inland Revenue, determining the amounts to be paid as compensation to owners, holders, or others interested in the non-renewal of licenses in the Oldbury division..... The licenses refused and the amount of compensation awarded in each case was as follows.....

BLACK BOY, Birmingham Street, £336.

The committee made awards as follows.....

BLACK BOY, Birmingham Street, £85 to the licensee, Ann Maria Fox, £150 to the registered owner, Susan-na Moore, and £101 to the lessees, Holder's Brewery.

Payment of the compensation money was fixed to take place on March 28."

The license was extinguished on 4th April 1906.

“The annual meeting for the granting and renewal of licenses for the Oldbury and Hales Owen district was held yesterday.....

All the applications for renewals of licenses were granted, the following being cautioned in consequence of complaints having been made by the police Thomas Welch, BLACK HORSE, Oldbury.”

Birmingham Daily Post 22/9/1864 - Letter

“To the Editor of the Birmingham Daily Post.

Sir, it is made to appear, in your impression of Wednesday, the 14th instant, that at the annual meeting for granting and renewing of licenses for Oldbury and Hales Owen districts, the following persons were cautioned, in consequence of complaints having been made by the police. Thomas Welch, BLACK HORSE INN; Benjamin Garner, HARMONIC INN; George Minchin, BELL INN, Rounds Green; also John Ballard, RED COW INN, all of Oldbury. Now, in fairness and justice to the police, we wish it to be understood that not in regard to any of the above persons charged was a single complaint made by the police, neither was any intimation given in any way, until actually confronted by the Magistrates themselves, which quite astounded all the accused. The matter of fact is, that the Magistrates had been furnished with a private note by some person, who, knowing the truth was absent, had not the manliness to make the charge in person; excepting in the case of Thomas Welch, who was informed against by a neighbour. Thus the accused were not afforded an opportunity to be legally represented, to have those accusations rebuffed. By inserting the above, you will oblige, your obedient servants.

Thomas Welch, Benjamin Garner, George Minchin, John Ballard.
Oldbury, September 21, 1864.”

“W. Constable of Oldbury and J. Onions of Rounds Green are matched to run 100 yards, for £5 a side, to come off at Wall Heath Grounds, Dudley, on October 31; Mr. Drury, of Wends Green, final stakeholder and referee, who has £2 a side in hand. A further deposit of £2 a side to be made this evening at T. Welch’s, BLACK HORSE, Oldbury.”

Bells Life in London and Sporting Chronicle 23/9/1865

“J. Kirkham of Westbromwich and W. Foster of Oldbury. These well-known men were to have run their 300 yards match, for £10 a side, and from appearances a good deal of interest was taken therein, but the assemblage of spectators was doomed to disappointment, for at the time appointed Kirkham made his appearance on the ground stripped and waited for Foster, who refused to run. Mr. Welch, of the BLACK HORSE, Oldbury, the stakeholder and referee, gave him 20 minutes to get on the ground, and as he did not appear at the time he gave in for Kirkham (who ran the ground over), but declared all bets off. Foster stated to our correspondent that he found he was not in condition, and stood no chance of winning, and he did not wish his friends who had bet on him to lose their money.”

[When Kirkham and Foster ran in October 1865, Kirkham won by half a yard.]

Bells Life in London and Sporting Chronicle 20/1/1866

“Price and Lowe. These Oldbury men came next on the ground to run their six score yards match, for £5 a side. Both men have previously figured in former matches with varied success. For the present event Price had trained under Howells, and Lowe under Onions. Mr. T. Welch of the BLACK HORSE, Oldbury, the stakeholder, acted as referee. The betting was even. After several attempts the men got away. Price, who was quickest on his legs, at half distance had a slight lead, and a good race ensued, Price winning by half a yard.”

County Advertiser 10/11/1866

“Henry Edwards was charged with stealing a muffler, the property of John Collins, pig dealer, Oldbury. On the previous Tuesday night prosecutor and prisoner were drinking at the HORSE AND JOCKEY, Oldbury. The former next day missed a muffler from the pocket of his coat. Information having been given to the police, it was ascertained that the prisoner had sold the muffler for 1s 6d. Prisoner denied that he had any felonious intent; and ultimately the prosecutor withdrew the charge.”

“J. Blewitt of Oldbury will fight J. Hart of the same place at catch weight, for £5 or £10 a side. Money ready at T. Welch’s, HORSE AND JOCKEY, Oldbury.”

Bells Life in London and Sporting Chronicle 28/9/1867

“Howells of Oldbury, hearing that Kirkham of Westbromwich is anxious for a match, will run him at Aston Cross Grounds from 100 to 200 yards, for from £15 to £25 a side. Money ready at Welch’s, BLACK HORSE, Oldbury.”

Bells Life in London and Sporting Chronicle 25/4/1868

“W. Howells of Oldbury will run W. Lee (the Boatman) of Great Bridge 120 yards with two yards start, or will take a yard of Shaver End, or York of Netherton, or two yards in 100 of Horner (alias Dumpling), but for not less than £10 a side. Money ready at T. Welch's, BLACK HORSE INN, Oldbury.”

“On Saturday, at the West Bromwich Police Court, before Messrs. R. Bagnall and H. Wiggin, the following persons were summoned, at the instance of the police, for selling beer in a booth at Harborne without a license.....

Thomas Welch, BLACK HORSE, Freeth Street, Oldbury.....

Mr. Motteram, instructed by Mr. Cutler, appeared for the defendants.

Inspector Ordish deposed that on Monday, the 22nd of last month, he was on duty at the Cape Wake, he went into a booth where he saw the name of Thomas Welch set up, and a number of people were there drinking. He heard one man call for a pint of ale, and saw him served and the money paid to the waiter. The defendant was also present on Tuesday, the day following. He was again on duty at the same place, and asked the defendant (Welch) to show him his special license, but received a reply to the effect that he hadn't one, and did not need one.....

[There then follows long legal arguments.]

After a brief consultation amongst the Magistrates, Mr. Wiggin said the Bench had decided to convict, but as the defendants appeared to have been acting in ignorance, the penalty would be 5s and costs in each case (19s 6d each).”

“Thomas Welch, landlord of the BLACK HORSE, Oldbury, was charged with selling ale in a booth on the wake ground, at Blackheath, on the 19th inst, without a license. Mr. Hemmant, of Birmingham, appeared for the defendant. Police-sergeant Powner stated that he visited the wake on that day, and saw the defendant selling ale in a booth. He asked for the necessary certificate, but the defendant had not one. Mr. Hemmant stated that the defendant had done all in his power to obtain a Magistrate's signature to his certificate, but four of them were out and one would not subscribe his name to the paper, as he was unacquainted with the defendant. A witness was called, who spoke to his calling upon Mr. Chance, of Spon Lane, and several other Magistrates, but without being able to obtain a signature. The Bench were of opinion that there was no excuse for the defendant selling beer without a certificate, and fined him 5s and costs."

"Worcestershire Winter Assizes..... Abduction at Dudley.

Thomas Ponter, 42, vice maker, on bail, Joseph Foley, 19, collier, and Selina Bates, 21, dressmaker, were indicted for having, on the 20th July, at Dudley, taken an unmarried girl, named Elizabeth Smith, out of the possession and against the will of Henry Smith, her father, she being under the age of sixteen. Ponter failed to appear, and his recognisances were estreated. Mr. Streeton prosecuted; the prisoners were not defended. From the evidence it appeared that the girl, who was fifteen years of age in November last, lives with her parents at Newtown, West Bromwich, and on the occasion of the wake at that place, in June, she was accosted by the prisoner Bates, who took her into a dancing booth, where the other prisoners were, and, in their hearing, tried to prevail upon her to leave home and live with her at Dudley. Ponter, who was a fiddler, also asked her to go with Bates. This she refused to do, and eventually went home. On the 19th July the girl went to Tipton wake, and was again in the company of the prisoners, who renewed their entreaties, promising that if she went with Bates she should have some clothes. She answered that she dared not leave home, and after being some time in prisoners' company, she left them and proceeded home. The next day she was with them again, and all the prisoners joined in persuading her to go with them, Foley promising, if she would go to Yorkshire or Walsall with him, he would find her clothes. Eventually she went to Dudley with the prisoners, and slept at Bates's house, with all the prisoners, that night. Before going to bed Bates locked the door, and also did so next morning when she left the room, saying that if her mother came after her she would get beaten.

Inspector Mapp, of Dudley, went to the house on the 21st July, and Bates, before opening the door, told Smith to say that she only came there that morning. When questioned by the inspector the girl admitted this was true. She also demurred to going home, as she said her mother would beat her.

Mrs. Welch, of the BLACK HORSE, Oldham [sic], keeper of the booth at Tipton wake, called on behalf of Bates, said that she saw the girl Smith in the booth partaking of food with the prisoners.....

The jury found prisoners guilty, and they were each sentenced to twelve months' hard labour."

Black Country Bugle (January 1974) 'Who Is The Ghost Of The Blue Ball?'

“What restless soul paces the upstairs apartments of the BLUE BALL, peers in through its windows on dark nights, walks through walls and haunts the gloomy staircase of this 200 year old Oldbury pub?

We got a description of this flitting phantom from licensee Mrs. Alice Foster an old man with a short white beard, a battered hat, who seems to be searching for something Bolts and bars mean nothing to the BLUE BALL spook for several of the pub's customers have seen him disappear through walls without as much as a Cheerio folks, and his ceaseless pacing to and fro in the bedroom over the bar is regularly heard by the customers Delving back into history, we find that the pub was always a great sporting house with its billiards room and bowling green, it was the haunt of the 'dogmen' of the area. The notice, headed Sports, which can be seen fixed to a wall of the tavern in the top picture opposite referred to a rat-killing leger At the BLUE BALL INN, Oldbury, a Rat-killing Leger will take place November 1st, when the proprietor will give £1 10s if there are ten dogs at 2s 6d each. If over ten dogs, all money added. Heats, the best of three. Final the best of five.

Such contests took place in a rat pit, walled closely meshed iron bars, and there were many such arenas around Oldbury at that time. Harry Bashford, is a famous character from that period and almost invariably lifted the prize money from the BLUE BALL legers with his tiny terrier Rot Pizen The landlord of the BLUE BALL was also severely lectured because arrangements for the illegal dog fight (at New Inns, Handsworth, 1850) had been made on his premises.”

Staffordshire Gazette 13/7/1839

“On Monday week, a little boy wandered from his home at Oldbury with a band of music to the BLUE BALL, near the Brades, where he was seen at six o’clock in the evening. From his not returning home at bed-time, great alarm was felt by his mother lest he should have fallen into the canal or some of the coal-pits in the neighbourhood. Search was made for him throughout the adjacent towns and villages during the whole of that night, of Tuesday, and Tuesday night, and the forenoon of Wednesday, when he was brought home to his distressed mother. It appeared from the boy’s tale, that he had strolled about all the night, and on Tuesday was picked up by a lady about a mile and a half from Birmingham, and conveyed to the workhouse there; he would not tell the authorities his name, or where he came from, until Wednesday morning, when no time was lost in restoring him to his home.”

“Dudley, Oldbury, and Birmingham Railway.

Direct Railway Communication for Dudley with Birmingham.

An important meeting of gentlemen in direct communication with Birmingham was held at the BLUE BALL INN, Oldbury, yesterday, to consider the desirability of applying to Parliament this Session for an Act to construct a line the Dudley Station, through Oldbury, and into the Stourbridge and Smethwick Railway, now in course of construction near the latter place. It is proposed to take the line from out of the present West Midland and South Staffordshire Station at Dudley, and to follow a course near to Marsh’s Burnt Tree Works, Holcroft’s Dudley Port Works, Hickman’s Budd and Co’s, Porter and Sons, and Whitehead and Haines’s Works, at Tividale; Messrs. D. and G. Round’s, New Tividale Furnaces; the Brades Steel Works of Wm. Hunt and Sons; Captain Bennitt’s Oldbury Furnaces, the works belonging to Messrs. Perry and Co, the Britannia Works, and Messrs. Chance’s extensive Chemical Works, the town of Oldbury, and numerous extensive brick-yards, collieries, and Rowley rag quarries, all along its route, to or near Smethwick. The importance of such a direct means of communication with Birmingham for the towns of Dudley and Oldbury cannot be overstated, and is one we should be glad to see successfully carried through Parliament.....”

“Great Strike of the Staffordshire Colliers.

A mass meeting of colliers was held on Thursday at Deepfield. Three thousand men were present, and it was resolved to come out that night. The whole of the miners of the thick coal district were urged to stand or fall together. At mid-day on Thursday a meeting, under the auspices of the Colliers’ Strike Committee, took place on a piece of waste ground in Union Street, Tipton. From 8,000 to 10,000 persons were present. A resolution was carried expressive of the determination of the men to prolong the strike until their demands should have been acceded to; and arrangements were made for the assembling, at 4.30 on Friday morning, of one body of men at the LIMERICK INN, Great Bridge, to proceed with the Great Bridge Band to Fiery Holes, Moxley, and for the assembling of another body, at the same hour, at the BLUE BALL Tividale; the object of these early gatherings being to lay the case of the men before their comrades at work at the collieries in the localities indicated. A district meeting was subsequently to take place at Crene Hills, at ten o’clock. It was also arranged to organise a body of men to proceed to Brownhills and Cannock at an early hour on Monday morning, for the purpose of addressing the men employed in that neighbourhood.”

“About seven o’clock on Saturday evening great consternation was caused in Brades Village, Oldbury, by the rumour that the Birmingham Canal, running between the Brades Steel Works and the BLUE BALL INN, had burst. The report, to a certain extent, was true, but happily the disaster was not so great as was anticipated. It was found that the canal near the BLUE BALL INN, had overflown, and was hurrying with tremendous force down into Brades Village, which lies considerably lower than the canal. It also overflowed close to the Brades Steel Works, finding its way into the warehouse, and filling it to the depth of two feet or more, and causing much damage to the finished goods. Happily, however, through the active exertions of the men in the village, further damage was prevented. Great credit is due to Mr. Johnson, landlord of the BLUE BALL INN, who immediately employed a number of men upon his own responsibility. Though further damage was averted, yet the fear of the people in the village was so great that several left to spend the night in Oldbury and other places, and others sat up during the whole night. What gave strength to the rumour and excited the alarm of the people so much was the knowledge that many possessed that there were several weak places in the banks of the canal in that neighbourhood, and it had been said that if the water ever broke through that fifteen miles of water must of necessity escape before any effectual stoppage could be made.”

“Three well-built men, named George Millward, Joseph Powell, and James Williams, employed at the Brades Works, Oldbury, were summoned for assaulting Eli Webb, 63, at Tividale, on the 14th inst. Mr. Burbury defended.

Complainant deposed that he lived at Oldbury, and was a spade and shovel maker. On the day in question he went into the BLUE BALL public house, Tividale, for the purpose of getting some refreshment. Whilst there the three defendants came in and insulted him. Powell spat in his face, Williams struck him in the face, and Millward took hold of him and said he (witness) should not go out. He added that he would continue to serve him out, if it was for twenty years. Witness attributed the defendants’ conduct to the part he took some years since during a strike. They accused him of being the means of reducing the wages; and they had frequently molested him. John Darby and Simeon Jones gave evidence in support of the complainant. Mr. Burbury, on the part of the defendants, affirmed that the complainant and his witnesses had committed wilful perjury. A witness named Evelyn Reynolds, foreman at the Brades Works, Oldbury, supported this view of the case. In reply to the Bench, Reynolds said he believed the unpleasantness between the parties arose out of a trades’ union affair.

The Bench held that the case had been fully proved, and fined each defendant 1s and costs.”

“Valuable Freehold Public House, the BLUE BALL INN, at The Brades, near Oldbury.

By Roderick & Son. To be Sold by Auction (by order of the Mortgagee), at the said BLUE BALL INN, at The Brades, near Oldbury, This Day (Wednesday), July 9, at 6 o’clock in the evening, subject to conditions to be then produced.

The capital Old-Licensed Freehold Public House, known as the BLUE BALL INN, situate, free from opposition, on the Dudley Road, opposite The Brades Steelworks, about half a mile from Oldbury, and in close proximity to many large works, furnaces, and collieries.

The House contains ample business and domestic accommodation, and has Brewhouse and Stabling attached, and a large well-planted Garden; the whole extending to about 3,400 square yards.

It has been for many years past in the occupation of Mrs. Amplias Johnson (now deceased), who carried on a very extensive business.

The Property is particularly well worth the attention of Brewers, as early possession can be obtained, and the neighbourhood offers almost unlimited scope for business.

John Ratcliffe, manager of the BLUE BALL, stated that on the day in question the defendant was very quarrelsome, and on being requested to leave refused.

PC Winfield said he was called to the prosecutor’s house, and he found the defendant making a noise. The landlord had repeatedly told him to leave, but he would not. Witness, with the assistance of another police officer and the landlord, finally succeeded in ejecting him. Defendant was also charged with being drunk and riotous on the same day.

The Bench considered both charges fully proved, and for the first offence fined defendant 10s and costs, and for the second 5s and costs, or, in default, 14 days’ hard labour in each case.”

“Betsy Green, BLUE BALL INN, Tividale, was charged with permitting drunkenness. Mr. Shakespeare defended.

PC Styles said at 10.30 on the night of the 1st inst, he visited the defendant’s house in company with PC Garrs, and in the kitchen he saw two men who were drunk, one was sitting on a bench asleep. PC Garrs then shook the man and awoke him, he then spoke to defendant’s son who at first stated that the men had not had anything to drink at that house, but in a few minutes he admitted that they had had a drop. One of the men then poured a glass of ale out of a jug and asked his companion to drink. Soon after the men came staggering out of the house, and one of them was led home. PC Garrs corroborated.

Mr. Shakespeare denied that either of the men were drunk. They were engaged in calculating how long it would take a person to smoke a ton of tobacco if he smoked half an ounce per day. He put in a testimonial signed by a large number of the gentry of Oldbury and neighbourhood, the Vicar, and several members of the Local Board, stating that defendant always kept her house in a very exemplary manner. One of the men whose name was John Jones, said he was not drunk, but when the police entered he was engaged in a deep calculation. Mr. Bassano said the evidence was very clear on the part of the police that the men were intoxicated. Several witnesses were called for the defence. Mr. Bassano said as it was not a very bad case they should only inflict a fine of 20s and costs.”

“Considerable excitement was created in the quiet village known as Tividale, lying between Rowley and Dudley, this morning by a rumour that a woman named Matilda Ingles, formerly residing in Brades Road, had been murdered by her husband, William Ingles, a labourer, of the same address. About one o’clock on Sunday morning two men went to Tividale police station and reported to Police-constable Winfield that they had dragged the body of a woman from the canal near the Brades Works. The officer went to the spot with the men and found the body of Matilda Ingles, who is 38 years of age, lying upon the towpath. The body was at once removed to the BLUE BALL INN, Tividale, and as soon as this was done, from information received, the constable proceeded to arrest William Ingles, the husband, on the charge of causing the death of the deceased. He was taken to Tipton and lodged in the lock-up. It appears that the finding of the body of the deceased is only the sequel to a sad, and we might say shocking, domestic tragedy which was enacted late on Saturday night and early yesterday morning.

Deceased is described as being a very respectable woman. On Saturday it is stated that a neighbour accused deceased, in the presence of her husband, of stealing £2 out of her house. This exasperated prisoner very much, and he commenced to beat the deceased. A neighbour went into prisoner’s house and separated them, and for a time peace appeared to have been restored between them. Later in the evening deceased went to Rounds Green and returned some time afterwards with her marketings. It is supposed that when deceased returned home she found prisoner already in the house, and that the quarrel was renewed on the threshold, as the articles which deceased brought with her were found afterwards scattered about the yard. However, the next that was noticed of the deceased was she was seen running away from prisoner and proceeding in the direction of the canal at the back of the house. Deceased was apparently terribly alarmed, and begged of a neighbour to interfere and prevent her husband from ill-using her further, and stating that she was afraid he would kill her. When the neighbours who had hurried out in consequence of hearing deceased’s screams saw prisoner pursuing his wife, one of them caught hold of his arm, and tried to dissuade him from his purpose. He, however, refused, and ran after deceased in an excited manner, and both of them at the time were running in the direction of the Birmingham Canal. Shortly afterwards he returned home, but deceased did not, and nothing more was heard of her until the finding of the body.

It is said that screams were heard coming from the direction of the canal, and it is supposed that prisoner and deceased struggled together on the canal side, and that the latter was either pushed in by her husband or fell in during the scuffle. Another supposition is that she, being afraid of her husband, jumped into the canal to get out of his way. When charged by constable Winfield with causing the death of deceased, he replied that he never saw his wife after she went to market, and added that it was all through the money alluded to and the drink.

The inquest on the body will be held this afternoon before Mr. E. Hooper, coroner. The deceased leaves three young children.”

[At the inquest at the BLUE BALL INN an open verdict of Found Drowned was returned.]

Birmingham Mail 28/10/1884

“William Ingles (34), labourer, of the Shrubbery, Tividale, near Oldbury, has been re-arrested on a charge of wilfully murdering his wife, Matilda Ingles, by pushing her into the canal on the night of the 18th inst. Since the inquest, on the 20th inst, it is stated that additional information had been obtained, which, in the opinion of the police authorities, justified them in re-arresting Ingles. Prisoner will be taken before the magistrates at Old Hill Police Court tomorrow, on a charge of wilful murder, when the results of subsequent investigations will be given in evidence.”

[William Ingles was committed to be tried at Staffordshire Assizes for wilful murder.]

County Advertiser 21/2/1885

“William Ingles, labourer, has this week been tried at the Staffordshire Assizes on a charge of murdering Matilda Ingles, his wife, at Tividale, and has been acquitted.....

The coroner who held the inquest did not think the evidence called for a post mortem examination, and the body had to be exhumed after the husband had been taken into custody by the police. Mr. Standish, surgeon, at the trial on Wednesday, attributed death to shock or syncope, but, in answer to prisoner’s counsel, said he had never met with a more unsatisfactory case on which to form an opinion, which must necessarily in a case like this be more or less speculative. The woman might have fainted on the bank and rolled into the water. On the medical evidence the jury had no opinion but to acquit the prisoner.”

Birmingham Daily Post 28/10/1885

“An inquest was held yesterday, before Mr. E. Hooper (coroner), at the BLUE BALL INN, Tividale, respecting the death of Susannah Clark, alias Jewkes (44), of 86, Stafford Street, Dudley, hawker, whose body was found in a pool of water by the roadside between Brades Village and Tividale, on Saturday night last.

Police-constable Smith stated that on Saturday night, shortly before eight o’clock, he saw the deceased standing on the Furnace Bridge, on the Dudley Road. Witness asked deceased where she was going, and she replied that she was going to Dudley. Deceased then walked away in the direction of Dudley. Witness noticed that deceased was under the influence of drink. About half an hour afterwards, whilst he was in Junction Street, Brades Village, a woman came to him and said a woman had been found in a pool of water near the roadside. He went to the place and found deceased lying in the water, which was about two feet deep, with her face downwards. She was quite dead. In reply to the Coroner, witness said he thought there was no suspicion that deceased had met with any foul play. The pool was close to the side of the road, and there was no protection except some posts. Formerly there was a wire fence, but it had been broken down. In reply to a juror, witness said he believed the street lamps were not lighted, but he could not swear that positively.

The juryman observed that the authorities were not accustomed to light the public lamps on moonlight nights, but he thought it was a mistake, and was highly dangerous to the public, especially in a locality such as that.

Edward Jewkes, with whom deceased lived, stated that she left home about eleven o’clock on Saturday morning for the purpose of selling some wire articles, and he saw nothing more of her until he saw her dead body at the BLUE BALL INN.

Mary Ann Martin said that on Saturday night, whilst walking in the direction of Dudley, she saw deceased, who was drunk, staggering about the footpath near the pool where her body was found. Shortly afterwards she saw deceased fall off the footpath into the water. Witness made an alarm, and assistance was obtained, and the body was pulled out, but life was extinct. In reply to a juror, witness stated that the public lamps were lighted at the time.

The Coroner called attention to the insecure state of the fence, and strongly advised the jury to make some recommendation respecting that, as it appeared to be a very dangerous place.

A juror said the fence had been in a dangerous condition for three years.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death, and requested the Coroner to write to the Rowley Local Board, asking then to provide a proper fence at the place where the accident happened, for the safety of the public.”

“Staffordshire Midsummer Sessions.....

Nathan Price (38), stocktaker, was indicted on charges of obtaining 15s from John Gasson by false pretences on May 17, and endeavouring to obtain 30s by false pretences from John Orrock, on June 7.

Mr. Udall, who appeared to prosecute, said the case was one of a very peculiar character. The prosecutor Gasson, who was a laboring man living at Riverhead, near Sevenoaks, Kent, caused an advertisement to be inserted in Reynolds Newspaper, of May 13, asking for news of his son, who had not been heard of for years. Soon afterwards a letter was received from prisoner which purported to have been sent by the son, and was signed ‘George Gasson.’ The writer stated that he had come back from Australia and was now penniless, and he asked for money to enable him to get home. A postal order for 15s was sent him at the BLUE BOAR [sic] INN, Oldbury, which was the address he had given, but after that nothing more was heard of him.

The prosecutor Orrock had advertised in the same paper for two sons, John and David, who had gone abroad, but the name ‘David’ was accidentally printed ‘Daniel.’ A few days later Orrock received a letter signed ‘John Orrock’ stating that ‘me and Daniel’ had come back to England and were penniless. The letter said that ‘Daniel’ was very ill and could not write, and asked that 30s might be sent to help them home. Being suspicious through the use of the name ‘Daniel’ instead of ‘David’ Orrock informed the police. PC Winfield arrested the prisoner near the BOAT INN, Oldbury, the address he had given in the letter. Prisoner was then living at Horsley Heath, near Tipton. In his house a book was found, containing copies of the advertisements, and the paper on which the letter to Orrock had been written appeared to have been torn from the book.

Prisoner was convicted. He had been convicted of a similar offence in June, 1886, and sentenced to 12 months’ hard labour and there were other convictions recorded against him. The Assistant-Chairman remarked that this was a cruel mode of defrauding anxious parents of their money, and sentenced the prisoner to penal servitude for five years.”

“Myra Blakeman, landlady of the BLUE BALL public house, Tividale, was summoned by the inland revenue authorities for making a false entry in her brewery book on the 3rd December, 1890. Mr. Barradale, Dudley, appeared for the authorities; and Mr. W. Shakespeare, Oldbury, defended.

Mr. Barradale said an entry was made in the defendant’s brewing book on the 3rd December, of the intention to brew one quarter two bushels of malt at four o’clock in the morning of the 4th December. Samples of the brewing were taken, and the result of the analysis showed that one quarter and four bushels of malt had been used. The gravities in two vessels were found to be higher than stated in the brewing book by two degrees; on another by three degrees. Upon being asked about this, the brewer said he was unable to account for it.....

Mr. Shakespeare admitted the charge, but said he felt sure when the Bench heard his explanation they would take it into consideration in dealing with the case. Miss Blakeman had kept this house five or six years. It was a small house, doing a small amount of trade, the only ale sold being the ale brewed there. Although the supervisor had told them the brewings were irregular, still that was no offence. The explanation was this. Miss Blakeman was a woman who understood little about public house business, and her brother-in-law, who was partly blind, managed the house; and being unable to brew employed a man named White. As regarded this brewing, White was given three bags of malt and was told the quantity he was to use. In accordance with these instructions the entry was made in the brewing book. White from forgetfulness put in the whole of those three bags of malt, and it was not until he admitted it that they could account for the gravity. If that statement was true he thought he might respectfully ask them to consider that Miss Blakeman was not a party to it, and that a slight penalty would meet the justice of the case.

Gerald Carrol, brother-in-law of defendant, gave evidence to the effect that he instructed White to use two bags and a half of malt, and he did not know until after the brew that more had been used. He said to White that the gravity seemed higher, but he did not answer. In cross-examination, witness said he believed White put in the malt maliciously, and for the purpose of getting him into trouble.

The Bench imposed a fine of £20.”

“Yesterday, at the Tipton Police Court – before Dr. W. L. Underhill, and Mr. Guy (magistrates) – John Vale (31), an ex-soldier, was charged with abducting Mary Emma Bevan (17), daughter of William Bevan, galvaniser, Dudley Port.

Prisoner, it was stated, left the army some months ago, and went to reside at Dudley Port, with Mr. Bevan, prisoner being the brother of Bevan’s first wife, and consequently uncle to the girl. On August 12 prisoner and the girl disappeared together.

The girl, who is a good-looking person, said prisoner frequently advised her to run away with him from her step-mother, and on the 12th August he wrapped some of her clothes up with his own, and asked her to follow him to Oldbury. She met him at the BLUE BELL [sic], Oldbury, and they travelled to Birmingham, prisoner paying the fares. From Birmingham they walked to Alcester, where prisoner engaged two beds at a public house for them. They next went to the prisoner’s uncle’s at Sainsbury, where they stayed some days, and afterwards to his cousin’s at Condictott. Subsequently they proceeded to Cheltenham, and occupied separate sleeping apartments at a lodging house. Here prisoner left her, telling her to make the best of her way home. She returned to his cousin’s at Condictott, where a day or two later prisoner found her, and asked her to go away with him again. She declined to do so until she had heard from her father, and prisoner went without her. After staying at prisoner’s cousin’s for about a week she went into the Stone Union Workhouse, where she remained until fetched by her father. Prisoner, who was arrested at Worcester on Friday, was remanded for a week.”

“Birmingham County Court. Yesterday. Before His Honour Judge Chalmers.

William John Seal, of Union Street, Birmingham, auctioneer, sued Gerrard Carrall, of the RED LION public house, Darlaston to recover £9 7s for expenses incurred in advertising a public house for sale and for work done in trying to sell it. Mr. Tanner appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Harton for the defendant.

In February last defendant called on plaintiff and instructed him to take steps to sell the BLUE BALL INN, Brades, Oldbury, of which at the time defendant was owner. Plaintiff advertised the house from that time until September last, and sent particulars to many applicants. One applicant, who went to Oldbury in September to see the house, returned to complain that when she got there she was informed the house was sold. Plaintiff then sent his account to the defendant, and defendant refused to pay on the ground that the house had been sold by a Mr. Hackett, of Oldbury, in May last, and that he had sent Mr. Seal notice to that effect at the end of May.

Plaintiff denied that he had received such a letter, and stated in cross-examination that he did not take business in consideration of being paid commission if he sold, and only out-of-pocket expense if he did not sell. The defendant said he sent a letter to Mr. Seal in May saying that the house had been sold by Mr. Hackett. He did not instruct Mr. Hackett to sell the house, nor tell Hackett that the house was for sale; but Mr. Hackett came to him and said he could find a purchaser for it. Mr. Hackett afterwards brought the customer and received the commission.

His Honour said he thought the right sum to give judgement for was £8 10s.”

“Yesterday, Mr. E. Hooper (coroner) held an inquest at the BLUE BALL INN, Brades Village, Oldbury, respecting the death of George Knight (35), labourer, of Park Lane, who was killed by a fall of marl whilst employed at the Brades Village Brickworks on the 13th inst. Mr. G. Wood represented the proprietor of the works.

The deceased was employed with other men in a marl-hole, and he found it necessary to drill a hole for a shot, when, without any warning, a quantity of earth fell upon him from the face of the hole, death resulting immediately.

Daniel Ockold, a fellow-workman, said the place was examined prior to the commencement of work, and he attributed the accident to the frost.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

West Bromwich Weekly News 8/9/1900

“An accident of a very sad nature occurred on Wednesday, at the Brades Hall Boiler Works, which resulted in the death of Mr. Eder Harper, one of the members of the firm of Harper and Screen, boiler makers. Deceased was seventy years of age, and for some years past has not taken an active part in the business of the firm. His son, Mr. W. Harper, and Mr. Screen had carried on the works, but as his son and daughter had started for the Isle of Man for a holiday, he went to the works on Wednesday. He was helping in the moving of a boiler when the packing was displaced and the boiler rolled over and jammed him against some iron plates. He was internally crushed, and died shortly afterwards. Deceased was widely known throughout the district, and was highly respected. He was a prominent member of the Wesleyan Church, and considerable sympathy is felt with his relatives.

The inquest was held on Friday morning at the BLUE BALL INN, Dudley Road, Tividale, by Mr. H. A. Pearson (Coroner).

Mr. Ashworth (Inspector of Factories and Workshops) was present.

William Henry Harper, deceased's son, said he was on an Isle of Man boat at Liverpool on Wednesday morning when he received a telegram conveying the news that his father had met with a serious accident, and he returned home to find him dead. He did not attach any blame to anyone for the accident.

Arthur Harry Screen, a boiler maker employed at the Brades Hall Works, said that on Wednesday morning deceased came to the works and gave instructions that a boiler should be moved. Deceased had already prepared the packings, and the boiler was ready to be rolled over. Witness proceeded to move it by means of a ‘jack,’ and as the boiler began to move he called out that the weight was off the ‘jack.’ Deceased was rather deaf. The boiler rolled over, and the dome bumped against the packings with such force that they were displaced, and the boiler slipped and jammed deceased against a section of plates. It rolled away again, and they removed deceased, who died an hour afterwards while they were taking him home. The boiler would weigh between 3 tons 10 cwts and 4 tons.

In answer to Mr. Ashworth, witness said the boiler could have been prevented rolling by means of scotches. Hader Smith, of Camden Street, Dudley, who is employed at the Brades Hall Works, and Thomas Screen corroborated this evidence. The latter said the deceased had been his partner for 38 years. The packing was strong enough for a boiler twice as heavy as that one, but the bump displaced the timbers.

PC Robinson spoke to making enquiries and that no blame was attached to anyone.

The Jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death."

"At Rowley Regis yesterday, George Tasker (29), labourer, Salop Street, Oldbury, was charged before Mr. John Green with unlawfully wounding Frederick William Groucutt, landlord of the BLUE BALL INN, Dudley Road, Tividale. It was alleged the prisoner was ordered to leave the licensed premises in consequence of disorderly conduct, and when he was requested to leave he stabbed the landlord with his pocket knife, inflicting a serious injury. The prisoner was remanded until Wednesday."

"Frederick William Growcott, landlord of the BLUE BALL HOTEL INN, Tividale, applied for a license to sell intoxicants on the Brades Park Football Club ground on the 19th inst, on the occasion of a football match in the Birmingham Junior League competition, between Brades Park and Oldbury Town. Mr. Cooksey (magistrates' clerk) explained that some time ago the magistrates intimated that they would not grant any more occasional licenses. Applicant, in reply to Mr. Cooksey, said he was perfectly aware of the decision of the magistrates, but he urged that the ground was a considerable distance from any public house, and a large crowd of spectators was expected. The Bench considered there was no necessity for the license, and they refused to grant the application."

"Buying an Oldbury Trotter.

At the Birmingham County Court, today, before his Honour Judge Whitehouse and a jury, Thomas Jones, metal dealer, of Cowper Street, Birmingham, brought an action against F. W. Growcott, publican and horse dealer, of the BLUE BALL, Oldbury, to recover damages for an alleged breach of warranty regarding a horse. Mr. S. S. Dorsett appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. J. S. Pritchett for the defendant.

Mr. Dorsett stated that the plaintiff went over to Oldbury in August last to see the horse, and was informed by the defendant that it was perfectly sound and all right. It was tried in harness, but no bargain was struck on that occasion, the plaintiff returning home to think the matter over. On September 1st he agreed to pay £32 for the horse, the defendant having again assured him that it was all right, and agreed, if the plaintiff was not suited with the horse, to return the money. He also said he would match the horse against any animal in England, as it could trot at 16 miles an hour. The plaintiff, on getting the horse, found, the first time he attempted to drive it, that it was broken-winded, and quite useless. Defendant refused to return the money, and the horse, after being treated by a veterinary surgeon, and kept for three weeks, was sold at a loss of £13 16s, the total damages claimed being £15 11s 6d.

The defence was that there was no warranty, and that the arrangement was to exchange the horse for another if the plaintiff intimated within three days that he was not suited. The defendant also said that the plaintiff knew if the horse had been perfectly well it could not have been bought for £100. Defendant was still prepared to carry out what he said was the original bargain.

Witnesses were called to show that when the horse was sold defendant represented that it was sound in wind. John Young, veterinary surgeon, who examined the horse, said that the animal was broken winded.

Mr. Dorsett: Is it true that a horse can be 'set' so that no one can tell whether he is broken-winded? – It is done regularly.

Answering the Judge, witness said that a horse suffering from broken wind could be so doctored that he would breathe with freedom for three or four days.

His Honour: What a pity it is you cannot always keep him doctored.

Mr. Dorsett: A horse has not always a doctor at his heels.

Defendant, called by Mr. Pritchett, denied that he told the plaintiff that the horse was sound in wind and limb. He told Mr. Jones that the horse could trot sixteen miles an hour, and that was true.

Mr. Dorsett: Perhaps you can explain how this horse came by the name of 'The Doctor'? – Witness: That was his registered name – 'Doctor.'

Mr. Dorsett: Dr. Yankee-land? – Witness: He was a Yankee, sir.

Answering further questions, witness said the horse had since come into his possession again, and he had sold it for £30.

Mr. Barker, farmer, of Quinton, said that no warranty was given with the horse.

Mr. Dorsett: He was a rank bad horse, wasn't her? – Witness: He was a good horse but for his wind.

The jury returned a verdict for plaintiff for £15, the amount claimed as agreed upon, and his Honour gave judgement accordingly."

County Advertiser 3/11/1906

"Richard Clarke, licensee of the BLUE BALL INN, Dudley Road, Tividale, was charged with permitting drunkenness upon his premises, and also with supplying a drunken person on the 15th ult. Mr. J. W. Clulow prosecuted, and Mr. W. Waldron defended.

Mr. Clulow explained that on the evening in question Police-constables Heatherley and Walton visited the house, and in the tap room they found Charles Harper, of Gornal, drunk, with a jug and a glass containing ale near him. The landlord was not in the house, but when he came in the officers spoke to him and he asked who was in charge of the premises. He replied 'David,' meaning a lad named David Sadler, aged fourteen years, who was engaged by the landlady as an errand boy. Defendant then ordered Harper to leave the house, but there was no denial of the man's condition.

Evidence in support of this statement was given by Police-constables Heatherley and Walton.

The lad Sadler stated that he supplied Harper with beer. He informed Mrs. Clarke that Harper was drunk, and she told him to tell him to leave. This Harper did, but he subsequently returned. Defendant was playing in the billiard room with a friend all the time Harper was in the house. For the defence Mr. Waldron denied that the man Harper was drunk, or that he was supplied. He called several witnesses, but the Bench considered the case proved, and said that it was improper to leave a lad like Sadler in charge of the house. Defendant was fined £10, including costs."

County Advertiser 10/11/1906

"Charles Harper, salt dealer, of Ruiton, Lower Gornal, was charged with being drunk upon the licensed premises of the BLUE BALL INN, Tividale, on the 15th ult. Police-constable Heatherley proved the case. Superintendent Johnson said defendant had 41 previous convictions against him, and was also upon the black list. He was fined 10s and costs, or in default fourteen days' imprisonment."

"The annual licensing sessions for the Rowley Regis Petty Sessional Division were held on Wednesday at the Police Court....
Mr. W. Waldron applied for the renewal of the license of the BLUE BALL INN, Tividale, to Frederick Grey. He mentioned that since the conviction Messrs. Showells, the owners, had put in a new tenant, who had conducted the house well.
Mr. Bassano said, having regard to the fact that the last conviction was in 1881, the justices would renew the license, but greater care was necessary in future."

County Advertiser 16/3/1907

"Howard Nash, (20) ironmonger, of Church Street, Oldbury, was charged under the Prevention of Crimes Act that he did on the 27th ult purchase 29lbs of brass, whereas the minimum allowed is 112lbs. Mr. H. Jeffries (Oldbury) defended.
Police-constable Heatherley said that on the date in question he saw a boy standing outside the BLUE BALL INN, Tividale, with a quantity of metal. In consequence of what the boy said witness went into the public house, where he saw the defendant, who admitted having purchased the metal off the landlord for 5s. There were 13lbs of lead and 39lbs of iron and scrap brass. Defendant estimated that there were 29lbs of brass. Mr. Jeffries submitted that defendant was not a dealer in old metals, and therefore did not come within the meaning of the Act.
The Bench dismissed the case on payment of costs, defendant promising not to deal in old metals again."

"Great consternation was caused in the Oldbury district yesterday afternoon, by the news that a tram-car on the Birmingham and Midlands Tramways line had been overturned in Dudley Road, Tividale, not far from the Oldbury boundary. Seven men were injured, three of them seriously, and one man, the conductor, was killed.....

The accident occurred between the BOAT INN, Tividale, and the BLUE BALL INN, a few hundred yards from the latter place. It was entering a loop on the rise of a canal bridge at the time, just opposite Gipsy Lane The tram was travelling from Dudley to Oldbury. Everything had gone smoothly until soon after leaving the BOAT INN at Tividale.....”

“An inquest was held on Saturday by Mr. W. L. Lewis (deputy coroner), at the BLUE BALL INN, Dudley Road, Tividale, Rowley Regis, concerning the death of Isaac Horton (62), labourer, of Unity Place, Oldbury, who had died from injuries sustained at the Upper Stour Valley Main Drainage Works, Tividale. Mr. K. H. Garvis, Government Inspector of Factories, attended.

Charles Gregory, builder, stated the deceased had been in his employ for twelve years, and was a most reliable workman. Recently he had been engaged in the construction of a culvert at the Tividale Drainage Works, and it was necessary for him and the deceased to work on Sunday last. When deceased was getting on to a scaffold a plank tipped up and Horton fell 10ft, sustaining serious injuries. He was removed to a house in Roway Lane and attended by Dr. Harper, and died on the 1st inst.

Dr. Harper stated that the deceased’s skull was badly injured and a collar bone broken. Death took place from shock.

The Deputy Coroner said he had visited the works, and as far as he could see, everything possible had been done for the safety of the workmen.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

Dudley Chronicle 26/2/1925

“The story of how a little boy’s attempt to emulate a film actor’s exploits came to a tragic termination was narrated to the South Staffordshire Coroner, Mr. W. C. Checkley, at an inquest held at the BLUE BALL INN, Tividale, Rowley Regis, on Tuesday, February 17.

The inquiry concerned the death of a six-years-old lad named Arthur Henry Welton, who lived with his parents at 243, Dudley Road, Tividale, and who was drowned in the canal near the Brades Blue Brick works, on Saturday afternoon. His father, Thomas Pennington, a steeplejack, said he last saw his son alive on Saturday afternoon, at about 2.40. He was then at home, but about 4.30 witness said he was called to the canal-side, and was present when the body of his boy was taken from the water.

Alfred Hale, a schoolboy, living at 10, Brades Road, Tividale, told the Coroner that at 3.30pm on Saturday the deceased and another boy named Price were playing near the canal basin adjoining the brickworks. They were pushing an empty boat from the side when there was a sudden splash, and witness, not knowing the cause, turned to Price and asked him what had happened. The latter replied that ‘Captain’ (the deceased’s nickname) had fallen into the canal. Witness said he then called a man from the brickyard, and told him what had happened.

Lawrence Price, aged 12 years, of 242, Dudley Road, Tividale, then gave evidence to the effect that when at the side of the boat Welton called out, ‘Watch me; Richard Talmadge in ‘Taking Chances!’”

The Coroner: That was because he had seen something like that on the pictures, wasn’t it? – Witness: I think so.

The Coroner: What did he do after he said that? – Witness: He pushed the boat out and tried to jump on. He got on to the side, but could not hold on, and tumbled into the water.

Benjamin Hale, a boatman, residing at 10, Brades Road, Tividale, spoke to receiving information of the affair. He saw a boy's cap floating on the water, but over half an hour elapsed before the body could be located. It was then underneath the boat in about 5ft of water, and when pulled out with the aid of a boat hook life was extinct.

In answer to the Coroner, witness said the property on which the boys were playing was private, and they had no right to be there. A football match was in progress in an adjacent field, and it was a common thing for some of the spectators to go on to the canal-side at half-time in order to warm themselves at the brick-yard fires. It was possible that the boys went there for that purpose, and then started playing with the boat. The Coroner, in returning a verdict of Accidental Drowned, said: I am afraid this is another one of those instances where the 'pictures' were responsible to some extent for a boy's unfortunate death. I think I have seen a film title somewhere about of someone taking chances, and in this case the poor boy took one too many."

"Coalfield Distress Fund. Boots and Clothing Wanted.

The situation in the Midland coalfields may be judged from the letter received yesterday from Mr. J. Blake-more, JP, the agent of the Pelsall District Miners' Association – which co-ordinates the work of the various voluntary relieving organisations in the Pelsall district – in the course of which he says, 'Appalling cases of extreme poverty come to my notice day after day – cases so dreadful that they wring the heart. What relief is possible we are giving, but what cuts one to the quick is to find that the resources are so inadequate to the needs.'

“The adjourned inquest upon the body of William Lett, landlord of the TALBOT INN, West Bromwich, was held yesterday morning, at the BOAT INN, Birchfield Lane, near Oldbury. The inquest had been adjourned for a post mortem examination to be made, to ascertain the exact cause of death.

Mr. Sainsbury, who made the examination, expressed his opinion that death had resulted from injury to the brain, caused by the accident.

The Jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death. They considered that the deceased had driven too near the edge of the road, with the view to avoid a hollow on the other side. A recommendation was made by the Jury that the Oldbury Local Board should be requested to put lamps along the thoroughfare to prevent future accidents; and two or three of the Jury expressed their opinion that the road was in a dangerous state owing to the hollow.

Mr. Wright, the Clerk of the Board, promised to convey the suggestion of the Jury to the monthly meeting of the Board, which was to be held that evening. In accordance with his undertaking, Mr. Wright informed the Board of the recommendation of the Jury. He explained that he had attended the inquest to watch the proceedings on behalf of the Board, to be prepared to advise them in the event of the Board being in any way implicated. Before taking this course, he had consulted one or two members of the Board, and obtained their approval. He had requested the surveyor to obtain a photograph of the place, with the view to being prepared to maintain the interests of the Board in any action that might arise. He thought he was warranted in doing as he had done from the fact that the relatives of the deceased had examined the road, and the heap of stones, and had employed Mr. Hayes as their solicitor, apparently indicating that they had the intention of taking proceedings against the Board. The Jury had made some complaints as to the state of the road at the place where the accident happened. The complaints, however, did not affect the Board so much as the Canal Company, to whom the cottages belonged on the left hand side to the road, over the canal bridge, where there was a very deep hollow. It was not at all improbable that the deceased, who was well acquainted with the road, in endeavouring to avoid the hollow, had gone too much to the opposite side, and consequently run over the stones. It was now become necessary that the Board should insist upon the Canal Company taking steps to put the road into a state of repair. The Board approved of the steps taken by Mr. Wright, and instructed him to take the necessary steps in protection of their interests.”

"William Elcock Fletcher, landlord of the BOAT INN, was charged with allowing drunkenness to have taken place in his house on Monday the 6th instant.

PC Cox stated that he visited the defendant's premises on Monday the 6th April, in company with PC Smith, and found a man there named W. Evans, drunk. Evans had been summoned before the magistrates on the previous week, and pleaded guilty to the charge. PC Smith corroborated and stated that he saw the defendant drink.

Mr. Shakespeare defended and called a man named Boswell who had been present upon the occasion, and stated that Evans was not served with any beer upon the premises.

A fine of £1 and costs was inflicted, the license not to be endorsed."

Smethwick Telephone 14/8/1886

"William Hancox Fletcher, landlord of the BOAT INN, Birchfield Lane, Oldbury, was charged with selling beer during prohibited hours on the 1st inst. Mr. Shakespeare defended.

Police-constable Clark stated that calling at the defendant's house just before dinner time on Sunday morning of the date mentioned he found two men drinking in the house. In reply to questions he put to them, one of the men stated that he came from Wyrley, near Cannock, and the other two gave an address at West Bromwich. He had since, in company with Sergeant Stanton and Police-constable Rivers, measured the distance from the residence of the two men at West Bromwich to Birchfield Lane, and found that the same was under three miles.

Police-sergeant Stanton deposed to having assisted to measure the distance from Overend Street, West Bromwich, to the Birchfield Lane, Oldbury, and found the distance was about two miles and three-quarters. In reply to Mr. Shakespeare, witness stated that they came down a narrow street, and proceeded along High Street and Paradise Street. Police-constables Clark and Rivers carried the chains and witness booked the measurements.

For the defence, Mr. Shakespeare called the barmaid at the house, Mary Eliza Simpson, who swore that the man who entered the house first stated that he came from Wyrley, and the other two said they came from the same place. She declined to serve until Mr. Fletcher had seen them.

Defendant also gave evidence to the effect that the men stated that they came from Wyrley, and it was in consequence of this statement that he allowed them to be served.

Mr. Shakespeare contended that the landlord had taken reasonable precaution to ascertain that the men had travelled the prescribed distance, and therefore had not committed any offence against the law.

The Bench agreed that, as the landlord and the barmaid had both sworn positively the men stated they came from Wyrley, a distance of ten miles from the house, the case would be dismissed.”

Worcester Journal 20/8/1892

“On Tuesday afternoon Mr. E. Docker held an inquest at the BOAT INN, Churchbridge, Oldbury, respecting the deaths of Hannah Debney (3) and Walter Harrold (6), whose parents reside in Potato Row, Churchbridge, who died – the former on the 14th, and the latter on the 15th inst – from the effects of poisoning.

Mrs. Debney stated on Friday she took her husband’s dinner, leaving the deceased and another girl, named Georgina, getting their dinners. As she was returning home she was told by a girl named Lowe that deceased and another child had been taken suddenly ill. When she got home she found the two children lying on the sofa, and they appeared to have been very sick. She asked the children what was the matter, and deceased said they had been eating Indian wheat. Witness gave them tea and brandy, and in the evening medical assistance was sent for. The eldest girl, Georgina, said she had had some flour and sugar off a shelf, and some powder was found in the pockets of the deceased Walter Harrold. A man whom they called Tom, and who had gone to America, gave her a box of powder, which he said would kill the mice. She knew it was poison, and always kept it out of the way of the children.

Mrs. Harrold stated that on Friday Mrs. Debney asked her to accompany her on an errand. Witness left her three children, Walter, Polly, and Thomas, in the house with Mrs. Debney’s two children. When she returned she found her three children lying in Mrs. Debney’s back yard vomiting, and they said Georgina Debney had been making some ‘pop,’ and she had given them some flour and sugar, which they had eaten; and she also mixed some up in water, which they drank, thinking it was pop. Witness at once gave them some salt and water, but did not send for a doctor, because the neighbours said it was a sunstroke the children were suffering from. A doctor was sent for about six o’clock. Her other two were progressing favourably.

Police-constable Stevens having been examined as to a statement the girl Georgina made to him, the coroner and the jury adjourned to Mrs. Debney's house to take the evidence of the child. She stated that they got the powder off the shelf, and after mixing it up drank it between them.

Dr. Buttery stated that on Friday night he went to Harrold's house, accompanied by his assistant. He found all three of Harrold's children unconscious and in a state of collapse. He ordered them brandy and milk. Mrs. Harrold handed him a powder, which she had found in Debney's pantry, and after examination he discovered that it was white arsenic. He then visited Debney's house, and found Hannah in an unconscious condition, and Georgina was also partly unconscious. He examined their gums and found that they were irritated. He went to Lowe's house, the other one who was poisoned, and found him vomiting badly. He made a post mortem examination of the bodies on Monday, and found traces of arsenic in each child's stomach. Death was due to poisoning by arsenic.

The coroner summed up, and the jury returned a verdict that the children were Accidentally Poisoned. They requested the coroner to caution Mrs. Debney to be more careful in dealing with poison in future."

"The licensing sessions for Oldbury division were held yesterday.....

Superintendent Chare reported Four licensed persons had been convicted during the year. Three of those licenses would be renewed, but that of William Morgan, of the BOAT INN, Church Bridge, who was fined 40s and costs for permitting drunkenness on August 14 last, would be deferred until the adjourned licensing meeting. With that exception all the old licenses would be renewed. All the applications for new licenses were refused."

Birmingham Daily Post 15/11/1895

"Yesterday Mr. A. H. Hebbert (deputy coroner) held an inquest at the BOAT INN, Church Bridge, Oldbury, concerning the death of Thomas Taylor (32), bicycle-chain maker, formerly residing at Barr Street, Hockley, whose body was found in the Birmingham Canal, near the Jim Crow Bridge, Birchfield Lane, on Tuesday morning.

Charles Taylor, the father of the deceased, stated that about two years ago his son buried his wife, and that appeared to prey upon his mind. Since that time he had been depressed and strange in his manner. Witness did not think deceased had committed suicide.

Police-constable Harrison, who conveyed the body to the BOAT INN, said he found 5d in coppers in the pockets, also a contribution card showing that deceased was a member of the Birmingham Ebenezer Provident Sick Society. The water was only about five feet deep where the body was found. Witness was told that deceased went about singing in public houses, but on making enquiries he found that was incorrect. Deceased had been mistaken for a man who closely resembled him. He belonged to a respectable family in Birmingham.

There was no evidence to show how he got into the water. The jury returned a verdict of Found Drowned."

“There were some important comments made in reference to the granting of three off licenses for the Lightwoods district by the Oldbury justices, at a meeting of the County Licensing Committee, at which application was made for the confirmation of the concessions. At the outset, Mr. Willis Bund (the chairman) said that in reference to these three applications he understood there was some agreement or understanding between the Oldbury justices and the applicants. They had no particulars of that understanding. The brewers were willing, if the licenses were granted, to surrender certain licenses in Oldbury. The question was whether the committee ought not to have before them very full information concerning those houses which were going to be surrendered.

The first applicant was James Swain, Katherine Road, Warley, grocer, on whose behalf Mr. J. J. Parfitt, KC, appeared. The offer made on behalf of the brewers, through the applicant, was to surrender three licenses in Oldbury, viz, the JOLLY COLLIER, Albert Street; BOAT INN, Birchfield Lane (both fully-licensed houses); and the RISING SUN, Queen Street, a beer ‘on’ license. The district (observed Mr. Parfitt) for which the new license was asked was a growing one, and many houses were springing up on all sides. The shop for which the off license was requested was at the corner of two streets, and in those streets and three others adjoining there were 278 houses, and something like 1,390 inhabitants, so that the need was real.

The Chairman said his point was that they ought to have further information as to the value of the houses which were to be surrendered. They might be valuable, and they might not, but it was very important for the Court to know what value the brewers put upon the houses.

Mr. Parfitt said information could be given, and handed in a statement, expressing the hope that with this information it would be possible for the committee to come to the conclusion that the site for the new license was an admirable one. and confirm the granting of the license.

The Chairman said that the site of the house was only fifty yards from the Staffordshire border.

Evidence was given showing that 280 people petitioned in favour of the license being granted.....

The Chairman said an attempt had been made – rightly or wrongly he would not say – to cover the district with off licenses, which would pay no monopoly value and contribute nothing to the compensation fund, and for which certain licenses were offered in order to get over any objections. The licenses it was proposed to surrender were not those it was most desired to take away, because they were not included in the twenty reported by the Oldbury justices. In the discharge of their duty to the ratepayers were the committee justified in covering the district with off licenses? Another point was whether the committee ought to grant the licenses applied for. They were offered valuable terms, but he was loth to tie the hands of the committee by asking them to accept them in view of the pending legislation. The applications would be granted, but it must be distinctly understood that the terms agreed upon between the justices of Oldbury and the applicants did not fetter the committee in any way if they were called upon to deal with the licenses in the near future.”

The license was surrendered on 13th July 1908.

Mr. Shackleton said he was roused just after midnight by the smashing of glass, and on making an examination he found that the fanlight of the back door had been broken. There were bloodstains on the floors and walls.

Stevens was arrested by Sergeant Callaway on the following day, when his left hand bore marks of blood. There were also bloodstains upon his clothes. A button found in the house corresponded with the buttons on Stevens’s clothes, while the cast of a footprint in the garden near the back door exactly fitted his boot. The clothes and boots were identified by Stevens’s mother, who said her son was wearing them on the night referred to.

Stevens was further charged with burglary at the BOAT INN, Tat Bank, from which it was alleged he stole 8s in money and a silver watch. He was committed to the sessions on this charge also.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 2/3/1910

“The adjourned Licensing Sessions for the Oldbury division were held yesterday, Mr. G. S. Albright presiding over the magistrates. The principal business was the consideration of six licences which the magistrates proposed to refer to the Quarter Sessions for compensation on the ground of redundancy. The houses in question were the CART AND HORSES, West Bromwich Street; BIRD IN HAND, Simpson Street; ROYAL OAK, Park Lane; NAGS HEAD, Flash Road; HOPE AND ANCHOR, Halesowen Street; and BOAT INN, Tat Bank.....

Mr. Albright then announced that the magistrates had decided to refer only four licenses to the Quarter Sessions at Worcester this year instead of six as originally proposed. They would therefore renew the licenses of the BIRD IN HAND and ROYAL OAK.....

Mr. Dawes appeared in reference to the BOAT INN, the licensee being Levi Gough Harrison, and the lessees Messrs. Butler and Co., Wolverhampton.

Mr. Jones said within 500 yards there were eleven full-licensed houses and two beerhouses on..... All four houses were referred to the Quarter Sessions.”

The license renewal was referred to the Compensation Authority.

The renewal was refused on 2nd July 1910.

Evesham Standard 10/12/1910

“Worcestershire Licensing Committee. Determining Compensation Claims.

A supplemental meeting of this Committee was held on Saturday at the Shirehall.....

The special purpose of the meeting was for the purpose of determining the amount of compensation to be paid for the extinction of licenses. Fourteen such licenses had been reported by the justices to the Committee, and the Committee had already decided to renew one. The amounts claimed in respect of the other thirteen were.....

BOAT INN, Tat Bank Road, Oldbury, £1,518.....

The Committee took evidence in support of the claims calculated on the capitalised loss of trade, the capitalised loss in the value of the premises by the extinction of the license, and the loss on the sale of fittings.....

The Committee then announced the following awards.....

BOAT INN, Oldbury, £994.”

Alcester Chronicle 14/1/1911

“An adjourned meeting of the Worcestershire Licensing Committee was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, on Saturday.....

At the meeting of the committee in December six claims for compensation were heard, and awards were made. The committee now settled the shares to be paid to the parties as follows.....

BOAT INN, Tat Bank Road, Oldbury, £994 awarded, £50 licensee, £894 6s owner, £49 14s lessees.”

“At Oldbury Licensing Sessions yesterday Superintendent Davis presented his report.....

The licenses of the following four houses were entered for compensation in 1910, and were refused renewal, but the compensation money not having been paid yet the houses were not closed BOAT INN.....

Mr. Albright said that there seemed little doubt that all the arrears of compensation would be cleared off in the present year, and the houses closed, although the amount of money available now would be considerably decreased by the absorption of a large portion of the county in Greater Birmingham.”

Bromsgrove Messenger 9/3/1912

“A meeting of the Worcestershire County Licensing Committee was held at the Shirehall, Worcester, on Saturday afternoon.....

The following amounts, which had previously been awarded, were now ordered to be paid on March 29th..... BOAT INN, Tatbank, Oldbury, £994 (including £50 for licensee).”

Compensation was paid on 29th March 1912.

The license was extinguished on 5th April 1912.

Staffordshire Advertiser 6/2/1847

“On Friday morning last, a man named John Bissill, aged 30 years, accidentally fell down one of the pit’s shafts belonging to Messrs. John Bagnall and Sons, at Tividale colliery, and was killed. An inquest was held in the evening before George Hinchliffe, Esq, coroner, at the BOAT INN, Rowley, and verdict of Accidental Death was returned.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 21/7/1847

“An inquest was held at the BOAT INN, Tividale, Rowley Regis, on Saturday, on the body of George Pearce, aged 37 years. The deceased was the engineer at Mr. Batson’s Colliery at Tividale, and some new trees were being put into the water pit. The pit was 170 yards deep, and the deceased had the management of fixing the trees. Before he descended to the place in the pit where he was going to fix the trees, which was 110 yards from the mouth of the pit, he found there was not room for the trees to descend down the centre, without keeping the rope which was then down the pit supporting the machinery below on one side. With this view the deceased put a loose brick between a beam of wood across the mouth of the pit and the frame of it, to force the rope a few inches over the centre to allow room for the tree. After having done this, he descended to his work on a small board, at each end of which is attached a rope, and from the top of which is attached another rope, which is affixed to the engine above. Upon this the engineer sits, and he can be raised or lowered as his work requires. This is called a horse. There was a person named John Wilkes at work on a scaffold in the pit, about four yards below the spot at which the deceased was to regulate the trees; the trees were let down, and shortly afterwards the vibration occasioned by the rope shook the frame at the top and loosened the brick, and it fell on the head of the deceased, and knocked him off the horse; he fell to bottom of the pit, a distance of 60 yards, the water at the time being eleven yards deep. Wilkes, who was on the scaffold below when the brick fell, heard it coming, and had a very narrow escape, as the brick and the deceased both fell against the scaffold in the descent to the bottom of the pit. It was nearly an hour before the body of the deceased could be recovered from the water in the pit. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

“Pedestrianism. Matches To Come.....

August 30. S. Partridge and J. Wardle (both of Westbromwich) – one mile, £5 a side, at the BOAT INN, Tividale.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 29/9/1847

“An inquest was commenced on Monday last, at the BOAT INN, Tividale, in the parish of Rowley Regis, on the bodies of William Mow and George Carter. They were employed at Mr. Batson’s coal pit, at Tividale, and went on Sunday to descend the pit to feed the horses, but before they went down the boiler exploded, and injured them so severely that one died in about three hours, and the other the next day. The inquest was adjourned till Thursday next to afford time for some person to examine the boiler and ascertain the cause of the explosion.”

Staffordshire Advertiser 9/10/1847

“An accident of a fatal nature took place at one of Mr. Batson’s coal pits, at Tividale, on Sunday se’nnight, whereby two men, named George Carter and William Mow, lost their lives through the explosion of a boiler. An inquest was held on the bodies on Monday, the 27th ult, and by adjournment, on Thursday, the 30th ult, and by a further adjournment to the 2nd inst, before George Hinchliffe, Esq, coroner at the BOOT [sic] INN, Tividale, Rowley Regis, which resulted in a verdict of Accidental Death.

From the evidence of two engineers, it appeared that the explosion was caused by the deceased William Mow putting an iron wheel, weighing 14½lbs upon the steam click of the boiler, and also bearing his own weight upon it, in order to get the steam up quicker, himself and the other deceased having gone to the pit for the purpose of descending to feed the horses before the engineer had arrived. The engineer (who was to undertake the management of the engine that morning for the first time) arrived just at this time, and tried the buoy of the boiler, by which it appeared there was plenty of water in it; and he had scarcely entered the engine-house to set the engine on for the deceased to descend the pit, when a terrific explosion took place, and the boiler of the engine escaped from the bed of brick work which surrounded it, and ascended in the air higher than the stack of the engine and burst, the greater part of it going thirty yards from the engine-house, and two other parts to some distance. The brickwork surrounding it was scattered in every direction. The deceased William Mow was struck by the bricks, and also scalded by the boiling water which fell from the boiler, and was so much injured that he died in about an hour afterwards. The deceased George Carter was so much scalded, and was blown by the force of the explosion into an adjoining field, and so much injured he died the next day.

Mr. Chas. Henry Capper, civil engineer, of Birmingham, who was specially summoned to attend the adjourned inquiry, was of opinion that the engineer might have been mistaken as to the quantity of water in the boiler; and that the plates of the boiler, above the water in it, had become red hot, and some cold water coming in contact with them, had caused such a generation of steam as occasioned the explosion. This fearful accident caused a great sensation in the neighbourhood."

"On Tuesday the 26th ult George Hinchliffe, Esq, held an inquest at the BOAT INN, Tividale, near Rowley Regis, on the body of Charles Unett, a labourer, thirty-two years of age. It appeared that the deceased and a man named Griffiths lodged together at the house of Edward Jones, and having on the previous Tuesday complained of their bedroom being damp, Mrs. Jones placed an iron bucketful of live coals in the apartment when they retired to rest at night, telling them to leave the door open to allow the smoke to escape. This they did not do, as it turned out. About three in the morning their landlord was awakened by hearing their groans, and on going into the room he found both lying in an insensible and apparently dying state. Having thrown the window open, in order to admit some fresh air, he at once sent for a surgeon, and Mr. Underhill was soon in attendance, and administered the requisite remedies. Griffiths recovered in fourteen or sixteen hours after, but Unett remained in a state of stupor until Sunday, when he died. A verdict of Accidental Death was returned.

Wolverhampton Chronicle 7/9/1853

“An adjourned inquest was held on Thursday evening, at the BOAT INN, Tividale, before George H. Hinchliffe, Esq, coroner, on the body of Thomas Naylor. The deceased was employed at Messrs. Caddick and Mason’s coal pit, and on the 23rd of August, the doggy, Aston, not having come to the pit, a man named Dainty, by the direction of Mason, tried the lamp, and at the further end of the workings discovered some sulphur, which was brushed out. Deceased commenced working there, and after being in the place a short time, a quantity of coal came down, and he left the spot, but on going there again with a candle, an explosion of sulphur immediately took place, and deceased was fearfully burnt, from the effects of which he died in a few days.

One of the witnesses, who was close to the deceased in the pit, lay down and thus escaped injury, but three other men were much burnt.

It appeared from the evidence, that the air-head was only carried to within eight yards of the spot where the explosion occurred, and consequently no one could get there, but the place was considered perfectly safe after the sulphur was brushed out. The deceased had a naked candle in the place before the coal fell, and it was thought the sulphur lay in them, and that their coming down caused the sulphur to spread. The doggy, Aston, was frequently away from the pit, and in his absence one of the other men had to use the lamp.

Thomas Wynn, Esq, the government inspector, was present at the inquest, and stated that he had made an examination of the pit, and thought the ventilation very defective; he pointed out to Messrs. Caddick and Mason what should be done, and they promised to see it carried out.

The coroner and jury also expressed an opinion that the doggy was not at all a proper person for this situation, and severely reprimanded him for staying away from his duties, and trusting to others parties to try the lamp.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

“An inquest was held yesterday (Friday) afternoon, at the BOAT INN, Tividale, on the body of Job Baker, a youth seventeen years of age, who met with his death on the previous Tuesday in the Grange Colliery, near Oldbury, belonging to Messrs. Cartwright and Hayes. Deceased was engaged steadying a skip at the top of an incline in the pit, and while the skip was in motion was crushed between it and a ‘tree’ and instantly killed. Verdict Accidental Death.”

Brierley Hill Advertiser 14/11/1857

“Stephen Timmins, licensed victualler, of the BOAT, Tividale, was indicted for having his house open at twenty minutes before ten o’clock, on the forenoon of Sunday, the 1st inst.

PC Hawthorne, on being examined, stated that he and another officer, on the morning in question, saw two men come out of the house of defendant. They afterwards went in, and asked – in their disguise – for some ale; but defendant would not give them it. No party was in the place drinking; but five navvies were at the back door in a rather suspicious state.

Defendant, in defence, denied having sold any ale. He was, however, fined 5s with costs.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 3/3/1858

“In another part of our paper we give particulars of a boiler explosion which took place on Saturday afternoon last, at the ironworks at Tividale near Dudley, belonging to Messrs. Whitehead and Haines, and by which four persons lost their lives, and others sustained serious injuries, though now likely to recover. An inquest on the bodies of Thomas Riles, Thomas Worley and Joseph Caddick, took place on Monday afternoon at the BOAT INN, Tividale, before Mr. G. H. Hinchliffe Esq, coroner. The fourth man killed was Thomas Homer, who lived at Greets Green, West Bromwich, and a second inquest will have to be held upon him.

James Leighton of Tividale, the manager of the works, said there were three high-pressure boilers in the works, placed near together, and these were under the control of Worley and Riles – the one working days and the other nights. Riles worked during Friday night, and on Saturday morning Worley took charge of the boilers at about half past six o’clock, and kept them at work until about three o’clock, when, owing to the insufficiency of steam, arising from the bad quality of the slack used in firing, the engines were stopped. In about five minutes afterwards the explosion occurred Adjourned.”

[The verdict was that the deceased were killed by the explosion of the boiler, which explosion was caused by an undue pressure of steam, but that there was no evidence to show the cause of such pressure.]

County Advertiser 17/4/1858

“Hannah Bate, a respectable-looking young woman, was charged with stealing the sum of 15s, the moneys of her employer, Stephen Timmins. Mr. Burbury appeared for the defendant, and at the opening of the case stated to the Bench that the girl’s box had been forcibly opened by the prosecutor, and £10 taken therefrom, together with some silver from the defendant’s person. He now requested that the money, pending the decision on the case, should be given up either to the Clerk or Mr. Superintendent Mills. The Bench stated that they could not make such an order till they had heard the case. The prosecutor, however, gave the money up voluntarily to Mr. Mills.

Elizabeth Timmins was then placed in the witness box, and deposed as follows: I am the wife of Stephen Timmins, who keeps the BOAT INN, Tividale. Prisoner has been in our employ as servant-of-all-work for the past two years, and we have placed great confidence in her. She had been in the habit of attending to the tap, and receiving money for ale, &c. Latterly I have suspected prisoner of dishonesty, in consequence of having missed more than £20. I, therefore, on the 5th inst, marked about £4 worth of silver, with the exception of the smaller pieces – sixpences. I then placed them in a wooden bowl in the drawers in my bedroom. I saw them quite safe about three o’clock on the afternoon of that day; but when I went to bed they were gone. The money consisted of four florins, one half crown, and four shillings, which were all marked with the point of a pair of scissors. The drawer was still locked. I then went into the prisoner’s bedroom, and said to her, ‘You naughty girl, give me the key of your trunk; I think it will unlock my drawer.’ I then tried to open the drawer with the key, but could not. I then went again into the prisoner’s bedroom and asked her to let me search her pockets, when she pulled out a lot of orange peel, with a purse containing the silver I had marked previously, and which I now identify as that produced. I then went down stairs for the purpose of getting a policeman, but while I was away the prisoner escaped out of the window. When I went into the prisoner's bedroom, I said, 'This is my money – where did you get it from?' Prisoner replied, 'Has no one any money but you?' Prisoner also said that she (witness) had marked the money since it had been taken from her; but this was said on the day following, when the prisoner came to fetch her clothes and box away. Prisoner received 11s 6d per month wages, being at the rate of £7 per year. In the prisoner's box the £10 produced was found. Mr. Burbury cross-examined this witness at some length, and elicited from her that she should not have prosecuted the charge if the prisoner had kept a civil tongue in her head; but she had been exceedingly impertinent.

PC Lucas deposed that from information he received he went to the house of the prosecutor about 11 o'clock on the morning of Wednesday, the 7th inst, and received the money produced (15s) from Mrs. Timmins. The prisoner gave herself up on the day following.

At the conclusion of the case for the prosecution, the Bench stated that they could not do anything but commit the prisoner for trial at the ensuing sessions. Bail was put in, and accepted."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 1/6/1869

“Henry Homer, coal dealer, was yesterday charged with stealing a boat, the property of Edward [sic] Staley, of the BOAT INN, Tividale. On the 26th December, the prisoner went to the prosecutor and hired a boat for one month, at the rate of 24s per month. He sent for it on the following Monday, and had not since returned it.

The prisoner, in defence, said he had bought the boat, and given £10 for it.

The prisoner was committed to the Sessions, bail being refused. Mr. Travis prosecuted.”

Staffordshire Advertiser 3/7/1869

“Staffordshire Midsummer Sessions.....

Henry Homer, 28, coal dealer, was indicted for converting to his own use, while bailee thereof, a boat, the property of Edmund Staley, at Rowley Regis. Mr. Underhill conducted the prosecution, and Mr. Young the defence.

The prosecutor keeps the BOAT INN, at Tividale. Last Christmas he had a boat that he wished to lend on hire, and the prisoner hearing of it went to him and agreed to take the boat on hire for a month. The prisoner gave a card, on which was ‘Henry Homer, coal merchant, Church Lane, Tipton.’ It was arranged that the money for the hire of the boat should be paid at the month’s end. The boat was taken away on the following day. At the month’s end the prisoner did not return the boat or pay the money for its hire, and the prosecutor went to look for it and the prisoner. He found the boat at a wharf at Aston, near Birmingham, in the possession of a person to whom the prisoner had sold it for £16 10s on the day after he had it from the prosecutor’s. The prosecutor after this went to Church Lane, Tipton, to look for the prisoner. He found that he had lived there, but had left, and after three days’ search with the police he discovered him at Birmingham, in a public house.

The defence was that the prisoner purchased the boat from the prosecutor for £10, arranging to pay the purchase money afterwards; and witnesses were called to show that this was the nature of the transaction. While one of these witnesses was in the box, Mr. I. Spooner, stipendiary magistrate for Wolverhampton and district, who was sitting on the Bench with the Chairman and other justices, and who it seemed heard the case when the prisoner was sent for trial, put some questions to the witness, and also suggested to the counsel for the prosecution a question which he thought ought to be asked. On this Mr. W. Ward, solicitor, of Wolverhampton, who was instructing the counsel for the defence, rose and said he must protest against the committing magistrate cross-examining the witness. It was trying the case twice over, and was abominable. Mr. Spooner: Bailiffs – remove that man.

Mr. Bergen, Deputy Chief Constable, who was present in court, and some other officers, immediately went towards Mr. Ward.

Mr. Ward: I have a duty to perform. It’s abominable. It’s my case.

Mr. Spooner: Remove that man – it’s contrary to order. Bailiffs, remove him.

The officers escorted Mr. Ward from the Court, but he soon returned, and shortly afterwards counsel for the defence stated on his behalf that he was very sorry for what had occurred.

Mr. Spooner: I am very glad – I am very glad.

The jury found the prisoner guilty, and having been previously convicted he was sentenced to seven years’ penal servitude.”

“Edmund Staley, of the BOAT INN, Tividale, was charged with allowing drunkenness in his house. Police-constable Satchwell said at two o’clock in the morning, of the 19th inst, he visited the house, and in the club room found about thirty men, who were drinking, fighting, and making a great noise. He was fined 20s and costs.”

“Edmund Staley, of the BOAT INN, Tividale, was charged with selling porter before half-past twelve o’clock on the morning of Sunday the 10th ult. Mr. Stokes defended.

The evidence of Police-constable Satchwell was to the effect that on going to defendant’s yard at 11.45 on the morning in question, he saw defendant emptying a bottle of porter into a jug held by a man living close by.

The Bench told defendant that as he had been recently convicted, they could not, under the provisions of the lately Amended Act, fine him less than £5 and costs. Fined accordingly.”

“Edmund Staley, publican, of Tividale, was charged with selling ale before half-past twelve, on Sunday the 10th ult, having been fined £1 and costs in August last, for a similar offence.

Police-constable Satchwell said on the 10th inst, at about a quarter to twelve, in the morning, he found defendant and another man in the back yard, sitting on some steps, with a bottle of porter which they were pouring into a jug. Witness asked defendant what right he had to be drinking there at that time. He said it was his own. The officer then observed that he had no right to have that man drinking on his premises, to which he made no reply.

In cross-examination he said he knew the man; he lived nearly half a mile away.

Mr. Stokes contended that the man was a traveller, as it had been decided by Act of Parliament that a man might be said to be travelling when he took a walk for pleasure, as this man was, and that he had a right to demand a drink on a Sunday.

The Bench took a different view of the case, and as it was his second offence, fined defendant £5 and costs.”

“Thomas Jones was charged with drinking in a public house during prohibited hours, on the 10th of July, at Tividale. Police-constable Satchwell said he visited the BOAT INN, Tividale, at 11.45am, on the 10th of July. Saw defendant there, drinking. It was in the yard.

Defendant pleaded guilty, and was fined 2s 6d and costs.”

“Amos Haden, a labourer, was charged with having committed an indecent assault upon Ann Parry on the 30th ult. Mr. Addison defended.

Complainant, an elderly woman and a widow, stated that on the above date the defendant asked her to accompany him to the BOAT INN, Oldbury Road, and have half a pint of beer. She consented, and they went into the house. There was no other person present, and the defendant told her he was single and had a number of men employed under him. He assaulted her in an indecent manner, and tried to push her down. She resisted him, and after crying out, assistance came. Defendant was perfectly sober.

Cross-examined: Her son had been to the defendant's house, and offered to withdraw the case for 10s, but the defendant refused to pay it. Defendant had not refused to marry her ten years ago. Other questions were put to the witness by Mr. Addison, but she refused to answer.

The Bench said the complainant had no evidence to prove that what she had stated was true, and they must, therefore, dismiss the case."

"An inquest was held on the 3rd inst, before Mr. E. Hooper, coroner for the district, at the BOAT INN, Tividale, on the body of William Bushell, aged 37 years. Deceased was employed at Messrs. Budd and Co.'s Tin Works, and on the 2nd inst he had occasion to remove the 'man lid' from a Cornish boiler. He had removed all the pins but one, when the pressure of the steam inside the boiler forced the 'man lid' up, and deceased was scalded so severely that death ensued. A verdict of Accidental Death was returned."

"Mr. E. Hooper, coroner, held an inquest on Tuesday at the BOAT INN, Oldbury Road, Tividale, on the body of Robert Maunder (74), boatman, who died suddenly on Monday morning. Mary Maunder, wife of the deceased, identified the body, and stated that they were lying in a cabin boat in the Birmingham canal near the New England Colliery, and on Monday morning her husband, who had complained of shortness of breath previously, became suddenly ill, and died before medical aid could be procured. There was a burning mound near where they were lying from which a great deal of sulphur arose, and she considered that hastened his death. The jury returned a verdict of Death from Natural Causes, and recommended that the coroner should take some steps to get the nuisance arising from the mound abated."

"An inquest was held yesterday, before Mr. E. Hooper (coroner), at the BOAT INN, Tividale, respecting the death of James Hartle (63), hardware caster, formerly residing at Bromford Lane, whose body was found in the Birmingham Canal, at Tividale, on Sunday last.

Agnes Hartle, daughter of the deceased, stated that her father left home on Friday morning for the purpose of going to his work at Messrs. Whitehouse's works, Tipton. His sight was defective. He was accustomed sometimes to walk to his work along the canal side.

James Blackham said he and a man named Charles Morris saw deceased neat the Rattle Chain Brickworks on the canal on Friday morning. After they had proceeded about 150 yards they heard cries, but could not tell from whom they proceeded. The next day he heard that deceased was drowned in the canal, near the place where they saw him.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidentally Drowned.”

“An inquest was held yesterday afternoon, before Mr. E. Hooper (coroner), at the BOAT INN, Tividale, respecting the death of John Orr (64), of Chapel Street, Tividale, who was found in the canal on the 1st inst. Margaret Orr, wife of deceased, stated that her husband went to the Dudley Port Post Office, on the 1st inst, for the purpose of receiving his pension. He was found subsequently in the canal, near the Old Port Bridge, Dudley Port. It is supposed that whilst returning home deceased missed his way owing to the fog, and walked into the canal. When taken out of the water by a man named Thomas Davis deceased was not dead, but he died from the effects of the immersion on the 3rd inst.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

“Yesterday afternoon Mr. E. Hooper, coroner, held an inquest at the BOAT INN, Tividale, relative to the death of Samuel Millership (30), of Birchfield Lane, Oldbury, whose body was found in the canal, near the Dudley Road Bridge, Tividale, on Monday.

It appeared that on Saturday night, the 30th ult, deceased went to Dudley in company with two other men

– Samuel Woodhall and Thomas Bishop – for the purpose of redeeming his watch. The three men visited two public houses, and had two quarts and three glasses of ale amongst them. They all returned to the tram together late at night, but when Woodhall and Bishop arrived at Oldbury deceased, who was supposed to be riding in the car, was missing.

Richard Bates, boatman, stated that he found the body of deceased early on Monday morning floating in the water in an upright posture.

There being no evidence to show how deceased got into the water, a verdict of Found Drowned was returned.”

West Bromwich Weekly News 11/6/1887

“Mr. E. Hooper (coroner) held an inquest on Thursday morning, at the BOAT INN, touching the death of a man unknown, who was found drowned in the Birmingham Canal on the 6th inst.

Henry Felton, fitter, of Oldbury, stated that on Monday morning, about 10 o’clock, he was standing on the canal side near Gilbert’s brickworks, when he saw a boat going towards the brickworks, and when it passed Downing’s Bridge he saw something come to the top of the water, the man who was pushing the boat along with an iron rod apparently catching the body of a man with the hook, when they got it out of the water.

The Coroner: Sometimes the water near the bridge overflows on to the footpath I understand.

Witness: Yes, sir, it is a very low bridge, and when I go under I have great difficulty in doing so.

A Juror remarked that the horses always touched it when they went under.

The man was perfectly dressed, all his clothes being in order. He had a scratch on the nose, some blood coming from it after he was got out of the water. He thought he would be about 50 or 60 years of age.

Charles Ashwell confirmed the statements of the previous witness, and said if any stranger went under in the dark he would be unable to tell where the side of the water was.

A Juror said it was an arched bridge and it was impossible for a man to walk upright under it.

PC Winfield stated that he had found a plaid scarf round the neck, a strap round the body, and in his coat pocket he found papers, one being a handbill about a great reduction in bread at Edward Heelis, Rolfe Street, Smethwick.

The Coroner remarked that the place did not appear safe, and asked the opinion of the jury.

One said that if anyone made a misstep from the bank he could not possibly help from falling in the water.

The jury, after some consultation returned an open verdict of Found Drowned.

At the same place and time Mr. Hooper held an enquiry into the sudden death of a child named Priscilla Stanfield, aged two years and ten months, residing with her parents at Brades Cottage.

Sarah Stanfield, mother of deceased, stated that she saw the child standing near the door on Monday the 6th, when suddenly she missed her, and ran in every direction to try and find her, but in an hour and a half afterwards she was pulled out of the canal.

Thomas Jones, miner, of Tividale, stated that hearing a child was in the water he went to the place and pulled the body out with a boat shaft.

Lucy Torrent gave evidence to seeing the child playing near some wheelbarrows on the wharf, and five minutes afterwards she heard the mother calling her.

The Coroner remarked that no one appeared to actually see the child fall into the water, but it was a very dangerous place.

West Bromwich Weekly News 25/6/1887

“An inquiry was held on Monday at the BOAT INN, by Mr. E. Hooper (coroner) touching the death of Mary Ellen Southam, aged 2 years and 3 months, residing with her parents at 246, Oldbury Road, Tividale. The evidence showed that whilst the mother of the little one was engaged in the yard, her daughter ran away from her side unobserved, and about five minutes afterwards she was alarmed by a little girl calling out that the child was in the tub, which was near a neighbour’s house. She instantly got her out, but it was impossible to restore animation.

Gloucester Echo 14/6/1888

“At the Old Hill Police Court, on Wednesday, Nathan Price, alias Orrick, stocktaker, of Horseley Heath, Tipton, was charged with attempting to obtain by false pretences, from John Orrick, of Glasgow, the sum of 30s on the 7th inst. Mr. Orrick inserted an advertisement in a newspaper respecting his sons, who were in America, and it was alleged that prisoner wrote a letter to Mr. Orrick, purporting to come from his son John, and asking for 30s to be remitted, so as to enable him to return to Glasgow.

Myra Miles, servant at the BOAT INN, Tividale, said the prisoner was at the inn on the 7th inst, when he asked for writing materials, which were given him. He then remained in the bar writing, and when he left he told them to keep any letter that came from Scotland for him.

Prisoner gave the name of John Orrick. He was remanded for a week.”

[Nathan Price was committed to the Quarter Sessions.]

Staffordshire Chronicle 7/7/1888

“Staffordshire Midsummer Sessions.....

Nathan Price (38), stocktaker, was indicted on charges of obtaining 15s from John Gasson by false pretences on May 17, and endeavouring to obtain 30s by false pretences from John Orrock, on June 7.

Mr. Udall, who appeared to prosecute, said the case was one of a very peculiar character. The prosecutor Gasson, who was a laboring man living at Riverhead, near Sevenoaks, Kent, caused an advertisement to be inserted in Reynolds Newspaper, of May 13, asking for news of his son, who had not been heard of for years. Soon afterwards a letter was received from prisoner which purported to have been sent by the son, and was signed ‘George Gasson.’ The writer stated that he had come back from Australia and was now penniless, and he asked for money to enable him to get home. A postal order for 15s was sent him at the BLUE BOAR [sic] INN, Oldbury, which was the address he had given, but after that nothing more was heard of him.

The prosecutor Orrock had advertised in the same paper for two sons, John and David, who had gone abroad, but the name ‘David’ was accidentally printed ‘Daniel.’ A few days later Orrock received a letter signed ‘John Orrock’ stating that ‘me and Daniel’ had come back to England and were penniless. The letter said that ‘Daniel’ was very ill and could not write, and asked that 30s might be sent to help them home. Being suspicious through the use of the name ‘Daniel’ instead of ‘David’ Orrock informed the police. PC Winfield arrested the prisoner near the BOAT INN, Oldbury, the address he had given in the letter. Prisoner was then living at Horsley Heath, near Tipton. In his house a book was found, containing copies of the advertisements, and the paper on which the letter to Orrock had been written appeared to have been torn from the book.

Prisoner was convicted. He had been convicted of a similar offence in June, 1886, and sentenced to 12 months’ hard labour and there were other convictions recorded against him. The Assistant-Chairman remarked that this was a cruel mode of defrauding anxious parents of their money, and sentenced the prisoner to penal servitude for five years.”

“Yesterday, Mr. E. Hooper (coroner) held an inquest at the BOAT INN, Tividale, respecting the death of Joseph Badger (54), of the Junction, Tividale, who died suddenly on the 28th ult, whilst employed at Wilkinson’s ironworks, Tividale. From the evidence it appeared that deceased was found dead in the office of the works above mentioned. Death was caused through deceased having broken a blood vessel. The jury returned a verdict of Death from Natural Causes.”

Dudley Mercury 14/9/1889

“An inquest was held on Wednesday at the BOAT INN, Tividale, on the body of a fully-developed child, which was found wrapped in a brown paper parcel on a small embankment near the canal, on Monday afternoon, by a boatman, when passing in his boat under the canal bridge, near the Globe Iron Works, Tividale. It was shown that James Jones, the boatman referred to, found the parcel containing the body under the Seven Stars Bridge, to which it was impossible to get without a boat. The parcel could easily have been dropped there by a person on the highway.

Police-constable Winfield deposed that the parcel was about two feet from the water’s edge. He had made all enquiries about the affair, but had been unable to learn anything further. Part of the left foot of the child was missing, and in his opinion was there was no doubt it had been eaten away by rats. Some of the paper in which the body was wrapped was nibbled away.

The jury adjourned the inquest for the purpose of a post mortem examination being held.”

County Express 5/10/1889

“Mr. Edwin Hooper (South Staffordshire coroner) resumed his enquiry on Wednesday at the BOAT INN, Dudley Road, Tividale, on the body of a female child found on the 18th ult. Some boatmen, when engaged at work in a canal basin at Tividale, saw a parcel on a canal path, and under a bridge. Upon opening it they found that it contained the dead body of a female child. There were indications that the body had been attacked by rats, one of the feet being entirely eaten away.

Dr. Edwin Price attributed death to exposure and exhaustion.

Police-constable Winfield said every enquiry had been made with a view to ascertaining the name of the mother, but up to the present they had no clue.

The Jury returned an Open Verdict.”

"On Saturday, Mr. H. A. Pearson (South Staffordshire coroner) held an inquest at the BOAT INN, Dudley Road, Tividale, Rowley Regis, concerning the death of Fanny Gough (20), the wife of Thomas Gough, labourer, Brades Road, Rounds Green, who had been found drowned in the Birmingham Canal at Tividale. The husband stated that the deceased had recently complained of pains in the head, and on Monday morning she had a fainting fit. For the first eight months of the twelve months they had been married they lived happily together. During the last four months they had lived unhappily owing to the deceased getting into debt and pawning goods. He had on two occasions thrashed her for pawning the goods in a wholesale fashion. She ought not to have pledged the goods, as he had allowed her 23s a week for housekeeping. On Monday morning witness reproved deceased for not having paid for some meat, and she admitted that she had not paid for it, remarking that although she had had 23s she had not a penny. He then ascertained that all his linen had been pledged, and deceased said she was ashamed of herself for having pledged the goods. He did not strike her on that day. Deceased admitted that witness had been a good husband to her, and she had been a bad wife, as she had deceived him on many occasions. In the evening deceased left her home, and he afterwards went in search of her.

The Coroner: Had she threatened to commit suicide? – Witness: No; she has never threatened to destroy herself.

The Coroner: When did you hear of her again? – Witness: On Thursday morning, when she was found in the canal.

By the Jury: They were on most affectionate terms on the Sunday. Since his wife had been missing he had been unable to work.

Dr. Price said he had made a post mortem examination of the body, which was well nourished. There were no marks of violence. The condition of the whole of the internal organs showed that death was due to suffocation from drowning. The body had been in the water for several days.

Selina Clark, a neighbour, said she had frequently heard the deceased and her husband quarrel. On Sunday they quarrelled several times. Deceased was jealous of her husband. On Monday, witness asked deceased to repay her for money she had expended in purchasing beef and vegetables, but she was unable to do so, and Mr. Gough gave her 2s 6d towards 3s 6d. Deceased was a sober woman, but she lived beyond her income. Six weeks ago she heard her say rather than go to her father again and ask for lodgings she would sooner drown herself.

Police-constable Goodman, of the Worcestershire Constabulary, stationed at Rounds Green, said on several occasions he had heard the deceased and her husband quarrel, and on two occasions he had assaulted her.

James Guy, a toll clerk in the employ of the Birmingham Canal Company, said at half-past nine o'clock on Thursday morning he saw the body of the deceased, and Police-constable Robinson removed it to the BOAT INN.

Lucy Cowley stated that the deceased had complained to her of her husband ill-using her, and she had intimated to her that unless her husband behaved better to her she would make away with herself.

Police-constable Robinson said he had made inquiries, and the general opinion of the neighbours was that the deceased had committed suicide owing to her husband frequently ill-using her.

George Shepherd, the father of the deceased, said she had badly ill-used by her husband.

The Coroner said it was a very bad case, as there had been discord and unhappiness.

The jury returned a verdict of Suicide whilst Temporarily Insane, and added that they considered that the deceased had taken her life owing to the ill-treatment of her husband.

The Coroner conveyed the censure of the jury to Mr. Gough, and said his treatment of the deceased had been very bad."

"John Wild, landlord of the BOAT INN, Dudley Road, Tividale, was charged with permitting drunkenness upon his licensed premises on the 23rd August. Mr. J. W. Clulow appeared to prosecute, and Mr. Thompson defended.

Mr. Clulow explained that on the date named Police-constable Heatherley was in the vicinity of defendant's house when he saw a man named Job Whitehouse leave the premises in a very drunken condition, and staggering. Later on the officer called at the house in company with Police-constable Edwards and saw the man Whitehouse sitting in the bar with some drink in front of him.

Evidence in support of this statement was given by Police-constables Heatherley and Edwards, who, however, disagreed as to the date of the offence.

For the defence Mr. Thompson drew attention to discrepancies in the police evidence, and the Bench said there was some doubt in the case, and dismissed it."

County Express 12/10/1901

"Joseph Sheldon, of Tividale, appeared on three charges – of refusing to quit the licensed premises of the BOAT INN, Tividale; of using violent and threatening language against Mrs. Wylde, the landlord's wife; and doing malicious injury and damage, to the amount of £1, in the bar of the inn, on the same date. Mr. Warmington prosecuted, and Mr. Billingham defended.

The case put by Mr. Warmington was that defendant came to the BOAT INN at 2.30pm, on the 2nd inst, and was supplied with certain drink. A quarrel arose concerning a police court case tried that day, and defendant became excited. He asked Mrs. Wylde for another glass of ale, but this she refused, seeing his violent state, and he then picked up some glasses and threw them through the window, broke a water bottle in the servant's hands, and threw its body through the window. He then ran out after Mrs. Wylde, who had gone for the police, uttering threats against her. Three panes were broken, and the bench was damaged, besides several glasses being smashed.

Susan Jones, of Red Lion Row, Tividale, and William Cooper, of Sandwell Road, West Bromwich, gave evidence for the prosecution, and defendant made statements on his own behalf.

The Bench fined him 10s and costs for refusing to quit the premises, and ordered him to pay the amount of the damage named (£1), and costs in the third case. In the charge of using threats there would be no conviction."

County Advertiser 4/1/1902

"Benjamin Baker, boatman, Lower Chapel Street, Tividale, was charged with assaulting George Henry All-mark, on the 26th December.

Complainant stated that he was at the BOAT INN, Tividale, and was called outside by a complaint from his son. Defendant, without giving him a chance to speak, at once struck him several times on the shoulders and body, and knocked him down.

Several witnesses were called for the prosecution and the defence, and the general trend of their evidence was to the effect that there was a fight between the two men.

A further charge was preferred against the defendant of assaulting Thomas Allmark, son of the previous complainant. Allmark stated that without any provocation defendant came to him and struck him twice outside the BOAT INN. Before he could ask what it was for, defendant struck him again, and he had to go and call his father. When his father came out, defendant immediately 'slogged off' at him, and knocked him down.

The Bench considered the charges proved, and fined defendant 5s and costs in each case."

County Express 1/2/1902

"William Cox, of Dudley Road, Tividale, and Henry Reed, of Tipton Road, Tividale, labourers, paid a visit to the BOAT INN, Tividale, on January 17th, but as they were obviously drunk, the landlady, Mrs. Jackson, very properly ordered them out. They refused to go, and Mrs. Jackson sent for the police. Before the officers arrived, however, the men altered their minds and went.

Mr. Thompson, who appeared to prosecute, pointed out that this house was in a rough neighbourhood. Unless people were taught that they could not go into a house drunk and refuse to leave when requested, the licensee's difficulties would be increased.

The men pleaded guilty, and were fined 10s and costs."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 24/3/1904

"A fine of £10 and costs was imposed on Enoch Roderick, landlord of the BOAT INN, Tividale, at the Old Hill Police Court, on a charge of permitting gaming. Although there was no club connected with the house, Roderick allowed air-gun shooting to take place, and the practice was for persons to purchase the pellets from him, and shoot for ale. On two similar charged Roderick was ordered to pay costs."

County Advertiser 30/4/1904

"An application was made for the temporary transfer of the license of the BOAT INN, Tividale, from Enoch Roderick to Robert Hipkins.

In reply to Inspector Hodgkinson, applicant said he was aware that there was a conviction against the house. Mr. Bassano, in granting the application, said there was a cloud hanging over the house, and he warned the applicant to be very careful how he conducted the business. The house did not stand well in the eyes of the police and magistrates, whilst he understood that the privilege with regard to music and singing upon the licensed premises had been abused."

Robert Hipkins = Robert Hipkiss

Birmingham Mail 4/5/1904

"Today, at Old Hill Police Court, Charles Henry Lillington (24), cycle worker, of King Edward Road, Birmingham, was charged with stealing £1 15s from a till at the BOAT INN, Tividale, belonging to the landlord, Robert Hipkins, on the 2nd inst. It was alleged that prisoner and two other young men called at the public house and were supplied with drink. The landlady left the bar for a few minutes, and upon her return she discovered that the till containing the money had been stolen, and the three men were missing. A servant girl, named Sarah Ann Sutton, gave chase, and prisoner was captured by four men, and brought back to the public house. He was then handed over to the custody of Police-constable Heatherley, and in reply to the charge said the money was all right. The other two men succeeded in getting away. Prisoner was fined £5, including costs, or a month's imprisonment."

County Advertiser 11/2/1905

“The annual licensing sessions for the Rowley Regis Petty Sessional Division were held on Wednesday..... Superintendent Johnson presented his annual report.....

During the twelve months ended January last, three licensed victuallers and two beerhouse keepers had been proceeded against and convicted for offences against the Licensing Acts. One beerhouse keeper had also been convicted for using obscene language in his own house. The whole of the licenses (except the one for using bad language) have since been transferred. Since the transfer each house has been conducted satisfactorily.....

The following is a list of the licenses objected to by Superintendent Johnson.....

Robert Hipkiss, BOAT INN, Tividale, fined £10, and costs on the 23rd March, 1904, for permitting gaming.....

The justices then proceeded to hear the objections to the renewal of the licenses on the ‘black list’. These were all granted, the chairman administering a caution to each applicant.”

[The offence relates to the previous licensee.]

Birmingham Daily Gazette 21/2/1908

“Great consternation was caused in the Oldbury district yesterday afternoon, by the news that a tram-car on the Birmingham and Midlands Tramways line had been overturned in Dudley Road, Tividale, not far from the Oldbury boundary. Seven men were injured, three of them seriously, and one man, the conductor, was killed.....

The accident occurred between the BOAT INN, Tividale, and the BLUE BALL INN, a few hundred yards from the latter place. It was entering a loop on the rise of a canal bridge at the time, just opposite Gipsy Lane The tram was travelling from Dudley to Oldbury. Everything had gone smoothly until soon after leaving the BOAT INN at Tividale.....”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 11/5/1908

“Joseph Thomas Austin (12), the son of William Austin, an erector, of Cyprus Street, Oldbury, died in the Guest Hospital, Dudley, on Saturday, from injuries sustained at Tividale. The boy went with the carter in charge of a dray belonging to Messrs. Davenport Ltd, beer retailers, and just before reaching the BOAT INN, Tividale, he attempted to get on the step of the vehicle. In doing so he slipped, and at the same time the horse started, and Austin fell to the ground, and the front near wheel of the dray passed over him.”

The Bench granted the application.”

Dudley Chronicle 21/10/1926

“Thomas Vincent Reeves (30), a native of Birmingham, of no fixed abode, was at Old Hill Police Court on October 13 committed to the Quarter Sessions on a charge of house-breaking.....

John William Tolley, licensee of the BOAT INN, Tividale, said between 1 and 1.15 on September 20th prisoner came into his bar for some refreshment, and as he left he noticed that he had a pair of shears (produced). Harry Taft, the STEAM PACKET INN, West Bromwich, said he remembered the prisoner coming to his house on September 20th. He said he had been cutting trees and he had a pair of shears with him. Witness said he could do with a pair like those to cut the grass on the green. He said, ‘You can have them if you like for four shillings.’ Witness bought them. There were 16 or 20 people in the house at the time, and prisoner put several things up for ‘auction.’ Witness bought seven articles for 2s 6d and two half-pints of beer. He knew the prisoner because he had been in the house several times before. He did not ask prisoner where he got the things from.....

PC Hill said on September 18th he received a complaint, and as a result made enquiries. On September 22nd he received some garden shears. An impression in the woodwork of the window at the house which had been broken into was identical with the shape of the end of the shears, which were also bent. On the following day he went to the STEAM PACKET INN and took charge of some of the stolen articles which had been sold.

PC Sharratt, Blackheath, said on October 4th, at 9.45, he saw the prisoner at Smethwick Police Station, where he was in custody. He charged him, and prisoner replied, ‘I was stuck. I used a pair of shears and lifted the back kitchen window. I did not have all the things you have mentioned.’ He said he sold the ink-stand, alabaster clock, silver vases, imitation silver vase, a clock and quilts.

Prisoner, who said he would not call any evidence or make a statement, was committed to the next Quarter Sessions at Stafford.”

[Thomas Vincent Reeves, who had served several terms of imprisonment, chiefly for theft and house-breaking, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to three years’ penal servitude.]

“A Tividale licensee is running a week of money-spinning activities aimed at raising £1,000 for the hospital which saved his life. The activities, to raise cash for equipment for the intensive care unit at Sandwell District General Hospital, will be held at the BOAT INN, Dudley Road East, Tividale, to coincide with manager Mr. Ray Smith's return to work on Monday.

Mr. Smith, aged 42, had spent much of this year seriously ill in hospital after developing complications following his admission with appendicitis. His wife, Mrs. Rita Smith, said the fund-raising week was by means of a ‘thank you’ to the hospital for the care he was given. She said, ‘When Ray was in hospital they were always having to borrow equipment. It was always very distressing to see those who were ill so we thought we would like to do something to help. We want to get as much money for the hospital as possible. We are hoping to raise £1,000.’

The fund-raising events will be launched with a skittles evening on Monday. This will be followed on consecutive days by a 60s night, a ‘free and easy,’ a disco, a talent show, a fun run with collections at local pubs, and a car boot sale.”

“Oldbury Police Court.....

William Bill, of the GEORGE INN, Brades Village, was charged with being drunk and disorderly on premises belonging to William Hadley, the BRADES TAVERN on the 10th inst, and also with using obscene language in Albion Street on 2nd inst. He was further charged with threatening his wife, on the 31st ult. Mary Ann Bill, wife of the defendant, stated that her husband repeatedly threatened to ‘do for her.’

PC Smith deposed to seeing the defendant drunk in Albion Street, and also on the premises of the BRADES TAVERN, on the days respectively named.

PS Stanton stated that the man had been previously convicted three times within twelve months.

The Magistrates inflicted a fine of 20s and costs, or 14 days, for the charge of being drunk and disorderly; 2s 6d and costs for using obscene language; and ordered the defendant to find two sureties each in £10, or one in £20, to keep the peace towards his wife for the term of six months.”

Mr. John Nicholls and Mr. William Snape for £20. Victory of Snape.

What promised to be an interesting shooting match was set down for decision at these grounds on Monday afternoon last, the contending parties being Mr. John Nicholls, late of Walsall and Willenhall, now of BRADES TAVERN, Brades Park, Oldbury, near Birmingham, and Mr. W. Snape, of Harden, Bloxwich, Walsall, who were matched to shoot at 11 birds each, from five traps, five yards apart, 30 yards rise, 60 yards fall, 1¾oz shot, trap and find birds against each other, for £20. Each have won numerous matches and sweepstakes. Last Wednesday young Nicholls won the International £200 Sweepstakes outright, killing eighteen birds in succession off the 26 yards mark at Welsh Harp, Hendon – a wonderful performance for a novice. Snape also has a big reputation in the Black Country, and despite Nicholls’ recent great performance, had plenty of followers. Nicholls, however, was installed a hot favourite at 7 to 4. The snowstorm of the early morning had disappeared, and the sun shone with great brilliance, but a strong, cold wind prevailed, and greatly helped the birds. Nicholls won the toss, and elected to shoot at the first six birds. His first bird was an easy one, but Nicholls failed to stop it, his second bird was badly hit, but it got away, and his friends looked glum. His next two birds fell easy victims, though his sixth bird got away. Snape commenced in magnificent form, and bird after bird fell before his unerring aim, and his first six birds were all grassed. With the consent of Nicholls, Snape went on, and, killing the next two birds outshot Nicholls, and won the match.”

BRICKLAYERS ARMS [1860], [1872], [1880], [1896]

‘Lost Landscape. Portway Road, Oldbury. A Black Country Street.’ by Alan Dodson

“There were three pubs in my day in the Eel Street, Churchbridge and Portway Road ‘square’ although there had been as many as eight over the years. The BUILDERS ARMS stood at the corner of Little Eel Street and Portway Road. It was a large pub and even as a boy I remember it well, a solid cube of a building wrapping round the corner, with double bay windows, an imposing entrance facing Portway Road and large upstairs windows overlooking both streets. Adding to the impression, the road which formed a shallow depression from the bridge began to rise into the lane quite sharply at the Little Eel Street corner. One can imagine the BUILDERS ARMS was built to be more than just a watering hole for canal labourers and had the air of the establishments which later became known as 'commercial hotels.' The large function room on the first floor was much in favour for twenty-first birthday celebrations and the like. The BRICKMAKERS ARMS was at the corner of the other end of Eel Street and Churchbridge, smaller but in many ways similar. They were simply known as 'The Top' and 'The Bottom' although my father always referred to 'The Top' as 'Beasley's' after the family whose members were licensees from 1913 until 1945.

The TRAVELLERS REST, known to all as 'Sherwood's' or 'Sammy Sherwood's' after the licensee from 1893 until 1945, which might be some sort of record, was a small pub in Churchbridge next door to 'The Bottom,' with rooms not much bigger than those of the neighbouring houses but distinguished by its own double bay windows and arched doorway."

Worcestershire Chronicle 17/10/1849

"At the Halesowen Petty Sessions, last week, there were heard no fewer than ten informations against brickmakers of that locality for wholesale evasion of the excise duties. Dr. Bateman, the excise solicitor, appeared in support of the informations, and Mr. Thomas Harding, of Birmingham, was specially engaged to defend each case.....

Mr. Zachariah Guest, of Oldfield [sic], was fined £55, and condemnation of 30,904 bricks.....

It appeared that the whole of the parties had been detected through the vigilance of Mr. Coomber, Supervisor of Excise, Wednesbury. Mr. Harding urged in each of the cases different mitigatory circumstances, and the penalties, which were more than £3,000, were ultimately reduced to about £300. We are informed that the large brickmakers of Birmingham and other towns have for some time past found it impossible to compete with those of this neighbourhood, and the above proceedings may possibly afford an explanation of the principal cause of this fact, as it has really for some time past been suspected to be."

“The annual meeting for the granting and renewal of licenses for the Oldbury and Hales Owen district was held yesterday.....
Mr. Shakespeare applied for a license on behalf of Mrs. Mary Ann Barton, Whimsey Bridge, Church Bridge, Oldbury. The house is 120 yards from a licensed house. The applicant had conducted a beerhouse for twenty-three years in a most orderly manner. The house was precisely opposite a licensed house which had been pulled down, and of which the applicant had bought the license.
The application was opposed by Mr. Whitehouse, of Eardisley, Herefordshire, the owner of the TIGER, a licensed house in the neighbourhood.....
After consideration, the Magistrates decided to grant the applications of Barton.”

"Herbert Downing, owner of the BRICKMAKERS ARMS, was charged with permitting drunkenness in his house on the 18th ult. Mr. Shakespeare defended.

From the evidence of Police-sergeant Simmonds, it seemed that on his visiting the defendant's house at six o'clock on the day mentioned he found there two men very drunk, and when the attention of the landlady was called to the fact she did not endeavour to turn them out.

For the defence, the magistrates were asked to deal leniently with the defendant, as he had hitherto kept his house in a very orderly manner, and the men had got into the place after he had ejected them.

A fine of £5 and costs was inflicted."

"The adjourned annual licensing sessions for the Oldbury division were held on Monday, at the Police Court.....

The cases of James [sic] Downing, BRICKMAKERS ARMS, and Edward Fisher Markwick, SEVEN STARS, on the Black List, which had been adjourned from the General Licensing Sessions, were then considered.....

Mr. Shakespeare appeared for Downing, and said that there had only been one conviction against his client, and his license had not been endorsed. The offence took place on Easter Tuesday, and was caused by some men who had been drinking at a neighbouring house going there and creating a disturbance. Under the circumstances he hoped the Bench would renew the license. The license was renewed.

“Mr. R. Docker, coroner, held an inquest on Saturday, at the BRICKMAKERS ARMS, Churchbridge, respecting the death of Benjamin Bird (22), miner, formerly residing at Churchbridge, whose body was found in the Park Hall Marlhole on Thursday last, under circumstances already reported.

Joseph Parkes, engine-driver at the Speedwell Colliery, Langley, stated that on Sunday night, the 21st inst, about eleven o’clock, deceased spoke to him as he was passing the engine-house, and he was then proceeding in the direction of the marlhole, where the body was found. Witness thought deceased was the worse for beer.

A verdict of Found Drowned was returned by the jury.”

“An inquest was held yesterday, before Mr. R. Docker, at the BRICKMAKERS AMS, Churchbridge, relative to the death of Robert Whitehouse (5), who was drowned in the Birmingham Canal, near his parents’ residence, on the 6th of July. A verdict of Accidentally Drowned was returned.”

Birmingham Daily Post 27/7/1889

“An adjourned inquest was held yesterday, at the BRICKMAKERS ARMS, Oldbury, by Mr. E. Docker, coroner, on the bodies of Joseph Harvey (21), blacksmith, of Titford Road, Langley, and Elizabeth Bates (20), of Eel Street, Oldbury, who committed suicide together on Monday last.

Hannah Bates identified the body of her sister, and said Harvey and her sister went to Stourbridge on Sunday, and returned at night. When witness went to bed she left them both downstairs, Harvey being asleep in a chair. Next morning her sister was missing, and her father found a note in the chest of drawers, and at once commenced to search for her. A sheet torn from a copybook was produced, the writing being on both sides of the paper. Witness, on examining the notes, said the one bearing the name of Joseph Harvey, and addressed to his father, was in the handwriting of her sister, and the one from Lizzie Bates to her father was written by Joseph Harvey.

The Coroner, who remarked that if it was so it was a curious exchange of ideas upon the part of the deceased persons, then read the letters, which were as follow.

Joseph Harvey: ‘July 21st, 1889. Dear father, I leave you for ever on earth, so now you will see what it has done by trying to keep me from Lizzie, the only one I could love, and I hope you will learn a lesson from this, and when you find my body you will find a glass pipe in my jacket pocket. Please give it to William James, my fellow workman; and I wish to be buried me and Lizzie together, and I wish for my brother James to have all that belongs to me. You will find some money in the box upstairs – give it to Jim; and that pair of braces that Lizzie made me, give them to Joseph Stanfield. So I give my best love, father and brothers, and all enquiring friends.’

Elizabeth Bates: ‘Dear father, You must not grieve over me, for I have done this with Joe, because he could not have me in life, so I thought he should have me in death. He said that he should never see me again alive when he left me, so I thought I would go with him; and, father, when you find us, please to bury us as close together as you can. Give my love to all my friends, and tell what has caused it, through having a miserable life at home, and for the one I love. So good night, and God bless you all. Be kind to the children.’

The witness further stated that her sister had always appeared contented at home, and had made no complaints. Harvey had been in the habit of staying at their house at night for some time past.

Evidence was next given to finding two hats on the canal bank at Titford, and to the canal being dragged, with the result that the bodies of Harvey and Bates were found tied together, the string being wrapped round the bodies no less than thirty times. Both Harvey’s hands were fastened with the string, and one of the girl’s hands, but her right hand was at liberty.

Dr. Lyddon said he had examined the bodies, and death was due to drowning. The young woman was not pregnant.

At the request of the jury Mr. Harvey was called, and asked if the letter purporting to be signed by his son was in his writing.

Witness said if it was written by his son it was better writing than he ever saw him write before, but he should not like to swear whether it was or was not his son’s writing. He denied having interfered in any way to prevent his son marrying the girl, and said he had only advised him to look out for someone who would do him good. The father of Bates was also called, and said he had never done anything to prevent the couple marrying each other. He recognised the letter addressed to him as being in the handwriting of his daughter. The Coroner remarked that according to the statement of the sister of the deceased girl it would appear that Bates had written the letter to Harvey’s father, and that Harvey had written the one to the father of Bates. But he considered the evidence of Mr. Bates as the most correct. In summing up, the Coroner said the evidence had disclosed, unhappily, a highly romantic and sensational case of suicide, but so far as the evidence had been disclosed to the jury it had not revealed any circumstances why those two young people should have taken upon themselves to put an end to their own lives.

After a brief consultation, the Foreman informed the coroner that the jury found that it was premeditated, and that the deceased persons were in sane minds, and in nowise insane, and that it was their own voluntary act, and that they were Found Drowned.

The Coroner said he could not understand the verdict.

The Foreman said they were in no doubt in a depressed state of mind, and it appeared to him they were under the power of temptation.

The Coroner: But, as I understand it, you return a verdict of Found Drowned. Do you mean that you do not determine the condition of their minds?

Several Jurors: Decidedly not.

The Coroner said he thought the jury had better consider their verdict in private, and the room was cleared.

After a brief interval, the jury returned a verdict to the effect that the couple were in a sound state of mind when they wrote the letters, and that the suicide was premeditated, but that they were temporarily insane when they put themselves into the water.

This verdict was accepted.

The remains of the girl were interred yesterday afternoon at Oldbury Cemetery.”

“Long Pull Fine. Oldbury Landlady’s Generous Measure.

A sequel to the remarks made by the chairman at Oldbury Licensing Sessions with regard to the ‘long pull,’ was heard at the local police court yesterday, when Sarah Horton, licensee of the BRICKMAKERS ARMS, Oldbury, was summoned for selling liquor not of imperial standard.

Mr. J. S. Sharpe, who prosecuted on behalf of the chief constable, said there were two charges. On 19 March, a girl, instructed by a police officer, went into the public house and asked for half-a-pint of beer. Mr. Horton, husband of the licensee, served her and drew the beer straight into the bottle which she presented. Upon examination the beer was found to be 40 per cent over the half-pint. In the second case she received 50 per cent over the half-pint.

Mr. Waldron, for the defence, called Mrs. Horton who said she always used a measure. She did not remember either of the girls coming, and believed their evidence false.

The magistrates fined defendant 40s and costs for the offence on the 20th, and she was ordered to pay 10s costs in the second.”

Bells Life in London and Sporting Chronicle 24/3/1850

“Joseph Wall of Tividale will run Man Henley of Oldbury two or three miles, of William Wood of Toll End the same distance, for £5 a side. The money will be ready at the BRICKMAKERS ARMS, Tividale, on Monday night.”

The Era 28/7/1850

“Joseph Wall, the Tividale novice, will run John Wardell, of West Bromwich, if the latter will give 100 yards start in 6 and 200 yards in 10 miles, for £10 or £20. Cash at Mr. Gilbert's, BRICKMAKERS ARMS, Tividale, Tipton.”

The Era 25/8/1850

“Samuel Cartwright, of Dudley, and Joseph Davis, of Tividale, ran six score yards, for £10 a side, near Tipton, on Monday last. From a scratch start at three o'clock, they ran level to nearly 100 yards, when Cartwright drew upon his man, and ran home a good winner by a couple of yards. The stakes were given up on the same evening at Mr. Joseph Gilbert's, BRICKMAKERS ARMS, Tividale.”

The Era 26/1/1851

“The £20 Dudley Match. Joseph Wyatt, of Cradley, and Joseph Wall, of Tividale, ran their ten mile race at Cradley, near Dudley, on Monday last, Wall giving Wyatt two minutes and a half start. The latter got full 700 yards in the time allowed him, ere Wall began to foot it. The Tividale man gained a little ground, and continued doing so up to the ninth mile, when seeing his chance out, he wisely gave up, as at that time he was full as far behind as at the commencement of the race. Wyatt did not slacken his pace, and completed the distance in sixty-seven minutes. The betting was at evens. The money was given up at Mr. J. Gilbert's, BRICKMAKERS ARMS, Tividale, the same evening.”

“On Thursday an inquest was held before Mr. Hooper at the BRICKMAKERS ARMS INN, Tividale upon the body of Thomas Derricotte, aged 23, who was killed at the Hall Bridge (Butterfly) Colliery on Monday afternoon. Messrs. Downing and Priest, the proprietors of the pit were present.

An absent juryman named Joseph Millsom, colliery manager, Dudley Road, was fined forty shillings. After the body had been viewed, Milsom appeared and hoped the Coroner would excuse his absence, as he had been down his pit, and he could not get out in time. Mr. Hooper said that he should not have gone down having been summoned. The fine had been imposed, and he could not alter it. It would now take its course. Mrs. Derricotte, widow of the deceased, said her late husband gave the owners of the colliery the best of characters. She did not believe there had been any neglect or cause for complaint.

John Homer said the accident took place on the surface. Deceased, in getting out the 'liners,' had to put a pin through one of the 'curbes,' and whilst he was doing so the glands gave away, and the rope slipped, caught him and pulled him into the nitch ring. His head was smashed in and his left arm broken. He died without a groan.

The Coroner, in summing up, said there did not appear to be any neglect, and he had that morning received a letter from the Government Inspector stating that the case was one of pure accident, and he, therefore, did not think it necessary to attend the inquest.

The jury at once returned a verdict of Accidental Death."

"Mr. E. Hooper, coroner, held an inquest on Tuesday at the RED LION INN, Tividale, upon the body of Edward Nunnerley (31), boatman, formerly residing at Broad Lane, Bilston, who was found in the canal near the Tividale Tunnel on Saturday morning last. It appears deceased left Bilston on Friday morning for the purpose of going to Tividale for a boatload of coal for Messrs. Hickman, his employers. When he came out of the tunnel he found it impossible to proceed owing to the fog. He tied the boat to the side of the canal, and leaving a boy in charge of it went to stable the horse. He was last seen alive about eleven o'clock on Friday night, when he left the BRICKLAYERS [sic] ARMS, Tividale.

Worcestershire Chronicle 19/4/1884

"Mr. Edwin Hooper (South Staffordshire Coroner) held an inquest yesterday at the BRICKMAKERS ARMS INN, Tividale, respecting the death of Mary Ellen Law, aged four years. On the 10th inst several children assembled in the New Road and formed a procession, headed by a captain, to imitate the Salvation Army. The deceased officiated as the 'captain' and walked backwards, and fell into a bucket containing boiling water – which had been placed in the middle of the road by a woman named Jane Wilkes – and sustained such severe scalds as to cause her death. The Coroner severely censured Mrs. Wilkes for leaving the water in the road. The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death."

Dudley and District News 7/6/1884

"Yesterday Mr. E. Hooper held an inquest at the BRICKMAKERS ARMS, New Road, Tividale, respecting the death of John Bagley (23), boatman, Greets Green, West Bromwich.

The mother of the deceased identified the body, and stated that he left home on Sunday, and she heard nothing more of him until he was drowned.

Joseph Rhodes, miner, New Road, Tividale, stated that he first saw the deceased standing in the road opposite the Grove Land Marlhole on Monday evening, about 6.30, and he was the worse for beer. In the course of a conversation he said he should like to swim in the marlhole, and asked witness to try and do so, but he refused; and he and deceased's sweetheart endeavored to persuade deceased not to attempt to swim it. Witness walked into the house, and deceased came to the door and said, 'Come on; I am going to do it.' When witness got to the door deceased was just in the act of jumping into the water with his clothes on. At first he struck out as though he was swimming, but when he got about seven yards he went down and did not come up again. Two young men jumped in after him, but could not find him. The police came, and the body was got out in about 10 minutes, and a doctor, who was passing, was called and examined the body, but found that he was quite dead.

The Coroner: Had you heard him quarrelling with his young woman? – Witness: No, sir.

The Coroner: What was there to make you think that he had had beer? – Witness: Well, sir, he looked beerish.

The Coroner: Was he able to stand? – Witness: He could not stand well.

The Coroner: Did you think he had made any bet about swimming across the hole? – Witness: I do not think he had.

A juror said the marlhole was a very unfit place to be left unprotected.

The Coroner: Well, it is not the first death that has occurred there; there have been a good many.

Several jurors expressed a wish that something should be done to protect the public, as it was very dangerous.

The Coroner said he would see the marlhole, and communicate with the owner.

The Coroner said the man seemed to have been foolish enough to have jumped into the water entirely on his own account.

A verdict of Accidental Death was returned by the jury.”

West Bromwich Weekly News 29/2/1887

“Mr. Edwin Hooper (South Staffordshire Coroner) held an inquest on Wednesday, at the BRICKMAKERS ARMS INN, on the body of a man unknown, found in the Birmingham Canal, and apparently sixty years of age. There was in his pockets nothing to lead to identification. The jury returned an Open Verdict.”

“Mr. A. W. Barradale applied to the magistrates on behalf of Messrs. Plant, brewers, for their sanction to the restoration of the BRICKLAYERS [sic] ARMS INN, Tividale. The sanitary authorities had condemned the building, and had served the necessary notices for the building to be closed. His clients were willing to take the building down, and, subject to the approval of the magistrates, to erect another on the site, but there was no intention to increase the licensing area.

The Chairman said the question raised was one of considerable difficulty. The magistrates had not power to sanction the application, and in the near future it was proposed that the Tipton justices should have jurisdiction over public houses in the Tividale district.

Mr. Barradale: To use the colloquial form of expression, my clients are 'between the devil and the deep blue sea.' The sanitary authorities call upon us to remove the building, and the magistrates have not the power to authorise us to build another house in its stead.

Mr. Bassano: We cannot bind the licensing justices; but from what we can see from the plans we do not see that there can be any objection raised. Your clients must, however, take the risk of erecting the building.

Mr. Barradale thanked the magistrates for having reduced the difficulty somewhat."

Police-constables Heatherley and Walton stated that they saw defendant drunk at the BRICKMAKERS ARMS INN, Tipton Road, Tividale. He was staggering about the room. Defendant denied that he was drunk, but the Bench considered the case proved, and fined him 10s, including costs."

AND

"William Marklow, landlord of the BRICKMAKERS ARMS INN, Tividale, was charged with permitting drunkenness upon his premises on the 20th of August.

Mr. J. W. Clulow prosecuted, and explained that on the night in question Police-constables Heatherley and Walton visited the defendant's house, where they found in the tap room a man named Henry Deakin. He was very drunk and staggering about the room. The officers drew the landlady's attention to the man's condition, but she stated that her husband was in charge of the house. Defendant was spoken to by Heatherley, and he replied that the man had been in the house for two hours, and that he had requested him to leave three quarters of an hour previously. He also stated that the man had not been served during the latter period. If Deakin had refused to leave the premises, it was an easy matter for defendant to have called in the police, as the station was only a little distance away.

Police-constables Heatherley and Walton gave evidence in support of the charge.

Defendant denied that the man was drunk. He called a man named Albert Salt to confirm his statement.

The Bench, however, considered the case proved, and imposed a fine of £5, including costs."

County Advertiser 11/2/1905

"The annual licensing sessions for the Rowley Regis Petty Sessional Division were held on Wednesday..... Superintendent Johnson presented his annual report.....

During the twelve months ended January last, three licensed victuallers and two beerhouse keepers had been proceeded against and convicted for offences against the Licensing Acts. One beerhouse keeper had also been convicted for using obscene language in his own house. The whole of the licenses (except the one for using bad language) have since been transferred. Since the transfer each house has been conducted satisfactorily.....

The following is a list of the licenses objected to by Superintendent Johnson.....

Luke Fletcher, BRICKMAKERS ARMS, Tividale, fined £5, and costs on the 16th March, 1904, for permitting drunkenness.....

The justices then proceeded to hear the objections to the renewal of the licenses on the 'black list'. These were all granted, the chairman administering a caution to each applicant."

[The offence relates to the previous licensee.]

Birmingham Mail 23/8/1905

"At Old Hill Police Court today, Luke Fletcher, landlord of the BRICKMAKERS ARMS INN, Tipton Road, Tividale, was charged with permitting drunkenness upon his licensed premises, and also with supplying drunken persons.

Mr. J. W. Clulow, who prosecuted, explained that on the night of the 15th inst Police-constables Heatherley and Walton visited defendant's house, and in the tap-room discovered a man named Alfred Smith in a drunken condition. Smith was standing close to the counter, and was in the act of drinking out of a cup. Upon looking round Heatherley discovered that Walter Smith, a brother, was also in a drunken state.

Mr. W. Waldron, who defended, urged that the neighbourhood in which the house was situated was a rough one, and that it was a difficult matter to manage it.

Defendant was fined £5, including costs."

Smethwick Telephone 23/9/1905

"John Price, agent, of White Road, was charged on a summons with having obtained by false pretences the sum of 20s from John Winter Collins, with intent to defraud him. Mr. H. Jefferies appeared for the prosecutor, and Mr. Clarke had been instructed to defend.

Mr. Jefferies said that the amount involved was somewhat larger than that named in the present charge.

Defendant was said to have advertised for sale a public house, the BRICKMAKERS ARMS at Tividale.

Mr. Collins replied to the advertisement, and entered into an agreement with Price, who received a deposit.

However, they alleged that he had no authority from the owners of the house to dispose of the license.

On the application of Mr. Jefferies the case was adjourned for a week."

Smethwick Telephone 30/9/1905

"The Magistrates granted a warrant for the apprehension of John Price, agent, who failed to appear in answer to an adjourned summons charging him with obtaining money by false pretences. Mr. H. Jefferies appeared for the prosecution, Mr. James Clark defended."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 8/2/1906

"The annual licensing sessions for the Rowley Regis Sessional Division were held yesterday.....

The Superintendent objected to the renewal of the licenses of.....

BRICKMAKERS ARMS, Tividale."

County Advertiser 10/3/1906

"The adjourned annual licensing sessions for the Rowley Regis Sessional Division were held yesterday.....

Mr. Bassano said the bench had under consideration the nine houses, five of which were objected to on the ground of conviction and four others on the ground of redundancy. It had raised a very large question, and the magistrates had before them the consideration of the parish as a whole. He threw out the suggestion to the trade and owners that the matter should be considered from their point of view during the next twelve months.

The magistrates would be prepared to consider any counter proposition that might come from the brewers which could be laid before them next year. In order to simplify the proceedings that day the following licenses would be renewed.....

BRICKMAKERS ARMS, Tividale."

County Advertiser 14/4/1906

“Oliver Davies, ironworker, of Sheepwash Lane, Great Bridge, West Bromwich, was charged with being disorderly and refusing to quit the licensed premises of the BRICKMAKERS ARMS, Tividale, kept by John Winter Collins, on the 14th ult. Prosecutor alleged that on the date named defendant visited his house in a drunken state and demanded to be served. He was refused drink, however, and afterwards he became disorderly and declined to leave until a policeman was sent for. Defendant had 49 previous convictions against him and a fine of 20s and costs, or a month’s imprisonment was imposed.”

Joseph Goode was married to Louisa.

Joseph Goode was summoned for permitting drunkenness and selling to drunken persons on 6th February 1909.

County Express 12/2/1910

“On Wednesday the annual general licensing sessions for the Old Hill petty sessional division were held at the Police Court, Old Hill.....

Supt. Johnson had served notices of objection to the renewal of the licenses in cases where convictions were recorded.....

Mr. Thompson (Dudley) applied for the renewal of the license of the BRICKMAKERS ARMS, Tividale, to Joseph Goode. He explained that the owners, Messrs. Plant and Co., departed from their usual custom, and gave Goode another chance. Since the conviction he had conducted the house in a very good manner. The Bench decided to renew the license, but warned the applicant to be more careful in future.”

County Express 7/1/1911

Dudley Chronicle 24/9/1921

“The smart work of two constables, both of whom were complimented by the Bench, resulted in the appearance before the Old Hill Court on Wednesday, of John Hunt, of Upper Chappel Street, Tividale; Samuel Williams and Robert Everett, of Lower Chappel Street, Tividale, on a charge of breaking and entering the offices of the Vono Company, Duport Foundry, Tipton Road, Tividale, and stealing the sum of £51 8s 11d, on the night of the 14th inst.

PC Gregory said on Thursday last he received a complaint and he went to the Vono Company’s works. He found that a door leading into the works had been damaged near the lock. There were marks three quarters of an inch broad. The door leading into the office had been forced. He made enquiries about some Treasury note numbers. At 9.25pm he went to the BRICK MAKERS ARMS INN, Tipton Road, Tividale, and there saw Mrs. Fisher. She showed him a note and in consequence of what she said he arrested John Hunt. He charged him with the offence and he said, ‘I know nothing about it.’ Witness and PC Warrington searched him and they found in his pockets 12 one pound notes, comparing with the numbers he had secured. After the search defendant said, ‘The game is up. I admit it. I have burnt all the cheques.’ Later the same day (Friday) they arrested Everitt and in answer to the charge he said, ‘I know nothing about it.’ When searched they found a farthing and he said, ‘That is out of the safe. I have got £14, but you are not going to have it.

I am not going to do time and have nothing when I come out.' At 7.45pm they arrested Williams, and he said when charged, 'You have no proof.' At 9am the same date (Saturday) they conveyed prisoners to Old Hill. Whilst in the station Everitt said, 'I should like to speak to PC Gregory.' Prisoner said, 'I will tell you all about it. You will find £14 hidden in the mattress of my bed at home, and the boots I was wearing are under the kitchen table.' Williams said, 'You will find my share of the money, down the cellar on a ledge, at home.' He then charged them jointly and they each said, 'I am sorry.' At 1.15pm on Saturday they went to Hunt's home and found the chisels produced on the pantry shelf. They each bore paint marks, similar to that on the safe at the works. At 1.30 they went to the home of Williams, and found buried under some slack in the cellar 13 £1 notes. At 1.43 they went to the home of Everitt and found hidden in the mattress 14 £1 notes.

PC Warrington, Tipton, said he was present with PC Gregory at the interview and the recovery of the notes, and he corroborated in every detail all his evidence.

Mrs. Fisher, the wife of Isaac Fisher, of the BRICK MAKERS ARMS, Tividale, said Hunt went into their house. He had three pints of beer and some cigarettes. He tendered a £1 note (produced).

Mrs. S. Gregg, employed as cashier, gave evidence as to the notes and money left in the safe.

Hunt and Williams said, 'I am sorry. It is unemployment that has made me do it. I have been out of work for 18 months through no fault of my own.' Everitt said, 'I am sorry and hope it don't occur again. I have been out of work ten months and had nothing from the Labour for five weeks. I applied to the Guardians, and Mr. Taft, the member for Tividale, told me a single man had a better chance of getting work than a married man. He said I ought to be ashamed of myself for appealing.'

Defendants were committed for trial to the Quarter Sessions.

At the close of the case, the chairman (Mr. Dallow) addressing PCs Gregory and Warrington, said the Bench desired to express their appreciation of the excellent manner in which they had got up the case and given their evidence. It was no easy task for an officer to get into the box and give such detailed evidence without referring to notes and they were surprised at the way in which PC Gregory did it. No one could doubt that every word the officer had uttered was true and it was very commendable to put the case before the court in the way they had.

Both officers expressed the thanks for the compliments."

Staffordshire Advertiser 22/10/1921

"County Quarter Sessions.....

John Hunt, 28, tool grinder, Samuel Williams, 26, roller, and Robert Everett, 20, nail caster, pleaded guilty to having broken into the office of Ernest Vaughan at Tividale on September 14 and stolen £51.

Hunt said he had been out of employment for some time and could not get any work, but the Chairman said that was no excuse for office breaking.

Hunt was sentenced to two months, Everett to three months, and Williams, who said he had been out of work through failing eyesight, to one month's imprisonment.

Upon the application of Mr. Wylie, who prosecuted, the Court ordered the sum of £39 17s found upon the prisoners to be paid over to prosecutor."

“William Baker, NEW INN, Langley Green, was charged with having his public house open before half-past twelve on Sunday, the 16th inst.

Police-constable Jones proved having called at the house at ten minutes past twelve and found seven men in. Defendant pleaded that they were neighbours who had just called in, and that the chapels and church had left some time.

The officer remarked that service was not over at the church until some timer after.

Defendant was fined 5s and costs, and told that if were not very careful he would soon lose his license.”

“Mr. Ralph Docker, Coroner, held an inquest yesterday, at the NEW INN, Langley, concerning the death of a boy, nine years old, named Thomas Waterhouse, son of a collier living at Langley. On Friday deceased was sent upon an errand, and in returning he went upon a pool near to Messrs. Allbright and Wilson’s works, to slide, the water being frozen over. A man passing in a cart saw the boy immersed in the water about two yards from the side, and taking off the horse’s reins, threw them to him, but failed to reach him. Some minutes elapsed before a boat could be procured to get him out, and deceased sank under the ice. When recovered, he appeared to be quite dead, and various means resorted to in order to restore animation proved fruitless. The Jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

Since the last meeting two licensed victuallers – Robert Chance, SPREAD EAGLE, Rounds Green, and William Baker, NEW INN, Langley – had been summoned and convicted for offences against their licenses.....

The applications for renewals were then granted, with the exception of the two persons included in the ‘black list’ – Robert Chance, SPREAD EAGLE, and William Baker, NEW INN, Langley. These cases were, however, afterwards considered separately, and, after being reprimanded by the Bench, and promising not to offend again, their licenses were also renewed.”

“Pride of the Queen Lodge of the National United Order of Free Gardeners has lately gained a well-merited distinction in the neighbourhood of Langley by its continued prosperity. Presentations to its officials seem to be the order of the day. At its first club night this year the Past Master (Brother E. Field) was presented with a Past Master’s Certificate. On Saturday last another presentation was made, on that occasion to the present Treasurer (Brother J. Nickless), in the shape of a very richly framed Past Master’s Certificate.

Brother J. J. Taylor, in making the presentation, complimented the lodge on the great success it had experienced since the present treasurer had been appointed. He had acted in that capacity for six years, and during that time the lodge had increased from 20 to 108 financial members and from 2 to 17 honorary members; and this was, to a great extent, due to having a good treasurer.

Brother G. Satchwell, DDM, followed, and then Brother J. Fox, secretary.

Brother Fox dwelt on the prosperity the lodge had had since its existence. It was opened at the QUEENS HEAD INN, but a few months afterwards it was removed to its present quarters, NEW INN, Station Road, and they never had cause to regret moving their lodge to the NEW INN. Their landlord and treasurer had always treated them with great respect, and had done his best to make them comfortable. He only hoped their members would be increased more in the future than they had in the past.....”

West Bromwich Weekly News 30/7/1887

“Mr. E. Docker (deputy coroner) held an inquest at the NEW INN, Langley, on Monday evening, touching the death of Thomas Baker, aged 63, who was shot with a gun by George W. Manning, on Saturday evening last.

Thomas Baker, son of deceased, chemist, of Langley Green, was the first witness.

The Coroner: This poor man was your father? – Witness: Yes.

The Coroner: Was he in good health up to Saturday last? – Witness: Very good.

The Coroner: When did you last see him alive? – Witness: On Saturday week.

The Coroner: Did you see him after the injury? – Witness: Yes sir, about ten minutes past seven. When I left I think he was dead.

The Coroner: Then you know nothing as to the cause of death? – Witness: No, sir, only what others told me. Annie King, wife of Charles King, of Crosswells Road, was next sworn.

The Coroner: Will you tell us what happened on Saturday last? – Witness: I was in the garden a few minutes to seven gathering a few peas.

The Coroner: How far were you from deceased? – Witness: About three or four yards, but he was over the wall in Mr. Smith’s garden.

The Coroner: Did you speak to anyone? – Witness: Yes, I was speaking to George Manning.

The Coroner: How far was Manning away? – Witness: Only a few yards on the other side of the wall.

The Coroner: How high do you suppose the wall was? – Witness: About 4 feet 6 inches.

The Coroner: And how far is the residence of Mr. Baker away? – Witness: Half a mile.

The Coroner: Did you speak to Manning? – Witness: Yes, I had a conversation with him.

The Coroner: Was he carrying anything with him? – Witness: Yes, he had a gun in his hands.

The Coroner: And how was he carrying it? – Witness: In his hands, in front of him.

The Coroner: Now tell me exactly what happened. – Witness: He held the gun in both hands at about the middle.

The Coroner: Did he use the gun at all? – Witness: No, he did not. I spoke to him, and he put the rifle on the wall, leaning on it, the butt being one side of the wall, and the barrel the other.

The Coroner: Yes, and what happened? – Witness: We had been talking about a minute or two when Miss Smith came up her own garden in which Baker was standing, and she turned round and spoke to Mr. Manning, who shouted back. She then turned round to speak to Mr. Baker, and as she was walking out of the garden the gun went off, and I saw him fall.

The Coroner: Had Manning moved with the gun all this time? – Witness: No sir, he was leaning on it across the wall.

The Coroner: And what happened after Baker fell? – Witness: Manning then got over the wall and went at once to Mr. Baker.

The Coroner: Did you see that he was shot? – Witness: I did not know as I was stooping to get the peas. If I had not been it might have caught me.

The Coroner: Did Manning say anything to you about the rifle? – Witness: Yes, he said, ‘Oh dear, there must have been a bullet in the rifle and I did not know it.’

The Coroner: When did he say that? – Witness: Just as he was getting over the wall.

The Coroner: Had Manning attempted to present the gun at Miss Smith? – Witness: I think not.

The Coroner: Have you ever seen witness with a rifle before? – Witness: Yes, I have, repeatedly.

The Foreman thought it would greatly help the jury if they went and had a look at the position of the gardens, as there were three or four of them. The Jury then visited the spot where the catastrophe occurred. It appeared that the shot must have caught deceased in the head and afterwards struck the greenhouse, which diverted the course of the bullet through the opposite window and out into the field.

Mrs. King was further examined.

The Coroner: Could you see Manning at the time the rifle went off? – Witness: I could not.

Mr. King: When the rifle went off you were stooping to gather some peas? – Witness: I was.

Mr. King: And the first thing you saw was Mr. Baker fall? – Witness: That is so.

Mr. King: And after that Manning fell over the wall, bleeding at the nose? – Witness: Yes.

The Coroner: Then as far as you could see, in your judgement, did the rifle go off accidentally? – Witness: I think it did.

The Coroner: Did you think it at all unusual for Manning to be there with the rifle? – Witness: No, I have seen him before with it walking about the garden.

The Coroner: But have you ever seen him fire it? – Witness: I have not.

Mr. King: Have you ever seen him in the same position with the rifle? – Witness: No, I have not.

Amy Maud Smith stated that she went into the garden on Saturday last and Mr. Baker was walking along the wall. She was conversing with him when the rifle went off.

The Coroner: Could you see the rifle? – Witness: Yes, at the end of Mr. Brunn's garden. Mr. Manning was standing with it.

The Coroner: Did you notice the position of the rifle? – Witness: No sir.

The Coroner: How long were you there before it went off? – Witness: About five minutes. It struck Mr. Baker, who fell in the garden.

The Coroner: Then as far as you could judge the rifle went off accidentally? – Witness: Yes.

The Coroner: What did you do afterwards? – Witness: I ran up the garden to mother and told her.

The Coroner: Did you notice if Manning was hurt? – Witness: He was bleeding at the nose.

Mr. King: Did you notice that the report of the rifle was a very loud one? – Witness: I did.

Mr. King: And could you say the rifle had lifted? – Witness: I could not.

Mr. W. H. Pass: I suppose Baker went up the garden but was not doing anything? – Witness: He was not at work.

Mr. Pass: You simply know he was shot? – Witness: Yes sir.

Mr. C. Dawes: Did Manning come to give any assistance? – Witness: I cannot say.

Mr. White: Have you ever seen Manning with the rifle before? – Witness: I have.

James Hughes, of Bloxidge Street, stated that he saw Manning before the occurrence took place. He heard him snap the gun and walk to the wall. He saw him leaning over the wall talking to someone. He could not say who it was.

Superintendent Hardman stated that he received information that there had been a gun accident, and he went to Langley at once, and found deceased lying in a pool of blood. He was then gasping for breath. Dr. Lyddon then appeared, but gave no hopes, and when the man was quite dead he had him removed to his home.

PS Stanton stated that he had measured the distance from where Manning was standing to where Baker lay, and it was 22 yards. He afterwards went and saw Manning, who made a statement to him. He had a Martini rifle that would kill over a mile away. Manning told him that he had been cleaning the rifle, and walked down the garden and put a cartridge in to see that it was quite clear, as sometimes the rust got into the barrel. While he was down at the wall he spoke to Mrs. King, and must have forgotten that the cartridge was still in the rifle, and it was purely accidental. He received a bad blow in the face, which made him bleed.

Dr. C. Lyddon stated that on receiving the information he immediately went to the place and found deceased lying on his back in the walk. There was a large pool of blood beside him, although the bleeding had stopped. He was almost pulseless, and knew he could not live many minutes, so he thought it best not to disturb him. After he was dead he examined the body and found the skull fractured and a large wound. He searched for the bullet but was unable to find it.

The Coroner asked the Jury if they would like Manning to give evidence. They stated that they would, but he was advised by Mr. Instone, who represented him, not to do so, as he could only tell them what he had told PS Stanton.

The Coroner, in summing up, said it was a very unhappy and unfortunate case, not only as it affected the deceased, but also for the young man Thomas Manning. They must all recognise the fact that the evidence placed him in a very unfortunate position. One could not help but feel he had been guilty of very considerable carelessness in the use of the rifle. From the evidence altogether he thought they might say at once that the explosion of the gun was one of pure accident. They would also remember that Manning said, 'The bullet must have been in and I forgot to take it out.' With regard to Manning, he seemed to have been out in the garden and handling the rifle in a very careless manner by holding it in his hands, and particularly when they remembered it was loaded. As far as the law was concerned it was within the power of anyone to have a rifle in his possession, but if they did they must take proper charge of them, and use them in such a manner that no harm could come to other people with them. In that case that had not been so, and it would be for the Jury to say whether or not Manning had been guilty of such an amount of gross negligence as to consider him liable to the law for what had occurred. There was one thing that struck him as very peculiar, and that was how it came about that Manning had the rifle in his possession with a bullet in at all. One could not but consider it in the most solemn manner as a very serious offence, to be walking about in a garden with a most dangerous rifle that they were told would kill a man a mile away, and if no notice was taken of such conduct no one's life would be safe for one moment. What they had to consider was whether Manning exercised that ordinary care and prudence he should have done with a very dangerous weapon.

The room was then cleared of all except the jury and coroner, who were in consultation for about 20 minutes. On being called into the room the Coroner then said the jury had very carefully considered the verdict, and agreed that Thomas Baker came to his death accidentally. They were further of opinion that Manning's conduct deserved the strongest censure for the careless manner in which he used the rifle. They hoped and trusted that all that had transpired would be a lesson to him for the end of his days.

Mr. W. H. Pass stated that the jury were further of opinion that although it was an accident Manning should make some compensation to the widow who had lost her husband. The poor man was dead and gone, and the least he could do would be to bear the cost of the funeral expenses.

Mr. Brunn stated that although he had no authority for saying so, he believed this would be done."

The secretary presented his annual report, which showed that the first eleven had played 22 matches, of which six were won, eight drawn, and eight lost, and they had scored 1,719 runs for the loss of 170 wickets to 1,847 runs made by opponents, for the loss of 172 wickets. The balance-sheet showed a balance in hand of 8s 3d."

"Yesterday, at the Police Court – before Messrs. H. Heaton and S. Bennett – Arthur Bradley, landlord of the NEW INN, Station Road, Langley, was charged with keeping his house open on the 30th ult, during illegal hours. Mr. W. Shakespeare defended.

Police-constable Davies said on the night named he saw a number of men leaving defendant's house at about eleven o'clock. At 11.40 he visited the house in company with Police-constable Sherwood, and found between sixty and seventy men there drinking and singing. He also saw persons leaving the house at 12.50. Superintendent Speke said Mr. Bradley called upon him prior to the 30th ult, and intimated that he was about to provide a dinner for a few friends connected with Showell's Brewery. Witness told defendant that he ought to have applied for an extension of time. Mr. Bradley, however, stated that the dinner having to be provided at short notice he had not the opportunity of doing so, and added that the persons who were invited would not pay for anything.

Mr. Shakespeare contended that the defendant was not liable. All the persons present were in the employ of Messrs. Showell and Sons (Limited). They had been to inspect the brewery, and afterwards dined together, the cost of which was defrayed by the firm. It was a private party, and there was not a single customer present, and not one of them had been a customer to defendant during the day. Moreover, he urged that all the persons found in the house resided more than three miles away, and were bona-fide travellers. Evidence was given corroborating these statements, and showing that the persons present came from Stockport, London, Walsall, Kidderminster and Birmingham, and other places, and all were in the employ of the firm.

Ultimately the case was withdrawn on payment of the costs, 7s 6d.”

Birmingham Daily Post 14/7/1893

“Yesterday afternoon, Mr. A. H. Hibbert (deputy coroner) held an inquest at the NEW INN, Langley, concerning the death of Martha Cowley (24), wife of Albert Cowley, of Mill House, who died on Tuesday last. The husband stated that his wife, who was enceinte, told him three weeks ago that a Mrs. Jackson was going to get her some stuff, and witness told her that if she brought any stuff there he should burn it. Last Saturday week one of the children told him that deceased had taken something out of a bottle, and it had made her sick. He threw a bottle away which he afterwards found upon the table. Deceased got better, and witness did not think any more about it. Deceased was seized with an illness on Monday night last, but appeared to be all right again on Tuesday morning. However, shortly before breakfast, she became ill again, and she was sick when he returned home to breakfast. About 9.30 he was sent for from his work, and then found that his wife was dead.

Lucy Williams, sister of the deceased, gave similar evidence, and said deceased told her she was going to pay 1s for the stuff.

Emma Jackson, a widow, residing in Park Lane, said deceased asked her to fetch three pennyworth of a certain herb; but witness did not enquire what she wanted it for, and she did not know anything about its properties. She bought the herb from Mrs. Jackson, a herbalist, of Talbot Street, Oldbury, and deceased gave her 3d for fetching it. She denied having told the deceased the herb would put her all right.

Charlotte Jackson deposed to selling the herb to the last witness, and said she told her to use it cautiously. Mrs. Jackson replied that she knew how to use it, as she had used it before.

Dr. Cunningham, who had made a post-mortem examination, said he found the effects of an irritant poison. The cause of death was sickness, purging and collapse. The sickness was caused by deceased taking the herb.

A juror asked what the law was on the subject.

The Coroner said if Mrs. Jackson had administered the herb, then it would have been their duty, as a jury, to commit for manslaughter; but, according to the evidence, deceased took it herself.

Dr. Cunningham explained that the herb was not scheduled as a poison.

The jury returned a verdict of Death by Misadventure.”

Birmingham Daily Post 18/10/1893

“Worcestershire Quarter Sessions.....

Emma Jackson, a widow, on bail, was indicted for procuring a certain noxious herb, with intent to procure the miscarriage of a woman named Martha Cowley, and thereby causing her death on July 10. Mr. Harrington prosecuted; Mr. Vachell defended.

Martha Cowley was a married woman with several children, and living happily with her husband, and was pregnant. She appeared to have consulted the prisoner, who obtained a certain drug. Deceased appeared to have taken some of this, but after the second dose she was taken ill, and died.

The medical evidence showed that deceased died from vegetable poisoning, and it was stated that two-thirds of the drug supplied were sufficient to cause death.

The defence was that prisoner was unaware of the deceased's condition.

The Jury acquitted the prisoner, and the Chairman, in discharging her, said that had she been charged with manslaughter she would in all probability have been found guilty. He cautioned her not to do anything of the kind again.”

“A dinner in connection with the Langley District of the Free Gardeners was held last night, at the NEW INNS, Langley. Mr. W. T. Davies presided; and among those present were Messrs. H. T. Finch (grand secretary), J. Clarke (past grand master), E. G. Dickinson (deputy master elect), &c.

The chairman gave the grand officers a hearty welcome, and Mr. J. Skidmore proposed success to the order, and welcome to the grand secretary.

In response, Mr. Finch referred to the progress made by their society, and hoped that in the future they would be recognised as one of the largest societies in the country. He believed that friendly societies generally would suffer to a great extent through the strike in the coal trade. It would leave its mark in some of the towns, and it behoved them to make every effort to fill the gaps up which would result through the strike. (Hear, hear.) Referring to the scheme for proving old-age pensions, he said before long they would have to face the question, and would also have to dispose of it. (Hear, hear.)

The toast of 'Success to the Langley District' was acknowledged by Mr. Butler."

"Last evening, Mr. E. Docker (coroner) held an inquest at the NEW INNS, Langley, upon the body of Fanny Hughes (65), widow, of Mill Lane, who died suddenly on Tuesday night. It appeared that deceased, who was apparently in good health, retired to bed about nine o'clock in company with a grandson about nine years of age. She knelt by the bedside, and, whilst engaged in prayer, the boy observed her fall on her side. A neighbour was called in, and Dr. Cunningham was also summoned, but life was found to be extinct. The evidence of Dr. Cunningham showed that deceased died from an attack of apoplexy. The jury returned a verdict of Died from Natural Causes."

“The question of compensation attached some importance to the inquest held on Saturday by Mr. A. H. Hebbert, at the NEW INNS, Langley, with reference to the death of Joseph Wylde, aged 57, residing in Station Road, Langley, which occurred on Wednesday last. Mr. Sidney Vernon appeared on behalf of Messrs. Chance and Hunt, at whose works deceased met with an accident in October last, and Mr. J. J. Jackson, inspector of factories, was also present.

It appeared on October 29 deceased was engaged with three other men in loading a wagon at the works at Tat Bank with carboys of sulphuric acid, each carboy weighing about 2cwt. It was explained that the carboys were bottles packed with hay in baskets. Two men were on the wagon hauling them up, while deceased and another man named Bradley were lifting them up from below. When they had about half the load on, one of the bottles caught against the crutch of the wagon, breaking the bottle, and the liquid ran over the deceased, burning him rather severely.

He was removed to the District Hospital, where he was detained for about three weeks, and on December 12 he recommenced work. During the Christmas holidays he complained of pains in his head, and died after a week's illness on Wednesday.

The widow and a man named Riddley gave evidence, and a foreman at the works named George Birch stated that he did not remember a similar accident to that during the 30 years he had been employed there.

Dr. Broughton stated that he was called to see deceased a week before his death, when he complained of intense headache, and was suffering from influenza. He gradually grew worse, and was unconscious for several days before his death. He attributed death to apoplexy, caused by pressure on the brain, due to the clotting of blood in one of the blood vessels of the brain, and in his opinion death was accelerated by the accident.

Dr. M. B. Buttery and Dr. H. S. Browne disagreed with this, considering that the process of degeneration was long antecedent to the accident, and in their opinion death was not accelerated by the accident.

As there was no evidence as to the extent of the injuries inflicted by the acid, the inquiry was adjourned till tomorrow afternoon, when the hospital doctor, who treated the burns, might attend.”

“Mr. A. H. Hibbert (Deputy Coroner) resumed the inquest at the NEW INNS, Langley, this afternoon, respecting the death of Joseph Wilde (57), labourer, of Station Road, Langley, who died on the 4th inst, under singular circumstances, reported in Saturday's Mail. Dr. Stanley Barnes, of Birmingham, for whose evidence the enquiry was adjourned, stated that in his opinion death was accelerated by the accident sustained by the deceased at the Oldbury Alkali Works on October 29th. The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

“Bottles and glasses were smashed and tables overturned in an affray at a Langley public house on Friday night, a special magistrates’ court at Oldbury was told on Saturday

A police-constable giving evidence against five Scotsmen, said, ‘I can’t describe in words the condition of the room. It was in absolute disorder and a complete shambles.’

Accused of causing damage valued at £30 at the NEW INNS, Langley, and with being drunk and disorderly were: Leslie Alexander Fettes (aged 21), of 45, Cummings Park Crescent; Robert Thomson (aged 23), of 34, Tollochill Place; Ronald Andrew Thomson (aged 19) and George McKay Thomson (aged 21), both of 3, Balnagark Road; and John McGregor (aged 21), of 82, Eday Road, all of Aberdeen.

McGregor was also charged with assaulting Police-constable Ivor Parkes.

Opposing bail, Inspector Stanley Stevens said, ‘While in custody these five men have made further threats of violence. If they are allowed to go there may be further trouble. One man especially has made serious threats to the police. I think they will abscond if allowed bail.'

Police-constable M. Kendall said he went to the NEW INNS with other officers at 10.15pm. The five accused were in the assembly room drunk and fighting. Four of them were arrested and three had to receive hospital treatment.

Inspector Stevens said that when Police-constable Parkes went to SYCAMORE HOSTEL, Oldbury, where he knew McGregor was lodging, McGregor struck him in the face."

Birmingham Daily Post 2/6/1960

"Five scots were cleared yesterday of a joint charge of causing £30 worth of damage to a Langley public house during a fight in which chairs, stools, bottles and glasses were said to have been used. Mr. A. Smith, presiding magistrate at Oldbury, said there were other people at the public house and the prosecution should have called them to give evidence.

The five are: Leslie Alexander Fettes (21), Robert Thomson (23), and Ronald Andrew Thomson (19), all lodging in Bristnall Hall Road, Langley; George Fyfe McKay Thomson (21), lodging in Joinings Bank, Langley; and John McGregor (21), of SYCAMORE HOSTEL, Clay Lane. Each was fined £2 for being drunk and disorderly.

The magistrates dismissed a separate charge against George Thomson of wounding Mr. John William Jenkins, licensee of the NEW INNS, Langley.

John McGregor, who admitted assaulting a policeman and having broken a shop window five weeks before the public house incident, was sent to prison for three months.

Mr. M. Coley, prosecuting, said McGregor was involved in some sort of struggle with another man at the NEW INNS on May 20. When Mr. Jenkins went to separate them everybody near got up and a general fight started. During this George Thomson tried to hit Mr. Jenkins in the face with a pint glass. The licensee ward off the blow, but his hand was cut. A policeman was called but realised he could not do much and called for reinforcements. When these arrived four of the Scots were arrested, but McGregor escaped. He was later arrested at SYCAMORE HOSTEL, where he hit a policeman on the chin during a struggle.

Mr. J. Silk, defending, said the damage was done by the crowd during the fight. 'It is remarkable no one else has come forward to give evidence against these boys,' he said. 'That is because other people started the fight. I am surprised this case has been brought.'"

Worcestershire Chronicle 16/7/1856

“Midsummer Assizes for the County and City of Worcester.....

Charles Bennett, 35, builder, surrendered to his bail charged with having in his possession two forged £5 Bank of England notes, at Oldbury, on the 16th of April.

Mr. Huddleston stated the facts of the case on behalf of the prosecution at some length, and then called:

Elizabeth Nock: I am the wife of Philip Nock who keeps the CROSS GUNS, at Oldbury. Prisoner came to the house on the 16th April, and called for a glass of ale. I borrowed six-pence of him to make up some change for a gentleman. He said he could lend me one, but it was the only one he had. He then asked me to change a £5 note for him, and produced what I thought was a note. I went up stairs for change, but finding that I had not enough, I gave the note to Ann Dudley to return to the prisoner. I afterwards said I would endeavour to get it changed for him elsewhere, and he again gave me the note. I asked him to put his name upon it, as there was some difficulty in getting a note changed in that neighbourhood without a name upon it. He wrote 'Charles Holland' upon it. My little boy went for the change, but could not get it, and the note was again returned to the prisoner. (The note was here produced and identified by the witness as the note upon which the prisoner had written.)

Cross-examined: I am perfectly sure he wrote Charles Holland upon it. I did not see any samples of hops with him. I can't say whether he was tipsy or not.

By the Court: If there are any other initials on the note the prisoner did not write them.

Ann Dudley deposed to receiving the note from Mrs. Nock, and giving it back to prisoner.

William Bridge keeps a public house at Oldbury. On the 16th April the prisoner came to my house and wanted me to buy some hops. He had two glasses of ale and some bread and cheese, and tendered in payment what seemed to be a £5 note. I could not change it, and took it to a grocer named Lines, who thought it was a bad one, and went back with me. Prisoner afterwards tendered a good sovereign in payment for his bread and cheese. Lines had some conversation with the prisoner, and presently a policeman and Mr. Lee came in.

Cross-examined: Prisoner seemed perfectly sober.

Mr. Samuel Lines, grocer, deposed to the last witness bringing the note to him for change. He saw it was spurious, and went back with Mr. Bridge, and asked the prisoner if he knew the note was bad. He replied that he did not, and in answer to a question said he had it from Messrs. Stroud and Co., hop merchants, for whom he travelled, a very respectable firm, having warehouses in Birmingham, Liverpool, and Burton-upon-Trent. Witness then asked him where their warehouses in Liverpool were, and he could not tell. Witness asked to be allowed to see the samples of hops he had, and upon their being produced he detected at once that the prisoner had been speaking falsely, and was not in the trade. PC Simmonds then came in, and the prisoner put the note in a port monnaie.

In cross examination the witness prevaricated considerably from his statement when before the magistrates; and Mr. Powell asked that the depositions should be read. Upon that being done, the witness admitted that he had made a mistake today – instead of saying that he had received the note from Messrs. Stroud, he said 'he had received it from a man whom he should know again if he saw him.'

PC Samuel Simmonds took the prisoner into custody, and found the two notes upon him. He said he had received them from a Mr. Stevenson, a hop merchant in the Moseley Road, Birmingham, and gave £10 in hard cash for them at the New Street Station. Upon searching him I found upon his person four sovereigns and some silver and copper moneys, all good. He gave his name as Charles Bennett, of Spon Lane. I found that correct, but upon inquiry for Mr. Stevenson, I could not find any such person.

Mr. Whitehouse, the postmaster of Burton-upon-Trent, deposed that there was no such firm as Stroud and Co. in that town.

Mr. Rhodes, hop merchant, of the Bull Ring, Birmingham, stated that there was no firm of Stroud and Co. in that town

Inspector Glossop, of the Birmingham police, stated that there was no Mr. Stevenson, a hop merchant, in the Moseley Road.

Mr. Bumstead, the inspector of notes to the Bank of England, proved that the notes found upon the prisoner were forgeries, and from the same plate.

Mr. Powell then addressed the jury for the defence, and after a lengthy appeal to their feelings, contending that the transaction was more a mistake than anything else, called John James, who, amidst other improbabilities, said that he saw the prisoner give sovereigns for the notes to two men at the Birmingham railway station, whom he (witness) thought the prisoner knew. He gave the prisoner a good character for eleven years.

Another witness named Houston spoke to the prisoner as being an 'honest and respectable' builder and contractor, whom he had known a long time.

Both these witnesses were closely cross-examined by Mr. Huddleston as to their own respectability; and it seemed also clear that they were anything but correct in their statements regarding the prisoner. His lordship summed up at great length, recapitulating the greater portion of the evidence. The jury found the prisoner guilty, and he was sentenced to six years' penal servitude."

"Bankruptcy at Oldbury. This morning the public examination of William John Yeomans, of the BRIDGE INN, Stone Street, Oldbury, licensed victualler and also carrying on business as a boat builder, at Tat Bank, took place at the County Court Offices, before Mr. G. S. Watson, Registrar. Mr. Charles Woollett, deputy-official receiver, conducted the examination. The debtor said he commenced business about ten years ago with a capital of about £400. Some years ago he lost about £800 owing to the death of 14 horses, and being short of capital his hauling business fell off. In October last year he took to the public house he now occupied. He attributed his present position to being short of capital caused by the loss of the horses mentioned. On the application of Mr. Shakespeare, the debtor's solicitor, the examination was passed. The first meeting of creditors was also fixed to take place at the same time and place. The debtor not being in a position to offer a composition he was adjudicated a bankrupt. The total liabilities amounted to £259 14s 4d and the assets to £192 14s 9d leaving a deficiency of £66 19s 7d."

"At the Oldbury Police Court today, before Messrs. H. Chance and H. Heaton, magistrates, John Grigg Taylor, licensed victualler, of Birmingham Street, Oldbury, and Clinton Hill Bailey, traveller, Smethwick, were charged with being on licensed premises of George Bonser, of the BRIDGE INN, Stone Street, on the 1st inst; and George Bonser was charged with keeping his house open during prohibited hours, and permitting gambling on his licensed premises on the same date. Mr. Wm Shakespeare was for the defendant.

Police-constable Rivers stated that on the night named he and Police-constable Peart were on duty near the BRIDGE INN, and they heard a conversation going on inside and saw the defendants and a man named Hadley through a glass door 'toss' for beer and cigars. When he went into the house Bonser said, 'Come in and have a glass of beer. I know you are all right, and will not say anything about this,' and Mrs. Bonser asked her husband to give him one of the cigars they had been tossing for.

Mr. Shakespeare urged for the defendant that Bailey was a representative of a firm of brewers who supplied the house with beer, and that he and Taylor were there for the purpose of taking stock, as Bonser had only recently taken to the premises. Bonser was fined 38s 6d, and the other defendants were fined 13s each. An application was made by Mr. Shakespeare for the license of the house in question to be transferred from William John Yeomans to George Bonser, the above named defendant. The magistrates said that in the face of the above offence they must decline to grant him the license. Mr. Shakespeare respectfully asked the Bench to reconsider their decision, pointing out that Bonser had held a license in the town for many years, and had never been previously convicted, and that the business was his only means of getting his livelihood. After some consideration the Bench granted Bonser a temporary authority until the 10th of March next, in order that he might in the mean time get some suitable person to take the house."

Wolverhampton Express and Star 10/3/1885

"Mr. Jackson made a renewed application for the transfer of the license of the BRIDGE INN, Stone Street, from a man named Yeomans, to George Bonser.

It appears that Mr. Bonser formerly kept the VICTORIA STORES, in Birmingham Street, and left that place to go to the BRIDGE INN. An application was made for the transfer at the time, but as he had just previously been summoned for two infringements of his license at the STORES, the Bench refused the application, but agreed to grant a temporary authority till 10th March, in order to facilitate Mr. Bonser's getting another tenant. The premises at the BRIDGE INN are owned by Messrs. Butler and Co., Wolverhampton.

The Bench now refused to grant the application on the ground that no new facts were stated, but agreed to grant a further temporary authority to one of the employes of Messrs. Butler and Co. until transfer day."

Birmingham Daily Post 11/3/1885

"Mr. H. Jackson applied on behalf of George Bonser for a transfer of the license of the BRIDGE INN, Stone Street, from William John Yeomans. Superintendent Hardman objected to the application, on the ground that the applicant had been convicted for keeping open during prohibited hours, and for permitting gambling on the 16th December last. The Bench declined to grant the application. A temporary transfer was subsequently granted to Mr. Samuel Fellows, the agent of Messrs. Butler and Company, of Wolverhampton."

"Last night a meeting was held at the BRIDGE INN, Stone Street, Oldbury, in connection with the Amalgamated Society of Canal Boatmen, Carmen, &c, for the purpose of considering the advisability of forming a local lodge for the Oldbury district. Mr. G. J. Pearson (secretary) remarked that they were desirous of enrolling both open and cabin boatmen in their society. The object of the association was to regain those privileges which boatmen had lost. The Amalgamated Society of Canal Boatmen of England and Wales mustered 150,000 members. For a trip to Brentford £3 2s 6d was paid to boatmen, and 7s 6d was deducted from that amount on back freight. This was 30s less per voyage than was formerly paid. For every 2s 3d the men earned the employers got 4s 6d. It was decided to form a branch of the society, and Mr. Garner was appointed chairman of the society, other officers being also elected.”

“The adjourned meeting of the Worcester County Licensing Committee was held today at the Shirehall, Mr. Willis Bund presiding, for the consideration of licenses of houses in Oldbury which had been reported by the local justices as not being necessary for the requirements of the district.....

In the case of the BRIDGE INN, Stone Street, Mr. Matthews said Mitchells and Butlers gave £1,850 for the property.....

After deliberating half an hour, the justices decided that all the houses brought before them were unnecessary, but not being certain how far compensation money would suffice to meet the claims to be paid, drew up an order of precedence in which houses are to be dealt with, houses not paid for keeping open provisionally till they are dealt with.”

Smethwick Telephone 1/7/1905

“The adjourned principal meeting of the Licensing Committee for the County of Worcester was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, on Saturday, Mr. J. Willis Bund presiding. The sixteen houses reported by the Oldbury Justices were considered, and the committee ultimately decided that all the licenses were unnecessary. As they were not aware how far the compensation money would go, the committee arranged the houses in order, and as many of the licenses as possible will be done away with. The order is as follows.....

7. BRIDGE INN, Stone Street.”

Birmingham Mail 22/12/1905

“An important memorandum has been issued by the inland revenue commissioners affecting the basis of compensation for licensed houses which have been compulsorily closed. It will be remembered that fifteen such houses were refused the renewal of licenses at Oldbury, and the question of compensation was argued by counsel before the Worcestershire Licensing Committee a few weeks ago. That committee intimated that the rent was the basis upon which the compensation should be assessed, but counsel urged that this was preposterous. The claimants preferred to leave the matter to the decision of the inland revenue commissioners. The latter have sent a letter to the committee, upholding its view that the rent should be the basis, allowing nothing for the trade done on the premises or to the brewers for tied houses. The Commissioners say that the computation of the sum to be paid in any case requires the determination of three factors, namely, the value of the licensed premises, the depreciation in value of the trade fixtures, and the value of the premises without the license. They have, as a rule, capitalised the annual value of the licensed premises upon the four per cent basis, or at twenty-five years’ purchase, and only exceeded this in cases where there was a distinct prospect of improved annual value, and only fallen below it where there was evidence to suggest that the present value could not be maintained in future. They have employed surveyors of taxes to take estimates of the probable annual value of premises when deprived of their licenses, and of the probable number of years’ purchase of such annual value that premises would fetch, an allowance being made for the cost of the alterations necessary to fit the premises for earning the annual value as estimated. Accordingly, although exact figures have not yet been received, the amounts payable for the Oldbury houses above referred to may be given approximately as follows.....

BRIDGE INN, £220.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 6/3/1906

“A meeting of the Worcester Licensing Committee was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, yesterday, to consider the awards made by the Commissioner of Inland Revenue, determining the amounts to be paid as compensation to owners, holders, or others interested in the non-renewal of licenses in the Oldbury division..... The licenses refused and the amount of compensation awarded in each case was as follows.....

BRIDGE INN, Stone Street, £600.

The committee made awards as follows.....

BRIDGE INN, Stone Street, £600 to W. Butler and Co. Limited, owners and licensee.

Payment of the compensation money was fixed to take place on March 28.”

The license was extinguished on 4th April 1908.

“On Saturday last, an inquest was held at the BRITANNIA INN, Tividale, before George Hinchliffe, Esq, Coroner, on the body of Thomas Bratt, twelve years of age, who was employed as a boat-boy by Thomas Stevens, of Oldbury. It appeared that on the previous day he was with the boat, near Tividale, and on stepping into it from the towing path he missed his footing, and clung to the side. Another boat, however, was passing at the moment, and he was crushed between the two so badly that he died in less than an hour afterwards. The occurrence appeared to be purely accidental, and the Jury returned a verdict to that effect.”

“On Friday, at the BRITANNIA INN, Tividale, an inquest was held upon the body of a child five months old, named John Shenton, who came to his death by falling upon a toasting fork, thus inflicting a fatal wound upon the forehead. A verdict of Accidental Death was returned; but the Jury censured a man named Boulton, because he was the cause of the accident, inasmuch as he attempted to kiss the girl nursing the child, and in her resistance she dropped it.”

“On Wednesday, at the Police Court, William Griffiths and William Guest, colliers, were charged with refusing to leave the BRITANNIA INN, Tividale, on the 18th inst, when requested to do so by the landlord. The defendants, it appeared, went to the inn drunk, and, when refused liquor, which they called for, abused the landlord, and threatened to break his jugs. Griffiths was the most violent, and he was fined 5s and costs, while Guest was fined 2s 6d and costs, in default fourteen days.”

Stourbridge Observer 28/10/1865

“Tividale. On Saturday last an inquest was held at the BRITANNIA INN, on the body of a man named Daniel Thomas. The deceased was a mill-furnaceman, at the Groveland Iron Works, Tividale, and on Thursday, the 12th inst, was pulling a cinder waggon when the hook came out and flung him into the rolls. His right arm was pulled from his body, and his right jaw and ribs were broken. The accident occurred at 9am, and he died at 4pm. Dr. Underhill and his assistant were quickly in attendance.

After hearing the above evidence, the Jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.

On Sunday deceased was interred at the Parish Church, Rowley, a large number of his fellow workmen following him to his grave. The funeral expenses were all defrayed by Mr. Hickman, the proprietor of the works at which deceased was injured.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 13/7/1866

“An inquest as held yesterday afternoon at the BRITANNIA INN, Tividale, before Mr. Edwin Hooper, Coroner, concerning the death of George Piggott, aged 37, an engineer, late in the employ of Messrs. Haines and Whitehouse, Tividale Sheet Ironworks. The deceased on Monday evening last, was engaged in a workshop at the above works in replacing a wheel and shaft, and whilst so doing part of the roof fell in, and buried the deceased and other workmen. Mr. Haines was in the shop at the time, but was not injured. The deceased was extricated as soon as possible, but was found to be dead.

Mr. Haines was of opinion that the roof fell in from a pin giving way, and did not think the work they were engaged in had anything to do with the fall of the roof.

Mrs. Piggott, the wife of deceased, was examined, and stated that she did not consider there was any neglect on the part of any person. She thought the death of the deceased was purely accidental.

The jury returned a verdict accordingly.”

“On Sunday morning about four o'clock a man named Thomas Blunston met with a horrible death, at Messrs. Round's blast furnaces.

It appears that the poor fellow took ten waggons to the furnaces. He emptied them, and was about to descend, when the waggon ran back, knocked his head completely in, and broke his ribs and leg. The D link must have broken.

An inquest was held at the BRITANNIA INN, Tividale, on Monday, before Mr. Hooper, Coroner, and a verdict of Accidental Death was returned.”

“Samuel Brookes, landlord of the BRITANNIA INN, Tividale, was charged with driving a horse and carriage in the Market Place, Dudley, on Wednesday night last, so as to endanger the lives of passengers. Inspector Wigley stated that about eight o'clock on Wednesday night the defendant was driving through the Market Place, just as the Salvation Army were marching through it. The Army turned to march up Hall Street, and defendant then whipped the horse several times, and endeavoured to drive right through the Army.

Defendant was then charged with assault and beating Elizabeth Mayfield.

Complainant, a member of the Army, stated that the defendant tried to drive through them, although they made way for him to pass. The 'Lieutenant' caught hold of the horse, and the defendant slashed him with the whip. He then tried to drive through the young woman, and imperiled the life of one sister, but witness caught hold of the horse's head and stopped him. Defendant then slashed her across the shoulders.

The evidence having been corroborated, the Bench said the defendant's conduct had been very culpable.

The Salvation Army, so long as they conducted themselves peaceably, must be protected. Defendant would be fined 15s and costs or 14 days' imprisonment for the furious driving, and 10s and costs or 14 days' imprisonment for assault."

"On Tuesday afternoon a young man named Joseph Leech, when walking on the towing-path of the Birmingham Canal, at Tividale, Rowley, found a girl's hat and cape on an embankment. Information was given to Police-constable Robinson, who immediately commenced to drag the canal, and in few minutes brought to land the body of a girl. The body was removed to the BRITANNIA INN, Tividale, and subsequently it was identified as that of Harriett Fisher, a domestic servant, in the employ of Mr. T. H. Millington, pawn-broker, of Burnt Tree. The deceased on Sunday went to her home in the Tipton Road, and left at about eight o'clock, apparently in the best of spirits, remarking that she had got to meet her sweetheart. Nothing further was heard of her until her lifeless body was found. Inquiries made showed that the deceased had received notice to leave her situation. A letter has also been discovered addressed to the deceased, in which the writer – a female companion – states that in the event of anything happening to her, she must inquire for a watch and ring. She is also advised to have nothing to do with a young man named. It is thought by the deceased's friends that the letter caused her to be depressed and to take her life. The deceased has the appearance of being at least 18 years of age, but her parents state that she was only 15."

[The inquest, at the BRITANNIA INN, which lasted 3 hours, returned a verdict of Suicide when in a state of Temporary Insanity.]

"Enoch Shutt, labourer, of Upper Chapel Street, Tividale, was charged with being drunk and disorderly and refusing to quit the licensed premises of the BRITANNIA INN, Dudley Road, Tividale, belonging to Eli Doody, and also with using obscene language on the 7th inst.

Mr. Waldron prosecuted, and explained that on the morning in question defendant visited the public house in company with three other men. He ordered four glasses of whiskey, but refused to pay for it, and upon applying to be supplied with another one he was refused. He then used most abusive language towards the landlord. He refused to leave when requested to do so, and had to be ejected, when he used most violent language.

Complainant and Police-constable Nicol gave evidence.

Defendant was fined 10s and costs each for refusing to quit and using violent language, and 10s including costs for drunkenness."

Wednesbury Leader 28/9/1906

"Mr. W. L. Lewis (Deputy Coroner for South Staffordshire) held an inquest at the BRITANNIA INN, Dudley Road, Tividale, Rowley Regis, on Thursday, with respect to the death of Edward Chambers (55), labourer, Burnt Tree, Tipton, who had been found drowned in the Birmingham Canal on the 25th instant.

The evidence of Florence Chambers showed that the deceased had grieved over the death of his wife, which took place twelve months ago, and had been depressed recently owing to being thrown out of employment in consequence of the closing of galvanising works. On Monday night he was left by the members of his family in the kitchen, and on the following morning he was missing.

When James Treadwell, an excavator in the employ of the Birmingham Canal Company, was walking by the Groveland Bridge Canal he saw the deceased's body in an upright position in the water, and with a boat shaft recovered the body. At the back of the head he found a wound, which had evidently been caused by a boat striking it.

Police-constable Heatherley said he had made inquiries with respect to the deceased, and there was no doubt the injury to the deceased's head was caused by a boat. As to how the deceased got into the water he had been unable to ascertain.

The Deputy Coroner said there was no doubt the deceased's mind had been unhinged through his troubles. A verdict of Found Drowned was returned."

"An inquest was held on Wednesday afternoon by Mr. G. C. Lewis (County Coroner), at the BRITANNIA INN, Dudley Road, Tividale, concerning the death of James Bristow (54), a stoker, of Constitution Hill, Dudley, who had been found drowned in the Barbers Rest Pool, which is situated at the bottom of one of the Rowley hills.

James Bristow, a son, gave evidence to the effect that his father had recently been having his summer holiday. When he returned he complained of the heat and was depressed in consequence of the serious illness of another son, respecting whom he remarked, 'I hope he will be buried before I am.' On Sunday morning his father was missing from home, and during the day information was received that some of his clothing had been found on the Barbers Rest Pool embankment. The pool (which is of great depth) was dragged by Police-constable Heatherley and others, and the body was recovered on Monday.

In reply to the Coroner, one witness stated his father had domestic worries, and further that he would have to walk at least two miles to get to the pool.

The Coroner said it appeared to be a case of suicide, but there was an entire absence as to the state of the unfortunate man's mind at the time he took his life.

The jury returned a verdict of Suicide.

Bristow had been employed at the Dudley Gas Works for 37 years.”

Dudley Chronicle 22/7/1911

“An inquiry was held last Friday evening at the BRITANNIA INN, Dudley Road, Tividale, Rowley Regis, by Mr. G. C. Lewis (County Coroner) relative to the death of George Oliver (51), miner, Brades Road, Rounds Green, Rowley, which occurred at the Lye Cross Colliery, Oakham, Rowley. Mr. Felton, Government Inspector, attended as representative of the Home Office.

John Allen, of Kates Hill, Dudley, and employed as a horse driver at the Lye Cross Colliery, stated he was employed on the night shift on Wednesday night, and left off work at about midnight. Shortly afterwards Oliver and seven others ascended the shaft in a cage, which was properly fenced. Just before the cage arrived half-way up the shaft he noticed Oliver loose his hold of a bar and fall in a heap on the cage, and afterwards into the shaft. In reply to Mr. Felton, witness stated that Oliver was the last of eight to get on to the cage at the bottom of the shaft, and he appeared to be properly dressed. He was unable to state whether his clothes got entangled. The cage did not sway. Oliver toppled over instantly, and witness shouted out ‘Hold,’ and the signal was given to the engine-winder to stop. He was unable to state as to whether anything caught Oliver.

Thomas Fletcher, who was also in the cage when the accident occurred, said there was an ample clearance between the side of the shaft and the cage. He could not say that the man’s clothing was disarranged, or that any portion of the clothing became in any way entangled. He could not state the cause of the accident.

William Matthews stated he was at the bottom of the shaft when Oliver fell out of the cage. His shirt was not properly arranged when he fell to the bottom.

Police-constable Heatherley stated that the body was terribly mutilated.

The Coroner said unfortunately there was no evidence to show the cause of the unfortunate man falling out of the cage, and the only conclusion they could reasonably arrive at was that he fell out of the cage when in the act of adjusting his clothing after leaving his work. Possibly the heat was responsible for his losing his hold of the bar in the cage.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 25/8/1911

“Mr. G. C. Lewis (County Coroner) held an inquest last evening at the BRITANNIA INN, Dudley Road, Tividale, Rowley Regis, concerning the death of John George Ford (13), of Brampton Road, Smethwick, who was drowned under tragic circumstances in the Tividale Canal Tunnel on August 22.

The mother, Fanny Ford, stated that she was a widow, and had no idea that her son had accompanied boatmen on a barge until she received information that he had been drowned in the Tividale Canal Tunnel.

Joseph Law, a boatman, residing at Smethwick, stated that he was on Tuesday in charge of two boats travelling from Smethwick to the Saltwell Collieries, and when starting on the journey the boy asked permission to accompany him in one of the boats. He advised him to remain at Smethwick. The boy, however, persisted in travelling in one of the boats. Just before entering the Tividale Tunnel witness gave Ford a chop for his dinner, and sat near to him. While he held the tiller in his hand, a barge belonging to the Shropshire Canal Company passed, and caused a large volume of water to splash against his boat with such force as to knock the tiller out of his hand and to cause Ford to fall between the two boats into the water. Witness did his best to rescue the lad, but was unable to do so owing to the darkness of the tunnel, and also that it was not advisable for him to jump into the water as he was unable to swim. He and Police-constable Simkin, however, dragged the canal for over an hour, and eventually succeeded in recovering the body. In reply to a jurymen witness stated there was not a front light on the Shropshire Union Canal Company’s boat, which there ought to have been when it entered the tunnel.

Several jurymen contended boatmen ought to obey strictly the regulations, especially when they had to travel through tunnels. The coroner concurred.

A verdict of Accidental Death was returned.”

Dudley Chronicle 16/10/1920

“Hospital Helping. The Tipton and district friendly societies’ propaganda campaign was resumed at Tividale on Friday night. The propaganda since it was started last January has already resulted in the allocation to the several hospitals and kindred institutions in Dudley, West Bromwich, Wolverhampton, and Birmingham of over £550, or £300 more than has ever been collected by the committee's efforts during the last 30 years. It is a continuation of the public house 'stunt.' The men are approached in their social moments, their sympathies appealed to and their efforts invited to help the cause from which they – when occasion offers – are the very first to receive the benefit. At Tividale on Friday night the project of putting a collection box into the houses was received with acclamation. The meetings were held at the BRITANNIA and the MINERS ARMS, Mr. Burns (the landlord of the former) and Mr. Cheall (the landlord of the latter) – with the help of Mr. E. Hall – making every arrangement for the holding of the meetings. Both the audiences were enthusiastic, and declared that every effort would be made to win the shield from the present holders, the PRINCE REGENT. At each meeting, which was well attended, the speakers were Messrs. T. J. Stinson (chairman), L. Lawrence (secretary), J. H. Wright (originator) and Councillor T. Rogers, JP, all of the Propaganda Committee.

At the BRITANNIA there was a decided feeling to ear-mark all subscriptions for the Guest Hospital – which each house has a perfect right to do. Mr. Webb, a three weeks' inmate of the Guest Hospital, made a good plea for it, based on the excellent treatment he had received there. So did Mr. John Godfrey, basing his observations on the fact that the hospital was 'our own' and deserved support. Eventually Mr. Godfrey and Mr. J. Workman were appointed to represent the house on the committee.

At the MINERS ARMS Messrs. W. Richards and Arthur Jones were appointed as delegates, Mr. Hall (the acting landlord) warmly supporting and promising assistance to the movement on the ground that the Guest Hospital was the 'only institution the workers could call their own.' The landlord (Mr. Cheall) also promised every assistance.

At both houses the propagandists were warmly thanked, the spokesman at the BRITANNIA saying the company felt a bit aggrieved that though boxes had been sent to other houses near, they had not had a look in. This it was explained was due to no fault on the part of the committee, the intention being to take every house in its turn. Judging from what was done at both meetings, and the enthusiasm displayed, the hospitals have got another couple of bands of men who are determined not to be left."

"The annual Licensing Sessions for the Rowley Regis Petty Sessional Division were held on Wednesday..... Mr. Thompson (Dudley) applied for the sanction of the Bench to plans for alterations at the BRITANNIA INN, Tividale. The application was refused."

"The Adjourned Licensing Sessions for the Old Hill Petty Session Division was held at the Police Court on March 5.....

Objection was raised by the police to the renewal of the license of the BRITANNIA INN, Dudley Road, Tividale, kept by Samuel Baker and belonging to the Dudley and Wolverhampton Breweries Company, on the ground of redundancy.

PS Sharratt stated that the weekly sale at the house was about 2 barrels of beer. The structural condition of the house was bad. Within a distance of 500 yards there were six fully licensed houses and three beerhouses (on).

Mr. W. H. Thompson (Dudley), appearing for the licensee and the owners, said he did not accept the statement with reference to the weekly sales as he had no information upon that point. He offered no objection to the license going for compensation, but asked for the renewal of it.....

The Bench retired and after deliberating in private for some time, the Chairman said that the four houses of which the Bench had taken details would be scheduled for compensation at Stafford."

Union Street. From the evidence adduced it appeared that on the Thursday previous a man named Matthew Sillitoe was leading a horse attached to a cart, containing about a ton of coals, along Union Street, when the child dropped a stick which it had in its hand in the horse road, and stooping to pick up the same, failed to do so before one of the wheels passed over its neck. The poor little sufferer was at once removed to its home, Dr. Dempsey, of Church Square, was immediately sent for. The child died, however, in the course of an hour.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

"The Oldbury Angling Association held their first annual dinner on Wednesday evening last, at their clubhouse, the BRITISH LION INN, Talbot Street. The members turned up in full force, and a very pleasant evening was passed. Councillor Hollyhead, the president of the society, occupied the chair, and did his best to put the members on good terms with themselves."

Sports Argus 14/1/1961

“In a fast car along clear dark roads at barely cock crow, I can be at the riverside in Oxfordshire, 70 miles from home in less than two hours. That’s the angler of the sixties. But for the enthusiast of 1900 it was a different kettle of fish. With home-made tackle and not much money jingling in their pockets, they walked to their venues, even if it took all day. And the anglers in the picture did walk all day. They were members of the Oldbury Piscatorials, and their journey took them to Pershore, Worcestershire, a 35-mile trudge. They set out on Saturday morning and came home on Sunday after sleeping the night on the river’s banks. Their rods, horse-hair lines, hooks and bait (chewed bread) they made themselves, but they were wonderfully skilful anglers.

George Richards, secretary of the Black Country’s Provincial A. A., was a pupil of Joe Parkes, fourth from the right on the back row. ‘Joe was the finest angler I have ever known,’ says George, and he has seen most of today’s top-notchers.

Fifth from the left on the front row is ‘Pop’ Hadley, whose daughter unearthed the picture. ‘Pop’ kept the BRITISH LION, Oldbury, which the Piscatorials used as their HQ. But even in 1900 the club was well-established. Their annual cup, still sparkling like new, is dated 1880. Earliest reference to the club is 1860. I wonder if the youngster in the front row is still alive. I would be interested to hear from him – and anyone who can help write another page in Oldbury’s lively angling history.

Up-to-Date Footnote: With only 25 members these days, the club had both the men’s and women’s winner – Harry Wormington and Beryl Wood – in this season’s giant B. A. A. annual contest.”

“Supposed Death from Starvation at Oldbury.

An inquest was held yesterday, at the BRITISH QUEEN INN, Oldbury, before Mr. R. Docker, coroner, touching the death of William Robert Reed, the illegitimate child of Sarah Reed, a domestic servant, residing in Fraser Street.

Jemima Thomas said that Sarah Reed, mother of the infant, had been residing until lately at Dr. King's, Smethwick. Reed was confined on the 30th of August. She saw the child on the 9th ult, and it then appeared to be in a healthy condition. She was afterwards informed that the child was dying, and went to see it. She found the child dirty, and looking as though it had not enough to eat. It continued to waste away until it died. Witness, in reply to the Coroner, said she believed the child was ‘clammed’ to death. Witness said the mother of the child was dependent on her brother for support, both for herself and the child. She could not say that Reed showed any affection for the child, but she never heard her express any wish to get rid of it. Mary Ann Lowe, midwife, stated that the child when born was healthy. She heard afterwards that it had wasted away, and that medicine had been obtained for it.

William Henry Hayward, surgeon, said he saw the deceased on the 2nd inst. The child seemed to be several weeks old. It was extremely emaciated, and he considered it a clear case of starvation. The child weighed only 4lbs, and measured but eighteen inches. A child five weeks old should weigh from 15lbs to 20lbs. The Coroner remarked that the case involved was a very serious charge against the persons who had had the care of the child, and the result would depend very much upon the medical evidence. He suggested that additional medical testimony should be obtained. The enquiry was then adjourned.”

Birmingham Daily Post 11/10/1879

“At a special Petty Sessions, held yesterday, before Mr. H. Chance, Sarah Reed (20), domestic servant, residing in Fraser Street, was brought up in custody, charged with having caused the death of William Robert Reed, aged five weeks, her illegitimate child.

William Henry Hayward, surgeon, deposed that, having made a post mortem examination of the body, he was of opinion that the child died from starvation and want of proper attention.

The prisoner was remanded.”

Birmingham Daily Post 15/10/1879

“Yesterday the adjourned enquiry was resumed before Mr. R. Docker, at the BRITISH QUEEN, touching the death of William Robert Reed, an infant five weeks old, the illegitimate child of Sarah Reed, a domestic servant. At the former inquest Mr. Hayward, surgeon, stated that he considered it a clear case of starvation, and an adjournment took place, in order that additional medical evidence might be obtained with regard to the cause of the child's death

Mr. Jackson, surgeon, of Smethwick, now stated that, with one or two slight exceptions, he concurred with the evidence of Mr. Hayward. He was of opinion that the child's death was caused by insufficient or improper food.

The jury found that the child's death was caused by neglect, which, in their opinion, arose from inexperience rather than from any criminal intention."

Birmingham Daily Post 22/10/1888

"An inquest was held on Saturday, before Mr. Ralph Docker, coroner, at the BRITISH QUEEN INN, Birmingham Road, Oldbury, touching the death of Benjamin Rushton (25), of Rood End Road, glass-grinder, who died on the 18th inst.

The wife of deceased stated that her husband had complained of pains in his head since the 22nd of May last. About that time deceased and his brother quarrelled and fought in the garden. She did not see what took place during the quarrel. On the day following the fight deceased went to his work, but was compelled to return home, and had complained of being ill since. He consulted two doctors, and also visited a hospital. Sarah Lapworth said that on a day about the middle of May she saw deceased and his brother quarrelling in the garden. Deceased struck his brother twice, and the latter retaliated by striking deceased on the face. In reply to questions witness said that deceased did not fall down; but it was stated that the witness had, on the previous day, told Police-constable Bull that the deceased did fall down from the blow. Witness, continuing, said it was more like a scuffle than a fight which took place between the two brothers.

Dr. Pitt said deceased came to him about the middle of May, and complained of pains in the head. Deceased did not say anything to witness about the fight. There were no external marks of injury upon deceased's head. Witness had treated deceased occasionally from that date up to the time of his death. Last Wednesday he was called to see the deceased, when he found him in a stupefied condition, and he died on the 18th inst. Death was caused by congestion of the brain, but he could not say what had produced it without a post mortem examination.

It was further stated in evidence that deceased made nor complaint that his brother had injured him, and on the other hand it was admitted that he was in good health previous to the fight.

The jury returned a verdict to the effect that deceased died from congestion of the brain, but there was no evidence to show how it was brought about."

Birmingham Daily Post 23/10/1889

"Mr. Docker held an inquest at the BRITISH QUEEN INN, Birmingham Road, touching the death of a female child, the daughter of Mary Ann and Thomas Jelley, who died on the 21st October. From the evidence it appeared that the child died on the way to Dr. Pitt's surgery. The jury returned a verdict of Death from Natural Causes."

“Big Pete Hulse received close backing from other regulars as he cued off at the start of a 12-hour indoor sports marathon at an Oldbury public house which raised £1,000 for a children’s charity. Regulars at the BRITISH QUEEN in Birmingham Road, Oldbury, raised the cash for MASCOT (Make A Sick Child’s Dream Come True), the charity which provides trips to such places as Disneyland for seriously ill youngsters. They spent 12 hours playing each other at pool, darts, dominoes and other sports at 50p a time and ended the effort with a disco.

Licensee Miss Jackie Meades said the pub was also sponsored in its efforts and had a collection bottle. She said, ‘The people are very generous and recognise this as a worthwhile charity. We raised just under £900 for MASCOT last year but this time the final proceeds will be about £1,000.’”

It was renamed HILLBILLIES in 1995.

A breach of a noise abatement notice was served on 5th August 2002.

“Police officers tasered a berserk drunk father in Oldbury to calm him down after he had armed himself with a pool cue when an argument broke out over pictures taken on a mobile telephone. The disorder spilled into the street outside the BRITISH QUEEN, Birmingham Road ordered to carry out 140 hours unpaid work in the community and to pay £300 costs.”

Express & Star 31/7/2018

“Bottoms up! The winner of the Express & Star’s most popular pub of the year for Sandwell has been announced. The BRITISH QUEEN, Birmingham Road, Oldbury, won the award after fierce competition. Sukhdev Singh Sidhu, who has owned the pub for 13 years, said it was wonderful to win the title. He said, ‘It was amazing. Last week someone mentioned that we’re on the top so it was amazing. We’re very grateful for the customers for choosing us and we’re thankful for them. It will be good to get more business and we’ll try our best to give customers what they require as we’re already doing.

Mr. Sidhu, who previously ran a wholesale milk business from 1990 to 2012, purchased the BRITISH QUEEN pub in 2005. He said, ‘Someone bought it in 2004 and he ran it for five or six months, then I bought it. It was only a small business so I ended up abiding my time, spending a lot of money on refurbbishments and the beer garden to build it up and slowly it comes to this.' He added, 'You have to do the hard work. All the staff and myself, we try to do hard work to keep our customers and give them what they require so that we do our best.'"

“At the Police Court, yesterday, Emma Hale (35), wife of James Hale, landlord of the BROOK TAVERN, Stone Street, Oldbury, was charged with being drunk on licensed premises, on the 2nd inst. Police-constable Rivers stated that at 10.30pm on the day named he visited the BROOK TAVERN, in company with Police-constable Bayliss, and found the defendant very drunk in the bar. Defendant, who pleaded guilty, was fined 10s and costs, or fourteen days.”

Thomas Carr, beer retailer, Stone Street. [1888]

Birmingham Daily Post 12/10/1888

“Last night a meeting of miners was held at the BROOK TAVERN, Stoner Street, Oldbury, for the purpose of considering the wages question. A Miner, who presided, remarked that he hoped the miners individually would do their best to advance the wages. Trade was now reviving, and he considered it was the proper time for them to receive increased remuneration for their labour. The opinion which prevailed was that they were going to block trade by the action they were about to take. It was high time that they were up and doing.

Mr. H. Rust said that ever since June, 1884, there had been no arrangements whatever between masters and men to regulate wages. Since that time miners had suffered severely from low wages. During the last few months the officials of the district had been anxious that some arrangement should be made between employers and employed to regulate wages. It was generally thought that miners' agents were in favour of strikes and lock-outs, because it was stated that the representatives received better wages. He considered the public would be convinced that this was not the case, because if strikes were favourable to them, the agents would not endeavor to prevent them. The Oldbury miners had failed to support the representatives of the men who attended the conferences, as miners of other districts had. He hoped that the Oldbury men would place their agents upon the same footing as their colleagues. In that district the employers had been endeavouring to take away their perquisites and fire coal.

The Wages Board would be the means of protecting their rights. He contended that the Board would not prove any benefit to the miners without they united. If the miners had been united he was convinced that their wages would have been 10 per cent more than they were at the present day. If the miners of that town did not support him better in his actions he should refrain from representing them upon the Board. The low wages that colliers were receiving were due to the action of the men and not their representatives. The miners of that district had been placed in an awkward position by the action of the Cannock miners.

It was stated that at some of Lord Dudley's collieries the men had agreed to defer the notice for fourteen days.

Resolutions were carried in favour of two accountants being appointed to examine the employers' books, also approving of a Wages Board being formed, and adhering to the notice.

A vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the meeting."

Birmingham Daily Post 25/4/1890

"Last night a well-attended meeting of miners was held at the BROOK TAVERN, Stone Street, Oldbury. Mr. H. Rust (vice-president of the Coal Trade Wages Board) and Mr. H. Barnes (secretary) addressed the meeting, pointing out the advantages of the Wages Board. Resolutions were unanimously passed to the effect that the miners present, seeing what the Wages Board had done for them, pledged themselves to stand by the Board and the officials; also repudiating the assertions being made by the agents of other districts that their officials had formed the Wages Board, and expressing confidence in their representatives, and also recommending all miners to join the association."

Birmingham Daily Post 1/11/1890

"Last night a meeting of miners was held at the BROOK TAVERN, Oldbury. Mr. H. Rust said the West Bromwich district had always been ready to assist or relieve the miners in other localities when in need, and yet after having done so other districts had now turned round upon them, and the leaders of the men were saying all they could detrimental to that district. The threat of another union to spend £100 to smash up the wages board was being carried out, and they were sending men into that district to poison the minds of the miners against the wages board, but he was glad to say that the men were paying no attention to them. The miners connected with the board had received an advance of 40 per cent, whilst one district under the federation had only received 22½ per cent.

Mr. A. Ramsell also addressed the meeting, and resolutions were passed in favour of an eight-hours bill and the continuance of the present wages board."

“On Saturday night a meeting of miners belonging to the West Bromwich and District Miners’ Association was held at the BROOK TAVERN, Oldbury, for the purpose of considering the proposed disposal of the Pel-sall Inundation Fund. A resolution was passed in favour of the Court of Chancery making an order for the money to be handed over to the South Staffordshire Mining Accident Fund.”

Birmingham Daily Post 12/10/1891

“On Saturday night the annual meeting of the Oldbury branch of the West Bromwich and Oldbury Miners Union was held at the BROOK TAVERN, Stone Street, Oldbury; Mr. John Richards (chairman of the district) presiding. Mr. H. Rust (agent) spoke on the growth of unionism in the West Bromwich and Oldbury district, and also of the increase in its influence in settling disputes with the employers.

A workman referred to the strike at Messrs. Chance Bothers’ Glass Works at Spon Lane, and urged that the association should help the glassmakers in their struggle, as it was a blow aimed at trades unionism. (Hear, hear.) The Chairman remarked that the association had already rendered the glassmakers assistance, £15 having been sent by them in aid of the strike fund. (Applause.)”

The license renewal was referred to the Compensation Authority on 21st February 1905.
It was refused by the Compensation Authority on 24th June 1905.

Birmingham Mail 24/6/1905

“The adjourned meeting of the Worcester County Licensing Committee was held today at the Shirehall, Mr. Willis Bund presiding, for the consideration of licenses of houses in Oldbury which had been reported by the local justices as not being necessary for the requirements of the district.....

The next house taken was the BROOK TAVERN, Stone Street, Mr. Jeffries appearing for the parties concerned, and saying that the license had been in existence 70 years.....

After deliberating half an hour, the justices decided that all the houses brought before them were unnecessary, but not being certain how far compensation money would suffice to meet the claims to be paid, drew up an order of precedence in which houses are to be dealt with, houses not paid for keeping open provisionally till they are dealt with.”

Smethwick Telephone 1/7/1905

“The adjourned principal meeting of the Licensing Committee for the County of Worcester was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, on Saturday, Mr. J. Willis Bund presiding. The sixteen houses reported by the Old-

bury Justices were considered, and the committee ultimately decided that all the licenses were unnecessary. As they were not aware how far the compensation money would go, the committee arranged the houses in order, and as many of the licenses as possible will be done away with. The order is as follows.....

11. BROOK TAVERN, Stone Street.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 10/8/1905

“The Worcestershire Licensing Committee having decided to refuse fifteen Oldbury licenses, as the amount of the compensation fund available allows, sat yesterday at the Shire Hall, Worcester, to decide who are the persons entitled to compensation.....

BROOK TAVERN, William Charles Adams (licensee and registered owner). The claim of Messrs. Holder Ltd, in respect of a tie for beer, and first option of purchase, acquired from the City Brewery Company, in liquidation, was adjourned to the next court.”

Birmingham Mail 22/12/1905

“An important memorandum has been issued by the inland revenue commissioners affecting the basis of compensation for licensed houses which have been compulsorily closed. It will be remembered that fifteen such houses were refused the renewal of licenses at Oldbury, and the question of compensation was argued by counsel before the Worcestershire Licensing Committee a few weeks ago. That committee intimated that the rent was the basis upon which the compensation should be assessed, but counsel urged that this was preposterous. The claimants preferred to leave the matter to the decision of the inland revenue commissioners. The latter have sent a letter to the committee, upholding its view that the rent should be the basis, allowing nothing for the trade done on the premises or to the brewers for tied houses. The Commissioners say that the computation of the sum to be paid in any case requires the determination of three factors, namely, the value of the licensed premises, the depreciation in value of the trade fixtures, and the value of the premises without the license. They have, as a rule, capitalised the annual value of the licensed premises upon the four per cent basis, or at twenty-five years’ purchase, and only exceeded this in cases where there was a distinct prospect of improved annual value, and only fallen below it where there was evidence to suggest that the present value could not be maintained in future. They have employed surveyors of taxes to take estimates of the probable annual value of premises when deprived of their licenses, and of the probable number of years’ purchase of such annual value that premises would fetch, an allowance being made for the cost of the alterations necessary to fit the premises for earning the annual value as estimated. Accordingly, although exact figures have not yet been received, the amounts payable for the Oldbury houses above referred to may be given approximately as follows.....

BROOK TAVERN, £175.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 6/3/1906

“A meeting of the Worcester Licensing Committee was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, yesterday, to consider the awards made by the Commissioner of Inland Revenue, determining the amounts to be paid as compensation to owners, holders, or others interested in the non-renewal of licenses in the Oldbury division..... The licenses refused and the amount of compensation awarded in each case was as follows.....

BROOK TAVERN, Stone Street, £335.

The committee made awards as follows.....

BROOK TAVERN, Stone Street, £203 to the licensee and registered owner, William Charles Adams, and £130 to the lessees, Holder’s Brewery.

Payment of the compensation money was fixed to take place on March 28.”

The license was extinguished on 4th April 1906.

“Freehold Public House and Property, in Oldbury.

To be Sold by Auction, by Septimus Davis, at the TALBOT INN, in Oldbury, in the county of Salop, on Tuesday the 18th day of June inst, at six o'clock in the evening.....

Lot IV. A large, commodious, and substantial newly-built Public House, known as the BROWN LION INN, now in the occupation of Mr. Cheshire, the proprietor, having extensive frontages to the Dudley and Birmingham Turnpike Road and the Street leading to the Flash, with the Butcher's Shop, Brewhouse, Stable, Piggery, and other conveniences, containing, with the site of the Buildings, 566 square yards.

The House is extensive and well-arranged for carrying on the Innkeeping Business, either with or without a retail trade, having a large and convenient corner Shop fronting the road and street. The House also comprises a large and lofty club-room, eight sleeping rooms, commodious bar, parlour, tap-room, kitchen, larder, and five cellars; and the yard, which is inclosed and spacious, contains a large soft water cistern and pump of excellent water.

The whole of these Premises, which have been recently erected regardless of expense, are in thorough repair, and immediate possession may be had.”

[This advert reappeared in the paper on 27/10/1845.]

“BROWN LION INN, Oldbury, Salop.

To be Disposed Of by private Contract, the Licenses, Goodwill, and immediate Possession of the above old-established Public House, in consequence of the Proprietor having other engagements.

The above House is substantially-built, with every convenience for a Commercial Inn, and from its commanding situation, cannot fail to ensure a valuable opportunity to any industrious couple wishing to embark in the above business. The House will be let either with or without a Butcher's Shop adjoining the Bar.

The Stock and Fixtures to be taken at a valuation. Rent and payments moderate.

For further particulars and to treat apply to Mr. Cheshire upon the premises, or to S. Bradbury, Auctioneer, West Bromwich.”

John Cheshire was also a butcher. [1845]

Worcester Journal 7/5/1846

“Between two and three o'clock on Wednesday morning last, the house of Mr. Yates, the BROWN LION INN, Oldbury Green, was forcibly entered, and a box containing money belonging to the Miners' Lodge, carried off, as also a desk belonging to the Tradesman's Lodge. The fellows, however, appear to have been disturbed after carrying off the booty, as on search being made in the course of the morning, the box was discovered in an adjoining field, with the lid broken open, but most fortunately the money was not discovered, as it had been deposited for greater safety in a secret drawer. A reward of £10 has been offered for the apprehension of the thieves.”

Birmingham Journal 18/7/1846

“The anniversary of the Pillar of Hope Lodge, O.F.W.U., was held at Host Yates’s BROWN LION, Oldbury, on Monday last, when about sixty members and friends sat down to dinner. After the cloth was drawn, the chair was taken by P. G. Gibbs and the vice-chair by N. G. Powell. The surgeon of the lodge, Mr. T. R. Cooper, visited the meeting in the afternoon, and at the request of the members, addressed them at some length on the relative and general advantages of Odd Fellowship, seriously impressing upon them the necessity of strict adherence to the principles laid down for their guidance, and the obligation each and all were under in endeavouring, by every just means in their power, to carry the same into effect, and by so doing, show the world its results, and thus gain its approbation and support. The health of the host and family was then given by the chairman, who expressed the satisfaction of the meeting for the really sumptuous dinner that had been provided. The host acknowledged the compliment in suitable and feeling terms. The members shortly after separated, much pleased with the entertainment of the evening.”

Birmingham Journal 31/10/1846

“On Saturday last, an inquest was held at the house of Mr. Yates, the BROWN LION INN, Oldbury, before G. Hinchliffe, Esq, on the body of a man, named David Hughes, a miner, aged thirty, who was killed while blasting in an ironstone pit belonging to Messrs. Peacock and Whitehouse, near Oldbury. It appeared from the evidence of John Boden, who worked in the same pit, and was only a few yards distant from the deceased at the time of the occurrence, that Hughes was engaged between one and two o’clock on Wednesday in preparing for a blast, when by some accident the charge exploded before the time expected, driving a piece of rock against his side, which inflicted such severe injuries that the poor fellow died on the following Friday. As the accident was the result of want of caution on the part of the unfortunate man, a verdict of Accidental Death was returned.”

London Gazette 3/8/1855

“Whereas a Petition of Samuel Bullock, now and since the 21st day of April, 1855, residing in Brick-house-lane, in the parish of West Bromwich, in the county of Stafford, Journeyman Carpenter, and for four years and nine months previously residing in Birmingham-street, Oldbury, in the county of Worcester, carrying on business as a Licensed Victualler, an insolvent debtor, having been filed in the County Court of Staffordshire, at the Court House, Oldbury, and an interim order for protection from process having been given to the said Samuel Bullock, under the provisions of the Statutes in that case made and provided, the said Samuel Bullock is hereby required to appear before the said Court, on the 18th of August instant, at nine in the forenoon precisely, for his first examination touching his debts, estate, and effects, and to be further dealt with according to the provisions of the said Statutes; and the choice of the creditors’ assignees is to take place at the time so appointed. All persons indebted to the said Samuel Bullock, or that have any of his effects, are not to pay or deliver the same but to Mr. Joseph Heapy Watson, Clerk of the said Court, at his office, at the Court House, Oldbury, the Official Assignee of the estate and effects of the said insolvent.”

Birmingham Journal 22/8/1855

“On Saturday last the following insolvency cases were disposed of at the Oldbury County Court.
Samuel Bullock, now residing at Hill Top, West Bromwich, a carpenter, and formerly a publican, at the BROWN LION, Oldbury, passed his first examination, supported by Mr. Watson, and opposed by Mr. Sill. The opposition was reserved.”

“Worcestershire Midsummer Sessions.....

Jane Parkes, 38, tailoress, Sarah Jane Parkes, 13, tailoress, Mary Ann Hodgetts, 39, dressmaker, and Eliza Hunt, 39, brickmaker, were indicted for uttering counterfeit coin at Oldbury on the 11th ult. Mr. Streeten prosecuted, and Mr. Richards defended the prisoner Hodgetts.

Mary Ann Basford, wife of the keeper of the BLACK BOY beershop, Oldbury, stated that on the 11th ult, about eight o’clock in the evening, the four prisoners came to her house; Jane Parkes had a pint of ale; Hodgetts and Hunt left about ten minutes afterwards; one of them said they should not be long before they came back. Jane Parkes stayed till after eleven o’clock. Sarah Jane Parkes left the house several times during the evening; on two occasions of her return bringing with her some cakes and flowers; she gave some coppers to Jane Parkes, who put them into her basket. During the evening the latter asked witness to give her three half-crowns for some small change, which she did. Hodgetts and Hunt were strangers, but the Parkeses were known to witness. Hodgetts and Hunt were not in the house during any of the transactions stated.

Mary Deakin was at her daughter’s shop at Oldbury, on the 11th ult, when Sarah Jane Parkes came in and asked for a pennyworth of cakes, tendering a shilling in payment. Witness gave her the change, but before witness could pick up the shilling Parkes decamped, and the shilling was given to PC Simmonds on the following morning, as counterfeit.

On the evening in question the prisoners Hodgetts and Hunt went to another house, the BROWN LION, Oldbury; there was a third person with them, whom the landlady, Sophia Portman, could not identify. In payment for some port and sherry a shilling was tendered, change being given in coppers. The shilling was on the following morning found to be counterfeit, and given to PC Simmonds.

John Smith, landlord of the CROWN AND ANCHOR, Oldbury, stated that on the night of the 11th, the prisoners Hodgetts and Hunt went to his house, and in payment for some sherry, Hunt tendered a shilling, which witness returned to her as bad. She then went to Hodgetts, returned, and gave witness half-a-crown. Witness afterwards went to the PARROT ARMS, and there saw Hodgetts and Hunt, whom he asked if they knew him. They replied ‘Yes.’ On asking them if they recollected trying to pass a bad shilling at his house, Hunt said she did not know it was bad. Witness gave the change for the half-a-crown to Hunt, who he believed passed it to Hodgetts.

At the PARROT ARMS the prisoners had two glasses of sherry, a shilling being tendered in payment by Hunt. Fanny Proctor, waitress, gave the shilling to the landlord.

Sarah Jane Parkes went to the shop of Reuben Green, and in payment for some cakes produced a shilling. Green told her it was bad, when she said she had it from her mother’s. It was returned to her. In consequence of what he had heard, Green went to the BLACK BOY, where he saw the prisoner Parkes.

Daniel Darby, a constable, was at the PARROT ARMS, about half-past ten at night, when the prisoners came in. A person also came in and said the prisoners had been passing a bad shilling at John Smith’s. The landlord then produced the shilling he had taken from them, and it was found to be counterfeit. Witness then asked them how many more they had like that; they said none – they did not know it was bad. On asking them if they had been at Smith’s, they said they had not, but on Smith being sent for they admitted being at his house. Darby received the shilling, and thereupon took the prisoners into custody.

PC Simmonds went to the BLACK BOY and found the prisoners Parkes there. He charged them with passing counterfeit coin. He said he should search them and told them to get up. When Sarah Jane Parkes got up and walked across the kitchen a handkerchief was dropped, which on being picked up was found to contain nine bad shillings and a crown-piece. Jane Parkes gave Tilsley a small bag containing 11d. Moved her on one side and found in her hand a purse, containing three bad shillings and five good sixpences. There was a basket on the screen, which prisoner said at first was not hers, but subsequently said it was her daughter’s (Sarah Jane Parkes). Took them to the station house and there Sarah Jane Parkes said she picked the handkerchief up in a field at Rowley. Hodgetts said that Parkes lodged with her. While in the station Jane Parkes said she came from Dudley, and that Hodgetts gave her the purse to hold for a little while.

Mr. J. M. Skarratt proved the money passed and found in the possession of the prisoners to be counterfeit. Jane Parkes's statement taken before the Magistrates was read, which was to the effect that she received the purse and its contents from her daughter. The statement of the latter was that she picked the handkerchief up in a field, but did not let her mother know anything about it.

A victualler, named Harper, of Dudley, spoke to the excellent character of Hodgetts, whom he had known for 20 years, and she had worked for his family ten years. Hunt also produced two letters as to her character. The chairman minutely summed up the evidence, and the jury found all the prisoners guilty, but recommended Hodgetts and Hunt to mercy on account of their previous good character.

Hodgetts was sentenced to nine calendar months, Jane Parkes to twelve months, Sarah Jane Parkes to twelve months, and Hunt twelve months' imprisonment, with hard labour, each."

"Michael Gallighie, William Gallighie, Thomas McGuire, and Patrick McQueeney were charged with refusing to quit the BROWN LION INN, Birmingham Road, and also with assaulting Collin Bell, the manager. Mr. Shakespeare defended.

Prosecutor said at 10.15pm on the 21st ult, the defendants went into the house, and, as they seemed drunk, his wife refused to serve them with ale. McGuire caught hold of witness round the neck, and struck him on the head, and the others also struck him.

PC Nash said he went to the BROWN LION on the night in question. There was a disturbance between the Gallighie's and McGuire. In answer to the Bench, witness said he did not see McQueeney there. He saw McGuire strike the landlord. Cross-examined: The landlord had got hold of McGuire very near the throat. He struck the landlord on the breast. He did not see the other defendants strike prosecutor, and they left the house when they were asked.

PC Sanders corroborated the evidence of the last witness.

Mr. Shakespeare, for the defence, commented upon the contradictory evidence.

John McQueeney was called, and stated that Patrick McQueeney was not at the house at the time, and the summons against him was dismissed.

The others were each fined 2s 6d and costs, or seven days. The charge of refusing to quit was dismissed.”

“Joseph Foley, carpenter, Old Hill, was charged with attempting to pass a bad florin at Oldbury, on the previous day.

Defendant went to the STORES, Birmingham Street, kept by Charles Roberts, and offered the coin in payment for some liquor. It turned out, however, that defendant had been down to the BROWN LION INN, and changed half a sovereign, and received the bad coin amongst his change.

As it was thus shown that the defendant was not aware the florin was a counterfeit one, the case was dismissed.”

At the Wolverhampton County Court, yesterday, Joseph Holberry, manager of the WATERLOO INN, Brook Street, Bilston, came up before Mr. Registrar Sanders for his examination. The debtor's statement of affairs showed his liabilities to be £278, and his assets nil. He was formerly a journeyman toolmaker, but in September 1882, went into business on his own account at the BROWN LION INN, Birmingham Street, Oldbury. This business he carried on until May, 1885, when he found that owing to bad debts, bad trade, and other circumstances he could not make it pay. Since then he had been waiting for an improvement in trade, when he hoped to pay off his debts. The debtor was allowed to pass his examination.”

“At the West Bromwich Police Court today, before the Hon. A. C. G. Chapman and Messrs. M. Ellis, and W. M. Warden, William Gorton (68), New Street, Hill Top, miner, was charged with obtaining 3s by fraud on the 20th ult, belonging to Seymour Mole, funeral undertaker, residing at Spon Lane.

Prosecutor stated that on the above date a servant from the FLOWER POT INN came to his house and said that a man who was in the above public house wished to see him. He went across and found the prisoner, who, after representing to him that his mother was dead, and that he should require him to provide the funeral, said that he was landlord of the BROWN LION INN, Oldbury. He then asked him to lend him 3s, and he (witness), on the strength of the order, did so. Prisoner further told him if he would fall at the DART-MOUTH HOTEL in about three-quarters of an hour he would drive him over to Oldbury to make a measurement for the coffin for his deceased parent. He did so, but found that nothing had been heard of prisoner. Witness, pointing to the prisoner, said, ‘He was dressed more respectably when I lent him the money, or else I should not have done so,’

Police-superintendent Whitehurst said that prisoner was ‘wanted’ in October last, but was unable to undergo his trial on account of being in a hospital through sickness.

Prisoner was sentenced to three months’ hard labour.”

“On Wednesday evening the annual dinner of Oldbury Cricket Club took place at the BROWN LION INN, Oldbury. Mr. George White (the host) catered in excellent style. There were a good number of members and friends present. After the removal of the cloths, Mr. H. Pugh occupied the chair, and Mr. G. Jerrams the vice-chair. The speeches and toast of the evening were interspersed with songs and pianoforte solos, &c. The Chairman, on rising, said that the chief business of the meeting was to arrange for the better carrying on of the Oldbury Town Cricket Club than it had been the last few seasons. The numerous company present, which was far in excess of any previous occasion, so far as he could remember, gave indication of a successful future. Last season the club had some very discouraging circumstances to face, which, no doubt, caused a little laxity amongst some of the players, who had not done so well as they might have done. One of these items was a debt, which happily they had overcome. He would call on the Secretary, Mr. Gough, to read out the averages. These, Mr. Gough said, were very hastily prepared, and must be taken as the best he could provide in the short space of time allotted to him, for it had been the intention of the club to give prizes this year. Mr. G. White had given a very good bat for the best batting average, and other prizes followed.....”

“A numerous-attended meeting of railway men was held at the BROWN LION INN, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, on Sunday night, for the purpose of electing officers in connection with the local branch of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants. Mr. S. Allen presided.

Mr. R. H. Webb (Stourbridge), in urging the claims of the society upon all railway servants, mentioned that £2,500 was paid yearly out of the funds to orphans of men who had been killed on railways, and also pointed out that £13,057 had been paid to men out of employment. Railway men were much liable to sickness and premature death than any other body of working men, and those were facts which would show them the necessity of making provision for such contingencies. Speaking of the number of hours railway men were employed, he said they knew it was not possible to fix a uniform number of hours for all the men. They never thought of such a thing; but what they asked was that there should be a limit to the maximum number of hours which any man should be required to work each day. He urged the men of Oldbury and surrounding districts to combine and support the national programme of the society. (Hear, hear.) The following officers were elected: Chairman of the branch, Mr. F. Towle; vice-chairman, Mr. J. Ingram; secretary, Mr. J. Cook; treasurer, Mr. J. Rowlands. A large number of members were enrolled.”

“On Tuesday night the annual meeting of the Oldbury Town Football Club was held at the BROWN LION INN, Birmingham Street, Oldbury. Mr. D. Corbett presided.....”

Birmingham Daily Post 9/10/1895

“At Oldbury Police Court, yesterday, Mark Gibbs, landlord of the BROWN LION INN, Birmingham Street, was charged with permitting betting upon his premises on the 21st, 25th and 27th of September.

Mr. Waldron, for the prosecution, said it seemed to him very clear that for a long period betting had been persistently carried on by defendant upon his own premises, and there was no doubt that he was a bookmaker in a rather extensive way. Complaints had been made to the police that bookmaking and betting were going on at defendant’s house. Police-constable Brunton, Selly Oak, and Police-constable Standford, Kings Heath, visited the defendant’s house about one pm on the 21st ult. They went into the front vaults, and there noticed a number of men betting with defendant, his son, and his daughter. They afterwards saw a man, who gave the name of Harrold, receive 6s from the landlord in respect of a bet. Brunton and Stanford backed horses, the former having 1s on Landmark, and the latter laying a similar amount on Sweet Auburn. Brunton won, and received 5s 1d. On the other dates things happened somewhat similar.

Police-constable Brunton said that on the 27th ult he saw defendant pay a customer £2 6s 4d.

Mr. J. S. Sharpe pleaded guilty on behalf of the defendant. There seemed, he said, no redeeming feature in the case excepting that the betting was carried on in a thoroughly business-like way.

Superintendent Chare said that he had twice previously cautioned defendant.

Mr. Heaton said the case was a very bad one. Defendant in the first case would be fined £10 and costs, and in the other two cases would have to pay the costs, which altogether amounted to £14 4s. The license of the house would also be endorsed.”

Mark Gibbs was also a brewer. [1896]

Mark Gibbs was fined 10s and 36s costs, on 8th September 1896, for permitting drunkenness.

Mr. Hugo Young and Mr. Harrington (instructed by Messrs. Wright and Holland, Oldbury) appeared for the appellant, and Mr. Vachell and the Hon. Reginald Coventry (instructed by Messrs., Hemingway, Bewdley) for the respondents.

The case for the respondents, Mr. Vachell explained, was that on September 1st, Oldbury Wake day, PS Male and PC Baylis, about five o'clock in the afternoon, visited the BROWN LION INN, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, kept by appellant. A number of men were there, and one of them, afterwards ascertained to be Luke Boyle, was sitting at a table where he could be seen by the landlord and members of his family – a daughter, a son-in-law, and two sons – who were assisting him. He had a glass and jug partly filled with beer in front of him, and was very drunk. On attention being called to the man, the landlord and his son, Alfred went to him, removed the jug and glass, and assisted him to his feet. The son at the time remarked, ‘He has been ordered to go five or six times.’ The man Boyle was locked up and convicted the next day.

PS Male, in cross-examination, said September 1st was Oldbury Wake and there was an important football match, the BROWN LION INN being the head-quarters of the local team. There were about 30 men in the bar. Boyle was sitting in a corner formed by a screen. He did not know that the man who said Boyle had been requested to leave was Alfred Gibbs, until PC Baylis told him. He picked out Alfred from the four sons of Gibbs who were in the Court.

PC Baylis corroborated.

Mr. Young, for the defence, contended that the landlord and his assistants were very busy. There were a large number of people in the bar and Boyle was sitting in a corner where he was not very noticeable. It was not seen that he was drunk. He contended a mistake had been made by the police as to the person who said Boyle had been ordered out. It was not said by Alfred, who was not assisting in the house that day, but a man named Shuard, who said that thinking to shield the landlord, although it was not true. The landlord had ordered other people away.

The landlord was called to bear out the statement. The man was not drunk, but had had some beer.

In cross-examination appellant admitted that he had been three time convicted of offences against the licensing laws.

A number of other witnesses were called to state that Boyle was not drunk, and that he was not served with drink. Boyle himself said he was only in the house ten minutes, and no drink was served to him; as he was drinking from the jug of another man. He had had a drop, but was not drunk. He pleaded guilty before the magistrates. Another witness said it was he, and not one of the Gibbs family that said he had told the man Boyle to go. He said it for a joke. It was not true. Alfred Gibbs in cross-examination denied saying that Boyle was ordered out several times.

The Chairman said the Bench were unanimous that the appeal must be dismissed with costs.”

“On Thursday night a company numbering between 80 and 90, on the invite of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Gibbs, of the BROWN LION HOTEL, sat down to an excellent repast, the occasion being to celebrate their wedding, which took place recently.

After ample justice had been done to the good things provided, Mr. J. T. Judge was voted to the chair, while Mr. E. Simpson occupied the vice chair.

The Chairman, in an appropriate and humorous style, proposed ‘The health of Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs,’ expressing the hope that they would live long and happily together.

The toast was enthusiastically received, the company singing ‘For he’s a jolly good fellow.’

Afterwards a smoking concert was held.....”

“Matters of great importance were under consideration with the application of Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers for permission to erect a hotel on the Birmingham-Wolverhampton Road at a point near the Smethwick and Oldbury housing schemes.....

Mr. Hurst said he had the honour to apply to the Bench on behalf of Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers for a provisional order sanctioning the removal of the CROSS KEYS, Tat Bank, a fully licensed public house, to a site at Warley, on the new main Wolverhampton Road, at the corner of Albert Road [the WERNLEY].....

The Bench considered the matter in private for a long time. Eventually the Chairman said that the application would be granted subject to the surrender of two full licences in the centre of Oldbury – the BROWN LION, Birmingham Street, and the ENGINEERS ARMS, Stone Street – and also subject to certain minor alterations to the plans.”

Smethwick Telephone 2/5/1931

“Worcester Licensing Committee on Monday confirmed the provisional order granted to Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers, sanctioning the removal of the publican’s licence from the CROSS KEYS, Tat Bank, Oldbury, to premises to be erected at the corner of the Wolverhampton-Birmingham arterial road and Albert Road at Warley, in the Oldbury division.

Mr. J. G. Hurst, KC, who appeared with Mr. M. Holdsworth to make the application said that since the construction of the arterial road there had been remarkable building development at the site of the proposed licence. In addition to closing the CROSS KEYS, his clients would surrender two more full licences in the district of Oldbury. It was mentioned that these licenses would be the BROWN LION in Birmingham Street, and the ENGINEERS ARMS in Stone Street. The estimated cost of the new building was stated to be £14,000, exclusive of the site.”

“An inquest was held yesterday, by Mr. Edwin Hooper, at the BROWN LION, Tividale, touching the death of a child eight years of age, named John Beddard, who had resided in Tividale. On Tuesday last the deceased was sent by his mother to purchase a reel of cotton. Finding he did not return, she made inquiries, and received the mournful intelligence that he was drowned in the Birmingham canal. Mrs. Beddard had no suspicion whatever that any person had pushed the deceased into the canal. She heard that he was endeavouring to catch a fish, when he slipped in. The jury returned a verdict that the deceased was Found Drowned in the Birmingham canal, but how he came into the water there was no evidence to show.”

William Bowkett = William Bowcott

Stourbridge Observer 15/2/1873

“John Prince was charged with being drunk and refusing to quit the house of William Bowkett, of the BROWN LION INN, Tividale. Complainant said that the defendant came to his house on the 3rd ult, made a noise, and refused to quit when requested, and tried to throttle him. Defendant pleaded guilty, and was fined 5s and costs; in default 14 days.”

Stourbridge Observer 5/7/1873

“William Bowcott was summoned by Superintendent Mills, with permitting the sale of ale during prohibited hours, on the 22nd ult, at Tividale.

PC Beard said he visited the BROWN LION INN, kept by the defendant, at 10am on the above date, and found three men in the brewhouse. They were drinking out of a quart jug of ale. He saw the defendant’s wife take the ale out of the house into the brewhouse. He spoke to the landlady about it and she said it was the first time and hoped they would overlook it.

PC Shorthouse corroborated.

Defendant’s wife said the two men represented to her that they were travellers. The other man, William Bailey, lived close by her house and the men called him in to drink.

Defendant was fined £3 and costs; in default one month.

Charles Cutler and William Bailey were charged with being unlawfully on licensed premises during prohibited hours, on the 22nd ult. PC Beard proved seeing the defendants and a man named George Smith drinking in the BROWN LION. Cutler gave him a false address. Defendants pleaded guilty. Cutler was fined 10s and costs, or 21 days; and Bailey 5s and costs, or 14 days.”

County Advertiser 19/7/1873

“George Forster was charged with being found on licensed premises on the 22nd ult. Police-constable Berd said that he found defendant, with two other men who had been previously convicted, in a brewhouse belonging to the BROWN LION INN, Tividale, at unlawful hours. They had a quart jug of ale. Defendant was fined 5s and costs.”

County Advertiser 20/3/1875

“William Bowkett, landlord of the BROWN LION INN, Tividale, was charged with having permitted drunkenness in his house on the 8th inst. Mr. Shakespeare defended.

Police-constable Holland said that on the morning of the above date he visited the defendant’s house in company with Police-constable Given, and he there saw two men named Mann and Watts, who were both drunk. There was a jug and glass on the table. Mann was so drunk that he staggered. The men did not make any disturbance.

Police constable Given said he visited the house in company with the last witness. He saw the two men Watts and Mann. They were both drunk. They obtained their names.

Police-sergeant Walters gave corroborative evidence. He called the attention of the landlord to the fact that the men were drunk, but he made no reply.

Mr. Shakespeare having addressed the Bench for the defence, called Thomas Watts, who stated that he and six others were allowed four quarts of ale on the morning in question by a friend. He asked the police why they wanted his name, but he received no answer. He eventually gave his name. There was not a single person in the house who was drunk.

Cross-examined by Mr. Superintendent Mills: Would swear that Mann was not drunk.

William Mann also swore that there was no one drunk in the house. He was not drunk. He was coming out of house when one of the officers pushed him in and made him ‘stagger.’

Benjamin Baker also gave similar evidence.

Defendant, who had been previously convicted, was fined 20s and costs; the license was not to be endorsed.”

County Advertiser 2/10/1875

“Adjourned Licensing Sessions.....

The following publicans who had been convicted during the year, having been cautioned, had their licenses renewed.....

William Bowkett, BROWN LION, Tividale.”

County Advertiser 25/11/1876

“George Maund was charged with assaulting Police-constable Hicklin on the 11th inst, and with damaging his uniform to the extent of £1 0s 4d.

Police-constable Hicklin stated that at about 9pm on the night of the 11th inst, he ejected the defendant from the BROWN LION INN, Tividale, by order of the landlord. When outside defendant attacked him, cut his eye and face, knocked his helmet in, and damaged his clothes. A crowd collected, and a number of his companions came to defendant’s assistance, and aided in assaulting him. Witness was knocked down several times.

Police-constable Given corroborated this statement, and the Bench sentenced the defendant to three months’ imprisonment, with hard labour. The charge of damaging the uniform was withdrawn.”

Dudley and District News 4/12/1880

“Mr. W. Hayes applied for the transfer of the BROWN LION INN, Old Hill, from Samuel Mason to William Lloyd. The police opposed the application on the ground that since Lloyd had gone into the house he had not conducted it well. The application was adjourned for a month.”

County Express 18/7/1885

“Joseph Eades, Greets Green, Westbromwich, was charged with assaulting Police-constable Highway, and also, in conjunction with Joseph Priest, with being drunk and disorderly on the 7th inst. Mr. Jackson appeared to defend; Priest did not put in an appearance.

Police-constable Highway said that on the date named he saw four men come from the BROWN LION INN, Tividale. As they were drunk he told them to go home, which they refused to do, and Eades struck him in the face.

Replying to Mr. Jackson witness said he was quite sure defendant was the man who struck him.

Mr. Jackson said he must tell the officer candidly that the defendant was named Abraham Eades, a brother of Joseph Eades, and was never at the place named on the night in question, though the summonses had been wrongly taken to him.

Joseph Eades was called into Court, and Mr. Jackson asked which of the men it was who assaulted Highway. The officer said the men were very much alike, but to the best of his knowledge it was the one who originally appeared, but he confessed he had his doubts.

The Bench said the mistake was excusable, as the men were very much alike, but the present summons would be dismissed.

A warrant was issued against Priest.”

Birmingham Daily Post 14/7/1894

“Bankruptcy Proceedings. Re David Baker, Oldbury.

The above-named debtor, who formerly carried on business as a coal master at the Clifton Colliery, Oldbury, and at other collieries, came up for his public examination. Mr. R. A. Tench (from Mr. Clark’s office) represented a bill-of-sale holder, and Mr. Todbury (from Mr. Shakespeare’s office) was for the debtor.

In reply to the Assistant Official Receiver, the bankrupt stated that he commenced business in 1887 at the BROWN LION INN, Tividale, with £300 capital. He subsequently became the lessee of some brickworks at Dudley Port, and in 1890 he joined his brother John and a Mr. Thomas Whitehouse in partnership at the Grange Colliery, Oldbury, each partner finding capital amounting to £50. Afterwards, in 1892, he traded in partnership with Messrs. G. J. and J. Sheldon at the same colliery, and six months later he retired from the last-named firm, receiving as his share £70. In October, 1892, with a capital amounting to £400, he became the tenant of the Clifton Colliery, Titford Road, and expended about £500 in repairing the shaft. In September last a fire broke out in the pit, and he had to abandon working and scaffold the pit over. He estimated that he lost upwards of £700 by that undertaking. He attributed his insolvency to the fire at the colliery, and to bad trade at a the public house, where he resided.

The examination was concluded.”

Dudley Mercury 27/4/1889

“Florence Mann, single woman, Tividale, was charged with stealing 10s, the money of Sophia Baker, landlady of the BROWN LION, Tividale, on the 11st inst.

Prosecutor said that defendant called at her house to pay 1s 1d, which she owed. She gave witness a sovereign, and witness fetched two half-sovereigns, and gave one to defendant and the other change in silver and coppers. She went into another room for a few minutes, and when she returned she gave the defendant another half-sovereign in mistake. She asked defendant to return the money, but she refused to do so.

The Bench dismissed the case.”

County Express 10/1/1891

“At the Police Court, on Wednesday, before Messrs. W. Bassano, A. H. Bassano, and H. A. Wiggin, Rosannah Baker (17), char-girl, of Dudley Road, Tividale, was charged with stealing a jacket, watch, and chain, the property of Mary Jane Baker, on the 24th ult.

It appeared that prosecutrix lived with her parents at the BROWN LION INN, Tividale, and was acquainted with the prisoner, who sometimes came to the house. On Christmas Eve she came in about four o’clock to ask the time and went into the back kitchen, where she stayed about fifteen minutes. After the prisoner had gone, the jacket was missing. The watch was in the pocket of the jacket, which together with the watch and chain, was worth 20s 6d.

Cross-examined: The jacket was not lent to prisoner.

Inspector Bishop said that prisoner burst out crying when she was brought to the Police Office, at Old Hill, and he saw her take the watch from underneath her clothing. She said, 'I didn't steal the jacket; I had it lent to me, and I found the watch and chain in the pocket when I searched it.' The chain, which was a common beaded one, she had broken up.

Mr. Bassano said there were three convictions against prisoner, and all for similar offences. She would be sentenced to two months' hard labour."

"At Old Hill Police Court on Wednesday, John Gordon, alias Douglas, who declined to disclose his address; John Bourton, Adderley Street, Bordesley Green; John Henry Green, Mill Street, Aston Road, Birmingham, were brought up on remand, charged with being in possession and attempting to pass base coin at Tividale on Saturday, the 4th inst. Mr. F. Hooper, Birmingham, defended Bourton and Green.

Mary Hill, of the BROWN LION, Tividale, stated that about two o'clock on the date in question two men came into the house. She identified them as Gordon and Bourton. Gordon asked for quinine, a glass of gin, and a packet of cigarettes. She served them with what they asked for, and Gordon tended her a 5s piece. She picked the money up and examined it. She felt doubtful of the colour. She put it between her teeth, and it was gritty. She gave it back to Gordon, and told him she had some doubt about its being good. Gordon said, 'It's all right; I wish I had a thousand of them.' She replied that she did not care about taking it, so he asked Bourton to pay for the drink. Bourton then tendered 1s for the same, and she gave him 6d change. In some conversation which took place between the two men, Gordon turned to Bourton and said he wondered how it was that people could tell bad money. Bourton said, 'Possibly they tell in the same way that she (witness) did, by putting it between their teeth. Some people told by the colour, and some by putting the money between their thumb and finger.'

Mr. Hooper: When you identified the prisoners were there only three of them? – Witness: No sir. There were seven men altogether, and I identified the two as those who came into the public house.

Mr. Hooper: Have you ever seen the prisoners before? – Witness: No sir.

Mr. Hooper: What do you do in the public house? – Witness: I attend to the business for my brother.

Mr. Hooper: You were busy on the day in question? – Witness: Not so very. The prisoners came to the bar, and there was no one there.

Mr. Hooper: Yours is an old fashioned house? – Witness: Yes sir.

Mr. Hooper: Is there plenty of light? – Witness: Both front and back doors were open, when the prisoners came in.

Mr. Hooper: When Bourton gave you the 1s there was nothing wrong with it? – Witness: No sir, not as far as I saw.

Mr. Hooper: What made you take notice of the man who gave you the 1s. – Witness: I noticed very particularly – the two especially – when I received the 5s from the one.

Mr. Hooper: So when Gordon tendered the 5s piece, which you say was a base coin, you became suspicious? – Witness: Naturally.

Mr. Hooper: Can you swear to Bourton now? – Witness: I can.

Mr. Hooper: How was he dressed? – Witness: In a blue suit, peaked cap, and turn down collar. She could not say whether he had a tie or not.

Mr. Hooper: How long were you looking at him? – Witness: It was only a glance.

Mr. Hooper: Could you describe how every one of your customers that day were dressed? – Witness: If they came in separately as the prisoners did and tendered a base coin I naturally should look at them minutely.

In answer to further questions in reference to identification, witness said when she was fetched into the Court on Monday there were seven men standing up in a row. She picked Gordon out without the slightest hesitation.

Mr. Hooper: But you had some difficulty in identifying Bourton? – Witness: No sir, I did not, although I picked Gordon out first.

Mr. Hooper: What made you notice him particularly? – Witness: His sallow complexion.

Mr. Hooper: Then you call his a complexion? – Witness: Yes sir.

She came into Court by herself, and she had not the slightest doubt but that Bourton and Gordon were the two who visited her premises on Saturday.

Mr. Hooper: If I tell you that I have abundant evidence to prove that Bourton was miles away on Saturday with his wife, then have no doubt. – Witness: I should not – not for one moment.

Thomas Cox, landlord of the SEVEN STARS INN, Tividale, was the next witness called. He stated that about ten minutes past two on Saturday two men came into his house. He did not know them at the time, but now identified them as Gordon and Bourton. They called for gin and bitters. Witness told them he did not sell it, whereupon Gordon called for two glasses of ale. He then tendered a 5s piece. Witness took it from him and examined it, and not being satisfied with it asked Gordon if he had any smaller change. To this Gordon said, 'Wait till my mate comes in. He's gone outside.' When Bourton arrived he gave him 1s. Gordon said there was nothing wrong with the 5s and rung it on the floor. Witness told Gordon he was not satisfied with it and he should not take it. He next saw the men in Court the following Monday morning. There were five other men, making in all seven. He identified the two who came into his house the previous Saturday. He had not the slightest doubt about them. When they came into his house one was dressed in a dark grey suit, and the other a blue serge suit. In answer to questions by Mr. Hooper witness said his house was about 150 yards from the previous witness's. When the prisoners came in they stood in the passage. He had never seen any of the men before, to his knowledge.

Mr. Hooper: What made you notice them? – Witness: I had word that they were passing base coin in the district from a man in the tap room.

Mr. Hooper: So you thought it best to make a mental photograph of these men? – Witness: Yes.

And this made you suspicious? – Yes. Someone had, I believe, gone for the policeman then.

You lost nothing by the transaction? – No.

In answer to further questions, witness said he identified the prisoners at the police station the following Monday. They were there amongst five other men, ill dressed in respectable clothes. He picked the prisoners out, and had not the slightest hesitation about either of them.

Mr. Hooper: If I tell you that Bourton was miles away at the time, would you hold the same opinion? – Witness: I would. I have not the slightest doubt.

James Griffiths, 29, High Street, Tipton, sheep shearer, stated that he remembered seeing Police Constable Heatherley near Barnett's Brickyard, Tividale, on Saturday last. The three prisoners were about 150 to 200 yards in front of him. In consequence of what he said he gave chase. For a time they kept to the highway, and then cut across some fields and up to the canal side, and then under the aqueduct at Dudley Port. Witness followed upon his machine as fast as possible. He cut across the highway, and then he caught a second sight of them going across a field. He gave chase across the fields on his bicycle. Witness eventually got up to the men and rode with them about forty yards. Gordon said, 'Here's a detective, here.' Bourton said, 'It's no detective.' Prisoner also said, 'It's no detective.' Bourton and Green then left Gordon behind a little, and witness jumped off his machine. He followed Gordon close up. The others ran across field after field. Gordon started to run, and witness called to several men to help him while he went in pursuit of the other two.

No one, however, would do so, and he held Gordon until Heatherley arrived. The other two went through some works at Newtown, and he lost sight of them. He saw the prisoners with four more at the Court on Monday. He identified the two who ran away as the two in the box. In answer to Mr. Hooper, he denied having whispered something to Heatherley, before he picked out Bourton. He was sure he had not made a mistake with reference to Bourton. In fact, he was confident that it was the same man. He was sure that all three of the prisoners made use of the word 'detective'.

Police Constable Job Heatherley, stationed at Tividale, stated that in consequence of certain information given him, he saw three men on the canal side at Dudley Road, Tividale, going in the direction of Dudley Port. They crossed over the L.N.W.R. line on to the embankment of the canal again. They went on to Mr. Peter Wood's Brickyard. When near the marl hole of the brickyard they saw him. He was in uniform at the time. They then commenced running, and he told Griffiths to go in pursuit of them on his bicycle. The men continued running. Bourton and Green were in front, and Gordon a little distance behind. He saw Gordon put his hand into his left coat pocket and throw away the pieces. He watched very minutely where they dropped, and when he came up to the spot he picked up sixteen 5s base coins (produced), and then recommenced the pursuit. When he got to Greets Green, Griffiths had Gordon in custody. He took him to Greets Green Police Station, and afterwards to Old Hill. At the latter place he cautioned him and charged him with being in possession of sixteen base coins, and also with attempting to pass the same at Tividale. Gordon took hold of three of the coins and examined them, and said, 'Why, they are good ones. I wish I had many thousands of them.' On Sunday he charged them jointly, and after cautioning them Bourton said, 'I don't know where Tividale is.' Green said, 'I was in the city all day yesterday.' Gordon said, 'These two men were not with me. Nobody saw me with any bad money.' He was present when the witnesses identified the prisoners. There were four others put with them. The Inspector said to the three prisoners, 'Now then, get amongst the other four men where you like, and stand with your hands out of your pockets.' None of the witnesses hesitated to pick the prisoners out. He did not have any conversation with any of the witnesses. They had not had time to get any more evidence.

Mr. Cooksey (Magistrates' Clerk): Will there be any more witnesses? – Witness: Other people may be called on another occasion.

Inspector Hodgkinson asked for a remand for the Treasury to be represented. Mr. Hooper strongly objected to a remand. There was not, he said, a tittle of evidence against Green, and he was charged with having in his possession base coins, and further with attempting to pass them. No one, only the cyclist, even saw Green, and he admitted he often made mistakes. He strenuously objected to a remand from time to time, especially when he was able to prove that the two men he represented were innocent. There was not one tittle of evidence against Green.

The Chairman: I think there is.

A remand was granted for a week.

Mr. Hooper: Then I have to apply for bail.

This was refused."

County Advertiser 18/7/1903

"On Wednesday, at Rowley Regis Police Court – before Messrs. A. H. Bassano, C. W. Bassano, J. W. Tilley, and G. H. Holcroft – John Gorton (21), alias Walter Douglas, labourer, who refused to give his address, but belongs to Birmingham; John Henry Green (24), alias John Turst, glassworker, of Mill Street, Aston, Birmingham; and John Bourton (21), horse dealer, of Adderley Street, Bordewsley, Birmingham, were charged in custody on remand with uttering base coin at Tividale on the 4th inst, and also with having base coin in their possession on the same date. Mr. F. Hooper, of Birmingham, appeared to defend Green and Bourton. Mary Hill, sister of the landlord of the BROWN LION INN, Tividale, stated that on the afternoon of the date named, the prisoners Gorton and Bourton visited the public house, and were supplied with some drink and cigarettes. Gorton tendered a five shilling piece, which witness examined and refused to accept, as she did not care to take it. Gorton said, 'It is all right; I wish I had a thousand of them.' Witness, however, told him that she should not take it, and Bourton then paid for the drink. In reply to Mr. Hooper, witness said she still adhered to her statement made on the previous Wednesday that Bourton was the man who came into the house with Gorton.

Thomas Cox, landlord of the SEVEN STARS INN, Tividale, said that the prisoners Gorton and Bourton visited the house on the date named and purchased two glasses of ale. A five shilling piece was handed to witness in payment of the ale, but this he refused to take as it did not seem to be satisfactory to him, and he had also received an intimation, whilst the prisoners were in the house, that bad money was being passed in the district.

James Griffiths, of High Street, Tipton, stated that on the afternoon of the date named, he saw Police-constable Heatherley searching for three men who were running away in the direction of Dudley Port. The officer asked witness to follow them and he did so upon his bicycle. They crossed over the London and North Western Railway and witness caught them up. He rode alongside the prisoners for about forty yards and called upon three young men to assist him to capture them, but they all refused. Witness then caught Gorton and held him until Police-constable Heatherley arrived upon the scene. The other two prisoners ran away across the fields.

Police-constable Heatherley stated that whilst he was chasing the prisoners he noticed Gorton put his hand in his left hand pocket, pull out something, and throw it away. Upon arriving at the spot witness found sixteen base crown pieces (produced). Witness conveyed Gorton to Old Hill Police Station, and the other two prisoners, when charged with the offence, said they did not know where Tividale was.

Mary Salter, wife of Charles Salter, of the VILLAGE TAVERN, Brades Village, Oldbury, stated that on the 4th inst the prisoners Gorton and Bourton visited her house and were supplied with some drink. Gorton gave her a five shilling piece and witness handed him 4s 6d change. She could not say whether the coin was a base one as she had since disposed of it.

Police-sergeant Evans, of the Birmingham police, deposed to seeing the three prisoners leaving a public house in Steelhouse Lane, Birmingham, on the morning of the 4th inst. They separated, but witness subsequently saw them together again at the Snow Hill Station. The same evening, upon receipt of a telephonic message from Old Hill, he arrested Bourton, who in reply to the charge, said he did not know where Tividale was, and he had been in the city all that day.

Detective Harris deposed to arresting Green, who also denied being at Tividale.

Police-constables Lawson and Foulkes described a conversations they heard between the three prisoners at Handsworth Station on the 6th inst, after they had been remanded and were being escorted to Winson Green Gaol. Gorton said, 'I wish I had never seen — Tividale,' to which Green replied, 'I have never been there before, and I will watch I don't go again.' Bourton said, 'Nor me, I don't know where Tividale is.'

Harry Arthur Griffiths, jeweller, of High Street, Cradley Heath, deposed to examining the sixteen five shilling pieces found by Police-constable Heatherley; they were all counterfeit.

When charged with the offences by the magistrates' clerk (Mr. T. Cooksey), Gorton said, 'I plead guilty to attempting to pass one base coin not knowing it to be bad. These two fellows (pointing to the other prisoners) were not with me on the afternoon, although they were with me on the morning when seen by Sergeant Evans.'

The other prisoners pleaded not guilty, and Mr. Hooper, on their behalf, urged that there was no evidence whatever against Green, and that the witnesses were mistaken as to Bourton. Both men were in Birmingham during the day in question. A number of witnesses were called to prove this, but eventually the Bench committed the prisoners for trial at the Assizes, bail being refused.

Mr. A. H. Bassano (the presiding magistrate) complimented James Griffiths, the cyclist, for the pluck he displayed to secure the arrest of the three prisoners. Superintendent Pilliner said the police much appreciated the valuable assistance they received from Griffiths, through whose efforts the prisoners had been brought to justice.

Detective Harris gave Superintendent Pilliner particulars of the prisoners' antecedents, which raised the ire of Bourton, who attempted to assault Harris, and declared his intention of killing him for giving the Staffordshire police particulars, which he characterised as an injustice. Owing to his violence it was necessary for a policeman to stand near to him in the dock."

‘Lost Landscape. Portway Road, Oldbury. A Black Country Street.’ by Alan Dodson

“There were three pubs in my day in the Eel Street, Churchbridge and Portway Road ‘square’ although there had been as many as eight over the years. The BUILDERS ARMS stood at the corner of Little Eel Street and Portway Road. It was a large pub and even as a boy I remember it well, a solid cube of a building wrapping round the corner, with double bay windows, an imposing entrance facing Portway Road and large upstairs windows overlooking both streets. Adding to the impression, the road which formed a shallow depression from the bridge began to rise into the lane quite sharply at the Little Eel Street corner. One can imagine the BUILDERS ARMS was built to be more than just a watering hole for canal labourers and had the air of the establishments which later became known as ‘commercial hotels.’ The large function room on the first floor was much in favour for twenty-first birthday celebrations and the like. The BRICKMAKERS ARMS was at the corner of the other end of Eel Street and Churchbridge, smaller but in many ways similar. They were simply known as ‘The Top’ and ‘The Bottom’ although my father always referred to ‘The Top’ as ‘Beasley’s’ after the family whose members were licensees from 1913 until 1945.

The TRAVELLERS REST, known to all as ‘Sherwood’s’ or ‘Sammy Sherwood’s’ after the licensee from 1893 until 1945, which might be some sort of record, was a small pub in Churchbridge next door to ‘The Bottom,’ with rooms not much bigger than those of the neighbouring houses but distinguished by its own double bay windows and arched doorway.”

Joseph Darby issued tokens from here.

John Sadler was also a builder [1855]

Bells Life in London and Sporting Chronicle 18/3/1855

“At Mr. Sadler’s BUILDERS ARMS, Oldbury, tomorrow (Monday), a splendid pigeon gun, $\frac{3}{4}$ -bore, made by Mr. Rose of Halesowen, is to be shot for, 20 tickets at 5s each, 3 birds, 2oz of shot, guns $\frac{3}{4}$ -bore, 21 yards rise, the field the boundary. To commence at one, dinner at five o’clock. Mr. Perry will supply the best blue rocks.”

Bells Life in London and Sporting Chronicle 11/11/1855

“On Monday at Mr. Sadler’s, the BUILDERS ARMS, Oldbury, the match between six members of the Oldbury and six members of the Wednesbury Clubs came off, for £10 a side and a dinner for 12, at 7 birds each, 21 yards rise, the green the boundary. The betting was level, if anything the Wednesbury had for choice. After some close and excellent shooting the match was won by the Oldbury Club by 1 bird, killing 36 out of 42. The return match will come off on Monday, the 19th inst, at the PORTWAY INN, for the same amount of stakes &c.”

Bells Life in London and Sporting Chronicle 28/9/1856

“At J. Sadler’s, BUILDERS ARMS, Oldbury, on Monday, Oct 6, a fat pig, weighing 14 score, will be shot for, by 14 members, at 10s each, 3 birds, guns $\frac{3}{4}$ -bore, 2oz of shot, 21 yards rise, the field the boundary. The best blue rocks will be provided. To commence at one o’clock.”

AND

“Timothy Hadley of Oldbury will shoot a match with Mr. T. Cottis of Westbromwich, for £10 or £25 a side, at 11 birds each, 1½oz of shot, 21 yards rise, 80 fall, to find and trap for each other. A match can be made either at Mr. Sadler’s Oldbury; or Josiah Griffiths’s, SPREAD EAGLE, Wednesbury.”

Bells Life in London and Sporting Chronicle 8/3/1857

“T. Hadley of Oldbury and Joseph Palmer of Wednesbury are matched to shoot at 11 birds each, for £10 a side, tomorrow (Monday), at Sadler’s, BUILDERS ARMS, Oldbury.”

Bells Life in London and Sporting Chronicle 10/5/1857

“At Mr. John Sadler’s, BUILDERS ARMS, Oldbury, a quarter of a mile from Bromford Lane station, tomorrow (Monday), a match will take place at 5 birds each, for £10 a side, between Messrs. Hadley and Cottis, with three-quarter guns, 2oz shot, 21 yards rise, and 60 yards fall, and to trap against each other out of one hamper. The best blue rocks have been provided by Crosbie. To commence at one o’clock. Also a £10 sweep, by twenty members, at 10s each, 3 birds each; the usual conditions; rise and boundary to be abided by.”

Bells Life in London and Sporting Chronicle 17/5/1857

“At Sadler’s, the BUILDERS ARMS, Oldbury, near Birmingham, the match between Messrs. Cottis and Hadley, at 3 birds each, for £10 a side, which stood to come off on Monday, at the above grounds, did not take place, Cottis forfeiting; but a sweepstakes took place between Messrs. Hadley, Brown, Cottis, and Nurse at 3 birds each, 10s each, when Cottis won killing all. A second sweepstakes, by the same parties on the same terms, came off, when Mr. Nurse won, killing all. Afterwards Messrs. Brown of Walsall and Hadley of Oldbury shot a match, at 7 birds each, for £5 a side, when both killed all their birds and shot off bird for bird, when Brown killed 8 in succession, Hadley 7.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 28/4/1920

“Alfred Hearne, a gipsy, of no fixed abode, was charged at Oldbury yesterday with obtaining £5 by false pretences from William Beasley, of the BUILDERS ARMS, Oldbury.

A van dealer named Gilbert said that on 22 March he and the defendant agreed to exchange two vans, Hearne also to pay him £3. They were in the BUILDERS ARMS at the time, and Hearne produced a note which he asked the landlord to change. Beasley gave him five £1 Treasury notes for it.

The following morning the defendant told Gilbert he had to go away, as he was in some trouble. He wanted to cry off the bargain, and consented to forfeit £1 if Gilbert would return him the other £2, which he did.

In reply to Mr. Darby, who appeared for the defendant, Gilbert said that he had had a number of dealings with the defendant, and found him always honest, and straightforward.

Beasley said he thought that the note was a genuine one, and did not discover it was false until the following week, when he was paying a traveller

When arrested by Police-constable Ridley, Hearne said he did not know that the note was a wrong one, adding that he had sold two ponies at Wolverhampton and the note was part of the money he had received for them.

The magistrates thought that it was a proper case to bring before the Court, but there was not sufficient evidence of attempt to defraud, and the case was dismissed."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 19/10/1927

"John William Beasley, licensee of the BUILDERS ARMS, Portway Road, Oldbury, was fined £5 and four guineas special costs, yesterday, for selling intoxicating liquor after hours. Six customers found on the premises were ordered to pay the costs, 4s 6d."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 6/10/1936

"A man lies in West Bromwich General Hospital unaware that in another ward his son is lying critically ill as a result of a road crash involving the son's car and two motor-cycles, in which three people were killed and three others (including his son) severely injured on the Birmingham-Wolverhampton road at Oldbury on Sunday night.

The West Bromwich Coroner will this morning open the inquest on the three victims of the crash, which was reported in our editions yesterday. Only formal evidence is likely. The victims were:

Leslie Frank Allen, aged 23, of 181, Lightswoods Road, Bearwood, Smethwick, driver of one of the motor-cycles; Freda May Strawbridge, aged 17, of 25, Grosvenor Road, Harborne, his pillion passenger; and John William Wilkinson, aged 20, of 78, Gilbert Road, Smethwick, the driver of the other machine.

The injured, all of whom are in a critical condition in West Bromwich and District General Hospital, are: Lily Hayes, aged 17, of 79, St. Stephens Road, Smethwick, Wilkinson's pillion passenger; Benjamin Beasley, aged 21 son of the licensee of the BUILDERS ARMS, Portway Road, Oldbury, the driver of the car; and Clara Taylor, aged 21, of 74, Church Street, Oldbury, his passenger.

Beasley and his passenger were both operated on yesterday, but his father, who has been a patient in the hospital for several weeks, has not yet been informed of the accident.

The girl Hayes is suffering from multiple fractures, while the other two persons received severe internal injuries. In addition, Miss Taylor has a compound fracture of the left leg.

There is still some mystery about the crash and eye-witnesses are asked to communicate with the Oldbury police. The Birmingham Gazette understands that it occurred in a heavy ground mist between the Birchley cross-roads and Titford Bridge, at 10pm, when the motor-cyclists were riding towards Birmingham and the car going in the opposite direction. The car appears to have been in collision with Wilkinson's motor-cycle and then turned a somersault, coming into the track of Allen's machine. The impact was so severe that the nearside door was forced inwards across the front of the seat, while the roof was also ripped. The car mounted the kerb and cut its way through the grass path before coming to a standstill almost a complete wreck. There were indications that Allen's head had struck the front corner of the roof. The front part of Allen's machine was shattered. The roadway had the appearance of a shambles."

[The inquest returned verdicts of Accidental Death, there being insufficient evidence to attach blame to anyone.]

Birmingham Daily Gazette 17/10/1936

"A wreath representing a vacant chair was one of the 60 floral tributes at yesterday's funeral of Mr. Benjamin Beasley, son of the licensee of the BUILDERS ARMS, Portway Road, Oldbury. Aged 21, he was the driver of the motor-car which, with two motor-cycles, was involved in a triple smash on the Birmingham-Wolverhampton road, Oldbury, on the night of 4 October. He died from his injuries on Thursday week at the West Bromwich and District General Hospital, being the fourth victim of the smash.

Between 200 and 300 people witnessed the departure of the cortege from Portway Road, and there was an almost equal number at the Oldbury Cemetery, where the interment took place. The service was conducted by the Rev. P. Burnett, Vicar of Rounds Green, Oldbury.

The chief family mourners were Mrs. Beasley (mother), William and Leslie Beasley (brothers), and Miss C. Beasley (sister). The bearers were Messrs. H. Boswell, B. Winsper, J. Hall and J. Rowley.

Mr. Beasley, senior, is still in the hospital at West Bromwich, where he has been for several weeks, recovering from an illness.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 26/4/1938

“A. Bayliss, of the Trade Union Hall and Institute, Oldbury, is the individual champion of the Oldbury and District Darts League which comprises between 300 and 400 players.....

The final of the A. E. Jesson Cup for clubs was also decided; GREEN DRAGON, Dudley, proving far too strong for BUILDERS ARMS, Oldbury. BUILDERS ARMS claimed only two of the eight games, the winners of them being L. Beasley and B. Hull (who recovered after being nearly ‘white-washed’ to win on double 17).

The winning side were: J. Rollason, J. Herbert, P. Garrett, J. Crump, B. Round, W. Neath, J. Walsh and S. Jackson. Biggest score, with three darts, of the night was the 125 of W. Neath.”

“Harriet Walker (26), Park Lane, Oldbury, was charged with stealing a purse containing 17s in money, the property of Stephen Baldwin, on the 24th inst. Prosecutor stated that on Saturday afternoon he went into the CHEMICAL TAVERN, Park Lane, and saw the defendant there. He put his purse upon the table and went away, forgetting to take it. When he came back a few moments afterwards it was gone and defendant also. When charged with the offence defendant at first denied all knowledge of the purse, but subsequently admitted having taken it. She was fined £1 and the costs, or, in default, one month’s imprisonment.”

West Bromwich Weekly News 21/5/1887

“An inquest was held on Friday morning, at the CHEMICAL INN, Park Lane, by Mr. E. Docker (deputy coroner), touching the death of John Charles Whitehouse, aged four years, who was drowned in the arm of the canal on Wednesday evening.

Betsey Whitehouse, mother of deceased, stated that she saw her child playing on the bank a little before 8 o'clock on Wednesday night, and a few minutes past 8 she heard that he was in the canal.

John Bullard stated that he heard the cries of the children, and ran to the canal and assisted to get the child out, but he was quite dead.

PS Stanton said that the children were in the habit of playing on the bank, which was very dangerous.

The jury returned a verdict of Found Drowned."

"Licensing Sessions.....

Mr. A. M. Chance presided at Oldbury. The report of Superintendent Hill stated that there were 126 licences in the district, a reduction of seven on the previous year, which compared with the estimated population, gave a ratio of one on-licence to every 354 of the inhabitants. One licence-holder only was convicted during the year, while eighty-eight persons were convicted for drunkenness, a decrease of forty-three on the previous year.....

The police objected to the renewal of the following twelve licences which will be considered at the adjourned sessions, to be held on March 2.....

CHEMICAL TAVERN."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 3/3/1909

“The adjourned licensing sessions for Oldbury were held yesterday, Mr. G. S. Albright presiding in the absence, through illness, of Mr. A. M. Chance. The magistrates were sitting for several hours, chiefly in hearing evidence regarding the following licensed houses, to the renewal of which the police objected on the grounds of redundancy, the magistrates proposing to refer them for compensation.

CHEMICAL INN, Tatbank, alehouse, owner Messrs. Jordan and Co.

Evidence was given in each case by Superintendent Hill and Mr. F. H. Jones, auctioneer and valuer, as to the nature of the houses, and the proximity of other licensed premises. The magistrates afterwards retired to consider the cases, and upon resuming Mr. Albright said they had decided to refer the following six houses to Worcester to be dealt with under compensation: CRYSTAL PALACE, NAVIGATION INN, HOPE AND ANCHOR, FOUNTAIN, CROSS KEYS, and BIRD IN HAND. All the other licences would be renewed, and the licences of these six would be provisionally renewed pending the county committee’s investigations.”

“A very pretty wedding of much local interest was solemnised at Holy Trinity Church on Wednesday, the contracting parties being, Bert, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Browning Smith, of South Road, Smethwick, and Elizabeth, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Matthews, of the CHEMICAL INN (and late of Barker Street), Oldbury. The bride, who was given away by her father, was attired in a dress of white crepe-de-chine, with rich embroidery, and a veil with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of mixed white flowers. The bridesmaids were Miss May Smith (sister of the bridegroom) and Miss Lillian Matthews (sister of the bride). They wore charming dresses of peach-coloured crepe-de-chine with black and peach embroideries, and black hats, and carried bouquets of sweet peas (the gift of the bridegroom). The ceremony was performed by the Vicar (the Rev. E. L. Cochrane, MA). The duties of best man were carried out by Mr. Howard Matthews (brother of the bride, and the Oldham Athletic footballer). The bridegroom is well-known locally, being an official of Holy Trinity Recreation Club. After the ceremony the reception was held at Oldbury. The honeymoon is being spent in Teignmouth (South Devon).”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 2/3/1922

“At Oldbury adjourned licensing sessions yesterday an application was refused for a licence for a building in the Londonderry Lane area, where the Smethwick housing scheme is being developed.

The applicant, Joseph Matthews, licensee of the CHEMICAL INN, Park Lane, on behalf of Messrs. Showell’s Brewery, asked that his licence should be transferred to a site in the new area, on which it is proposed to erect a thoroughly modern house.

The application was opposed by Mr. Lyon Clark on behalf of the clergy and ministers in the district, Mr. C. H. Darby on behalf of a resident, and Mr. F. Dawes on behalf of Messrs. Atkinson’s Brewery Company. It was stated that the cost of the proposed new building would be from £8,000 to £10,000.”

An application was granted, at the Adjourned Licensing Meeting on 7th March 1923, for the Ordinary Removal of this license to premises known as the ALBION INN, Tat Bank.

“John Woodall. The CHEMICAL ARMS INN, Canal-side, Stone-street, Tat Bank, Oldbury, and the Anchor Bridge Boiler Works, Birmingham-road, Oldbury, Worcestershire, Beerhouse Keeper and Boiler Maker.”

Birmingham Daily Post 4/5/1886

“Bankruptcy Proceedings.....

Yesterday a meeting of the creditors of John Woodall, of the CHEMICAL ARMS INN, Stone Street, Tat Bank, and also carrying on business as a boilermaker, at the Anchor Bridge Boiler Works, Birmingham Road, Oldbury, was held at Oldbury County Court; Mr. C. Woollett presiding. The debtor’s statement showed the liabilities to be £98 18s 11d, and the assets £27 3s. The debtor was subsequently examined before Mr. G. S. Watson, Registrar, and allowed to pass. Mr. S. H. Forrest was the debtor’s solicitor.”

There was no application to renew the license on 21st August 1888.

It was demolished as part of the construction of the railway line linking Oldbury with Langley, c.1888.

Birmingham Daily Post 1/8/1860

“The boiler explosion briefly noticed in our impression of yesterday has resulted in more serious consequences than were at first anticipated, and three of the sufferers have already expired from the effects of the terrible injuries received.

Mr. Samuel Johnson’s brickworks – the scene of the accident – are situated not far from the TALBOT HOTEL, and cover a large extent of ground. A portion of them is occupied by an extensive shed, where the bricks are gradually dried by hot air previous to being removed to the kiln. Just outside this shed, and running parallel with it, is the boiler which exploded, and the fatal effects of the explosion resulted from the fact that the end of the boiler is just in front of the entrance to the shed. Consequently, the steam and hot water rushed into the shed, enveloping everybody in the building at the time. The boiler is a cylindrical one, with what is called a ‘D’ end. It is about twenty-eight feet long and four feet in diameter, and was firmly set in brickwork. The steam clack of the boiler went through the slate roof overhead, and hence has arisen a theory respecting the cause of the explosion, which does not appear altogether improbable, although in the present stage of that which will form the subject of scientific enquiry we submit the theory with diffidence. It is stated that the engineer, whenever he wanted to alter the weights on the steam clack was in the habit of getting on the slates, by which means some of them were disarranged, and the rain got through. It is supposed that the wet thus let in lodged between the sides of the boiler and the brickwork, and gradually corroded the plates till they were so thin that one of them burst. This is the more probable from the fact that the explosion took place at the junction of the plates with brickwork, and that the other portions of the boiler are quite sound and of considerable strength. Very little brickwork was disturbed by the explosion, and only a few slates were blown off the roof; but the steam and water rushed into the shed with such force that one or two of the girls at work fell down, and consequently were more severely scalded than the others. Two men who were at work in the upper portion of the shed escaped unhurt; but if the accident had happened a short time later several men would have been at work carrying bricks to the kiln, and they must inevitably have shared the fate of the unfortunate girls. The names of the sufferers are as follow: Ann Bridge, 17; Eliza Carter, 12; Prudence Carter, 22; Catherine Duggan, 20; Sarah Matthews, 16; and another girl named Stokes. Dr. Cooper was immediately in attendance upon the girls, and paid them every possible attention; but in three cases it was of no avail, and Bridge and the two Carters have died from the fearful injuries they sustained. Their skin had come entirely off in some places, and upon other portions of their bodies it hung like shreds of parchment. Sarah Matthews is not expected to recover.

The boiler is connected with an engine used for grinding clay, and drawing waggons up and down the pit from which the clay is obtained. The flue does not extend to the point where the explosion took place, and therefore it would appear that the explosion could not have been caused by the burning of the plates,

An inquest was opened on the bodies of the deceased girls last evening, at the house of Mr. William Hall, CHURCH BRIDGE TAVERN, before R. Docker, Esq, Coroner, and a Jury, of whom Mr. S. Marsh was foreman; but after viewing the bodies and inspecting the scene of the accident, the Jury were discharged till Friday next, in order that in the meantime a scientific investigation of the probable cause of the explosion might be made.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 8/8/1860

“An adjourned inquest was held at Oldbury, on Friday, upon the bodies of three girls, killed by a boiler explosion at the brickworks of Mr. Samuel Johnson, of that town, on the previous Monday. The Jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death, appending to it the remark that great neglect had been exhibited in allowing water to run through the roof on to the boiler – the sole cause of the accident.”

Sandwell Evening Mail 4/2/1986

“An Oldbury publican is faced with the threat of losing his licence and his livelihood only weeks after buying a public house for £70,000. Father of four Shinda Singh bought the ALBION INN, in Tat Bank Road, from Ansells at Christmas after being licensee at the premises for nearly five years. He has now been shocked to be told that the police will be objecting against his licence being renewed when he applies for the renewal at Warley Licensing Court on Monday. A notice at the court at Smethwick said that the objection has been lodged on the grounds of Shinda Singh’s offences.

Shinda Singh agreed he had been convicted last June for selling intoxicating drinks to young people under the age of 18.

A Warley magistrates’ court official confirmed that the police were going ahead with the objection against the renewal of the licence.

Shinda Singh said, ‘This has come as a terrible blow considering I have only just bought the ALBION INN for £70,000.

Shinda, who used to be an electrician, helped to save the pub from closure more than two years ago when the licensing justices said the premises were unfit for the sale of intoxicating drinks. The pub was allowed to remain open after Shinda Singh and Ansells carried out improvement work.”

Sandwell Evening Mail 22/3/1986

“Licensee Shinda Singh was celebrating today after winning a battle to keep the ALBION INN pub, Tat Bank Road, Oldbury, which he bought from Ansells three months ago. Shinda Singh, who has been licensee for five years, applied for his license to be renewed at Warley licensing court, but police objected because of two convictions last June for selling intoxicating drinks to underage drinkers. The application was adjourned. Now Shinda Singh has been told that his license will be renewed for 12 months.”

Sandwell Evening Mail 13/8/1986

“An Oldbury father of four who bought a pub for £40,000 six months ago and spent a further £30,000 on improvements may now convert it into a DIY centre. Mr. Shinda Singh said he has drawn up the conversion plan for the ALBION INN at Tat Bank Road in case Warley Licensing Justices fail to renew his licence for the pub next April. He became licensee of the pub in 1979 and bought the premises from Ansells last December for £40,000 and then spent £30,000 on refurbishing the premises. Now Shinda, a former electrician, has applied for permission to convert the pub into a DIY centre. In a council report to be considered at today's Sandwell land and town planning committee meeting, he said there is insufficient demand for a pub in the Tat Bank Road area.

Shinda Singh said, ‘It will cost about £10,000 to convert the pub into a DIY centre but I want planning permission in case my licence as a licensee is not renewed next April.’

Sandwell's director of technical services, Mr. John Baker, is recommending committee members to throw out the conversion plan on the grounds of insufficient parking space.”

[Planning permission was refused.]

Harbajan Singh, of Smethwick, was stabbed to death here at about 2.30am on 5th January 1987.

Sandwell Evening Mail 13/3/1987

“A Sandwell licensee has sold a reputedly haunted pub at a loss of more than £10,000 after a series of setbacks. Shinda Singh bought the ALBION INN at Tat Bank Road, Oldbury, from Ansells more than a year ago as a Christmas present for his wife and four children. He was convicted ten months ago of selling alcohol after hours. Weeks later he was refused planning permission to convert the premises into a supermarket. In January a man was murdered at the pub and another injured. Now Shinda Singh has decided to quit the trade. ‘I have had enough of the place and I very much doubt if the licensing justices would have renewed my licence in view of the conviction. At present I do not know where we are going to live or what I shall do for a living.’

The pub is reputed to be haunted by the ghost of a former licensee. His apparition is said to have been seen by several publicans over the years.”

License not renewed to Shinda Singh on 4th April 1987 for selling to under-18s and after hours.

It closed on 4th April 1987

It reopened as the COTTAGE in 1987.

Sandwell Evening Mail 10/10/1987

“A quiet night in a Midland pub ended in terrifying violence when one man was stabbed to death and another hacked with a meat cleaver, a court heard. Pervinder Singh Sahota (22) was jailed for 12 years by Mr. Justice McNeill, who said, ‘Everybody is tired of people who go out on social occasions carrying weapons. People who carry weapons drink too much, lose their tempers and use them.’

Pervinder Singh, of Marshall Street, Smethwick, pleaded guilty at Stafford Crown Court to the manslaughter of Harbagan Singh, aged 32, of Pool Road. His plea of not guilty to murder was accepted. He also admitted wounding Makhan Singh, aged 30, of Sycamore Road, with intent to cause him grievous bodily harm.

Mr. Anthony Palmer, QC, prosecuting, said father of three Harbagan Singh bled to death when an artery in his leg was severed. He was stabbed by Pervinder Singh during an argument in the ALBION pub in Langley. Mr. Palmer said Pervinder Singh took a meat cleaver his girlfriend carried and went back to the bar and began hitting out at Makhan Singh and Harbagan Singh. Makhan Singh described Pervinder Singh as ‘wild,’ Mr. Palmer said. Harbagan Singh was stabbed in the leg. ‘He died in hospital an hour later,’ said Mr. Palmer.

Pervinder Singh told detectives, ‘We were just fighting. I did not want to kill him – I only wanted to stop him.’

Mr. Anthony Barker, QC, defending, denied that the attack on Harbagan Singh was ‘murderous.’ His death was a ‘tragic misfortune.’

Jaswinder Singh (30), of St. Albans Road, was jailed for 18 months. He pleaded guilty to removing the cleaver, which was thrown into a river. His wife, Davinder Kaur (26) and her brother Sikander Singh Mann (22), of Rosefield Road, were conditionally discharged for two years. They admitted perverting the course of justice by removing weapons. Surinder Kaur Sandhu (20), of Montague Road, Pervinder Singh's girlfriend, admitted intending to pervert the course of justice by removing the cleaver. Sentence on her was adjourned for probation reports."

The Court of Requests goal had cells for both men and women In 1846 Oldbury became part of Circuit 25, and County Courts were held monthly in the building.....”

It is a Grade II listed building.

It opened on 17th January 2012.

Halesowen News 17/1/2012

“JD Wetherspoon has opened its new pub the COURT OF REQUESTS in Oldbury today (Tuesday) creating 50 jobs in the town. The company spent £1.25 million re-developing the former courtroom and library, Church Street.

The COURT OF REQUESTS will be open from 8am until 12 midnight Sunday to Thursday and from 8am until 1am Friday and Saturday. However, due to a problem today the pub didn’t open its doors until 9am. The former Public Library is one of the oldest buildings in Oldbury and is now a Grade II listed building, it was erected in 1816 as a court. The premises included a gaol, with cells for male and female prisoners. The new pub will specialise in real ales, serving a wide range of beers, including those from local and regional brewers.

Manager Simon Taylor said, ‘Myself and my team are looking forward to welcoming customers into the pub and we are confident that it will be a good addition to Oldbury’s community.’

The new-look pub will feature one bar, as well as an enclosed beer garden to the rear of the premises, where smoking will be permitted. There is also a small car park at the rear of the pub.

A spokesman for Wetherspoons said, ‘The design of individual rooms has been inspired by the building’s previous uses, including library, cells, courtroom and dining room. An original cell door has been incorporated, as well as the prisoners’ exercise-yard pavers, as a walkway within the beer garden. Photos, local history artwork and information boards relating to the history and characters of the area, will be displayed in the pub.’

The pub is wheelchair accessible and has a specially-adapted toilet for people with disabilities.”

“Patrons at an Oldbury pub might not have the finest champagne to quaff or caviar to chomp but they can relax in the knowledge their toilet is one of the best in the country. The COURT OF REQUESTS, Church Street, has been awarded a platinum star rating by inspectors in the Loo of the Year Awards 2012. The awards are aimed at highlighting and improving standards of ‘away from home’ toilets across the UK and authorised inspectors make unannounced visits to hundreds of toilets at sites across the UK, in order to judge them. The toilets are judged against numerous criteria, including décor and maintenance, cleanliness, accessibility, hand washing and drying equipment and overall management.

The COURT OF REQUESTS, a Wetherspoon pub, is managed by Simon Taylor who is determined his award-winning toilets never go down the pan. He said, ‘I am delighted with the award. Staff at the pub work hard to ensure the toilets are in first-class condition at all times and it is great that this has been recognised by the inspectors.’

The building used to house Oldbury jailhouse and court and recently was a library before being transformed into a pub.

The Loo of the Year Awards 2012 managing director, Mike Bone, said, ‘The toilets at the COURT OF REQUESTS have been designed and fitted out to a very high standard and are both clean and well maintained. The pub richly deserves its platinum award – the highest individual award the judges can deliver.’”

“An Oldbury street will be closed for two days for work to be carried out on a pub roof.

Market Street will be closed on Saturday and Sunday (February 2 and 3) from Church Street to its junction with the car park at the back of the COURT OF REQUESTS pub to allow a crane to be brought in. Diversions will be in place.”

Halesowen News 27/12/2013

“Shopped-out men looking to swerve the January sales can head to an Oldbury pub which is holding its own New Year sales. Manager Simon Taylor is reducing the price on a range of drinks and meals at the pub in Church Street for three weeks from Thursday, January 2 until Thursday, January 23 inclusive. The pub will be serving a selection of drinks between £1.99 and £2.49 as well as filter coffee at 79p a cup. It will also be offering a choice of five meals at £2.99 each.

Manager Simon Taylor said, ‘Department stores and shops hold their sales in January, so it is the perfect time to have a sale in the pub too. I believe that given the choice of a trip to a sale at the shops or a sale at the COURT OF REQUESTS, most people would prefer a visit to the pub. The range of drinks and meals on sale is aimed at suiting a wide variety of tastes and I believe that the January Sale will prove popular with our customers.’” “International beers will be gracing the pumps of pubs in Halesowen, Cradley Heath, Rowley Regis and Oldbury during 17 day festival. The WILLIAM SHENSTONE, MOON UNDER THE WATER, the BRITANNIA and the COURT OF REQUESTS will have beers from South Africa, New Zealand, Sweden, Canada, USA, Belgium, Australia, Germany, Spain and Norway. The Wetherspoons beer festival runs from Friday, March 28 to Sunday, April 13 with all beers priced from £1.99 to £2.15 a pint.....

COURT OF REQUESTS manager Anna Haraszkiwicz added, ‘The festival will be the perfect way for real ale enthusiasts to enjoy a range of excellent beers from overseas brewers. It will also give them an opportunity to support brewers throughout the UK, as the pubs are featuring many of their beers.’

Many of the beers are available in the pubs for the first time, having been brewed exclusively for the festival. Customers will be able to sample any three of the real ales in special third of a pint glasses for the price of a pint.”

Halesowen News 6/1/2016

“A boozy row has erupted between Sandwell Council and Wetherspools after the authority officially called for residents to observe Dry January. The council ‘challenged’ residents to stop drinking alcohol for 31 days as part of the Alcohol Concern and Public Health England backed campaign.

Councillor Darren Cooper, leader of Sandwell Council, said, ‘Once the excesses of Christmas and New Year are over, many of us plan to start off the year in a healthy way. Dry January is something I like to do every year. It’s a good opportunity to give your body the chance to have a detox after the festive period. People who have taken part in previous years say after a month without alcohol they sleep better, lose weight and generally feel more energetic.’ He added, ‘Dry January isn’t about forcing everyone to give up alcohol for a month but remembering we all need to look after ourselves and live as healthy a lifestyle as possible.’

However, giant pub firm JD Wetherspoon, which runs the COURT OF REQUESTS in Oldbury, the BRITANNIA in Blackheath and the MOON UNDER THE WATER in Cradley Heath, blasted Cllr. Cooper and the council for being ‘nannyish.’ Wetherspoon’s PR spokesman Eddie Gershon said, ‘People enjoy going out for a drink in a local pub, if people decide to drink less in a particular time then that is a decision for them to make. We are not sure that a leader of a council needs to be endorsing something like Dry January and one could ask the council whether it would also put out statements about not having a fry up, having a takeaway or eating less during a particular month of the year. People who go to the pub are not stupid and can make their own decisions, it feels a bit nannyish, and it could lead to councils pontificating on a whole range lifestyle actions.’

However, Cllr. Cooper hit back, he said, ‘I don’t see anything nannyish about it – we’re not telling people they shouldn’t drink, but like many public organisations, we’re backing a national campaign that encourages people to think about their health. As the authority responsible for public health and alcohol treatment, of course we’re going to support public health campaigns that help tackle things like excessive drinking, obesity and inactivity.’ He added, ‘I am sure JD Wetherspoon’s profits will survive whether customers are drinking a pint of lager or a pint of lemonade.’”

“An Oldbury pub has won acclaim for the quality and standards of its toilets in the 2017 Loo of the Year Awards. The COURT OF REQUESTS, in Church Street, has been awarded a platinum star rating by inspectors – the highest award possible. Celebrating their 30th anniversary this year, the awards are aimed at highlighting and improving standards of ‘away from home’ toilet provision across the UK, with inspectors making unannounced visits to thousands of toilets across the UK. All of the toilets are graded from bronze to platinum with unacceptable toilets not graded at all.

Kirsty Hopkins, manager of the JD Wetherspoon pub, said, ‘We are delighted with the award. Staff at the pub ensure the toilets are in first-class condition at all times and it is great that this has been recognised by the inspectors.’

The platinum rating is given only to outlets which offer ‘exceptional toilets’, being judged against numerous criteria, including décor and maintenance, cleanliness, accessibility, hand washing and drying equipment and overall management. Awards’ managing director, Mike Bone, said, ‘The toilets at the COURT OF REQUESTS have been designed and fitted out to a very high standard and are both clean and well maintained. Birmingham Journal 12/5/1855

“On Tuesday, the Coroner, R. Docker, Esq, held an inquest at the house of Mr. Joseph Underhill, the ANCHOR INN, Oldbury, on the body of a married woman, aged about fifty years, named Simpson, who resided near the first toll gate leading from Oldbury to Smethwick. The circumstances of this rather singular case, which has occasioned considerable interest in the locality, were as follow.

On Saturday evening last, a little before eleven o'clock, two girls entered the shop of Mr. Holland, draper, Oldbury, and asked for a trifling article, which, however, they did not purchase. On returning to the shop shortly afterwards they purchased a boot lace. During their presence in the shop on both occasions Mr. Holland observed a person standing near the street door evidently awaiting an opportunity when she might not be observed; and whilst he was stooping behind the counter she disappeared, carrying with her two pieces of print containing twenty-five yards each. Mr. Holland jumped over the counter, but not seeing the course the thief had taken he detained the two girls, believing that they were accomplices. Police-sergeant Simmons was sent for, and in answer to questions, the girls declared they knew nothing of the thief. They were accordingly set at liberty and went in the direction of Smethwick. Simmons deeming it right to watch them followed, and near to the Anchor Bridge they joined the deceased, with whom they commenced conversing. The latter had evidently been at market, for she was loaded with various articles. Partly on this account and partly because the girls were conversing with her, the officer suspected she must be the person whom Mr. Holland saw at his shop door. He accordingly accosted the deceased by tapping her on the shoulder, and inquired of the deceased what she had beneath her shawl. She made no reply, but commenced squalling and crying ‘murder.’ Simmons tried to appease her, observing to her that he meant her no harm, and requested that she would go to Mr. Underhill’s public house. She said she was not afraid to go, and went, but seemed much frightened. She was accommodated with a chair, and as she seemed in a fainting state, water was given to her. Simmons told Mr. Underhill why he followed her, and left. She inquired who Simmons was, and being told that he was a policeman she became much worse, exclaiming, ‘Oh dear! My mother died with fright, and I shall do the same.’ She died in about half an hour afterwards. Mr. Cooper, surgeon, was sent for, but life was extinct before he arrived. On taking her to the house, Simmons recognised her as a respectable woman, and of course did not offer to search her.

The Coroner and Jury seemed to be satisfied that the officer did not exceed his duty, and that he did no more than what was perfectly right. They accordingly returned a verdict, Died by the Visitation of God. Nothing has since been heard of the stolen property.”

Birmingham Journal 14/7/1855

“On Saturday, at the house of Mr. Joseph Underhill, CROSS ANCHOR, Oldbury, before R. Docker, Esq, Coroner, the adjourned inquest was resumed on the bodies of John Beddall, George Lewis, and Henry Banks, three of the four men who were killed on the 21st of June, by a fall of coals at the Hange Colliery, at Tividale, belonging to Messrs. Round. The Government Inspector (T. Wynne, Esq), and one of the proprietors, were present at the enquiry.

It was shown by the evidence that the deceased were bandsmen, and having a little leisure time they were sitting down smoking when about twenty tons of coal fell upon them. When extricated they were quite dead. The portion of the mine that gave way was what is called a ‘chance’ stratum, and the roof from which it fell was six or seven yards high.

The Inspector examined the propping of the coal, and it transpired that timber was used so long as this particular roof was not more than nine or ten feet high, but that as the mine was extracted, and the roof became higher, timbers were dispensed with, as it was stated was customary.

A verdict of Accidental Death was returned.

Mr. Round told the coroner and jury that he would in future see that the workings were propped to a greater height than heretofore."

“Yesterday, at Oldbury Police Court, John Downing Underhill, landlord of the ANCHOR INN, Birmingham Road, and Patrick Connor, of Low Town, were charged with fighting in the above-named public house on the 25th ult. Mr. W. H. Vernon defended.

Police-constables Davis and Noakes gave evidence to the effect that on the day in question they found the two men fighting, and both their faces were badly bruised and cut. Connor was Underhill's father-in-law, and when the police officers spoke to the landlord about the disturbance he replied that it was a bit of a family bother.

The defence was that the landlord was struck by two men whom he was ejecting, and that Connor went to his assistance and in the scuffle was knocked down.

Ultimately the Bench dismissed the case.”

“John Johnson, landlord of the CROSS ANCHORS INN, Birmingham Road, was summoned for being drunk on his own licensed premises on the 16th inst. He was also further charged with abusing Police-constable Bayliss on the 17th inst whilst in the execution of his duty. Mr. W. Shakespeare defended.

Police-sergeant Hill said about three o'clock pm on the 16th inst, he, in company with Police-constable Bayliss, visited the defendant's house. He saw the defendant behind the bar apparently very drunk. Defendant when witness told him that he would be reported challenged his statement as to his condition, and added that he could ‘do the right about turn.’ Witness visited defendant's house again on the following Thursday to serve a summons, and at the same time intimated to defendant that he would probably hear of his conduct on the 17th inst, when defendant said he would plead guilty to the first charge, but not to the second.

Four other constables corroborated the evidence of the last witness as to the condition of the defendant on the 16th inst.

For the defence several witnesses were called, who denied that the defendant was drunk; and defendant himself pleaded that he was excited and not drunk.

With regard to the second charge, Police-constable Bayliss said the defendant shouted at him and asked when his case was coming on, and also added that the clothes witness was wearing he (defendant) had paid for, and when he got a drop too much beer in his own house he was the first to run him in. Defendant became so abusive that witness had to handcuff him and take him to the police station. On the way to the station defendant made use of threats, and said he would stick a knife in him, or pay somebody else to do it. In reply to Mr. Shakespeare witness said he handcuffed the defendant for using obscene language, and he was not aware that he had committed an illegal act by so doing.

Superintendent Spike and Sergeant Hill gave evidence as to the condition of defendant when at the police station.

For being drunk on his premises defendant was fined 10s and costs, and the other charge was withdrawn on the defendant paying the costs.”

“At Oldbury, yesterday – before Messrs. W. E. Chance and J. W. Wilson – Thomas Hamblett, landlord of the CROSS ANCHORS INN, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, was charged with using abusive language towards Police-sergeant Cooper and Police-constables Bayliss, Perkins, and Chamberlain. Mr. J. S. Sharpe defended.

Hearing voices in defendant’s house at midnight on the 14th inst, the officers entered and saw the defendant and his wife sitting at a table. They then went out, and upon going to the front of the house the defendant came to the window and called them scamps, vagabonds, frauds, blackguards, and other abusive names.

Mr. Sharpe, for the defence, urged that no offence had been committed by the use of mere abusive words, and that the officers had not been deterred from performing their duty, and were not threatened in any way.

The Bench decided that an offence had been committed, and defendant was ordered to pay the costs (11s), and was also bound over to keep the peace for three months. Mr. Sharpe appealed to the Bench to modify their decision, and allow the defendant to pay the costs, but the Bench declined.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 4/3/1914

“An application was made at Oldbury Police Court yesterday at the adjourned Licensing Sessions, by George Long, of the CROSS ANCHORS INN, Birmingham Road, Oldbury, for a provisional order sanctioning the removal of his licence to certain premises about to be constructed at the corner of Abbey Road and Thimblemill Road, Warley. The application was opposed by the Commissioners of Customs and Excise, Holt Brewery Co., the BEAR HOTEL, and a large property owner in the district; Ansell’s Brewery; Mr. Roe, an off-licence holder in Threshires Oak Road; the Rev E. Hulbert, on behalf of St. Hilda’s Church; Mr. Douglas for the Bearwood Adult School for men, and Mr. Chapman for Bearwood Baptist Church. After consideration, the magistrates announced that the application would be refused.”

“The Oldbury Licensing Justices granted the application made on Wednesday last by Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers, Ltd. for the removal of the full licence of the CROSS ANCHORS INN, Oldbury, to new premises to be erected near the Smethwick housing site bounded by Thimblemill Road, Pargeter Road, and Norman Road, Warley, subject to the surrender of the licence of the OLD BOAT INN Canal Side, Oldbury, and the off-licence at Katherine Road, Warley, and certain alterations in the plans of the proposed new building.”

“Housing developments at Warley were mentioned at a meeting of the Worcestershire Licensing Committee on Monday, when Mr. J. G. Hurst, KC, applied, on behalf of Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers, for confirmation of the removal of the licence of the CROSS ANCHORS, Birmingham Road, Oldbury, to premises proposed to be erected in an area where new houses have been built.

Mr. Hurst said there had been a great movement of the population in Oldbury. The CROSS ANCHORS was in a district where there were 35 fully-licensed houses, and in the new area, where it was proposed to remove the licence, there were only two fully-licensed houses. It would be to the advantage of the Local Authority if the licence was removed as suggested, as it would be made possible, with less expenditure, to carry out road widening.

Mr. Hurst said it was proposed to surrender the licence of the OLD BOAT INN and an off-licence near the new site.

The committee confirmed the removal, the Chairman (Mr. Bund) saying that the surrender of the two licences was part of the bargain.”

The house closed at 10pm on 4th April 1928, and the license removed to the THIMBLEMILL, Smethwick.

"On Saturday last, at the CROSS GUNS INN, the Oldbury company of hand bell ringers rang a true and complete peal of Kent treble bob major, consisting to 5,088 changes, in two hours and 49 minutes, by the following, viz, Mr. Ambrose Hickinbottom treble, Mr. James Ward of Bromford second, George Bates third, James Jones fourth, Thomas Jones fifth, William Davies of Spon Lane sixth, William Waterhouse seventh, and William Toy eighth. The whole was conducted in a very able manner by Benjamin Bach of Oldbury. They would have no objection in meeting the Handsworth company for £5."

"On Tuesday morning last, a serious accident occurred to a poor boy of the name of Parsons. It appears that two empty boats were being drawn by one horse along the canal, at Bromford, near Oldbury, when by some means the unfortunate lad got his leg entangled in the rope, or strap, connecting the two, when the boats were close together. The driver, unconscious of the same, rather hastened the speed of his horse, when the rope becoming tightened, the poor lad's leg was very severely injured, the ankle being dislocated; the bone protruded through an extensive laceration of the soft parts, to the extent of four inches. The whole of the muscles and tendons were torn from their attachment to the bone, which was completely denuded of even its natural covering. The unfortunate sufferer was quickly taken to the house of Mr. Crumph, CROSS GUNS, Oldbury, who very kindly received and paid every attention to the poor boy. On Dr. Cooper's arrival, although the wound assumed so formidable a character, he with some difficulty reduced the dislocation, placed the parts in apposition, thinking it better to give the boy a chance of even a stiff ankle, in preference to a wooden leg. We are glad to hear that he is, up to this time, progressing favourably."

“Midsummer Assizes for the County and City of Worcester.....

Charles Bennett, 35, builder, surrendered to his bail charged with having in his possession two forged £5 Bank of England notes, at Oldbury, on the 16th of April.

Mr. Huddleston stated the facts of the case on behalf of the prosecution at some length, and then called:

Elizabeth Nock: I am the wife of Philip Nock who keeps the CROSS GUNS, at Oldbury. Prisoner came to the house on the 16th April, and called for a glass of ale. I borrowed six-pence of him to make up some change for a gentleman. He said he could lend me one, but it was the only one he had. He then asked me to change a £5 note for him, and produced what I thought was a note. I went up stairs for change, but finding that I had not enough, I gave the note to Ann Dudley to return to the prisoner. I afterwards said I would endeavour to get it changed for him elsewhere, and he again gave me the note. I asked him to put his name upon it, as there was some difficulty in getting a note changed in that neighbourhood without a name upon it. He wrote ‘Charles Holland’ upon it. My little boy went for the change, but could not get it, and the note was again returned to the prisoner. (The note was here produced and identified by the witness as the note upon which the prisoner had written.)

Cross-examined: I am perfectly sure he wrote Charles Holland upon it. I did not see any samples of hops with him. I can't say whether he was tipsy or not.

By the Court: If there are any other initials on the note the prisoner did not write them.

Ann Dudley deposed to receiving the note from Mrs. Nock, and giving it back to prisoner.

William Bridge keeps a public house at Oldbury. On the 16th April the prisoner came to my house and wanted me to buy some hops. He had two glasses of ale and some bread and cheese, and tendered in payment what seemed to be a £5 note. I could not change it, and took it to a grocer named Lines, who thought it was a bad one, and went back with me. Prisoner afterwards tendered a good sovereign in payment for his bread and cheese. Lines had some conversation with the prisoner, and presently a policeman and Mr. Lee came in.

Cross-examined: Prisoner seemed perfectly sober.

Mr. Samuel Lines, grocer, deposed to the last witness bringing the note to him for change. He saw it was spurious, and went back with Mr. Bridge, and asked the prisoner if he knew the note was bad. He replied that he did not, and in answer to a question said he had it from Messrs. Stroud and Co., hop merchants, for whom he travelled, a very respectable firm, having warehouses in Birmingham, Liverpool, and Burton-upon-Trent. Witness then asked him where their warehouses in Liverpool were, and he could not tell. Witness asked to be allowed to see the samples of hops he had, and upon their being produced he detected at once that the prisoner had been speaking falsely, and was not in the trade. PC Simmonds then came in, and the prisoner put the note in a port monnaie.

In cross examination the witness prevaricated considerably from his statement when before the magistrates; and Mr. Powell asked that the depositions should be read. Upon that being done, the witness admitted that he had made a mistake today – instead of saying that he had received the note from Messrs. Stroud, he said ‘he had received it from a man whom he should know again if he saw him.’

PC Samuel Simmonds took the prisoner into custody, and found the two notes upon him. He said he had received them from a Mr. Stevenson, a hop merchant in the Moseley Road, Birmingham, and gave £10 in hard cash for them at the New Street Station. Upon searching him I found upon his person four sovereigns and some silver and copper moneys, all good. He gave his name as Charles Bennett, of Spon Lane. I found that correct, but upon inquiry for Mr. Stevenson, I could not find any such person.

Mr. Whitehouse, the postmaster of Burton-upon-Trent, deposed that there was no such firm as Stroud and Co. in that town.

Mr. Rhodes, hop merchant, of the Bull Ring, Birmingham, stated that there was no firm of Stroud and Co. in that town

Inspector Glossop, of the Birmingham police, stated that there was no Mr. Stevenson, a hop merchant, in the Moseley Road.

Mr. Bumstead, the inspector of notes to the Bank of England, proved that the notes found upon the prisoner were forgeries, and from the same plate.

Mr. Powell then addressed the jury for the defence, and after a lengthy appeal to their feelings, contending that the transaction was more a mistake than anything else, called John James, who, amidst other improbabilities, said that he saw the prisoner give sovereigns for the notes to two men at the Birmingham railway station, whom he (witness) thought the prisoner knew. He gave the prisoner a good character for eleven years.

Another witness named Houston spoke to the prisoner as being an 'honest and respectable' builder and contractor, whom he had known a long time.

Both these witnesses were closely cross-examined by Mr. Huddleston as to their own respectability; and it seemed also clear that they were anything but correct in their statements regarding the prisoner.

His lordship summed up at great length, recapitulating the greater portion of the evidence.

The jury found the prisoner guilty, and he was sentenced to six years' penal servitude."

Worcestershire Chronicle 10/9/1856

"On Thursday last, R. Docker, Esq, held an adjourned inquest at the house of Mr. P. Nock, the CROSS GUNS INN, Oldbury, on the bodies of John Sheldon and John Bryan, two of the eleven men who were killed on the 13th of August, by an explosion of sulphur, at Lord Ward's Ramrod Hall Colliery, near Oldbury. H. M. Wainwright Esq, solicitor, of Dudley, attended on the part of Lord Ward, as also did E. F. Smith, Esq, his lordship's agent. L. Brough and T. Wynne, Esqrs, Government Inspectors, were also present. Mr. Bodington again attended for Mr. Spruce, the ground bailiff.

The evidence given was just the same as that laid before the Staffordshire jury who sat upon the other bodies, and who returned a verdict of Accidental Death. We are glad to find that the Worcestershire jury came to a more sensible conclusion; but it affords a fine illustration of the dependence to be placed on Coroners inquests

The coroner, in summing up the evidence, said it was the jury's duty to enquire if the rules, which were founded on the Act of Parliament, had been properly carried out in this instance; and if not, upon whom the responsibility of the neglect was imposed. They found that no means of ventilation beyond the natural means had been employed from Saturday to Wednesday while the pit was standing. If it were necessary that the butty should use a lamp on Wednesday morning, beyond all doubt the butty had failed in his duty; and as the fire which he took undoubtedly caused the explosion, that neglect of duty amounted so far as he was concerned to the crime of manslaughter. It was of course competent for them to return such a verdict against him (Baker). Having ascertained who fired the pit, they have to would have to ask 'who charged it?' The Coroner pointed out the first general rule, which said that an adequate amount of ventilation should be produced, &c, and went on to say that one could hardly think the rule was intended to mean that the pit should be left to rely upon the mode in which the workings were constructed, and thereby be allowed and expected to ventilate itself; such was sometimes the custom in this district it seemed. He held that it was not to be tolerated that a dangerous occupation, wherein the danger was capable of being lessened – wherein the mode of working was known to be capable of being carried on with a decreased amount of danger to a very material extent by established and known means – that they should come to the conclusion that all those men should be overlooked, and that until some extraordinary occurrence takes place, and some explosion has happened, and an enquiry took place, that all means of ventilation should be disregarded. It was not for them to enquire whether the parties in management of it had a right to suppose it was in a condition to ventilate itself; bearing in mind the proved fact, that the ventilation had not always been good. If the necessity for having a fire had been once established, somebody had been guilty of violating the rule referred to, in not keeping one constantly burning. Upon whom did the rule impose that responsibility? They would consider whether it was not the duty of 'the owners or their agents.' They would satisfy themselves whether the ground bailiff was not the responsible individual in this case. If it devolved upon the butty, as Mr. Spruce had said, then all the onus of charging was well as of firing the pit would devolve upon that unfortunate man. They all dis-owned the responsibility except the dead man (Baker). If they considered that the ventilation of the pit was bad, because of an error of human judgement on the part of the manager (whoever he might be), and that he adopted the same means as the principal portion of his neighbours, then he would be liable to no criminal charge.

The jury said that they found that the deceased men had come to their death by the wilful conduct of Thomas Baker, in not attending to the call of the men at the bottom for the lamp, and his reckless conduct in taking fire down, which caused the explosion.

The verdict was Manslaughter against Thomas Baker."

"An inquest on the bodies of Abraham Sherwood and Daniel Chinn, two of the eight men killed at Messrs. Mills and Sons pit, near Rowley, on the 10th ult, was held on Thursday afternoon last, at the house of Mr. Philip Nock, of the CROSS GUNS, Oldbury, by R. Docker, Esq. Mr. Brough, the Government Inspector, was present, as also was Mr. Edward Aston, the ground bailiff of the pit. The Coroner having been furnished with the depositions taken by Mr. Hinchliffe, who held a similar enquiry last week, read the evidence to the Jury, who only asked a few questions, and examined the plans and the safety lamp. The Coroner, in his summing up, said that Mr. Mills was to blame for not having carried out the direction of the Inspector [for improved ventilation] but he thought the evidence would not sustain any criminal charge. The Jury consulted for about half an hour, and then returned a verdict of Accidental Death, with an addition that there was great blame to be attached to Messrs. Mills, the proprietors, for not carrying out the Government Inspector's instructions."

Worcestershire Chronicle 25/11/1857

"An inquest was held on Wednesday, at the house of Mr. P. Nock, the CROSS GUNS INN, Oldbury, before R. Docker, Esq, on the body of a man unknown, which was found on the previous day in an old coal pit belonging to Mr. Richard Haines, and situated near the SYCAMORE INN, Oldbury. A pony having been lost, the pit was searched, and the remains of a human body were found in a very advanced state of decomposition. The clothes were entire, and seemed to indicate that the deceased had been a farm labourer. In one of the pockets were found part of a gunlock, a lead pencil, part of a cigar, and a brass tobacco box, with the words 'D. Jones' engraved on the outside of the lid. The inquest was adjourned for a week.

It has since been discovered that the deceased was Daniel Jones, from Willenhall, near Wolverhampton, aged 38, who left his home five weeks last Saturday night to come to Oldbury, and nothing had been heard of him since till his body was found in the pit."

Birmingham Journal 26/12/1857

"The Inquest in the Body of Mr. Collins.

We have already given the full facts of this melancholy case. An inquest was commenced on the body of Collins on Saturday last, at the SPON LANE TAVERN, Mr. S. Underhill's, before G. H. Hinchliffe, Esq, and that was adjourned until Wednesday last. We note in this state of things, that after hearing the evidence of Mr. Davies, surgeon, who under the Coroner's precept had made a post mortem examination of the body of Mr. Collins, the jury, under Mr. Hinchliffe's direction, returned a verdict that death had ensued from disease of the heart. It is unfortunately clear that deceased, formerly in very good circumstances, has for some years given himself up to habits of intemperance, and at the adjourned inquest, from the testimony of a little girl, named Sarah Howley, it was shown that Mr. Collins was at the CROSS GUNS, in Oldbury, so late as eleven o'clock on the night of his melancholy death, and was then very much intoxicated. This case had excited much painful interest in West Bromwich, the more so from the fact that the widow of the deceased, left with five children, is herself not a sober woman."

"On Friday afternoon, at the house of Mr. P. Nock, the CROSS GUNS INN, Oldbury, R. Docker, Esq, coroner, held an inquest on John Perry, aged about forty years, one of four men who were killed on the previous Tuesday afternoon while at work in one of Mr. Thomas Davis's pits at the Lodge Colliery, West Bromwich. The names of the three other unfortunate men were Joseph Ingram, John Hendley, and Topley. Mr. Brough, the Government Inspector of coal mines, was in attendance and gave evidence.

From the testimony of a man named Jacob Griffiths, it appeared that about half past three o'clock on Tuesday afternoon the four men were at work in 'the band,' in a part of the pit about eighty yards from the bottom, when what is known as a 'bump' came in upon them and buried them. He (Griffiths) and another man were at work near the place, and had a very narrow escape. The deceased were completely covered with earth, &c, of which about fifty tons had fallen in. The other men in the pit were set to work to recover the bodies, which they succeeded in doing after nearly three hours' labour. The bodies were fearfully mutilated. The Inspector gave evidence to the effect that he had been down the pit and found that it was and had been in a very dangerous state; it had been an old mine. There was, he said, plenty of timber for propping – enough, to use his own expression, to build a man-of-war; but the mine was in that state that no amount of timber would render it safe. Within four days of the accident he had posted a letter to the proprietor informing him of the insecurity of the pit; he having, prior to the accident, been down several times. He said that within the last eighteen months ten men had been killed at different times in the same mine. Mr. Brough regretted that he had not power to close such dangerous places, but he intimated that he would place a notice on the bank cautioning colliers from going down. But, he added, men in this part of the country were so fond of large wages, that they were ready to risk their lives anywhere.

The Jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death, expressing a hope that Mr. Brough's opinion would be forwarded to the proprietors.

By the accident four wives are made widows, and eleven or twelve children orphans."

Birmingham Daily Post 24/3/1858

"An inquest was held yesterday (Tuesday) evening, at the house of Mr. Philip Nock, the CROSS GUNS INN, Oldbury, before R. Docker, Esq, Coroner, and a Jury, on the body of Elizabeth Felton, aged about 17, who met with her death on Friday, the 19th instant, in consequence of her brother, George Felton, a lad aged about 13, having thrown a stone at her, which struck her just beneath the left ear, as previously reported. The affair, it will be remembered, took place at a stone pit near Oldbury, belonging to Mr. W. H. Dawes, on the bank of which the deceased and her brother were employed.

Philip Williams, a man employed at the pit, gave particulars as to how the deceased and her brother were employed on Friday; the former having to drive the horse which drew the skips of stone from the mouth of the pit to the edge of the bank, and the latter having to pick up the stones afterwards. He then said: George Felton came in a great hurry with one skip, and his sister then said to him, 'You young devil, if you come here hurrying and scurrying, I'll knock your head off; you have been lying down at the pit, talking to James Williams, and I won't have your hurry.' George Felton replied, 'No I arn't, red head,' and then drew in his skip, upon which she threw a handful of dirt in his eyes. He stooped to avoid the dirt, and as he rose he picked up a stone from the ground and threw it at her, but it missed her. She then went to him and hit him tremendous heavy about the head with her open hands, and then with her fists, exclaiming, 'You young devil, I'll kill you if you come here bully-ragging me about,' She then loosed him, and the lad struck her with the small whip which he had in his hand. The whip went round her loins, and the lash smacked in front of her. It did not hurt her, but she took it off him and threw it away, and then pushed him down and beat him very much with her open hands and her fists about the head. After this she left him on the ground, and was coming towards her work, when the lad, who was crying very much, raised himself on one knee, and picking up a bit of dirt about as big as a walnut he threw it, and it caught her behind the left ear. It was a piece of hard dirt, but it was not a stone, for I noticed it particularly. It was about the substance of fire-clay unground. She was standing about five or six feet from him when he threw at her. As soon as she was struck she turned round to look at her brother, and stood for two or three seconds. She then put her hand to her head, and in a moment fell upon her knees and then to the ground. The lad at once cried, 'Oh Lord, Philip do come here!' but when I went and reared her up she was dead. The lad cried enough to alarm the whole place, saying, 'Oh, my sister is dead!' and 'Oh, our Betsy, do rise!' He was very much distressed. I called Parkes, the doggy, to my assistance, and we removed the body nearer to the pit, and I went for a doctor, but she was dead in a minute after she fell. She was afterwards carried to Furnace Row, where she and her brother lived with their mother and father. The witness said the female was always very passionate with her brother, but he added, in answer to a Juror, that if he had interfered and given each a box of the ears he would have had to appear before the Magistrates for it. The witness said the lad threw the dirt immediately after his sister had beaten him.

Mr. Cooper, surgeon, said: I saw the body about twelve o'clock on Friday, and life must have been extinct for about an hour. He had made a post-mortem examination. He found a small superficial bruise just over the right temple. He found that a small blood vessel had given way, and that this corresponded as regarded position with the outward injury behind the left ear. The brain was in a diseased state; in fact he hardly ever saw a brain more diseased. The immediate cause of death was pressure of blood over the surface of the brain, which blood came from the ruptured vessel described. He could not say that the rupture was produced by the blow described, but it was such an injury as might have been so produced. The degree of violence which the abrasion or bruise indicated, was sufficient to account for the rupture accruing by concussion, but in a healthy brain he hardly thought such a blow would be attended by similar consequences.

In answer to a Juror, Mr. Cooper said he did not think that medical aid, if immediately rendered, would have been of any avail.

The Coroner: Excitement, Mr. Cooper, may have produced that rupture as well as a blow.

Mr. Cooper: Oh, yes, certainly.

Maria Ansill gave evidence similar to that of Williams.

The Coroner put the case very clearly before the Jury, who, after some consultation, returned a verdict of Homicide by Misadventure."

Birmingham Daily Post 25/3/1858

"The Boiler Explosion at Messrs. Hingeley's. Inquest on the One of the Sufferers.

We have given some time since the full facts attendant upon this sad affair. On Monday last, R. Docker, Esq, Coroner, held his adjourned inquest at Mr. P. Nock's, CROSS GUNS INN, Oldbury, on the body of Charles Southwick, who was so severely injured by the explosion that his death took place in consequence on Monday, the 4th of March. The evidence went to show that the exploded boiler was new twelve months ago, but that it had leaked ever since it was put up. Having been repaired, it still leaked; and when it exploded the deceased, who was near the spot, was very seriously injured and scalded. The sufferer had been attended by Mr. E. Moore, surgeon, of Hales Owen, but gradually sank, and died as previously stated, from the effects of the accident.

Mr. Adam Dixon, of Smethwick, civil engineer, had been called in to make a professional examination of the exploded boiler, and this gentleman gave his usual careful account of the results of such examination. We need now only refer to the concluding paragraph of his report. 'I am of opinion,' says Mr. Dixon, 'that the boiler exploded from want of stiffness in the flue, which was rendered still weaker by the plates of which it was formed being of inferior iron.'

After hearing the observations of the Coroner, the jury, many of them practical men, and acquainted with the using and construction of boilers, said they agreed entirely in the opinion expressed by Mr. Dixon, and their verdict was in accordance with the view thus taken."

"On Wednesday evening an inquest was held before Mr. Ralph Docker, on the bodies of Thomas Weobley, and Charles Thomas, two boatmen, who were found drowned, on Tuesday morning, at the Flash Arm of the Low Level Canal, near the Railway Carriage Works, Oldbury.

As John Morris, a sawyer, working at the carriage establishment, was following his employment looking for some timber by the canal side, about seven o'clock, he perceived a body partly doubled up in the water, the head and feet being down, and the back visible above the surface. He called for a boat-hook, and the body, on being pulled out, proved to be that of Charles Thomas who was connected with a boat belonging to Mr. South, of Ledbury, which was lying near. As Weobley, who was also employed with Thomas on board the same barge, was not seen anywhere about, a search was made, and his body was also found about ten feet from the place.

The night of Monday was very stormy. The deceased were in the CROSS GUNS public house, Oldbury, about nine o'clock, and left in the direction of the canal; and it is thought that as the path to the boat was slippery, and dangerous, they must have slipped into the canal, and been drowned.

A verdict of Found Drowned in both cases was returned. Weobley has left a wife and four or five children."

"On Tuesday afternoon an inquest was held at the CROSS GUNS TAVERN, Oldbury, before R. Docker, Esq, on the body of a collier named William Williams, twenty-two years of age, who was killed on Wednesday morning last, in one of the pits at the Lodge Colliery, West Bromwich, belonging to Caleb Griffiths and others.

Emanuel Thomas, who was about a yard off the deceased at the time of his death, and who with him resided at Langley, stated that deceased was a pikeman, engaged in getting 'sawyer' in the thick coal measure, and while sitting down, about half a ton of coal – slips and swancull – fell upon the deceased, and killed him on the spot. The coal overhung the place where deceased and witness were sitting, but had been repeatedly tried and 'knocked hard.' It could not be got down, and was considered quite safe.

The accident being so simple in its nature a verdict of Accidental Death was immediately returned."

"On Monday evening last, an inquest was held at the CROSS GUNS INN (Mr. Nock's), Oldbury, before R. Docker, Esq, (Coroner), on the body of Benjamin Price, eighteen months old, the son of a labourer residing at Oldbury, who was drowned in a ditch on Sunday last. The mother saw the child run out of the house, and almost immediately followed it. She found it in a ditch containing about eighteen inches of water, quite dead. A verdict of Accidental Death was accordingly returned."

"The Coroner and his Partiality in Oldbury.

Sir. Knowing your readiness to give publicity to suppress partiality in the administration of justice, allow me to give you the following interesting information.

On Monday, November the 14th, I was called to attend a man of the name of Guest, at nine o'clock at night. I immediately went and found that life was extinct. I sent a note to the Coroner by his summoning officer, on the 15th, to apprise him of the death, and expressing my readiness to perform a post mortem examination if required, but received no reply. To my great surprise I heard of an inquest on Friday, the 18th, being held at the CROSS GUNS, Oldbury, on the body of the man Guest, which I attended without a summons, when I found another surgeon had received the Coroner's precept for a post mortem examination, at which myself and the jury felt much surprised; upon which I wrote to the Coroner for an explanation, but received no reply. If such a course is to be pursued, what encouragement would it be for any medical man to leave the social circle of his friends, or arouse from the slumbers of repose to attend and endeavor to relieve the pains of suffering humanity? Would it not at once start in his mind, let them send for him, or them, who are likely to (if the case prove a fatal one) to receive the Coroner's precept; so that through the reluctance of the one, and the recklessness of the other, nature is left to struggle with disease without any assistance, and through such a course would it not be likely for many a kind husband to be torn from the affections of a wife, and many a happy home left destitute? If you will please let this appear under the Oldbury news I should be greatly obliged.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant, J. Brown, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons."

"On Friday last an inquest was held at the CROSS GUNS INN (Mr. Nock's), before R. Docker, Esq, upon the body of an infant child that was found in the canal. Dr. Cooper made a post mortem examination, and found that the child was born alive, and had received various bruises. It had died from cold, exposure, and want, before it was thrown into the water. No clue could be ascertained as to who its parents were. The Jury returned a verdict in accordance with the evidence adduced. From the appearance of the body, it seemed to have been thrown into the canal out of an outhouse."

“On Monday, an inquest was held before Mr. Docker, Coroner, at the CROSS GUNS INN, Oldbury, touching the death of a collier named Henry Higgatt. Deceased was employed at Mr. Joseph Hackett’s colliery, called The Black-bat Colliery, at Oldbury. On the 15th inst he had been holing the thick coal in the slips, and had gone into the gate road, when suddenly a mass of coal, weighing 12cwt, fell upon him and crushed him very severely. He was extricated almost immediately, but only survived an hour or two.

Mr. Baker, the Government Inspector, expressed himself satisfied with the general arrangements of the pit, and the jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 4/7/1871

“On Saturday afternoon an inquest was held before Mr. Ralph Docker, at the CROSS GUNS INN, Bromford Lane, on the body of a collier named Richard Jones, 49 years of age, living close to the Whymsey Bridge, who met with his death on the 17th ult, at the Pressure Pit of Mr. Thomas Price, of Titford, under the following circumstances.

David Cox, collier, stated that he worked with the deceased, who was a pitman, at about three o'clock on the morning of the 17th ult. He was about six feet from the deceased (in the back), who was ‘thinning’ some coal off the side of the knob. While he was doing this a quantity of the roof measure of the top stratum of the thick coal, about a ton in weight, fell upon him and killed him on the spot.

Leonard Walker, who was at work within three or four yards of the deceased, was of opinion that the coal fell in, in consequence of what the deceased was doing – in getting it away from the pillars.

Samuel Dyas, the night ‘doggy,’ stated he believed that the spot was safe without timber. The witness was severely cross-examined by the Coroner and Mr. Baker (the Government inspector, who was in attendance to watch the case), from which it appeared that the doggy sent the men to work, and when they got there knew the place was not safe, but got some timber, and by his behaviour almost compelled them to work.

The jury found a verdict that the deceased met his death through an accident, but that the doggy was guilty of great neglect, and requested the Coroner to admonish him. The Coroner did so severely, and Mr. Baker told the doggy that he had not adhered to the rules, and that he was not fit to be in charge of a pit at all.”

“John Francis (28), of respectable appearance, and described as a clerk, of Lincoln, was charged with breaking into the dwelling-house of Thomas Price, CROSS GUNS INN, Church Street, on 22nd January. Mr. Price, landlord, deposed that on Friday night, the 21st, about 12 o’clock, he was aroused by hearing a noise downstairs, which seemed like a key dropped on a brick floor. He went down stairs into the bar, and saw the prisoner trying to open the door. He was in the act of unbolting the top bolt of the door. He succeeded in drawing the bolt, the door stuck through the frost. When he found that the door was fast and escape impossible, he came back to get through the other door. He (witness) caught hold of him as he was trying to escape through the door. Prisoner then put his hands up in the most imploring manner and asked witness to forgive him as he had not touched anything. He (prisoner) said he got through the cellar window. He asked for his hat, and on looking for this witness found a jemmy. Mrs. Hill expressed sympathy with the prisoner, and said she was sorry a respectable looking young man in such trouble. Prisoner then said he was a clerk, and that he had done it through poverty. PC Nash was then called in, and the prisoner handed over to his custody. He afterwards found that the cellar doors had been wrenched open.

Prisoner: I pulled the door open with my hands.

Mary Price, wife of the last witness, said the last time the cellar doors were used they were fastened, and they had not been opened since by any members of the family.

PC Nash said about twelve o'clock the prisoner was handed over to him by Mr. Price. He found two handkerchiefs tied around the prisoner's shoes. The prisoner said, 'Lord have mercy on me, I wish I were dead.' On searching him at the station he found a knife, containing a screwdriver, wax candles, matches, screw, a yard measure, and one farthing in money. He charged him, and he said, 'I plead guilty to all; I have done it in poverty; that has caused me to do it.' He had found there was a conviction against the prisoner five years ago at Stafford, when he was sentenced to six months imprisonment for stealing a watch and 6s 6d. On the first occasion he gave the name of John Francis, but on the 25th prisoner said to him (witness), 'I told you the wrong name, and I am very sorry for it.' He said, 'My name is James Frederick Northall,' and added that Mr. Shakespeare knew him. On enquiring at Mr. Shakespeare's he found that the prisoner some years ago was a clerk in the employ of Mr. Haywood, Cape, Smethwick.

Prisoner, who in answer to the charge pleaded that he was driven to it by cold and hunger, was committed to the Assizes for trial."

Police-constable Hottom and Police-sergeant Clarke stated that about two o'clock on the morning of the 30th ult they found defendant's premises open, and defendant and a man named William Barnsley in one of the rooms asleep. The defence was that there was no offence against the Licensing Act, as it was not proved the premises were kept open for the sale of liquor, and that Barnsley was there as a friend. The Bench, in dismissing the case, said they considered there were suspicious appearances which justified the police in taking the proceedings."

"At Oldbury Police Court, today, Samuel Baker, landlord of the CROSS GUNS INN, Church Street, Oldbury, was charged with keeping his licensed premises open during prohibited hours, on the 1st inst. Police-sergeant Cooper stated that at 12.30am on the date named he was on duty near the defendant's house, in company with Police-constable Holtum, when they saw a number of persons coming from the direction of the wake ground, some of whom went into the CROSS GUNS INN through a side door. Going in they found two men named Jones and Nicholas in one of the rooms. Jones rapped the table, and defendant's daughter came in and supplied them with something to drink, for which Jones paid. Police-constable Holtum gave corroborative evidence.

Mr. Sharpe, for the defence, did not dispute that the beer was supplied to Jones, but said the point disputed was as to whether the beer was actually paid for at the time.

The defendant stated that on the night of the 31st ult, which was Oldbury Wake, he had a great pressure of business, and was compelled to engage extra waiters, and those were the persons who were found on his premises, he having invited them to supper after the house was closed. He denied that the beer was paid for. Annie Baker also denied that she received any money from either Jones or Nicholas.

Jones and Nicholas denied paying for it.

Baker was fined £1 4s, including costs, and Jones was also fined £1 0s 6d, including expenses, for being upon the premises."

"Bankruptcy Proceedings. Re Samuel Baker, of Oldbury.

This debtor, formerly of the CROSS GUNS INN, Church Street, Oldbury, licensed victualler, and formerly carrying on business as a colliery proprietor at Oldbury and Tividale, came up for his public examination at the West Bromwich County Court, yesterday, before Mr. Registrar Watson.

The statement of affairs showed liabilities of £262 10s 4d, and a deficiency of £248 0s 4d.

In reply to Mr. L. J. Sharp (official receiver), it was elicited that the debtor commenced business about 1885, at Tividale, in partnership with his brother John, as colliery proprietors. The debtor's capital amounted to about £700. They traded together until 1889, when the debtor retired from the concern after losing the capital he had placed in it. He subsequently joined John Beasley, at the Old Sycamore Colliery, Oldbury, where he lost £230, which he received from the sale of a public house. Then he took on the CROSS GUNS INN, Oldbury, and in June last the landlord distrained the rent. Since then the debtor had not traded. The insolvency was attributed to bad trade, want of capital, and losses in business. Mr. T. R. Ponser represented the debtor, who was allowed to pass."

"On Saturday night a meeting of miners in connection with the West Bromwich Miners' Association was held at the CROSS GUNS INN, Church Street, Oldbury.

Mr. W. Hughes (the chairman) spoke of the value of unionism in protecting the interests of the men, and mentioned that the funds in connection with the West Bromwich Miners' Association amounted to £3,357 16s 0½d, and the Oldbury Lodge was worth £19 1s 3d.

Mr. G. Carter and Mr. H. Rust (agent) also addressed the meeting. The latter referred to the deputation which a few days ago waited upon the Home Secretary, and urged the need for more inspectors. In Great Britain there were 4,150 pits and fourteen inspectors, while in South Staffordshire and East Worcestershire there were 315 pits and two inspectors. It was impossible for these two officials to thoroughly inspect such a number of pits, and it was time the miners raised their voices on this important subject.

A resolution deciding to support the Wages Board was passed."

Superintendent Sheriff: And knowing this you still wish the license transferred to you? – Mrs. Treglown: I do.

Superintendent Sheriff: So long as you do it with your eyes open, I have no objection. The transfer was then granted.”

“Mr. J. W. Clulow, of Birmingham, appeared on behalf of Samuel Thompson and Sons, the owners of the above house, the renewal of the license of which was opposed on the ground of a conviction against the occupier of the house.

Mr. Herbert Jeffries, instructed by the Rev. J. Tollady and Mr. G. E. Simonds, asked for the consideration of the renewal of this license to be deferred until the adjourned licensing sessions, and for the holder of the license to personally attend the Court.

Mr. Clulow urged that the necessary notice of objection had not been served to Mr. Jeffries, and consequently his clients could not be heard. To adjourn the case till the adjourned licensing sessions would cause Mr. Thompson great inconvenience.

Mr. J. M. Wilson said the magistrates were willing to grant Mr. Jeffries’ application for an adjournment, and would also make an order for the holder of the license to personally attend the Court.

The adjourned licensing sessions have been fixed to take place on September 10th.”

The license renewal was refused at the Adjourned Licensing Meeting on 10th September 1901.

Birmingham Daily Gazette 11/9/1901

“Oldbury Adjourned Licensing Sessions.....

Mr. Clulow made application for the renewal of the licence of the CROSS GUNS INN, Church Street, owned by S. Thompson and Sons, Smethwick. Mr. Herbert Jeffreys appeared to oppose on behalf of Mr. G. E. Simonds, but on a technical point of law he was ruled out of Court.

Superintendent Sheriff urged that the premises were dilapidated, that there were two convictions within a month for permitting drunkenness last October and November, and that there were eleven other licensed houses within a radius of 200 yards, so that the house was altogether unnecessary.

Mr. Clulow said if it was necessary to reduce the number of licences he thought the NOAHS ARK INN, opposite, which the police described as a ‘dog kennel,’ and against which there was a conviction, should have been refused.

Major S. N. Thompson said there had been no complaints against the house except during one month last year, when they had difficulties with regard to tenants. Since January, 1897, there had been £261 12s 11d spent on the house in repairs.

Edward Briggs, architect, Birmingham, gave evidence as to the condition of the house and the repairs, and Mrs. Treglown, the tenant, said the takings averaged £10 or £12 a week. She had very much improved the class of customers the last ten months.

After retiring to consider their decision, Mr. Wilson explained with reference to the NOAHS ARK that it was only a beerhouse, and whatever their views in regard to it might be they would still be in the same position. The justices were agreed they must decline to renew the licence of the CROSS GUNS INN.

Mr. Clulow intimated that they would appeal against the decision.”

in her remaining there. Youths visited this house more than any other neighbouring houses. He could not say whether it was the oldest licensed house in Oldbury or not, but it was an old license. It was a house that could very well be spared.....”

Birmingham Journal 1/8/1846

“Last Saturday, a young man named John Smith, who lived at Tividale, and worked in Mr. Yates’s colliery, was sent on horseback to fetch a bottle of ale from his master’s residence, at Oldbury; but when he had got as far as Potter’s Bridge, the horse took fright at a load of bricks which were being turned out of a cart, and threw the unfortunate young man off, dreadfully fracturing his skull. He was carried to his sister’s house near at hand, where he was attended by Mr. Cooper, surgeon, but after lingering till Thursday, he expired in great pain. An inquest is to be held this day on his remains, before G. Hinchliffe, Esq, at Mr. G. Welch’s, the CROSS KEYS, Tat Bank.”

George Welch was also a grocer. [1850]

Worcestershire Chronicle 21/1/1852

“On Wednesday last an adjourned inquest was held before George Hinchliffe, Esq, at the house of Mr. George Welch, the CROSS KEYS, Tat Bank, on the body of a miner named William Morris, thirty-nine years of age, who came by his death under the following circumstances.

He was employed at a pit situated in Newbury Lane, belonging to Messrs. Taylor and Farley, and on the morning of the 2nd instant, was, with six others, lowered down the pit, for the purpose of commencing their day’s work. When about half-way down (the shaft being more than a hundred yards in depth) they suddenly began to descend at a fearfully rapid rate, and on reaching the bottom the concussion ‘bounced’ them all out of the skip, with the exception of the deceased, upon whom the heavy pit chain fell, killing him almost instantaneously. His six comrades escaped without any injury. It turned out that the accident had arisen from the machinery being thrown out of gear by the breaking of several of the teeth of a cog wheel. One of the teeth had been fractured some time back, and in repairing it, instead of having it secured in the usual way by a dove-tail joint, it was only fastened on the surface by the process known as ‘gob and cotter.’ On the morning of the accident the engineer found that this tooth was loose, and having driven a nail into it, he deemed it safe enough; but hence the occurrence by which seven men might have lost their lives.

Mr. J. Mills, engineer, of Great Bridge, who had been summoned to give evidence, being questioned by the jury, stated that he did not think it safe to work with a wheel one of the cogs of which was secured in such a manner; on the contrary, they ought to have new castings.

After deliberating for more than an hour, the jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death, being of opinion that the engineer had done all he could to make the wheel safe. At one period of the inquiry they appeared inclined to return a verdict of Manslaughter against the lessees of the pit, but this idea was abandoned after listening to the coroner’s exposition of the law bearing on such cases. The lessees were represented by Mr.

Holland, solicitor, and one of them stated that a new wheel had been ordered.”

Wolverhampton Chronicle 3/5/1854

“On Tuesday a meeting took place at the house of Mr. Welch, CROSS KEYS, Tat Bank, of delegates from the Oldbury and West Bromwich Order of Odd Fellows. The chair was taken by Mr. Thomas Field, QC; the vice-chair by Mr. Thomas Wall, SQ. The chief business was to audit the accounts of the previous half-year. There was a numerous attendance of delegates and gentlemen from the different lodges. Mr. Cooper, surgeon, of Oldbury, and several others, were in attendance. The business of the evening was conducted to the greatest satisfaction of all present, and all separated at an early hour.”

Birmingham Journal 5/11/1856

“An inquest was held by R. Docker, Esq, on Saturday, at the CROSS KEYS, Oldbury, on the body of a boy, ten years old, named Emanuel Green, who died on the preceding day in consequence of injuries received on Friday, the 24th ult, by an explosion of gunpowder in a blacksmith’s shop, in one of the collieries belonging to Captain Bennitt. The lad, it seemed, was sent from a pit’s mouth to a storehouse for three or four pounds of powder. On returning with it in a powder-can, he called at the shop where the smiths were at work. While here it is supposed that a spark from the fire came in contact with the gunpowder, as an explosion then took place. The lad was much burnt on the face, throat and arms. A verdict of Accidental Death was returned.”

Morning Advertiser 8/11/1856

“On Monday Mr. R. Docker held an inquest at the CROSS KEYS INN, Tat Bank, Oldbury, on the body of an infant female child, the circumstances attending whose death has caused the apprehension of the mother, a single woman, named Ellen Gould, aged 24 years; of her father, an old man, John Gould aged 57, and also the wife of the latter and mother of the former, Elizabeth Goud, aged 57.

Mr. Beatty, surgeon, having on Thursday had his attention drawn to an afterbirth found in a yard adjoining Gould’s house, he examined it, and while doing so Elizabeth Gould requested him to go and examine her daughter, lest she should hereafter be suspected. He found Ellen Gould in bed, and that she had recently been delivered of a child. She and her mother, however, denied it. Mr. Beatty again said she had been so delivered, when the mother said, ‘Then we are condemned.’ Mother and daughter were then taken into custody, and Ellen, while in the cell, said to Sergeant Humphreys, ‘Master, I will tell the truth; the child is mine, and I have hid it up the chimney in the bed-room.’ He at once went to the house, and upon removing some straw in the chimney, and thrusting his arm some distance up, found a stick; pulling this down, there fell from the chimney a calico bag, containing the body of a full-grown female child.

Mr. Beatty said that, having made a post mortem examination, he found that the child was born at maturity. Appearances indicated that the child had lived after birth. He was of opinion that death was caused by suffocation.

The jury found a verdict of Wilful Murder against the mother and daughter, and of accessory after the fact against the father.”

[It was reported (Worcestershire Chronicle 17/12/1856) that at the Winter Assizes held at Worcester, Ellen Gould was charged with ‘child murder’ and Elizabeth Gould was charged with ‘concealing the birth of a child.’ Ellen was found not guilty of wilful murder, but was found guilty of concealing a birth, and sentenced to three months’ imprisonment (the Court records show that she was found guilty of child murder and received three months). No evidence was offered against Elizabeth and she was discharged.]

“At the Birmingham County Court, on Thursday, the case of Powell v Chance was heard.....

The action was brought to recover damages for a nuisance occasioned by Mr. Chance and his partners, who are large manufacturers of alkali and other substances, at Oldbury.....

Mr. George Welch, a publican at Oldbury, lived about 100 yards from Messrs. Chance’s works. He had frequently seen light blue gas coming over Messrs. Chance’s palings into his house. It caused coughing, and almost took his breath away sometimes. During the last eighteen months he had noticed that the gas burned the linen in the house. When they washed the linen they found little holes in it. His wire window-blinds had been burned and caused to decay by the action of the gas. He saw Mr. Chance about twelve months ago, and he said that he was willing to pay if he had done any damage. Witness sent in a claim for £23 10s. He had not been paid.....”

[Verdict for the plaintiff for the amount claimed, £4.]

“James Edwards, blacksmith, Langley, was charged with stealing 3lbs of peppermints, value 2s 6d, belonging to Edward Waterhouse junr, Oldbury.

Prosecutor said on the 9th January, 1879, he went to the CROSS KEYS, Tat Bank, to sell tobacco, he had with him 3lbs of peppermints for another person. He left the public house, but shortly afterwards missed the sweets. He went back to the CROSS KEYS and found them under prisoner’s coat.

PC Williams said he received the prisoner in custody from the Pontefract Police, on the 9th July.

In answer to the charge of stealing bacon for which he was arrested, prisoner said he did not steal the bacon. Teddy Waterhouse sent me for the horse and cart. I know the two ‘chaps’ who stole the bacon.

Superintendent Hardman asked for a further remand for seven days in order to enable the clerk to communicate with the public prosecutor. The remand was granted.”

“William Phillpotts, landlord of the CROSS KEYS INN, Tat Bank Road was summoned for selling intoxicating liquors during prohibited hours.

PC Ball stated that on Sunday morning, the 5th instant, at 10.30am, he watched the premises and saw the defendant’s daughter come out of the back door and hand over the wall to the canal side a bottle and can containing beer to a man who passed the money back for it.

Mr. Shakespeare, for the defence, urged that the vessels did not contain any beer, and called the defendant, his wife and daughter, who supported this statement.

The Bench gave the defendant the benefit of the doubt, and dismissed the case.”

William Phillpotts issued tokens from here.

Gloucestershire Echo 15/4/1886

“Yesterday afternoon Mr. R. Docker, Coroner, held an inquest at the CROSS KEYS INN, Tat Bank, respecting the death of Martin Shannon (53), of Low Town, whose body was found in the Birmingham Canal at Tat Bank on Sunday last. Annie Shannon, daughter of the deceased, stated that her father left home about three o’clock on Sunday afternoon, taking with him a prayer book. Some time ago deceased was an inmate of the Queen’s Hospital, and recently when under the influence of drink he frequently threatened to kill his relatives and commit suicide. The mind of deceased had been affected by several accidents. It was stated that a razor and prayer book were found in deceased's pocket. The jury returned a verdict of Found Drowned."

Smethwick Telephone 17/7/1886

"Joseph Hayward, landlord of the CROSS KEYS INN, Tat Bank, was summoned for having committed a breach of the licensing laws by permitting gambling upon his licensed premises on the 1st inst.

A witness named John Higgins was called, and stated that he went into the defendant's house upon the day named, when he saw some men playing at cards for a pint of ale. A dispute arose, the result of which was that a bet was made for a half-sovereign, and he (witness) contended that he won the money, but the landlord, who held the stakes, returned the amounts to the parties.

Defendant pleaded guilty to the charge.

Mr. Thursfield appeared on behalf of Messrs. T. C. Duce & Son, Wednesbury, the owners of the property, and urged that his clients were anxious that the house should be properly conducted, and that the defendant had hitherto borne a very good character.

The Bench considered the case to be a serious one, and inflicted a fine of 40s and costs, the license not to be endorsed."

Birmingham Daily Post 13/7/1887

"At the Police Court, yesterday – before Messrs. W. E. Chance and B. T. Sadler – Daniel Ellis, landlord of the CROSS KEYS INN, Tat Bank, was summoned for being drunk on his own licensed premises on the 8th inst.

Police-constable Stanton stated that on the above date he visited the defendant's house, and found the defendant drunk. The officer stated that previous to that the defendant came to the police station and made a complaint about a person having defrauded him. Witness declined to listen to such a statement, and advised him to call next day.

For the defence Mr. Shakespeare urged that the defendant was at the time greatly excited, and had been very ill.

The Bench considered the case proved, and fined the defendant 10s and costs."

Smethwick Telephone 19/2/1898

"On Tuesday, at Oldbury Police Court, Job Hughes, landlord of the CROSS KEYS INN, Tat Bank, was charged with stealing coal, of the value of 1d, the property of the Rowley Station Colliery Company, on the 9th inst.

Police-constable Tennant stated that on the date named he was on duty on the canal side at Tat Bank, near the back premises of the CROSS KEYS INN, when he saw a boat laden with coal passing through the locks in charge of William and Ernest Comley. He observed the defendant step off the boat, and upon going to the place found two large lumps of coal on the canal side. He asked defendant what it meant, and he replied, 'It is all right, it's a bit William Comley put off for me.' Comley, however, denied having done so, and defendant then asked the officer not to let anything come of it, and wanted him to go back to the public house and settle it.

William Comley said, although the prosecutors did not want to press the case, they wanted the practice of stealing coal from boats in transit stopped.

Defendant pleaded guilty, and was fined 40s including costs, or 28 days' hard labour.

Superintendent Chare intimated to the defendant that as he had been found guilty of larceny, he could no longer hold a license, and the house must be closed."

Alice Williams was fined 60s and £3 11s 6d costs, on 27th February 1900, for permitting drunkenness.

"At Oldbury Police Court on Tuesday a young man named John Lloyd, residing at Station Road, Langley, was fined 15s 6d, including costs, or fourteen days' imprisonment, for being drunk in the CROSS KEYS INN, Tat Bank.

Mr. Chance pointed out that defendant had been convicted twice before for drunkenness, and if he were brought up again before September next he would be placed upon the black list. He advised him to turn over a new leaf, as the new Act would be rigidly enforced in that district."

Birmingham Mail 12/12/1905

"Today, at Oldbury Police Court, Ernest Warwick (19), of Low Town, Oldbury, was summoned for using threats towards Millie Palmer, of the CROSS KEYS INN, Tat Bank.

Mr. F. Dawes, who appeared for complainant, explained that for something like eight or nine months Miss Palmer had walked out with the defendant. She, however, broke off the engagement some two months ago in consequence of hearing that there were certain proceedings in that Court. During the last two months the complainant's life had been a perfect misery owing to the defendant's conduct. When complainant told defendant two months ago that she did not intend to walk out with him again, the latter replied that if he did not have her nobody else would, and that if he saw her with another man he should kill her and the man. At the same time he produced a revolver from his pocket, remarking, 'This is what I shall give you.' Afterwards he visited the CROSS KEYS INN, where complainant's mother resides, and created a disturbance, and also accused complainant's mother of being the cause of the trouble, and on that occasion he repeated his threat to shoot complainant if he saw her keeping company with another man. Police-sergeant Pegg was called in, and he ordered defendant to leave the premises.

On Sunday, December 3rd, complainant went to the door about 11.30 at night to look for her brother. Defendant, who was hiding in an entry on the opposite side of the street, rushed across the road and attempted to force open the door. He also shouted, 'If I get hold of you I will kill you.'

Complainant gave evidence in support of this statement, and a witness deposed to hearing the threat on December 3rd.

The defendant, who did not appear, was ordered to enter into recognisances to keep the peace for six months, himself in £10, and two sureties of £5 each, or in default one month's hard labour. He was also ordered to pay the costs, 14s 6d, or an additional fourteen days' imprisonment."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 16/5/1906

"A Smethwick man named Edward Powell, of Oldbury Road, was sent to prison for two months with hard labour for obtaining 2s by false pretences from the wife of the licensee of the CROSS KEYS INN, Tat Bank, on April 27. Prisoner, it appears, went to the house and said that he had got eight fowls to sell for a Warley farmer. Complainant offered to buy four of the fowl, and paid 2s on account, but it was ascertained subsequently that the statement was false, nothing further being seen of the man. When arrested he said that he thought that he would be able to get some fowl or pay back the money when he commenced work.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 3/2/1909

“Licensing Sessions.....

Mr. A. M. Chance presided at Oldbury. The report of Superintendent Hill stated that there were 126 licences in the district, a reduction of seven on the previous year, which compared with the estimated population, gave a ratio of one on-licence to every 354 of the inhabitants. One licence-holder only was convicted during the year, while eighty-eight persons were convicted for drunkenness, a decrease of forty-three on the previous year.....

The police objected to the renewal of the following twelve licences which will be considered at the adjourned sessions, to be held on March 2.....

CROSS KEYS.”

The license renewal was referred to the Compensation Authority on 2nd March 1909.

Birmingham Daily Gazette 3/3/1909

“The adjourned licensing sessions for Oldbury were held yesterday, Mr. G. S. Albright presiding in the absence, through illness, of Mr. A. M. Chance. The magistrates were sitting for several hours, chiefly in hearing evidence regarding the following licensed houses, to the renewal of which the police objected on the grounds of redundancy, the magistrates proposing to refer them for compensation.....

CROSS KEYS, alehouse, Tat Bank, owner Messrs. Jordan and Co.....

Evidence was given in each case by Superintendent Hill and Mr. F. H. Jones, auctioneer and valuer, as to the nature of the houses, and the proximity of other licensed premises. The magistrates afterwards retired to consider the cases, and upon resuming Mr. Albright said they had decided to refer the following six houses to Worcester to be dealt with under compensation: CRYSTAL PALACE, NAVIGATION INN, HOPE AND ANCHOR, FOUNTAIN, CROSS KEYS, and BIRD IN HAND. All the other licences would be renewed, and the licences of these six would be provisionally renewed pending the county committee’s investigations.....”

The license was renewed on 3rd July 1909.

Evesham Standard 10/7/1909

“The Worcestershire Licensing Committee sat on Saturday to continue consideration of the 25 licenses which had been referred to them as the compensation authority by the local justices.....

Mr. Shakespeare, for the Oldbury justices, supported the reference of the CROSS KEYS, Tat Bank, Oldbury, on the ground of redundancy, and Mr. Dawes opposed it on the ground that it was a better house than neighbouring ones. He said the house was largely used by boatmen who took barges along the canal.

The Committee renewed the licenses of the CROSS KEYS.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 12/10/1910

“Matthew Queeney, a boot-black, of no fixed abode, was charged at Oldbury yesterday with doing wilful damage to the extent of £4 to a plate-glass window at the CROSS KEYS INN, Tat Bank Road, Oldbury, and was sentenced to fourteen days’ imprisonment.

It was stated that prisoner had to be ejected from the public house on the night of September 27 because he was creating a disturbance. When outside he threw his shoe brush at the plate-glass window, smashing it. Queeney pleaded that he did it while excited because three of his brushes had been stolen while he was in the house.”

In March 1928 the removal of the licence of the CROSS KEYS to premises proposed to be erected in Hagley Road West, Quinton, was refused.

Birmingham Daily Gazette 6/3/1930

“After a hearing lasting the whole day, Oldbury licensing magistrates yesterday refused an application by Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers for the removal of the license of the CROSS KEYS, Tat Bank, to premises to be erected at the junction of Albert Road, and the new road at Warley.” [WERNLEY]

“Matters of great importance were under consideration with the application of Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers for permission to erect a hotel on the Birmingham-Wolverhampton Road at a point near the Smethwick and Oldbury housing schemes.....

Mr. Hurst said he had the honour to apply to the Bench on behalf of Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers for a provisional order sanctioning the removal of the CROSS KEYS, Tat Bank, a fully licensed public house, to a site at Warley, on the new main Wolverhampton Road, at the corner of Albert Road The application was in respect to a removal of a licence to a district which was a new centre of population and the house would be in a teeming and busy district.....

The Bench considered the matter in private for a long time. Eventually the Chairman said that the application would be granted subject to the surrender of two full licences in the centre of Oldbury – the BROWN LION, Birmingham Street, and the ENGINEERS ARMS, Stone Street – and also subject to certain minor alterations to the plans.”

Smethwick Telephone 2/5/1931

“Worcester Licensing Committee on Monday confirmed the provisional order granted to Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers, sanctioning the removal of the publican’s licence from the CROSS KEYS, Tat Bank, Oldbury, to premises to be erected at the corner of the Wolverhampton-Birmingham arterial road and Albert Road at Warley, in the Oldbury division.

Mr. J. G. Hurst, KC, who appeared with Mr. M. Holdsworth to make the application said that since the construction of the arterial road there had been remarkable building development at the site of the proposed licence. In addition to closing the CROSS KEYS, his clients would surrender two more full licences in the district of Oldbury. It was mentioned that these licenses would be the BROWN LION in Birmingham Street, and the ENGINEERS ARMS in Stone Street. The estimated cost of the new building was stated to be £14,000, exclusive of the site.”

It closed at 10pm on 20th December 1933.

“The Fatal Accident at the ‘Nine Apostles’ Colliery.

Yesterday afternoon an adjourned enquiry was held at the CROSS WELLS INN, Langley, before Mr. R. Docker, Coroner, into the circumstances attending the death of William Bird (17), Langley.

John Spires, a collier of twenty years’ experience, said the deceased was employed as a horse driver in a pit at Mr. Jos. Collins’s colliery at Titford, and he also worked there. On the evening of the 20th April, whilst the deceased was driving an empty tub along the gateway, and when he (witness) was not many yards away, he heard a ‘bump’ followed by a heavy fall of slack and coal, and directly afterwards found the deceased was partially covered, and unable to move away. He rendered all the assistance he could, and with the aid of another workman, got the deceased out, but not before he was dead. He understood a ‘bump’ to be the result of a ‘moving of the earth,’ which no one could prevent or guard against.

The deceased’s mother said she did not think anyone was to blame, and her son often assured her that the workings in the pit were as ‘safe as our house.’

Mr. Davies, the ground bailiff, produced a plan of the workings, and the Jury were unanimous in the opinion that the occurrence was purely accidental, and returned a verdict accordingly.”

“It has been suggested by a number of Gentlemen in the Town and District, that as a mark of sympathy and respect for Mr. John Allsop, of the CASTLE HOTEL, that a Testimonial should be got up and presented to him. It is well known that the present painful position of Mr. Allsop has not been brought on by any act or negligence of his own, but is purely a misfortune, brought on by bad trade, and very heavy expenses. Mr. Allsop has tried for years to cover this, but the action taken a few days since by his landlord has completely ruined him. It is hoped that from the manner in which strong sympathy is expressed that a hearty response will be given, and a sufficient sum obtained to enable Mr. Allsop to make another start in life.

Subscriptions will be received by the following gentlemen, and duly acknowledged in this paper.

Birmingham Daily Post 19/5/1886

“At the Oldbury Police Court yesterday – before Messrs. T. Avery, W. E. Chance, and B. T. Sadler– John Hearne (16), back of 128, Duddeston Mill Row, Birmingham, and Edgar Whitehouse (16), 142, Ashted Row, Birmingham, respectably dressed youths, were brought up on a charge of having in their possession a number of skeleton keys with intent to commit a felony, on the 17th instant.

Mr. Smith, the landlord of the CROSSWELLS INN, Langley, stated that Hearne had been employed by him as a stable boy. He had lived with him some weeks, and he never had to complain of his conduct. He had a friend named Whitehouse, whose mother came yesterday and brought a letter written by Hearne to him. From what was stated he thought it advisable to give information to the police, who arrested the prisoners. He considered the whole to be a ‘boys’ joke.’ The Bench adjourned the case for a week, in order that the police might investigate the matter.

It appears that the lads were recently employed together at Mr. Altham’s tea warehouse in Aston Street, Birmingham, but Hearne changed his situation for his present one at Oldbury. Whitehouse’s mother had ground to believe that her son’s association with Hearne was leading him into ways of dishonesty, and she thought that the latter going to Oldbury would break off the companionship. The lads, however, appear to have kept up a correspondence, and on Sunday last Mrs. Whitehouse intercepted a letter addressed by Hearne to her son, giving details as to a contemplated robbery at the establishment of Messrs. Altham, in Aston Street. The communication was written in the most approved ‘cracksman’ style, referred to skeleton keys which they intended to use to break into the place, and wound up by stating that although they might, as a consequence of their conduct, be landed at the finish in Winson Green goal, he (the writer) was ‘determined to do it.’ This communication Mrs. Whitehouse, in order to prevent anything occurring in the nature indicated, handed to Mr. Smith, of Langley, by whom Hearne was employed. The result was that information was given to the police, and both boys were arrested.

The juveniles, it is asserted, have for a long time past been preparing themselves for the committal of the robbery, and have been manufacturing the skeleton keys and arming themselves with pokers with the intention of resisting anyone who might interfere with them whilst engaged in their felonious work. One of the boys was found to be in possession of some glasswork and money of which he could not give a satisfactory account. This may or may not be the proceeds of a robbery which was perpetrated at the establishment of Mr. Altham on Saturday night, when entrance was obtained to the premises – upon which nobody resides at night – by the removal, in a very workmanlike manner, of a number of bricks at the back of the house. Some glass and about 4s in money were then taken away, but whether that found in the possession of the prisoners is the same the police are unable to state.”

[At the adjourned hearing John Hearn and Edgar Whitehouse, charged with being in possession of housebreaking tools, were found guilty and were each sentenced to two months’ imprisonment.]

William Smith was the local agent for Walter Showell and Sons’ brewery. [1887]

“To Brewers, Spirit Merchants, Publicans, and Others.

Highly Important Sale of Valuable Freehold and Leasehold Public Houses and Land, situated at Langley and Oldbury, in the County of Worcester.

Bill and Son have been favoured with instructions from Mr. William Smith (the owner) to Sell by Auction, at the CROSSWELLS INN, Langley, on Monday, 21st July, 1890, at Six for Seven o'clock in the Evening, subject to Conditions of Sale, incorporating the Common Form Conditions of the Birmingham Law Society..... Lot 1. All that Valuable and Well-accustomed Leasehold and Fully-Licensed Public House, the CROSSWELLS INN, Five Ways, Langley, now and for many years past in the occupation of Mr. William Smith. The House is at present held on Lease, expiring Michaelmas, 1891, at a rental of £70, under which it is tied to Messrs. Walter Showell and Sons Limited, of Oldbury. From Michaelmas, 1891, there is a further lease for a term of seven years, at a rental of £70 per annum, free from any trading clause whatever. The takings of this House average upwards of £40 weekly, and are steadily increasing. It is without doubt the best Inn in this rapidly improving neighbourhood. The Premises consist of spacious Liquor Vaults, Smoke Room, Bar Parlour, Club Room, Billiard Room, Seven Bed Rooms, Yard, Stabling, and all the necessary Domestic Offices and Outbuildings. Immediate possession can be had. Valuation will amount to about £300..... A large portion of the Purchase Money of any of these Lots could remain on Mortgage. As opportunities of purchasing Freehold Licensed Properties are daily becoming rarer, the Auctioneers beg to call special attention to this Sale. For plans and further particulars, apply to William Shakespeare, Esq, Solicitor, Oldbury; or to the Auctioneers, Grenville Buildings, Cherry Street, Birmingham."

Birmingham Daily Post 7/3/1891

"Last evening an inquest was held, before Mr. E. Docker (coroner), at the CROSSWELLS INN, Langley, concerning the death of Elizabeth Lowe (50), widow, formerly residing in Arden Grove, Langley, who died on the 3rd inst.

The deceased left her son's house, in Edward Street, Langley, on the day in question, to return to her home, being accompanied by a grandson, about five years of age. Shortly afterwards the boy ran into deceased's house and told her daughter that the old woman had fallen down in Arden Grove.

Ellen Lowe, daughter of deceased, went to look for her mother, and found her lying in the road in a partially unconscious condition. Dr. Sharpe was called in, but deceased did not recover, and expired shortly afterwards.

The jury returned a verdict of Death from Natural Causes, and requested the coroner to write to the Oldbury Local Board of Health concerning the dangerous state of the road at Arden Grove, where the deceased fell."

"Last evening Mr. E. Docker (coroner) held an inquest at the CROSSWELLS INN, Langley, respecting the death of George Collins (11), of Whyley Street, Langley, who met with his death under shocking circumstances on Friday last.

It appeared that deceased was spinning a top on the footpath near his home. A companion struck at him with a small whip, and deceased overbalanced himself and fell in front of a horse and cart belonging to Messrs. J. Bagnall and Sons, Langley Forge, which happened to be passing. The wheel passed over his head, causing instant death.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death, and exonerated the driver from all blame.”

“On Saturday night, a well-attended meeting of men in the employ of the Great Western Railway Company at Langley, Smethwick Junction, Rowley, and Oldbury was held at the CROSSWELLS INN, Langley, when certificates were presented to the members of the local ambulance class. Mr. W. Smith presided, and there were also present Mr. E. Murphy, (superintendent of the Birmingham division), Captain Wayte (West Bromwich), Mr. W. Shoemack (secretary), &c.

Captain Wayte mentioned that out of twenty candidates presented for examination none failed. Mr. E. Murphy, in presenting the certificates, said he hoped every member of that class would become efficient to render first aid to the injured. It afforded him great pleasure to see the men with the ambulance badge, and he impressed upon them the necessity of displaying it on the right arm. (Applause.) He was pleased to see that the classes in that district were rapidly increasing. His own district was the first to make a move in ambulance work, and their example was followed by others, and at the present time it was well known that the Great Western Ambulance Society was both large and efficient. They were about to form two sections of the society, to be called brigades, one to have its headquarters at Snow Hill, whilst the other would be located at Stourbridge Junction. Mr. Mapperley (Birmingham) also addressed the meeting. Votes of thanks to the chairman, Mr. Murphy, and Captain Wayte brought the meeting to a close.”

“Oldbury is not generally regarded as the music centre of the West Midlands, but the new licensee at the CROSSWELLS INN, Five Ways, Langley, has other plans.

For Mr. Geoffrey Onions, who was previously licensee of the PORTWAY TAVERN, Rowley Regis, feels that if more entertainment were provided, more people would use the pub.

Mr. Onions says, ‘At the moment there are discotheques for our younger customers on Fridays, Sundays and Saturdays, but there is not much to attract the older people.’ He continued, ‘I am hoping to organise something for Sunday lunchtimes – perhaps a small band or something like that. At the moment, although trade is fairly hard work, we still depend largely upon our weekend trade and the only way to improve it is to offer customers something that they will not find in other pubs in the area.’

Promotion came quickly to Mr. Onions, who first entered the brewery industry 10 months ago, and both he and his wife, Christine, feel that the industry offers a good career.”

“Regulars at a Langley public house ‘shared a jar’ and gave a children’s charity a £300 boost. The money was raised by drinking pals at the CROSSWELLS INN in High Street, Langley after just 12 months of putting their spare change in a huge glass jar on the counter. Sum total of the collection – to buy play equipment for handicapped children at Tipton – was £193.74 but a raffle and further donations brought the final amount to £300. No sooner had play scheme organisers from the Sandwell Adventure Playground Association received cheques for the amount, than licensee Roy Snape and his wife, Gail, started a further collection for the same project. ‘All our customers believe this to be a very worthwhile scheme, so we have put another jar on the counter to carry on collections. We hope to raise even more money next time,’ said Mrs. Snape, who is pictured with her husband giving a cheque for £300 to the association’s field officer Kathy Williams.”

“Sandwell publicans have been given a crash course in their new responsibilities by local police. The vexed issues of assault, noise nuisance, fire safety, underage selling and temporary event notices were discussed by the publicans, police, trading standards and council officers. Sandwell police constable Jim Potts said, ‘Licensees and bar staff are more likely to become victims of violent crime because of the environmental conditions of their workplace and the consumption of alcohol by their customers. We felt that by showing licensees what support is available to them and by working together we can contribute to reducing crime and anti-social behaviour, and help to make people feel safer.’

The event was the first of its kind in Sandwell and was attended by over 50 licensees and bar staff. Stephanie Cox from the BELL AND BEAR in Rowley Regis said, ‘The day has been really informative. It was good to meet up with other licensees and partner agencies.’

Paul Archer from the CROSSWELLS in Oldbury added, ‘It was very useful to hear about the new legislation on licensing regulations.’”

“Sale of Valuable Property, consisting of Public House and Premises at Oldbury. Free of Auction Duty. To be Sold by Auction, by Mr. Isaac Allen, at the CROWN AND ANCHOR Public House, at Oldbury, on Friday the 17th day of September inst, at five o'clock in the evening, by direction of the Assignees of James Potter, an insolvent debtor, under conditions to be then produced.

The Reversion in Fee (the tenant for life being about 66 years of age), of that old-established Public House, called the CROWN AND ANCHOR, at Oldbury, in the county of Salop, fronting the turnpike road leading from Birmingham to Dudley, contiguous to the Birmingham Canal, in the occupation of Mr. Edward Walker; and a Small Tenement adjoining, with Stable, Carpenters' Shop, Piggeries, Garden Land, and requisite out-buildings belonging thereto.

The Public House consists of six bed-rooms, lodge-room, extensive ball-room, parlour, tap-room, cooking kitchen, larder, bar, capital ale-vaults, bakehouse, brewhouse, Stabling, Yard, Piggeries, Kitchen Garden, and other out conveniences, adjoining the towing-path of the canal.

The above-named Tenement and Shop is let to a respectable tenant, forming an extensive Nail Warehouse. There is a carriage-drive to the premises.

The situation of the Premises in the midst of a very populous district, and the house having been well-accustomed for a long series of years, renders the property a desirable investment.

Further particulars may be obtained of I. Allen, Auctioneer, or Messrs. Arnold and Haines, Solicitors, both of Birmingham; of Mr. Wm. Fellowes, jun, Solicitor, Dudley; of Mr. T. N. Fuller, Distiller, Birmingham, or of Mr. Round, Timber Merchant, Tipton, the Assignee.”

"Worcestershire Midsummer Sessions.....

Jane Parkes, 38, tailoress, Sarah Jane Parkes, 13, tailoress, Mary Ann Hodgetts, 39, dressmaker, and Eliza

Hunt, 39, brickmaker, were indicted for uttering counterfeit coin at Oldbury on the 11th ult. Mr. Streeten prosecuted, and Mr. Richards defended the prisoner Hodgetts.

Mary Ann Basford, wife of the keeper of the BLACK BOY beershop, Oldbury, stated that on the 11th ult, about eight o'clock in the evening, the four prisoners came to her house; Jane Parkes had a pint of ale; Hodgetts and Hunt left about ten minutes afterwards; one of them said they should not be long before they came back. Jane Parkes stayed till after eleven o'clock. Sarah Jane Parkes left the house several times during the evening; on two occasions of her return bringing with her some cakes and flowers; she gave some coppers to Jane Parkes, who put them into her basket. During the evening the latter asked witness to give her three half-crowns for some small change, which she did. Hodgetts and Hunt were strangers, but the Parkeses were known to witness. Hodgetts and Hunt were not in the house during any of the transactions stated.

Mary Deakin was at her daughter's shop at Oldbury, on the 11th ult, when Sarah Jane Parkes came in and asked for a pennyworth of cakes, tendering a shilling in payment. Witness gave her the change, but before witness could pick up the shilling Parkes decamped, and the shilling was given to PC Simmonds on the following morning, as counterfeit.

On the evening in question the prisoners Hodgetts and Hunt went to another house, the BROWN LION, Oldbury; there was a third person with them, whom the landlady, Sophia Portman, could not identify. In payment for some port and sherry a shilling was tendered, change being given in coppers. The shilling was on the following morning found to be counterfeit, and given to PC Simmonds.

John Smith, landlord of the CROWN AND ANCHOR, Oldbury, stated that on the night of the 11th, the prisoners Hodgetts and Hunt went to his house, and in payment for some sherry, Hunt tendered a shilling, which witness returned to her as bad. She then went to Hodgetts, returned, and gave witness half-a-crown. Witness afterwards went to the PARROT ARMS, and there saw Hodgetts and Hunt, whom he asked if they knew him. They replied 'Yes.' On asking them if they recollected trying to pass a bad shilling at his house, Hunt said she did not know it was bad. Witness gave the change for the half-a-crown to Hunt, who he believed passed it to Hodgetts.

At the PARROT ARMS the prisoners had two glasses of sherry, a shilling being tendered in payment by Hunt. Fanny Proctor, waitress, gave the shilling to the landlord.

Sarah Jane Parkes went to the shop of Reuben Green, and in payment for some cakes produced a shilling. Green told her it was bad, when she said she had it from her mother's. It was returned to her. In consequence of what he had heard, Green went to the BLACK BOY, where he saw the prisoner Parkes.

Daniel Darby, a constable, was at the PARROT ARMS, about half-past ten at night, when the prisoners came in. A person also came in and said the prisoners had been passing a bad shilling at John Smith's. The landlord then produced the shilling he had taken from them, and it was found to be counterfeit. Witness then asked them how many more they had like that; they said none – they did not know it was bad. On asking them if they had been at Smith's, they said they had not, but on Smith being sent for they admitted being at his house. Darby received the shilling, and thereupon took the prisoners into custody.

PC Simmonds went to the BLACK BOY and found the prisoners Parkes there. He charged them with passing counterfeit coin. He said he should search them and told them to get up. When Sarah Jane Parkes got up and walked across the kitchen a handkerchief was dropped, which on being picked up was found to contain nine bad shillings and a crown-piece. Jane Parkes gave Tilsley a small bag containing 11d. Moved her on one side and found in her hand a purse, containing three bad shillings and five good sixpences. There was a basket on the screen, which prisoner said at first was not hers, but subsequently said it was her daughter's (Sarah Jane Parkes). Took them to the station house and there Sarah Jane Parkes said she picked the handkerchief up in a field at Rowley. Hodgetts said that Parkes lodged with her. While in the station Jane Parkes said she came from Dudley, and that Hodgetts gave her the purse to hold for a little while.

Mr. J. M. Skarratt proved the money passed and found in the possession of the prisoners to be counterfeit. Jane Parkes's statement taken before the Magistrates was read, which was to the effect that she received the purse and its contents from her daughter. The statement of the latter was that she picked the handkerchief up in a field, but did not let her mother know anything about it.

A victualler, named Harper, of Dudley, spoke to the excellent character of Hodgetts, whom he had known for 20 years, and she had worked for his family ten years. Hunt also produced two letters as to her character.

The chairman minutely summed up the evidence, and the jury found all the prisoners guilty, but recommended Hodgetts and Hunt to mercy on account of their previous good character.

Hodgetts was sentenced to nine calendar months, Jane Parkes to twelve months, Sarah Jane Parkes to twelve months, and Hunt twelve months' imprisonment, with hard labour, each."

"Worcestershire Easter Sessions.....

Stephen Joyce, a miner, of sinister look, was charged with having on the 6th of March, assaulted a married woman named Maria Bates, and robbed her of six half-crowns. A second count charged the prisoner with intent, &c. Mr. Chance prosecuted; Mr. Streeten defended the prisoner.

Mrs. Bates, a respectable-looking woman, the wife of James Bates, deposed that she and her husband on Saturday evening, the 6th of March, left their home at West Bromwich, and proceeded as far as the BUSTLE public house, Oldbury, where her husband, after giving her some market money, left her. Prisoner was there, and after purchasing what eatables she required in the town, she returned to the public house, but as her husband had not returned, prisoner offered to escort her home. They left shortly before twelve o'clock, and on the way prisoner, as she declared, took improper liberties with her, threatened to throw her over a bridge if she resisted, or called out, and then took from her the money she had in her possession. While this was going on, the noise of people approaching alarmed the prisoner, who made off, and she, with her hair and dress dishevelled, returned to her home, and at once communicated the man's proceedings to her friends, and to her husband when he returned home.

Joyce was consequently apprehended, but emphatically denied the statements of the woman, which he said were perfectly untrue.

The jury, after a lengthened consultation, and being locked up, returned a verdict of not guilty on the first count. Prisoner was then arraigned on the second count, with intent, and the trial was proceeding when our parcel was despatched."

"Worcestershire Easter Sessions.....

Stephen Joyn, 26, miner, was indicted for having, on the 6th March, at West Bromwich, stolen from the person of Maria Bates, six half-crowns, the property of her husband. Mr. Chance prosecuted, and Mr. Streeten defended the prisoner.

Mrs. Bates stated that on Saturday night, March 6th, she and her husband left home shortly after eleven o'clock, for the purpose of purchasing some necessaries at Oldbury. They visited the BUSTLE INN, where they had some refreshment. Prisoner was there drinking at the time, and her husband, giving her some money for marketing, she left, and returned in about an hour, but her husband had gone. As she wished to reach home, the prisoner offered to accompany her, and they proceeded as far as Burnford Bridge, when he seized her, took improper liberties, and robbed her of six half-crowns, threatening to throw her over the bridge if she resisted his importunities. The noise of people approaching scared the prisoner away; but when apprehended some little time afterwards, he declared his innocence, and said that the statement made by the woman was in fact a fabrication.

The jury, after hearing the evidence, were unable to agree, and were locked up. Eventually a verdict of not guilty was returned; and prisoner was then indicted for having committed an assault, with intent. He was found guilty, and sentenced to eighteen months' hard labour."

Birmingham Daily Post 23/6/1858

“At the Petty sessions, yesterday, before Edward Chance, Esq, Mrs. Mary Ann Smith, wife of Mr. John Smith, the landlord of the CROWN AND ANCHOR public house, Oldbury, preferred a charge of being drunk and disorderly against Alfred Hawkins, an officer of the County Constabulary stationed at Oldbury. Mr. Plunkett, who appeared in support of the complainant, detailed the circumstances under which the charge was brought. He said that between three and four o’clock on the morning of the 27th of May Mrs. Smith was going to bed, when, hearing a noise in the street, she looked out of her room window, and saw the defendant Hawkins rolling about the street quite drunk. She then went down stairs and out of doors, when the defendant came up to her, raised his arms in a threatening attitude, and sparred at her. She being alarmed, ran into the house and shut the door, and then returned to her station at the room window, when the defendant assailed her with abusive language, and said he would ‘pay her off’ if she would come down. Mr. Plunkett stated that about six weeks ago Mrs. Smith was summoned for keeping a disorderly house, and the fact of the defendant being upon that occasion subjected to a rather sharp cross-examination might afford an explanation of his abusive conduct towards Mrs. Smith.

The witnesses called in support of the case were Mrs. Smith, a very smartly attired lady, of blasé aspect, and Charles Davies, a hair dresser, both of whom swore positively that the defendant was drunk, and used abusive language.

The defendant denied being drunk, and alleged that the only abusive language was used by Mrs. Smith. He also called Sergeant Simmons, who stated that between two and three o’clock on the morning in question he, Hawkins, was sober. The public houses were then closed.

Police-constable Thomas Bradshaw deposed that he also saw the defendant at two o’clock on that morning, and that he then appeared sober. At four o’clock the same morning he again saw him in the police station, and he was then perfectly sober.

Before deciding on the case, Mr. Chance determined to hear a charge of a similar character, and also a charge of wilful damage, preferred by Mrs. Smith against Police-constable Charles Barnfield. The offences charged in this case were alleged to have been committed on the 11th of May, when Barnfield and Bradshaw, the witness in the last case, came into the CROWN AND ANCHOR. The defendant, according to Mrs. Smith, was drunk, and she ordered him out. He refused to go, upon which Bradshaw endeavoured to induce him to leave the house, but did not succeed. Bradshaw then left him, and angry words ensued between him and Mrs. Smith. In the course of the dispute the defendant struck with his stick a mahogany table, and damaged it to the extent of sixpence. Ultimately Sergeant Simmonds came and took him away.

Mrs. Smith gave very positive testimony; and to corroborate her a man named Henry Lawton was called. In reply to questions from the defendant, Lawton said he did not perceive that Mrs. Smith was intoxicated on the occasion.

Defendant denied the accusations, and called Sergeant Simmonds, who stated that about eleven o’clock on the night in question he saw Barnfield talking to Mrs. Smith, opposite her house. He was not drunk, but appeared very ‘irritable.’ Mrs. Smith was not sober. He saw the defendant several times in the course of the night, and was satisfied he was sober. Mrs. Smith’s husband told him she was drunk, and her conduct demonstrated it.

Mr. George Elwell, butcher, deposed that he saw Barnfield between twelve and one o’clock on the night in question, and he was then perfectly sober.

Mr. John Miller, innkeeper, stated that Barnfield called him up at twenty minutes past twelve o’clock on the night in question, in consequence of his having gone to bed, and left the house door open. Barnfield was then sober.

Mrs. Simmonds stated that at a few minutes past ten o’clock on the 11th of May the defendant was at the police station, and was perfectly sober; he could both talk and walk.

Bradshaw, the officer who entered Mrs. Smith’s house with Barnfield on the 11th, deposed that he did not perceive that the defendant was intoxicated on that occasion.

In the case of Hawkins, Mr. Chance said he was satisfied that Mrs. Smith was actuated by the most malicious motives; but he had no doubt that the defendant was affected by drink to such an extent that he misbehaved himself. So also in the case of Barnfield, he was evidently excited by drink, and must to pay 5s, and the amount of damage done to the table.”

"Job Dudley, a boy of thirteen, was charged with stealing a sheet, the property of Joseph Southwick, on the 24th August.

Elizabeth Southwick, wife of plaintiff, said her husband kept the CROWN AND ANCHOR INN, Birmingham Street, Oldbury. On the 24th ult she hung a sheet on a line in the garden, and missed it in the afternoon. It was worth four shillings. That produced was the same.

Thomas Sanders, pawnbroker, said between three and four in the afternoon of Tuesday, the 24th ult, prisoner brought the sheet produced to his shop. Lent him 1s 6d on it.

Police-constable Cartwright proved bringing the sheet from Mr. Sanders's shop, and apprehended the prisoner the same day, when he said he had lost the ticket.

He was ordered to be locked up twenty-four hours, and to receive twelve strokes with a birch rod."

Thomas Perry issued tokens from here.

"On Wednesday, the annual meeting and dinner in connection with the Oldbury Licensed Victuallers' Association was held at the CROWN AND ANCHOR INN, Oldbury. Captain S. N. Thompson presided, and Mr. A. Thompson occupied the vice-chair The Chairman said the society was in a very flourishing condition. During the past year the names of about half a dozen honorary members had been added to the roll of the society, and the same number of ordinary members had been added. The funds were in a very prosperous condition, a circumstance for congratulation, he thought, when they considered the depressed state of trade in the district....."

"Mr. R. Docker held an inquest on Tuesday, at the CROWN AND ANCHOR INN, touching the death of Sarah Gibbs, whose body was found in the canal on Thursday.

Esther Gibbs said she was a daughter of the deceased.

About half past ten o'clock on Thursday night she sat in the house when she heard her mother come into the kitchen. Her mother always came in the back way. She was in the habit of staying out late nights and very often got drunk. Her brother came in about eleven o'clock, and she asked him if he had seen his mother, and he said he had not. She then went down into the kitchen and found her clothes lying all about the room. She called her brother up and searched for her.

PC Williams was fetched, who found the body in the canal, about half past eleven o'clock the same night. Dr. Cunningham was called and said he found no marks of violence on the body, and the appearance of the body was consistent with death by drowning.

Clara Hackett, domestic, at the CROWN AND ANCHOR, said she saw deceased at half past ten o'clock on Thursday night, when she was standing near the yard gate. She was then under the influence of drink. The Jury returned a verdict of Found Drowned."

"Last night a meeting of representatives from the various friendly societies in the Oldbury district was held at the CROWN AND ANCHOR INN, Birmingham Street, for the purpose of considering a proposal which had been made for raising funds for the relief of the poor in the district. Mr. T. Blount presided.

It was explained that a committee had been appointed to collect subscriptions from the manufacturers and tradesmen in the town, and also to enquire into extreme cases of poverty and distress, and distribute relief to them from the fund. Before the committee commenced their work the scheme for providing halfpenny dinners for children was inaugurated. It was further pointed out that some of the leading manufacturers had stated publicly that they preferred to support one comprehensive scheme rather than a number of movements. Several delegates complained that the matter had been delayed unnecessarily, and it was contended that the scheme suggested by the friendly societies should have been carried out before the cheap dinner movement was set on foot. Other delegates argued that the cheap dinners for children would not provide for the distress which the friendly society fund was intended to relieve, and that efforts should be made to collect funds to assist the widows, orphans, and poor people of Oldbury. Ultimately a committee was appointed to collect subscriptions."

“Last night a meeting of representatives from the various friendly societies in Oldbury and district was held at the CROWN AND ANCHOR INN, Birmingham Street, to receive a report from the deputation appointed at a meeting held a fortnight ago to wait upon the manufacturers and tradesmen of the town to solicit subscriptions for the relief of the distress prevailing amongst the poor. Mr. T. Frost presided.

The deputation reported that they had waited upon Mr. A. M. Chance, who decided not to assist them, and also informed them that the other large firms had decided to subscribe to one comprehensive scheme, such as the cheap dinner movement, rather than support a number of smaller funds. Under those circumstances, it was deemed useless to proceed with the canvas.

After considerable discussion it was decided to distribute the sum of £7 2s 1d, already collected, amongst the poor members, widows, and orphans connected with the nine lodges that had taken part in the movement.”

Birmingham Daily Post 13/1/1887

“Last night a meeting of miners was held in the Assembly Room at the CROWN AND ANCHOR INN, Birmingham Street, Oldbury. Mr. T. Owen presided.

Mr. E. Edwards (president of the Midland Counties Miners’ Federation) delivered a long address, in the course of which he urged the importance of combination, and pointed out that, if it was necessary for miners to be united in time of good trade, it was much more important that they should seek to strengthen their union now that trade was depressed and employment scarce. He also dwelt upon the necessity of organizing a powerful federation of miners throughout the country, and contended that the local branches should be made as strong as possible in order to avoid reductions in wages, curtailment of privileges, and strikes. Referring to the conference in Birmingham, he remarked that they had been discussing the question of restricting the output of coal. That was a huge subject, and one that was considerably misunderstood by many miners, and the whole of the mining community did not yet see their way clear to act upon any given line. Alluding to the short hours question, he said he believed seven hours per day was long enough for men to work in the pit, but owing to the weakness of their organization, they were unable to commit themselves to the scheme for seven hours. It was the indifference of men in the past that had caused their wages to fall, and the federation was started for the purpose of assisting the various districts and lodges in increasing the power and influence of the union.

Mr. H. Barnes (miners’ agent) also addressed the meeting, after which a resolution was passed in favour of the objects of the conference and the meeting.

Mr. Hughes announced that during the past quarter there had been an increase of 708 members in the district, and £60 in the income.”

“The Funeral took place at Oldbury Cemetery yesterday of Sergeant W. H. Blackford, of 3, North Street, Smethwick, who for well over 50 years was a member of the Worcestershire Volunteer Regiment and various Midland rifle clubs, the principal mourners being his five daughters and son.....

Sergeant Blackford was the son of a mill-owner at Wribbenhall, near Bewdley, and at a very early age became a member of the local Volunteer Band. He was a well-known builder later, and carried out important undertakings when he removed to Smethwick, including the re-conditioning of Smethwick Hall. Although in the licensed trade, in what was then the village of Smethwick, he was also superintendent of a church Sunday school, and was a very prominent member of a skittle alley club at Hill Street Mission, where he won the cup twice.

Sergeant Blackford made the first fish-tail coffin that was borne into Holy Trinity Church, Smethwick, and by his own wish, his body was placed in a coffin of similar design. Leaving Smethwick, he was connected with various hostelries at Oldbury, while for the past 20 years he had been at Stourport, until his retirement from the trade in March last, at the age of 82.....”

"Thomas Holland was charged by Messrs. Gilbert, Cheshire, and Cooper, with giving a certificate for the death of a child of Thomas Cleaver, of Oldbury, although not a properly qualified medical practitioner. Mr. Shakespeare prosecuted, and Mr. Jackson defended.

Mr. Shakespeare, in opening the case, said the present charge was brought against defendant under an Act of Parliament which provided that 'any person pretending to be a physician, surgeon, doctor of medicine, apothecary, &c, would be liable to a fine not exceeding £20.' On the 29th of May last, a child of Thomas Cleaver, of Oldbury, died of convulsions. As defendant had attended the child, the mother, at its death, applied to him for a certificate, stating the cause of its death, which she presented to the registrar of births and deaths. (Mr. Parish, the present registrar, here produced the certificate, which read, 'Died of convulsions, Thomas Cleaver, infant. Thomas Holland, surgeon.') Another section of the Act before referred to provided that, 'the printed Register containing a list of the surgeons, &c, possessing diplomas should be recognised as an authority in Courts of Justice, and might be referred to on oath.' It also provided that 'no person whose name did not appear in the Register for the current year could be recognised as a properly qualified medical practitioner until he could produce evidence to the contrary.' The summons had been issued sometime against defendant, but, unfortunately, the registrar took ill, and could not appear, in consequence of which the case had been postponed; but now he was dead. It was of importance to the public generally that defendant should be punished, in order to prevent the public from being imposed upon by unfit persons, and to the medical profession especially, as they had spent large sums of money in their education, and were certainly entitled to the benefits he was not.

Fanny, wife of Thomas Cleaver, Heath Street, Oldbury, said her child died on the 29th of May last. Mr. Holland had attended it. He gave her a certificate, showing the cause of its death, at her request. She believed the one produced was the same.

Cross-examined: She could not say on oath it was the same, but it was like it. She had not seen it since June.

Henry Parish, deputy-registrar of births and deaths for Oldbury, said his father, who had been registrar, died on the 31st of July. Witness took possession of his papers a fortnight before his death, including the certificate produced. He believed it to be in Mr. Holland's handwriting.

Cross-examined: The register was entered in the book, but not certified.

Mr. Jackson said his friend had made an unnecessary flourish when he had talked about the protection of the public and the interests of duly qualified men. Mr. Holland had resided in Oldbury for thirty-five years. The late Mr. Cooper, surgeon, father of complainant, had many times requested him to go and see his patients, in proof of which he held in his hand a number of letters. If any doubt existed, it was the duty of the Bench to give the defendant the benefit of that doubt. The first witness could not swear whether the certificate produced was the same or not; she only believed it was. The one produced was no certificate; it was merely a memorandum that somebody had died. A certificate should begin 'I hereby certify,' while this was merely 'Died from convulsions,' &c. According to the Act of Parliament his friend had referred to, it was not sufficient to prove a man was not a surgeon to show that his name was not in the Register. Proof must be given that he was not duly qualified. Not a tittle of evidence had been brought to show this. In support of this he referred to a case recently decided by the Court of Exchequer.

Mr. Shakespeare answered that the Register was evidence in all courts, and a person could not be recognised as a surgeon whose name did not appear therein until he could prove it.

Defendant was ordered to pay costs.

Thomas Holland was also charged with acting as the doctor of a club, although he was not a properly qualified surgeon. Messrs. Gilbert, Cheshire, and Cooper were the complainants, the same solicitors as before being retained.

Mr. Shakespeare said he had been a paid surgeon of a club some years, and called Thomas Matthews, secretary of the Miners' Refuge Friendly Society, held at Mr. Moore's, the CRYSTAL PALACE INN, Oldbury, who said the surgeon and other officers were elected every six months. On the 6th of July, 1868, it was proposed and carried that 'the surgeon be re-elected.' He received 2s per member. No receipt was given by him.

Mr. Jackson said the objection he should raise was that the summons charged his client with being surgeon for the club on the 10th of June, which had not been proved. It was only shown that he was such on and after the 6th of July.

The Bench proposed re-calling the witness to prove his having being surgeon in June, but Mr. Jackson objected. A most astute solicitor had been employed, and the prosecution was backed by the whole of the medical profession for Oldbury. He therefore hoped the Bench would thus not struggle to obtain a case for the prosecution. He argued that the case was defective, as there was no evidence to prove the charge.

The Bench, after a short consultation, considered the case proved, as witness had said defendant was 're-elected,' implying he had been before a surgeon. He was fined £5 and costs.

Nine other similar charges were brought against the defendant, but were withdrawn."

After the usual loyal and patriotic toasts had been given and heartily responded to, the Chairman gave the 'Independent Order of Odd Fellows,' and success to the 'Friendly Briton's Lodge,' which was responded to by Bro. Underhill, the secretary, who gave a very encouraging report of the workings of the society, and urged upon the members the necessity of doing their utmost for the good of the society. Numerous songs were given during the evening by members, and after votes of thanks were passed to the chairman, vice-chairman, and secretary, the meeting was brought to a close at ten o'clock with the National Anthem."

"On Wednesday a meeting of the miners on strike in the Oldbury district was held at the CRYSTAL PALACE INN, Oldbury. Mr. Samuel Walding presided, and there was a good attendance.

The Chairman, in opening the proceedings, expressed his deep regret that there was a strike existing in the neighbourhood, saying he was sure the whole of the colliers in that district were in favour of the peaceable settlement of all disputes. He did not feel at all pleased with the parties who had brought about the strike (hear, hear). The masters had not been treating them rightly, as they had been raising the prices of coal without raising the wages in the same proportion. He believed the men had acted very charitably towards the masters, as they had not treated them hastily when they were receiving such treatment at the hands of the masters. He, however, exhorted the men to make the best of their present position, and to go on quietly, when they would be sure to win. Both parties would suffer something in the struggle; but he had no doubt that if the men conducted themselves in a peaceful manner the strike would result in their benefit.

Mr. Thomas Griffiths next addressed the meeting. He said the coalmasters during the last year or two had been reaping a rich harvest. Some of them, the year before last, gained £60,000, some £100,000, and some of them had cleared as much as their whole collieries, and plant, and everything connected with it cost them. The Earl of Dudley had realised £254,900. He (the speaker) pointed out that whilst the masters were making these great profits the men had received comparatively little benefit. They, however, were unwilling to submit to any reduction of their wages, and they were prepared for a long and protracted struggle. He was sure that they did not care about a week or a fortnight, or a month, or even two months' holiday (hear, hear). The masters said they could outstand the association, which they called a petty association. He denied that there was anywhere a better organisation than the miners, which was now in such a position that however long the struggle might last its funds would not be exhausted. There were now 120,000 members in it, each of whom would pay 1s a week in order to support the men of South Staffordshire in their struggle (cheers).

The masters had a private meeting last week, and passed a vote of censure on the gentleman whom the miners had selected to be their arbitrator, saying that he was not qualified for the office. That gentleman was, perhaps, as well qualified as they were. The masters would not have arbitration because they were ashamed of the enormous profits they had been realising during the last two or three years, and they did not want the public to know. They were also ashamed of letting the public know that they had not properly paid their workmen. The consequence was that the strike had resulted, and if it lasted two or three years it would not hurt the men. Their association was determined to come off victorious in the struggle, and no one need be afraid, so long as he conducted himself properly, that his pay would be forthcoming. Some of the masters were now conceding the old price, and asked that their men should return to work. The men had done so, and each master could have two or three sets of men if they liked, for the miners were determined to help them.

Mr. Griffiths concluded by advising the men to conduct themselves in a quiet and peaceable manner, and not to go gathering in lots about the streets or holding little meetings, because they might, under the provisions of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, be prosecuted for conspiring together to press someone to join their union.

Mr. Henry Rust moved, 'That this meeting is of opinion that the reduction is unjust and uncalled for, and that we resist to the bitter end.' This motion was seconded by Mr. Perry, and carried unanimously.

Mr. Griffiths then moved, 'That it is the opinion of this meeting that the masters' statement in reference to the arbitration, to the effect that they had no guarantee that the working men would abide by arbitration, is without foundation, seeing that the men had always abided by the decisions of the arbitrator, even when they were against them; and that the masters' reasons for not accepting arbitration were that they were ashamed to expose the enormous profits they had been realising from the coal trade during the last three years.'

The resolution was seconded by Mr. Henry Rust, and carried, nem con.

The meeting then dispersed."

County Express 16/5/1874

"On Monday morning a mass meeting of colliers was held at the CRYSTAL PALACE INN, Oldbury. After a chairman had been elected, Mr. Thomas Griffiths, the miners' agent, addressed the meeting. He denied the statements, made in a contemporary, to the effect that the men's funds were exhausted, and that in consequence, they would have to submit to the masters' terms. The miners' funds in that district were not exhausted, neither were the miners tired of the struggle. On the contrary, the funds were being strengthened every week....."

Birmingham Daily Post 23/4/1875

“A meeting of miners was held at the CRYSTAL PALACE INN, Oldbury, last night. Mr. H. Rust was elected chairman, and, in opening the meeting, alluded to the question of the allowance of coal, and strongly condemned the action of the mining engineers at Dudley, who, he said, had advocated that the allowance should be withdrawn from miners when disabled from work by sickness or injury. He regretted that attempts were being made to extend the hours of labour, and contended that as the reduction of hours had only been effected by means of amalgamation, so that concession could only be maintained through the association.....”

Dudley Herald 14/10/1876

“A meeting of miners was held on Monday night at the CRYSTAL PALACE INN, Oldbury, in accordance with a resolution passed at a recent district meeting of lodge representatives at Great Bridge, to consider the wages question and the present condition of the amalgamation.....

‘That the time has arrived when the masters are justified in so advancing the price of coal that they can give the miners back the 6d and 3d a day which were taken from our wages; and this meeting trusts that an arrangement will be made with the employers to this end’ was carried unanimously.”

County Express 11/11/1876

“On Tuesday night a large meeting of colliers was held at the CRYSTAL PALACE INN, Oldbury. Mr. Henry Barnes occupied the chair, and addressed the men on the necessity of agitating for an advance. It was unanimously resolved, ‘That this meeting regrets the decision come to at the coalmasters’ meeting, at Dudley, in reference to the wages question, and pledges itself, in conjunction with other districts, to continue the present agitation until the wages sought are received – viz, 6d per day for thick coal and 3d per day for thin coal.’ On Thursday night the same resolution was passed at the THREE CROWNS INN, Hill Top, West Bromwich, and at the CROSS INN, Tipton.”

“Yesterday, at the Police Court, Joseph Bowen (24), of Green Street, Oldbury, was charged with being upon the licensed premises of the CRYSTAL PALACE INN, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, during prohibited hours, on the 21st inst.

Police-constable Bibb stated that he found defendant on the licensed premises named at 10.25pm.

Defendant admitted being there, but pleaded that he had occasion to be there, as he was courting the barmaid. The barmaid was called, and in reply to the clerk, said defendant was courting her.

County Express 14/2/1891

“A destructive explosion of gas occurred at the CRYSTAL PALACE INN on Sunday. The landlord, Mr. H. Blackford, was about to open the house at 12.30, and going through the smoke room he struck a match with the intention of lighting his pipe. A terrible explosion followed, forcing the landlord through a plate-glass door leading into the bar, and shattering the panels of the doors in all directions. The large plate-glass windows in the front were completely smashed, the pieces being carried right across the road. The roof in the back kitchen was completely lifted about six inches. Mr. Blackford appears to have had a marvellous escape, for after the shock he was found lying outside the door with his whiskers and hair burnt, but not otherwise injured.”

Horace Charles Darby (the holder of a temporary authority) was fined £3 and 13s costs, on 14th July 1891, for selling intoxicating liquor to a drunken person. The license was endorsed.

Birmingham Daily Post 15/7/1891

“Horace Charles Darby, landlord of the CRYSTAL PALACE INN, was summoned for supplying beer to a drunken person, viz, William Hadley, on the 4th inst, and, further, with permitting drunkenness on his licensed premises. Mr. Colbeck (Birmingham) defended.

Sergeant Hill stated that at about 8.50pm he called at the CRYSTAL PALACE INN, and then saw William

Hadley sitting at a table with a pint of ale before him. He was very drunk. Witness afterwards called in company with Police-constable Dance, and again saw Hadley at the table, with a jug of beer before him. Witness called defendant's attention to the man, and he remarked, 'I did not notice he was drunk in the house; but I see he is drunk now.'

Police-constable Dance corroborated.

It was urged in defence that Hadley sat near the door, and that beer was supplied to his wife, who then took it to him. The drink thus supplied was only two pints, which was not enough to make a man drunk.

Several witnesses were called to prove that defendant was known to have had drink elsewhere.

Defendant was fined £3 and costs, and the license to be endorsed. Hadley was ordered to pay 13s."

Birmingham Daily Post 26/8/1891

"The annual licensing session for Oldbury petty sessional division was held yesterday at the Court-house. Superintendent Speke presented his annual report, which showed there were now in the division 4,340 inhabited houses, compared with 3,930 in the year 1881, being an increase of 410 during the last ten years, and there was one house for the sale of intoxicants to about each 154 inhabitants. The Sunday evening services of sacred music and song held at various licensed houses in the division, and to which he called their attention at the last licensing meeting, were now entirely suppressed.....

The Superintendent opposed the application of Horace Charles Darby for a permanent transfer of the license of the CRYSTAL PALACE INN, Birmingham Road, Oldbury, on the ground that whilst he was holding a temporary authority in respect of the same house he was fined £3 and costs and the license was endorsed on the 14th of July last, for supplying drink to a drunken person.

Mr. W. Shakespeare addressed the Bench on behalf of the applicant.

The magistrates declined to grant the transfer to Darby, but ultimately, on the application of Mr. Shakespeare, who appeared for the owner of the house, a temporary authority was granted to Henry James Pollard, subject to the character of the applicant being satisfactory."

Birmingham Daily Post 22/8/1894

"The annual licensing session for the Oldbury division was held yesterday.....

Superintendent Chare called attention to the fact that the CRYSTAL PALACE INN belonged to the Edgbaston Brewery Company, and that company not being in existence, he requested that the question should be raised again at the adjourned licensing meeting.

Mr. W. Shakespeare said the company was in liquidation, and was not actually wound up. It was being carried on by the manager.

Mr. Wilson said the justices required some responsible person as the holder of a license.....

The cases of CRYSTAL PALACE INN were adjourned until the 25th of September."

Birmingham Daily Post 26/9/1894

"The adjourned licensing session for the Oldbury Petty Sessional Division was held yesterday, at the Court-house.....

With regard to the license of the CRYSTAL PALACE INN, Birmingham Street, which was deferred, Mr. A. Young explained that the company holding the house had arranged to surrender the lease and license to Mr. William Parsons, the lessor of the property, who was prepared to grant a new lease to Messrs. Donnes Limited. A temporary authority was granted, on the understanding that an application would be made by Messrs. Donnes for a permanent transfer."

North Worcestershire Breweries Ltd. were fined 40s and 52s 6d costs, on 29th September 1896, for permitting drunkenness.

Tipton Herald 5/9/1903

“The North Worcestershire Brewery Company Ltd. were summoned at Oldbury on Tuesday for permitting drunkenness on their licensed premises of their CHRYSTAL [sic] PALACE, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, on August 15th.

Mr. J. S. Sharpe, who appeared to prosecute, explained that a man named Tolley was found on the premises in a drunken condition. The landlord, when spoken to afterwards, admitted that the man was drunk, and said he had been in and out all the evening.

The offence was admitted, and a fine of £4 12s. 6d, including costs, was imposed.

For being drunk on the licensed premises, William Tolley (28), of no fixed abode, was fined 15s. 6d, including costs, or 14 days; whilst for being drunk in New Street on August 8th he was sent to gaol for a month. It transpired that there were 50 previous convictions against him, 33 being for drunkenness.”

County Advertiser 26/1/1907

“John Beasley, haulier and landlord of the CRYSTAL PALACE INN, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, was charged with cruelty to a horse by causing it to be worked whilst in an unfit state on the 9th inst.

Police-constable Walton said he met a boy employed by defendant in charge of a horse and cart at Tividale. The animal was lame, and was suffering from two old sores on the back, one of which was rubbing against the harness. Police-constable Heatherley and Mr. F. Waddington (veterinary surgeon) also gave evidence. Proceedings had not been taken against the driver on account of his youth. Defendant was fined 40s including costs.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 3/2/1909

“Licensing Sessions.....

Mr. A. M. Chance presided at Oldbury. The report of Superintendent Hill stated that there were 126 licences in the district, a reduction of seven on the previous year, which compared with the estimated population, gave a ratio of one on-licence to every 354 of the inhabitants. One licence-holder only was convicted during the year, while eighty-eight persons were convicted for drunkenness, a decrease of forty-three on the previous year.....

The police objected to the renewal of the following twelve licences which will be considered at the adjourned sessions, to be held on March 2.....

CRYSTAL PALACE.”

The license renewal was referred to the Compensation Authority on 2nd March 1909.

Birmingham Daily Gazette 3/3/1909

“The adjourned licensing sessions for Oldbury were held yesterday, Mr. G. S. Albright presiding in the absence, through illness, of Mr. A. M. Chance. The magistrates were sitting for several hours, chiefly in hearing evidence regarding the following licensed houses, to the renewal of which the police objected on the grounds of redundancy, the magistrates proposing to refer them for compensation.....

CRYSTAL PALACE, alehouse, Birmingham Road, owner North Worcestershire Brewery Company.....

Evidence was given in each case by Superintendent Hill and Mr. F. H. Jones, auctioneer and valuer, as to the nature of the houses, and the proximity of other licensed premises. The magistrates afterwards retired to consider the cases, and upon resuming Mr. Albright said they had decided to refer the following six houses to Worcester to be dealt with under compensation: CRYSTAL PALACE, NAVIGATION INN, HOPE AND ANCHOR, FOUNTAIN, CROSS KEYS, and BIRD IN HAND. All the other licences would be renewed, and the licences of these six would be provisionally renewed pending the county committee’s investigations.....”

The license was refused on 3rd July 1909.

Evesham Standard 10/7/1909

“The Worcestershire Licensing Committee sat on Saturday to continue consideration of the 25 licenses which had been referred to them as the compensation authority by the local justices.....

In the case of the CRYSTAL PALACE, Birmingham Road, Oldbury, Mr. Thomson, representing both the freeholders and licensees, consented to the refusal to renew.”

Evesham Standard 18/12/1909

“Compensation for Licenses. Worcestershire Committee CRYSTAL PALACE, Oldbury.

Mr. Thomson appeared in this case, and called Mr. Whitfield, secretary to the Dudley Brewery Company, to prove the sales. The Committee allowed £884, against £1,666 claimed.”

Compensation was paid on 23rd July 1910.

The license was extinguished on 5th August 1910.

“Birmingham County Court.....

Richardson and Griffiths, tailors, Hockley Hill v James Smith, of the DOG AND PHEASANT INN, Oldbury.

Mr. Stubbins (instructed by Mr. Southall) appeared for plaintiffs; and Mr. Turner for the defendant.

The claim was for £10 8s for clothes supplied. In December, 1879, Mr. G. K. Richardson, who was then travelling for plaintiffs, called at the defendant's, and received orders for four suits of clothes for customers of the defendant. The men were in defendant's money club. They were measured at the defendant's, and the suits were fetched from the plaintiffs by one of the men. When payment was demanded the defendant offered to pay for one man's suit, and told plaintiff's representative that he had better sue the others.

Defendant denied that he had pledged his credit for the goods. The men said they would join the money club so as to pay for the clothes. He refused to pay for them, because they owed money for beer.

His Honour held that no liability had been established on the part of the defendant, and ordered a nonsuit to be entered.

Defendant then paid for one suit.

His Honour said he was very much dissatisfied with the disingenuous and uncandid way in which the plaintiff's witnesses had given their evidence."

"Birmingham County Court.

James Smith, now residing in furnished lodgings at No.8 Lomans Hill Terrace, Clayton Road, Saltley, Birmingham, carpenter, but formerly of the DOG AND PHEASANT INN, Flash Road, Oldbury, licensed victualler, filed his petition for liquidation, with liabilities estimated at £600, and assets not yet ascertained. Mr. S. H. Forrest, of Oldbury, is solicitor for the debtor."

London Gazette 7/9/1883

"The Bankruptcy Act, 1869. In the County Court of Warwickshire, holden at Birmingham.

In the Matter of Proceedings for Liquidation by Arrangement or Composition with Creditors, instituted by James Smith, now residing in furnished lodgings at No. 8, Lowan's-hill-terrace, Clayton-road, Saltley, in the borough of Birmingham, in the county of Warwick, Carpenter, but formerly of the DOG AND PHEASANT INN, Flash-road, Oldbury, in the county of Worcester, Licensed Victualler.

Notice is hereby given, that a First General Meeting of the creditors of the above-named person has been summoned to be held at the offices of Mr. Samuel H. Forrest, Solicitor, 21, Church-street, Oldbury, in the county of Worcester, on the 20th day of September, 1883, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon precisely.

Dated this 30th day of August, 1883.

Samuel H. Forrest, 21, Church-street, Oldbury, Solicitor for the said Debtor."

Birmingham Daily Post 29/11/1883

"An action was brought at the County Court, yesterday, by Joseph Wither, James Lines, and Richard Green, trustees of the Court Wat Tyler, No.3756 of the A.O.F. Friendly Society, against James Smith, treasurer of the above Court, and William Donnan and William Barrows, sureties for Smith, to recover the sum of £10, being the amount of a bond given by Smith. Mr. Jackson was for the plaintiff, and Mr. Shakespeare defended.

The evidence was to the effect that Smith was treasurer of the above-mentioned court, which was held at his house, the DOG AND PHEASANT INN, Oldbury, and gave a bond dated September 26, 1882. Afterwards he got into difficulties, but he had refunded all the money with the exception of the amount claimed.

A verdict was entered for the plaintiffs."

Birmingham Daily Post 24/11/1884

"Richard Bowen, of no fixed abode, bricklayer, was remanded on a charge of stealing 3s and a barrel belonging to James Smith, late of the DOG AND PHEASANT INN, Flash Road, Oldbury, on the 9th of March, 1882. Prisoner absconded at the time, but was arrested on Saturday by Police-sergeant Stanton."

Worcester Chronicle 10/1/1885

"Richard Bowen (31), bricklayer, pleaded guilty to stealing 3s, the property of his master, James Smith, of Oldbury, on the 9th March, 1882. Prisoner, who had been twice previously convicted, handed in a written defence that he committed the robbery while under the influence of drink. Sentenced to 12 months' hard labour."

Birmingham Mail 27/8/1883

"The annual licensing session for the Oldbury division was held this afternoon at the Police Court..... Police Superintendent Hardman presented his report.....

Since the last meeting 12 licensed persons had been summoned and convicted for offences against their licenses Mark Gibbs.....

The Bench decided that all the applications for renewals made by those prisoners who had been convicted during the year should be postponed until the adjourned licensing meeting, with the exception of two whose conviction took place on licensing day last year and who were then called up and cautioned. The persons whose renewals were refused would be required to attend and show reasons why their licenses should be renewed."

Birmingham Mail 24/9/1883

"Today the adjourned Licensing Session for the Oldbury Division was held at the Court House.....

The persons whose names were included in the 'black list' presented by the superintendent of police at the annual meeting, and whose applications for renewals were consequently postponed, were called before the Bench to show cause why their licenses should be renewed.....

The license held by Mark Gibbs, DOG AND PHEASANT INN, Flash were all renewed, the applicants being cautioned by the presiding magistrate as to their future conduct."

Sporting Life 20/7/1887

"Galton Gardens, Smethwick.

Fine weather prevailed here on Monday last, and fully 500 admirers of the fleet of foot put in an appearance to witness the race between A. Adcock, of West Bromwich, and E. Gibbs, of Oldbury, who were article to run 100 yards level, under Sporting Life conditions, for a 'tenner.' Upon signing articles both men went into strict training, Adcock under the care of that well-known old ped of West Bromwich, George Griffin, from that respected and obliging host's, Mr. Thomas Twist's, STEAM PACKET INN, Spon Lane; whilst Gibbs, under the care of Joe Matthews, trained from his father's establishment, the DOG AND PHEASANT, Flash Road, Oldbury. Both men were in the acme of condition, and having figured prominently in handicaps at both Alexandra Grounds, Rood End, and Lyndon Recreation Grounds, West Bromwich, their partisans had very little need for comment upon form.

The talent were fairly represented on each side, and betting opened at evens, Adcock for choice. The track, thanks to the proprietor (Mr. P. F. Rudge), being well watered and rolled for the occasion, was in fair condition, and the ground was roped out for the convenience of spectators and peds. Exactly at half-past six pm, the men came on to the track. Betting now assumed a lively aspect, and ere they left their marks odds of 2 to 1 were freely laid on Adcock, whilst after peeling 3 to 1 on Adcock was the cry.

The usual preliminary canter was indulged in, and the men toed their marks for the race. At the second attempt the pistol was fired to a good start. Gibbs, being the quicker on his running, led for the first thirty yards, when Adcock made his effort, and, coming away, eventually won by two yards and a half, amidst loud cheers. A large amount of money changed hands over the result.

Old T. Jones, of Oldbury (better known as 'Brushy'), fired the pistol, and Jack Turner, of Tipton, was referee."

West Bromwich Weekly News 17/12/1887

"Mark Gibbs, publican, of Flash Road, was charged with allowing betting in his house on the 26th ult.

PC Havacre stated that about 12.30pm on the date in question he visited defendant's house in company with

PC Hetherage. They went into the smoke room at the back of the bar. They saw money wrapped in paper passed to defendant's wife over the counter by several customers in the bar. He was in plain clothes, and he wrapped 5s in some paper and tried to pass it the same way to defendant's wife, but she refused it. She replied looking towards her husband and said, 'I should think you want to rule me.'

The conversation was all about horse racing. He told them when he handed the money in that he wanted to back the horses whose names were written on the paper. He wrote that he wished to put 2s 6d on 'Karacle' for a win, and 'Jacobs' for a place. He called Gibbs into the backyard subsequently and gave him the money wrapped in the paper. He told him he wanted to back two horses, when he replied that it would be all right. He unwrapped the money and put both in his pocket. He asked if he gave titbits and he replied, 'Not on the day of the race.' He said they had to be very careful nowadays. He gave the name of Luke Wood, of Birmingham, and said he was a clerk.

Mr. A. Young, who defended, said that according to his own showing he told three lies straight off.

Witness: Oh no, I have not.

Mr. Young: Did you not say that your name was Wood, that you lived in Birmingham, and that you were a clerk?

Witness: Yes, but I never tell a lie on oath.

Mr. Young: Were you sent there specially to tell lies?

The Clerk: I suppose he was.

Mr. Young: Then you will tell as many lies as you like when off oath? Mr. Young went on to remark that it was a great mistake that a man should be told off to tell lies, and had heard many magistrates strongly condemn such practice.

PC Hetherage confirmed the statements of the last witness.

Mr. Young then addressed the Court at length, and stated that this was a prosecution of a highly penal character, and if the charges were sustained the magistrates had power to impose penalties amounting to £100. He pointed out that the evidence was totally uncorroborated, and all legislation was to the effect that at least two witnesses should give evidence and corroborate each other. He admitted that wherever they went either in a public house or in the streets, they were continually hearing it dinned into their ears about horse racing, and the state of the betting, but because they were talking about racing it did not implicate his client. The evidence of the officer himself showed that he went to put his money on the horse, and being a stranger, and in plain clothes, he was refused point blank by the wife and husband, and that model policeman went back to his pall and used a word he would not have polluted his mouth with, 'That it was no b—— good.' Then the officer came there and told a parcel of lies on the subject. They had been taught from their childhood that there was no excuse for telling lies. Here was an officer who had told those lies and smiled about it in the witness box. He had heard some of the most pungent and scathing observations from judges in that land against persons indulging in lies to entrap anyone. Such a man who would tell lies in that manner when off oath, would not be over nice in giving his evidence on oath.

The magistrates retired for nearly half an hour to consider their verdict, and on returning into Court Mr. Sadler said they had carefully considered the matter and thought that a fine of £1 and costs would meet the case, without endorsing the license."

"Yesterday morning Edwin Hazlewood (36), carpenter, of Church Street, Oldbury, was found dead in a garden belonging to Mr. Mark Gibbs, of the DOG AND PHEASANT INN, Flash Road, Oldbury. It appears that deceased left the public house named above on Saturday night, about half-past ten, and it was supposed that he had gone home. Yesterday morning, however, a man named Joseph Saul found him lying head foremost in a catch-pit in the garden, and he had apparently died from suffocation. Police-sergeant Stanton and Police-constable Bryant removed the body to the mortuary. The catch-pit was about 23in square and 2ft 6in deep, and contained about 6in of liquid. An inquest will be held.”

Birmingham Daily Post 27/3/1889

“An inquest was held yesterday afternoon at Oldbury, before Mr. E. Docker (coroner), respecting the death of Edwin Hazelwood (36), wagon builder, of Church Street, Oldbury, who was found dead in a catch-pit in a garden belonging to Mr. Mark Gibbs, of the DOG AND PHEASANT INN, Flash Road, on Sunday morning. It appeared that a brother of the deceased lived near the garden where the body was found. On Saturday night, about 10.40, deceased left the DOG AND PHEASANT INN, and it is supposed that he went to his brother’s house, and that instead of returning by the footpath he walked on the garden, and stumbling over some low palisades, fell head foremost into the catch-pit, which was only 23in square, 2ft 6in deep, and contained 6in of liquid. The jury returned a verdict of Accidentally Suffocated.”

“Joseph James (24), a collier, and son of the caretaker of the Abbey Road Schools, Warley, was committed for trial to the Worcester Assizes at a special court at Oldbury yesterday on charges of larceny and attempted larceny.

From the evidence it appeared that the prisoner entered the BIRD IN HAND INN, Simpson Street, Oldbury, on January 31, and called for some ale. He was afterwards left alone for a minute or two, and then went to the KINGS ARMS INN, Birmingham Street, where he said that he had had some money from the other public house, and proceeded to treat all the customers, spending 4s 6d. Subsequently he went to the DOG AND PHEASANT INN, Flash Road, and while there was seen by a servant from the scullery window to lean over the counter and interfere with the till. When the landlady spoke to him he said he was choking, and went away. It was ascertained later that 6s 5d had been taken from a glass at the back of the bar in the BIRD IN HAND public house.”

“Worcestershire Assizes.....

Joseph James (24), miner, was charged with stealing some money belonging to Emmanuel Love, licensee of the BIRD IN HAND, Simpson Street, Oldbury.

Prosecutor said he put 7s 4d in a jug on a shelf at 9.30. Later he missed 6s 5d.

Other witnesses stated that prisoner was at the inn, and afterwards spent 4s 6d at another house.

Prisoner now said he had never drank any beer in his life and he was not in Oldbury that night.

The jury found the prisoner guilty. Superintendent Hill said prisoner had respectable parents, who tried to keep him from a life of crime, which he commenced in 1903. Prisoner had been charged at Oldbury Police Court several times for offences similar to this, whilst he had also been convicted for burglary.

Prisoner said that if the Commissioner gave him three years it would be the making of him.

The Commissioner: Very well, I will. Three years' penal servitude.”

“The adjourned meeting of the Worcester County Licensing Committee was held today at the Shirehall, Mr. Willis Bund presiding, for the consideration of licenses of houses in Oldbury which had been reported by the local justices as not being necessary for the requirements of the district.....

As to the DUKE OF MALAKOFF, West Bromwich Street, Mr. Matthews said it was the only free house before the Committee. A petition was received in favour of the retention of the license, and Superintendent Hill gave the house a good character.....

After deliberating half an hour, the justices decided that all the houses brought before them were unnecessary, but not being certain how far compensation money would suffice to meet the claims to be paid, drew up an order of precedence in which houses are to be dealt with, houses not paid for keeping open provisionally till they are dealt with.”

Smethwick Telephone 1/7/1905

“The adjourned principal meeting of the Licensing Committee for the County of Worcester was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, on Saturday, Mr. J. Willis Bund presiding. The sixteen houses reported by the Oldbury Justices were considered, and the committee ultimately decided that all the licenses were unnecessary. As they were not aware how far the compensation money would go, the committee arranged the houses in order, and as many of the licenses as possible will be done away with. The order is as follows.....

13. DUKE OF MALAKOFF, West Bromwich Street.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 10/8/1905

“The Worcestershire Licensing Committee having decided to refuse fifteen Oldbury licenses, as the amount of the compensation fund available allows, sat yesterday at the Shire Hall, Worcester, to decide who are the persons entitled to compensation.....

With regard to the DUKE OF MALAKOFF INN, West Bromwich Street, Mrs. Susannah Idione, registered owner, and Augusta Idione, licensee, and the trustees of the will of the late Mr. Edward Idione, were declared the parties interested. Mr. Daw remarked that Mrs. Idione relinquished her claim in favour of the trustee.”

Birmingham Mail 22/12/1905

“An important memorandum has been issued by the inland revenue commissioners affecting the basis of compensation for licensed houses which have been compulsorily closed. It will be remembered that fifteen such houses were refused the renewal of licenses at Oldbury, and the question of compensation was argued by counsel before the Worcestershire Licensing Committee a few weeks ago. That committee intimated that the rent was the basis upon which the compensation should be assessed, but counsel urged that this was preposterous. The claimants preferred to leave the matter to the decision of the inland revenue commissioners. The latter have sent a letter to the committee, upholding its view that the rent should be the basis, allowing nothing for the trade done on the premises or to the brewers for tied houses. The Commissioners say that the computation of the sum to be paid in any case requires the determination of three factors, namely, the value of the licensed premises, the depreciation in value of the trade fixtures, and the value of the premises without the license. They have, as a rule, capitalised the annual value of the licensed premises upon the four per cent basis, or at twenty-five years' purchase, and only exceeded this in cases where there was a distinct prospect of improved annual value, and only fallen below it where there was evidence to suggest that the present value could not be maintained in future. They have employed surveyors of taxes to take estimates of the probable annual value of premises when deprived of their licenses, and of the probable number of years' purchase of such annual value that premises would fetch, an allowance being made for the cost of the alterations necessary to fit the premises for earning the annual value as estimated. Accordingly, although exact figures have not yet been received, the amounts payable for the Oldbury houses above referred to may be given approximately as follows.....

DUKE OF MALAKOFF, £125.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 6/3/1906

“A meeting of the Worcester Licensing Committee was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, yesterday, to consider the awards made by the Commissioner of Inland Revenue, determining the amounts to be paid as compensation to owners, holders, or others interested in the non-renewal of licenses in the Oldbury division.....
The licenses refused and the amount of compensation awarded in each case was as follows.....

DUKE OF MALAKOFF, West Bromwich Street, £390.

The committee made awards as follows.....

DUKE OF MALAKOFF, West Bromwich Street, £50 to Augusti Idoine, licensee, £335 to the trustees and executors of the will of Edward Idoine, deceased.

Payment of the compensation money was fixed to take place on March 28.”

The license was extinguished on 4th April 1906.

“On Tuesday, the annual licensing meeting was held in the Magistrates’ Room.....

There were three applications for old licenses.....

Mrs. Mary Edwards, DUKE OF YORK, Oldbury. She was opposed by Mr. Shakespeare, instructed by the Licensed Victuallers’ Association.

In answer to Mr. Shakespeare Mrs. Edwards said she was a widow. Her house had been a public house only for six months. It was a butcher’s shop previously. There are three bedrooms. A man and wife and three children, besides herself and servant and girl living with her. She had some ground behind the house, but had never said she would turn it into a racing ground. She never told John Collins that.

The magistrates refused the license on the ground that the house was not suitable.”

“Benjamin Duffield, landlord of the DUKE OF YORK INN, Talbot Street, was charged with being drunk and disorderly on the 30th ult.

PC Cornell stated that at 12.15 at night on the date in question he saw defendant very drunk, in Talbot Street, and two others taking him home. He refused to go in the house and he pushed his wife about. In twenty minutes afterwards he went again, and he would not go in then, when he reported the case to the Sergeant. Mr. Shakespeare defended and said there was not a particle of evidence of bad behaviour, and therefore no case.

The case was dismissed.”

“Yesterday Henry [sic] Duffield, landlord of the DUKE OF YORK INN, Talbot Street, Oldbury, was charged with being drunk on his licensed premises on the 31st inst, also with refusing to admit Police-sergeant Hill on the same date. Mr. W. Shakespeare defended.

Police-sergeant Hill deposed that about one o’clock am he saw lights in defendant’s bar and also heard voices. He knocked at the door several times and asked to be admitted. A man came to the window, but did not offer to open the door. Witness continued knocking at the door for about forty minutes before it was opened. He went through the house, and in coming to the door of the store-room he found it was locked, and defendant refused to unlock it. Defendant also became very abusive, and said he would have the officer’s coat taken off him. Defendant was drunk.

Police-constables Jones, Wagstaff, and Bibb gave corroborative evidence.

Mr. Shakespeare, for the defence, pleaded that Duffield refused to admit the police because he considered they were exceeding their right, owing to some ill-feeling against him, in asking to be admitted at an unreasonable hour.

Defendant was fined £2 9s, including costs.”

Birmingham Daily Post 19/8/1891

“Yesterday at the Police Court, Benjamin Duffield, landlord of the DUKE OF YORK INN, Talbot Street, Oldbury, was charged with being drunk in Talbot Street, and also with permitting drunkenness on his licensed premises on the 5th inst. Jacob Mills and Keziah Mills, of Talbot Street, were charged with being drunk on the premises during illegal hours; and Thomas Mills was also summoned for being drunk in the locality of the public house referred to. Mr. J. Sharpe defended.

Police-sergeant Hill stated that at 1.30am, on the 5th inst, he heard a disturbance and threats to murder in the direction of defendant’s house. He found a regular brawl going on, the landlord and Jacob and Keziah Mills were there in a drunken condition. When asked why they were there at that time, Mrs. Mills said they had come to see about the brewing. He (the officer) told them they were not fit to brew, as they were all so drunk.

Mr. Sharpe, for the defence, urged that there was no offence in law if the landlord was found drunk upon his own licensed premises. Recently Duffield had lost his wife, and his child being subject to fits, Mrs. Mills was in the habit of going in to assist him with the child. On the occasion in question one of her sons followed her into the DUKE OF YORK INN.

Duffield stated that he was not aware that Mrs. Mills and her son were in the house when Sergeant Hill came, as he was in the back premises attending to the brewing furnace.

Duffield was fined 16s 6d, including costs, for being drunk. The charge of permitting drunkenness was dismissed. The other defendants were ordered to pay as follow: Jacob Mills, 16s 6d; Keziah Mills, 16s 6d; and Thomas Mills, 12s 6d.”

Birmingham Daily Post 26/8/1891

“The annual licensing session for Oldbury petty sessional division was held yesterday at the Court-house. Superintendent Speke presented his annual report, which showed there were now in the division 4,340 inhabited houses, compared with 3,930 in the year 1881, being an increase of 410 during the last ten years, and there was one house for the sale of intoxicants to about each 154 inhabitants. The Sunday evening services of sacred music and song held at various licensed houses in the division, and to which he called their attention at the last licensing meeting, were now entirely suppressed.....

Superintendent Speke objected to the renewal of the license of the DUKE OF YORK INN, Talbot Street, Oldbury, to Benjamin Duffield.

The Chairman (Mr. J. E. Wilson) remarked that the justices had considered the report of the superintendent of police, and were glad to see there had been an increase in the number of persons proceeded against for drunkenness, and also an increase in the number of convictions, amounting to something like 25 per cent. The whole of the licenses were renewed, with the exception of ten persons on the black list, whose applications were postponed until the adjourned licensing meeting.”

Birmingham Daily Post 30/9/1891

“Yesterday the adjourned licensing sessions for Oldbury petty sessional division were held.....

The Clerk read over the list of persons whose applications for renewals had been adjourned on the ground that convictions had been recorded against them during the past year. The chairman said the Bench had carefully considered the list of adjourned applications and also the objections raised by the police.

In the case of Benjamin Duffield, of the DUKE OF YORK INN, they had come to the conclusion that they should not be justified in renewing the license to Duffield, and his application would be refused.

There were several other cases in which fines were inflicted during the past year, and he wished to remind all those persons that the Bench were extremely desirous that very great care should be exercised by the holders of licenses within the division during the coming year. The remainder of the adjourned licenses were then all renewed.

On the application of Mr. J. S. Sharpe, the Bench sanctioned the transfer of the license of the DUKE OF YORK INN from Benjamin Duffield to his mother, who had formerly kept the house.”

Birmingham Daily Post 22/8/1894

“The annual licensing session for the Oldbury division was held yesterday.....

Superintendent Chare, in his annual report, stated that at the present time there were 148 persons licensed for the sale of intoxicating drink, which gave one house for the sale of intoxicants to about every 153 of the inhabitants. During the year 237 males and 17 females were proceeded against for drunkenness.....

He had given notice to Sarah Pearson, of the DUKE OF YORK INN, Talbot Street, Oldbury, of his intention to oppose the renewal of her license on the ground that she had broken the conditions upon which the license was granted to her, viz, by allowing her son, Benjamin Duffield, to take part in the business and to reside on the premises, and that there was no necessity for a license to the house, the requirements of the district being amply provided for.”

Birmingham Mail 24/6/1905

"The adjourned meeting of the Worcester County Licensing Committee was held today at the Shirehall, Mr. Willis Bund presiding, for the consideration of licenses of houses in Oldbury which had been reported by the local justices as not being necessary for the requirements of the district.....

The DUKE OF YORK, Talbot Street, was described as complicated. The Oldbury Charity Trustees are the owners, the lease for 42 years being held by representatives of the late Mr. Ben Duffield, who sub-let to Enoch Baldwin, while the tenant is Mrs. Duffield, who thereby obtains a livelihood for herself and invalid son. Messrs. Sharp, Matthews, and Brown appeared for the parties.....

After deliberating half an hour, the justices decided that all the houses brought before them were unnecessary, but not being certain how far compensation money would suffice to meet the claims to be paid, drew up an order of precedence in which houses are to be dealt with, houses not paid for keeping open provisionally till they are dealt with."

Smethwick Telephone 1/7/1905

"The adjourned principal meeting of the Licensing Committee for the County of Worcester was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, on Saturday, Mr. J. Willis Bund presiding. The sixteen houses reported by the Oldbury Justices were considered, and the committee ultimately decided that all the licenses were unnecessary. As they were not aware how far the compensation money would go, the committee arranged the houses in order, and as many of the licenses as possible will be done away with. The order is as follows.....

12. DUKE OF YORK, Talbot Street."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 10/8/1905

"The Worcestershire Licensing Committee having decided to refuse fifteen Oldbury licenses, as the amount of the compensation fund available allows, sat yesterday at the Shire Hall, Worcester, to decide who are the persons entitled to compensation.....

DUKE OF YORK, Talbot Street, Eliza Jane Duffield (licensee), and the same person and Thomas Porter, Birmingham Road, trustees under the will of Benjamin Duffield, Walter Enoch Middleton (lessee), and the Oldbury Charity Trustees."

Birmingham Mail 22/12/1905

"An important memorandum has been issued by the inland revenue commissioners affecting the basis of compensation for licensed houses which have been compulsorily closed. It will be remembered that fifteen such houses were refused the renewal of licenses at Oldbury, and the question of compensation was argued by counsel before the Worcestershire Licensing Committee a few weeks ago. That committee intimated that the rent was the basis upon which the compensation should be assessed, but counsel urged that this was preposterous. The claimants preferred to leave the matter to the decision of the inland revenue commissioners. The latter have sent a letter to the committee, upholding its view that the rent should be the basis, allowing nothing for the trade done on the premises or to the brewers for tied houses. The Commissioners say that the computation of the sum to be paid in any case requires the determination of three factors, namely, the value of the licensed premises, the depreciation in value of the trade fixtures, and the value of the premises without the license. They have, as a rule, capitalised the annual value of the licensed premises upon the four per cent basis, or at twenty-five years' purchase, and only exceeded this in cases where there was a distinct prospect of improved annual value, and only fallen below it where there was evidence to suggest that the present value could not be maintained in future. They have employed surveyors of taxes to take estimates of the probable annual value of premises when deprived of their licenses, and of the probable number of years' purchase of such annual value that premises would fetch, an allowance being made for the cost of the alterations necessary to fit the premises for earning the annual value as estimated. Accordingly, although exact figures have not yet been received, the amounts payable for the Oldbury houses above referred to may be given approximately as follows.....

DUKE OF YORK, £475.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 6/3/1906

“A meeting of the Worcester Licensing Committee was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, yesterday, to consider the awards made by the Commissioner of Inland Revenue, determining the amounts to be paid as compensation to owners, holders, or others interested in the non-renewal of licenses in the Oldbury division..... The licenses refused and the amount of compensation awarded in each case was as follows.....
DUKE OF YORK, Talbot Street, £565.

The committee made awards as follows.....

DUKE OF YORK, Talbot Street, £28 to the licensee, Eliza J. Duffield, £297 to the owners, Eliza Duffield and the representatives of the late Benjamin Duffield, and £240 to the lessee, Walter Enoch Middleton. Payment of the compensation money was fixed to take place on March 28.”

The license was extinguished on 4th April 1906.

“Economy in Brewing.

Thomas Mees, Boiler Maker, Bell Works, Brierley Hill, begs to call attention to the superiority of his Wrought-iron Brewing Boilers, over those of either copper or cast-iron; being one-third less the cost of copper, and more durable than either. Cast-iron boilers are made hot-blast, cinder iron, are very liable to burst from expansion and contraction, or from having cold water put into them when hot, and also by frosty weather. The wrought-iron boilers are made of the best charcoal iron, from 20 to 200 gallons each, or larger if required, are worked at 25 per cent less cost in fuel and labour; and if erected by an experienced mason will last for twenty years.

These Boilers may be seen in use at.....

“On Thursday afternoon an adjourned inquest was held at the EAGLE INN, Langley, before Mr. R. Docker, touching the death of Priscilla Davenport, aged eleven years, who lived in Park Lane, and who was killed at Mr. Westwood’s grinding mill on the 12th inst.

Maria Bastable stated that about one o’clock on the day mentioned she saw the deceased entangled in the shafting, and immediately caused the machinery to be stopped, but it was found that the little girl was quite dead. Her body was shockingly mutilated and torn, the top of her head being taken completely off. The deceased was playing in the yard, when the shafting, which was not protected, caught a portion of her clothing, and after whirling her round dashed her many times against the adjoining wall.

The Coroner said he should give the owner of the works (Mr. James Sadler) orders to have the shafting protected; and if he failed to comply with the request, he should hold him criminally responsible for future accidents. He should also make it his duty to acquaint Mr. Baker (the inspector of factories) with the circumstances.

The jury then returned a verdict of Accidental Death, and cautioned Mr. Westwood, the occupier of the mill, not to work it again until the projecting shafting was cut off or properly protected.”

“Last evening Mr. E. Docker (coroner) held an inquest at the EAGLE TAVERN, Langley, concerning the death of Edward Williams (14), of Park Lane, who was killed on Thursday night last whilst employed at Messrs. Simpson and Co.’s Ironworks.

John Dyson, stocktaker, said the deceased was employed in the testing department at the works, and in addition to picking up the ends of the bars of iron after they had been cut by the shears, it was his duty under his (witness's) direction to turn on or take off the steam supplied to a small engine which worked the shears. In consequence of a pin in the blade of the shears being broken he told deceased on Thursday evening to stop the engine and he did so. When the machinery was ready for restarting witness requested Williams to turn on the steam again. Upon looking round he saw the deceased near the fly-wheel, he having got under the fencing which protected the engine. Witness called out to the boy not to touch the wheel, but the wheel at that moment commenced to revolve rapidly and deceased was drawn over and thrown into the cogwheels near. Witness ran and stopped the engine at once, but it was too late to save the boy, who appeared to be killed instantaneously. If the engine would not start, it was the deceased's duty to report it to witness, who would have then taken off the steam and moved the wheel off centre.

A juror asked if witness thought it was proper for a boy fourteen years of age to be employed in such work as starting and stopping an engine. Witness replied that it was quite safe, providing he only did what he was told to do. In reply to another juror, witness said that deceased ought not to have gone under the fence, and should not have attempted to move the wheel off centre whilst the steam was turned on.

Richard Moore corroborated.

A letter was read from Captain Bevan (inspector of factories), stating that he had inspected the place where the accident occurred, and found that the protection required by the Factory Act had been provided.

The jury returned a verdict of Accident Death."

"Mr. A. M. Chance presided at the special Licensing Sessions at Oldbury yesterday, when Mr. J. S. Sharpe, on behalf of Holders Brewery Ltd, applied for permission to rebuild the following houses: SYCAMORE INN (L. V.), Clay Lane; SPREAD EAGLE (full licence), Park Lane; and the ROYAL OAK (beerhouse), corner of Langley Green Road and Causeway Green Road.

Mr. Sharpe said the police had objected to the renewal of the licence of the SYCAMORE, because the premises were structurally unsuitable. The plans provided for the rebuilding of the premises, which were old-fashioned and dilapidated. The domestic accommodation would be greatly improved, and in consideration of a slight increase in the drinking area they would surrender the licence of the RAILWAY INN, Langley Green Road, an ante-69 beerhouse. With regard to the other two applications there would be no increase in the drinking area, but the domestic quarters would be much improved in each case. The ROYAL OAK would be set back some distance, and 150 square yards of land would be given up for improving the corner. Mr. A. Edwards, architect, of Birmingham, submitted plans, and said the cost would be about £1,000 in each case. The alterations would be completed in the licensing year.

Mr. Chance asked that the RAILWAY INN should be closed at Midsummer, and the applications were then granted, subject to the surrender being satisfactory.”

“Mrs. Elizabeth Lewis, licensee of the EAGLE TAVERN, Park Lane, Oldbury, appeared before the local magistrates yesterday on a charge of supplying drink to a police-constable while he was on duty, and was ordered to pay £2 8s costs.

Mr. W. J. Clulow, who prosecuted on behalf of the Chief Constable, said he understood that the defendant pleaded guilty.

The facts of the case were that on the evening of Thursday, 29 January, Police-sergeant Dainty was on duty in plain clothes in the neighbourhood of the public house in question when he saw a police constable in uniform leaving the premises. The sergeant went to the police constable and asked him what his business in the house had been, and the latter replied that he had been speaking about a horse and trap which was standing outside.

Police-sergeant Dainty afterwards saw a man named Robinson, who was in charge of the horse and trap, and inquired of him as to what took place when the police constable was in the house. He replied quite fairly, and said that when the officer came in he asked him to have a glass of beer.

Mr. J. S. Sharpe (for the defence) said the order was given by the man Robinson, and it was a highly technical question as to whether or not Mrs. Lewis supplied the constable with drink through him.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 13/5/1919

“A verdict of Accidental Death was returned at the inquest yesterday on Charles Aston, aged 58, of Stafford Street, Dudley, a plasterer, who on May Day while engaged in taking down a ceiling at the EAGLE TAVERN, Oldbury, fell and subsequently died as the result of his injuries.”

Smethwick Telephone 5/3/1938

“Mr. Harold Eaden appeared on behalf of Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers Ltd, to apply for the removal of the license of the EAGLE INN, Park Lane, Oldbury, to premises proposed to be erected at the corner of Kingsway (formerly Monckton Road) and Hagley Road West, Quinton. The application was supported by a number of residents of the district, who were represented by Mr. H. H. Willison; whilst opposition was forthcoming from the Rev. W. C. Russell (Minister of College Road Methodist Church) and other residents, who were represented by Mr. R. K. Brown.

Mr. Eaden said with regard to the EAGLE INN, this was in no sense a redundant house in which the trade fully justified itself. He had been privileged for some few years to make the present application, which was a progressive one in the sense that the increase of houses built and being built in the area of the site during the past three years would indicate that what he had said year after year had come true: the district had developed and was still developing. There had now been reached a point when they might reasonably come to the Justices and ask for the removal of that license. In 1936, there were 597 houses nearer to this site than to any other full license. In 1937, there were 696 houses built and 92 being built – a total of 788 houses. This year, developments had been such that there were now 816 houses built and occupied, and 86 houses being built – a total of 902 houses nearer to this site than to any other full license. Taking the generally accepted figure of four persons to a house, Mr. Eaden said this gave a population of 3,680 persons. The two nearest full licenses to these people were the STAG AND THREE HORSE SHOES (three-quarters of a mile away) and the HOLLY BUSH, also three-quarters of a mile away in the other direction. Both were built to serve a purely local population and not the new district which had sprung up between them. Mr. Eaden gave particulars of a petition which had been prepared. Of the 816 householders approached, 571 had signed in favour of the proposed licensed premises – a total of 70 per cent. Those against numbered 87 (10.66 percent), and neutral, 83 (10.17 per cent). A few persons did not sign either way.

In evidence, Mr. Edwin F. Reynolds (architect) said the new house was intended to serve the needs of the neighbourhood, and not to cater for passing motorists. In reply to Mr. R. K. Brown, he said the car park would be used on the occasion of evening functions in the clubroom.

After a lengthy hearing, the Justices decided to grant the application, conditional upon the surrender of the NEW INNS, Ridgacre Lane.”

Charles Hickin, retailer of beer, Stone Street. [1851]

Birmingham Journal 30/8/1856

“On Thursday last, at the house of Mr. Charles Hicken, the coroner, R. Docker, Esq, held an inquest on the body of the illegitimate child of a single young woman named Bowater. The child, it seemed, was only about six weeks old, and up to Friday, the 22nd instant, it was in good health. On that day the mother procured a bottle full of Godfrey’s Cordial from the shop of Mr. Tonge, chemist, Oldbury, and on the following Saturday, she being desirous of soothing her infant and making it sleep, consulted a neighbour, named Mrs. Westwood, as to the quantity she should administer. Mrs. Westwood mixed the liquid with some paregoric, and then gave the child nearly a teaspoon of the mixture. The child went to sleep immediately. Two or three hours afterwards the mother looked at the child. It was very drowsy, and she could not awake it. The stupor continued, and the child was taken to the surgery of Messrs. Cooper and Beatty, but notwithstanding medical aid the drowsiness increased to insensibility, and the child died on Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Beatty made a post mortem examination. There was no disease to cause death, and the appearances indicated that the child had died from narcotic poison. A portion of the mixture which was not used was analysed, and was found to contain opium in solution. The mixture contained about a grain of opium to an ounce of liquid. If it had taken a teaspoonful the child would have imbibed about the eighth of a grain of opium. This Mr. Beatty considered was sufficient to destroy life in a child so young.

The jury were of opinion that death was undoubtedly caused by an overdose of the mixture, but they thought there was no criminal intention on the part of those who administered it. A verdict to this effect was returned.

The bottle was simply marked Godfrey’s Cordial, and it did not transpire whether any directions were given as to the quantity to be taken. Mr. Beatty considered one drop of the mixture to be quite sufficient for a child so young.”

"During the night of Friday, about 3cwt of lead were stripped off the malthouse of Messrs. Thompson, Tat Bank, and the same night some more was stolen from the top of the bar window of Mr. C. Hicken, the ENGINEERS ARMS, close by the malthouse. In the course of the next day, four fellows were observed fishing up a quantity of lead from the canal at Smethwick. Information was given to the police, and on the approach of an officer the men decamped. From information forwarded to Birmingham, Sergeant Griffiths, the same night, arrested two men named Smittens, a shoemaker, and Carless, a boatman, who were on Tuesday taken before Captain Bennitt and remanded on the charge of having been concerned in the robbery."

"Worcestershire Epiphany Quarter Sessions.....

Joseph Smitton (19), spoon maker, and Edwin Careless (19), boatman, were indicted for stealing 190lbs of sheet lead, the property of Charles Hicken, at Oldbury, on the 19th December. Mr. Chance conducted the prosecution.

The evidence went to show that on the 18th of December, the lead over the window of the bar of prosecutor's public house, at Oldbury, was quite safe, but the next morning it was found that nearly the whole of it had been stolen.

Police-constable Thomas Porter, of the Staffordshire Police, received some information respecting it, went to the Summit Bridge about two o'clock in the afternoon of the 14th [sic] of December, and saw on the lower level two men with a piece of lead in their possession. When the men saw Porter they threw the lead into the water and ran away. Porter afterwards returned to the spot, and recovered the lead.

Prisoners were apprehended in Essex Street, Birmingham, by Police-constable Passey, who subsequently compared the lead found in their possession with that remaining over the bar window at prosecutor's, and found it exactly to correspond. The evidence of a plumber named Bradley was also given to prove the identity of the lead.

A witness named Buttress deposed to seeing the prisoner in company with two others, trying to get the lead out of the water.

Prisoners were found guilty, and a previous conviction was proved against Careless, who had been convicted in the name of John Thompson. The other prisoner was said to have been convicted summarily. Careless was sentenced to twelve months', and Smithson to six months' hard labour."

"The Conservative in Oldbury.

On Saturday evening last a meeting of the friends and supporters of Mr. Amphlett, QC, was held at the ENGINEERS ARMS; Mr. Thomas Yeomans, chairman.

Mr. E. E. Thompson spoke of the very favourable prospects of the Conservative cause in the Langley district, and announced his pleasure in observing the rapid growth of Conservatism in Oldbury. Referring to the much vexed Church question, he stated his determination, although a Dissenter, to earnestly support the union of Church and State, and not allow the enemies of true religion to desecrate and spoliage the great bulwark of Protestantism. From conversations he had had with his brother Dissenters, he was afraid they were joining in the attack upon the Church, in the hope that a share of the spoils would ultimately come to their lot. For himself, he was convinced it was the imperative duty of Christians of all denominations to rally round the Church of our forefathers, and strive to maintain it unimpaired and uncrippled....."

"On Saturday an inquest was held at the ENGINEERS ARMS, by Mr. R. Docker, on the body of Eliza Beddow, aged five years, daughter of a miner, residing in the Lodge Buildings. It appeared that on the previous Tuesday deceased went to her grandmother's house, and during her temporary absence it is supposed she accidentally pulled a saucepan containing boiling water upon her, which scalded her very severely about the face and other parts of her body. Mr. Sainsbury was sent for, but the child died on the following day. The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death."

“Oldbury Police Court. John Thomas was charged with being drunk and refusing to quit the ENGINEERS ARMS public house, Stone Street, on the 25th February. Defendant was very insulting to, and swore at, the landlord, who with assistance had to put him out. Defendant was fined 10s and costs, or 14 days’ imprisonment.”

Birmingham Mail 30/12/1884

“Joseph Tolley, labourer, Stone Street, Oldbury, was charged with drunkenness and assaulting Police-constable Peart on the 27th inst.

The officer stated that on the night named he met the defendant and a man named Cooke in Stone Street, and they were drunk and making much use of very bad language. When he requested them to ‘move on’ defendant struck him on the face, and both he and Cooke struck him several times, and then commenced to throw stones at him, one of which struck him on the nose and inflicted a severe wound. With the assistance of a man named Morris he got defendant to the station.

Richard Morris, landlord of the ENGINEERS ARMS INN, stated that on the night of the 27th inst, Police-constable Peart came running into his house and asked him to render assistance. When he got outside he saw Tolley and the other man with stones in their hands.

Defendant was fined £1 18s 6d, or in default five weeks’ imprisonment with hard labour.”

“Oldbury Police Court. Joseph Findlay, 1 Court, Freeth Street, Bilston was charged with stealing a pair of scissors, value 1s, the property of Richard Morris, ENGINEERS ARMS, Stone Street, on the 15th inst.

From the evidence of the landlady it appeared that the prisoner came into the house offering for sale some buttons, and on her consenting to exchange some beer for the buttons he borrowed the scissors to separate them. Ultimately he succeeded in carrying off the scissors. On missing them she communicated with PC Hancox, who afterwards found the man at Tat Bank, and found the stolen property upon him, and arrested him.

The defendant, who stated that he did not know that he had carried off the scissors with the buttons at the time, said that he had some beer, and was fined 5s and the costs, or 14 days’ imprisonment.”

“Henry Gough, Parsonage Street, was charged with, on the 31st August, being drunk and disorderly and refusing to quit the licensed premises of the ENGINEERS ARMS, Stone Street. He was also further charged with breaking a pane of glass, and causing damage to the extent of 3s 6d.

Richard Morris, landlord, deposed to the facts of the case.

The defendant denied being drunk, and stated that he broke the glass accidentally.

Fined 5s and the costs, and 3s 6d damages, or 14 days’ imprisonment.”

Birmingham Daily Post 13/11/1895

“Yesterday, at Oldbury Police Court – before Messrs. G. S. Albright and E. Danks – Benjamin [sic] Duffield, ENGINEERS ARMS INN, Stone Street, was charged with permitting drunkenness and with supplying drink to an intoxicated person on the 2nd instant. Mr. J. S. Sharpe appeared to prosecute; and Mr. J. Clark defended.

The magistrates, whilst they believed the men were drunk, were of opinion that the barmaid had not a reasonable opportunity of ascertaining their condition, and dismissed the case, but Mr. Albright added that the police were perfectly justified in bringing it.

Harbutt and Whitehouse were fined 11s 6d each, including costs, or seven days for being drunk.”

“Anyone picking up lost property should be warned not to ‘stick to it’ or they may find themselves in trouble. Some people seem to labour under the delusion that anything found in the streets or elsewhere is ‘fair game’ and that no effort need be made to find the owner, but a man was charged at Oldbury yesterday with stealing a purse containing sixpence.

Evidence was given to the effect that the prosecutor’s daughter was sent to fetch some club money from the ENGINEERS ARMS, Oldbury, and on returning found she had dropped the purse out of her hand. The prisoner was seen to pick it up, and the magistrates fined him 10s and costs. It is really quite as much stealing as taking a leg of mutton from a butcher’s shop, neither the purse nor the leg of mutton belong to the ‘finder.’”

“The ENGINEERS ARMS stood next to the canal on Stone Street in Oldbury. This was the watering hole that William and Sophia Such ran as tenants for M&B before their move to the NEW INNS in Halesowen Street The location of the pub was ideally suited, not far from the centre of Oldbury, but also close to the industrial sites, such as the Springfield Chemical Works, the Tharsis Works, which produced sulphur and copper, and another chemical and cement works. The Great Western Railway line also ran close by.

Derrick related a tale about the times his grandmother Sophia would be given a clutch of dead rabbits by passing boatmen who stopped off at the ENGINEERS ARMS at breakfast time before continuing on their journey down the canal with a cargo to deliver or goods to pick up. At the end of the day they returned to drink the health of William and Sophia and enjoy a hearty rabbit pie that Sophia had made for them.....

Jazz bands were very popular between the wars and competitions were held to raise funds for local hospitals, and associated with the ENGINEERS ARMS was the Hell Devils Jazz Band, providing entertainment at the pub and occupying the time of young and old alike.”

“Matters of great importance were under consideration with the application of Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers for permission to erect a hotel on the Birmingham-Wolverhampton Road at a point near the Smethwick and Oldbury housing schemes.....

Mr. Hurst said he had the honour to apply to the Bench on behalf of Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers for a provisional order sanctioning the removal of the CROSS KEYS, Tat Bank, a fully licensed public house, to a site at Warley, on the new main Wolverhampton Road, at the corner of Albert Road [the WERNLEY].....

The Bench considered the matter in private for a long time. Eventually the Chairman said that the application would be granted subject to the surrender of two full licences in the centre of Oldbury – the BROWN LION, Birmingham Street, and the ENGINEERS ARMS, Stone Street – and also subject to certain minor alterations to the plans.”

Smethwick Telephone 2/5/1931

“Worcester Licensing Committee on Monday confirmed the provisional order granted to Messrs. Mitchells and Butlers, sanctioning the removal of the publican’s licence from the CROSS KEYS, Tat Bank, Oldbury, to premises to be erected at the corner of the Wolverhampton-Birmingham arterial road and Albert Road at Warley, in the Oldbury division.

Mr. J. G. Hurst, KC, who appeared with Mr. M. Holdsworth to make the application said that since the construction of the arterial road there had been remarkable building development at the site of the proposed licence. In addition to closing the CROSS KEYS, his clients would surrender two more full licences in the district of Oldbury. It was mentioned that these licenses would be the BROWN LION in Birmingham Street, and the ENGINEERS ARMS in Stone Street. The estimated cost of the new building was stated to be £14,000, exclusive of the site.”

It closed at 10pm on 18th July 1933.

It was demolished.

Birmingham Chronicle 10/1/1822 - Deaths

Bells Life in London and Sporting Chronicle 21/12/1823

“On Monday, a battle for £20 between Jack Griffiths, of West Bromwich, and Ben, the brick-maker, of Oldbury, took place at the back of the FLOWER POT, Oldbury. Griffiths threw his castor into the ring at twelve o’clock, and was followed by Ben. Griffiths was seconded by Belasco, and Ben by Bill Hall; level betting on both. The battle lasted an hour, in which they fought 15 as gallant rounds as ever were witnessed in the Prize Ring. On stripping they appeared in excellent condition; both nine score men, Griffiths rather the stoutest.

Round 1. Sparring for some time; both cautious; Griffiths let fly with the left hand; the brick-man parried well; they then rallied without advantage. Another pause, when the brick-man planted a blow on Griffiths’ peeper, and grassed him, amidst thunders of applause from the ‘Black Diamonds.’

2. On coming to the scratch they eyed each other with caution. Ben made play, which Griffiths stopped well, and returned the compliment with interest under the listener. A rally, in which Griffiths had the advantage, who laid Ben out. 3 to 2 on Griffiths.

3. On coming up, the effects of the last round were apparent.

They both seemed determined to settle it this round. Ben made play, broke ground, and rallied to a stand, closed and broke ground again. A pause, when Griffiths put in a terrible blow under Ben’s wind, which he returned by one on Griffiths’s peeper, and grassed him. This round lasted seven minutes, and it was of itself a good fight, without any more. Equal betting.

4. and 5. Both cautious, and bellows to mend; counter hitting, and Griffiths down in both rounds.

6. A short pause to obtain an open. Ben made a hit, but Griffiths got away cleverly, and retreated from two well meant right-handed hits; Griffiths at length made play, drove Ben all over the ring, and fell from his own blow. 4 to 3 on Griffiths.

7. This round commenced with severe counter-hitting, and reciprocal punishment, till Griffiths went down. 6 to 4 on Ben.

8. A fine round till both went down; some dispute between the seconds about Ben hitting Griffiths while falling.

9, 10, 11. These rounds were of the most manful description. Griffiths was undermost.

12. On coming to the scratch they appeared in dishes. Griffiths’ science was excellent, and Ben as quick as a cat on his legs. It was a complete portraiture of prize-fighting; greater skill and courage could not be displayed; stopping, getting away, returning, and claret flying all over the ring. Griffiths down. Five to four on Ben.

13, 14. They appeared careful of throwing a chance away.

Griffiths closed Ben’s peeper, and put in some smart compliments under the ribs. Ben returned them on his pumpkin, and laid his eye-lash completely open; rallied, till Griffiths went down. Both men and seconds covered with claret.

15th and last round, it was evident it could not last long.

Griffiths stood on his legs like a tree, and Ben seemed determined to win. Ben placed an effective hit on Griffiths’ eye; but he returned it with his left hand, which he used like a hammer under the listener. A rally of the most manly description; both determined not to fall; a fine struggle for the throw, but parted without advantage to either; a pause. Griffiths made play with his left hand; a sharp rally; Ben hit him a back-handed blow on his box of ivories, when he was reeling, and broke his jaw. This round lasted eight or nine minutes. Remarks. There had not been witnessed for some time such a battle in that part of the country. Griffiths shewed that best science, and Ben the quickest on his legs. The equal fighting of both gave little chance for betting, and they must be pronounced out and outers.”

Birmingham Journal 14/6/1828

“On Thursday last, a man of the name of William Farrell was apprehended at Smethwick, on a warrant for a robbery, which he committed in November, 1817. It appears that at that period, he broke into the FLOWER POT public house, at Oldbury, and after carrying away a quantity of bacon and other articles, he attempted to possess himself of the box of a Club, which held its meetings at that house. Having to go through the landlord's room to the place where the box was deposited, he on his return, struck the box against the bed, which awoke the landlady, and a pursuit was consequently made which ended in his apprehension and committal to Shrewsbury gaol. The constable in whose custody the prisoner was placed, secured him ironed in the kitchen of his house, but Farrell, by means of a nail picked the lock of his irons, and effected his escape. No tidings had been received of him until Thursday last, when the son of the landlord, who was proceeding towards Smethwick, observed Farrell upon the banks of the Birmingham canal, and from his information, the prisoner was apprehended yesterday and forwarded to Shrewsbury gaol upon the original Judge's warrant, to take his trial for the offence.”

Worcestershire Chronicle 19/10/1853

“At the Public Office, before John Green, Esq, on the 11th instant, two young men, named Charles Taylor and Richard Sanders, were brought up on a charge of breaking into a house, the property of Mr. John Fletcher, with intent to commit a felony, on the night of Saturday week; and also with stealing an iron bucket, the property of Mr. John Hewes, of the FLOWER POT, Oldbury. The house of Mr. Fletcher has been unoccupied for several days, as that individual had just changed his residence. In the cellar there were several hogsheads of ale, and it was doubtless with a view of obtaining some of this that the prisoners broke into the house. They were, however, interrupted in their proceedings by Superintendent Simmons, who, with another officer (the appearance and movements of the prisoners having excited their suspicion) watched them to the house. On finding that their midnight adventure threatened to involve them in very serious difficulty, the prisoners at once precipitated themselves from the house, but were finally captured. They had no ale with them, but about fifteen gallons had been previously missed. The bucket, which was left behind, was found to be the property of Mr. Hewes. Committed to the Sessions on both charges.”

Worcester Journal 22/10/1853

“Worcestershire Michaelmas Sessions.....

Charles Taylor was charged with having, on the 5th of October instant, stolen ale, the property of John Fletcher. Prosecutor formerly kept the OLD TALBOT INN, and on the day named locked the house up, and left a quantity of ale in the cellar. He also secured a trap-door to the cellar. Next morning the trap had been disturbed, and about fifteen gallons of ale was gone.....”

[Charles Taylor, who had been previously convicted, was sentenced to 12 months' imprisonment. Richard Sanders was found not guilty. The charge of stealing a bucket was withdrawn.]

Wolverhampton Chronicle 26/12/1855

“On Friday, before Captain Bennitt, a man named James Millington was charged with attempting to murder Caroline Palmer, by cutting her throat on the night of Sunday. The case was heard at the Oldbury Court House, and excited some interest.

The witnesses examined were the woman Caroline Palmer (who is going on very favourably, and who gave her evidence without any inconvenience, except that she complained of soreness in the throat), T. R. Cooper, Esq, John Jones, the navigator, Benjamin Holloway, the militiaman, John Hewes, the landlord of the FLOWER POT, William Parkes, a grinder (who was one of the first persons who saw the prisoner lying under the Blacking Mill wall, and who took the knife out of the prisoner's hand, and wiped the blood off it on the grass), and police constable Simmons.

It was the landlord, Mr. John Hewes, who heard the prisoner when he and Palmer were in his house, saying that that should be the last time that she (meaning Palmer) should go there.

The usual caution was read to the prisoner, and he replied, ‘I have nothing to say.’ In the course of the proceedings the prisoner asked Palmer if she did not shake at him, while they were in the FLOWER POT public house, the pocket of her gown, which apparently contained money, for the purpose of aggravating him. She replied in the negative.

Captain Bennitt informed the prisoner that he stood committed to the Worcester Assizes to take his trial for attempting to murder Caroline Palmer. The prisoner walked back to the police station, and in the course of the afternoon he was conveyed to Halesowen, en route for Worcester.”

Worcestershire Chronicle 12/3/1856

“Worcester Lent Assizes.....

James Millington, 23, collier, stood indicted for cutting and stabbing Caroline Palmer, at Oldbury, on the 16th December. Mr. Cook for the prosecution, the prisoner was undefended.

Caroline Palmer deposed: On the 16th of December I was at the FLOWER POT, at Oldbury. I went there between six and seven o'clock, and left about eleven. A man named John Jones, and Millington, the prisoner, were also there. Jones walked down the street with me. I had lived with Millington for seven or eight months, till a fortnight before the day named. He came to my house on that morning, and I told him to go away. As I was walking down the street with Jones, after leaving the FLOWER POT, Millington came up to me, and made a 'snatch' at my throat. I did not feel anything at the time, and went about 100 yards further before I found that my throat was cut. I went back to the FLOWER POT, and a soldier took me to Mr. Cooper's surgery. When I left Mr. Cooper's, the prisoner again came up to me, and held me with one hand, while he cut my throat and chin again. I put up my hand, and my fingers were also cut. I then became insensible, and remember nothing more.

By the Prisoner: I never threatened to stab or poison you.

John Jones corroborated prosecutor's testimony, but he could not swear that the prisoner was the man. Several other witnesses were called, but their evidence was merely a recapitulation of the facts detailed above.

Police Constable Simmonds stated that he went in search of the prisoner, and on the following day, Monday, found him lying insensible in a field, with his throat cut; a knife was on the ground near him. When he recovered, I told him the charge, and he at once admitted that he cut the girl's throat. Mr. Cooper, surgeon, of Oldbury, examined the wounds on the girl's throat, which he said involved no danger to her life. He also examined the prisoner, and found him suffering from a jagged wound in the throat. He was insensible for hours, and quite cold and stiff.

His lordship, in summing up, pointed out to the jury that the prisoner was indicted for the intent to murder, and also for inflicting grievous bodily harm. It would be for the jury to decide upon which charge the prisoner was guilty.

After some deliberation, the prisoner was pronounced guilty of intent to murder.

The learned judge, in passing sentence, said he was quite concurred in the verdict. Sentence of death was then recorded against the prisoner.”

“At the Worcester assizes last week, James Millington, a young collier, was indicted for cutting and wounding Caroline Palmer, at Oldbury, on the 16th of December. The parties had lived together for some months, and on the prosecutrix saying she would have nothing more to do with him, the prisoner inflicted a severe wound on her throat and afterwards attempted to destroy himself. He was found guilty of wounding with intent to murder, and sentence of death was recorded; but the judge intimated that he would advise Her Majesty as to what extent her mercy should be extended to the prisoner.”

All persons indebted to the said John Hewes, or that have any of his effects, are not to pay or deliver the same but to Mr. Joseph Heapy Watson, Registrar of the said Court, at his office, at the Courthouse, in Oldbury, the Official Assignee of the estate and effects of the said insolvent.”

Birmingham Daily Post 3/3/1859

“At the Petty Sessions, on Tuesday, before Captain Bennitt and R. W. Johnson, Esq., Mary Ann Custon was brought up on remand, charged with having on the 12th of February stolen one pair of women’s boots, the property of Jonah Jephcott, coal seller and shoe dealer, of Oldbury, who keeps a stall in the Market Place, adjoining Mr. Perrens’ house. The prisoner, it was stated by the wife of the prosecutor, took the boots from the stall between nine and ten o’clock on the night of the 12th ult. Prosecutrix concluded that prisoner had taken them, because she saw her standing close to the stall at the time above mentioned, and when she was gone the boots were missing. Prosecutrix further stated, that from information she received on the 18th ult, she went to the prisoner’s house and accused her of the theft. Prisoner denied it, and said she had bought a pair of a woman at the bottom of the Market Place, for which she had given 4s 9d. Prosecutrix gave information to the police, and Police-sergeant Simmonds apprehended the prisoner at the house of her father. The boots produced were stated by the prosecutrix to be her property, and identical with the pair she saw on the prisoner’s feet. The above is the substance of the evidence taken at the first examination on the 23rd ult. Yesterday, Eli Bell, a miner, residing in Oldbury, swore that he saw the prisoner take the boots from the stall on the night in question, put them under her shawl, and walk off with them. He had been walking with the prisoner that night, and after she had taken the boots he went with her to the RED COW INN, when he left her.

This witness was then cross-examined by the prisoner with the view of showing that after the robbery he went with her to several other public houses the same evening, but he distinctly swore that he never went with her into any house but the RED COW. The prisoner, however, swore that Bell had been with her to the FLOWER POT and the OLD HOUSE AT HOME, and several witnesses were accordingly called by the Bench to ascertain which statement was true. These witnesses corroborated the statement of the prisoner, having seen her in company with Bell at the houses above named. One witness also proved that instead of Bell leaving the prisoner in the RED COW, they both left together.

Under these circumstances the prisoner was dismissed on the charge of felony, and admitted to give evidence against Eli Bell, who was forthwith placed in the dock on the charge of having committed perjury. The various witnesses having been examined, and deposed as above stated, Bell was fully committed to take his trial at the ensuing Worcester Assizes.”

“The nine miles race under the hour, over a quarter of a mile of ground, by John Rhodes, of Brades New Village, near Oldbury, came off on Monday last. A vast multitude of persons assembled, and the backers of the man offered level bets, but there were but few takers. Exactly at 25 minutes to 3, all being in readiness, the word was given and the man started in prime style, accomplishing the first mile in 5 minutes and 9 seconds; the first four miles in 23 minutes, and ultimately the whole distance in 5 minutes under the hour. The betting kept increasing on the man throughout the race, but no takers. After the first two miles the offers on the seven miles were £2 to 10s, but no takers. The friends of John Rhodes having heard that George Armstrong’s backers have stated that he would run Rhodes 30 miles, and give him one mile, Rhodes will accept the challenge if Armstrong means running; or he will run against Armstrong’s time 10 miles; or run with Armstrong 10, 12, 16 miles, or any length, providing the said Armstrong will give him one minute start, for from £10 to £30. “Today, at the Oldbury Police Court, Mr. F. Dawes, solicitor, made an application for temporary transfer of the license of the FOUNTAIN INN, Brades, near Oldbury, from Thomas Dimsdale Bullar to William Henry Spencer. The latter's character, he explained, was quite satisfactory, and he produced a lease of the premises to Mr. Spencer for seven years. Under that lease the applicant was a bona fide tenant, and it was agreed that he should purchase the stock and fixtures, and the business would be entirely his own. In the lease, however, there was a tied clause to Bates Brewery, West Bromwich, and he was informed that, rightly or wrongly, the Oldbury justices had passed a resolution to the effect that where there a tenant came into possession if there were a tied clause in the agreement or lease he could not hold the license. If the Bench insisted upon that resolution being carried into effect in this case, which was a perfectly bona fide one, then he should ask them to grant a temporary transfer in the name of Catherine Bates, the brewer to whom the house was tied. He further asked that the usual seven days' notice required should be dispensed with.

The justices retired to consult in private, and upon returning into court Mr. A. M. Chance said they had agreed to waive the notice and grant the transfer to Catherine Bates.

Mr. Dawes: I understand the Bench refuses to grant the transfer to William Henry Spencer.

Mr. Chance: That is all I have to say. You have got the concession you asked for.

Mr. Dawes did not press for an answer to his enquiry, and the matter dropped.”

Birmingham Mail 12/4/1904

“Today, at Oldbury Police Court, an interesting point was raised by Mr. F. Dawes in connection with an application for the transfer of the license of the FOUNTAIN INN, Brades Village, Oldbury, from Thomas Henry Bates to William Henry Spencer. He mentioned that a similar application was made three weeks ago, but it was refused by the magistrates on the ground that there was a tie upon the trade by the brewers, Messrs. Bates, of West Bromwich. Mr. Spencer, continued counsel, was a person with an excellent character, who had purchased all the fixtures and stock at a cost of £100. The lease was granted before the application was made for the transfer of the house three weeks ago, and now Spencer threatened that if he could not have the license in his own name he would withdraw from all negotiations with the brewers. The result of this would be that instead of getting a bona fide tenant the brewers would have to put a manger into the house. He contended that if the magistrates insisted on carrying out their resolution that no person could hold a full license where the house was tied to the brewers, it would bear very hardly upon both parties.

After a few minutes' deliberation, Mr. Lavender said the Bench could not alter their decision of three weeks ago. Mr. Dawes pressed the magistrates to state the reason of their refusal, but this they declined to do."

Birmingham Mail 2/5/1905

"At the Oldbury Police Court, today, Johnathan Stone (40), of Chaters Passage, Tipton, was charged with assaulting William Henry Spencer, the landlord of the FOUNTAIN INN, Brades Village, and also with refusing to quit. When asked to leave the house, defendant caught hold of the landlord by the neck and threw him across a table, breaking three glasses and three jugs. He was then ejected by two customers, but returned and broke a window, doing damage to the extent of 3s.

Defendant was fined 40s and costs in each case, amounting in all to £4 18s, or one month's hard labour."

Black Country Bugle

Letter from Mrs. R. Hill - Murder At The Fountain

"I do remember my mother telling me that the FOUNTAIN INN, or to give it its correct name the PRETTY FLEUR, the name was engraved on the windows, was haunted by a young woman.

The story as I remember was, a young soldier home on leave, went to the FOUNTAIN INN to see his sweetheart. She was the barmaid. I don't know what caused him to do it, but he shot and killed her. He was caught and hanged at Winson Green Prison. His name was Fletcher and he lived in Junction Street, Brades Village....."

It is believed that Thomas Fletcher had gone to the pub, to shoot himself in front of Lily Wharton. The banns had been read for their wedding before it was called off. He was not on leave, but had returned from a gold prospecting expedition in the USA. He was working for a local firm at the time.

Somehow (a struggle?) she was shot, and Fletcher then turned the gun on himself. They were both taken to hospital, where Lily died and Fletcher survived.

He was sentenced to death, and a petition was raised by his family containing 8,000 signatures, but he was eventually hung at Worcester by Ellis assisted by Pierrepont.

Birmingham Daily Gazette 9/4/1913

"Death of Victim of Brades Village Sensation.

A development has taken place in connection with the Brades Village shooting sensation. Late last night the girl Lilian Wharton died in West Bromwich District Hospital. It will be recalled that yesterday week Thomas Fletcher, a young labourer of Junction Street, Brades Village, went into the FOUNTAIN INN, Albion Street, where Miss Wharton lived with her father, and it is alleged that he shot her with a revolver. He afterwards, it is stated, turned the weapon on himself and blew away part of his forehead. It was generally expected that the girl might recover, whereas the condition of the man was so serious that he was not expected to get better. The doctor stated last night that the man is in about the same condition. The inquest on the girl has not yet been fixed, but it will probably be held tomorrow morning."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 12/4/1913

“The Coroner’s inquest in the Oldbury shooting tragedy, which had caused a great sensation in the district, was opened yesterday at the Law Courts, West Bromwich by the Borough Coroner (Mr. J. Clark), and adjourned till Monday, the 30th inst, after the evidence of identification. The inquest was on the body of Lilian Wharton, aged 21, who resided with her parents at the FOUNTAIN INN, Albion Road, Brades Village, Oldbury, and who died in the West Bromwich District Hospital on Tuesday night.

The Coroner said that the facts, as far as he they had been reported to him were shortly these.

On 1 April Fletcher went to the house of the young woman, where she apparently took part in conducting the business.

After Fletcher had been there quite a short time the young woman came running out of the tap-room, where they had been together, and said Fletcher had shot her.

When her mother went into the tap-room Fletcher was also found to be shot, and was lying on the floor.

Both Fletcher and the girl were taken to the West Bromwich District Hospital, where the latter died on 8 April.

The post-mortem examination had been made by the hospital doctor, who gave the cause of death as peritonitis, due to the entrance of the bullet into the abdomen.

As it was suggested that the wound was caused by Fletcher shooting the young woman, it was possible for a verdict of wilful murder to be returned against him.

They could not go on with the inquest that day, as amongst other reasons Fletcher was still in the hospital and unable to attend.

The doctor had informed him that Fletcher was recovering, and in the course of ten days or a fortnight he would be able to come out.

At the adjourned inquest he hoped that Fletcher would be sufficiently recovered to attend, and the case would be presented to the jury in full.

John William Wharton, licensee of the FOUNTAIN INN, Brades Village, was then called, and identified the body was that of his daughter, Lilian, who assisted him in the business.

Previous to 1 April, she had been keeping company with Thomas Fletcher.

On that day witness left home at 7am to go to work. About 11am he received information which caused him to return home immediately.

When he got there he found his daughter had been taken to hospital, and his wife said that Thomas Fletcher had shot her.

Fletcher was lying on his back in the tap-room, bleeding from a wound in his right temple. Later he was taken to hospital.

Witness had from time to time visited his daughter in hospital, and last Sunday she was able to communicate with him.

The Coroner remarked that he would not take that at present.

Witness further stated his daughter died about 8.30pm last Tuesday.

This was all the evidence taken, the inquest being adjourned.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 28/4/1913

“Thomas Fletcher, aged 28, described as a labourer, of Dudley Road, Brades Village, Oldbury, was brought before Mr. W. Parks at a Special Court at Oldbury on Saturday, and charged with the murder of Lilian Wharton, aged 21, who resided with her parents at the FOUNTAIN INN, Albion Street, Brades Village, of which her father is the licensee.

The affair took place on 1 April. Both Miss Wharton and Fletcher had been keeping company, and it was arranged they should be married at Easter, but it is alleged that friction arose between the parties, and the girl declined to continue the friendship.

About 10.30 on Tuesday morning, Fletcher went to the girl’s home and called for a drink. This was given to him by the girl, who also supplied him with a second one, and it is alleged that on this occasion he drew a revolver from his pocket and shot the girl in the side. He then turned the weapon upon himself, and blew away part of his forehead.

Both were removed to West Bromwich District Hospital, and a week later the girl died from peritonitis, following the injuries.

Fletcher's condition gradually improved, and on Saturday he left the hospital under police escort, and was taken to Oldbury police station.

Upon arrival the usual procedure of identification was taken before the magistrates.

He looked very ill, and had his right eye and head bandaged.

The first witness called was Superintendent Davies, who said that on 14 April he saw the prisoner in the hospital, Dr. Keane being present at the same time.

After cautioning him, he informed him of the death of Miss Wharton, and then charged him with murdering her, but he made no reply.

The Superintendent added that he did not propose to call any further evidence. The matter was in the hands of the Director of Public Prosecutions, and he applied for a remand until Wednesday at 10.30, when further evidence will be called.

The accused, who had nothing to say, was accordingly remanded, and removed to Winson Green."

Dundee Courier 29/4/1913

"At the inquest at West Bromwich yesterday upon Lilian Wharton (21), daughter of an Oldbury license-holder, who died in the local hospital from a bullet wound, a verdict of Wilful Murder was returned against Thomas Fletcher (28), a labourer.

Parties were to have been married. The girl broke off the engagement on the ground that Fletcher had no home for her.

It is alleged Fletcher then shot her, and wounded himself in the head. The girl died seven days after."

On 7th June, 1913, at the Assizes held at the Shirehall, Worcester, before Mr. Justice Bray, Thomas Fletcher was indicted for 'feloniously, wilfully, and of his malice aforethought, did kill and murder Lilian Wharton' and on 9th June, was indicted for 'attempting to commit suicide' (this was not proceeded with). He was found guilty and sentenced to hang.

Birmingham Daily Gazette 13/6/1913

"A petition is being organised, to be presented to the Home Secretary, for the reprieve of the man Thomas Fletcher, who at Worcestershire Assizes on Saturday was sentenced to death for the murder of his sweetheart, Miss Lilian Wharton, daughter of Mr. J. Wharton, licensee of the FOUNTAIN INN, Albion Street, Brades Village, in April.

The proceedings aroused much interest locally, and the petition, which is being arranged by Messrs. Sharpe and Darby, the solicitors who acted on behalf of the accused at his trial, is receiving much support.

The Vicar of Oldbury, the Rev. A. P. Birley, is taking an active part on Fletcher's behalf."

Leeds Mercury 24/6/1913

"Thomas Fletcher applied for leave to appeal against the sentence of death which was passed upon him at the Worcester Assizes, for the murder of Lilian Walton [sic].

On behalf of the prisoner it was submitted that an alleged confession made by the prisoner should not have been taken as evidence, on the ground that prisoner was not in a fit condition to know what he was saying at the time.

Counsel also submitted that the Judge omitted points in favour of the prisoner in his summing up, all of which, he said, went to confirm the statement of the prisoner that the shooting was an accident. The prisoner was engaged to be married, and a day had been fixed for the wedding.

After hearing legal arguments, the Court dismissed the application."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 5/7/1913

"Upon inquiry at the offices of Messrs. Sharpe and Darby, who are acting on behalf of Fletcher, the Gazette representative was informed that no communication of any description had yet been received from the Home Secretary."

Birmingham Daily Gazette 10/7/1913

"Thomas Fletcher, of Dudley Street, Oldbury, who murdered his sweetheart Lilian Wharton of Brades Village, Oldbury, was executed at Worcester Prison yesterday morning. He met his death without fear. The execution took place in a coach-house, about thirty yards from the main buildings of the prison. Fletcher walked firmly from the condemned cell across the intervening space, and stepped into the coach-house, smiling as he did so, and in a second or two paid the penalty of his crime. He maintained to the end the story that the shooting had been an accident, and that he did not mean to kill the girl, and though he expressed to the chaplain during his incarceration his regret, he never expressed any fear as to his fate or hope of reprieve. As he walked across the yard, Pierpont, the assistant executioner, walked on one side of him, and on the other side a warder. Having regard to Fletcher's collapse when he was sentenced to death, it was feared that he would need assistance, but he did not. He followed the chaplain and the executioner Ellis, at a vigorous pace across the yard, gazing fearlessly ahead of him. The execution was fixed for eight o'clock, and was over in a couple of minutes. During the night Fletcher had slept since his sentence, soundly, indeed, the Press representatives were informed that at no time has he showed the slightest fear or nervousness. The following letter was received by the mother of Fletcher yesterday:

'Dear Mother.
Just a few lines to you for the last time. I want you all to cheer up and look after yourselves. I am ready to go now that my time is here, but I have nothing to fear. It was an accident and you can see how my luck is. You can't go apart from my luck. I have not had fair play in my case, but I am willing to go, and I have wished many times since I was in prison that I should die. I should have been dead the first week I was in prison if my wish had come true. I have suffered enough and don't want to suffer any more. I hope it will be better in the next world, then I shall have no more troubles and no worrying.....'
Then followed a few sentences asking his mother to remember him to his relatives and friends."

"The site of a derelict public house in Oldbury could be transformed if new planning proposals are given the go ahead. An application to build housing on the site of the FOUNTAIN INN, on Albion Street, was submitted to the council earlier this month. If approved the plans would see the pub bulldozed and replaced by six new, modern-style homes, with parking. Residents have until Monday January 28 to comment on the plans."

It was demolished in 2008.

Housing (Fountain Gardens) was built on the site. [2014]

“Worcestershire Easter Quarter Sessions.....

James Adams, (49), puddler, was indicted for uttering a false florin to Sarah Jones, of the FOUNTAIN INN, Oldbury, on the 22nd of February. Mr. Streeten prosecuted.

The prisoner offered the florin in payment for some beer. He pleaded that he did not know it was a bad florin; but it appeared that he afterwards offered the same coin to another publican, Joseph Parkes, the same night. Parkes bit a piece out of it. Prisoner said that he got the florin in change for a sovereign at the APPLE TREE INN, but the landlord of that house denied that change was given to the prisoner. Now he said he got the coin among his wages.

Guilty; sentenced to nine months’ hard labour.

Maria Jones (44), charwoman, with whom the last prisoner lived, was indicted for uttering a counterfeit half-crown. She offered it in payment for some bread, &c, and was identified as the person who had twice endeavoured to pass counterfeit florins.

Guilty; nine months’ hard labour.”

“Charles Mellish, porter, a native of Woolwich, was charged with stealing twelve £5 Bank of England notes, £2 in gold, and a horse and trap, the property of his master, Mr. Walter Cooper, grocer, Halesowen Street, Oldbury, on the 20th August.

Prosecutor stated that on the 20th August prisoner was in his employ. On that day he had to deliver goods. He started from the witness’s shop about ten in the morning with a horse and cart, and was accompanied by his son, a boy about two years of age. Prosecutor had been in the habit for some months of sending all his silver to Mr. Jones, FOUNTAIN INN, Bromford Lane, who gave in exchange Bank of England notes and gold. On the day in question, a youth came up from Mr. Jones's to seek the money, and prosecutor handed him a bag containing £62 in silver, and the youth accompanied prisoner to the FOUNTAIN INN. Prisoner was directed to receive the notes and gold in exchange for the silver. As Mellish was a long time away prosecutor made inquiries about him. He afterwards went to the Post Office, where he sent off telegrams to different places. He then gave information to Superintendent Hardman at Oldbury. He did not see prisoner again till the following Wednesday morning at Birmingham where the latter was in custody. Prisoner had been in his employ about two months, but on a previous occasion he had been employed by himself six months. Prisoner had been entrusted with money by him before; once with £84. The horse and trap was found near the Ivy House, Handsworth, with his son in the trap, some five hours afterwards.

Sarah Ann Jones, wife of Enoch Jones, FOUNTAIN INN, Bromford Lane, testified to giving the prisoner the notes and gold in exchange for the silver.

Superintendent Hardman stated that he received prisoner into custody at Birmingham on Wednesday, the 24th inst. Prisoner made no reply when charged. He had £2 12s 3d in his possession.

Mellish pleaded guilty, and was committed to take his trial at the Quarter Sessions."

Worcester Journal 22/10/1881

"County Quarter Sessions.....

Charles Mellish (35), grocer's porter, was charged with embezzling £62, the money of his master, Walter Cooper, of Oldbury. Mr. Woodgate prosecuted; the prisoner was undefended. A Mr. Jones gave the prisoner twelve £5 notes and £2 in gold to take to his master. He did not do so, but absconded to Birmingham. His defence was that the money was stolen from a cart he was driving, while he was in a public house. Sent to prison for fifteen months with hard labour."

"Yesterday Mr. E. Docker (coroner) held and inquest at the FOUNTAIN INN, Bromford Lane, respecting the death of Enoch Jones (59), the landlord.

Sarah Jones, deceased's wife, stated that about a fortnight ago he met with an accident and fell halfway down the stairs, injuring his ankle. A doctor was called in the next morning, and he continued to attend deceased until the time of his death.

Sarah Parkes, daughter of the deceased, said on Thursday night last, about 11.30 she was assisting her father to get into bed, when he suddenly became unconscious and expired in her arms.

Dr. Latham attributed death to an apoplectic fit, not accelerated by the fall.

County Advertiser 25/1/1890

"About 7.30 on Tuesday morning, George Parker, a ganger on the London and North-Western Railway, was going along the line, when, between Oldbury and the Albion Stations, he came across the body of a man, frightfully mutilated. Both legs were cut off, his brains were protruding, and fragments of the body were scattered along the line. The police were communicated with, and the body removed to the mortuary. Subsequently the body was identified as that of Samuel Cox, aged 42, of Junction Street, Brades Village, Oldbury. Deceased left home at 9.30 on Monday morning to attend an ironworkers' meeting at the FOUNTAIN INN, near Bromford Ironworks.

Mr. E. Docker held an inquest on Wednesday afternoon.

William Lee deposed to seeing deceased at 10.30 on Monday morning leaving Bromford Ironworks. They went together to a meeting at the FOUNTAIN INN, and left at nearly five o'clock at night. They had nine quarts of ale among six of them, but they afterwards went to HEARTS OF OAK INN, and stayed there until six o'clock. Deceased started to go across the fields home, but he (witness) remembered nothing more, because he had had too much beer. Deceased was not 'dead' drunk, but he had had more than was good for him.

George Parker deposed to finding the body fearfully mutilated between the Albion and Oldbury Stations. John Pallfreeman, a watchman at Messrs. Isons and Co.'s works, said that about 7.20am on Tuesday his dog saw something going up the embankment. He called the dog away, but he would not come, and deceased called to witness to help him up the embankment. Witness begged of him not to go along the line, but he persisted in going. Just then he saw two trains coming from opposite directions.

Police-constable Avers deposed to being sent for, and conveying the body to the mortuary.

Mr. Robinson, the station-master at Oldbury, said deceased was trespassing by going on the line.

The jury returned a verdict to the effect that deceased was Found Dead on the railway."

Smethwick Weekly News 15/3/1902

“Holders Brewery Co were charged with permitting drunkenness on the licensed premises of the FOUNTAIN INN, Bromford Lane, on the 10th February. Mr. J. S. Sharpe appeared to prosecute, and Mr. Joy (instructed by Mr. J. B. Clark) defended.

At about five minutes to five on that day two officers visited the house, which was managed by Ernest Deakin. In the tap room was a man named James Windmill, who was staggering about the room trying to light his pipe. Mrs. Deakin was there, and one of the officers asked her how it was he was drunk there, and she said that he had no drink in front of him. One of the officers then said, ‘Then he has had some,’ to which she replied that he had had none for the last half hour. Windmill then staggered out of the room, but when outside fell down. He was picked up, but refused to give his name and address, so he was taken to the station, where he gave what was required to the superintendent.

The two officers, PCs Cale and Chitty, corroborated this, and Superintendent Sheriff deposed to seeing him in a drunken condition, and obtaining from him his name and address.

In answer to Mr. Joy, Windmill said he had been in the house since about 11.30, and had consumed about 3½ pints of ale, which he said could not make him drunk, as he could 'carry' twice as much.

For the defence Mr. Joy submitted that the man was not sufficiently drunk to warrant a conviction, as was stated by the witnesses he brought.

Windmill was fined 2s 6d and costs, 8s in all, or 7 days, and Holders 20s and costs, £4 0s 6d in all, and the license was not to be endorsed."

The license was surrendered on 12th April 1906.

It became a lodging house.

“At the Police Court, yesterday, Albert Burton, of Park Street, Churchbridge, was charged with refusing to quit the licensed premises of the FOUNTAIN INN, Langley, and with assaulting the landlord, William Swancott, on the 28th ult.

Prosecutor alleged that whilst ejecting the defendant from his house the latter struck him several times with a stick.

Police-constable Walton also gave evidence as to the violent behaviour of the accused.

A fine of £1 8s, including expenses, was imposed, or, in default, twenty-one days’ imprisonment.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 3/2/1909

“Licensing Sessions.....

Mr. A. M. Chance presided at Oldbury. The report of Superintendent Hill stated that there were 126 licences in the district, a reduction of seven on the previous year, which compared with the estimated population, gave a ratio of one on-licence to every 354 of the inhabitants. One licence-holder only was convicted during the year, while eighty-eight persons were convicted for drunkenness, a decrease of forty-three on the previous year.....

The police objected to the renewal of the following twelve licences which will be considered at the adjourned sessions, to be held on March 2.....

FOUNTAIN INN.”

The license renewal was referred to the Compensation Authority on 2nd March 1909.

Birmingham Daily Gazette 3/3/1909

“The adjourned licensing sessions for Oldbury were held yesterday, Mr. G. S. Albright presiding in the absence, through illness, of Mr. A. M. Chance. The magistrates were sitting for several hours, chiefly in hearing evidence regarding the following licensed houses, to the renewal of which the police objected on the grounds of redundancy, the magistrates proposing to refer them for compensation.....

FOUNTAIN, beerhouse, High Street, Langley, owner Messrs. Showells Limited.....

Evidence was given in each case by Superintendent Hill and Mr. F. H. Jones, auctioneer and valuer, as to the nature of the houses, and the proximity of other licensed premises. The magistrates afterwards retired to consider the cases, and upon resuming Mr. Albright said they had decided to refer the following six houses to Worcester to be dealt with under compensation: CRYSTAL PALACE, NAVIGATION INN, HOPE AND ANCHOR, FOUNTAIN, CROSS KEYS, and BIRD IN HAND. All the other licences would be renewed, and the licences of these six would be provisionally renewed pending the county committee’s investigations.....”

The license was refused on 3rd July 1909.

Evesham Standard 10/7/1909

“The Worcestershire Licensing Committee sat on Saturday to continue consideration of the 25 licenses which had been referred to them as the compensation authority by the local justices.....

In the case of the FOUNTAIN, Langley, Oldbury, Mr. Sharpe intimated, on behalf of owner and licensee, that there was no objection to the closing of the house, but he said they would claim liberal compensation. Mr. Bund: We give no promise.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 13/12/1909

“Mr. J. Willis Bund presided on Saturday at a meeting of the Worcestershire Licensing Committee which was held to consider claims in respect of licences which have been refused.....

In the case of the FOUNTAIN INN, Langley, the claim was for £3,154. Mr. F. Jones, valuer, gave evidence that the premises were worth about £52 a year, but Mr. E. D. Fisher, manager of the tied house department of Messrs. Showell, said they were at present assessed for Income Tax at only £20 10s, and for inhabited house duty at £25. Mr. Bund elicited that contributions had been paid to the compensation fund on the lower amount, and passed some strictures on the claim from the fund upon the higher amount. Mr. J. B. Matthews said there might be some reproach upon the Overseers that they had not assessed the premises sufficiently high, but that was not a reason why the claimants should not be compensated for their full loss. The Committee awarded £1,760, but the claimants intimated that they could not accept that amount and must appeal to the Inland Revenue.”

Alcester Chronicle 18/6/1910

“A meeting of the Worcestershire Licensing Committee was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, on Saturday, Mr. Willis Bund presiding.....

In the case of the FOUNTAIN INN, Langley, it appeared that the Commissioners in Inland Revenue (to whom the parties had appealed against the committee’s award of £1,760) had awarded £2,000, and of this Showell’s Brewery Company, the registered owners, proposed to give their manager £10. Mr. Bund remarked that the Act intended that the licensee should have at least one year’s trade profit, and this arrangement appeared to him to be really a fraud on the Act and an ingenious way of the owners getting more than their share.”

Compensation was paid on 29th July 1910.

The license was extinguished on 5th August 1910.

It became Langley Post Office.

Aris's Birmingham Gazette 10/2/1845 - Advert

"To be Let, the FOUNTAIN INN, an old-licensed House, near the Alkali Works, Oldbury. No expense coming in.

Apply to the Proprietor on the premises."

Worcestershire Chronicle 4/6/1845

"We stated in our last that a man named John Hadley, in the employment of Messrs. Dawes and Sons, Oldbury, had died on the preceding Tuesday morning of injuries he received in a quarrel with a young man named Waterhouse, who was apprehended, and awaited a coroner's inquest, which was held on the Friday following, and, by adjournment, on Tuesday, the 27th ult, before George Hinchliffe, Esq, coroner, and a most respectable jury.

The greatest interest was excited in the town and neighbourhood, and the large concert room of the TALBOT HOTEL, in which the inquest was held, was densely crowded by persons anxious to witness the proceedings.

The evidence went to prove that Waterhouse and deceased had been drinking till one o'clock on the morning of the 19th ult, at the FOUNTAIN INN, Oldbury, with several other persons. When the party left, Waterhouse was sober, but the deceased was very fresh, and insisted on following Waterhouse into the house of a man named Pigott, one of the party. Waterhouse, seeing him behind, turned round, and after some angry words had passed between the two, he struck the deceased three or four times. The deceased kept retreating backwards all the time, saying he would not fight, until he was knocked down. On witness going to assist him to rise up, he found him quite insensible. He died shortly afterwards.

The jury returned a verdict of Manslaughter against Waterhouse, who has been committed to take his trial for the offence."

Worcestershire Chronicle 23/7/1845

"Worcestershire Summer Assizes.....

Andrew Waterhouse, 22, labourer, was charged with the manslaughter of John Hadley, on the 20th of May last, at Oldbury. Mr. Selfe prosecuted, and Mr. Huddleston defended. The evidence for the prosecution was as follows.

Thomas Webb: I am a labourer, of Oldbury. John Hadley, the deceased, was with me at the FOUNTAIN INN, Oldbury; and also Waterhouse, the prisoner. We all went out together, about a quarter past one in the morning. There were several others with us. Hadley was drunk. We were all good friends up to the time of leaving. There was no quarrel. We went towards home. Hadley was going to his work, as it was his turn to work all night. We came near the prisoner's house, and prisoner and a girl were going in, and Hadley followed. Prisoner wanted to know what brought us there. He then struck Hadley, who had not previously offered any insult to Waterhouse. Hadley stepped back, said he would not fight, and the prisoner followed us. They went off, and in about four minutes Waterhouse came back and said he had killed one, and could do the same for another, meaning me. We were going to fight, but were prevented. I then found Hadley lying in the road.

Thomas Pigott: I married a sister of the prisoner. I was at the FOUNTAIN. When I left, between one and two in the morning, Hadley and Waterhouse were drunk. I had got home first and locked the door, and soon after I heard a noise at the door, made by Ann Hadley asking to be admitted, for they were going to drop on her brother. I opened the door, and saw the party. I saw Hadley strike Waterhouse. Waterhouse returned the blow, and then they went away. They were away about four minutes, and then I went and found Hadley in the road.

Mary Warren: Lives opposite Pigott's house. I was aroused in the night of the 20th of May. I saw many people in the road quarrelling; saw one lying about half a yard from the pavement.

John Toy, watchman, of Oldbury: Met the party coming from the FOUNTAIN. Waterhouse appeared sober, but Hadley was drunk.

Sarah Hadley: I am the widow of John Hadley. I went on the morning of the 20th May to the furnaces, and found him in great pain. He said he should not live. He said he was a murdered man. He knew me. He said Andrew Waterhouse, calling him by his usual name of 'Sixy,' had murdered him. He was kicked on the left side and shoulder. He said he was worst there.

Mr. T. R. Cooper, surgeon: I visited Hadley on Tuesday. There were many bruises on the body, particularly on his head, and the cause of death was compression of the brain, caused by extravasation of blood. This was occasioned by a kick or a fall. There was a blow on the region of the stomach, caused by a kick or by deceased falling on a brick. I think compression of the brain was caused by his falling on a rounded stone. The Judge here stopped the case, as he said there was plainly a doubt as to the cause of death. He wished the jury to say whether they wanted to hear anything more. They said they did not, and returned a verdict of Not Guilty."

Benjamin Lancaster was also a builder. [1854]

“The annual Licensing Meeting for the Oldbury Petty Sessional Division was held yesterday at the Police Station.....

Superintendent Hardman reported There was one licensed house in the division which had not been occupied for ten or twelve months. He intended to oppose the renewal of that license, on the ground that there was no necessity for its continuance. The house referred to was the FOUR FURNACES INN, Canal Side, Hales Owen Street.....

Mr. Jackson, on behalf of the owner and lessee, Mr. W. Showell, applied for the license of the FOUR FURNACES INN to be renewed. Mr. Jackson explained that the license was held by a man named Aston, but he had left the district and could not be found. Mr. Wright (clerk) said he thought an application should be made for a transfer.....

The Bench, after a short deliberation, refused to renew the license of the FOUR FURNACES INN.”

“The FOUR FURNACES INN. Mr. Shakespeare, in making an application for a renewal of the above license, explained that it had been a licensed house a number of years, and on the licensing day the matter came before them and an objection was made to the license by the Superintendent. The house was on the Canal Side and was principally used by persons taking boats along the canal, who generally called to take their meals, and then went on. The house, for the last nine months, had been closed because there was some difficulty with the tenants.

The Clerk pointed out that Sergeant Stanton gave evidence that the house had not been used since the last general licensing day.

Mr. Shakespeare said that any how it was closed in consequence of the tenant taking the license away. Messrs. Showell leased the house, but they could not put in a new tenant until the man gave the license up. All he asked them to do was reconsider their previous decision not to renew the license because of the hardship not only to the tenant, but to Messrs. Showell also, who leased the premises. If the house had been closed because of bad conduct or anything of that character, it would have been a different thing, and if the house had been used the license would have been granted without hesitation. There was a tenant in the house, but he had not sold anything out of respect for their previous decision, but he simply asked them, was it fair to inflict the pecuniary loss to the tenant and lessee, simply through the fault of a tenant who went away with the license and caused the house to be closed. He pointed out, however, that unless the magistrates were prepared to renew the license on the 10th October, he ought not to press for the transfer now, and would ask them to take the two together.

Joseph Aston was then called, and in reply to Mr. Shakespeare, said he sold the license by auction, and that Mr. W. H. Pass was the purchaser. On the form being handed to witness showing the purchase, he denied that he had placed his signature on the paper.

Witness: All I want is my day's money for coming here.

Mr. Shakespeare: You are not worth paying, and can stand down.

Mr. Shakespeare explained that this was the kind of difficulty they had had with Aston all along, his object being to get money.

Mr. W. H. Pass was then called, and on entering the box he asked if he should be worth paying.

Mr. Shakespeare: Let me hear the decision first. (Laughter.)

Mr. Pass then stated that Mr. Pardoe sold the license and he (Mr. Pass) bought it for £1. The paper was then a blank, and Mr. Aston signed it the next morning, and he had held the license ever since. He bought it because he thought it a pity for the house to go wrong.

Mr. Avery: Was it not a funny way of doing business to sign a blank form?

Mr. Shakespeare said it was the public house way of doing it, and was always done. If they bought a license from a man, or lent him money on it, they could not tell who they would have to transfer it to, and they were bound to take it on a blank form in that way.

Sergeant Stanton said he had taken the memorial which was signed by a number of tradesmen in favour of the license, to them, and in most cases they stated that they did not know the person that the license was for when they signed, but the men deal at their shops. He also stated that there was a conviction against Thomas Slater.

Mr. Shakespeare said if there was any objection to the man himself, he would undertake to have another, and let it in abeyance for a time. The Magistrates deferred their decision.”

[The magistrates did not change their decision.]

Birmingham Daily Post 10/9/1873

“At the Police Court, yesterday, before Messrs. W. H. Dawes, T. Avery, and Dr. Houghton, William Hadley (18), labourer, of Titford, near Oldbury, and William Pratt, alias Cotterill (16), collier, Warley, near Oldbury, were charged with stealing and receiving £8, belonging to Edward Jones, licensed victualler, landlord of the FRENCH HORN, Oldbury. Mr. Shakespeare appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. Jackson for the prisoners.

At the outset Mr. Shakespeare stated that money had been stolen to the amount of £37, and there was no doubt it had been taken by prosecutor's son and given to the other prisoners. The father of Hadley had made reparation to a certain extent by returning £8 of the money upon discovering the theft. Under the circumstances, with the consent of the Bench, prosecutor would not proceed with the case.

Mr. Shakespeare having stated the facts of the case, the magistrates said it was a distressing case, and if they had followed their own inclination they would have adopted the suggestion made, but they were of opinion that there must be judicial investigation.

From the evidence, it appeared that prosecutor was in the habit of putting the ‘takings’ from his business in a cash-box in his bed room, and having no servant or anyone that he might suspect as being likely to steal, he left the key of the cash-box about in various parts of the house. His son, John Edward Jones, aged ten years, made the acquaintance of the prisoners two or three years ago, and on a Friday, about two months ago, he was with Hadley, who was employed at the Marl Hole, when Hadley said to him, ‘You can get a sovereign.’ The boy Jones said, ‘Perhaps I might.’ Hadley asked him if his father had a cash-box, and if he had seen the money. On receiving an affirmative reply, he asked Jones to get a sovereign, and promised to give him rabbits, birds, and other things if he did so. On the following day Jones got the key of the cash-box from a chest of drawers in his father's bed room, unlocked the box, and took out a sovereign. This he gave to Hadley, who took him to his father's house, gave him some apples and a bunch of roses, and told him that if he would ‘go and get some more’ he would buy him some ‘nice birds.’ Jones thereupon went home and took £4 from the cash-box. Hadley had told him to conceal the money in his stockings and shoes, in order that his mother might not hear it 'tinkle.' Jones, however, did not adopt this precaution, but wrapped the money in a piece of paper, and put it in his pocket. He then went to the Marl Hole and gave the money to Hadley. Hadley then took him and another boy named Allen to a confectioner's shop and treated them to cakes, sweets, and ginger-beer. On the next day Jones met Hadley again, and on that occasion Hadley gave two of the sovereigns to Pratt. Jones told Pratt that he had given the money to Hadley, whereupon Pratt turned to Hadley, and said, 'We will buy him a nice canary.' Hadley replied, 'We won't buy him no fine things, or his father will think he gave us the money.' They all then went on an excursion to Stourbridge, Hadley and Pratt paying the fares. When they came back Hadley gave Jones three rabbits, and Jones, when asked where he had them from, told his parents that he had 'worked for them at the Marl Hole;' Hadley gave them to him for assisting him. On several subsequent occasions the boy Jones took the sums of £7, £10, and £8, amounting in all to £37; Hadley asking him each time to take as much as he could.

On the 6th ultimo prosecutor missed 10s from his cash-box, and when counting the money two days afterwards he missed £10. In a week afterwards the father of Hadley brought him £8, and this led to the discovery of the robbery.

When the prisoners were arrested, and charged with stealing the £8, they both said they wished they had never seen the money, and if they 'got out' of this they would take care never to 'get into it again.'

Mr. Jackson submitted that there was no independent corroborative evidence except that of the policeman who arrested the boys, the evidence of Jones being that of an accomplice.

Both prisoners were committed to the Sessions for trial, bail being refused."

[At the Worcestershire Michaelmas Quarter Sessions in October 1873, Hadley and Pratt were found guilty of stealing the money, the jury recommending them to mercy. Hadley was sentenced to four calendar months' hard labour, and Pratt to three months' hard labour.]

"Oldbury Local Board.....

[Here is a long discussion about the prevention of contagious diseases, including the sanitary state of the district.]

Mr. Moore said Some of the inhabitants had to travel half a mile to get a pail of water. Another point was the condition of the privy accommodation in the town. He knew of a case where there were but two privies to fourteen houses, and another in which there were only two privies to nine houses. Mr. Collins said he was surprised at Mr. Devis, the inspector of nuisances, allowing such a state of things. Mr. Moore said they must go to the root of the matter. They wanted some men to go and clean away the refuse about the houses. Mr. Jordan said that the Sanitary Committee would have looked after such cases as those spoken of by Mr. Moore, had they been reported to them. Mr. Moore said the Sanitary Committee must have known about it. Mr. Showell remarked that he heard with profound astonishment a member of the board making such a statement as that which they had just heard. Addressing the inspector of nuisances, he asked him if he knew anything of the matter. Mr. Moore said there was also a bad case at the back of the FRENCH HORN, where the refuse from the public house and others ran into an open cesspool. Mr. Devis said it had been often reported to the Board, but there was no other outfall. Mr. Moore said he should like the Sanitary Committee and the Board to go and see the place. Mr. Devis said the houses near had drained into the same place for years – ever since the marl-hole was opened. With regard to houses with insufficient privy accommodation, the matter had been before the Board time after time. In fact, notices had been served upon the owners of the property, but they had not been carried out.....

(Just four years ago, namely on the 16th of July, 1874, we published a special article on Oldbury from a Sanitary Point of View, the subject being suggested by the high rate of mortality One crying nuisance at Little Fields, where the liquid refuse of a group of houses runs to an open pool close by, soddening the ground on the way, is today just as it was in 1874 Ed.)”

“Re J. E. Jones, publican and haulier, Oldbury.

Yesterday, at the West Bromwich Bankruptcy Court – before Mr. Registrar Watson – John Edward Jones, of the FRENCH HORN INN, Littlefields, Oldbury, publican and haulier, came up for his public examination. Mr. C. Woollett, represented the Official Receiver, and Mr. Wathall (from the office of Mr. Thomas, of Birmingham) appeared for the debtor.

The statement showed liabilities of £302 4s 8d, assets £19 13s 4d, leaving a deficiency of £282 11s 4d. A private meeting of creditors was held on the 28th of February, and an offer of a composition of 2s 6d in the pound was submitted, and refused. He attributed his failure to taking to an insolvent business.

In reply to Mr. Woollett, the bankrupt admitted that on the death of his father he married his step-mother. The bankrupt was allowed to pass.”

Birmingham Daily Post 21/12/1892

“Yesterday at the Oldbury Police Court, Joseph Hanson, landlord of the FRENCH HORN INN, Rounds Green, was summoned for supplying two youths, named Alfred Nash and Eli Besseker, under sixteen years of age, with intoxicants, on the 4th inst and also with permitting drunkenness on the same date. Mr. J. S. Sharpe defended.

It was alleged that on the date named Nash, in company with three other boys, visited defendant’s house about 8pm. They went into the tap-room, and were supplied with half a pint of ale and a bottle of ginger beer, for which they paid 3d. They afterwards had two quarts of beer, four-pennyworth of whisky, and four-pennyworth of rum. The lads left about 8.43, three of them being very drunk.

Police-constable Bibb deposed to seeing the lad Nash very drunk in Church Street about nine o’clock. One of the boys, named Evans, was picked up in Talbot Street in a drunken and unconscious condition, and did not recover until four o’clock on Monday afternoon.

For the defence, Mr. Sharpe contended no spirits were supplied to the lads.

Defendant’s wife admitted, in reply to Superintendent Speke, that the boys were drunk when they visited their house, but she positively denied that the lads were supplied with either beer or spirits.

Mr. Heaton said the Bench considered it a most serious case, and defendant would be fined £5 and costs for selling spirits to children, and the license would be endorsed, and in the other case the defendant would have to pay the costs.

Mr. Share pointed out that the maximum penalty under the section for supplying children was 20s and costs for the first offence. Mr. Wright said that was so.

Mr. Heaton then said the defendant would be fined 20s and costs in each case for supplying the boys with intoxicants, and the license would be endorsed in the first case, and for permitting drunkenness 40s and costs. The fines and costs amounted to £7 3s.

Mr. Sharpe asked the Bench not to endorse the license. Mr. Heaton said the license would be endorsed, and it was a question as to whether an indictment for perjury should not be made as to the evidence given in the case.”

Joseph Hanson – see also GEORGE AND DRAGON.

Bromsgrove Messenger 8/2/1896

“Joseph Hanson and Maria Hanson, both of Hurst Green, were charged with selling ale without a license.

Mr. J. S. Sharpe prosecuted on behalf of the police, Mr. W. Waldron defended, and Mr. J. W. Clulow watched the proceedings on behalf of Messrs. H. Mitchell and Co., the lessees of the house.

Mr. Sharpe explained that the real occupier of the premises was Mrs. Rebecca Walton, who was the mother of the defendant, Maria Hanson. Rebecca Walton resided with her son at the COTTAGE SPRING INN, Oldbury, where she had been conducting his business. He urged that it was necessary for the license of a beerhouse to be the real resident occupier, and, therefore the person who undertook that responsibility was not justified in remaining away from the business and allowing someone else to conduct it. The case was made more serious by the fact that the defendant, Joseph Hanson, was formerly the landlord of the FRENCH HORN INN, Rounds Green, where he was convicted for offences under the Licensing Act, and finally compelled to give up the house. He had since applied for a license at Dudley, but had been refused, and they now found him shielding himself under the license of his mother-in-law and carrying on her business.

Mr. Clulow produced an agreement showing that Rebecca Walton was the occupier of the beerhouse in question. Mr. Waldron admitted that Mrs. Walton was the proper tenant of the house, but said she had been compelled to conduct the business of her son at Oldbury, who had recently been in ill-health.

Mr. Sharpe said the police did not wish to press the case, but they desired to put the occupation of the house upon a proper footing. His friend, Mr. Waldron, had promised to pay the costs, and had also agreed that the business in future should be conducted by the proper person.

Ultimately the Bench allowed the case to be withdrawn on defendants paying the costs – 10s 9d each – and two guineas, the solicitor's fee."

Henry Mitchell and Co. Ltd. were fined £1 and £2 16s 6d costs, on 13th April 1897, for permitting drunkenness.

"The death took place in West Bromwich District Hospital yesterday of Thomas Smith, aged 17, who lived at the FRENCH HORN INN, Little Fields, Rounds Green, Oldbury, and who was employed as an engine-driver at the Globe Brickworks, Rounds Green. On Tuesday, while the engine which draws the wagons out of the marl-hole was in motion, deceased's foot slipped and his left leg was drawn between the winding drum and the bedding of the engine. His cries for help were heard by Adam Hall, who was at work close by, and he stopped the engine and extricated deceased, who had sustained very serious injuries. These included lacerated wounds to the left leg and foot and injuries to the right arm.

He was taken to the West Bromwich District Hospital, but was unable to recover from the shock and died as stated."

Birmingham Mail 7/6/1905

"At West Bromwich County Court today, before his Honour Judge Smith, John Smith and Sarah Ann Smith, of the FRENCH HORN INN, Littlefields, Rounds Green, Oldbury, applied for compensation against the executors of the late Ezra Hadley, brick manufacturer, of the Globe Brick Works, Rounds Green, in respect of the death of their son, Thomas Smith.

Mr. H. Jeffries, who appeared for the applicants, explained that the deceased boy was engaged at the Globe Brickworks on the 7th of March last driving an engine, when he fell between the drum and bedding of the engine. He sustained injuries to the thigh, breast and arm, and from the effects of these he died two days afterwards. His parents claimed compensation as partial dependents upon the deceased youth's earnings. A communication had been received from the solicitors to the respondents (Messrs. Jordan and Co.), intimating that £25 had been paid into Court, and that sum, together with costs, the applicants were willing to accept.

The Judge made an order accordingly."

The license was surrendered on 13th July 1908.

“H. Williams and J. Thompson. These men have made their money good to Mr. Savage, of the GATE INN, Oldbury, for their six score yards match, for £5 a side, which comes off on Monday, Feb 2, at Rood End, Oldbury. The men to toe the scratch between two and three o'clock."

Sporting Life 7/2/1863

"GATE INN, Rood End, Oldbury.

Thompson, of Birmingham, and Williams, of Dudley. These pedestrians met on Monday last, at Mr. Savage's, the above house, to run their six score yards, for £5 a side, according to fixture. There was a very large attendance interested in the event, Thompson being the favourite at 6 and 7 to 4. On coming to scratch shortly after two o'clock, Thompson looked in beautiful form; Williams, on the contrary, in bad health, and hardly fit for the undertaking. The men got off by mutual consent, Williams with a slight lead, which, however, availed him little, as Thompson made all the running, landing himself an easy winner by two yards. Referee, Mr. Savage."

"Arthur Ackers, of Birmingham, and Ike Baker (the pugilist), of West Bromwich, are matched to run 120 yards, for £5 a side, at Aston Cross, on Monday, February 16. A small sum is down in the hands of Mr. Savage, the GATE INN, Rood End, near Oldbury, where the men meet this day (Saturday) to increase the stake and draw up articles."

Bells Life in London and Sporting Chronicle 8/3/1863

"J. Thompson of Birmingham and Hughes of Worcester are matched to run five score yards, for £5 a side. To come off at Rood End, near Oldbury, on Monday, March 23. £3 a side is down, and the same sum and a further deposit of £1 a side to be made on Monday, March 9, to the stakeholder and referee, Mr. Savage, of the GATE INN, Oldbury. The race to be run between one and three, to start in 15 minutes, or go by report of pistol."

Sporting Life 25/3/1863

"GATE INN, Rood End, near Oldbury.

There was a very numerous attendance at Mr. Savage's, at the above place, to witness a most interesting match between Young Thompson, of Birmingham, and W. Hughes, late of Worcester, five score yards, for £5 a side. As usual, considerable delay was experienced in getting the men to the mark, it being past four o'clock before the men presented themselves stripped for the contest. A level piece of ground on the high road was chosen, and at length they got on the score. Hughes, who was waited on by the veteran Allsop, who had trained him for the contest, won the toss for choice of sides, which, however, was not of any material advantage. Thompson, who is a comparative novice (never having run more than once, on the same ground with Williams of Dudley, some two months back), had the kind attention of the renowned Arthur Ackers, of Birmingham, who had trained him for the encounter. Fifteen minutes were allowed on the scratch, but, at the expiration of which they got off, Thompson with three-quarters of a yard start, when a brilliant race ensued, Thompson coming in a winner by a quarter of a yard only. Some little money changed hands at evens, Hughes for choice. Mr. Savage, landlord of the GATE, and final stakeholder, officiated as referee."

“Last night, Mr. E. Docker (coroner) opened an enquiry at the GATE INN, Rood End, Oldbury, respecting the death of William Anderson, aged three months, the child of Ann Anderson.

Elizabeth Morris, residing at Rood End, said that on the 25th of March the grandmother of the deceased saw her, and explained that her daughter had a little brother with her father at home, and he would not allow her to enter the house. The grandmother said the deceased would not live long, and then the mother could go to service. While living with her the mother had frequently slapped the deceased on the face. As the child grew worse the mother was told that she must get apartments elsewhere unless she called in a doctor. Dr. Lyddon’s assistant came next day, and said deceased might probably recover, and he ordered lime-water to be given, as the condensed milk was too heavy. The child died on Monday morning.

Margaret Fox, of Handsworth, said that about three weeks ago she was on a visit to the last witness, who was her sister. On several occasions she had seen Anderson slap and shake the child because it cried. When witness remonstrated she was told to mind her own business. The mother once gave her the child, and witness said that if she dropped it it would kill it. Anderson replied that it would not matter. She had heard the mother curse the deceased several times.

At this stage the inquest was adjourned until today.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 1/5/1889

“Yesterday afternoon Mr. Edwin Docker (Coroner) held the adjourned inquest at the GATE INN, Rood End, Oldbury, respecting the death of William Ezra Anderson, the illegitimate child of Annie Anderson, of Eel Street, Oldbury, who died under suspicious circumstances on the 15th ult.

The Coroner said they would remember the inquest was adjourned on the last occasion in consequence of the suspicion attached to the contents of one of the bottles of cordial the mother had been giving the child, in order that an analysis might be made. He then read the report of Mr. Horace Swift, MD, the county analyst, which stated that from a prolonged investigation he was satisfied there was neither mineral nor organic poison in the stomach and intestines. Similarly poison was not present in the cordial in sufficient quantity to be likely to be fatal.

After the taking of further evidence the jury returned a verdict of Death from Natural Causes, adding as a rider that while they thought there was not sufficient evidence to justify a verdict of manslaughter, there had been great neglect on the part of the mother of the child in not securing medical attendance. Such conduct was censurable, and they wished the Coroner to convey this to the mother of the child.

The Coroner, in reading the verdict to the mother, said he hoped it would be a warning not only to her but to others in Oldbury also.”

“At the Police Court, yesterday – before Messrs. J. E. Wilson, J. W. Wilson, and T. Lavender – Thomas Hill, New Street, was charged with unlawfully wounding Police-constable Jones.

The officer, whose head was bandaged, stated that on Saturday night he saw the prisoner and another man go into the GATE INN, Rood End. The landlord ordered them out, and witness accused the prisoner of being drunk, and advised him to go home. Prisoner thereupon picked up a brick, and threw it at him, striking him on the eye, cutting his forehead, and knocking him down. Prisoner kicked him on the right shoulder, and afterwards ran away.

Dr. Buttery said that the constable was suffering from partial concussion of the brain.

The accused was committed for trial.”

The party, numbering about fifty, were conveyed by brakes. On arrival at the Forest Hotel the members and friends sat down to an excellent dinner, got up in the host’s best style, to which full justice was done. After the removal of the cloth the large bowling green was very much appreciated by most of the members, and some good games were played. Others strolled through the fields and lanes and enjoyed the country very much. About seven o’clock they mustered in the large concert room, where some excellent songs were rendered, greatly to the enjoyment of the party and visitors present, at eight o’clock the start was made for home arriving there at 10.40pm, and a most enjoyable outing in every way passed off splendidly.”

“A special meeting of the licensed trade of Oldbury and district was held yesterday afternoon at the GATE INN, Rood End, Oldbury.

Mr. E. Lawrence Levy (chief agent, Midland District National Trade Defence Association) attended and delivered an address upon the present situation so far as the licensed trade was concerned. He urged patience rather than precipitancy, and begged the licensed trade to await developments. No one, least of all the trade, was anxious to bring about a political crisis at the present time. Even the Radical press was preaching the possibilities of concessions, and the trade must see to it that so far as it could all facilities should be given for mutual satisfaction.

The following resolution was unanimously passed on the motion of Mr. Clee, seconded by Mr. A. Davis, and supported by Mr. C. Cotton: ‘That this meeting of the licensed trade of Oldbury and district earnestly protests against any further taxation of the licensed trade, overburdened as it already is with the weight of the war taxation so recently imposed. This meeting is further of opinion that the penalisation of the whole of the trade and the community for what is the alleged offence of a small section of workers is contrary to the level-headedness and spirit of fairness which are national characteristics.”

On 15th July 1919 the bowling green became included in the licensed area.

Birmingham Daily Gazette 19/5/1920

“Arthur James Smith, of 59, Mornington Road, Smethwick, and Joseph Rowley, of 55, Emacote Road, Witton, Birmingham, were each fined £5 at Oldbury yesterday on a charge of stealing a silver watch, a gold chain and gold seal, of the total value of £13, the property of Edward Hanson.

Prosecutor left his waistcoat, containing the watch and chain, on the rockery adjoining the bowling green at the GATE INN, Rood End, Oldbury. The defendants delivered some beer to the licensed premises, and, it was alleged, annexed the watch and chain.

Both defendants pleaded guilty and asked for leniency, saying it was the first time they had transgressed.”

GATE Bowling Club was founded in 1924.

It was still extant in 2001.

Evening Despatch 19/9/1945

“For taking away a motor-car (which was subsequently found abandoned at Smethwick) from the GATE INN, Oldbury, without the owner’s consent, Francis H. Ainge, 21-year-old coalman’s mate, of 104, The Oval, Smethwick, and Philip H. Pugh, 19-year-old warehouse hand, of 158, Lodge Road, Winson Green, Birmingham, were fined £5 and £3 respectively at Oldbury today.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 22/1/1946

“Harold Hooper (27), a pattern-maker, of the GATE INN, Rood End, Oldbury, was fined £5 7s at West Bromwich yesterday for driving a motor-car without due care and attention in Jowetts Lane, Hill Top, on the night of 2 December.

It was stated that he collided with a woman, one of three people walking arm in arm in the roadway, going in the same direction as himself, and she received fatal injuries.

The Stipendiary (Mr. B. G. Grimley) said it was difficult to understand the mentality of people who walked in the roadway at night when there was a good footpath. It was a most improper thing to do, and pedestrians who did it should be prosecuted.”

“Bowlers attached to the SHIRELAND, Smethwick – already Warwickshire and Worcestershire first division champions – gained another honour on Saturday. Mr. James Garvey won the individual merit championship of the British Bowlers’ Savings and Benevolent Association at Portland Road.

Mr. Garvey, a 50-year-old flour traveller, beat Mr. J. Bonas (GATE INN, Oldbury) to become first holder of the Birmingham Gazette trophy. It was a close struggle, for at the 26th end the two men were level at 18 all. Garvey recovered well, however, and won an exciting game by 21-19.

The proceeds of the competition benefit the Birmingham Council for Old People. The Lord Mayor of Birmingham will present the prizes at the White Horse Hotel, on November 28. Among them will be two tankards for winner and runner-up presented by the Birmingham Gazette.”

“Before a record crowd Jack Ridley, Kings Heath Park, repeated his 1945 success by winning the 22nd Farcroft charity floodlight bowling tournament at Handsworth last night, beating Harold Hooper (GATE) 21-20. With the scores level at the last end Ridley snatched victory by one shot. The final was one of the best ever seen in the tournament.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 25/9/1951

“The second round of the Farcroft charity floodlight bowls tournament at Handsworth last night opened with a surprise when Bert Sankey (Lightwoods) defeated Harold Hooper (GATE), last year’s finalist, 15-7.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 4/10/1954

“The Hooper brothers of GATE Bowling Club had good second round wins in the Farcroft floodlight bowls tournament on Saturday.

Walter, losing 4-5 at the seventh end against B. Sankey (Lightwoods), made a break of 11 to win 15-5. His brother Harold had a more difficult task to beat J. Evans senior (Five Ways, West Bromwich) 15-11.”

“While he was congratulating a bowls team on winning the Oldbury and District Charity Bowls Competition last night, Coun. William Hayes collapsed and died. Coun. Hayes, who was chairman of the Oldbury Baths and Public Halls Committee, had been invited to present the shield to the winners of the final between the GATE INN and the WERNLEY HOTEL, held at the PHEASANT INN, Warley. The GATE INN was successful. A few minutes before he died Coun. Hayes had been talking and joking with some of the 150 spectators. He was a Socialist and was first elected to Oldbury Council in 1945, representing the Broadwell Ward. In 1946 he was elected to the Worcestershire County Council. He was president of the Oldbury Civilian Disabled Association. He was a diesinker and lived in Vicarage Road, Langley. He leaves a widow.”

Sandwell Evening Mail 14/8/1986

“Drunken funeral-goers sparked off a police investigation when they ‘borrowed’ an Oldbury pub’s silver trophy – to place it on the grave of their dead friend as a memorial gesture. Police were called in after the 16-inch tall bowling club trophy and another shield went missing from a locked cabinet in the lounge of the GATE pub in Rood End Road, Langley. But while police officers were following up the case, pub relief manager Brian Bannister carried out his own detective work and managed to track down the culprits.

The mystery began when the lock on the cabinet was found to have been forced, and the trophies belonging to the Dudley and District Bowling League had gone. After checking with the barmaid Mr. Bannister found that a group of mourners has stopped at the pub after the funeral of local footballer Dennis Harbutt at Oldbury Cemetery. Mr. Harbutt, who lived in nearby in Gresham Road, was a keen footballer until he died after a heart attack at work. Some of his soccer club friends had been at the funeral.

Mr. Bannister revealed, ‘One or two of his mates were singing and had a few drinks, but were no real problem. Later in the evening members of the pub’s bowling team said someone had broken the lock on the cabinet. I called the police. The next day we started doing our own investigation and we finally pinned it down to the two lads from the funeral.’ He said he managed to get in touch with someone who knew them and said if the trophies were recovered no further questions would be asked. 'Within 15 minutes they rang the pub and said the cup was on the grave of the chap who had been buried. When I went down the trophies were a bit muddy, but still there.' He added, 'I think it was done in memory of the lad who was buried. It was not theft for gain – it was more theft for memorial.' The complaint to police has now been withdrawn."

"Bill Bostock made a bold leap from running a pub as a brewery employed manager to being the boss in charge of his own destiny manning the beer pumps. There's a lot more at stake for the licensee taking on a business that doesn't guarantee to pay the wages. But experience in any bar-room capacity is a key to likely success in the drinks trade and Bill, who has been pulling pints for more than 15 years, was well prepared for his new challenge. He also knew that in changing course on a career path that led him to the GATE INN, Oldbury, he was on familiar ground. It's an area he knows well from years spent behind bars at the MER-RIVALE and LONDONDERRY, two landmark pubs in Warley.

After nine months as a leaseholder proving he could keep the GATE open for trade on a buoyant note, Bill doesn't regret joining the ranks of the self-employed. He did start out with one big advantage. The GATE has long been the home of a strong bowling club and it's only a short skip to the bar for the more social encounters. The grounds at the GATE are an unexpected delight, when revealed from behind an ordinary looking pub exterior. They provide a setting for not only an immaculately kept bowling green – complete with floodlights – but also a garden area all well maintained by club stalwart Harry Nash and other willing volunteers.

Children have their own adventure playground at a pub with far more to it than first meets the eye. Bill even found space to build a barbecue stall. Inside the pub, he and his wife Marie serve food and drink in bars looking a treat after major improvements. They have kept one lounge as a quiet spot for customers content to sit, chat or catch up on the news in their daily paper. There's a TV to keep bar regulars entertained although I found them enjoying some friendly banter with Marie, a landlady who manages to cook hearty meals that look great value and keep a lively presence at the bar counter.

Tom Fergusson, who has been using the GATE for about 40 years, drops in every day for his lunch. 'It's a friendly pub and they don't charge a lot for a good meal. It saves me cooking at home,' he says. Local businessmen eating at the GATE also know they get a square deal. There's a big demand for sirloin steak on crusty bread, served up for just £2.25. Pints of Mitchells and Butlers and Banks's traditional mild also go down well. 'It's the sort of pub that appeals to a lot of middle-aged people but there's plenty of activity for all age groups,' says Bill, who plays for one of the bowls teams. Football also gets into the pub's list of sporting fixtures.

Bill is pleased with results so far of his go-it-alone venture. 'It isn't the easiest time to be in business but we are not doing too badly,' says the licensee running the kind of pub that deserved to succeed.

"Important Freehold Properties, at Causeway Green.

To be Sold by Auction, by John Newbold, at the house of Mr. Benjamin George Hurley, called the GATE INN, at Bristnall Fields, near Worley Wigorn, on Tuesday the 17th day of January, 1843, at five o'clock in the afternoon, under such conditions as will be produced, and in the under-mentioned or such other lots as will be determined at the time of sale....."

Wolverhampton Chronicle 30/4/1845

"On Tuesday last, at the petty sessions held at the TALBOT HOTEL, Oldbury, an excise information was heard before the sitting magistrates, Captain Bennitt and John Green, Esq, against Mr. John Hurley, a publican, residing at Bristnall Fields, in the parish of Halesowen, charging him with selling spirits without a proper excise license for the same. Mr. Twentyman, supervisor for the Smethwick and Oldbury districts, appeared on behalf of the excise. It appeared that the defendant had, on several occasions, supplied parties with spiritous liquors, in direct violation of the Act 6 Geo.IV cap.81, sec.26. The magistrates, in accordance with the act, convicted the defendant in the full penalty of £50 but afterwards mitigated it to £12 10s and, in addition, £3 to be paid to defray the expense of the prosecution."

Smethwick Weekly News 29/3/1902

“Charles Stamps was charged with selling drink to a drunken person and permitting drunkenness on the licensed premises of the GEORGE INN, at the corner of Birmingham Road and Broadwell Road on the 6th March. Mr. J. S. Sharpe appeared on behalf of the police, and Mr. Joy (instructed by Messrs. J. B. Clark and Co, of Birmingham) defended.

It appeared that at about 9.25pm on the 6th March two officers were at the front of the GEORGE INN. There was some noise in the house, and seemed to be some disturbance. After listening for about ten minutes they went inside, and saw a man named Fred Bennett swaying about near the counter. He had a pint jug half full before him. When the officers went in Bennett exclaimed, ‘It’s all right here.’ On the other side of the counter the landlord was sitting down, and no effort was made to put the drunken man out. The officers asked how it was that he allowed the man on his premises, and he replied that he had had nothing there, and that he had put him out twice. He then pushed the mug from in front of Bennett. There were about six other men in the room sitting at tables. One of them arose, and walking up to the counter drank the beer, saying, ‘This is my ale, boss,’ and the landlord replied, ‘Oh, yes.’ The man, however, had his own beer in the mug at the table. Bennett then went out, and the landlord and the officers saw him stagger up the street.

Defendant stated that the man Bennett came in at about 9.10 and asked for beer, but was refused, and, in reply to Mr. Sharpe, said he had turned him out because he wanted it on trust – (laughter) – and he was a doubtful customer.

Mr. Joy submitted that there was not sufficient evidence to warrant a conviction.

The Bench considered the case proved, and a fine of 40s and costs, £4 14s 6d in all, was imposed.

The same defendant was also charged with being drunk on his own licensed premises on the 9th inst.

PS Pegg said that at 8pm on that day he went to the house to make certain enquiries. He was then under the influence of drink. At 9.45 the same night he went again to the house, and defendant was called to him. The sergeant then told him that he was satisfied that he was drunk, but defendant replied that he was not drunk, and asked the sergeant what he would have to drink.

Supt Sherriff said the man was not of temperate habits, and was actually under the influence of drink when he applied for the transfer.

In reply to Mr. Joy, defendant said was suffering from relaxed condition of the throat, which changed into quinsy. This was supported by Dr. J. Pitt, who stated that a man in such a state might easily be mistaken for a drunken person.

Mr. Allbright said the Bench considered that the man was drunk, and a fine of 10s and costs, 15s 6d in all, or 7 days in default, was imposed.

In the first case the man Bennett pleaded guilty to being drunk, and was fined 2s 6d and costs, 8s in all, or 7 days.”

“On Saturday, an inquest was held before Mr. R. Docker, at the GEORGE INN, Brades Village, upon the body of Sarah Jane Whitehouse.

The evidence showed the deceased was last seen alive by a youth named Beard, on the Canal Bridge, at Brades, about seven o’clock on the Monday morning. The body was found on the following evening near the spot where she was seen by Beard.

Dr. Lyddon was called, and stated that he had examined the body of the deceased, but found no marks of violence, the appearance of the body being consistent with death from drowning.

No evidence was forthcoming to show how deceased got into the water.

The Jury returned a verdict of Found Drowned.”

Birmingham Daily Post 19/8/1885

“At Oldbury Police Court, yesterday – before Messrs. J. E. Wilson and H. Heaton – William Bill (41), landlord of the GEORGE INN, Brades Village, was charged with using threats towards his wife on the 31st July; also with using profane language on the 2nd inst, and with being drunk at the BRADES TAVERN on the 10th inst. Prisoner’s wife stated that her husband frequently threatened her, and she was forced to lock herself up in a room to prevent him striking her. Prisoner, who had been convicted three times within a period of twelve months, was bound over to keep the peace for six months, or in default twenty-eight days’ imprisonment.”

“Oldbury Police Court.....

William Bill, of the GEORGE INN, Brades Village, was charged with being drunk and disorderly on premises belonging to William Hadley, the BRADES TAVERN on the 10th inst, and also with using obscene language in Albion Street on 2nd inst. He was further charged with threatening his wife, on the 31st ult. Mary Ann Bill, wife of the defendant, stated that her husband repeatedly threatened to ‘do for her.’

PC Smith deposed to seeing the defendant drunk in Albion Street, and also on the premises of the BRADES TAVERN, on the days respectively named.

PS Stanton stated that the man had been previously convicted three times within twelve months.

The Magistrates inflicted a fine of 20s and costs, or 14 days, for the charge of being drunk and disorderly; 2s 6d and costs for using obscene language; and ordered the defendant to find two sureties each in £10, or one in £20, to keep the peace towards his wife for the term of six months.”

“Oldbury Licensing Sessions.....

With reference to the GEORGE INN, PS Stanton reported that the present holder of the license, William Bill, had been several times convicted for drunkenness, and was at the present time undergoing a term of imprisonment for having threatened his wife.

Mr. Shakespeare, on behalf of Mrs. Peacock, the owner of the house, appealed to the Bench to renew the license, as its non-renewal would materially decrease the value of his client's property, who was endeavouring to dispose of the disorderly tenant. If the Bench would renew the license they would undertake to obtain his removal from the house.

After the magistrates had considered in private the applications for renewals, Mr. Avery announced the following decisions With reference to the license of William Bill they found great difficulty in punishing the owner of this property by withholding the renewal after having received the assurances that she had done all she could to prevent the abuse of the license, but under no circumstances could they see their way clear to grant a renewal to William Bill. If a temporary transfer was applied for they might consider the application. Mr. Shakespeare at once applied for a temporary transfer to the owner, which was granted until the adjourned meeting.”

Birmingham Mail 17/5/1890

“This morning Mr. E. Docker, coroner, held an inquest at the GEORGE INN, Brades Village, relative to the death of Mary Ann Blewitt (17), formerly of Dudley Road, Brades Village, whose body was found in the Birmingham Canal, near the Furnace Yard, on the 15th inst.

The mother of deceased said she last saw her daughter alive on Sunday. The deceased used to visit a public house, and stayed out very late. At about 2.15 on Sunday morning witness saw her daughter at the bottom of the entry, and she then told witness to go into the house and she would follow. Witness did not hear anything else of deceased until the body was found in the water.

Police-constable Smith said on Saturday, about midnight, he was on duty on the canal side, near Captain Bennett's brickyard, when he saw two persons, a male and a female, standing against a wall. As he came up he turned his lamp on their faces, when he recognised one as Mary Ann Blewitt. He told deceased that her mother had complained to him about her staying out late at night. He advised them to go home, and then the pair proceeded in the direction of Whimsey Bridge. Deceased's parents had always behaved kindly to her. Maria Hanson, of the GEORGE AND DRAGON INN, said the deceased used to visit her house, where she met her young man, Harry Harris. They were both at her house on Saturday night. Deceased had complained of her parents leading her a miserable life, but she gave no particulars. The mother of deceased visited her house, and upon the young man going to the door she blackguarded him. Deceased said it would end in her making away with herself. She (witness) dissuaded her from that, and asked her not to come to her house if it created a disturbance at home. Several nights during the last week the deceased said she would stay no longer with her parents. Deceased had always been on good terms with Harris. Deceased said that when she got home late her mother scolded her, and if her father was up he beat her.

Henry Harris, boatman, said he resided at Rood End, and had kept company with deceased for two months. Witness met her on Saturday night at the GEORGE AND DRAGON public house, and they stayed until 11 o'clock. At fifteen minutes past two on Sunday morning he saw her home and left her at the top of the entry. Deceased would not go home for about two hours after they saw Police-constable Smith on the canal side. He persuaded her at length to go home, and she promised him to go into the house for his sake. She told him that she would make away with herself, and that he would not see her the next night. She had never complained to him about her parents. After seeing the officer she said she should never face her parents. Edward Blewitt, uncle to the deceased, deposed to having dragged the canal, and recovered the body near to the Furnace Bridge, Dudley Road. He had no suspicion of foul play.

Dr. C. Lyddon said he examined the body. Death was due to drowning.

The jury returned a verdict of Found Drowned, and recommended the coroner to caution Mrs. Hanson, landlady of the GEORGE AND DRAGON INN, for keeping the girl at her house until such a late hour. The Coroner called Mrs. Hanson before him, and reprimanded her accordingly.”

"Valuable Freehold Public House, Malt-House, Land, and Premises, at Hill Top, Warley, in the parish of Hales Owen.

To Innkeepers, Maltsters, Capitalists, and Others

To be Sold by Auction, by Mr. Newbold, on the premises, on Wednesday the 30th day of September, inst, at five o'clock in the evening, either together or in lots, as may be determined by the proprietor at the time of sale subject to conditions then to be produced.

All that long-established and well-accustomed Public House, known as the GEORGE INN, desirably situated at Hill Top, in Warley, in the parish of Hales Owen, and the county of Worcester, now in the occupation of Mr. Benjamin Stokes Mullett.

The House affords superior accommodation, and comprises bar, two parlours, good tap-room, commodious club-room, 38 feet 6 inches, by 18 feet 4 inches, dairy, six comfortable and convenient sleeping-rooms, three dry arched cellars, large and well-arranged Brewhouse (in which there are copper and iron boilers, Pump, and well of excellent water), and store-room over. The out-buildings immediately attached to the House are extensive and commodious, and consist of two Stables, Cow-house, Nail Warehouse, and Piggeries. Attached to the House are a flower and two kitchen Gardens (planted with choice fruit-trees), Yard, &c.

Also an excellent Ten-quarter Malthouse adjoining to, and held with the above, having a good kiln, cistern, barley and malt-garners, pump, and a never-failing supply of water, with other conveniences; and a neat Cottage and Nail Shop adjoining the Malthouse, now in the occupation of John Morton.

Also two very valuable pieces of Grass Land, called the House Piece and Farther Moor, commanding an extensive frontage to the road leading from West Bromwich to Warley, and containing in the whole 4A 2R (more or less).

The Land is in a good state of cultivation, and most eligibly situated for building purposes, and now occupied, with the House, by Mr. Benjamin Stokes Mullett.

The House is in good business, which is capable, from the extent and commodiousness of the premises, of considerable increase.

Further particulars may be obtained from Messrs. Bourne and Wainwright, Solicitors, or of the Auctioneer, all of Dudley.”

“Burglars in a Country Inn.

On the night of the 10th inst the house of Mrs. Elizabeth Mullett, the GEORGE INN, Worley Wigorn, was broken into by four burglars, who succeeded in carrying away £16 in cash and a silver watch belonging to the landlady, and £6 in cash belonging to one of her daughters, who, with another sister and their two children, were the only inmates. On Wednesday evening the house was, on their retiring to rest, properly secured in the ordinary manner, and at about one o’clock on Thursday morning a noise was heard by Mrs. Mullett, and directly afterwards she heard her chamber door opened, and saw two men enter. They had a lighted candle with them, were dressed in short dirty frocks, having their heads and faces entirely covered with black glazed calico, with such perforations only as would allow them to see and speak. Mrs. Mullett and one of her daughters occupied this room, and upon seeing the intruders they commenced screaming ‘Murder, thieves,’ &c. Both the burglars went up to them, placed their hands upon the throats of the two females, and quietly threatened that if they did not hold their peace it would fare much worse with them. The fellows proceeded to break open and ransack the boxes in the room, and having possessed themselves of some of their contents, they ordered Mrs. Mullett and her daughter to leave the bed, which the latter did, to allow the mattress, &c, being searched; no money was found there. A bottle of wine was found in the bedroom, and after imbibing part of the contents themselves, they politely asked the landlady and her daughter to taste too, ‘as they seemed low and faintly,’ but the offer was refused. As they were leaving, Mrs. Mullett made some noise, and one of the fellows then asked the other for a halter ‘to hang them.’ The threat had the desired effect, and they left without molestation. In the meantime a similar scene was being enacted by two other burglars, similarly dressed, with black caps, &c, in another room, where the other inmates of the house slept. They were prevented from making an alarm by being nearly suffocated with a blanket, which one of the fellows held over their mouths. The men, however, were sufficiently merciful to leave behind them, on being entreated to do so, a child’s overall and a watch, which formerly belonged to Mrs. Mullett’s son-in-law. About £8 was also stolen from the bar. Just before leaving they returned to Mrs. Mullett’s room, and asked her if she would know them again. She replied in the negative, and they rejoined that if ever she caused them to be apprehended and was seen from home, she would never return alive. They bade her not to stir for two hours, and then left.”

“Alleged Attempted Highway Robbery at Warley.

On Saturday night Lewis John Sullivan (19), of High Park Road, Smethwick, and Frank Collins (18), alias Frank Moss, Donovan, Dosser, &c, of Fawdry Street, Smethwick, were arrested by Police-constable Nash on a charge of demanding money by menaces from Samuel Stocker, of Corbett Street, Smethwick, in Thimble Mill Lane, Warley.

It appears the Stocker and a young man named Henry Merrick, a reporter on the staff of the Smethwick Telephone, and residing in Church Lane, were walking along Thimble Mill Lane shortly before nine o’clock on Saturday, when they were met by the prisoners and two others, who are believed to belong to the Smethwick slogging gang. The prisoners and their companions began to abuse Merrick and Stocker, and asked them if they had any money with them. The latter replied in the negative, whereupon Sullivan, it is alleged, seized Stocker, and said they must have some money, or else they would knock it out of him. Stocker and Merrick, being alarmed at the menacing attitude of the four ruffians, raised an alarm, and the latter then ran away.

Information was given to Police-constable Nash at Warley, and that officer subsequently arrested the two prisoners at the GEORGE INN at Warley, Sullivan at the time being in possession of a walking-stick belonging to Stocker. The prisoners struggled violently with the constable, and two men who were in the public house had to assist Nash to handcuff them. The other two men who were with Sullivan and Collins bolted when they saw their companions captured.”

[At Oldbury Police Court on 14th July 1891, the charge of demanding money was withdrawn, and the two were found guilty of common assault, and sentenced to one month’s imprisonment each.]

Birmingham Daily Post 30/7/1891

“Yesterday afternoon at a special petty session held at the Police Station – before Mr. G. Heaton – James Hadley (30), of Ward End, Quinton, was remanded until next Tuesday on a charge of violently assaulting Police-constable Nash on Tuesday night, also for assaulting Samuel Humphreys at the same time and place. It was alleged that defendant was creating a disturbance at the GEORGE INN, Warley, and when Nash interfered, he struck and kicked him in a brutal manner, and upon Humphreys going to the assistance of the officer he was also assaulted.”

County Express 8/8/1891

“At the Petty Sessions on Tuesday, James Hadley (32), labourer, Ward End, Quinton, was charged with assaulting Police-constable Nash, whilst in the execution of his duty, on the 28th ult, also with assaulting Samuel Humphries, who went to the officer’s assistance on the same date. The prisoner was sent to gaol for twenty-one days with hard labour.”

Worcestershire Chronicle 12/8/1893

“On Wednesday night Mr. E. Docker (Coroner) held an inquest at the GEORGE INN, Warley, touching the death of Police-constable Williams (41), stationed at Warley, who was found hanging to the bedpost on Tuesday morning, being suspended by a piece of apron, which was tied round his neck and fastened to the post. The evidence showed that deceased had been depressed for some time, and had frequently complained of pains in the head. The Jury returned a verdict of Death from Suicide whilst Temporary Insane. Deceased leaves a widow and nine young children.”

Smethwick Weekly News 12/4/1902

“Mr. H. Jeffries applied for a temporary transfer of the GEORGE INN, Warley, from Charles Brown to Edward Challenor.

Mr. J. Clark opposed the license being transferred on behalf of the owner, Joseph Whitehouse. In consequence of the opposition the application was withdrawn.”

Smethwick Weekly News 19/4/1902

“Edwin Challenor was charged with permitting drunkenness on the licensed premises of the GEORGE INN, Warley, and also supplying drink to a drunken person. Mr. J. S. Sharpe appeared to prosecute, and Mr. R. A. Willcock defended.

Mr. Sharpe explained that only the case of permitting drunkenness would be taken, the other being withdrawn. He had had some conversation with his friend Mr. Willcock, and there would be no dispute about the drunkenness, and from further information from his friend, he and the superintendent hoped the Bench would inflict but a small penalty. The facts were briefly these. On the 31st March PCs Bennett and Chamberlain went into the GEORGE INN, Warley, and there saw three men, by name Israel and Charles Price and Thomas Fox. They were all drunk. The defendant was behind the bar, and there was no attempt to get rid of them. It was holiday time, and the house was full. The Prices had both been refused, and had been ordered out, but defendant was too busy to see that they went. The man Fox had been drinking the beer of some of his friends.

Superintendent Sherrieff said the defendant had obtained a temporary transfer about a month ago, and later on had applied for a permanent transfer, but had been refused. He had only been in the business about three weeks.

A fine of 10s and costs, £2 19s 6d in all, was imposed, and Israel Price, who had been up before, was fined 5s and costs, and the others 2s 6d and costs. In each of these cases the costs amounted to 5s 6d.”

Smethwick Weekly News 17/5/1902

“Charles Brown, licensee of the GEORGE INN, Warley, was charged with being drunk on his licensed premises on the 8th inst. Mr. T. S. Tyler, of Birmingham, defended.

PC Bennett said he visited defendant’s house at about 10pm, and found defendant in the passage drunk and staggering about. He told him he was drunk, and that he would report him. Defendant told witness to say what he had to say before a witness.

PCs Drew and Probert corroborated this statement.

Supt. Sherrieff deposed to having seen defendant outside the Police Station at about 12pm. He was drunk and muddled, and smelt very badly of whisky.

For the defence Mr. Tyler submitted that the man’s action was that of a sound, sober man. Defendant suffered from rheumatism, which chiefly affected his knees and feet, and caused his one leg to be shorter than the other, hence the cause of his apparently drunken gait.

Mr. Chance said the Bench considered the case proved, and a fine of 10s and costs, 15s 6d in all, were imposed.

Mr. Tyler intimated his intention of appealing, and recognisances of £50 and two sureties of £25 were fixed.”

Thomas Frederick Scriven was fined 10s and £2 11s 6d costs for supplying liquor to a constable whilst on duty.

Birmingham Daily Gazette 16/7/1913

“At Oldbury yesterday, Thomas Frederick Scrivens, licensee of the GEORGE INN, Warley, was summoned for selling intoxicating liquor to a police officer whilst on duty, without having previously received permission from a superior officer. A member of the force was found in a drunken condition with his uniform covered with mud, and it was in consequence of the statement he made that these proceedings were taken. Mr. J. S. Sharpe prosecuted on behalf of the Chief Constable, while Mr. W. H. Riley Pearson (instructed by Mr. F. Dawes) appeared for the defence.

Mr. Sharpe said that a police constable was on duty at Warley on Saturday night, 28 June. He was passing the GEORGE INN, when Mrs. Scrivens, wife of the defendant, called him in, and he was supplied with two half pints of ale. After that something happened which, Mr. Sharpe said, he did not think it was necessary to particularise, and then the wife afterwards admitted that the officer had been given drink.

Mr. Riley Pearson, for the defence, said his client had only been in the house four days, and on the Saturday night there had been trouble with some Irishmen, and he had sent for the police to turn them out. About 10.30 the same night the police-constable came along, and Mrs. Scrivens began talking about what had happened earlier in the evening. They entered into a lengthy conversation, and she, out of her misguided generosity, asked the officer if he would like a drink, and he replied, ‘Yes.’ The husband himself knew nothing about it at all.

The magistrates said there were mitigating circumstances, and they would only inflict a small fine of 10s and costs.”

“Remarkable circumstances were related when Robert Henry Norman Riley, of the GEORGE HOTEL, George Road, Warley, was summoned for driving a motor-cycle to the danger of the public in Londonderry Lane on the 29th of July.

Mr. Hadgkiss said that just after 11 o’clock on the evening of the day in question, a man named Frederick Ashmore was driving a half-ton Ford lorry up Londonderry Lane in the direction of the Drill Hall. He was ‘hugging’ his near side. When he got near the Drill Hall, the defendant was riding an Ariel motor-cycle along Broomfield with the intention of turning down Londonderry Lane. For some reason he took the corner in an extraordinary fashion, swerving on to his extreme off-side and proceeding down Londonderry Lane on his wrong side. The driver of the lorry saw him coming, and turned on to the footpath in order to let him pass. But the defendant never deviated from his course with the result that he came into violent collision with the lorry, the top of which was torn off by the impact. The defendant was thrown nine yards, and was so seriously injured that he had been in hospital.

Mr. Gough said that the submission of the prosecution was not disputed. Unhappily for the defendant he was rendered unconscious by the accident, and remembered nothing of the circumstances. Mr. Gough added that the defendant had only travelled about 200 yards when the accident occurred, having just left the house of his fiancée in Broomfield.

The Chairman (Mr. Hill) said that the Magistrates took a lenient view of the case. A fine of 10s was imposed, the special costs amounting to £3 4s, making a total penalty of £3 14s."

The justice confirmed a provisional order sanctioning the ordinary removal of the publican's license from the GEORGE, George Road, Warley, Oldbury, to premises to be erected at the corner of George Road and Bleakhouse Lane, Warley, Oldbury.

Mr. Harold Eades, instructed by Messrs. Johnson and Co, Birmingham, made the application on behalf of Messrs. Mitchells and Butler Ltd, Cape Hill Brewery, Smethwick. It was not a removal in the ordinary sense, he said, but a re-building on a site immediately opposite. The new building would cost about £10,000 and would include an assembly room which could be cut off from the main building. At the court below there had been opposition from local churches and a petition was presented. No opposition was now made, however.”

The crash happened at around 8.40pm outside the pub, near the junction of Hill Top Road and George Road. West Midlands Police arrested a 26-year-old man on suspicion of drink driving. He remained in custody on Tuesday for questioning. Parcel delivery firm DPD said it was aware of the crash and had launched its own investigation.

A DPD spokesman said, 'We are aware of the incident and are carrying out a full investigation.'

A team of five firefighters from West Midlands Fire Service attended the scene to ensure the vehicle was safe. No-one was injured in the crash and West Midlands Ambulance Service were not required to attend."

“William Crawford was charged, before the Rev. J. Clare, with having stolen a watch, the property of John Hodgson, of Bilston. The prisoner, it seems, is a hawker of laces and pins, making the sale of those articles a means of obtaining admission to houses and carrying off whatever may be readily stolen. On Monday week last he was observed by a woman named Sarah Colley near to Mr. Hodgson’s door, and afterwards the watch was missed. Mr. Hodgson, on discovering his loss, inquired at the pawnbroker’s shops in this town, and found that his watch had been pledged with Mr. Moore for 10s in the name of William Thompson. On Friday last the prisoner came with a person named Edward Penton, living at the GEORGE AND DRAGON, Oldbury, to redeem the watch, and was taken into custody. The prisoner had offered the ticket to Penton for purchase, at the OLD INN, Dudley; and Penton, as he was coming to Wolverhampton, agreed to accompany the prisoner to Mr. Moore’s to see the watch. Mr. Moore being positive that the prisoner was the person who pledged the watch, and Sarah Colley, who is a neighbour of Mr. Hodgson, being equally certain that he was the man she saw near Mr. Hodgson’s house, the prisoner was committed.”

“Fatal Explosion at Oldbury.

On Tuesday week an inquest was held at the GEORGE AND DRAGON, Oldbury, before Ralph Docker, Esq, coroner, on view of the body of a boy named David Fellows, about twelve years old, employed at the Union Furnaces, in the parish of West Bromwich, and belonging to Messrs. Williams and Co, who met with his death under the following distressing circumstances.

On Sunday week a furnace used for melting iron, which was in charge of a man named Joseph Nock, was allowed by him to become over-filled with molten metal, and in consequence the end of what is technically known as the ‘twyer,’ situated at the top of the furnace, was burnt off, and the hot metal and a quantity of water ran from it into the furnace. A large quantity of steam thereby became generated in the latter, and the pressure caused it to explode, and scatter in all directions about a cart load of hot cinders, mixed with molten metal. The deceased, Nock himself, and three other boys, who were standing near the furnace at the time, were badly burnt, but the two former were the most severely injured. Fellows expired on the following morning. Nock, it was stated, ought to have seen that the metal was properly drawn off before it rose so high in the furnace as to burn the ‘twyer;’ and the jury accordingly returned a verdict of Manslaughter against him. The poor fellow, however, has himself since died from the effects of his carelessness.”

Birmingham Journal 14/7/1855

“On Saturday, R. Docker, Esq, held an inquest at the house of Mr. John Woodall, the GEORGE AND DRAGON, Hales Owen Street, on the body of a girl eleven years old, named Hannah Meisom, who was employed at Mr. Johnson’s brick yard. It seemed that the deceased was sent on the same morning to carry a quantity of water from a colliery basin near to the brick yard, and place it in the dipping trough used by brickmakers. She carried two buckets full, and went for a third. She was not seen again for half an hour, when a man named Dingley, missing one of the ‘pages,’ suspected she was in the water, and there her lifeless body was found, as also was the bucket.

A girl was drowned under similar circumstances at the same place, twelve months ago.

A verdict of Found Drowned was returned.”

Birmingham Journal 20/12/1862

“Worcestershire Winter Assizes.....

William Ockold (69), tailor, was placed at the bar, charged with the wilful murder of his wife, Sophia, at Oldbury, on the 8th of November. Mr. Richards (with him Mr. G. Griffiths) conducted the prosecution, and Mr. Benson, at the request of the learned Judge, undertook the defence of the prisoner, who was too poor to employ a counsel.

Mr. Richards opened by briefly stating the facts of the case, after which he called witnesses for the prosecution. The circumstances as they came out in evidence are briefly as follows.

The prisoner and his wife were both addicted to drinking, and had, in consequence, for sometime led a very unhappy life. On the morning of Saturday, the 8th of November last, a young female named Maria Grasebrook, who is a servant in the employ of Mrs. Woodhall, of the GEORGE AND DRAGON INN, Oldbury, went to the house of the prisoner and deceased. The former sat upon the table sewing, and she asked him how grand-mother (meaning deceased) was that morning. He replied that he did not know, upon which witness seeing blood upon his hand had her suspicions aroused, and put further questions when the prisoner admitted that he had given her a ‘punch in the mouth for going off and getting drunk with Jack Hadley.’ Witness afterwards went up stairs, when she found deceased lying upon the floor dead, her face being covered with blood. Witness ran down stairs and said to the prisoner, ‘You old brute, you have killed the old woman,’ upon which he replied that she was not dead, but only asleep. Several other neighbours afterwards went in and washed the blood off the face of deceased.

On an examination being made of the house, blood was found upon the stairs, and upon the wall beside the stairs. Some gray hairs were also picked up at the bottom of the stairs. On the table occupied by the prisoner a piece of mop stick was found, which appeared to have been recently broken.

About ten minutes past three that morning a police officer, while on his beat, heard groans proceeding from the house occupied by the prisoner and deceased, and heard the prisoner at the same time mocking the groans and cursing and swearing. It was not, however, the first time he had heard noises in that house at night; and he passed on without taking any further notice. Similar noises had been heard at about four o'clock the same morning, by a man named Jeremiah Bradley.

The prisoner was taken into custody at about nine o'clock in the morning by Sergeant Simmons, and on being charged with murdering his wife, he said, 'I only struck her once.' There was some skin off the forefinger of the prisoner's right hand, and he admitted that he did that against deceased's teeth. The prisoner also stated to the officer that the prisoner had been drinking with Jack Hadley; that she came home drunk; that she would not get up to prepare his breakfast; and that he had been at work all night.

Mr. Cooper, surgeon, of Oldbury, on making an external examination of the body, found a number of bruises of recent date. He afterwards made a post mortem examination of the body, the result of which was the opinion that the cause of death was effusion on the brain, caused by the rupture of a blood vessel, the result of an external blow with a blunt instrument.

Mr. Benson, in his defence of the prisoner, made a powerful speech, in which he contended that there could not have been any motive on the part of the prisoner to murder his wife. That the wife fell by the hand of her husband he would at once concede, but arguing upon the absence of motive, of malice, or forethought, the learned counsel contended that the crime of the prisoner was not greater than the crime of manslaughter, and asked the Jury to spare the prisoner the few short years which Providence might still allot to him, and not send his tottering feet to the gallows, and leave a gibbet over the prison gate as a legacy of their labours that day.

The learned Judge having carefully summed up the evidence, the Jury retired, and after an absence of about half an hour returned with a verdict of guilty. They at the same time recommended the prisoner to mercy on the ground that nothing had transpired during the trial which was adverse to his previous good character, and also on account of his extreme age.

Sentence of death was then passed in the usual form, the Judge stating that the recommendation of the Jury would be transmitted to the proper quarter."

Cambridge Chronicle and Journal 27/12/1862

"The old man, William Ockold, sentenced to be hanged at the last Worcester Assizes, for the murder of his wife, at Oldbury, continues to exhibit a calm demeanour, and pays special attention to the ministrations of the Chaplain. As yet no intimation has been received from the Secretary of State, and, unless a reprieve be granted, the dread sentence of the law will be carried out on Friday next, the second day of the new year."

Chelmsford Chronicle 2/1/1863

"This morning William Ockold, an old man of 70, was executed at Worcester county gaol, for the wilful murder of his wife, Sophia Ockold, aged 74, at Oldbury, on 8th November last. The murder was apparently purposeless, and the defence set up was the fact of some sudden quarrel having taken place.

The old criminal walked firmly to the scaffold, and after the rope had been fixed round his neck he ejaculated several times, 'Lord have mercy on my poor soul.' The bolt was withdrawn as the burial service was being read, and death immediately took place without a struggle. There were upwards of 5,000 persons present."

Birmingham Daily Post 9/3/1864

"At the Magistrates' meeting yesterday, Mrs. Woodall, landlady of the GEORGE AND DRAGON INN, Hales Owen, was summoned by the police on two charges, namely, having had her house open for the sale of beer during prohibited hours, and having suffered gaming to be carried on on her premises.

Mr. Shakespeare, who appeared for the defence, took, in limine, an objection to the summons, which laid one of the offences as having been committed on the 17th March, a date which, with much gravity, he contended was not yet in existence. This charge was not then proceeded with, but the case of 'having kept her house open,' for the sale of beer, on Sunday, the 28th ult, was gone into.

Police-constables Hutchings and Hale proved that they found eleven men in the house, in very suspicious proximity to a quart jug of ale and sundry glasses.

For the defence, Mr. Shakespeare quoted the case of Tenant v Cumberland, and stated that similar cases had been decided over and over again by Mr. Spooner, the Stipendiary Magistrate, who had laid it down that where all the doors, as was the case in the present instance, had been closed when the police visited the house, no information for 'keeping open' could stand.

The Bench took the same view of the case, and dismissed the summons. The charge of permitting gaming was, in consequence of the wrong date in the summons, withdrawn, but it was understood that Mr. Overend, the superintendent of police for the division, would renew both the charges at the next meeting of the Magistrates."

Birmingham Daily Post 23/3/1864

"Yesterday, Mrs. Lavinia Woodall, landlady of the GEORGE AND DRAGON, Hales Owen Street, Oldbury, was summoned for having sold ale during prohibited hours on Sunday, the 28th ult, and Mr. Shakespeare, her solicitor, having admitted the offence, the defendant was fined 1s and the costs. In consequence of there being but one Magistrate in attendance (Mr. W. H. Dawes), who did not take his seat until nearly two hours after the time specified for the commencement of the business of the Court, several cases were obliged to be adjourned for a fortnight."

“Oldbury from a Sanitary Point of View.

The extraordinary high rate of mortality reported by the medical officer at the last monthly meeting of the Oldbury Board of Health having again directed public attention to the sanitary state of the township over which that body has control, our special reporter has since paid two visits to the place, in order to see how far the causes of high mortality are apparent, and to what extent efforts are being made to abolish them..... A working man drew our attention to an abomination which he thought would eclipse that which we had been inspecting. Conducting us to the other side of the waste ground, and opposite to the back of the GEORGE AND DRAGON INN, Hales Owen Street, he pointed out a nuisance at once offensive and physically dangerous. It consisted of an open cesspool bounded on one side by the back of a privy; on another side by a projecting piece of wall, the other two sides being entirely unprotected. The receptacle was full to the top with semi-liquid excrementitious matter, unmixed with ashes or earth, and had evidently so been for some time, since the contents were in a seething state and were emitting mephitic gases from thousands of bursting bubbles.....”

“The annual licensing session for the Oldbury division was held this afternoon at the Police Court..... Police Superintendent Hardman presented his report.....

Since the last meeting 12 licensed persons had been summoned and convicted for offences against their licenses W. Harley [sic].....

The Bench decided that all the applications for renewals made by those prisoners who had been convicted during the year should be postponed until the adjourned licensing meeting, with the exception of two whose conviction took place on licensing day last year and who were then called up and cautioned. The persons whose renewals were refused would be required to attend and show reasons why their licenses should be renewed.”

Birmingham Mail 24/9/1883

“Today the adjourned Licensing Session for the Oldbury Division was held at the Court House.....

The persons whose names were included in the ‘black list’ presented by the superintendent of police at the annual meeting, and whose applications for renewals were consequently postponed, were called before the Bench to show cause why their licenses should be renewed.....

The license held by William Hadley, of the GEORGE AND DRAGON INN, Hales Owen Street were all renewed, the applicants being cautioned by the presiding magistrate as to their future conduct.”

Smethwick Telephone 28/8/1886

“The annual Licensing Sessions were held on Tuesday.....

The Superintendent of Police objected to the renewal of the license of the GEORGE AND DRAGON INN, Halesowen Street.

Police-sergeant Stanton stated that this house had been closed for 12 months.

Mr. Shakespeare supported the application, and urged that the house had been closed in consequence of the construction of the Oldbury Railway, the contractors operations having rendered it impossible to get to the house, so that they had been compelled to close the place for business purposes.....

The magistrates then retired to consider the various applications In the case of Mrs. Partridge, of the GEORGE AND DRAGON INN, they postponed a final decision until the adjourned licensing sessions, and in the meantime granted a temporary transfer.”

Birmingham Daily Post 24/10/1888

“Yesterday, at Oldbury Police Court, William Hudson Storey, landlord of the GEORGE AND DRAGON INN, Halesowen Street, Oldbury, was charged with keeping his licensed premises open during illegal hours on the 7th inst. Mr. W. Shakespeare appeared to defend.

The evidence of Police-constables Buggins and Holton was to the effect that about 11.40pm on the Sunday night in question they visited defendant’s house, and found three men there.

For the defence it was explained that on Sunday nights sacred concerts were given at the defendant’s house, and two of the persons found in the house by the officers were performers at those concerts, and the third person was a friend of the proprietor.

One witness stated that hymn books were distributed to the company, who joined in the singing.

It was also stated that when the officers visited the premises the company were discussing the question as to who was the best boxer in the world.

Defendant was fined 20s and costs, amounting in all to £2 2s.”

Birmingham Mail 17/5/1890

“This morning Mr. E. Docker, coroner, held an inquest at the GEORGE INN, Brades Village, relative to the death of Mary Ann Blewitt (17), formerly of Dudley Road, Brades Village, whose body was found in the Birmingham Canal, near the Furnace Yard, on the 15th inst.

The mother of deceased said she last saw her daughter alive on Sunday. The deceased used to visit a public house, and stayed out very late. At about 2.15 on Sunday morning witness saw her daughter at the bottom of the entry, and she then told witness to go into the house and she would follow. Witness did not hear anything else of deceased until the body was found in the water.

Police-constable Smith said on Saturday, about midnight, he was on duty on the canal side, near Captain Bennett's brickyard, when he saw two persons, a male and a female, standing against a wall. As he came up he turned his lamp on their faces, when he recognised one as Mary Ann Blewitt. He told deceased that her mother had complained to him about her staying out late at night. He advised them to go home, and then the pair proceeded in the direction of Whimsey Bridge. Deceased's parents had always behaved kindly to her. Maria Hanson, of the GEORGE AND DRAGON INN, said the deceased used to visit her house, where she met her young man, Harry Harris. They were both at her house on Saturday night. Deceased had complained of her parents leading her a miserable life, but she gave no particulars. The mother of deceased visited her house, and upon the young man going to the door she blackguarded him. Deceased said it would end in her making away with herself. She (witness) dissuaded her from that, and asked her not to come to her house if it created a disturbance at home. Several nights during the last week the deceased said she would stay no longer with her parents. Deceased had always been on good terms with Harris. Deceased said that when she got home late her mother scolded her, and if her father was up he beat her. Henry Harris, boatman, said he resided at Rood End, and had kept company with deceased for two months. Witness met her on Saturday night at the GEORGE AND DRAGON public house, and they stayed until 11 o'clock. At fifteen minutes past two on Sunday morning he saw her home and left her at the top of the entry. Deceased would not go home for about two hours after they saw Police-constable Smith on the canal side. He persuaded her at length to go home, and she promised him to go into the house for his sake. She told him that she would make away with herself, and that he would not see her the next night. She had never complained to him about her parents. After seeing the officer she said she should never face her parents. Edward Blewitt, uncle to the deceased, deposed to having dragged the canal, and recovered the body near to the Furnace Bridge, Dudley Road. He had no suspicion of foul play. Dr. C. Lyddon said he examined the body. Death was due to drowning. The jury returned a verdict of Found Drowned, and recommended the coroner to caution Mrs. Hanson, landlady of the GEORGE AND DRAGON INN, for keeping the girl at her house until such a late hour. The Coroner called Mrs. Hanson before him, and reprimanded her accordingly."

He asked that the license should extend from 8pm until 4am. Superintendent Speke said he had not received any intimation that the application was to be made. Mr. Heaton said the license would be granted, but only from eight o'clock until one o'clock. Mr. Forrest urged that the carriages would not be ordered until 3.30. "At Oldbury Police Court, Mary Ann Brant, landlady of the GEORGE AND DRAGON INN, Halesowen Street, was charged with permitting drunkenness upon her licensed premises on the 23rd ult. Mr. J. S. Sharpe prosecuted, and Mr. W. F. Vernon defended.

It appeared that Police-sergeants Cooper and Male and Police-constable Holton visited defendant's house about 10.50pm, when they found a man named Thomas Granger there in a drunken condition. Mr. Vernon explained that the man Granger came into the house in a drunken state, and that his client refused to supply him with anything to drink, and also requested him to leave the premises. Defendant was fined £5 and costs, in all £6 16s."

Birmingham Daily Post 22/8/1894

"The annual licensing session for the Oldbury division was held yesterday.....

Superintendent Chare, in his annual report, stated that at the present time there were 148 persons licensed for the sale of intoxicating drink, which gave one house for the sale of intoxicants to about every 153 of the inhabitants. During the year 237 males and 17 females were proceeded against for drunkenness.....

He had given notice to Mary Ann Brant, of the GEORGE AND DRAGON INN, Halesowen Street, Oldbury, that he should oppose her application for a renewal of the license on the ground that she had been fined £5 for permitting drunkenness, and that since the date of the conviction the house had not been properly conducted.

Mr. Shakespeare addressed the magistrates on behalf of Mary Ann Brant.

Superintendent Chare and Sergeant Cooper gave evidence that Mrs. Brant had since her conviction allowed a great deal of card-playing and gaming on the premises, and the former said that on several occasions he had found men there worse for drink and using bad language. There was a license next door to Mrs. Brant's house [GREYHOUND], and there were nine public houses within 330 yards of the premises.

Mr. Shakespeare said the license had been in existence about seventy years.....

After a long consultation in private, Mr. Wilson said the justices regretted to see there had been a decided increase of drunkenness during the year. In the case of Mrs. Brant the application for renewal was deferred until the adjourned licensing meeting, on the distinct understanding that the magistrates would not renew the license to the present holder."

Birmingham Daily Post 26/9/1894

"The adjourned licensing session for the Oldbury Petty Sessional Division was held yesterday, at the Court-house.....

Mr. Young applied for the renewal of the license of the GEORGE AND DRAGON INN, Halesowen Street, to William Brant, son of the former holder of the license, who was objected to at the annual meeting. Mr. J. Clarke appeared for the owner of the property. Mr. Young explained that the house had been licensed for over fifty years, and also that if the magistrates would not renew it to Mr. Brant he would submit the name of another person. Superintendent Chare objected to the renewal being granted to Mrs. Brant's son, on the ground that whilst he had been living with his mother and assisting her in the business the house had not been conducted to his satisfaction, and further that the house was not required, as there were nine public houses within 350 yards. He considered there were too many public houses now.....

The license of the GEORGE AND DRAGON was renewed, a new tenant to be found other than Mrs. Brant's son."

“On Thursday morning, Mr. Lyon Clark (deputy coroner), held an inquest at the Law Courts, concerning the death of William Onions (31), fish hawk, of Halesowen Street, Oldbury. It appeared that deceased went to a smoking concert, held at the GEORGE AND DRAGON INN, Halesowen Street, Oldbury, on Tuesday, the 24th ult. As he was leaving the house about twenty to eleven he stumbled and fell down the stairs. He was picked up but was found to be unconscious. He was taken to his mother’s house and subsequently he was removed to the District Hospital, on the 26th ult.

Dr. Chamberlain said that deceased was suffering from concussion of the brain and paralysis of the right side. He died at a quarter past six on the 31st, death being due to a fracture of the base of the skull. Deceased never regained consciousness.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.

A representative of the Atkinsons Brewery Company said that the widow was in very poor circumstances, and the company had undertaken to pay all the expenses of the funeral.”

“A spokesman for Warley Health Executive Council last night advised people who experienced any difficulty in obtaining a doctor to contact the council immediately. The spokesman said that this advice came after the case of a 24-year-old Warley man who claimed he could not get a doctor to attend him. The sick man, Mr. Barry Gray, the licensee of the GEORGE AND DRAGON in Halesowen Street, Oldbury, said he had tried to get on a doctor’s list with his wife and three children, but was unable to do so until yesterday. He said that he had contacted the health executive council nearly two months ago and was given a list of doctors to contact, but was unable to get on any of their lists.

The spokesman for the health executive council said, ‘Yesterday we were contacted by Mr. Gray and were able to put him in touch with a doctor in West Bromwich. This is not a difficult thing for us to do. In fact it is our proper job. We certainly have not got people queuing up waiting to get on a list. Some of the doctors have a maximum of 3,500 patients on their lists, but other still have a few vacancies. I cannot see any difficulty in placing a person on a doctor’s list.’”

“An inquest was held on Wednesday last, at the GOLDEN BALL, Oldbury, before G. Hinchliffe, Esq, coroner, on the body of George Swann, aged sixteen years. The deceased got up on the previous morning about ten o’clock, and after being down stairs a short time his brother, who slept with him, heard the report of a gun in the front kitchen, and upon going down saw deceased lying on the floor with a gun close to him; there was a wound in his head, from which blood was flowing; his brother raised him up, but he was quite dead. His father proved he had loaded the gun the previous evening, and placed it in the kitchen, but had not put any cap upon it; he stated he never knew deceased or his brother touch the gun before, but they did not know he had loaded it. Verdict, Accidental Death.”

“.....death of Mr. Henry Jerrams, who has taken a prominent part in public affairs at Oldbury. Mr. Jerrams was essentially a self-made man. We believe in early life he worked as a journeyman miller, but having taken the GOLDEN BALL he turned his attention to the establishment of the brewery which has succeeded so well as under his management. It is only a few weeks since the death of Mrs. Jerrams. One son is left, who has for some time taken an active part in the management of the business. Mr. Jerram’s decease creates a 6th vacancy in the Local Board, which will probably be filled up at the forthcoming contest.”

John Thomas Hollingsworth, a son of deceased, with whom he lived, said that on Sunday morning, about half-past eight o’clock, deceased went upstairs, and a few minutes afterwards he heard him fall, and upon going to the bottom of the stairs he found him lying head downwards. He lifted deceased up, and placed him on a sofa, but he expired immediately.

Dr. Torbitt said death was caused by dislocation of the neck.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

“Messrs. Thompson and Jerrams, of the GOLDEN BALL Brewery, Oldbury gave their annual outing to the workpeople. The place selected was Bridgnorth, and the weather proving fine, a most enjoyable day was spent. Arrived in the ancient town, ample enjoyment was found in the facilities for boating, cricket, and every variety of outdoor sport. At two o’clock a move was made for the Bardon Arms Hotel, where the hostess (Mrs. Meads) provided a sumptuous dinner, to which thorough justice was done, everyone being loud in their praise. After dinner, Mr. Jones occupied the chair for a short time, and made a few appropriate remarks. Mr. J. Thompson replied, and a loud call was made for Mr. Jerrams, who is always very witty and humorous in anything he has to say. The usual toasts were given and responded to before the company dispersed to their various sports. Mr. Conniffe responded on behalf of the employees, Mr. Pass being unavoidably absent. Outdoor sports were resumed, until in the evening a delicious tea brought them all once more together. Having again demonstrated the fact that pure country air is conducive to good appetite and sound digestion, the company then strolled about enjoying the magnificent scenery until the scythe-bearer indicated that if home was to be reached that night, a move must be made for the station. Here the train was waiting, and by 11 o’clock home was reached, after what one and all described as the most enjoyable outing they had ever experienced.”

“The adjourned licensing session for the Oldbury Petty Sessional Division was held at Oldbury yesterday.....

The question of the renewal of the license of the GOLDEN BALL INN, Parsonage Street, Tat Bank, held by Mr. W. Gough, was brought forward. Mr. J. S. Sharpe appeared for Mr. Gough, and explained that the application of his client for a renewal was adjourned for alterations to be made at the back of the premises. Superintendent Chare said he was satisfied with the alterations that had been made. He objected at the annual meeting to the renewal of the license because the licensed premises communicated with a private house. Walls had now been erected which separated the private from the public premises. The license was renewed.”

Smethwick Weekly News 8/2/1902

“On Thursday morning the Deputy Coroner (Mr. A. H. Hebbert) held an inquest at the GOLDEN BALL, Parsonage Street, Oldbury, relative to the death of Samuel James Holmes (40), formerly residing at 22, Parsonage Street, who died on the 31st ult, as the result of an accident at Messrs. Doulton and Co’s works. Mr. H. Jeffries represented the relatives, and Mr. Higgs (from the office of W. Shakespeare and Co) Messrs. Doulton and Co.

Phoebe Holmes said she was the mother of the deceased. He was formerly a labourer at Messrs. Doulton and Co's pipe works. He always enjoyed good health. The first she heard of the accident was on the 25th ult, when she saw him wiping his neck with a towel. He then said that he had received a blow with a pipe. The following Tuesday he went to Dr. Buttery, and came home and said that one of the doctors had washed his ear. He did not go to work until the Thursday. Next afternoon he said, 'Mother, I'm done.' Witness called in Dr. Pitt who was passing at the time, and he ordered her to put some plasters on his neck. She then heard that he had been struck with a pipe at work. After he had been in bed that night a few minutes, he called for witness and told her he was going, and died a few minutes later.

Solomon Gaden, of Oxford Road, Smethwick, said he was a labourer at the same works, and had known deceased for about 14 years. About three weeks ago he was carrying two nine-inch pipes on his shoulders, and he bumped into witness. The pipes would weigh about ½cwt, and were made of earthenware. Witness did not see him bump into him, nor did he know that he had injured himself. In reply to Mr. Jeffries, witness stated that it took place in a narrow passage, and accidents had happened before.

Edward Poole said he, too, was a labourer at Doulton's works, and on the 15th, he saw the last witness lifting some pipes, when deceased turned a corner and bumped into him. Holmes then went and lay down for some time, and then went on with his work. Dr. H. B. Pitt said he was called into the house of deceased on Friday last. Deceased then complained of suffocation; he examined his neck, and found it to be swollen. He had since made a post-mortem examination of the body, and the main organs were perfectly healthy. The neck, however, and the glands were swollen, but he could see no injury to the ear. The swelling of the throat might have been caused by a blow, with improper rest afterwards. The immediate cause of death was suffocation.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death."

"The quarterly licensing meeting of the Oldbury magistrates was held yesterday, and in considering the number of applications for the transfer of licenses, Mr. A. M. Chance, who presided, mentioned that no music licenses would be granted that day. They would be considered at the annual Licensing Sessions next Tuesday, when they intended to reduce the number of music licenses.....

Application for permission to alter the premises of the GOLDEN BELL [sic], Parsonage Street, Tat Bank, was made by Mr. J. S. Sharpe, on behalf of John Edward Busby. It was pointed out by the architect, Mr. Jones, that the proposal was to enlarge the domestic accommodation, but there would be no increase at all in the drinking area. The Bench suggested some minor improvements, and consideration of the plans was adjourned for a week."

"The annual dinner in connection with the Oldbury Cricket Club took place last night at the GOLDEN BALL INN, Oldbury, Mr. W. R. Campion presiding over a good attendance. The Chairman said the club was progressing very favourably. He thought the professional element and the purchasing of players had considerably damaged the great national game of football and detracted very much from the sportsmanlike character of the game. He hoped that would never be the same with cricket. (Hear, hear.) In responding, the Captain (Mr. T. H. Collins) remarked that they had during the past season converted an adverse balance of £18 into a credit balance of £4, and there was every prospect of the present season being even more successful."

“While he was cashing up during December of last year a former licensee of the GOLDEN BULL [sic], Parsonage Street, Oldbury, accidentally threw an envelope containing £83 into the fire and became ‘panic-stricken,’ the Oldbury magistrates were told yesterday.

Harold Pardoe (36), c/o 16, Parsonage Street, Oldbury, pleaded guilty to stealing £1 1s 7d, the property of Mitchells and Butlers Ltd. He was fined £5 and ordered to pay five guineas costs.

Mr. T. D. Prescott, prosecuting, said that it was Pardoe’s duty to put the week’s takings into the bank on a Monday. He did not do this on December 12 and Mitchells and Butlers Ltd were unable to contact him. The following Friday Pardoe walked into Oldbury police station and said, ‘I want to give myself up.’ He was arrested and £64 5s was found in his possession.”

“Worcester Lent Assizes.

Matilda Partridge, on bail, was indicted on the charge of having, with other persons unknown, stolen from the person of Francis Hadley, on the 18th February, at Oldbury, seventeen sovereigns, and a cheque of the value of £2 10s. Mr. Godson prosecuted, and Mr. Streeten defended.

Prosecutor, a horse dealer, stated that on the night of the 18th February, he was in the GOLDEN LION at Oldbury, when he had a quarrel and ‘a bit of a scuffle with a young chap.’ While engaged in the scuffle he felt the prisoner close to him. He was on the floor on his back, and two or three were on him – the prisoner resting with her knees on his chest. When he got up he said he had lost his ‘bit,’ which in Oldbury means purse, and he called to some one to shut the door. A policeman came in, and the woman went off like a shot. The woman came back, and prosecutor said to the policemen that she had robbed him. Prisoner said, ‘Search me,’ and the policeman took her into the parlour to be searched. Shortly after the policeman came back with a purse, and prosecutor stated the contents, proving that it was his.

Prosecutor’s wife, who was among the company in the GOLDEN LION on the occasion, and saw what took place, said when her husband was on the floor she was trying to get him up, and prisoner was on him with her knees on his chest. At first witness thought prisoner was wanting to assist to get him up, but she noticed her snatch her hand away from his pocket. Witness said, ‘She has robbed him,’ and the prisoner immediately left the room.

Police-sergeant Simmonds, having corroborated prosecutor as to preceding circumstances, stated that he took prisoner into the parlour and got the landlady’s daughter to search her. Prisoner resisted the search, and witness had to hold her. The purse (produced and identified by prosecutor) was found under her left arm between her stays and her person. The prisoner, after the purse was found, said she picked it up from the table. The defence was that prisoner picked up the purse to take care of it, and her counsel argued that her not having disposed of the purse when she had the opportunity of doing so was proof of her honesty. The resistance to the search he ascribed to her modesty, the police-sergeant being present. Guilty. His lordship, in consideration of the prisoner being in an interesting condition, sentenced her to the short term of six weeks' imprisonment."

"Worcestershire Midsummer Quarter Sessions.....

Appeal Against an Affiliation Order.

This was an appeal by Samuel Shellard, an innkeeper, of Oldbury, against an order made by the Oldbury magistrates adjudging him to be the father of the illegitimate child of Mary Ann Eliza Davis, a young unmarried girl of about 16 years old, residing at Rownes Green, near Birmingham.

Mr. R. H. Amphlett and Mr. Gresham Wells appeared for the respondent; Mr. Godson and Mr. J. Amphlett for the appellant.

In the end the order made upon the appellant was confirmed, and the appeal dismissed with costs."

Worcestershire Chronicle 5/7/1884

"Worcestershire Midsummer Quarter Sessions.....

Before Mr. G. W. Hastings, deputy chairman, and other Magistrates, an appeal against an affiliation order was heard. The appellant was Samuel Shellard, innkeeper, at Rouse Green, and the respondent was Mary Ann Eliza Davis, a domestic servant. Mr. Godson was for the appellant, Mr. R. H. Amphlett and Mr. Gresham Wells for the respondent.

Mr. Amphlett said the respondent was about 15 years of age, and the facts were of a lamentable character. The respondent appeared to have gone into the service of the appellant in 1882, and she had been there two or three months, sleeping at night with the appellant's little girl. The appellant was a married man. Her story was that some little time after she had gone into the appellant's service he was in the habit of fondling and kissing her, and on several occasions entered her bedroom after she had gone to bed at night, and she would describe what took place on those occasions. The corroborative evidence was of a varied character, but the strongest was that of the appellant himself. He had said in the presence of several persons when accused of being the father of the child, 'It is quite true I have been in Polly's bedroom, and if anything comes of it I will take care of her.'

Mr. Amphlett, who had to leave, then left the case in the hands of Mr. Gresham Wells.

Evidence in support of the case for the respondent was then given.

Mary Ann Davies, single woman, living at Rous Green, said she knew Shellard, who came to keep a public house near where she lived. She went into his service in May. Shellard entered her bedroom about a fortnight before Christmas, 1882. It was night-time, and she had been asleep. She slept with defendant's little girl. That little girl awoke her by saying there was someone in the bedroom. Shellard said, 'It's all right, I am only tucking in the clothes for the child.' Next day Mrs. Shellard asked her if it was true that her husband had been in her room last night. She said it was, and then Mrs. Shellard said she hoped she would not tell her parents. In March following Shellard again got into her room after the respondent had gone asleep, and then and on subsequent occasions he behaved in a manner that led to her giving birth to a child on last New Year's Day. He frequently begged her not to tell her parents. She was 14 years of age when she went into Shellard's house. She made no communication to her parents until her grandfather took her to task. Cross-examined by Mr. Godson: Shellard would have to pass through a bedroom in which his two little sons slept to reach hers. Shellard's little girl was 10 years of age. She did not keep company with a man named Cutler.

Samuel Shaw, grandfather of the respondent, said that on the 19th of June the appellant came to him and had a conversation about the respondent. He said his wife was jealous of him, and he was afraid she would poison him. He admitted that he had been improperly intimate with the respondent. Witness then put certain questions to the respondent, and made a communication to her parents.

Maria Davies, mother of respondent, said the latter was just over 16 when the child was born. She had been in the appellant's service about 15 months. The girl could not read or write. The appellant came to her house crying, and admitted that he had been unduly intimate with the girl, but he would take care of her. Witness was ill at the time.

William Davies, brickmaker, father of the respondent, gave corroborative evidence, and spoke to a communication made to him by his daughter. He wrote to Shellard in consequence of what the girl had told him. After the birth of the child witness saw Shellard, who said he would not have interfered with the girl for £50 if he had known, but if witness would forgive him he would see him in a week or two. As Shellard did not fulfil his promise, witness issued a summons.

Witnesses were called to speak to Shellard's familiar conduct with the respondent.

A young man named Cutler stated that the appellant had offered him money if he would swear that he had been intimate with the girl.

Joseph Sheldon said he had many times warned the appellant that something wrong would result from his conduct.

Mr. Godson submitted that the evidence was not such as to justify the Court in supporting the order of the Magistrates.

The case for the appellant was a total denial of the whole of the statements for the respondent.

The appellant, examined, denied that he had ever been familiar with the respondent. He had never kissed her or patted her face.

Mrs. Shellard spoke to having suspected the respondent of robbing her, and accused her of stealing a 2s piece and a half-sovereign. At that time she had made no accusation against her (witness's) husband. She alleged that the respondent had been guilty of misconduct with several men. She discharged the girl for dishonesty.

Witnesses named Round were called to speak to misconduct on the part of the respondent with men named Humphries and Cutler.

Counsel having addressed the Court, the Bench, without retiring, confirmed the order."

Birmingham Daily Post 19/11/1884

"At the Oldbury Police Court, yesterday – before Messrs. G. Heaton and E. B. Phillips – Alexander Nock (45), puddler, of Hales Owen Street, was charged, on remand, with unlawfully wounding Giles Hill, iron-worker, of Causeway Green, on the 1st inst. Mr. W. Shakespeare defended.

Complainant said that on the day named he and the defendant quarrelled and fought while together in the SPADEMAKERS ARMS, Hunt Street. Witness went to the GOLDEN LION INN, Hales Owen Street, but was followed by the defendant. When he left that public house the defendant followed him about a quarter of a mile, and struck him a violent blow on the back of the neck. He (prosecutor) could see that he had either to fight or be killed, so he fought. They had about four rounds, and during the fight defendant kicked him on the ankle and knocked him down. Whilst he was upon the ground defendant had a running kick at his right arm and broke it. He had been under the care of a surgeon since.

Alice Wood deposed that she saw the prosecutor and defendant fighting in the street, and during the last round defendant kicked prosecutor twice. Defendant also kicked the prosecutor whilst he was on the ground.

Mr. C. Torbitt, surgeon, said the prosecutor's left leg was badly bruised and swollen, and his right arm was broken. He considered that the injuries were caused by kicks.

Police-constable Clarke stated that when he arrested defendant the latter replied that complainant fetched him out of two or three public houses and would make him fight.

At the close of the case for the prosecution a consultation took place between the parties, and subsequently Mr. Shakespeare made an application for the case to be adjourned. He pointed out that in the meantime the defendant was willing to pay 5s per week to the prosecutor for two months.

The Bench decided to adjourn the case for a month to see whether this arrangement would be carried out."

“A Tell Tale Cork. At the Police Court on Tuesday, Simeon Willetts, landlord of the GOLDEN LION INN, Halesowen Street, was fined £3 6s with costs for keeping open and selling intoxicating drink during prohibited hours on July 29th. A light and voices attracted the attention of a police sergeant at 12.30am. Another officer was deputed to watch, and he saw a man named Cutler leave the premises and proceed towards Messrs. Radcliffe’s Works which are at the rear of the defendant’s premises. As Cutler passed the officer a cork flew out of a bottle which the man had in his pocket, narrowly missing the officer’s face, while some of the liquid fell upon the policeman’s cape. The landlord’s excuse was that it was a family party.”

“The annual Licensing Session for the Oldbury Division was held today.....

Superintendent Sheriff submitted his report for the year ended December 31st, which showed that the population of the division was 25,191, and there were 150 persons licensed for the sale of intoxicants, viz, 83 licensed victuallers, 35 beerhouse keepers, 19 off beerhouse keepers, 12 for the sale of wines, spirits, and beer to be consumed off the premises, and one for the sale of wines to be consumed on the premises. These figures gave one house for the sale of intoxicants to about every 167 of the inhabitants.....

He had served notices of objection to the renewal of their licenses upon Charles F. Woodbridge, of the HARMONIC INN, Church Street, and Joseph Goode, of the GOLDEN LION INN, Hales Owen Street. In the former case the grounds of objection were previous convictions, and that there was no necessity for the license, the requirements of the district being otherwise amply provided for; whilst in the latter case the objection was on the ground that the house was of a disorderly character.

Mr. Millward appeared for Charles Woodbridge, and Mr. Barradale, of Dudley, represented Joseph Goode. Superintendent Sheriff, having stated the grounds of his objection, and also informed the Court that the houses had since been conducted satisfactorily, both licenses were renewed, Mr. Heaton cautioning each applicant as to the future conduct of his house.....

The justices held the opinion that there were more licensed houses in Oldbury than were sufficient for the reasonable requirements of the inhabitants, and this was borne out by the enquiries made by a committee of county magistrates; and also that some of them were not structurally adapted for carrying on a licensed trade, and were, in fact, unfit for the purposes for which they were being used. No one who knew the policy of the Oldbury Bench could accuse them of being at all remiss in endeavouring to diminish the number of licenses. It was a matter of regret for them to find that with all the aids to temperance, by which the people were surrounded, the number of cases of drunkenness did not diminish. It was also regrettable that there should be still license holders who would permit persons to have drink in such a quantity as to make them not only enemies to themselves, but a nuisance to the community.”

The license renewal was referred to the Compensation Authority on 21st February 1905.

It was refused by the Compensation Authority on 24th June 1905.

“The adjourned principal meeting of the Licensing Committee for the County of Worcester was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, on Saturday, Mr. J. Willis Bund presiding. The sixteen houses reported by the Oldbury Justices were considered, and the committee ultimately decided that all the licenses were unnecessary. As they were not aware how far the compensation money would go, the committee arranged the houses in order, and as many of the licenses as possible will be done away with. The order is as follows.....

4. GOLDEN LION, Halesowen Street.”

Birmingham Mail 22/12/1905

“An important memorandum has been issued by the inland revenue commissioners affecting the basis of compensation for licensed houses which have been compulsorily closed. It will be remembered that fifteen such houses were refused the renewal of licenses at Oldbury, and the question of compensation was argued by counsel before the Worcestershire Licensing Committee a few weeks ago. That committee intimated that the rent was the basis upon which the compensation should be assessed, but counsel urged that this was preposterous. The claimants preferred to leave the matter to the decision of the inland revenue commissioners. The latter have sent a letter to the committee, upholding its view that the rent should be the basis, allowing nothing for the trade done on the premises or to the brewers for tied houses. The Commissioners say that the computation of the sum to be paid in any case requires the determination of three factors, namely, the value of the licensed premises, the depreciation in value of the trade fixtures, and the value of the premises without the license. They have, as a rule, capitalised the annual value of the licensed premises upon the four per cent basis, or at twenty-five years’ purchase, and only exceeded this in cases where there was a distinct prospect of improved annual value, and only fallen below it where there was evidence to suggest that the present value could not be maintained in future. They have employed surveyors of taxes to take estimates of the probable annual value of premises when deprived of their licenses, and of the probable number of years’ purchase of such annual value that premises would fetch, an allowance being made for the cost of the alterations necessary to fit the premises for earning the annual value as estimated. Accordingly, although exact figures have not yet been received, the amounts payable for the Oldbury houses above referred to may be given approximately as follows.....

GOLDEN LION, £375.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 6/3/1906

“A meeting of the Worcester Licensing Committee was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, yesterday, to consider the awards made by the Commissioner of Inland Revenue, determining the amounts to be paid as compensation to owners, holders, or others interested in the non-renewal of licenses in the Oldbury division.....

GOLDEN LION, Halesowen Street, £500.

The committee made awards as follows.....

GOLDEN LION, Halesowen Street, £275 to the licensee, Joseph Goode, and £225 to the registered owner, Thomas Sanders.

Payment of the compensation money was fixed to take place on March 28.”

The license was extinguished on 4th April 1906.

“A discreditable account comes from Cardiff of a determined prize fight there last Saturday between Thomas Withers, of Dudley, and Morgan Crowther, of Newport, in which the Dudley representative was declared victor in the eighth round, after both combatants had suffered considerable ‘damages.’ It was not generally known until this event came off that we had such a distinguished votary of the P. R. We are informed that Withers, who has previously figured in the ring in Birmingham and Wolverhampton, and was not unknown in London, some time ago issued a challenge to fight any man his own weight for £25 a side, and the challenge was accepted by Crowther. The latter had never before entered the prize ring, and will no doubt remember his first encounter, for it is said that after the battle his face was in such a state that his own mother would hardly be able to recognise him. Superintendent Speke said he wished to call the attention of the Bench to the loose way in which characters were given on behalf of persons who made applications for licenses. This applicant had presented a certificate of character signed by a number of influential gentlemen of Rowley, but the Superintendent of Police for the Rowley division had written stating that Siviter was a notorious cockfighter and had been convicted for that offence.

"County Quarter Sessions Licensing Committee's Work.....

The Chairman called attention to the report of the Licensing Committee, which, he said, set out what had been done in the county in 1905. Sixteen cases were sent up to the committee from Oldbury. The compensation in these cases amounted to £7,146. All the cases had been dealt with, except the SPADEMAKERS ARMS.

The SPADEMAKERS ARMS and the GREYHOUND, Oldbury, appealed to the Inland Revenue, who awarded the sums of £425 and £420 respectively, but on appeal to the High Court the Inland Revenue consented to have the figures altered to £1,250 and £850. The Inland Revenue asked the committee to go into the matter for them, but the committee required evidence as to the accuracy of the figures. The committee were right in requiring that evidence, having regard to the fact that the claims made in respect of houses amounted to £40,278. In one case the claim was over £5,000, and the claimants agreed to accept £1,385. He mentioned that to show that the figures were much in excess of what the Inland Revenue thought ought to have been given, and should be closely examined. But in this case the Inland Revenue thought fit to adopt the figures without any examination beyond the statutory declaration and gave the full amount. The money had been paid in all cases except that of the SPADEMAKERS ARMS, and in that case no agreement was submitted to the Committee, and they resolved to let it stand over until the agreement arrived."

HARMONIA [1865]

Birmingham Journal 11/10/1856 - Notice

“In the County Court of Staffordshire, holden at Oldbury. 30th day of September, 1856.

Whereas a Petition of William Bailey, at present and for four years last past residing at the HARMONIC INN, Church Street, in the township of Oldbury, in the county of Worcester, Licensed Victualler, Licensed Brewer, Retailer of Wines, Spirituous Liquors, and Tobacco, an Insolvent Debtor, having been filed in the County Court of Staffordshire, at Oldbury, and an Interim Order for Protection from Process having been given to the said William Bailey, under the provisions of the Statutes in that case made and provided, the said William Bailey is hereby required to appear in the said Court, on the 25th day of October, 1856, at Ten o'clock in the forenoon precisely, for his First Examination touching his Debts, Estate, and Effects, and to be further dealt with according to the provisions of the said Statutes; and Notice is hereby given, that the Choice of the Assignees is to take place at the time so appointed. All Persons indebted to the said William Bailey, or who have any of his Effects, are not to pay or deliver the same but to Mr. Joseph Heapy Watson, the Clerk of the said Court, who is the Official Assignee of the Estate and Effects of the said Insolvent, at his Office at the Court House, in Oldbury aforesaid.

R. H. Bartlett, Attorney, Wolverhampton.”

County Advertiser 18/7/1857

“Charles Jinks, a tall young fellow, described as a stock-taker, was brought up, charged with stealing seven shillings, belonging to John Williams, landlord of the HARMONIC INN, Oldbury.

The first witness examined was Sarah Williams, the wife of the prosecutor. She deposed that between eleven and twelve o'clock on the night previous two men commenced fighting in the house. She went with her husband to the room they were in, leaving the prisoner and her daughter, a girl about fourteen years of age, alone in the bar. In endeavouring to eject the men from the house, she received a blow which rendered her insensible. She was carried back to the bar, and on recovering from the effects of the blow, her daughter told her that she had seen the prisoner take some money from a wooden bowl which was in the till. Seven shillings were then found by her to be missing, the prisoner was charged with taking it, and on his denying having done so, he was searched, but only a shilling and sixpence, and three pence in coppers were found on him. The prisoner's mother coming in presently after, he gave the money to her, saying it was all he had. About two hours afterwards she was told by a person named Barnett that prisoner was tossing for a shilling in the kitchen. She went there and recognised a shilling among other money the prisoner had that moment put upon the table. She placed her hand upon the shilling and told prisoner it belonged to her, and she could swear to it, having noticed a peculiar mark on it when she had taken it that evening.

The latter part of the evidence was corroborated by the witness Barnett, who said that prisoner took several coins of money out of one of his boots. He was present when prisoner was searched, but no money was found in either of his boots then.

The girl who saw the prisoner take the money out of the till, said she asked him what he was doing, and he replied, ‘I am putting three halfpence which I found on the counter into the till.’

The prisoner, who denied the charge, was committed to take his trial at the assizes.”

[At Worcestershire Summer Assizes Charles Jinks was found guilty and sentenced to one month's imprisonment.]

“Parkinson and White. These midland district men were to have contended at 7st 12lb, for £15 a side, on Monday last, and were to have gone to scale between two and six o’clock on the day previous. On Saturday the authorities made their appearance at Mr. Fowler’s, the HARMONIC INN, Oldbury, the quarters of Parkinson, with a warrant for his apprehension, but he by a clever manoeuvre slipped through their fingers, and at the proper time went to scale, and was 1¼lb under weight. White did not put in an appearance to weigh according to articles, and therefore Parkinson claims the stakes. He also claims the stakes on the ground that Wareham, the trainer of White, came over to Oldbury on the Saturday and gave the necessary information for Parkinson to be arrested. White states that he was unable to attend to go to scale at the proper time, as he was locked up by the police. He states that he was at the railway at two o’clock, had taken his ticket, in company with Wareham, to go to scale, and whilst waiting on the platform he was taken into custody by Palmer, a Birmingham detective, confined till the next day, then taken before the magistrate and bound over for six months. White states that he believes that it was at the instigation of Parkinson’s backers that he was apprehended, as he can prove one of them was in Birmingham the day he was nailed. Our correspondent states that he has seen both men, and each looked in first-rate condition. Unless complicity can be proved on either side the men must fight when White’s recognisances expire or draw their money.”

“The annual meeting for the granting and renewal of licenses for the Oldbury and Hales Owen district was held yesterday.....

All the applications for renewals of licenses were granted, the following being cautioned in consequence of complaints having been made by the police Benjamin Garner, HARMONIC INN, Oldbury.”

Birmingham Daily Post 22/9/1864 - Letter

“To the Editor of the Birmingham Daily Post.

Sir, it is made to appear, in your impression of Wednesday, the 14th instant, that at the annual meeting for granting and renewing of licenses for Oldbury and Hales Owen districts, the following persons were cautioned, in consequence of complaints having been made by the police. Thomas Welch, BLACK HORSE INN; Benjamin Garner, HARMONIC INN; George Minchin, BELL INN, Rounds Green; also John Ballard, RED COW INN, all of Oldbury. Now, in fairness and justice to the police, we wish it to be understood that not in regard to any of the above persons charged was a single complaint made by the police, neither was any intimation given in any way, until actually confronted by the Magistrates themselves, which quite astounded all the accused. The matter of fact is, that the Magistrates had been furnished with a private note by some person, who, knowing the truth was absent, had not the manliness to make the charge in person; excepting in the case of Thomas Welch, who was informed against by a neighbour. Thus the accused were not afforded an opportunity to be legally represented, to have those accusations rebuffed. By inserting the above, you will oblige, your obedient servants.

Thomas Welch, Benjamin Garner, George Minchin, John Ballard.

Oldbury, September 21, 1864.”

“Aston Cross Grounds J. Onions of Rounds Green and C. Phillpot of Oldbury have made their money (£10 a side) good, for their 120 yards match, to Mr. Garner, of the HARMONIC TAVERN, Oldbury, who is final stakeholder and referee. They will toe the mark at half-past two o’clock, and a clipping race is anticipated.”

Bells Life in London and Sporting Chronicle 11/3/1865

“The match between Mr. R. Burrell’s bitch Fly of Oldbury, 18lb weight, and Mr. Bennett’s dog Tyler of Tipton, 21lb, to run 200 yards, Fly receiving five yards start, for £5 a side, came off on Tuesday last on the Quinton Road, near Halesowen, in the presence of nearly 600 persons. The betting, to a good sum, was invested at even moneys (Fly for choice). Mr. Garner, of the HARMONIC INN, Oldbury, who was final stakeholder, acted as referee. At the signal the dogs bounded away at a rattling pace, kept close together the whole distance, till within a few yards of home, when Fly took the lead, and won by half a yard.”

“Elizabeth Homeshaw (38), Brades Village, was charged before Mr. W. H. Dawes, at a special sessions, yesterday, with stealing a coat, the property of John Jones, HARMONIC INN, Church Street, Oldbury. The prisoner, the wife of a man of unimpeachable character, a few years ago occupied a good position in society. Recently, however, she has given way to drinking, and to that fact her present condition is attributed. She stole the coat from the prosecutor’s house on Wednesday night, and as there were previous convictions recorded against her, she was committed for trial at the Sessions.”

John Jones was fined 10s and costs for serving during unlawful hours.

Birmingham Daily Post 25/9/1872

“Yesterday, the annual licensing session for Oldbury was held at the Police Court.....

There were eighty-three applications for the renewal of old licenses, and 50 for certificates under the Wine and Beerhouse Act.

Mr. Avery said that all the applications for the renewal of licensed victuallers’ licenses and beer and wine shop licenses would be granted, with two exceptions, viz, those of John Hyland, beerhouse keeper, Church Bridge, and Sophia Jones, the landlady of the HARMONIC INN, Church Street. In the other cases there was no objection on the part of the police and no conviction. Hyland and Jones had been summoned for offences, and their cases were to be heard that morning, after which their applications for renewal would be considered.....

The charge against John Hyland of permitting drunkenness in his house, on the 17th inst, was subsequently heard by the Magistrates, and the offence having been proved, a fine of £2 and costs, was inflicted. Sophia Jones, of the HARMONIC INN, pleaded guilty to a charge of keeping her house open during prohibited hours, on the 1st inst, and was fined £1 and costs. Their licenses were renewed, but the defendants were cautioned as to their future conduct. Yesterday, for the first time, the Licensing Session was held at Oldbury. It had previously been held at Hales Owen, much to the inconvenience of publicans and others interested in the trade of Oldbury.”

“At Oldbury Police Court today, before Messrs. E. B. Phillips and G. C. Adkins, magistrates, John Francis Spencer (35), described as a grocer’s assistant, of Pemberton Place, Balsall Heath, was charged with obtaining 6d from Betsy Wassall, of the HARMONIC INN, Church Street, Oldbury, by false pretences, on the 9th of April last. Mr. A. J. O’Connor, of Birmingham, defended. Prosecutrix said about 4 o’clock in the day in question prisoner called at her father’s house, and represented that he was selling tickets for a ballot that had been got up for the benefit of a family who were in great dis-trepreneur in consequence of the father being out of employment. He stated that the father of the family had been ill for a long time, and there were five children. Believing his story she purchased a ticket from the prisoner, for which she paid him 6d. Prisoner told witness that if he sold all the tickets the ballot would take place on April 18, and the winning numbers would be published in the Daily Mail on the same day. Cross-examined: She did not look in the Mail as she did not think it worth while from what she heard subsequently. After purchasing the ticket she did not see prisoner again until she saw him at Oldbury Police Station on the 27th ult, when she identified him as the man who sold her the ticket.

Police-constable Williams stated that from information he received that a number of ballot tickets had been sold in the neighbourhood of Oldbury, he looked in the Mail every night until the 19th of April, but as no notice of the ballot appeared, he came to the conclusion that it was a swindle, and enquiries were made respecting prisoner. On the 27th ult he apprehended prisoner as he was leaving Winson Green Gaol. When witness charged him with the offence, prisoner replied, 'It is the same old thing, those ballot papers.'

Prisoner was further charged with obtaining 6d by means of false pretences from Edward Waterhouse, tobacconist, of Birmingham Street, Oldbury, on the 10th of April. In this case prisoner represented that his own family were in distress, and that for the purpose of raising money to relieve them he was selling tickets for a ballot of a sewing machine. Believing his story, Waterhouse bought a ticket and kept it for some time, but as no announcement of the winning numbers appeared, he handed the ticket (produced) over to the police.

Mr. O'Connor submitted that the offence had not been proved.

The Bench did not consider the evidence sufficient to warrant them in sending the case for trial at the Sessions, and accordingly discharged the prisoner."

Birmingham Daily Post 28/12/1888

"Last evening an inquest was held at the HARMONIC INN, Church Street, Oldbury, before Mr. E. Docker, respecting the death of Elijah Davis (24), of Oldbury Road, West Smethwick, whose body was found on the Great Western Railway at Langley, on the morning of the 25th inst.

Richard Davis, brother of the deceased, of Station Road, Black Heath, surveyor, said the deceased was an upholsterer's salesman, but was out of employment. He came over to witness's house on Monday night to take witness back to his father's to spend Christmas. About ten minutes past eleven o'clock they started from Black Heath to walk to Smethwick. They walked along the railway from the Rowley Colliery Wharf to the Langley signal-box. When they arrived at the latter place they heard a train coming from the direction of Rowley, and they both started to run up the line, in the hope of catching the Birmingham train when it stopped at Langley Station. Deceased went forward to get the tickets, and witness followed him. Witness, on nearing the station, saw that another train was just leaving on the down line, and he jumped on to the old station platform while both trains passed him, and then he ran on to the station. Upon reaching the platform he asked the guard to delay the train a little, stating that his brother had gone to obtain tickets, but as he did not arrive the train proceeded on its journey. He thought deceased had ample time to reach the platform before the up train arrived. He did not make any enquiry at Smethwick Junction Station, as he supposed that deceased had missed the train, or that he had met some friends. On Christmas morning a younger brother visited Langley, and ascertained that the deceased had been killed on the previous night.

In reply to Inspector Ledbrooke, witness admitted that he and his brother were trespassing on the line. Charles Beck, of Sparkbrook, goods guard, stated that he found the body of deceased on the up line at 2.55am on Tuesday.

Joseph Field, signalman at the Langley level-crossing, said about 11.38 on Monday night he saw two men running over the crossing towards the station, and he cautioned them as they passed the box, because two trains were in together.

George Brinkworth, engine-driver of the train, said he did not notice the engine pass over anything at Langley Station, and did not find any unusual marks upon the engine.

Dr. Lyddon said he saw the body about three o'clock on Christmas morning. The skull was fractured, and other severe injuries had been sustained. He was of opinion that deceased was knocked down by the engine, and that afterwards the train passed over him.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death."

“Last night Mr. E. Docker (Coroner) held an inquest at the HARMONIC INN, Church Street, Oldbury, relative to the death of William Butler (7), whose parents reside on the canal side, West Bromwich Street. The evidence showed that the lad was sent with a wheelbarrow along the canal side on Saturday night, and he was seen to be wheeling it very near to the side, and was cautioned about it. His mother thought he was a long time away and went in search of him, and she saw the barrow floating in the canal. A search was made, and the body recovered.

The jury returned an Open Verdict.”

“Piano Player Wanted.

HARMONIC INN, Church Street, Oldbury.”

Birmingham Daily Post 11/9/1889

“Yesterday, at the Police Court, John [sic] Chambers, of the HARMONIC INN, Church Street, Oldbury, applied for an occasional license to sell intoxicating drinks in the refreshment bar on the Oldbury Town Football Ground.

Mr. Wilson, the presiding magistrate, said the justices in granting those licenses desired to be assured that there was a bona fide requirement on the part of the public, or whether it was simply done by the football committee to obtain money for their right of selling.

Mr. Isaac Bassford said the committee wished the license granted to Mr. Chambers, and in answer to questions put by the Bench and the magistrates’ clerk, he explained that Mr. Chambers paid a rent of £7 10s per year, and that if any other person applied for a license he would have no right on the football ground without the consent of the committee.

The application was granted.”

Birmingham Daily Post 31/10/1889

“At West Bromwich County Court, yesterday – before his Honour Judge Griffith – an interesting interpleader case was heard. Thomas Inkerman Chambers, of the HARMONIC INN, Church Street, Oldbury, claimed certain goods seized by the High Bailiff of the Court under a warrant of execution issued by the Worcestershire Furnishing Company, in an action against George Glazebrook, of Oldbury, and £5 was claimed as damages sustained by the claimant in consequence of the seizure and sale of goods which were levied upon in September last, and realised £9 18s 6d. Mr. J. Sharpe appeared for the claimant, and Mr. J. Clark represented the execution creditors.

Mr. Sharpe said the claimant was an innkeeper at Oldbury, and the debtor in the action out of which the proceedings arose was George Glazebrook, also of Oldbury. In March of this year Glazebrook was in difficulties, and his landlord distrained for rent. Glazebrook then saw the claimant and requested him to help him. Mr. Chambers told Glazebrook that he could not lend him money without security. Claimant then agreed to purchase the goods belonging to Glazebrook, and Chambers paid him £24 19s for them. He at once took possession of them, and going to the landlord claimant intimated that he would take the house himself, at the same time telling the landlord that the goods belonged to him, and that he was going to hire them to Glazebrook at so much per week. That arrangement continued for about three weeks. Subsequently the goods were removed by claimant from Rounds Green to another house in West Street, Oldbury, and Mr. Chambers would produce the rentbook, showing that he was the tenant of the house where the execution had recently been levied, that the house was let furnished to Glazebrook for 6s per week.

The Judge said it appeared to him to be an ingenious attempt to evade the Act of Parliament, and he thought it had been successfully carried out.

The claimant said the distress levied upon Glazebrook’s goods was for nearly £8, and he wanted the money to put into his business, being in difficulties there also.

Mr. Clark submitted that the inventory put in by the claimant constituted a bill of sale, and that without the registration of the bill of sale the claimant could not make out a good claim to those goods. He further argued that at the time when the goods were sold by Glazebrook to Chambers they were under hire from the execution creditors, and therefore, inasmuch as the whole of the instalments under that hiring agreement were not paid, Glazebrook had no right to sell.

The Judge said he was satisfied there had been an evasion of the law, but he was afraid the law had left crevices through which those people had crept. He gave a verdict for the claimant for £9 18s 6d, but granted Mr. Clark leave to appeal.”

Birmingham Mail 28/1/1891

“At West Bromwich County Court today, before Judge Griffiths and a jury, William Jones, commercial traveller, of Oaken Gates, near Wellington, brought an action to recover £30 from Thomas James Wall, landlord of the OLIVER CROMWELL INN, Swan Village, damages, alleged to have been sustained by the plaintiff, in consequence of being assaulted by the defendant in September last. Mr. J. Clark appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. J. S. Sharpe defended.

Mr. Clark explained that the plaintiff was a cornet player in St. George’s Band at Wellington, and on Monday, September 15th, he attended a brass band contest at Oldbury, in which his band took part. After the contest he and his friends visited the HARMONIC INN, at Oldbury, and whilst there the defendant was introduced to them, and a discussion ensued as to the merits of the rival bands, and defendant appeared to be anxious that there should be another band contest between the Willenhall Band and St. George’s Band. At night they left Oldbury for the purpose of proceeding to West Bromwich Railway Station. The defendant accompanied the members of St. George’s Band. When they reached a part of the road near Fountain Lane, the defendant suggested that the nearest way to the station would be to take the road towards Swan Village Station. He persuaded the members of the party to go in that direction, and the plaintiff, anxious to keep with the company, went with them. Defendant on the way urged the plaintiff and his friends to go to his house, and offered to provide refreshments. As plaintiff and his friends refused to go with him, defendant began to quarrel with the plaintiff, and ultimately struck the latter a violent blow on the nose and knocked him down, and before the plaintiff could get up again the defendant struck him another blow on the mouth, knocking him over a fence, and also knocking two natural and two artificial teeth out. The assault was a very serious matter to plaintiff. He was a cornet player in the band named, and also band sergeant in the Wellington Rifle Corps, and a cornet could only be played well by a person whose jaws were firm. As the result of the assault, plaintiff was unable to take any solid food for three weeks, and he was also unable to follow his occupation as a traveller, and he had also lost a number of engagements through being unable to play his instrument, and it would be twelve months at least before he would be able to play a cornet successfully, and there was a probability that he would not be able to do so again.

Several witnesses were called in support of these statements.

The defendant was put in the box, and stated that on the way to the railway station plaintiff accused him of causing the party to miss the train, and after using abusive language towards him struck him, when a fight ensued. They fought until Jones said he had had enough, he (defendant) also being injured during the fight, and having to consult Dr. Sansome.

The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff for £15 and costs.”

“Mr. A. H. Hebbert (deputy coroner) held an inquest, on Saturday, at the HARMONIC INN, Church Street, Oldbury, upon the body of a newly-born male child of Eliza James (33), single woman, of Stone Street, who was found dead in a bedroom at her mother’s residence on Wednesday last.

Mrs. James stated that the body of the child was found under a bed.

Police-constable Bayliss said the mother told him that she did not know whether it was born alive or not, but immediately after it was born she covered it up with linen and pushed it under the bed. She gave him the name of the father of the child.

In reply to a question put to her by Sergeant Hill, the mother said she did not want the baby in bed with her. It had got no father, as he was dead. She did not want the baby.

Police-sergeant Hill corroborated.

Dr. Buttery said the child was fully developed. He had made a post mortem examination of the body. He applied the usual test to ascertain whether respiration had taken place, and this showed that the child had breathed during the birth, but the breathing had suddenly been stopped. The various organs were in a healthy state. In reply to the Coroner, witness said he could not positively swear that the child had had a separate existence. He was of opinion that if the child had received proper attention during the birth it would have lived.

The Coroner commented upon the conduct of the mother of the child, who did absolutely nothing to get assistance or prepare for the birth of the child.

The jury returned a verdict to the effect that the child came by its death through want of proper attention at its birth, and added that the mother was deserving of strong censure for her heartless conduct.”

Birmingham Daily Post 21/7/1892

“Last evening Mr. A. H. Hebbert (deputy coroner) held an inquest, at the HARMONIC INN, Church Street, Oldbury, touching the death of Ellen Markham (60), wife of George Markham, residing on the canal side, Oldbury, who was found drowned in the Birmingham Canal, near Halesowen Street, on Monday last.

George Markham, husband of the deceased, stated that she was seized with a fit a few months ago, and fell downstairs. Lately she had complained of feeling strange. He left deceased on Sunday at dinner time, and she was then at home. Upon returning at nine o’clock the same night he found she had left the house, but supposing that she was in a neighbour’s house he went to bed. He admitted that he locked the door, but said that about an hour afterwards he came downstairs, and unlocked it. She had never stayed out all night before, and he went to bed because he wanted a good night’s rest.

A Juror asked witness whether it was true that his wife came to the door and asked to be admitted, to which he replied in the negative. He admitted that whilst in bed he heard the door knocked, and said he went down immediately to open it. He denied telling his wife she should not come into the house that night. He did not slam the door in her face. He was not aware that deceased returned in about half an hour afterwards and knocked at the door. He did not refuse to admit her, neither did he threaten her.

A Juror: Did deceased when she went away say, ‘You will be sorry for this.’?

Witness: I did not see her, and had no conversation with her. He admitted that he was drinking from six o’clock until nine o’clock on Sunday night in a public house.

A Juror: You appear to have locked the door to keep your wife out.

Witness: No, I locked it to keep other people out.

In reply to further questions, witness stated that he had never locked his wife out before, and he and deceased were not in the habit of quarrelling. Deceased’s slippers were found outside the door.

A Juror said witness could not be on very good terms with his wife if he locked her out.

Witness then admitted that he and deceased had a few words.

Mrs. Wilcox said that she and her sister took deceased to the door of her residence on Sunday night and left her there. The door was locked, but deceased’s husband came downstairs and opened it. Deceased, however, said that George (her husband) did not want her.

Eleanor Bell, daughter of the deceased, said her mother and father had lived happily together, but her mother had accused her (witness) of taking more notice of her father than she did of deceased.

Mrs. Horton, a neighbour, said deceased and her husband lived happily together.

Police-constable Pegg deposed to finding the body in the canal on Monday morning, and Dr. Buttery stated that death was caused by drowning.

The jury returned a verdict to the effect that deceased was Found Drowned, and added that they considered the husband deserved to be censured for his heartless conduct.

The husband was recalled and reprimanded by the Coroner.

In reply, he said he was very sorry he locked deceased out.”

Birmingham Daily Post 23/8/1892

“Last evening Mr. E. Docker (coroner) held an inquest at the HARMONIC INN, Church Street, Oldbury, concerning the death of Mary Ann Harvey, aged ten weeks, daughter of Thomas Harvey, West Bromwich Street, who was found dead in bed on Sunday morning last.

The father of deceased informed Sergeant Hill of the death of the child about half-past four o'clock on Sunday morning, and when the officer expressed the opinion that the child had been suffocated through being overlain, the father said to his wife, ‘We shall get into a fine bother over this; it is all through the drink.’ The wife then admitted having had some beer, which made her sleep soundly.

The jury returned a verdict of Death from Suffocation, and, at their request, the Coroner censured the father and mother for their conduct.”

Birmingham Daily Post 10/10/1893

“Yesterday afternoon an inquest was held at the HARMONIC INN, Church Street, Oldbury – before Mr. E. Docker (coroner) – concerning the death of James Morgan Gill (45), traveller in the employ of a Birmingham firm, formerly residing in Brades Road, Oldbury, who was found dead on the Great Western Railway near Rood End, on Saturday morning last.

Mrs. Gill, widow of the deceased, stated that he left home on Thursday morning last, saying he was going to West Bromwich on business. He did not return home at night, as she expected he would, and on Saturday she heard about his death. In her opinion, he was not likely to commit suicide, and there was no reason why he should do so.

Alice Stickley, of Spring Street, Langley, said deceased came to their house at 1.5 on Friday morning, and called them up. He stated that he had missed a train, and, having walked from Old Hill, was very tired and wanted a rest. He left their house again at 3.25pm the same day, promising to return at night, though he did not do so. Witness did not know that there was any reason why deceased did not return home. On the Wednesday night previous deceased and his wife were at their house together, and he then appeared to be comfortable. For that reason she thought it very strange that he did not go home.

Harry Tomlinson deposed to finding the body a few yards from a crossing leading from Oldbury to Rood End; and Police-constable Sherwood said there was nothing in deceased’s pockets to throw any light on the affair.

Inspector Ledbrook, who represented the company, said the engines that passed that way during Friday night had been searched, without success, for trace of the accident.

The Foreman of the jury suggested that the company should erect a bridge over the crossing.

The Inspector said he did not think it was necessary, as the evidence went to show that deceased was not killed at the level crossing. That was the first fatal accident at that place since the line was opened twenty years ago, and only one person had been injured there.

Dr. Sharpe stated that probably death had taken place four or five hours before the body was found.

The jury returned an open verdict, recommending that the company should be requested to erect a bridge over the crossing, as the traffic in that locality was growing rapidly.”

Birmingham Daily Post 25/10/1893

“At Oldbury Police Court, yesterday afternoon, Mr. A. Caddick made an application, on behalf of Charles Woodbridge, for the transfer of the license of the HARMONIC INN, Church Street, from Messrs. Mitchell and Co. to himself. He pointed out that Mr. Woodbridge was in possession of the premises, and had taken them on a quarterly tenancy.

The Magistrates’ Clerk raised an objection against a quarterly tenancy.

Mr. Caddick said he was surprised that such an objection had been raised, because he had always considered that the magistrates preferred short leases, as it gave the landlords more power to get rid of publicans in cases of conviction.

The applicant was called, and stated that the rent of the house was £6 per month, and he received all the profits.

Mr. Albright said the last time the application was made the applicant stated that the agreement was for twelve months, but when it was produced it was found only to be three months. That aroused a doubt in the minds of the Bench, but on this occasion the license would be transferred.”

Birmingham Daily Post 12/12/1893

“Yesterday afternoon Mr. E. Docker (coroner) held an inquest at the HARMONIC INN, Oldbury, respecting the death of Edward Bastable (37), slater, of Rood End Road, whose body was found in a feeder of the Birmingham Canal on Sunday morning.

Margaret Bastable, the widow, identified the body.

Police-constable Lane said a man named Wilkinson informed him that a man's body had been discovered in the feeder at Tat Bank. Deceased was lying on his side in about three-and-a-half inches of water, and was hemmed in by ice. A portion of the face was in the water, but the mouth was not covered. Deceased was bleeding from his right ear, but this wound witness supposed was caused by falling upon a stone which lay under his head. Witness found 5s 5½d in deceased's possession, but deceased's master informed him that he paid deceased 7s 9d for his work. There were no marks of violence upon the body or any circumstances to lead to the supposition that deceased had met with foul play. Along the feeder was the nearest way to deceased's home.

Dr. Buttery, who had examined the body, said he thought the deceased fell down the embankment of the feeder and caught his head against a stone, thereby rendering him unconscious, and that he lay there, death resulting from exposure to the cold.

There being no evidence to show how deceased met his death, the jury returned a verdict of Found Dead.”

At a meeting of West Bromwich Town Council, yesterday, the Mayor (Alderman R. “The annual Licensing Session for the Oldbury Division was held today.....

Superintendent Sheriff submitted his report for the year ended December 31st, which showed that the population of the division was 25,191, and there were 150 persons licensed for the sale of intoxicants, viz, 83 licensed victuallers, 35 beerhouse keepers, 19 off beerhouse keepers, 12 for the sale of wines, spirits, and beer to be consumed off the premises, and one for the sale of wines to be consumed on the premises. These figures gave one house for the sale of intoxicants to about every 167 of the inhabitants.....

He had served notices of objection to the renewal of their licenses upon Charles F. Woodbridge, of the HARMONIC INN, Church Street, and Joseph Goode, of the GOLDEN LION INN, Hales Owen Street. In the former case the grounds of objection were previous convictions, and that there was no necessity for the license, the requirements of the district being otherwise amply provided for; whilst in the latter case the objection was on the ground that the house was of a disorderly character.

Mr. Millward appeared for Charles Woodbridge, and Mr. Barradale, of Dudley, represented Joseph Goode. Superintendent Sheriff, having stated the grounds of his objection, and also informed the Court that the houses had since been conducted satisfactorily, both licenses were renewed, Mr. Heaton cautioning each applicant as to the future conduct of his house.....

The justices held the opinion that there were more licensed houses in Oldbury than were sufficient for the reasonable requirements of the inhabitants, and this was borne out by the enquiries made by a committee of county magistrates; and also that some of them were not structurally adapted for carrying on a licensed trade, and were, in fact, unfit for the purposes for which they were being used. No one who knew the policy of the Oldbury Bench could accuse them of being at all remiss in endeavouring to diminish the number of licenses. It was a matter of regret for them to find that with all the aids to temperance, by which the people were surrounded, the number of cases of drunkenness did not diminish. It was also regrettable that there should be still license holders who would permit persons to have drink in such a quantity as to make them not only enemies to themselves, but a nuisance to the community.”

Birmingham Daily Post 13/7/1918

“At West Bromwich County Court, yesterday, John Edward Adie, gun dealer, of Snarestone, was awarded £10 against Fred A. Warren, HEARTS OF OAK INN, Bromford Road, Oldbury, for damages to a gun caused by neglect and insufficient packing.

For the defence it was stated that the defendant took the gun to an experienced packer at a works, who fastened the parts together with string and put packing between them. The packer, however, admitted that that was the first time he had packed a gun, and that he did not understand much about them.

Judge Smith held that there was negligence in having the gun packed by a person who knew nothing about it.”

“The annual licensing meeting for Hales Owen division was held yesterday at the Public Office..... There were 84 applications for certificates under the New Beer Act, which were all granted with the exception of Joseph Pendrill's, HEN AND CHICKENS, Oldbury, which was refused altogether; and that of Charles Essex, the ROYAL OAK, Langley, which was adjourned for a fortnight.”

County Advertiser 25/9/1869

“At the adjourned licensing meeting, Mr. Motteram, made an application, on behalf of Joseph Pendrill, beerhouse keeper, of Birmingham Street, Oldbury, for the renewal of his license, of which he had been deprived on account of informalities in the usual notice. Mr. Motteram argued, at some length, that the Magistrates had power to grant the license, while, on the other hand, the Clerk held that they could not do so. Power of appeal to the Quarter Sessions was granted – the question to be raised being whether the Bench had, under the circumstances, power to amend the notice.”

“David Lesson, Portway Road, was summoned for being drunk and refusing to quit the beerhouse of Mr. Bright, HEN AND CHICKENS, Birmingham Street, Oldbury. Last Thursday night the defendant was in Mr. Bright's beerhouse in a drunken condition, and was behaving disorderly. He refused to quit the house when ordered to do so. The same night, two or three hours after, he was found by the police creating a disturbance.

Defendant, who had been before the Magistrates about a dozen times before for similarly offending, was fined 5s and costs in each case, or in default 14 days' imprisonment.”

The license renewal was referred to the Compensation Authority on 21st February 1905.

It was refused by the Compensation Authority on 24th June 1905.

Birmingham Mail 24/6/1905

“The adjourned meeting of the Worcester County Licensing Committee was held today at the Shirehall, Mr. Willis Bund presiding, for the consideration of licenses of houses in Oldbury which had been reported by the local justices as not being necessary for the requirements of the district.....

The HEN AND CHICKENS, Birmingham Street, was then taken, Mr. Matthews appearing for the licensee, Mr. Day, who said that the manager only made a profit on food supplied.....

After deliberating half an hour, the justices decided that all the houses brought before them were unnecessary, but not being certain how far compensation money would suffice to meet the claims to be paid, drew up an order of precedence in which houses are to be dealt with, houses not paid for keeping open provisionally till they are dealt with.”

Smethwick Telephone 1/7/1905

“The adjourned principal meeting of the Licensing Committee for the County of Worcester was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, on Saturday, Mr. J. Willis Bund presiding. The sixteen houses reported by the Oldbury Justices were considered, and the committee ultimately decided that all the licenses were unnecessary. As they were not aware how far the compensation money would go, the committee arranged the houses in order, and as many of the licenses as possible will be done away with. The order is as follows.....

15. HEN AND CHICKENS, Birmingham Street.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 10/8/1905

“The Worcestershire Licensing Committee having decided to refuse fifteen Oldbury licenses, as the amount of the compensation fund available allows, sat yesterday at the Shire Hall, Worcester, to decide who are the persons entitled to compensation.....

HEN AND CHICKENS, William Saunders (licensee), Mary Elizabeth Jones (owner), John H. Day, Handsworth (lessee), Edith Hunt, West Smethwick (first mortgagee), Elijah Hollins, Oldbury (second mortgagee).”

Birmingham Mail 22/12/1905

“An important memorandum has been issued by the inland revenue commissioners affecting the basis of compensation for licensed houses which have been compulsorily closed. It will be remembered that fifteen such houses were refused the renewal of licenses at Oldbury, and the question of compensation was argued by counsel before the Worcestershire Licensing Committee a few weeks ago. That committee intimated that the rent was the basis upon which the compensation should be assessed, but counsel urged that this was preposterous. The claimants preferred to leave the matter to the decision of the inland revenue commissioners. The latter have sent a letter to the committee, upholding its view that the rent should be the basis, allowing nothing for the trade done on the premises or to the brewers for tied houses. The Commissioners say that the computation of the sum to be paid in any case requires the determination of three factors, namely, the value of the licensed premises, the depreciation in value of the trade fixtures, and the value of the premises without the license. They have, as a rule, capitalised the annual value of the licensed premises upon the four per cent basis, or at twenty-five years’ purchase, and only exceeded this in cases where there was a distinct prospect of improved annual value, and only fallen below it where there was evidence to suggest that the present value could not be maintained in future. They have employed surveyors of taxes to take estimates of the probable annual value of premises when deprived of their licenses, and of the probable number of years’ purchase of such annual value that premises would fetch, an allowance being made for the cost of the alterations necessary to fit the premises for earning the annual value as estimated. Accordingly, although exact figures have not yet been received, the amounts payable for the Oldbury houses above referred to may be given approximately as follows.....

HEN AND CHICKENS, £300.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 6/3/1906

“A meeting of the Worcester Licensing Committee was held at the Shire Hall, Worcester, yesterday, to consider the awards made by the Commissioner of Inland Revenue, determining the amounts to be paid as compensation to owners, holders, or others interested in the non-renewal of licenses in the Oldbury division.....

The licenses refused and the amount of compensation awarded in each case was as follows.....

HEN AND CHICKENS, Birmingham Street, £540.

The committee made awards as follows.....

HEN AND CHICKENS, Birmingham Street, £15 to William Sanders, licensee, and £175 to John Hamilton Day, lessee; £300 to Edith Hust, first mortgagee, £50 to Eliza Hollins, second mortgagee.

Payment of the compensation money was fixed to take place on March 28.”

The license was extinguished on 4th April 1906.

“The annual Oldbury Licensing Sessions were held on Tuesday.

Superintendent Chare, in his report, stated that during the year eight licensed persons had been proceeded against and fined for offences under the licensing laws. 215 males and 20 females were proceeded against for drunkenness, of which 163 males and 10 females were either fined or imprisoned – a decrease of 17 males and four females as compared with the previous year.

He objected to the renewal of the license to the HEN AND CHICKENS, Causeway Green, on the ground that the manager had been fined for supplying drink to a drunken person, and that the original license had been destroyed by pulling down the premises, while the requirements of the district were amply provided for.

Mr. J. S. Sharpe appeared on behalf of the Chief Constable to oppose the renewal of the license to Henry Mitchell and Co. of the HEN AND CHICKENS INN, and mentioned that at the previous Licensing Sessions, application was made by Messrs. Mitchell and Co. to make certain alterations to the premises. In May the work was commenced, and Superintendent Chare found that not only the alterations sanctioned were being carried out, but that practically the whole of the premises were being pulled down, and a new house erected. This was going beyond the plans, and the Superintendent, therefore, brought it before the Bench. Mr. Walker, who appeared on behalf of Messrs. Mitchell, pointed out that when the alterations were being made, they found that two of the walls were so badly built that they were in danger of falling down, and the architect, Mr. Kendrick, asked for permission to rebuild them, but was told it could only be given on licensing day, and he, therefore, rebuilt on his own responsibility.

Mr. W. H. Kendrick and Mr. Dallow gave evidence showing that the walls were dangerous, and the magistrates renewed the license.”

“A sad accident occurred in the neighbourhood of Great Barr late on Wednesday night. A party numbering about twenty-four persons from Oldbury and West Bromwich were conveyed in a break to Sutton Coldfield on Wednesday afternoon. Whilst returning a call was made at a public house by the roadside. During the temporary absence of the driver the horses suddenly bolted, some of the party being seated in the break to which they were attached. Three women jumped out of the vehicle, and one of them. Mrs. P. Plant, of the HEN AND CHICKENS INN, Causeway Green, Oldbury, was subsequently found lying upon the road dead, her neck it is supposed having been broken by the fall. The other two women were seriously injured, and having been attended by medical men in the locality, were removed to the District Hospital. Their names are Agnes Brown (37), of Neale Street, Spon Lane, and Kate Waterhouse, also of Spon Lane. Brown was detained at the hospital, but the other woman was removed to her home. Mrs. Plant was between forty and fifty years of age.”

Birmingham Daily Post 11/8/1900

“Last night Mr. H. A Pearson (district corner) held an inquest at the Old Horns Inn, Great Barr, respecting the death of Phoebe Plant (48), of the HEN AND CHICKENS INN, Causeway Green, Oldbury. On Wednesday deceased accompanied her son-in-law, Thomas William Potts, of the HIGHLAND LADDIE INN, Spon Lane, and others, in a brake drawn by three horses from West Bromwich to Sutton Park. On the return journey they called at a public house, where the driver, Harry Westwood, left his seat while his brother, Thomas Westwood, who acted as guard, gave the horses water. Thomas Westwood left them to take back the bucket, and during his absence the horses started off, apparently as the result of some passing cyclists shouting 'Come on.' There were about six other people then in the brake besides deceased. The Westwoods shouted to them to keep their seats, but several of the number jumped out. Deceased jumped from the back of the brake, and apparently dropped with her feet on the bottom step. She afterwards fell backwards, and her head struck the ground. Dr. Garman, of Great Barr, was called to her, but found that death had taken place. Isabella Evitt, of Neal Street, Spon Lane, said a boy 'clicked' at the horses, and they began to gallop. Thomas Westwood said if the people had kept their seats nothing would have happened. The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death, and at their request the Coroner called the attention of the Westwoods to the danger of leaving horses with no one in charge of them."

“A well-known Oldbury-based band are devastated after musical equipment worth more than £17,000 was stolen from their trailer. Speakers, mixing desks, microphones and four white dinner jackets belonging to the Gary Allcock Allstars Big Band were among the items taken from a trailer parked outside the Albrighton home of musical director Paul Drakeley. Thieves removed a tow hitch lock and manouevered the trailer between two blocking vehicles overnight between 11pm on Tuesday March 18 and 7.30am the following day. A drum kit, lighting, sound equipment and various leads and connectors were also taken.

Formed in 1974, the 17-piece band first performed at the HEN AND CHICKENS public house and has gone on to play shows in Dubai and Monte Carlo.

Paul said, ‘It is a bit of a nightmare at the moment. We are carrying on but it’s very difficult. People in the industry have been good enough to loan us PAs and sound equipment. Everyone has rallied round to help.’”

“Some Midland public houses could be closed on Christmas Day and New Year’s Day because managers feel it will not be worthwhile to open.

Mr. Eddie McGrath, Ansells secretary of the Association of Clerical, Technical and Supervisory Staffs, the clerical branch of the Transport and General Workers’ Union, said last night that he was hoping to arrange a meeting with the brewery to discuss the position. Mr. McGrath, who manages the HEN AND CHICKENS, Oldbury, said that managers worked long hours at Christmas and New Year with extensions and parties, and that for certain public houses it was not worthwhile to open on Christmas Day, especially in the morning, or on New Years’ Day. ‘We are not asking that all the pubs should shut. We are just asking that individual managers should have the right to decide whether to open.’

If Ansells agreed to the request, Mr. McGrath expected about half of the 600 ACTSS-managed public houses in the Midlands to be closed on Christmas Day, with more shut on New Years’ Day.

A spokesman for Ansells said last night, ‘Efforts are being made to arrange a meeting to discuss Christmas and New Year openings.’”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 13/4/1870

“Yesterday an inquest was held by Mr. Docker at the WHITE HORSE, Newbury Lane, on the body of William Snow, who worked at Rowley’s brickyard as a getter of clay. The inquest was an adjourned one, and the evidence given at the two inquiries showed that on Sunday, the 3rd inst, the deceased and three men, named Gallier, Pearsall, and Parkes (labourers) had been drinking considerably at the HOPE AND ANCHOR, a public house kept by Joseph Rowley. Just before leaving they asked him to pay for a quart of ale, but they had to leave the house without him doing so. They went home along the canal side, and when near the Jim Crow bridge, over the canal at Titford, Cooper, alias Gallier, stated that he heard a splash in the water, and Pearsall said, ‘He is in the cut. For God’s sake let us get him out.’ Parkes took no notice, but walked on. The other men tried to get Snow out, but could not, and went to an old man, who lives near, for a rope, but they could not reach him with this, though they ultimately succeeded in getting the body out with a boat shaft.

William Wood, miner, Whiteheath, said he saw the four men going along the canal side on the Sunday, and heard Parkes say, 'Go on, old —; we will pretty well have you into it when we get you there.' The men appeared under the influence of drink, and were going down towards the place where the man was drowned. About 20 minutes afterwards he went to the spot, hearing that a man had been got out of the canal. He saw two men there – Gallier and Pearsall – the man Parkes having left. He asked them where the other man was, and they said, 'Oh! He is gone.' He then said to the men, 'Chaps, I am sadly afraid you will get in for this job,' and he also alluded to the remarks which he had heard Parkes make. When he got to the place he found the body of deceased on the canal bank.

Mr. W. H. Hayward, surgeon, stated that he had examined the body, but there were no marks of violence upon it.

The Coroner said the case was a grave one against Parkes, but he thought that as the evidence was so conflicting, it would not be wise to return a verdict of manslaughter.

The public retired, and, after a few minutes' consideration, the jury returned a verdict that deceased was Found Drowned, but there was not sufficient evidence to show how he came by his death. Several of the jurymen said they considered the case one of grave suspicion, and one of them remarked that the three men with whom deceased had last been seen were 'three beautiful ones.'"

“Edward Harley, 10, Charlotte Street, Birmingham, was charged with stealing a watch and chain belonging to William Tonks, brickyard labourer, Great Bridge, on the 29th ult. Prosecutor said he visited Oldbury Wakes Ground at about 7 o’clock on the 29th ult.

About a quarter of an hour afterwards he missed his watch and chain from his waistcoat pocket. The watch and chain produced were his and were worth £1.

PC Sanders said from information he received he visited the HOPE AND ANCHOR, Halesowen Street, saw the prisoner in the tap room, asked him whether he had a watch in his possession, but he said he had not. Witness then searched him and found the watch produced in his waistcoat pocket. He then took him into custody on suspicion of stealing it. He had charged him that morning, and in answer to which, prisoner said he found it on the race course.

Prisoner was sentenced to three months’ hard labour.”

“The annual licensing session for the Oldbury division was held this afternoon at the Police Court.....

Police Superintendent Hardman presented his report.....

Since the last meeting 12 licensed persons had been summoned and convicted for offences against their licenses Samuel Barnett.....

The Bench decided that all the applications for renewals made by those prisoners who had been convicted during the year should be postponed until the adjourned licensing meeting, with the exception of two whose conviction took place on licensing day last year and who were then called up and cautioned. The persons whose renewals were refused would be required to attend and show reasons why their licenses should be renewed. Three of them Samuel Barnett would have special notice, as the magistrates proposed to hear their applications in open court, as they would specially consider whether it was their duty to renew the licenses held by those persons.”

“Capture of an Escaped Prisoner. Desperate Struggle with the Police.

On Saturday night Police-constables S. Davis and Avern, stationed at Oldbury, had an exciting adventure in capturing an escaped prisoner. About twelve months ago a young man named Samuel Porter (23), described as an ironworker, whose parents reside in Talbot Street, Oldbury, escaped, from the custody of Police-constable Wright whilst he was being conveyed from West Bromwich Police Court to Winson Green Gaol, to which he had been remanded on a charge of burglary. On the way to Winson Green, when in the neighbourhood of Handsworth, Porter managed to break away from Police-constable Wright, taking with him one of the handcuffs, which was afterwards found in the canal at Oldbury.

On Saturday evening information was received by the police at Oldbury that Porter was in the HOPE AND ANCHOR INN, Halesowen Street. Police-constables S. Davis and Avern were at once sent there to arrest him. When the officers reached the inn they found Porter there with several companions, strangers to the district, and appeared to be from Birmingham. At first Porter denied that he was the man of whom the officers were in search, and when he was clearly identified he appeared to make up his mind to offer a most determined resistance. He refused to move, and clung to the table in the room. Upon the constables proceeding to remove him by force, they were attacked by Porter and his companions in a most savage manner. The men seized the fireirons and fender, and with these they beat the constables about the head and arms. Whilst his colleague held Porter, Police-constable Davis drew his staff, and for a time there was a fierce fight, and but for the assistance of the landlord of the house, Mr. C. William Holden, and other men who happened to be there, the officers would undoubtedly have been overpowered. His companions repeatedly tried to rescue Porter, who was ultimately handcuffed and conveyed to the police station. In the meantime the other men ran away, but one of them was shortly afterwards arrested. He gave the name of James Ashley, and said he came from London. Both men will be brought up today and remanded, there being other charges against Porter, both at Oldbury and West Bromwich.”

“At Oldbury Police Court, on Tuesday, Thomas Simmonds, of Halesowen, was charged with stealing, on Christmas night, a watch, valued at 12s 6d, the property of William Parkes. The parties, who are friends, visited the HOPE AND ANCHOR INN, Oldbury, about ten o'clock. Whilst in the house prosecutor pulled out his watch so that he might pay for some drink, and placed it on the table. Prosecutor forgot to pick up the watch, and defendant put it into his own pocket, saying that he would take care of it for him. Defendant pleaded guilty, but said he did not know how he became possessed of the watch. The Bench fined defendant 30s, including costs, or a month's imprisonment."

Mr. Wilson said they could not do such a thing. The justices had inspected the house, and could not alter their decision."

"Licensing Sessions.....

Mr. A. M. Chance presided at Oldbury. The report of Superintendent Hill stated that there were 126 licences in the district, a reduction of seven on the previous year, which compared with the estimated population, gave a ratio of one on-licence to every 354 of the inhabitants. One licence-holder only was convicted during the year, while eighty-eight persons were convicted for drunkenness, a decrease of forty-three on the previous year.....

The police objected to the renewal of the following twelve licences which will be considered at the adjourned sessions, to be held on March 2.....

The license renewal was referred to the Compensation Authority on 2nd March 1909.

"The adjourned licensing sessions for Oldbury were held yesterday, Mr. G. S. Albright presiding in the absence, through illness, of Mr. A. M. Chance. The magistrates were sitting for several hours, chiefly in hearing evidence regarding the following licensed houses, to the renewal of which the police objected on the grounds of redundancy, the magistrates proposing to refer them for compensation.....

HOPE AND ANCHOR, beerhouse, Halesowen Street, owner Mr. Williams, Rowley.....

Evidence was given in each case by Superintendent Hill and Mr. F. H. Jones, auctioneer and valuer, as to the nature of the houses, and the proximity of other licensed premises. The magistrates afterwards retired to consider the cases, and upon resuming Mr. Albright said they had decided to refer the following six houses to Worcester to be dealt with under compensation: CRYSTAL PALACE, NAVIGATION INN, HOPE AND ANCHOR, FOUNTAIN, CROSS KEYS, and BIRD IN HAND. All the other licences would be renewed, and the licences of these six would be provisionally renewed pending the county committee's investigations....."

The license was renewed on 3rd July 1909.

“The Worcestershire Licensing Committee sat on Saturday to continue consideration of the 25 licenses which had been referred to them as the compensation authority by the local justices.....

In the case of the HOPE AND ANCHOR, Halesowen Street, Oldbury, Mr. Shakespeare appeared for the local justices and Mr. Graham Milward appeared for the owner and licensee. Supt. Hill said there were 126 licensed houses for a population of 33,000 in the town. This house was situated in a poor district and there were two better houses near. Mr. Milward submitted that in the twenty-two police areas in the county only two had fewer houses per head of the population than Oldbury. Mr. F. H. Jones, valuer, said there were 18 licensed houses within 500 yards of this house.....

The Committee renewed the licenses of the HOPE AND ANCHOR.”

The license renewal was referred to the Compensation Authority.

Birmingham Daily Gazette 2/3/1910

“The adjourned Licensing Sessions for the Oldbury division were held yesterday, Mr. G. S. Albright presiding over the magistrates. The principal business was the consideration of six licences which the magistrates proposed to refer to the Quarter Sessions for compensation on the ground of redundancy. The houses in question were the CART AND HORSES, West Bromwich Street; BIRD IN HAND, Simpson Street; ROYAL OAK, Park Lane; NAGS HEAD, Flash Road; HOPE AND ANCHOR, Halesowen Street; and BOAT INN, Tat Bank.....

Mr. Albright then announced that the magistrates had decided to refer only four licenses to the Quarter Sessions at Worcester this year instead of six as originally proposed. They would therefore renew the licenses of the BIRD IN HAND and ROYAL OAK.....

The last house was the HOPE AND ANCHOR, of which William Holden was the tenant, and Messrs. Williams the owners. The parties interested were represented by Mr. Bate (Blackheath).

Superintendent Hill, in reply to Mr. Bate, said the house was referred to Quarter Sessions last year, but the licence was eventually renewed.

Mr. Jones pointed out that within 500 yards' radius there were sixteen full-licensed houses and two beer-houses on. It was one of the oldest and most dilapidated houses in the district.

The licensee said he had been in the house for twenty-nine years, and he presented a petition signed by eighty customers opposing the reference of the house for compensation.....

All four houses were referred to the Quarter Sessions.”

The license renewal was refused on 2nd July 1910.

The Committee took evidence in support of the claims calculated on the capitalised loss of trade, the capitalised loss in the value of the premises by the extinction of the license, and the loss on the sale of fittings.....

In the case of the HOPE AND ANCHOR, Oldbury, Mr. Graham Milward submitted evidence that the house was doing an average of 283 barrels a year, and had been yielding a profit of between £200 and £300 a year.

The owner said he would rather retain the house than have the £1,900 claimed for compensation.....

The Committee then announced the following awards.....

“On Monday last there was a very large attendance of lovers of pedestrianism at Aston Cross Grounds, not only from Birmingham, but from all the districts around, to witness the 15 miles match between C. Cooke of Marylebone and R. Manks (the Warwickshire Antelope), Manks running for £25 against Cooke’s £15 and his champion’s belt. It is contended by many that pedestrianism is on the decline. We only wish that those who make the assertion had been present on Monday at this race; it would have altered their views to have witnessed the interest taken in the above match.....

A little before six o’clock the men appeared on the ground, each looking in first-rate condition. Manks had trained himself in the vicinity of Wednesbury, and Cooke under a well-known London friend at Oldbury..... At the turn of 10½ miles Manks again fell off, Cooke gradually leaving him in the distance; he struggled on to the end of the 11th mile, when he gave in, apparently much distressed Cooke kept on in gallant style and ran the whole distance in 1h 28min. The first 10 miles of the race was well contested, and the arrangements gave the greatest satisfaction. Cooke has received the money from Mr. Watson, the stakeholder.”

“Oldbury. The Suspicious Death by Drowning.

The adjourned inquest on the body of Louisa Jones, whose death by drowning under suspicious circumstances has been previously recorded in the Daily Gazette was held yesterday before Mr. Ralph Docker, at the JOLLY COLLIER INN. It will be remembered that at the last inquest it was stated that when the body was found (on Thursday week) it had been in the water two days, and that with the exception of a slight bruise on the throat, there were no marks of violence. The adjournment was taken in order that the police might make inquiry as to whom the deceased was last seen alive with, and any further particulars likely to throw light upon the manner in which she came to her death.

A woman named Shaw was the first witness examined, and she stated that on the night deceased was last seen alive she visited her house with a man whom she did not know. The man said he was going to Durham, and the deceased said that if he did not take her with him she would drown herself. This was on the Tuesday night at about ten o’clock.

A woman named Tilley was next called, and after some delay answered to her name. She stated that she had had come conversation with a man named Lowe, who it was stated had been last seen with deceased. He had stated to her that he knew nothing whatever of the manner in which deceased came by her death. There being no other evidence the Coroner asked the jury if they were satisfied with the evidence at present before them. The jury retired, and after some deliberation they returned, and said that could not come to a verdict in the present unsatisfactory state of the evidence.

The Coroner said there were rumours to the effect that a man with whom the deceased had been seen had been heard to threaten violence towards her, and it would perhaps be as well to adjourn the inquiry for the police to try and obtain evidence upon this point.

The jury were of opinion that such a course was desirable, and they also expressed an opinion that the man Lowe should be looked up and brought forward to give evidence.

It was then arranged that the inquest should be adjourned sine die, and that the jury should be called together when the police had obtained any further information.

The mother of the deceased was present, and was miserably clad. Her appearance caused considerable remark. She stated that a report had been given currency to the effect that she was addicted to drink was totally untrue, and she also said that she had always done the best she could to bring up her family respectably."

"Prosecution of an Unqualified Medical Practitioner at Oldbury.

At the Hales Owen Petty Sessions, on the 11th inst, before Mr. S. Hanbury and Major Lea Smith, Thomas Holland, of Oldbury, was charged under the 27th, 36th, and 40th section of the above Act with having 'wilfully and falsely pretended to be, and taken and used the name or title of a surgeon, implying that he was registered under this Act,' and also with having acted as surgeon to a Friendly Society, for affording mutual relief in sickness, contrary to the Act. Mr. William Shakespeare, of Oldbury, appeared to prosecute on behalf of the medical men of that town; Mr. Henry Jackson, of West Bromwich, was for the defendant. In opening the first case Mr. Shakespeare said Mr. Holland was a person who had practised in Oldbury for many years without any interference from the medical men of the place; but having lately placed himself in an antagonistic position towards them on the club question, they felt it their duty to take the present proceedings to protect their professional interests.

Fanny Cleaver was called, who deposed that Mr. Holland attended a child of hers in June last, who died of convulsions, and that Mr. Holland gave her a certificate of the death signed 'Thomas Holland, surgeon,' which she transmitted to Mr. Parish, the registrar of births and deaths. (This certificate was produced by the deputy registrar, Mr. Parish having died since the issuing of the summonses.)

Mr. Parish, jun. knew Mr Holland's writing, and the certificate then produced was in his hand-writing. Mr. Jackson, for the defence, raised a technical objection as to the absence of Mr. Holland's name from the Medical Register being proof of his not being qualified.

The Bench overruled this objection, and, after a short consultation, they fined the defendant £5.

The next charge was for acting as surgeon to the Miners' Refuge Friendly Society, held at Mr. Clifton's [sic], the JOLLY COLLIER INN, Oldbury.

Joseph Matthews, secretary to the society, deposed that Mr. Holland had acted as surgeon to the Miners' Refuge for many years, and that he was re-elected every six months. He produced the minute book containing the last entry of such re-election.

This charge was also considered proved, and the same fine (£5) was imposed.

There were nine other cases against the defendant, but these were withdrawn, as the object of the prosecution, by the judgement in the first cases, had been gained."

“The annual licensing session for the Oldbury division was held this afternoon at the Police Court.....

Police Superintendent Hardman presented his report.....

Since the last meeting 12 licensed persons had been summoned and convicted for offences against their licenses B. Harley.....

The Bench decided that all the applications for renewals made by those prisoners who had been convicted during the year should be postponed until the adjourned licensing meeting, with the exception of two whose conviction took place on licensing day last year and who were then called up and cautioned. The persons whose renewals were refused would be required to attend and show reasons why their licenses should be renewed.”

Birmingham Mail 24/9/1883

“Today the adjourned Licensing Session for the Oldbury Division was held at the Court House.....

The persons whose names were included in the ‘black list’ presented by the superintendent of police at the annual meeting, and whose applications for renewals were consequently postponed, were called before the Bench to show cause why their licenses should be renewed.....

The license held by Benjamin Harley, formerly of the JOLLY COLLIER INN, Albert Street were all renewed, the applicants being cautioned by the presiding magistrate as to their future conduct.....

Mr. Shakespeare explained that in the case of Benjamin Harley the license had been transferred to another tenant.”

“John Windmill, Albert Street, was charged with being drunk upon and refusing to quit the licensed premises of the JOLLY NAILOR [sic], on the 17th inst. Mr. S. H. Forrest appeared to prosecute.

Mary Carpenter, landlady of the house, stated that on the day named the defendant entered the bagatelle room, and created a disturbance. She went to him, but he refused to quit, and pushed her about. He was drunk.

The defendant, who pleaded guilty, was fined 5s and costs, or 14 days’ imprisonment.”

Birmingham Daily Post 6/7/1887

“Yesterday, at Oldbury Police Court – before Messrs. H. Heaton and E. B. Phillips – George Hazeldine (52), of Bulls Head Yard, William Spittle (19), Jeremiah Bradley (20), and Harry Parkes (18), all of Albert Street, Oldbury, were charged with stealing 7½cwt of pig-iron, at Oldbury, on the 2nd of July, also with stealing 6cwt on the 29th of June, of the value of 20s, the property of the Birmingham Canal Company. Mr. Godlee, of Birmingham, appeared for the prosecution.

The charge against George Hazeldine was withdrawn upon the application of Police-sergeant Stanton.

The officer stated that on Saturday last he visited Mr. Wilkes’s ironfoundry in Albert Street, when he saw the prisoner Spittle come out of the gate. He afterwards went down the yard and saw another youth, whom he believed to be Parkes, who ran away when he approached. He also found a horse and cart there belonging to Hazeldine, and on the scales close by there was a quantity of pig-iron, weighing about 7½cwt. He subsequently arrested the prisoners at various places. One of the prisoners told witness that they received 1s 1d per cwt for the iron. Witness was informed it was worth at least £2 10s per ton. Prisoners also said they went to the JOLLY COLLIER INN and divided the money.

George Hazeldine stated that the prisoners asked him to convey the iron from the canal side near Williams Bridge at the Albion to Mr. Wilkes’s works, for which they gave him 8d. Prisoners told him that they had got the iron out of the canal, and that the foreman at the works near had given them permission to get it out. Mr. Wright (clerk) asked Mr. Godlee if there was any notice cautioning persons not to get things out of the canal. Mr. Godlee said there were notices issued respecting bathing in the canal, but he did not know whether they contained anything as to taking things out of the canal. The company could never prove how the iron got into the canal, but they came in as proprietors to protect traders who were their customers.

Mr. Wright pointed out that he supposed if in unloading a boat the iron fell into the canal it would be the property of the owners of the works so long as they claimed it.

Defendants pleaded that it was a custom in the district to allow youths whilst bathing in the canal near works to take iron and coal out, and they thought they were helping the canal company in clearing the canal out.

Taking these circumstances into consideration the Bench discharged the prisoners with a caution on payment of costs.

Referring to the sale of the iron, Mr. Heaton remarked that the magistrates thought the fact that they could so readily dispose of iron was a great inducement held out to any youths to practise this sort of thing. Those persons who purchased iron considerably below its value could not do so without having a strong suspicion that it must have been procured in some irregular manner. He thought it only right to make those observations, because the easy way in which that iron was disposed of was really a great temptation for youths to get it out of the canal or other places where ownership might be a little more clearly defined.

Mr. Wilkes said he did not buy the iron under value, as he gave the prisoners 24s per ton for it.”

West Bromwich Weekly News 15/10/1887

“Thomas Lees and Henry Gough, of Parsonage Street, were charged with stealing a cow’s tongue, the property of Mary Carpenter, landlady of the JOLLY COLLIER INN, Albert Street, on the 4th inst.

Prosecutor stated that prisoners went into her house about eight o’clock on the date in question, and stayed about two and a half hours. They were left in by themselves towards the last, and the tongue was hanging on a rack under the ceiling, and she saw it safe about 8 o’clock. About 10 o’clock she heard a noise as if a chair had fallen, and she sent her daughter in to see what it was. Defendant had fallen off the chair, but would not get up. She did not miss the tongue until morning, but about 10.30 she saw them go out, and Gough had got something under his arm, but she did not think about the tongue then. She gave information to the police regarding it.

Alice Bate, daughter of prosecutor, stated that she was with her mother in the bar when defendants entered the house, and about 10 o’clock, when they heard the noise with the chair, she went into the kitchen, and Gough was lying on the floor. She asked him to get up, but he would not while she was in the kitchen. When they went out, she noticed that Gough had something under his arm about the size of the tongue. Gough stated that he fell over the hearth-rug, having had a drop of beer.

Elizabeth Hurley stated that she went into the public house for her supper beer, when she saw the tongue under Gough’s legs. She asked him what it was, and he said it was a tongue he had bought.

Ruth Cooper stated that she went into the house a little before 10 o'clock, and heard the chair fall in the kitchen.

PS Stanton stated that he went in search of the defendants, who at length gave themselves up. He charged them with the theft, but both denied any knowledge of it.

Gough said he was that drunk that he did not know anything about it.

The case was dismissed against Lees, no evidence being given to implicate him, but Gough was fined 10s and costs, or 14 days' hard labour."

"Yesterday, at Oldbury Police Court, Alfred Collins, landlord of the JOLLY COLLIER INN, Albert Street, was charged with selling during prohibited hours, also with permitting gambling, on the 23rd of March.

Sergeant Hill deposed to visiting the house at 11.35, when some men were singing. When the noise ceased he heard one man call for a glass of whisky. Several others asked for drinks. Upon entering the house he saw six men, and some glasses containing liquor were before them. The defendant said it was his wife's birthday, and they were his friends. Upon leaving the house he heard a statement respecting the police, and upon returning to the house some men were gambling for beer.

Police-constables Holton and Buggins gave corroborative evidence.

For the defence it was contended that the defendant was celebrating his wife's birthday, and that the persons on the premises were his friends.

The case was dismissed."

"Mr. E. Docker (coroner) held an inquest yesterday afternoon, at the JOLLY COLLIER INN, Albert Street, respecting the death of Florence Hadley, aged six months, illegitimate child of Sarah Hadley, of Albert Street, Oldbury, who died suddenly on Monday last.

The mother stated that the baby was taken ill when it was a fortnight old, and Dr. Cunningham supplied some medicine for it. It had been weak ever since. On Sunday last she took the deceased to a local surgery, but the medical man declined to give her any medicine, and as she was returning home she fell down with the child in her arms. She afterwards carried the child to Dr. Buttery's surgery, who prescribed for it. She took the baby to Dr. Buttery's surgery again on Monday morning, but it died in the afternoon of the same day. She asked the father of the child to support it, but he refused to do so, and on one occasion he offered to give her 2s if she would drown herself and the child. Witness earned 7s per week, and frequently had to go without food in order to feed the baby. She denied that she had ill-treated deceased.

Mary Ann Mason, Mary Ann Smith, Ann Moore, and Dinah Cooper also gave evidence.

Smith and Cooper, in reply to Superintendent Speke, both admitted that they told him some time ago that Hadley ill-treated the child.

Dr. Buttery said the child was very emaciated, only weighing 7lb instead of about 14lb. There were no traces of food in the stomach. The cause of death was peritonitis,

The jury returned a verdict of Death from Peritonitis, accelerated by improper feeding and want of proper care.

The Coroner disallowed the expenses of the two witnesses Smith and Cooper, as a mark of his disapprobation of the manner in which they gave their evidence."

“An inquest was held at the Hospital yesterday, by the Borough Coroner (Mr. T. H. Stanley), on the body of Thomas Baker, aged 31, grocer, of Bilston Street, Darlaston, and owner of the JOLLY COLLIER, Oldbury, who was killed by an accident caused by his horse taking fright.

The facts of the case were that the deceased had gone into a shop belonging to Lizzie Evans, James Bridge, leaving the horse and trap outside, and while he was in there the horse's bridle in some manner fell to the ground. Immediately after an electric tram passed, and the horse – although it had been driven by the deceased for some ten years in this district – took fright and jumped on to the pavement. Baker then ran out and caught the horse by the neck. The animal bolted, dragging deceased for about 50 yards, when the man fell, and probably from the nature of his injuries struck his head against the step of the trap. The tram immediately went back and conveyed him to the Hospital. Deceased was admitted to hospital on April 12th, and died on April 24th from exhaustion, following on a compound fracture of the skull.

The jury returned a verdict of verdict of Accidental Death.”

Birmingham Daily Post 22/8/1900

“The annual Licensing Sessions for the Oldbury Petty Sessional Division were held yesterday.....

Mr. Jeffries opposed the renewal of the license of the KINGS ARMS INN, Birmingham Street, kept by the Manchester Brewery Company Limited; the TRAVELLERS REST INN, Hales Owen Street, kept by Samuel Sherwood; the JOLLY COLLIER INN; Albert Street, kept by Alice Baker, on the ground that they continued to give the long pull. The objection set forth that it was an unfair system of trading, that it was opposed to the wishes of the licensed trade generally, that it was contrary to public order and morality and calculated to increase drunkenness, that the license in each case was not necessary, and that the holder was not a fit and proper person to hold such license.

Mr. R. J. Lawrence appeared on behalf of the Manchester Brewery Company, and Mr. J. Clark represented the other two.

Mr. Jefferies, who opposed the licenses on behalf of the Oldbury Licensed Trade Association, gave evidence to the effect that the three publicans in question were giving more than 25% over measure agreed upon by resolution of the trade. Witness was subjected to a severe cross-examination by Mr. Lawrence, in the course of which he acknowledged that trade combinations did sometimes fail, and that in the event of this particular one failing all the publicans would go back to the old plan of giving excessive over-measure.

The Bench retired to consider their decision, after which the chairman remarked that the justices did not consider there was any reasonable ground of objection in the arguments laid before them why the licenses should not be renewed. The licenses would therefore be renewed.”

“Today, at West Bromwich Police Court, William Henry Heath (24), residing at Frederick Road, Walsall, was charged with stealing a horse of the value of £10, the property of Thomas Powell, of Whitehall Road, Greets Green, West Bromwich, on the 5th inst.

It was alleged that prisoner fetched the horse out of a field at Greets Green and rode it to the JOLLY COLLIER INN at Oldbury, where he placed it in a stable. Subsequently he sold the animal to a fishmonger named Murphy for 12s, telling him that it had twisted itself on the wake ground in drawing off a van, and that it would be dead on the following morning. Early the next morning a noise was heard in the stable and the animal was found lying dead. The horse was removed by Murphy to the premises of a slaughterer, where it was disposed of.

Prisoner was committed for trial at Staffordshire Assizes.”

Gloucester Citizen 6/12/1906

“At Staffordshire Assizes on Wednesday William Henry Heath, basket maker, who pleaded guilty to stealing three horses at Tipton, Perry Barr, and West Bromwich, was indicted for maiming one of the horses. The evidence showed that prisoner caused such severe internal injuries to the animal that it died. The prisoner denied the charge and alleged that the animal injured itself. A verdict of guilty was returned. There were numerous previous convictions against the prisoner, who was sentenced to six years’ penal servitude.”

“There were some important comments made in reference to the granting of three off licenses for the Lightwoods district by the Oldbury justices, at a meeting of the County Licensing Committee, at which application was made for the confirmation of the concessions. At the outset, Mr. Willis Bund (the chairman) said that in reference to these three applications he understood there was some agreement or understanding between the Oldbury justices and the applicants. They had no particulars of that understanding. The brewers were willing, if the licenses were granted, to surrender certain licenses in Oldbury. The question was whether the committee ought not to have before them very full information concerning those houses which were going to be surrendered.

The first applicant was James Swain, Katherine Road, Warley, grocer, on whose behalf Mr. J. J. Parfitt, KC, appeared. The offer made on behalf of the brewers, through the applicant, was to surrender three licenses in Oldbury, viz, the JOLLY COLLIER, Albert Street; BOAT INN, Birchfield Lane (both fully-licensed houses); and the RISING SUN, Queen Street, a beer ‘on’ license. The district (observed Mr. Parfitt) for which the new license was asked was a growing one, and many houses were springing up on all sides. The shop for which the off license was requested was at the corner of two streets, and in those streets and three others adjoining there were 278 houses, and something like 1,390 inhabitants, so that the need was real.

The Chairman said his point was that they ought to have further information as to the value of the houses which were to be surrendered. They might be valuable, and they might not, but it was very important for the Court to know what value the brewers put upon the houses.

Mr. Parfitt said information could be given, and handed in a statement, expressing the hope that with this information it would be possible for the committee to come to the conclusion that the site for the new license was an admirable one. and confirm the granting of the license.

The Chairman said that the site of the house was only fifty yards from the Staffordshire border.

Evidence was given showing that 280 people petitioned in favour of the license being granted.....

The Chairman said an attempt had been made – rightly or wrongly he would not say – to cover the district with off licenses, which would pay no monopoly value and contribute nothing to the compensation fund, and for which certain licenses were offered in order to get over any objections. The licenses it was proposed to surrender were not those it was most desired to take away, because they were not included in the twenty reported by the Oldbury justices. In the discharge of their duty to the ratepayers were the committee justified in covering the district with off licenses? Another point was whether the committee ought to grant the licenses applied for. They were offered valuable terms, but he was loth to tie the hands of the committee by asking them to accept them in view of the pending legislation. The applications would be granted, but it must be distinctly understood that the terms agreed upon between the justices of Oldbury and the applicants did not fetter the committee in any way if they were called upon to deal with the licenses in the near future.”

The license was surrendered on 13th July 1908.

Birmingham Daily Gazette 4/11/1863

“Eliza Harrold was brought before the Magistrates charged with stealing a bottle of brandy, the property of Mr. John Hill, JOLLY COLLIER INN, Brades. The evidence showed that on the 30th of last month, she was drinking at the house of complainant, and upon leaving she committed the theft in question. The brandy was found in her possession. She pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to twenty-one days’ imprisonment.”

“At Oldbury Petty Sessions on Tuesday, the business before the Justices was not of much importance.

Eliza Arnold was charged with having stolen a bottle of brandy, the property of John Hill, the JOLLY COLLIER INN, at the Brades Village. The prisoner went to the house of the prosecutor, as was her custom, and after drinking there some time she took her departure, and with herself the bottle of brandy. Sentence, twenty-one days’ imprisonment with hard labour.”

John Hill was also a shopkeeper. [1864], [1865]

“Yesterday a meeting of the creditors of Sarah Hill, residing at the JOLLY COLLIER INN, Junction Street, Brades Village, Oldbury, publican and grocer, was held at the County Court, before Mr. Chas. Woollett (deputy Official Receiver). Mr. S. H. Forrest appeared for the debtor, and creditors were represented by Messrs. W. H. Pass, C. Hewitt, and W. Todbury (from Mr. Shakespeare’s office). The statement of affairs showed total liabilities £409 6s 7d, and a deficiency of £284 5s 2d. A resolution was passed confirming the adjudication. Subsequently the debtor was examined by Mr. Woollett, before Mr. G. S. Watson (Registrar), and on the application of Mr. Forrest was allowed to pass.”

West Bromwich Weekly News 2/7/1887

“John Ward and Arthur Thomas, both of Junction Street, Brades Village, were charged with stealing a live fowl at Tividale, on the 25th June, the property of Samuel Leadham, of Gipsy Lane.

Complainant stated that he saw Ward putting the fowl under his jacket. Mr. Blewitt brought the fowl to him the same day.

John Johnson deposed to seeing prosecutor chasing these men, and hearing them shout ‘stop him’ he caught hold of Thomas having run him into the Brades work.

Albert Clift deposed to finding the fowl under a hedge, and taking it to Mr. Leadham’s.

PC Macdermott arrested prisoners at their homes, and charged them with the theft. Ward pleaded guilty, but his mother who was present told him to say not guilty. Thomas said he had not been out of the house for over an hour.

Arthur Thomas was further charged with stealing one cleaver handle, and a chopper handle from the Brades Steel Works. Jarvis Clark, manager, identified the articles as the property of Mr. Heaton. They sent the articles out complete with the handles upon them. He could not say when they were taken away, but by their appearance he should say recently. Defendant said he had the goods given to him in a public house. Mr. Clark stated that defendant was in their employ up to last week.

PC Winfield deposed to searching prisoner’s home on Saturday last, for the fowl in the last case, and in a box in the bedroom he found the handles produced. He charged him with stealing them, when he said he had them brought to him by Albert Lewis, a woodturner at the Brades Works, who gave them to him in Joe Green’s public house. He gave him a drop of beer for them.

Albert Lewis was called and denied having given them to prisoner. They did not turn those kind in his department. He gave him one in the works once, but neither of the ones produced.

Defendant said that witness told him he would get him one from the warehouse and say it was for a pattern. Defendant again stated that last witness gave him the handles.

Mr. Bassano said Ward had a very bad character and he would be sentenced to three months with hard labour.

Thomas not having appeared before was committed for a month for stealing the fowl, and a month for the theft of the handles.”

The JOLLY COLLIER on Junction Street, Oldbury, is holding a Royal Wedding beer festival with a host of aptly named ales for the occasion. Landlady Wendy Yale, 51, said customers will be able to toast the happy couple with beers sourced from Black Country breweries, designed and named specially for the occasion. They include beers called English Pride, Royal Flush, May Queen and Royal Spice. She said, ‘It will be a real family fun event. The beer garden will be open and it has a zip wire for the children. We will be opening from 11am and the wedding will be screened in the pub. We are going to be open all weekend, or until the beer runs out.’”

“A landlord who says his takings are 30 per cent down due to a triple whammy of roadworks is stocking a new tipple to highlight his plight. Dave Yale, the boss of the JOLLY COLLIER in Oldbury, is selling a 4.6 per cent ale called Road Closed. He says his trade has dwindled ever since Brades Road was shut in both directions at the start of February. Bury Hill Road has been closed since the start of March and Newbury Lane shut a few days ago so the electricity can be installed at the new Portway Lifestyle Centre. ‘Everyone has been moaning about the road works,’ said Mr. Yale. ‘I was talking to Church End Brewery, based in Nuneaton, Warwickshire, and they told me they were having the same problems there. They said they had brewed a beer called Road Closed and I said, ‘Put me down for a barrel of that. It’s very nice, 4.6 per cent and very light in colour When you consider the bad weather we were having not too long ago as well, it’s probably the worst start to a year I’ve had since I became landlord in 1998.’”

It was proved that the deceased was of intemperate habits, and was not sober on the day of her death. Dr. Cooper said the appearances presented induced him to believe that death had resulted from apoplexy caused by excessive drinking, and the Jury returned a verdict to that effect. A curious circumstance connected with the case was that the woman’s husband died in a similar way eighteen months ago.”

“Hollowware Moulders’ Strike.

A large number of the hollowware trade operatives met on Wednesday evening last, at the JUNCTION INN, Oldbury, when Mr. Chumbley, secretary of the society, occupied the chair. The Chairman said he would urge upon them to look after their own interests, and protect their own rights. Whilst two or three petty employers wished to discount their men four or five shillings in the pound, we, who get twenty shillings to the pound, are determined, knowing the evils of the discount system, to say if possible, ‘Thus far shalt thou go, and no further.’ He was glad to say it was not a general discount, but only looked for by one or two of the small firms; the larger ones did not wish to reduce them. He was also proud to say that the men at their works, Mr. Bullock’s, paid their money as freely as ever; indeed, the men began to see more than ever that it is to their own interest to pay. The strike has now been carried on nine months, and the men appear willing to carry it out nine months longer if necessary.

The Chairman then called Mr. Loach, from Messrs. Clarke’s firm, Wolverhampton. He thought that when a man had laboured hard all the week to earn twenty shillings, he ought to receive it without discount, and expressed his willingness to double his contribution before they should succumb. He only hoped that the men who are out would prove firm, and then he had no doubt but that the strike would come to favourable conclusion.

Mr. Simcox believed that the object of their assembling together was not only for the maintenance of their principles, but they also wanted to see those men who had been so long grappling with difficulties raised to a common level with those who received 20s in the pound. He felt sure that if those who are out would prove firm, they would prove firm to them till they gained their ends. He was extremely pleased to see so many present, and so fully resolved to stand firm. They wanted nothing but what was just – 20s to the pound, no more and no less.

Mr. Holloway expressed himself adverse to all strikes, as they caused an unpleasant feeling to exist between the employer and employed. He could not see how they could possibly maintain themselves and families respectably at the proposed terms. Twenty-five years ago they formed a statement of prices, and they never attempted a reduction from them till now. He would urge them to take fresh courage – those that pay, pay; and those that play, play.

Many other speakers addressed the meeting, after which a resolution, proposed by Mr. Simcox, to the effect that they all agree to stand up for 20s in the pound, was heartily accorded, they at the same time rising en masse with a hearty ‘Ay,’ to give greater effect to their determinations.

A vote of thanks to the chairman and also to Mr. Green, proprietor of the room with which they were so comfortably accommodated, brought the proceedings to a close.”

"At Oldbury Petty Sessions, yesterday, before Messrs. Dawes and E. Gem, Jonah Jeffcoth, retail coal dealer, was charged with having stolen five hundred weight of coal, the property of Mr. John Green, the JUNCTION INN. Mr. H. Jackson defended.

The evidence of Mr. Joseph Green, son of the prosecutor, was to the effect that on the 19th February last, he gave defendant an order to fetch some coal from Parkes's field. It was his duty to procure the load of coal and deliver the whole of it at the house of prosecutor. In about an hour and a half defendant returned with a load of coal. The witness did not know the weight of the load delivered, or what the original weight was. Mr. Job Parkes, one of the partners in the colliery above named, proved the weight of the load given to defendant on the day in question was, including the cart, twenty-seven hundred weight and three-quarters. Six hundred weight and a half were allowed for the weight of the cart, and the coal was booked at 18cwt. Witness generally allowed about 3cwt over to Mr. Green. He followed defendant with the cart, and saw him stop at his own house, and back the cart up to the door. Watched him while he removed a quantity of coal from the cart to his house. He took as much as he could carry in his arms four times.

Edward Humphries, alias 'Ted the Lamplighter,' gave evidence to the effect that he watched the defendant on the morning in question, at the request of last witness, and saw him remove coal from the cart three times, and put it into his house by a side door.

Information of these facts was subsequently given to prosecutor, who thereupon instituted the present proceedings, as he had been previously been previously dissatisfied with the loads of coal before drawn for him from the colliery by defendant.

Mr. Green, the prosecutor, said he had known defendant for a long time, and did not know much harm about him. There had some time ago been a subscription got up for him, to which he (witness) had contributed. Mr. Green, in reply to a question from Mr. Jackson, as to whether he wished to press the charge, said that there was a great deal of coal stealing going on, and when he saw three women sent to prison for taking small quantities of coal, under very different circumstances, he thought such a man as defendant should not escape.

Mr. Jackson made an appeal to the Bench on behalf of his client, chiefly in mitigation of punishment, suggesting that the felonious intent was not made out, but that the defendant might have thought that he had a right to overweight.

The Bench convicted the prisoner, and ordered him to prison for fourteen days, to be kept to hard labour, a sentence, the leniency of which caused much surprise in Court."

"To the Editor of the Daily Post.

Sir. At a meeting of ratepayers in Oldbury, yesterday, on the Sewage question, Mr. William Underhill stated that I had said at the meeting of the Board of Health that we intended to have Rounds Green and Langley Green unsewered, which was calculated to make the ratepayers of those two places think that we intended to exclude them from benefits towards which they would be compelled to pay, which statement I have denied, therefore one of us must be wrong, and I propose that whichever it is of us he should pay five pounds to one of the Birmingham Hospitals, the Chairman of the Board of Health or the two reporters who were at the said meeting to decide.

By allowing a space for the above you will oblige.

Your respectfully, John Green, JUNCTION VAULTS, Oldbury, October 14, 1865.”

“To the Editor of the Birmingham Daily Post.

Sir, I think the public by this time must be thoroughly tired of the bickering at the Oldbury Board of Health, which bickerings are not likely to cease as the Board is at present constituted. I would therefore, for the sake of peace, suggest that Messrs. Powell and Beach retire from the said Board, and that I and one other on our side retire also, and allow the parish to have an opportunity of rectifying matters which have certainly been a disgrace to the Board.

By allowing these few remarks a space you will oblige.

“On Tuesday last, an inquest as held before Mr. Ralph Docker, at the house of Mr. John Green, the JUNCTION WINE VAULTS, concerning the death of a child, three years old, named Henry Parkes, whose parents live in Collins Buildings, Pig Street. On the 13th, the deceased was left at home with two younger children, whilst in his mother went out, and during her absence a neighbour, named Clift, heard the children screaming, and, on going to the house, saw the deceased with his clothes all in flames. She instantly extinguished them with her hands, and in doing so burnt herself rather severely, but the deceased was so baldly burnt, that, notwithstanding the attentions of Mr. Hayward, surgeon, he died on the following day. It is supposed, as there was no guard in front of the fire-grate, that the deceased got too near to the fire, and so his clothes ignited. The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

County Express 21/12/1867

“An inquest was held at the JUNCTION INN, Oldbury, on Saturday, before Mr. Ralph Docker, one of the coroners for the county of Worcester, on the body of Sarah Ann Edwards, aged two years. The mother had only left the deceased for two or three minutes, and on her return the child complained to her of something sharp in her throat, and put her hands to her chest. There was a kettle of boiling water on the fire-grate, which the child could reach. Some oil was instantly applied. Mr. Sainsbury, surgeon, at Oldbury, was sent for, and attended immediately. He stated that the marks on the chest, the inflamed mouth, and the symptoms were altogether consistent with severe internal scalds, and that death, in his opinion, occurred from exhaustion. The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.”

"Upon the subject of the war between France and Prussia, the Rev. A. O'Neil, of Birmingham, addressed a large audience on Saturday evening, assembled near the JUNCTION INN, Oldbury. He described the war as one generated by ambition, pride, and jealousy, and condemned, in strong terms, personal governments. He hoped soon to see the end of these despotic Powers, and to hear of that freedom and prosperity which would result from the people's rule. He congratulated the country at large upon the fact that up to the present time England had been enabled to maintain strict neutrality, and pointed out several instances in which interference had resulted in great harm.

Mr. Heinrick and Mr. Adams, of Birmingham, and Mr. C. Pass also addressed the meeting. It was stated that subscriptions were being raised in Oldbury for the benefit of the wounded, and that a list lay at the house of Mr. Green, JUNCTION INN. Mr. Pass volunteered to give a lecture in the People's Hall, with the view of augmenting the fund, and it was suggested that no partiality should in any way be shown towards either of the belligerents but that the money realised should be appropriated to the relief of the sufferers, whether soldiers or civilians."

Birmingham Daily Post 17/3/1873 - Correspondence

"To the Editor of the Daily Post.

Sir. Your correspondent, Mr. Samuel A. Goddard, disputes the fact of Mr. O'Connell speaking on Newhall Hill. Permit me to put him right on the question. I was present on the occasion, and heard him speak, and was standing within four yards of him. At the time I was an active member of the Political Union, and was cognisant of all its proceedings. I am now over seventy years of age, and consequently was at the period alluded to of mature age, and not likely to be deceived in the matter. So confident am I in my statement, that his harangue appears even now to be as familiar to me as when I heard him. Speaking of the late hours of the House of Commons, Mr. O'Connell said, 'I have left those beautiful hills and fine mountains on which I love to roam to come and labour in that miserable factory called the House of Commons, and that at a time when none but characters of the worst description are out in search of evil.'

Mr. Goddard like asserts that Mr. O'Connell was never enthusiastic in the cause of Reform. In refutation I would allude to the speech of the honourable gentleman in the Town Hall, when alluding to the manifesto sent to Parliament by the Union, and its presentation by himself, said that that was the proudest moment of his life. As far as my memory serves me, the manifesto maintained that the people of England had a right to have arms in their possession for defence, but that right had fallen into disuse from a conviction that their person and property were secure. Finding that such was now not the case, they should forthwith proceed to arm.

I am, sir, yours respectfully, John Green, JUNCTION SPIRIT VAULTS, Oldbury. March 14, 1873.

(Numerous other letters on the same subject have reached us. There is no doubt whatever that Mr. O'Connell did speak at one of the Newhall Hill meetings. On reference to the file of the Journal, we find that he spoke there on the 20th of May, 1833, and it is estimated that 200,000 people were present. Mr. Attwood, Mr. George Edmonds, the Rev. Mr. McDonnell, and the Rev. Dr. Wade also spoke. The object of the meeting was to petition the King to dismiss the Ministry. Mr. O'Connell also spoke in Birmingham in Graham Street Chapel – we cannot find the date – and also in the Town Hall on the 6th of March, 1844, on the state of Ireland. Ed. D. P.)” “Oldbury County Court, Yesterday, (Before Mr. W. D. Griffiths, Judge).

Cooksey v Lancaster. This was an action brought by the plaintiff (Mrs. Cooksey, late of the JUNCTION VAULTS, Oldbury), to recover possession of premises adjoining the vaults, and situate in Birmingham Street, Oldbury.

Mr. William Shakespeare appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Hartill for the defendant.

Mr. Shakespeare said the defendant, Thomas Lancaster, originally used the premises as a saddler’s shop, four or five years ago. After that period Mrs. Cooksey became the owner, and then an alteration was made in the tenancy, and the rent, which had previously been £5 a quarter, was fixed at £5 5s a quarter, and there was an understanding that a quarter’s notice must be given and accepted at any time. In September 1880, Mrs. Cooksey was about making arrangements for the sale of the property in question, with that adjoining it. Accordingly plaintiff saw Mr. Lancaster, who agreed to forego any notice, and said he would go at any time Mrs. Cooksey required that he should do so. She told him that she would not want possession of the property before November, probably not until December, in which case he might stay in until the latter month. Defendant repeated his willingness to go out at any time, and, referring to the fact that she had previously withdrawn notices she had given, he added, ‘I know you will not take the house out of my hands unless you really do want it.’ On that occasion Mrs. Cooksey said, ‘Well you might be put to some inconvenience in moving, and I think I ought to give you something. You owe me two quarters’ rent, and I will make you a present of one quarter’s rent.’

Mrs. Cooksey accordingly did so. She gave him £6 10s and consented to allow him to live rent free in the house until she required the premises. Also, at defendant’s request, the plaintiff cashed a bill for £20, without discounting it, in order to oblige him. She took the precaution, withal, to give a notice to quit by the 25th December 1880. When Mr. Lancaster heard that Mrs. Cooksey had agreed to sell the property, he said he should require £100 for going out. The action was to recover immediate possession.

Mrs. Cooksey and two other witnesses were called, and deposed to these facts.

The defence set up by Mr. Hartill was that tenancy was yearly and not quarterly, and, after hearing evidence for the defendant, His Honour gave a verdict for the plaintiff, with costs, defendant to give up immediate possession and pay the rent due up to the time of leaving.”

“Yesterday an inquest was held by Mr. E. Docker, (deputy-coroner), at the JUNCTION INN, Oldbury, touching the death of Benjamin Hale, aged four years, son of Benjamin Hale, of Portway Road, who was found drowned in a basin of the Birmingham Canal, in Messrs S. and J. Saddler’s brickyard, on Monday last. According to the evidence of Elizabeth Hale, the mother, the deceased went out to play in the afternoon, and a short time afterwards his hat was seen floating on the surface of the water. A search was made, and ultimately the body was pulled out. The jury returned a verdict of Accidentally Drowned.”

AND

“Mr. E. Docker (deputy coroner for East Worcestershire) held an enquiry yesterday, at the JUNCTION INN, Oldbury, upon the body of Thomas Collett (55), who formerly resided at 13, Broomfield, Smethwick, and who was found hanging in a shed near Thimblemill House, Warley, on Sunday morning last. Elizabeth Collett, wife of the deceased, stated that her husband was, up till about a month ago, in the employ of Mr. W. Shakespeare, solicitor, of Oldbury. She last saw him alive on Saturday morning about ten o’clock, when he left home, saying he was going to business. He told witness he had obtained another situation. Since he left Mr. Shakespeare’s employ she had noticed that the deceased was very strange in his manner, and he appeared to be full of grief and trouble owing to the loss of his situation, and was also unable to sleep at nights.

Joseph Lees, gardener, of Thimblemill Lane, deposed that on Sunday morning last, about five o’clock, he discovered the body of deceased in a shed near the Thimblemill Road, Warley. It was suspended to a hayrack by a leather waist-strap, which was fastened round the neck. Witness gave information to Police-constable Nash, and the body was cut down about half-past-six o’clock. A juror suggested that it would have been better if witness had cut down the body and afterwards communicated with the police. Witness replied that he acted on his own judgment and thought he did right, as the man was quite dead.

Police-constable Nash stated that he found a razor, pocket knife, and other articles in deceased’s pockets.

The jury returned a verdict of Suicide whilst in a state of Unsound Mind.

By the permission of the coroner, Mr. W. H. Pass made a statement with reference to the circumstances under which deceased left Mr. Shakespeare’s employ. He explained that deceased was suspended owing to a slight irregularity, and not because he had been guilty of anything of a serious character. On Saturday last arrangements were made for reinstating him in his former situation. He (Mr. Pass) personally regretted that deceased should have come to such an untimely end, and Mr. Shakespeare was also deeply grieved to think that the suspension, which was only intended as a punishment for a slight irregularity, should have so preyed upon deceased’s mind and led him to commit suicide. He (Mr. Pass) wished to remove any false impression which might be made by the statement that deceased was discharged from his situation, and to say that there was nothing against the character of the deceased.”

West Bromwich Weekly News 26/3/1887

“On Monday evening Mr. R. Docker (deputy coroner), held an inquest at the WREXHAM, Oldbury, touching the death of James Harley, aged six months, son of Albert Harley, of Albert Street, who died suddenly on Monday morning.

Emma Harley stated that she went to bed on Sunday night and the child seemed the same as usual, and lay on her arm all night. About 4.30 the next morning she awoke and found the child still in the same position, but frothing at the mouth and nostrils, and his face was a little discoloured. She sent immediately for the doctor, but before he came the child was dead.

Dr. Lyddon stated that he had examined the body and there were no marks of violence upon it, but the face was very much discoloured, more than usual in such cases, and the hands were clenched. He was of opinion that death was caused through convulsions, which would be likely to be brought on by overloading of the stomach.

The Coroner said the rupture would not be likely to bring on convulsions, and he thought parents should be more careful with their children.

The Jury returned a verdict of Natural Causes.”

West Bromwich Weekly News 21/5/1887

“On Tuesday night a general meeting of the members and supporters of Oldbury Town Football Club was held at the JUNCTION HOTEL, Birmingham Street, Mr. H. Swallow presiding.

The Secretary (Mr. H. Garbett) stated that circulars had been issued to the tradesmen and manufacturers of the district asking for subscriptions to defray the cost of laying out the ground and organizing the team. It was estimated that about £170 would be required for this purpose, and the committee were anxious that the money should be raised as quickly as possible so that the work might be commenced.

It was announced that Mr. J. F. Chance, MA, had accepted the office of president of the club.”

Police-constable Brian said he arrested the prisoner, who admitted having thrown a brick through the window. Witness asked him what he did it for, when he replied that he could not ‘pinch’ anything, and he intended to get a night’s lodgings, as he could not walk the streets all night, when there was somewhere to go. The Bench sentenced him to one month’s hard labour.”

“Yesterday afternoon Mr. A. H. Hebbert (deputy coroner) held an inquest at the JUNCTION HOTEL, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, respecting the death of Edward Cadman, aged sixteen months, whose parents reside in Albert Street, Oldbury, who was found dead in bed on the 4th inst.

From the evidence it appeared that on the date mentioned the mother of the deceased went out to work and left the child with a neighbour named Hurley, who put the deceased to bed. In about an hour afterwards it was found dead, with the bed clothes and two jackets over its head. The jury returned a verdict of Accidentally Suffocated.”

“Worcestershire Quarter Sessions.....

Samuel Porter (24), puddler, was charged with stealing a silk pocket handkerchief from the person of Henry Moss, at Oldbury, on May 6th, 1888. Mr. Quarrell prosecuted.

Prosecutor was in the WREXHAM public house, with the handkerchief in his pocket. He missed the handkerchief, and ascertained that prisoner had it. Prisoner refused to give up the handkerchief unless prosecutor paid for a smoke, which prosecutor refused to do. Prisoner went out of the public house, and prosecutor followed him up an entry, and prisoner then gave him the handkerchief. The learned Chairman said he thought they had never had a more trumpery case before the Court. The jury found the prisoner guilty and recommended him to mercy. The Chairman then read a long list of previous convictions against the prisoner, and said if brought there again he would be sent to penal servitude. He was now sentenced to hard labour for three calendar months.”

“An inquest was held this afternoon at the JUNCTION INN, Birmingham Street, Oldbury, before Mr. Edwin Docker, coroner, respecting the death of Theophilus Mark Massey (38), house painter, of Newhall Street, Willenhall, who died on Thursday last at a house in Albert Street, Oldbury, where he had been lodging. Phoebe Massey, wife of deceased, said he was employed at the Bromford Lane station, on the L.N.W. Railway, some days ago. He left home last Thursday week, and she was expecting him to return on Saturday night last, but he did not. Deceased told witness that he accidentally fell into the Birmingham Canal, near the bridge in Church Street.

Jane Wilkes said deceased told her that he was discharged from his situation on the previous Wednesday. She also explained that deceased was brought home on Saturday night last after he had been pulled out of the canal, and said he was under the influence of drink.

Benjamin Sellers said on Saturday night last he was going along the canal side when he saw deceased fall forward into the water.

Police-sergeant Clarke deposed to visiting the deceased whilst he was alive, and ask him how he got into the water, when he said he slipped in.

Dr. Lyddon said he found deceased suffering from inflammation caused by immersion. Deceased apparently had suffered from bronchitis for some years. Deceased died from pneumonia.

The jury returned a verdict of Death from Natural Causes.”

Worcester Journal 21/11/1896

“John Duffill Clitheroe Tweedie (45), printer, pleaded not guilty to two charges of false pretences, at Oldbury. Mr. Shakespeare was for the prosecution.

The case for the prosecution in the first case was that the prisoner went to Harry Bowerman, who keeps a concert hall at Oldbury, and invited him to advertise in the ‘Oldbury and Halesowen fixture card.’ He represented that he had been sent by a Mr. Harry Wright, of the WREXHAM INN. It was on the faith of that statement that Mr. Bowerman ordered an advertisement and paid 7s 6d for it. The prisoner gave a receipt for the amount in the name of ‘D. Clitheroe,’ but the card was never published. Mr. Wright denied that he sent the prisoner to the prosecutor.....

The prisoner said that he had intended bringing the cards out but was prevented by circumstances over which he had no control. The circumstances were the bad weather. If he had the chance now he would get the cards out to the satisfaction of everyone. He attributed the prosecution to a rival printer who was bringing a similar card out. The jury found the prisoner not guilty, and he was discharged.”

Sports Argus 1/4/1899

“Through the generosity of a few patrons, the players and committee of the Oldbury Town Club were entertained to dinner on Thursday night at the WREXHAM, Oldbury, Mr. H. Wright presiding. There were over 20 medals presented to the players for winning the Worcestershire County Cup last season, and for obtaining the position of runners-up in the Walsall and District League. The presentations were made by Mr. J. H. Allbrooke, who mentioned that the club had won the Worcester Cup three times, and were again in the final.”

“Oldbury District Council Election.

Matters promise to be particularly lively in the forthcoming contest in Rounds Green Ward, for the vacancy on Oldbury District Council. Mr. Henry Wright, of the WREXHAM, Oldbury, is the last candidate to issue an address, making three who are already in the field. Mr. T. Merryfield has had a requisition presented to him, which contains the names of some influential gentlemen offering him their support, but it is thought with the multiplicity of candidates, Mr. J. W. D. Pratt, a brick manufacturer, and the only resident in the ward, will stand the best chance. There is no public question to fight over, and the contest will be a purely personal one.”

[The result was Pratt, 309; Wright, 282; Merryfield, 137.]

“Air-Gun Shooting. The League Tables.

It is not every air-gunner who takes an interest in figures (except perhaps his own particular league table), but to those who do, probably a summary of the 33 league tables which appeared in last week’s issue will provide congenial reading, as showing the ups and downs which most clubs experience during a league season. Eight clubs have successfully resisted all attacks so far this season, and hold an unbeaten record, viz.

JUNCTION VAULTS (Oldbury), 24 matches.”

Birmingham Daily Gazette 3/5/1949

“Midland courts heard police tell yesterday of people who thought they were going to the Cup Final and then found they were not.....

Insp. Lawton, at Oldbury, said that a group at the WREXHAM HOTEL, Oldbury, were left stranded on Saturday morning when the bus they were awaiting failed to arrive.

William Cassidy (40), of 9, Seven Stars Road, was bailed to appear tomorrow week on a charge of fraudulently converting to his own use 17s belonging to John Thomas Cooper, provided to defray part of the cost of a coach outing to London and Brighton. Insp. Lawson said Cassidy was secretary of the group and had arranged the trip. He gave himself up at Wolverhampton at 2.30am on Sunday saying he had heard the police wanted him.”

“A Black Country pub has gone up for sale for offers over £225k. The JUNCTION INN on Birmingham Street, Oldbury, is being marketed by Matthew Phillips Surveyors. Sales notes state that it has a ‘potential for conversion to flats/HMO/commercial uses’ and that there are ‘extensive upper floors with potential for conversion and refurbishment for flats/HMO.’ There is an open plan ground floor area with an open fire. In total there is seating for around 50 customers. On the first floor there are three bedrooms, a bathroom, kitchen and boiler. On the second floor there is four disused rooms and a boiler room which will require full refurbishment. The pub is close to Sandwell Council offices, Sainsbury’s supermarket and range of town centre shops, offices and facilities.”
